sun's. I have ever been desirous of praise, laudo, avidissimus semper laudis. Creatures fearful of the light, animalia lucis timida. Be not greedy of another man's, nê sit alium appetens. A creature capable of a noble mind, animal altæ capax mentis. I am afraid lest any of you should think, vereor ne cui vestrum ira videatur. The most elegant of all the philosophers, elegantissimus omnium philosophorum. The elder of you, major vestrum. The eighth of the wise men, sapientum octavus. He condemned him of wickedness, sceleris eum condemnabat. Acquitted of theft, furti absolutus. We mind the grammarians of their days, grammaticos sui officii commemoramus. They accused some matrons to the people of dishonesty, aliquot matronas apud populum probri accusant. I am ashamed of my folly, me piget stultitie meae. We are weary of our host, tædet nos vitæ. They respect of their follies, ineptiarum suarum eos perimit. I am now full of business, negotii aunc sum plenus. A body void of blood and life, languinis atque animæ corpus inane. I will make an end of speaking, finem dicendi faciam. I am desirous of returning, cupidus sum redeundi.

Of, is sometimes the sign of an adjective possessive; as, ¶ The apple of silver, platanus argentea. The plantain of yours, hæc tua platanus. This part of ours, hic nostri portus. That life of yours, as it is called, is a dash, vestra verò quæ dicitur vita, mors est.

cost him much pains and trouble, id multo sudore ac labore fecit, multum laboris in eo re posuit. We must take the more pains, eo magis est nobis laborandum. He took a great deal of pains in instructing him, illum multo cum labore erudit. What a vast deal of pains have you taken in that affair? quid laboris in eam rem insumpisti? This is all I have for my pains, hoc pretium ob stultitiam fero. It requires great pains to do it, res multi sudoris est. No pains, Snag [elope] Secretus, occultus, arcanus, clandestinus; [compact] concinuus, mitior. ¶ To sit snug in bed, fragula se secreto involvère, vel tegere.

To snuggie, Conseritum, vel dentè, se mutuo comprimere.

So, Ita, sic, ad hunc modum, hæc pacto. ¶ It is so, sic est, ita se res habet. They say so, ita aiunt, vel prædicant. Grant it be so, fac ita esse. As that was painful, so this is pleasant, ut illud erat molestum, sic hoc est jucundum. It will be so, utnam id sit, ut ita sit Deus facit. Nix it is so only, neque id solum. The matter is so, aliter se res habet. He thinketh as my do so, idem sibi arbitratu livere. If he do, ita est, ut—It is even so, id est professio. Others perhaps do not think so, alioforitale non item videtur. Why so, I pray? quamobrem tandem? So came due to know it, inde est cogniti-facta. I hope it is so, ita spero qui-dum. Since things are so, quia etiam ita sunt. As I may so say, inita dicam. So be it, ita fiat. Why so? quamobrem, vel quam ob rem?

So, so, utique, necesse est, sic fatit. So so [in health] meliuscule.

So far off, tam procul, tam longe.

So [so much] Aded, ita, perinde, tantopere. ¶ I am not so acid of humanity, non aded inhumano in-genio lum. They were so many,
Ita multi fuerunt, ut—

Whenfore his coming was not so very acceptable, quare adventus ejus non perinde gratus fuit. I am very glad you like it so, tantopere id te probari vehementer gaudeo. I should not be so unwell, non essem tam in-urbanus. They are so hindered by their studies, ita— suis studiis sic impediuntur, ut— I am not so strong as either of you, minus habeo virium quam vestrum uterque. Nor are you so strong as Pontius, nec vos Pontius vires habetis. So as I told you yesterday, ita ut heri tibi narra-vi.

If any one be grown so insolent, si-quid est insolentia processerit. Not so large as was looked for, non pro expectatione magnum.

So, or so that Dum, demmodo, modo, ita, si, si tantum. ¶ So I may not find myself imposed upon by him, dum ne ab hoc me falli comperiam. So there be a wall between us, dummodo inter me & te murus interit. So that be fit a price, mo-do ut sciam quanti indicet. So for be but a citizen, civis modò hæc sit.
So that I be not ungrateful to my father, tamen ut pietatem colam.

So, or so then, Quamobrem, qupropter, quare, quocirca. ¶ So then you have no reason to fear, quapropter nihil est quod metuas. So when this was done, hoc igitur factò.
If any be grown so impudent, si quis est insolentia processerit.

So far, Ed, eatenus, in tantum, quod. ¶ He proceeded so far, in tantum processit. If he proceed so far, si eatenus progredietur. So far as I know he did not come, non venerat quod sciam.

So far from, Aded non, ut—ita non, ut— tantum abest, ut—non modo, ne nedum. ¶ I was so far from doing it, aded non feci.
You are so far from loving, ita non amas. They were so far from selling, non modo non vendebant.
Grammar was once so far from being in any flower at Rome, Grammaticæ olim Romæ nedum in honore ullo erat.

So far as, Quod, quoad, quantum. ¶ So far as is possible, quoad ejus fieri possit. So far as I can understand, quantum intelligo.
So great, Tantus, tam magnor.

So little, Tanquillus, antillius, tam parvus. ¶ Do you be so little by me?
It is not able to containor?

So long, Tandem, et tandem. ¶ I am sorry you were so long away from us, ego te absente tamdiu à nobis doleo. You should have written him so long, eum terras ceteras, I never left urging her so long, non desisti instare nique adeo. The day is chased up and down so long, still it pants again, concitate agitur pectus eo usque, dum anhelat.

So long as, Dum, donec, usque, dum, tamdiu dum, tamdiu, quamdiu, quoad. ¶ So long as I shall live, dum vivam spirabo meo. So long as you shall yet shall be in pro-spiry, donec eris felix. So long as we shall live in poverty, usque dum ille vitam colet inopem. So long as the commonwealth was managed by them, quamdiu respublica per eos gerabatur. I am as well so long as I am willing to you, tandem sequel-com, quamdiu ad te scribo.

The world, in affairs of the world, Res, rerum, 1. pl. res humanae, res hominum. ¶ What a world it is! O temporal! O mortal! At the world gets, quomodo nunc est; ut nunc sit. Is the world come to this pass? buccine rerum venimus? At all things in this world are uncertain, ut incerta omnia sunt humana. A world of servants, vis innumerabilia servorum. A world of strength, magna vis. A world of tears, lacrymarum infinita vis. A world of little small fiars, infinitè minutissimæ stellæ. And a world more, innumerabilisque alii. He mindeth nothing in the world but this one thing, huic uni fudet. But you may fear, lest they should not mind the world enough, at calm seasons, ne ab eis omissores paulo. They are behind hand in the world, ad inopiam redacti sunt. It is one of the strangest things in the world, nihil mirabilius. There is nothing in the world more childlike, omnino nihil est infanlius. I know not what in the world to do, nec quid agam certum est. He knew not which way in the world to turn him, quod se verteret non habebat. By no means in the world, minime gentium. It is to no end in the world, frustra est. Nor do I believe there is any such man in the world, neque eum quemquam esse arbitror. Any way in the world, quicunque rationes, Just for all the world as, similimè atque. He is gone to the other world, ad plures abiit. I had as good be out of the world, nullus sum, perit. This is the custom, or fashion of the world, ita mos nunc viget, sic vivitur, ita mos est. We are too much given to the world, ad rem viciatius sumus. What saith the world of me? de me quis populi sermo est? Since the world begins, ex omnibus seculis. The world grows too coarse and worse, in præceptis statuit; peius est. The world will not be always as now is, omnium rerum vicissitudo. He is the best man in the world, optimus hominum est homo. What he was in this lower world, dum inter homines erat. He is certainly the very worst man in the whole world, unus est omnium mortalium sine ulla dubitatione deterimus. The whole world is of that opinion, ad unum omnes idem sentiunt. Since the world was created, post genus humanum natum, post hominis natam. What is the most difficult thing in the world? quod difficillimum est inter mortales. I have too much knowledge of the world, neque ita ingenua sum, Ter. To be beforsworn in the world, divitiis abundare, vel affluere. A description of the world, ubi descripiro. fratrem meus est hic? ita. Is certainly, certè. Ye truly, for what is rarer than that? rectè diceres te restituisse? quippe, quid enim facilius est? Yes, it is so, scilicet, ita res est.

¶ 1. It is not unusual among the Roman writers to repeat in the answer the word on which the question principally depended; as, ¶ Did not I say that this would come to pass? yes, you did say so, an non dixi hoc esse futurum? dicit. Do you know that for certain? yes, sci-ne hoc certè? certè. What, will you oblige me to call to mind the price set on such by M. Antony? yes, jacta be, that set by M. Antony, an me ad M. Antony estimationem fro-menti revocatus? ita, inquit, ad M.
Antoni.

¶ 2. Sometimes the word, which, according to these examples, should be repeated, is omitted, as being sufficiently explained by the following words; as, ¶ Will you not be gone out of this place? yes, I will go with all my heart, fugiline? ego vero fugio.

died, yet he should of age; if not of the man, yet of humanity, si non propinquitate, at ætatis suæ; si non hominis, at humanitatis rationem haberet. Though you deny it, yet I know it, uti tu negas, certè scio.

Ye since he hath well deserved it, be it so, verum tamen, quando bene pro-meruerit, ita. I set out at 2 o'clock of your respect, yes, you respect luteolus.

When a child, his mother dipped him all over, except his heel, in the river Styx, to make him invulnerable. He was put to the tuition of Chiron the Centaur, to learn to ride the great horse, and play upon music, Stat. His mother being scared by the oracle, that if he went to the wars of Troy with the other princes, he should be slain there; she prevailed on him to be hid amongst the daughters of Lycomedes, called Deidamia; one of whom he got with child, of whom coast horn Pyrrhus; but it being perished, that unless Achilles did help, Troy could not be taken, Ulysses by craft found him out. He had arms made by Vulcan, at the request of Thetis, which could be pierc'd by no human force. Out of jealousy for Agamemnon's taking away Briseis from him, he forbore fighting till the death of his friend Patroclus; to revenge which he went again to battle, and slew Hector. At last he was slain by Paris, being shot in the heel, by which his mother told him while he was in bed.

M. Antonius, The name of many great Romans. Their family they derive from Antius the son of Hercules. (1) M. Antonius, an eloquent orator, slain with many other great men by the Marian faction. He had two sons, Marcus and Caius, the former whereof was a very prodigat man. The latter commanding some troops of Sylla's horse, plundered many places in Greece. He was surnamed Hybrida. (2) Marcus Antonius son of the former of these, and grandson to the orator, was the funder of the civil war. For being tribune, he left the city privately, and fled into Gaul to Cicero. He invited the province of Brutus, and by the persuasion of Cicero, the senate voted him an enemy to the republic. He was beaten by the two consuls Flavius and Paulus, and young Cæsar; but long after joined in a league with Octavius and Lepidus, and thus their government was called a triumvirate. Immediately upon this he vanquished the forces of Brutus and Caesar at Philippi in Macedonia. He divorced his wife Fulvia, to marry Octavia sister to Octavius. For the love he bore to Cleopatra queen of Egypt, he divorced her also, which Octavius resenting made war upon him, overcame him in a sea fight at Actium, and forced him to flee to Alexandria, where, being besieged by Cæsar, in despair he fell on his own sword. Aurora falling in love with him, took him to heaven with her, but not obtaining her desire, sent him home to his wife in the habit of a merchant, to try her chastity. He offering her gifts in vain of compliance, she was at last overcome, and consented to his embraces; whereupon taking his own shape again, he upbraided her with her infidelity. Upon which Procris for shame fled into the woods; but being reconciled, she gave her husband a dart, which would never miss, and a hound called Lelaps; with which Cephalus went into the woods a hunting. She being jealous went to watch him, and hid herself in a thicket. Cephalus being weary and hot, sat down near her, and called upon Aura, to refresh him. She thinking he had called for Aurora, roused herself up, and fired the bushes; whereupon Cephalus, thinking it had been a wild beast, threw the javelin and killed her. Cicero, cons. m. Mark Tully Cicero, father of the Latin eloquence, the greatest orator that ever Rome produced. He was born at a mean town in Italy called Arpinum, but the greatness of his genius soon made him taken notice of, so that making easy steps through the lower honours, he was admitted into one chair of state. He acquitted himself so well in his consulship, that he was the first who was ever honoured with the plurious title of father of his country. He was a great lover of the state, and an unwearied defender thereof: Catiline's conspiracy, and the Agrarian law, are ample testimonies of his vigilance and industry. He was banished the city by Cicero, against whom he made that inimitable speech for Milo; but was with honour restored. In the civil wars he took part with Pompey, as thinking the publick liberty lay on that side, to which he always to his last breath shewed himself a constant friend. He had one son, unworthy of such a father, to whom when he was a young student at Athens, he sent his book of Offices. He had a brother too, by name Quintus Cicero, once Caesar's lieutenant, a general in Gaul, afterwards married in Asia. He was slain by order of Mark Antony in the sixty-third year of his age.

Pan, antis. m. The god of shepherds, hunters, and all other rural exercises. Hence maketh him the son of Mercury, and saith that he was called Pan from his arms, because he charmed, all the gods with his flute; but others say that he was the son of Demogorgon, and that he first invented the pipe, of several unequal reeds, but the most common opinion is, that he was the son of Mercury and Penelope. But Stat. seems out of Dædalus Samius, maketh his birth frigidous, saying he was called Pan because begot by all Penelope's suitors. He was painted half man, half goat, having large goats horns, a chaplet of pine on his red face, a pleasant laughter, with the feet and tail of a goat, a motley skin covering his body, with a crooked stick in one hand, and his pipe in the other, Sil. a sight enough to fright women and children, yes, armed men too. For when Brennus, the Gaul, was about to pillage the temple of Apollo at Delphi, he by night struck such a terror into his army that he quaked his sacrilegious design; whence the phrase Panis terroris. Yet, homely as he was, he pleased the goddess Luna by turning himself into a white ram, Virg. and the nymph Dryogenia, almost putting off his divinity, and commencing shepherd for her sake. Neither was he displeasing to other nymphs, who are generally made dancing round him, to hear the charms of his pipe.

Suid.* (2) Openarius.

Philus, is. f. A maid prisoner at Rome. After the city of Rome was taken and sacked by the Gauls, and their strength greatly lessened, the Fidenates thinking it a good opportunity to deliver the new risen State, assembled a great army under the command of Lucius Papius didatus of Fidenæ, who sent a herald to the Senate of Rome, requiring them to deliver into their hands all their wives and daughters, or they would destroy the remains of their city. This happening soon after their late misfortune, mightily perplexed the Senate, and put the Romans into great trouble and consternation. While they were in this confusion, Philus proposed to the Senate that she and the other female slaves should be sent to the soldiers, as if Philo-potamus, and their daughters. This design was approved and pitilessly put in execution; and the enemy, on the arrival of the women, fell to drinking and rejoicing. When Philotis perceived that they were plunged into an excess of riot, she climbed up into a wild fig-tree, and gave a signal to the Romans with a lighted torch, who came and fell upon the Fidenates, and, as they were buried in wine and luxury, easily destroyed them. For this the maid servants were made free, and portions given them out of the public treasure; and to preserve the memory of the action, an annual holiday was kept in honour of Juno, on the seventh day of July, who from the fig-tree was called Juno Caprotina, and the day Nonæ Caprotinæ, Varr. & Macr.

Pompeii, Liv. & Sall. A town and colony of Campania, near the river Sarnus.

Pompeius, vel Pompēius, i. m. (1) Cneius Pompeius, one whom Sylla called Magnus, and after him many writers; and Cicero calleth him a man born to all greatness. A valiant and successful commander of the Roman people, who gained many victories, and put an end to several wars, but at last was overcome by Cæsar, and slain in his flight in Egypt; which affordeth us an example of the mutability of human affairs, and that none can say it hath been a fair day till the evening. He lived fifty-eight years. (2) Cneius, the elder son of the former, a brave and valiant leader, but unsuccessful, after a bloody and doubtful fight, defeated by Cæsar at Munda in Spain, and there slain. (3) Sextus, the younger son of Magnus, a man of good courage, but unsuccessful, for being defeated in a sea fight he fled into Asia, and fell into his enemies hands, who put him to death. There were several others of this name, vid. Lucii indic. (1) Liv. & Flor. (2) Flor. (5) Id.

Pomponianus, a, um. adj. ut Pomponiana pira, Plin. first planted by Pomponius, i. m. The name of several Romans, (1) Titus Pomponius, who finding the commonwealth harassed by the faction of Cinna, retired to Athens, where he improved himself in his studies, and learned the Greek tongue so perfectly, that he gained the name of Atticus. He was a man of singular courtesy and humanity, and gave wisdom and true to his friends, whom he assisted in their adversity without respect to any party, being himself exceeding rich. He was very frugal, but very generous; very elegant and nice in his house and equipage, but not expensive. He was free from pride, affectation, or ambition; and equally beloved by Octavius and Brutus. Hortensius and Cicero were very intimate with him; the latter of whom wrote sixteen books of epistles to him. He died of a fistula, or rather a voluntary abstinence, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. (2) Cneius Pomponius, a good orator, very acute and vehement. (3) Jul. Pomponius Secundus, a noble citizen, and good poet. (4) Pomponius Mela, a Spaniard, and famous geographer in the reign of the emperor Claudius. Pythagoras, æ. m. A philosopher, who left his country, then under the tyrant Polygates, and travelled through Egypt or far as India, in search of knowledge, and returning, opened a school in a remote part of Italy, called Magna Græcia, in the reign of Tarquinus Superbus, according to Cicero, or of Servius Tullius, as others say. He modestly changed the title of Zepos, or wolf, by which learned men were called before him, into philosophos, or lovers of wisdom. His scholars in their probation were enjoined silence, and were only to hear; which time was called Expositio, Gell. He held the transmigration of souls, and said he remembered himself to have been Empyros, Callides, Hermotimus, and Pyrrhus, before he was Pythagoras. His scholars judging him infallible, thought it enough to reply to an argument Abdūctum, ipse dixit, Cic. He forbade the eating of animals, on account of transmigration.

they were called Agareni; whereas, the found of their name would rather incline us to think they came from Sarah. They served the Romans in the time of Aurelian and Probus; but in the reign of Heraclius being denied their pay, returned home, and under their false prophet Mahammed over-ran Syria and Egypt, and forced those countries to entertain their superstition; and having conquered the Persians, compelled them to do the same. They also conquered Spain and Sicily, ejecting the Goths; so that they had a large empire, till the Turks, their comrades, whom they had likewise infected with their superstition, revolting, they were driven out of the east, and their very name rendered almost extinct, except in Barbary, Plin.

Saturnus, i. m. [a saty, quod agricultura preest, Farr. a Saturno, quod satur annus, Cic.] The son of Carus and Terra, or Terra, whom some call his daughter; or, according to Plato, of Oceanus and Telus, He married Ops, or Rhea, his own sister. His elder brother Titan was prevailed upon to assign over him eight to him, which he did on this condition, that Saturn should deliver all his male children, that is the kingdom might return to Titan's posterity; which Saturn performed devouring the males as soon as born. But when Jupiter and Jove were born, Ops gave him a stone wrapped up like a child to devour, which he did; and by some such device saved Neptune, and Pluto also. Titan, hearing of this, made war upon his brother, lashed him, and threw him into Tartarus, whence he was delivered by his son Jupiter, but notwithstanding, having learned by the oracle that his son should dethrone him, he hid wait to kill him. Jupiter having notice of it was beforehand with him, surprised him, made him drunk, bound, and golt him, as he with his sistrum had served his father Callus, Apoll. Being bound he led, and hid himself in Italy, Virg. and was entertained by Janus, who reigned at that time, and gave him part of his kingdom; There he built a city called Saturnia. In his reign the poets fix the golden age, when the earth without culture brought forth every thing. On. I first taught the rude people to plough and sow, and invented the sistrum, which some make a symbol of hu-bandry, others take it to be his ac-tribute as the god of time.
