[From the FOLIO EDITION:]

I N W H I C H

Certain ARTICLES, in the Course of that excellent Book, of less Importance to Youth are retrenched, without injuring the Body of the Work, or omitting any Thing contained in the larger Editions material to those, for whose Service this is principally intended.

In this EPITOME, the various Senses, and idiomatical Acceptations of each Word, together with the ancient and modern Names of the several Towns, Rivers, &c. mentioned in the classical Authours, are carefully preserved, and the Latin Authorities for each Sense of a Word, diligently retained: And,

In order to render it still more useful,

Care has been taken to compare the English Part with Mr. JOHNSON's celebrated DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE, and to make such other Amendments in it as seemed necessary.

Printed for W. MOUNT and T. PAGE, C. HITCH and L. HAWES, A. MILLAR, J. POTE, E. WICKSTEED, J. and R. TONSON, C. BATHURST, JOHN RIVINGTON, JAMES RIVINGTON and J. FLETCHER, J. WARD, R. BALDWIN, W. OWEN, W. JOHNSTON, J. RICHARDSON, G. KEITH, S. CROWDER, P. DAVEY and B. LAW, T. LONGMAN, E. DILLY, H. WOODGATE and S. BROOKS, C. WARE, M. COOPER, and the Executor of Mr. D. B. PERDUE

nounced differently, such, for instance, as difert and desert, in this case its accent (the acute) has been constantly placed in such a manner, as to render the difference obvious to the most cursory eye. Another circumstance which we have also attended to on this occasion, was, in all such cases, to give the different significations of each word within a crotchet, that boys might be prevented thereby from mistaking one for the other.

To conclude, though in all parts, we have added, altered, and diminished, we have omitted nothing which to us seemed worthy of being inserted: we have inserted nothing which to us seemed necessary to be omitted, and no where made variations, but in such places as we had great reason to think they would be approved of.

The Reader, who, upon a recapitulation of the above, will remember the many things necessary to be attended to in a work of this nature, will have the goodness to excuse any errors of the press which may have crept into it; any slips of our own which may have fallen from us; or any other mistakes of what kind soever which may occur in this work; for this single reason, namely, that we are not conscious to ourselves of having been deficient in any thing, which as far as our mean abilities would permit, we thought could conduce in the least to his advantage. Nor have the proprietors been less studious, on their part, to render it as worthy the acceptance of the publick, as the adventitious ornaments of a book can make it. Our paper, it is true, has not been fabriated * for the purpose, but we presume, notwithstanding, it will be found a good one; our printers too we flatter ourselves will appear to be masters of their own business; and if there be any merit in a letter, ours is beyond all dispute the best, that has ever yet been used in a work of this size. These are the motives which we presume to lay it before the publick, and to their candour and judgement it is most humbly submitted.

Explication of several MARKS used in this WORK.

In the first, or English and Latin part:

THE Declensions of Nouns Substantive are denoted by the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, except in such as may occasion any difficulty to young scholars as to the Gender, or Genitive case singular; in which words both the Gender and Genitive case are set down.

The Conjugations of Verbs are denoted in the same manner, with the like restrictions.

In the second and third parts:

The different English significations of the Latin words are denoted by figures, as well as the Latin authorities.

In all the parts:

† Prefixed to a word denoteth it to be obsolete.

|| Before a word denoteth it to be bad, or used only by writers of an inferior class.

* Before a word sheweth it to be of Greek extraction.

¶ Is prefixed to phrases and idioms.

§ Denoteth the grammatical construction.

♢ Before a word sheweth it to be poetical.

== Prefixed to a word, or sentence, sheweth that two or more words in that sentence, are much of the same import.

≡ Before a word, or sentence, sheweth that two or more words in that sentence, are used in an opposite, or different sense.

≡ Denote that there are words both of the same and opposite sense in the same sentence.

✱ Denoteth something remarkable as to the use and construction of a word.

— Over a Vowel sheweth that syllable to be long.

— Over a Vowel denoteth that syllable to be short.

Rar. occ. for rara occurrunt: viz. alibi, or reseruo an alibi; denote that the word is seldom to be met with.

l. q. for sed quare, expressing a doubt.

quod. vid. for quod videtur, or see the word referred to.

me to speak to your business? mem-
vis dicere id quod ad te attinet?

That business is doing, transigatur res.

Always about one business or another,
semper agens aliquid & molens.

The business was on trial for me,
hinc prosperè que hoc operis procedit mihi. I have no business as yet here, hic nihil habeo quod agam. He hath enough to do about his own business, is rerum suarum satius, ¶ What business is he off? quem artem exercet? I will make that my business, si rei operam dabo. I will do his business for him, cura ad locum religam.

A business [thing] Res, 5. ne-gotium, 2.

As ill business, Fartus im-probum.

To do one's business [make money]
Ad locum rei aliquid expetere.

To follow business, Rei operam dare, officio alicui, arti vel professioni vacare.

To do business for another, Operam alteri dare, res alterius procurare.

To come into business, In foro florere.

To find one business, Alicui negotium facessere.

To free one's self from a business, Ex aliquo negotio emergere.

To manage business, Negotia tractare, administrare, agere; res gerere.

Mind your own business, Age tuum negotium, cura res tuas.

A manager of business, Negotiator, 3.

A man of business, Natus rebus gerendis, tractandis negotiis idoneus.

This is the chief point of the business in hand, hic cardo, hoc caput est, huiusce rei; in eo res tota vertitur.

Much engaged in business, Vehementer occupatus, negotiis plenus, multis negotiis distensus, plurimis negotiis distractus.

A small business, Negotiolum, 2. A business closely carried, * Delus, 2. * Stratagem, aut, n.

Busk, Occupatus, impeditus, negotiis distractus. ¶ You are a busk as a bee, satagis tanquam mus in matella. When you are busk of all, tu sumus occupatus totus, nec cu n manu vacat tibi.

Busk [mending] Molestus, qui se alienis negotiis implicat.

To busy, Occupo, 1. impedio, 4. sollicito, 1.

To busy one's self in another's affairs, Se rebus alienis implicare vel implicare.

A busy body, Ardolio, onis, m. percontator, 3. curiosus, 2. omnium negotiis se immiscens, saltem in alienam messem immittens.

To be busy, Satago, 3. negotiis distingo. ¶ They were busy in seeing the rope dancers, animam in lumbulo occuparunt.

But [adverbial] is made by, At, at, atque, autem, ceterum, nisi, quod si, sed, fin, verò, verum. ¶ But do you send more, alit plures mittito. But it is plain, at patet. But then we met with no trouble, atque nullam sententiam tum vexationem.

But for, Ni, absque. ¶ But for one man, ni unus vir fuisset. But for him I had looked well to myself, absque eo esset, recte ego mihi viderem.

But [before that] is made by, Cum. ¶ Hardly was the former friend, but Scipio commenda, vix prior tumultus contigerat, cum Scipio iubet, &c. He had scarce spoke this, but, vix ea fatus erat, cum. He was hardly gone out of the dining room, but he commanded him to be run through, vix dum trichino egressum concludi iussit.

But [except] is made by, Extra, nisi, praeter, praeterquam. ¶ But only you, extra te unum. None but you would have borne such a sin, talem filium nulla nisi tu pareres. He was condemned by all the wares but one, omnibus sententiis praeter unam damnatus est. No body said so but Cicero, nemo id dixit praeterquam Cicero.

But [only] is made by, Modò, solum, tantum. ¶ Be but ruled by me, mihi modò ausculta. We have but the report, narrationem nos solum habemus. Do you but be faithful to your sister, tantum fidei vestri esse velis. They disagree but about one thing, in re una solùm dissident. Thou hast but the name of virtue in thy mouth, verbum ita recte in thou knowest nat, nomen tantum virtutis usurpas, quid ipa valeat ignoras.

But that, nō, nisi, nisi quod, quod nisi. ¶ But that I think you know it, I would tell you, in exultationem vos scire, docerem. But that the care of the funeral detained you, nō depulsa est cura te advenire. But that we use the words of ourselves, nisi quod vestris aliter utamur. But that I think you have all the rest, I would send you some, quid nō acta nō ad te perfecti erant, &c. perferberem.

But [after a negative] is made by, Nō, non, nisi non, quā, quā pl non, ut non. I value not your safety, nihil laboro nisi salvas sis. We possess not what is mortal, nil non tenemus. She doth nothing but grieve, nihil aliud quam dolere. I cannot but cry out, non possum quin exclamem. I never knew but he thought himself the best, neminem novi postea qui non minus sibi videretur. I am not afraid of you, nemo non te metuat. It cannot be but I must say what you do not like, nullo pacto potest, ut non dicam non probes.

Particular phrases. ¶ To know but knoweth, nemo enim nesciat. He came but yesterday, primum venit. He is but gone, jam nuper est quod dicitur. But sparingly, omnino minus sibi videretur. I have struck him, tantum non percuti parum absuit quin percuteret. I would but for hurting him, si non foret ei damnum. What a little but that you may do it? quid minus fiat?

But if, Sin, sin autem. But if not, Sin minus, sin alio. But rather, Imò, quāvis, sed. But seldom, Raro. But a while ago, or since, haud pridem, nuper, sedmodum. But just now, Jam nuper, nunc, rime, recentior. But for him, Aliquit eo. Not but that, Non quod non.

But only that, Praeterquam quod. But yet, Tamen, attamen, tamen, at, atque.

supplicium sufferam. Boys are angry with one another for very small faults, pueri inter se pro quam levisimis noxiis iras gerunt. I will grind for you, ego pro te moliam. For or share, pro te nostris. To take for granted, pro concessa sumere. To hold for done, pro facto habere. To believe for true, pro certo credere.

Propter; as, ¶ He obeyeth the laws for fear, Legibus propter metum pareat. For ignorance of the matter themselves, propter ignorantiam rerum ipsarum.

Secundum; as, ¶ He spoke much for our side, Multum secundum causam nostram disputavit.

Note, The preposition is sometimes to be understood; as, ¶ For fear of being yielded up, Metu deditionis. He died for love, amore deperit. He bargained with you for three pounds a foot, ternis minis te in pedem traniegit. For the money, dedisti operis. Ransom yourself for as little as you can, te redime capiam quam quies minimis. For how much? quanti? For so much, tanti. For more, plus. For less, minus. For how much sooner, quanticunque.

For after good, fit, lawful, profitable, &c. is most commonly the sign of the dative case; as, ¶ I would, but for hurting him, Vellent, si foret ei damno. It is a shame for them that are bred with to live basely, turpest vis qui bene nati sunt, turpiter vivere.

For [for the sake of] Causa, ergo, gratia, per, pro, propter; as, ¶ For example, Exempli causa, vel gratia. For fear and flight, fugae & formidinis ergo. For this reason I made a show of it to try you, causa simulavi, vos ut percontarem. He did not refuse to venture any hazard for my sake, nullum periculum pro me adire dubitavit.

For all [although] Etsi, quamquam, etiam, quamvis; as, ¶ I can hardly yield you this for all you are his father, haud tibi hoc concedo, nisi illi pater es.

For all this, or for all that, Nihilominus, nihilo secus, tamen. ¶ But for all that I will do it, nihilo minus, ego hoc faciam tamen. For all that they will presently bring a sword before the door, nihilo minus nunc defertur puerum hunc ante ostium. For all that prevent you in this march, tu tamen idem peris has angustias facere.

For [as for] Quod ad, ¶ For what concerneth them, quod ad illorum pertinet. For what concerneth, quod ad illorum pertinet.

For [as for] Quod ad, ¶ For what concerneth them, quod ad illorum pertinet.

ed him for nothing, gratis servavit illi. You shall not have abused us for nothing, haud impune in nos illos feceris.

For some times, or awhile, Aliquando, aliquandiu, aliquantisper. ¶ He will not be sensible of it for a while, hocce aliquot dies non sentiet. For some awhile he conversed with him, dies complures cum illo versatus est.

For that, or for as much, Cum, propterea quod, siquidem, quandoquidem, quoniam.

For the most part, Ferè maximam partem, plerumque.

For ever, In æternum. ¶ I am undone for ever, perpetuo perii. For ever and ever, in secula seculorum.

Particular phrases. ¶ He was a good orator for those times, multum, ut temporibus illis, valuit dicendo. Very learned for a Roman, multat ut in Romano homine literæ. I know it for certain, mihi est exploratissimum. For ought I see, quantum ego perspicio.

For what cause? Quare, quâ de causâ?

For which cause, Quamobrem, quare.

For that cause, Idè, eò, propterea, eà gratiâ, idcirco.

Note, For is frequently included in the verb; as, ¶ To look for, Expecto. To wait for, Opporior.

dem, quoad, quousque. ¶ How long is it since it was done? Quamdiu
id factum est? How long is it you look for your old man? Senem
quoad expectes vestrum? How long is it since you did eat? Quam pri- dem non edisti? How long is it since you came home from the market?
Quam dudum ē tunc advenisti do-micum?

How many, Quot, quotiens, quam multi. ¶ How must now tell how many ways they may be changed, multa quot modis mutentur dicendum
est. A bank I know not of how many acres, ipsa nescio quatenusrum jugeum.

How many times, or how often,
Quoties.

How [by what manner, or means]
Qua, quō, ratione, quemadmodum,
qui, quomodo, quo pacto, unde, ut,
uti. ¶ How should I come to know?
quā reteriscam? Will not the Prior know how to restore you? Prior te quemadmodum restituit non habet bit? I will take care how to pre- vent having her, ego id agam mihi quā nō datur. I wonder how so justly a thing should come in your head, miror quomodo tam ineptum quicquam potuerit venire in mentem. He could not tell how to give up his account, non invenit quo pacto rationem redderet. How knowest thou that? unde id scis? I think you have heard how these flood about me, credo te audisse ut me circumflueret. And I know not how to avoid it, neque uti de-vitem scio.

How much, Quantum, quid, quantū, quanti, quam. ¶ How much are people mistaken? quantum
animi erroris inest? By how much I am wanting in parts, by so much the more diligent I thought myself to be, quō minus ingenio possum, subsidio mihi diligentiam comparavi.
As long as it shall not repent you how much you prefer, quoad quantum prolebas non poenitebit. Ab!
you know not how much I grieve, ah! nescis quam doleam. How I fear what you are going to say!
quam timeo quantum credas! Did you not know how much the citizens esteemed him? quanti a civibus
habebatur ignarabas?

to be angry, Quousque trahi nesciunt.

How [what] Quid; as, ¶ How think you? quid tibi videtur? How now? quid hoc rei est? How did?
quid annos natus? How then? quid
tum posset?

How [why] or, how is that?
Quid, quare, quid ut quid, quid est

cur? ¶ How is it Scavola, that you denied that? illud quare, Scav- vola, negasti? How is it that you are so merry? quid est quod in gelis? How is it that I am ignorant of what all men understand? qui lit quid ego nesciam, sciam omnes?

How little, or how small, Quan-
tulus, quantillus.

Howbeit [notwithstanding] At, tamen, attamen, nihilominus. ¶ I will do what I can, howbeit I will be dissatisfied, quod potero faciam, ta-men ut pietatem colam.

However [at least] Saltem, certe, ¶ Deliver me out of this trouble, or case me however, eripe mihi hunc dolorem, aut minue altem. These things are perhaps true, however they are of moment, res fortasse ve-rie, certe graves.

However, or howsoever, Ut at,
utacunque, quomodo, quomocunque. ¶ But however you mean to do, I will not consent this, verum ut ut es facturum, hoc non reitrobo.
How assured so ever he may appear to be, utacunque is affectum videri volet. But howsoever the case be, quomodo autem res se habet. How- ever it be spoken, it may be understood, quomocunque dicitur, intelligi potest.

How great power, Quantuscun-
que. ¶ How little power, quanti-
