God-dou to your worship, good captain Jamy. How now, captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given us 'er?

Mac. By Christ, is, tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat.
By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work is ill done; it is give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Christ save me, is, in an hour: O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now, will you vouchsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy
my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point.

Jamy. It shall be very gud, gud feith, gud captains bath: and I shall quit you with gud
leve, as I may pick occasion; that shall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Christ save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beleaguert, and the trumpet calls us to the breach; and we talk, and by Christ, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all; so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand: and there is threats to be cut, and works to be done; and there is nothing done, so Christ sa' me, la.

Jamy. By the mess, are these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, all do gud service, or all liege 't the grand for it; ay, or go to death; and ails pay it as valorously as I may, that sal I surely do, that is the bress and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation?
What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation, ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal.

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, captain Macmorris, peradventure, I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Christ save me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each Jamy. Au! that's a foul fault. [other].
[A parley sounded.]

Gow. The town sounds a parley.
Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of wars; and there is an end.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—France. Before the Gates of Harfleur.

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls; the English forces below. Enter King Henry and his train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parle we will admit: Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves; Or, like to men proud of destruction, Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier, (A name that, in my thoughts, becomes me if I begin the battery once again, [best.]) I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur, Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up; And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of In liberty of bloody hand shall range [heart, With conscience wide as hell; mowing like grass [infants.]

Your fresh fair virgins, and your flowering What is it then to me, if impious war, Array'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends, Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me, when you yourselves are If your pure maidens fall into the hand [cause, Of hot and forcing violation?

What rain can hold licentious wickedness, When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless spend our vain command Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil,

As send precepts to the Leviathan [Harfleur, To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Take pity of your town, and of your people,

Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command; Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds Of heady murder, spoil, and villainy.

If not, why, in a moment, look to see The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards, [tars; And their most reverend heads dash'd to the Your naked infants spitted upon pikes, [walls; Whiles the mad mothers with their howls con-tinu'd Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.

What say you? will you yield, and this avoid? Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end: The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated, Betrays us,—that his powers are yet not ready To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy. Enter our gates; dispose of us, and ours; For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates.—Come, uncle

Go you and enter Harfleur: then And fortify it strongly 'gainst the Use mercy to them all. For as the winter coming on, and sickness Upon our soldiers,—we will rather To-night in Harfleur will we be To-morrow for the march are we [Flourish. The King, &c.,

SCENE IV.—Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Katharine and Alice.

Kath. Alice, tu es en robe de chambre; parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseigner à parler. Comment appelle-t-on la main en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appelée la main.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts! ma sœur, les doigts; mais je ne sçais pas comment appeler les doigts.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingers. Je pense que je suis en France, j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois.

Alice. Comment appelez-vous les ongles?

Kath. Les ongles! nous les appelons les ongles.

Alice. De nails. Les ongles, de nails.

Kath. De nails. Les ongles, de nails.

Alice. O'est bien dit, madame.

Kath. O'est bien dit, madame.

Alice. O'est bien dit, madame.

Kath. Dites moi en Anglois, bon Anglois.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude.

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je n'en ai pas besoin de tous les mots que vous m'avez dits à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile.

Kath. Récusez moi, Alice.

Alice. De hand, de finger, de nails, de elbow.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je n'en ai pas besoin.

Alice. Comment appelez-vous le cou?

Kath. De neck, madame.

Alice. De neck. Et le menton?

Kath. De chin.

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De chin. Le col, de neck.

Alice. Oui. Sans votre honneur, vous prononcez les mots anglais natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'être gracie de Dieu, et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà appris à parler?

Kath. Non, je retournerai à l'école.

Alice. De hand, de finger, de nails, de elbow.

Kath. De hand, de finger, de nails, de elbow.

Alice. Sans votre honneur, de hand, de finger, de nails, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis je: de hand, de finger, de nails, de elbow.

Alice. Comment appelez-vous le pied?

Kath. De foot, madame.

Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
You dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussil, and Fauconberg,
Foix, Lestrale, Bonciquant, and Charolois;
High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and
knights, [shames.
For your great seats, now quit you of great Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our
land. [fleur:
With pennons painted in the blood of Har-
Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
Upon the valleys, whose low vassal sent
The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon:
Go down upon him,—you have power
enough,—
And in a captive chariot into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner. [Con.
This becomes the great,
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and famish'd in their march;
For, I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And, for achievement, offer us his ransom.
Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste
on Montjoy;
And let him say to England, that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.— Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.
Daw. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.
Fr. King. Be patient; for you shall remain
with us.—
Now forth, lord constable, and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall.
[Exeunt.

Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
You dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussil, and Fauconberg,
Foix, Lestrale, Bonciquant, and Charolois;
High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and
knights, [shames.
For your great seats, now quit you of great Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our
land. [fleur:
With pennons painted in the blood of Har-
Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
Upon the valleys, whose low vassal sent
The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon:
Go down upon him,—you have power
enough,—
And in a captive chariot into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great,
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and famish'd in their march;
For, I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And, for achievement, offer us his ransom.
Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste
on Montjoy;
And let him say to England, that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.— Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.
Daw. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.
Fr. King. Be patient; for you shall remain
with us.—
Now forth, lord constable, and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall.
[Exeunt.

Now forth, lord constable, and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.
Enter Gower and Fluellen.

Gow. Hail now, captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my utmost power; he is not (God be praised and pleased!) any hurt in the world; but keeps the pride most valiantly, with excellent discipline.
There is an ancient there at the bridge,—I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called ancient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. Here is the man. [yours:
Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me fa-
The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Here is the man. [yours:
Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me fa-
The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands. [of heart,

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound
And of buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate,
And giddy Fortune's furious sickle wheel,
That godless blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone,—

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistol—Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a wheel,
to signify to you, which is the moral of it,
that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls:—in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it:
Fortune is an excellent moral. [on him]

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns
For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must 'a
A damned death!

[be,
Let gallows gnaw for dog; let man go free,
And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate:
But Exeter hath given the doom of death
For pax of little price. [voice]

Therefore, go speak,—the duke will hear thy
And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach:
Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee
requite. [your meaning]

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for if, look you, he were my brother,
I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure,
and put him to executions; for disciplines ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd! and figo for thy Flu. It is well. [friendship!]

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit.]

Flu. Very good.
Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal; I remember him now; a bawd, a cut-purse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utter'd as brave 'ords
at the bridge, as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names: and they will learn you by rote where services were done;—
at such and such a sence, at such a breach, at such a convey; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and thus they trick up with new-timed oaths, and what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming lotties, and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders, or or else you may be marvelously misled.

Flu. I tell you what, captain, I do perceive, he is not the man that gladly make show to the 'ord he a hole in his coat, I will tell him [Dram heard.] Hark you, the king and I must speak with him from the Enter King Henry, Gloster, and

Flu. Got pleas your majesty!
K. Hen. How now, Fluential?

from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty, of Exeter hath very gallantly main-pridge: the French is gone off, look there is gallant and most just marry, th' adversary was have the bridge; but he is master of the the duke of Exeter is master of the can tell your majesty, the duke is a

K. Hen. What men have you lost?

Flu. The perdition of th' army been very great, reasonable great;
my part, I think the duke hath man, but one that is like to be robbing a church, one Bardolph; majesty know the man; his face is and whelks, and knolls, and and his lips plows at his nose, and coal of fire, sometimes plies, and red; but his nose is executed, and out.

K. Hen. We would have all our so cut off:—and we give express in our marches through the country, nothing compelled from the village taken but paid for, none of the brutal or abused in dishonour when lenity and cruelty play for the gentle gamester is the sweetest Tucket sounds. Enter Montjoy

Mont. You know me by my hat, K. Hen. Well, then, I know

shall I know of thee!

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—
Harry of England, Though we we did but sleep; advantage is dier than rashness. Tell him, we rebuked him at Harfleur, but that not good to bruise an injury till time:—now we speak upon our voice is imperial: England shall folly, see his weakness, and ferance. Bid him, therefore, com-ransom: which must proportion to have borne, the subjects we have grace we have digested; which I re-answer, his pettiness would For our losses, his exchequer is the effusion of our blood, the kingdom too faint a number;
disgrace, his own person, cancelled

a weak and worthless satisfaction. To add defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose damnation is pronounced. So far my king and master: so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn back,

and tell thy king,—I do not seek him now;
I would be willing to march on to Calais without impeachment: for, to say the sooth, though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much to so many of craft and vantage,

we are with sickness much enfeebled;
and those few I have,
and so better than so many French;
when they were in health, I tell thee,

upon one pair of English legs [God,
I do brag thus:—this your air of France shows that vice in me; I must repent.

Mont. Tell thy master, here I am;
I am in this frail and worthless trunk;
I am but a weak and sickly guard:
but before, tell him we will come on,
France himself, and such another in our way. There's for thy labour.

Mont. My master well advise himself:
we may lose, we will; if we be hinder'd,
I shall your tawny ground with your red
blood.

K. Hen. And so, Montjoy, fare you well.
I would not seek an answer in but this:
we are, we say, as we are;
we are your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your majesty.

K. Hen. I hope they will not come upon us now.
We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Mont. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother,
not in theirs.

Dau. What a long night is this!—I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, lui! He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs: le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu!

When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk:
he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg.

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Persia: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness, while his rider mounts him; he is, indeed, a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfrays; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as thence as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all; 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world (familiar to us, and unknown) to lay apart their particular functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus: "Wonder of nature,"—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well. [mistress.]

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So, perhaps, did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O, then, belike, she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your straight trowsers. [ship.]

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not wisely, fall into foul boggs:
I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears her own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. *Le chien est reloué à son propre
vomissement, et la truie lavée en boursiers:*
thou makest use of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress: or any such proverb, so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night,—are those stars, or stars upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want. [hope.]

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert!—Will it never be day?—I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: but I would it were morning: for I would fain be about the ears of the English. [Twenty prisoners.]

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight; I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince. [out the oath.]

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread

Orl. He is, simply, the most active gentleman of France. [doing.]

Con. Doing his activity: and he will still be

Orl. He never did harm that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you. Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself: and he said, he cared not who knew it. [in him.]

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never anybody saw it, but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour; and when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. Ill-will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with—There is flattery in friendship. [devil his due.]

Orl. And I will take up that with—Give the Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil; have at the very eye of that proverb, with—A pox of the devil.

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much—A fool's bolt is soon shot.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.

—Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the day.

Orl. What a wretched and is this king of England, to move brain'd followers so far out of his

Con. If the English had any they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if any intellectual armour, they could such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England valiant creatures; their matchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs, that run mouth of a Russian bear, and crushed like rotten apples! You say, that's a valiant flea, that breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the

with the mastiffs in rotations coming on, leaving their wife and then give them great iron and steel, they will eat like fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are

Con. Then shall we find have only stomachs to eat, and

Now is it time to arm: come, shall

Orl. It is now two o'clock: let

—by ten,

We shall have each a hundred

ACT IV.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now entertain

When creeping murmur and Fills the wide vessel of the universe

From camp to camp, through

The hum of either army

That the fix'd sentinels almost

The secret whispers of each other

Fire answers fire; and through

Each battle sees the other's Stood threatens stood, in neighs

Piercing the night's dull

The armourers, accomplishing

With busy hammers closing

Give dreadful note of preparation

The country cocks do crow, the

And the third hour of drowsy

Proud of their numbers, and

The confident and over

Do the low-rated English

And chide the cripple tardy

Who, like a foul and ugly

So tediously away. The English,

Like sacrifices, by their

Sit patiently, and duly

The morning's danger; and leaving last lean cheeks, and war-worn smooth them into the gazing moon

ghosts. O, now, who will from watch to watch, from tent to —Praise and glory on his head!

—And visits all his host;

—His brothers, friends, and country-

—In royal face there is no note

—In his army bath enrouded him;

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

—He is the very and all watch'd night;

—His countenance and sweet

—His face, pluming and pale before,

—His countenance comfort from his looks:

Do my good morrow to them; and, anon,

Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

[Exit Gloster and Bedford.]

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;

Go with my brothers to my lords of England;

I and my bosom must debate a while,

And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble

Harry! [speak'st cheerfully.]

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou

Hater Pistol.

Pist. Qui va là? K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me; art thou officer?

Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Traill'st thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a baycock, and a heart of

A lad of life, an imp of fame; [Gold,

Of parents good, of fist most valiant!

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-strings

I love the lovely bully.—What's thy name?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy. [Cornish crew?]

Pist. Le Roy? a Cornish name; art thou of K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his look about his

Upon Saint David's day. [note.]

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about

Pist. Art thou his friend? [yours.]

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The flu for thee, then!

K. Hen. I thank you: God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol called. [Exit.]

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.

[Retires.]

Enter Fluellen and Gower, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and ancient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept:

If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no fiddle taddle, or pibble pabble, in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you should find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise. [Him all night.]

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you heard

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass, and a fool,

and a prating coxcomb,—in your own con-

Gow. I will speak lower. [science now?]

Flu. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will. [Exit Gower and Fluellen.]

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloucester's voice!—Ay;
I know thy errand, I will go with thee.—
The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Rambures, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up,
my lords!

Dau. Montez à cheval!—My horse! valet!

Orl. O brave spirit! [Jacquay! ha!]

Dau. Via!—les caux et la terre,

Orl. Rien puis l'air et le feu,

Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord constable!

Con. Hark how our steeds for present service neigh!

Dau. Mount them, and make incision in

That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,

And dont them with superfluous courage, ha!

Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood?

How shall we, then, behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you

French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight

Do but behold you poor and starv'd band,

And your fair show shall suck away their souls,

Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.

There is not work enough for all our hands;

Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins,

To give each naked curtle-axe a stain,

That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,

And sheath for lack of sport: let us but blow

on them,

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.

'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,

That our superfluous lackeys, and our pea-

Who in unnecessary action swarm [saute,—

About our squares of battle,—were enow

To purge this field of such a biding foe;

Though we, upon this mountain's basis by,

Took stand for idle speculation:

But that our honours must not. What's to a very little little let us do, [say!]

And all is done. Then, let the trumpets sound

The tucket-sonance, and the note to mount:

For our approach shall so much dare the field,

That England shall couch down in fear, and yield.

Enter Grandpré.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?

You island carions, desperate of their bones,

Ill-favour'dly become the morning field:

Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,

And our air shakes them passing scornfully;

Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,

And faintly through a rusty heaver peeps:

The horsemen sit like fixed candles

With torch staves in their hand

poor jades

Lob down their heads, dropping their

The gum down-roping from their

eyes,

And in their pale-dull mouths the

Lies foul with chaw'd grass, all

And their executors, the knavish

Fly o'er them, all impatient for Description cannot suit itself in

To demonstrate the life of each

In life so lifeless as it shows itself

Con. They have said their prayers stay for death.

Dau. Shall we go send them

And give their fasting horses prov-

And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guard; on

I will the banner from a trumpet

And use it for my haste. Come, come,

The sun is high, and we outwear

SCENE III.—The English Camp.

Enter the English Host: Gloucester,

Exeter, Salisbury, and West-

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to West. Of fighting men they have a score thousand.

Ese. There's five to one; heads are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us!

God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to

If we no more meet till we meet in

Then, joyfully,—my noble lord of

My dear lord Gloucester,—and my

Exeter,—

And my kind kinsman,—warriors

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury!

Bed. Farewell, kind lord, fight

And yet I do thee wrong, to mind

For thou art fram'd of the firm

Bed. He is as full of valour, as Princely in both.

West. O that we saw him

Enter King Henry.

But one ten thousand of those would

That do no work to-day!

K. Hen. What's he that

My cousin Westmoreland?—No,

If we are mark'd to die, we are

To do our country loss; and if to

The fewer men, the greater share

God's will! I pray thee, wish us

By Jove, I am not covetous for Nor care I who doth lead upon my

It yearns me not if men my

Such outward things dwell not in

But, if it be a sin to covet hono-

I am the most offending soul alive

With, my son, wish not a man from England!

Con. I would not lose so great an honour,

as thou more, methinks, would share from me; I hope I have. O, do not wish one proclaim it, Westmoreland, through in which hath no stomach to this fight, to depart; his passport shall be made,

and he shall convey put into his purse:

he shall not die in that man's company,

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

that day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

will cross him when this day is nam'd,

and so outlives this day, and sees old age,

and so to-morrow is St. Crispian:

Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in merry,

The Constable desires thee thou wilt mind

Thy followers of repentance; that their souls

May make a peaceful and a sweet retire

From out these fields, where, wretches, their

Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?

Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer

Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones.

Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus?

The man that once did sell the lion's skin

While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting

A many of our bodies shall, no doubt, [him.

Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,

Shall witness live in brass of this day's work:

And those that leave their valiant bones in

France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dung-

They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them,

And draw their honours reeking up to heaven;

Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,

The smell whereof shall breed a plague in

France.

Mark, then, abounding valour in our English;

That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,

Break out into a second course of mischief,

Killing in relapse of mortality.

Let me speak proudly:—tell the Constable,

We are but warriors for the working-day;

Our gayness and our gift are all besmirch'd

With rainy marching in the painful field;

There's not a piece of feather in our host,

(Good argument, I hope, we will not fly.)

And time hath worn us into slovenry:

But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;

And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night

They'll be in fresher robes; or they will pluck

The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers'

heads,

And turn them out of service. If they do this,

(As, if God please, they shall,) my ransom then

Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour;

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald:

They shall have none, I swear, but these my points:

Which, if they have as I will leave 'em them,

Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.

Mont. I shall, king Harry: and so, fare thee well:

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.

K. Hen. I fear thou'lt once more come again for ransom.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I

The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York.—Now, soldiers,

March away!

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter French Soldier, Pistol, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur.

Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous êtes le gentil-homme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality call you me! Construe me! art thou a gentleman?

What is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O seigneur Dieu! [man:—

Pist. O! signieur Dew should be a gentle-Perpend my words, O signieur Dew, and mark;—

O signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox, Except, O signieur, thou do give to me Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde! ayez pitié de moi! [mois;

Pist. Moi shall not serve; I will have forty Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat, In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'échapper tu.

Pist. Brass, cur! [force de ton bras? Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moi! [mois?

Pist. Say'st thou me so? Is that a ton of Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French What is his name.

Boy. Ecoutez: comment êtes vous appelé?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll for him, and firke him, and ferret him:—discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke.

Pist. Bid him prepare; for I will cut his Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur? [throat.

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prêt; car ce soldat icy est disposé tout à celle heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Oui, couper gorge, par ma foi, pesant, Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns; Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis le gentil-homme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents sous.

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransom, he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him,—my fury shall abate, and I The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier; néanmoins, pour les sous que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchissement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerciemens; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, la plus brave, vaillant, et digne seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon the thousand thanks; and he esteems happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave and thrice-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will follow me, cur.

Boy. Suivrez vous le grand capitaine? [French Soldier.] I did never know a voice issue from so empty a heart, saying is true.—The empty and greatest sound. Bardolph and I have times more valour than this roaring old play, that every one may play with a wooden dagger; and they hanged; and so would this be, if anything adventurously. I must lackeys, with the luggage of our French might have a good piece knew of it; for there is none to boys.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Constable, Ramburc, and others.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O seigneur! Le jour est perdu.

Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is Reproach and everlasting shame Sit mocking in our plumage.—

Con. Do not run away.

Con. Why, all our men are gone.

Dau. O perdurable shame to ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we prize? Orl. Is this the king we prize?

Con. Shame, and eternal shame! Let's die in honour: once more!

And he that will not follow Bour.

Let him go hence, and with his sword Like a base pander, hold the door.

Whilst by a slave, no gentler than His fairest daughter is contamin'd.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoilt us, Let us, in heaps, go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enough, yet living To smother up the English in our blood.

If any order might be thought of.

Bour. The devil take order! Let life be short, else shame will follow.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter King Henry, Exeter, and others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, our countrymen:

But all's not done; yet keep the field.

The duke of York commends him to your majesty.

[this hour
down; thrice up again, and fighting;
in which array, brave soldier, doth he
the plain; and by his bloody side, fellow to his honour-owing wounds,
Suffolk also lies.

to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd,
bloody did yawn upon his face;
—“Perry, dear cousin Suffolk!

shall thine keep company to heaven;
in this glorious and well-foughten field,
words I came, and cheer'd him up:

with me in the face, rought me his hand,
with a feeble gripe, says,—“Dear my not my service to my sovereign.” [lord, threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;

arrang'd to death, with blood he seal'd
ment of noble-ending love, sweeter from me, which I would have had not so much of man in me, [stopp'd;

all my mother came into mine eyes,
gave me up to tears.
I blame you not;
I must perforce compound

with this, I must perforce compound with these eyes, or they will issue too.— [Alarm. what new alarm is this?— French have reinforc'd their scatter'd every soldier kill his prisoners; [men:—
the word through.

[Exeunt.
VII.—Another Part of the Field.
Enter Fluellen and Gower.
Kill the boys and the luggage! 'tis against the law of arms: 'tis as a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can of is your conscience, now, is it not?

Disceat, there's not a boy left alive;
the cowardly rascals, that run from the have done this slaughter: besides, they threw and carried away all that was of his feat; wherefore the king, most of his throat: O, 'tis a gallant king!

What was born at Monmouth, cap-
Alexander the pig was born?
Why, I pray you, is not pig, great?

or the great, or the mighty, or the
the magnificent, are all one reckon-
I think Alexander the Great was born his father was called Philip of

as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon, where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the world, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you,
is both alike. There is a river in Macedon;
and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons
in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things.
Alexander, (God knows, and you know,) in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Clytus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander killed his friend Clytus, being in his ales and his cups;
so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great pelly-doulet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he:—I'll tell you, there is goot men born at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarm. Enter King Henry, with a part of the English forces; Warwick, Gloster, Exeter, and others. [France

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to Until this instant.—Take a trumpet, herald;
Ride thou unto the horsemen on you hill;
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field; they do offend our sight.
If they'll do neither we will come to them,
And make them skirr away, as swift as stones
Enforc'd from the old Assyrian slings:
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have;
And not a man of them that we shall take,
Shall taste our mercy:—go, and tell them so.

Enter Montjoy.

Exc. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege. [to be

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd
K. Hen. How now, what means this, herald? know'st thou not, [ransom!

That I have find these bones of mine for Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king,
I come to thee for charitable licence,

That we may wander o'er this bloody field,
To seek our dead, and then to bury them;
To sort our nobles from our common men;
For many of our princes (woe the while!)

Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes; and their wounded steeds
Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage Yerk out their arm'd heels at their dead masters.

Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great
king,

To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,
I know not if the day be ours, or no;
For yet a many of your horsemen peer
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours. [strength, for it]

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our
What is this castle call'd, that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt. [court,

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agin-Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the plack prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave battell here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did goot service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which, your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable padge of the service; and I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear
the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorabilia honour;
For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your pody,
I can tell you that: Got pless it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the 'orld: I need not be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go
with him:

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to Williams. *Exeunt Montjoy
and others.*

Exc. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gaze of one that I should fight withal, if he be

K. Hen. An Englishman? [alive.

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if 'a live, and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would alive,) I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, as you is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and in my conscience please your majesty, in my conscience

K. Hen. It may be his enemy of great sort, quite from the answer

Flu. Though he be as good as the devil is, as Lucifer and Bel

it is necessary, look your grace, that his vow and his oath: if he be you now, his reputation is as and a Jack-sauce, as ever his place upon God's ground and his ac-science, la.

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, thou thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I K. Hen. Who servest thou now?

Will. Under captain Gower, my Flu. Gower is a goot captain.

knowledge and literature in the K. Hen. Call him hither to me.

Will. I will, my liege.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen, I want favour for me, and stick it in thy Alençon and myself were down to plucked this glove from his helm.

challenge this, he is a friend to an enemy to our person; if thou such, apprehend him, an thou dost Flu. Your grace does me as as can be desired in the hearts of

I would fain see the man, that legs, that shall find himself

glove, that is all; but I would fain and please God of his grace, that I

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, as I

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him.

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick's brother Gloster,

Follow Fluellen closely at the back.

The glove, which I have given him, a box o'

May haply purchase him a box o'

It is the soldier's: I, by his hand,

Wear it myself. Follow, good

If that the soldier strike him, he will

By his blunt bearing, he will

Some sudden mischief may arise

For I do know Fluellen valiant

And, touch'd with choler, not

And quickly will return an injury

Follow, and see there be no

Go you with me, uncle of Exeter.

SCENE VIII.—Before King Henry's tent.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to kill

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure

you now, come apace to the king:
more good toward you, peradventure,
in your knowledge to dream of.

How now, sir! know you this glove? [a glove.] Know the glove! I know, the glove is his; and thus I challenge it.

[Strikes him.]

an arrant traitor, as my's in lomb, or in France, or in England.

Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Stand away, captain Gower; I will see his payment into gloves, I warrant
I am no traitor.

That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge his majesty's name, apprehend him: he is the duke Alençon's.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester. [matter?]

How now, how now! what's this my lord of Warwick, here is, praised for K! a most contagious treason comes look you, as you shall desire in a my lord's day.—Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter.

My liege, here is what's the matter?

My liege, here is a villain and a traitor,
your grace, has struck the glove out of his majesty is take out of the helmet

My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in promised to wear it in his cap: I promised him, if he did: I met this man my glove in his cap, and I have been as my word.

your majesty hear now, (saying your handhood,) what an arrant, rascally, lousy knave it is: I hope your majesty will bear me testimony, and witness, that this is the glove of that your majesty is give me, in your own

Give me thy glove, soldier: look,
here is the fellow of it.

Indeed, thou promisedst to strike;

and hast given me most bitter terms.

Alas, your majesty, let his neck be cut, if there is any martial law in the [faction?]

How canst thou make me satisfaction? All offences, my liege, come from me; never came any from mine that I know your majesty.

It was myself thou didst abuse.

Your majesty came not like yourself:

appeared to me but as a common man;

and what your highness suffered under me, I beseech you, take it for your penalty, and not mine: for had you been you for, I made no offence; therefore, your highness, pardon me.

Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,

And give it to this fellow.—Keep it, fellow;
And wear it for an honour in thy cap,
Till I do challenge it.—Give him the crowns:—
And, captain, you must needs be friends with
him.

Fla. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his pelly.—Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawns, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions; and,
I warrant you, it is the petter for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Fla. It is with a good will; I can tell you, it will serve you to mend your shoes; come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so goot: 'tis a good silling, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald; are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd
French. [Delivers a paper.]

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle? [the king;]

Exe. Charles duke of Orleans, nephew to John duke of Bourbon, and lord Bouciquart;
Of other lords and barons, knights and esquires,
Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French [number,

That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this
And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead
One hundred twenty-six: added to these,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred: of the
which, [knights;

Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd
So that, in these ten thousand they have lost,
There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries;
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights,
And gentlemen of blood and quality. [squires,
The names of those their nobles that lie dead,—
Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
Jaques of Chatillon, admiral of France;
The master of the cross-bows, lord Rambures;
Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dauphin;

John duke of Alençon; Antony duke of Brabant,
The brother to the duke of Burgundy;
And Edward duke of Bar: of lusty earls,
Grandpré, and Roussil, Fauconberg, and Poix,
Beaumont, and Marle, Vandemont, and Lex-
Here was a royal fellowship of death!—[strale.
Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper.]
Edward the duke of York, the earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Kelly, Davy Gam, esquire:
None else of name: and of all other men,
But five and twenty.—O God, thy arm was
And not to us, but to thy arm alone, [there;
Ascribe we all!—When, without stratagem,
But in plain shock and even play of battle,
Was ever known so great and little loss,

On one part and on the other!—Take it, God,
For it is none but thine!

Acc. 'Tis wonderful!

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village:

And be it death proclaimed through our host,
To boast of this, or take the praise from God,
Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this account God fought for us. [Knowledge,]

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites: [Gout,
Let there be sung Non nobis, and Te Deum;
The deal with charity enclosed in clay:
We'll then to Calais; and to England then;
Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy
men.

ACT V.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read
the story,

That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit the excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life
Be here presented. Now we bear the king Toward Calais; grant him there; there seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach Pales in the flood with men, with wives, and boys,

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-
Which, like a mighty whiffleur fore the king,
Seems to prepare his way: so let him land,
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath;
Where that his lords desire him to have borne
His bruised helmet and his bended sword,
Before him, through the city: he forbids it,
Being free from vainness and self-glorious Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent, [pride;
Quite from himself to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working-house of
thought,

How London doth pour out her citizens!
The mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort,
—Like to the senators of th' antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,— Go forth, and fetch their conquering Caesar in:
As, by a lower but loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress
(As in good time he may) from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
To welcome him! much more, and much more
cause,

Did they this Harry. Now in London place
(As yet the lamentation of the French [him];

Invites the king of England's day;
The emperor's coming in behalf of France;
To order peace between them; and
All the occurrences, whatever they be,
Till Harry's back-return again to France:
There must we bring him; and, as play'd

The interim, by remembering you,
Then brook abridgment; and, as advance,
After your thoughts, straight let us
France.

SCENE I.—France. An English Guard. Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but you your look to-day? Saint Day's day,
There is occasions and causes wherefore in all things: I will tell friend, captain Gower:—the reason beggarly, lousy, praggish, know-which you and yourself, and all the
to be no better than a fellow, look-of no merits,—he is come to me, me pread and salt yesterday, and bid me eat my look: it was in a I could not breed no contention but I will be so bold as to wear till I see him once again, and then him a little piece of my desire.

Gow. Why, here he comes, and Enter Pistol.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his his turkey-cocks.

Got pless you, ancient Pistol!
Got pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou Back-
To have me fold up Parca's fold
Hence! I am qualmish at the sea.

Flu. I pesech you heartily, knave, at my desires, and my re-petitions, to eat, look you, this look you, you do not love it, me-tions, and your appetites, and you does not agree with it, I would eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and Flu. [Strikes him.] There is
you.

Will you be so good, scold knave, Pist. Base Trajan, thou shalt
Flu. You may very true, scold Got's will is: I will desire you meantime, and eat your victuals him again.] come, there is a called me yesterday, mountain will make you to-day a square
I pray you, fall to: if you can you can eat a look.

Gow. Enough, captain: you Flu. I say, I will put his of my look, or I will put his —Pite, I pray you: it is good wound, and your bloody corncomb.

Most I hate!
You certainly, and out of doubt, and question too, and ambiguities.
By this look, I will most horribly re-eat, and eat, I swear—
I pray you: will you have some to your look! there is not enough to eat.

Quot the cudgel; then dost see I eat.
Look you do you, scold knave, heart-say, my you, throw none away: the cudgel for your broken corncomb. When conscious to see looks hereafter, I pray at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

I owe you anything, I will pay you
you shall be a woodmonger, and
of me but cudgels. God be wi'
keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.
I, looks is good;—hold you, there is a
eat your pate.

Pist. Me a great!
eat, truly and in truth, you shall take
me another look in my pocket, which
I take thy great in earnest of revenge.

To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;
And, as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, duke of Burgundy; [fall.
And, princes French, and peers, health to you Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,

Most worthy brother England; fairly met:
So are you, princes English, every one. [hand,
Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother Eng-
Of this good day and of this gracious meeting:
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them Against the French, that met them in their
The fatal balls of murthering basilisks: [beat,
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality; and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute
Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great kings of France and England! That have labour'd, [pleasures,
With all my wits, my pains, and strong an-
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview, [ness,
Your mightiness on both parts best can wit-
Since, then, my office hath so far prevail'd,
That face to face, and royal eye to eye,
You have congregated, let it not disgrace me,
If I demand, before this royal view,
What rub, or what impediment, there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled
Peace,

Dear nurse of arts, plenty, and joyful births,
Should not, in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage?
Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd,

And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility.
Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleached,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs: her fallow lean,
The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts,
That should deracinate such savagery:
The even mould, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies,
Losing both beauty and utility. [darks,
And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,

Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,
Even so our houses, and ourselves and children,
Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country:
But grow, like savages,—as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood,—
To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire,

And everything that seems unnatural,
Which to reduce into our former favour,
You are assembled: and my speech entreats
That I may know the let, why gentle Peace
Should not expel these inconveniences,
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,

Whose want gives growth to the imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenors and particular effects
You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the
There is no answer made. [Which as yet,

K. Hen. Well then, the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Pr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'er-glanc'd the articles: pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will suddenly Pass our accept, and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle
Exeter,—

And brother Clarence,—and you, brother Glos-Warwick,—and Huntingdon,—go with the Aud take with you free power to ratify, [King;
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageous for our dignity,
Anything in, or out of, our demands; [sister,
And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair
Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them.

Hardly a woman's voice may do some good,
When articles, too nicely urg'd, be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us:

She is our capital demand, compris'd
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave. [Alice.
[Exeunt all except K. Henry, Kath., and

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms

Such as will enter at a lady's ear,
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your English.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez moi, I cannot tell vat is—like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate; and you are like an angel. [Anges?

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les Anges. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What save the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui, dit de tromperies.

K. Hen. The princess is the best woman. I faith, Kate, my thy understanding; I am sure speak no better English; for thou wouldst find me such a thou wouldst think I had said

my crown. I know no more love, but directly to say—I love you urge me further than I can faith? I wear out my soul answer; I faith, do, and so do bargain: how say you, Kate?

Kath. Sans votre honneur, le K. Hen. Merry, if you will verses, or to dance for your you would me: for the one words nor measure; and for the no strength in measure, yet a sure in strength. If I could leap-frog, or by vaulting over my armour on my back, I should of bragging be it spoken, I should into a wife. Or if I might or bound my horse for her favour on like a butcher, and all the never off. But before God, I look greenly, nor peep out eye

I have no cannons in post right oaths, which I never never break for nothing, Kate.

fellow of this temper, that will worth sun-burning, that will glass for love of anything, I thine eye be thy cook. I am soldier: If thou canst love me if not, to say to thee that I love

but for thy love, by the Lord three too. And while thou take a fellow of plain and hath not the gift to woo in these fellows of infinite tongue themselves into ladies' favours, reason themselves out of a speaker is but a prater; a raver;

A good leg will fall; a good stoop; a black beard will grow hairs will grow bald; a fair full eye will wax hollow; but Kate, is the sun and the moon;

sun, and not the moon, nor and never changes, but keeps take me, take a soldier; take king; and what sayest thou?

my fair, and fairly.

Kath. Is it possible that I enemy of France?

K. Hen. No; it is I that should love the enemy of France.

you should love the friend of I love France so well, that I will and Kate, when France is mine and I your years in France and you are

I cannot tell vat is dat. [mine.
K. Hen. Kate! I will tell thee in which I am sure will hang upon my thou a new married wife about her husband, hardly to be shook off.—Quand

vous serez de France, et quand vous avez

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I

vous de moi, (let me see, what then I
vous de moi, (let me see, what then I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better:—

and therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes;
avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say—Harry of England, I am thine:— which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud—England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music, for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English, wilt thou have me? [She.]

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de roi mon
K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate;
it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Don it shall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez:
ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez votre grandeur, en baissant la main d'une votre indigne serviteur: excusez moi, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, et demoiselles, pour être baissées devant leur nocce, il n'est pas en coutume
de France. [She.]

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says Alice. Dat is not de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell what is baiser.

K. Hen. To kiss. [In English.]

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moi.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would Alice. Oui, vraiment. [She say]

K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs court'sy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate;
and the liberty that follows our places stops
the mouths of all find-faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently, and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England, than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Re-enter the King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Gloster, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! My royal Teach you our princess English! [cousin,

K. Hen. My father, I am glad to see you.

King. I am glad to see you, my son.

Queen. I am glad to see you, my daughter.

Burgundy. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Bedford. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Gloster. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Exeter. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Warwick. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Westmoreland. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Other Lords. I am glad to see you, my lord.

K. Hen. I am glad to see you, my father.

King. I am glad to see you, my son.

Queen. I am glad to see you, my daughter.

Burgundy. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Bedford. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Gloster. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Exeter. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Warwick. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Westmoreland. I am glad to see you, my lord.

Other Lords. I am glad to see you, my lord.

K. Hen. I am glad to see you, my father.

King. I am glad to see you, my son.

Queen. I am glad to see you, my daughter.

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her: and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked, and blind. Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time, and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness who cannot see many a fair French city, for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspective, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls, that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid, that stood in the way for my wish, shall show me the way to my will. [of reason.]

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter first: and then, in sequel, all, according to their firm propos'd natures.

Esee. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this: Where your majesty demands, that the king of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French,—Notre très cher fils Henry roi d'Angleterre, heretier de France; and thus in Latin,—Pre- clarissimus filius noster Henricus rex Anglorum et heres Francie.

Fr. King. Nor this I have not denied,

But your request shall make me do so.

K. Hen. I pray you, then, an alliance,

Let that one article rank with the

And, thereupon, give me your daughter.

Fr. King. Take her, tale son; but blood raise up

Issue to me; that the contumacious

Of France and England, whom look pale

With envy of each other's happiness

May cease their hatred; and Plant neighbourhood and Christian

In their sweet bosoms, that

His bleeding sword 'twixt

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Now, welcome, Kate

me witness all,

That here I kiss her as my sovereign

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of Combine your hearts in one, your

As man and wife, being two, are

So bethere 'twixt your kingdoms

That never may ill office, or fall

Which troubles oft the bed of Thrust in between the paction of doms,

To make divorce of their

That English may as French,

men,

Receive each other! God speak

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our

My lord of Burgundy, we'll take

And all the peers', for surety of

Then shall I swear to Kate, and

And may our oaths well keep

be!

Enter Chorus.

Thus far, with rough and all

Our bending author hath

In little room confining

Mangling by starts the full

Small time, but, in that small

This star of England:

sword;

By which the world's best

And of it left his son

Henry the sixth, in infant

Of France and England,

Whose state so many had

That they lost France,

land bleed:

Which oft our stage hath

In your fair minds let this

THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Henry the Sixth.
 Gloucester, Uncle to the King, and Protector.
 Bedford, Uncle to the King, and Regent of France.
 Beaufort, Duke of Exeter, Great Uncle to the King.
 Beaufort, Great Uncle to the King; Bishop of Winchester, and afterwards Duke.
 Somerset, Earl of Somerset, afterwards Duke.
 Plantagenet, Eldest Son of Richard, Earl of Cambridge; afterwards Duke of York.
 Warwick, Salisbury, and Suffolk.
 Talbot, afterwards Earl of Shrewsbury.
 Mortimer, Earl of March.
 A Keeper, and a Lawyer.
 John Fastolf. Sir William Lucy. Sir William Glousdale. Sir Thomas Gar-

Woodville, Lieutenant of the Tower; Mayor of London. A Lawyer.
 Vernon, of the White Rose, or York Faction.
 Basset, of the Red Rose, or Lancaster Faction.
 Charles, Dauphin, and afterwards King of France.
 Reignier, Duke of Anjou, and titular King of Naples.
 Dukes of Burgundy and Alençon. Bastard of Orleans.
 Governor of Paris. Master-Gunner of Orleans, and his Son.
 General of the French Forces in Bourdeaux.
 A French Sergeant. A Porter. An old Shepherd, Father to Joan la Pucelle.
 Margaret, Daughter to Reignier; afterwards married to King Henry.
 Countess of Auvergne.
 Joan la Pucelle, commonly called Joan of Arc.
 Mortimer's Keepers.
 Fiends appearing to La Pucelle, Lords, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and Attendants.

SCENE, — Partly in England, and partly in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — Westminster Abbey.
 March. The corpse of King Henry the Sixth is discovered, lying in state; attended by the Duke of Bedford, Gloucester, and the Earl of Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, Heralds, &c.
 Hail be the heavens with black, yield up your sleeping change of times and states, with your crystal tresses in the sky, that they may scourge the bad revolting stars, for they consented unto Henry's death! Henry the fifth, too famous to live long! I ne'er lost a king of so much worth. England ne'er had a king until his time. He had, deserving to command: His sword did blind men with his beams; His words did spread wider than a dragon's wings; His smiling eyes, replete with wrathful fire, in his own hand drove back his enemies; And day sun fierce bent against their shields: Should I say? his deeds exceed all that I lift up his hand, but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black: why mourn we not in blood?
 Henry is dead, and never shall revive.
 Upon a wooden coffin we attend;
 And death's dishonourable victory
 We with our stately presence glorify,
 Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
 What! shall we curse the planets of mishap,
 That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
 Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
 Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
 By magic verses have contriv'd his end? (Kings.) Win. He was a king, bless'd of the King of Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
 So dreadful will not be, as was his sight.
 The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
 The church's prayers made him so prosperous.
 Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd,
 His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:
 None do you like but an effeminate prince,
 Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.
 Win. Gloucester, whate'er we like, thou art protector,
 And lookest to command the prince, and realm.
 Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
 More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh,
And ne'er throughout the year to church thou
Except it be to pray against thy foes. [Go'st, Bed. Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minds in peace!

Let's to the altar:—Heralds, wait on us:—
Instead of gold we'll offer up our arms;
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.—
Posterity, await for wretched years, [suck,
When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall
Our isle be made a nourish of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.—
Henry the fifth! thy ghost I invoke;
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Caesar, or bright—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guicune, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Gaysons, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead
Henry's corpse!
Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead, and rise from death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? is Rouen yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost. [was us'd]

Ecc. How were they lost? what treachery Mess. No treachery; but want of men and Among the soldiers this is muttered, [money.
That here you maintain several factions;
And, whilst a field should be despatch'd and
You are disputing of your generals: [fought,
One would have lingering wars, with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot:
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Ecc. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth her flowing tides.

Bed. No they concern; regent I am of France.
Give me my steel'd coat! I'll fight for France.
A way with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds will I lend the French, instead of eyes,
To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance,
France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty towns of no import:
The Dauphin, Charles, is crowned king in Rheims;

The bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The duke of Alençon fleeth to his side.

Ecc. The Dauphin crown'd king
to him!

O, whether shall we fly from this Glo. We will not fly, but to our throats:—

Bedford. If thou be slack, [in Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of wardness?

An army have I muster'd in my Wherewith already France is won.

3 Mess. My gracious lords, to lamentations,
Wherewith you now bewail

hears, I must inform you of a dismal Betwixt the stout lord Talbot and

Win. What! wherein Talbot is't so!

3 Mess. O, no; wherein lost o'erthrown:

The circumstance I'll tell you
The tenth of August last, the day
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,

Having full scarce six thousand men,
By three-and-twenty thousand

Was round encompassed and No leisure had he to arm his
He wanted pikes to set before him, Instead whereof, sharp stakes, and

hedges,
They pitched in the ground round
To keep the horsemen off from

More than three hours the fight
Where valiant Talbot, alone
Enacted wonders with his sword,

Hundreds he sent to hell, and stand him;

Here, there, and everywhere,
The French exclaim'd, the day
His soldiers, spying his undaunted

A Talbot! A Talbot! cried out
And rush'd into the bowels of the Here had the conquest fully

If Sir John Fastolf had not put
He, being in the vaward, [the
With purpose to relieve and Cowardly fled, not having Hence grew the general wrong

Enclosed were they with the

A base Walloon, to win the Thrust Talbot with a spear Whom all France, with their strength,

Durst not presume to look on Bed. Is Talbot slain? then

For living idly here in pomp Whilst such a worthy leader Unto his dastard foemen he

3 Mess. O no, he lives; but
And lord Scallan with him, and ford:

Most of the rest slaughtered

No reason there is none but I shall [thence;
The Dauphin headlong from his even shall be the ransom of my friend:

my masters; to my task will I;
in France forthwith I am to make,

on great Saint George's feast withal:
and soldiers with me I will take,
heavily deeds shall make all Europe take. So you had need; for Orleans is [besieg'd;

The army is grown weak and faint:
of Salisbury craveth supply,

only keeps his men from mutiny,
they, so few, watch such a multitude, remember, lords, your oaths to your sworn,

to quell the Dauphin utterly,
in obedience to your yoke.

do remember it; and here take my my preparation.

the tower, with all the haste I can,
[Exit.
by artillery and munition;
I will proclaim young Henry king.

to Elham will I, where the young [Exit. shall his special governor;
his safety there I'll best devise.

each hath his place and function to [Exit.
to do;

not; for no nothing remains,
I will not be Jack-out-of-office:
from Elham I intend to steal,

most chosen stern of public weal. [Exit,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

to—France. Before Orleans,
[Exit.
[Exit.
[Exit.

Him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he sees me go back one foot, or y,

Alaric. Excursions; afterwards a Re-enter Charles, Alençon, Reignier,
and others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I!— [Have fled,
Dogs! cowards! dastards!—I would ne'er
But that they left me 'midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;
He fighteth as one weary of his life.
The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey. [cords

Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, re-England all Olivers and Rowlands bred,
During the time Edward the third did reign.

More truly now may this be verified;
For none but Samsons, and Goliasses,
It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!

Leunraw-bon'd rascals! who would e'er suppose
They had such courage and audacity!

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hare-brain'd slaves, [leager:
And hunger will enforce them to be more
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth

The walls they'll tear down, than forsake the siege. [device,
Reig. I think, by some odd gimmals, or Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on

Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do,
By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone.

Alen. Be it so.
Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the prince Dauphin? I have news for him. [us-Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd:

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand;
A holy maid hither with me I bring,

Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,
Ordained is to raise this tedious siege.
And drive the English forth the bounds of The spirit of deep prophecy she hath, [France.

Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome:
What's past and what's to come she can descry.

Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,
For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard.] But first, to try her skill,

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place;
Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern:
By this means shall we sound what skill she hath. [Retires.

Re-enter the Bastard of Orleans, with La Pucelle.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats? [beguile me!

Puc. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to Where is the Dauphin?—Come, come from behind;

I know thee well, though never seen before,
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me:
In private will I talk with thee apart.—[while] Stand back, you lords, and give us leave a dash.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.
Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's
My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate:
Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,

God's mother deign'd to appear to me,
And in a vision full of majesty,
Will'd me to leave my base vocation,
And free my country from calamity:
Her aid she promis'd, and assur'd success:
In complete glory she reveal'd herself;
And, whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,
That beauty am I bless'd with, which you see.
Ask me what question thou canst possible,
And I will answer unpremeditated:
My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.
Resolve on this: thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms:

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,—
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me;
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true;
Otherwise, I renounce all confidence. [sword,
Puc. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd
Deed'd with five flower-de-luces on each side;
The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard,

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.
Char. Then come, O' God's name; I fear no woman. [man]

Puc. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a [They fight, and La Pucelle overcomes.

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon,

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.
Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak. [help me]

Char. Whose'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must Impatiently I burn with thy desire;
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.
Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant, and not sovereign, be:
'Tis the French Dauphin saith to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,
For my profession's sacred, from above:
When I have eluded all thy foes from hence,
Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Mean time look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.
Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than men do know:

These women are shrewd tongue-
Reig. My lord, where are you?

Shall we give over Orleans, or Puc. Why, no, I say, distrust me not.

Fight till the last gasp; I will Char. What she says, I'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to battle

This night the siege assaill'd Expect Saint Martin's answer:

Since I have entered into the world
Glory is like a circle in the water

Which never ceaseth to enlarge
Till by broad spreading it disperse

With Henry's death the English
Dispersed are the glories it bequeath

Now am I like that proud building
Which Caesar and his fortune rear'd

Thou with an eagle art inspir'd
Helen, the mother of great Troy

Nor yet St. Philip's daughter
Bright star of Venice, fall'st thou down

How may I reverently worship Alen. Leave off delays, and siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou wilt our honours;

Drive them from Orleans, and Char. Presently we'll try:

about it:

No prophet will I trust, if she SCENE III.—London.

Enter at the gates the Duke of his serving-men, in

Glo. I am come to survey
day:

Since Henry's death, I fear, there Where be these warders, that

Open the gates; 'tis Gloster's
1 Ward. [Within.] Who's there?

so imperiously?
1 Serv. It is the noble Duke of

2 Ward. [Within.] Who's there?
may not be let in

1 Serv. Villains, answer ye 1 Ward. [Within.] The Duke

so we answer him:
We do not otherwise than we

Glo. Who would you? or what but mine?

There's none protector of the realm Break up the gates, I'll be your Shall I be flouted thus by dunder?

[Gloster's men rush at the Wood. [Within.] What would traitors have we here!

the lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?
the gates; here's Gloster that would

1 Ward. [Within.] Have patience, noble of Winchester forbids:

and thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in.
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him
1 Ward. [Within.] Woodville, prize him

Win. Here's Gloster too, a foe to citizens;
One that still motions war, and never peace;

O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;
That seeks to overthrow religion,

Because he is protector of the realm; [Tower,
And would have armour, here, out of the

To crown himself king, and suppress the prince.
Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.]

May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultu-

But to make open proclamation:—[ous strife,
Come, officer: as loud as e'er thou canst.

Off. [Reads.]
"All manner of men, assembled here in arms

this day, against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle,

or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger,
henceforward, upon pain of death."

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law:
But we shall meet, and break our minds at large. [The sure:]

Win. Gloster, we'll meet, to thy dear cost,

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.
May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not

away:—
This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Gloster! guard thy head;
For I intend to have it, ere long.

[Exeunt, severally, Gloster and Winchester, with their serving-men.

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.—[Door]

Good God! these nobles should such stomachs
I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—France. Before Orleans.
Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won.

Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at
them.

Howe'er, unfortunate, I miss'd my aim.
M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou ru'd by me:

Chief master-gunner am I of this town;

Something I must do to procure me grace.
The prince's espials have inform'd me

How the English, in the suburbs close en-
trench'd,

Went, through a secret grate of iron bars
In yonder tower to overpeer the city;

And thence discover how, with most advantage,
They may vex us with shot, or with assault.

To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;

And fully even these three days have I watch'd,
If I could see them. Now do thou watch,

For I can stay no longer.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;
And thou shalt find me at the governor's.

Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care;

I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.
Enter, in an upper chamber of a tower, the Lords Salisbury and Talbot, Sir William Glansdale, Sir Thomas Gargrave, and others.

Sol. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!
How wert thou handled, being prisoner?
Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd?
Discourse, I pray thee, on this turret's top.

Tal. The duke of Bedford had a prisoner,
Called the brave lord Ponton de Santralles;
For him I was exchang'd and ransom'd.
But with a baser man of arms by far,
Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd
me,

Which I, disdainful, scorn'd; and craved
Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd.
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
But, O, the treacherous Fastolf wounds my Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Sol. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelies.
In open market-place produced they me,
To be a public spectacle to all:
Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
The scare-crow that affrights our children so.
Then broke I from the officers that led me,
And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,

To hurl at the beholders of my shame:
My grisly countenance made others fly;
None durst come near for fear of sudden death.
In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;
So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread,

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant:
Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,
That walk'd about me every minute-while;
And if I did but stir out of my bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Sol. I grieve to hear what torments you en-
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently. [Durd,
Now it is supper-time in Orleans:
Here, through this grate, I can count every one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:
Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glans-
Let me have your express opinions, [dale,
Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think, at the north gate; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the
Tal. For aught I see, this city must be fam-
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot from the town. Salisbury and Sir Tho. Gargrave fall.]

Sol. O Lord, have mercy on sinners!

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, What chance is this, that I should cross'd us?

Tal. What chance is this, that I should
cross'd us?—
Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou
How far'st thou, mirror of all honour,
One of thy eyes, and thy chief off!

Accurs'd tower! accurs'd fatal house!
That hath contriv'd this woful chance!
In thirteen battles Salisbury conquer'd;
Henry the fifth he first train'd to the wars;
Whilst any trumpet did sound, or drum
His sword did not leave striking;
Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury! though thou doth fail,

One eye thou hast, to look to heaven;
The sun with one eye vieweth all the Heaven, be thou gracious to none
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hand;
Bear hence his body; I will help him
Sir Thomas Gargrave, how thou art Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with his Thou shalt not die, whilst—
He beckons with his hand, and
As who should say, "Woe'st thou
gone,

Remember to avenge me on the French;
Plantagenet, I will; and like thee Play on the lute, beholding the Wretched shall France be only in [Thunder heard; afterwards
What stir is this! What tumult
Whence cometh this alarm, and
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French
gather'd head:
The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle,
A holy prophetic, now risen up,
Is come with a great power to relieve the town.

Tal. Hear, hear, how dying
groan!
It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd;
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury;
Pucelle or puzzle, dolphin or dolphin;
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my
heels,
And make a quagmire of your
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these men dare.

*[Exit, bearing Scene V.—Orleans. Before the Alarm. Skirmishings. Enter suing the Dauphin; and exit: then enter La Pucelle,
fishmen before her, and
Then re-enter Talbot.*

Tal. Where is my strength, my
my force!

French troops retire, I cannot stay them;
I am dead in armour chaunceth them.
Enter La Pucelle.

How comes she?—
I'll have a bout with thee;
Will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
Whom I give thy soul to him thou lovest.

Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must discuss thee.
[They fight.]
Will you suffer hell so to prevail?

Tal. I'll burst with straining of my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
Will I smite this high-minded strumpet.
*Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet
come.*

Orleans forthwith.
If thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Salisbury to make his testament;
I'll be a cure, as many more shall be.
Pucelle enters the town with Soldiers.
My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;

What where I am, nor what I do:
I fear, not force, like Hannibal,
To lock our troops, and conquers as she doth with smoke, and doves with noise,
From their lives and houses driven away.
Will you for our fierceness, English dogs;
Whence cometh this alarm, and
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French
gather'd head:
The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle,
A holy prophetic, now risen up,
Is come with a great power to relieve
the town.

Tal. Hear, hear, how dying
groan!
It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd;
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury;
Pucelle or puzzle, dolphin or dolphin;
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my
heels,
And make a quagmire of your
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these
men dare.

*[Exit, bearing Scene V.—Orleans. Before the Alarm. Skirmishings. Enter
suing the Dauphin; and
exit: then enter La Pucelle,
fishmen before her, and
Then re-enter Talbot.*

Tal. Where is my strength, my
my force!

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetic!—
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy.

When they shall hear how we have play'd the Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;

For which I will divide my crown with her:
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall in procession sing her endless praise,
A statelier pyramid to her I'll rear,
Than Rhodope's of Memphis, ever was:

In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich jewel'd coffin of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.

Come in, and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.
[Flourish. Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Orleans.

Enter to the Gates a French Sergeant and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant.
If any noise, or soldier, you perceive,
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit. Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors
(When others sleep upon their quiet beds) Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and forces, with scaling ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubt'd Burgundy,—

By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,—
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted:

Embrace we, then, this opportunity,
As sitting best to quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrong's his fame,
Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches and the help of hell!

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Pucelle, whom they term so
Tal. A maid, they say. [pure]

Bur. A maid! and be so martial!
Bur. Pray God, she prove not masculine ere long.

If underneath the standard of the French
She carry armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow
thee.

Tal. Not all together; better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways;
That, if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed: I'll to you corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls, crying, "St.
George! A Talbot!" and all enter the town.]

I Sent. Arm, arm! the enemy doth make
The French leap over the walls in their shirts.

Enter, several ways, Bastard of Orleans, Alençon, and Reignier, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what, all un-ready so?

Bast. Unready! ay, and glad we 'scap'd so
well.

Reign. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave Hearing alarms at our chamber doors.

Alen. Of all exploits, since first I follow'd Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise [arms,
More venturesome or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reign. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour
him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel how Enter Charles and La Pucelle.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful
Diest thou at first, to flatter us withal, [dame]
Make us partakers of a little gain,
That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
Improv'd soldiers! had your watch been
good,

This sudden mischief never could have fallen.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default,

That, being captain of the watch to-night,
Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been
As that whereof I had the command,
We had not been thus shamefully Defeat.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reign. And so was mine.

Char. And, for myself, most just
night,

Within her quarter, and mine own
I was employ'd in passing to and fro
About relieving of the sentinels:

Then how, or which way, should they Puc. Question, my lords, no further case,

How, or which way? 'tis sure they But weakly guarded, where the made.

And now there rests no other shift
To gather our soldiers, scatter'd
And lay new platforms to surround Alençon.

Enter an English Soldier.
"A Talbot! a Talbot!"

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what
The cry of Talbot serves me for a
For I have loaden me with many Using no other weapon but his sword.

Scene II.—Orléans. Within the town.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, Whose pitchy mantle over-veils the Here sound retreat, and cease our pursuit.

Tal. Bring forth the body of
And here advance it in the market
The middle centre of this curdled
Now have I paid my vow unto the
For every drop of blood was drawn
There hath at least five Frenchmen
And that hereafter ages may
What ruin happen'd in revenge
Within their chiefest temple [the
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall
Upon the which, that every one
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans.

The treacherous manner of his death
And what a terror he had been to
But, lords, in all our bloody
I muse we met not with the
His new-come champion, virtuous
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord
Rous'd on the sudden from their
They did, amongst the troops
Leap o'er the walls for refuge
For smoke and dusky vapours
And sure I fear'd the Dauphin
When arm in arm they both
running.

Like to a pair of loving turtles
That could not live asunder, did
embrace.

Tal. Bring forth the body of
And here advance it in the market
The middle centre of this curdled
Now have I paid my vow unto the
For every drop of blood was drawn
There hath at least five Frenchmen
And that hereafter ages may
What ruin happen'd in revenge
Within their chiefest temple [the
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall
Upon the which, that every one
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans.

The treacherous manner of his death
And what a terror he had been to
But, lords, in all our bloody
I muse we met not with the
His new-come champion, virtuous
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord
Rous'd on the sudden from their
They did, amongst the troops
Leap o'er the walls for refuge
For smoke and dusky vapours
And sure I fear'd the Dauphin
When arm in arm they both
running.

Like to a pair of loving turtles
That could not live asunder, did
embrace.

Tal. Bring forth the body of
And here advance it in the market
The middle centre of this curdled
Now have I paid my vow unto the
For every drop of blood was drawn
There hath at least five Frenchmen
And that hereafter ages may
What ruin happen'd in revenge
Within their chiefest temple [the
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall
Upon the which, that every one
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans.

The treacherous manner of his death
And what a terror he had been to
But, lords, in all our bloody
I muse we met not with the
His new-come champion, virtuous
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord
Rous'd on the sudden from their
They did, amongst the troops
Leap o'er the walls for refuge
For smoke and dusky vapours
And sure I fear'd the Dauphin
When arm in arm they both
running.

Like to a pair of loving turtles
That could not live asunder, did
embrace.

Tal. Bring forth the body of
And here advance it in the market
The middle centre of this curdled
Now have I paid my vow unto the
For every drop of blood was drawn
There hath at least five Frenchmen
And that hereafter ages may
What ruin happen'd in revenge
Within their chiefest temple [the
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall
Upon the which, that every one
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans.

The treacherous manner of his death
And what a terror he had been to
But, lords, in all our bloody
I muse we met not with the
His new-come champion, virtuous
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord
Rous'd on the sudden from their
They did, amongst the troops
Leap o'er the walls for refuge
For smoke and dusky vapours
And sure I fear'd the Dauphin
When arm in arm they both
running.

Like to a pair of loving turtles
That could not live asunder, did
embrace.

Tal. Bring forth the body of
And here advance it in the market
The middle centre of this curdled
Now have I paid my vow unto the
For every drop of blood was drawn
There hath at least five Frenchmen
And that hereafter ages may
What ruin happen'd in revenge
Within their chiefest temple [the
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall
Upon the which, that every one
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans.

The treacherous manner of his death
And what a terror he had been to
But, lords, in all our bloody
I muse we met not with the
His new-come champion, virtuous
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord
Rous'd on the sudden from their
They did, amongst the troops
Leap o'er the walls for refuge
For smoke and dusky vapours
And sure I fear'd the Dauphin
When arm in arm they both
running.

Like to a pair of loving turtles
That could not live asunder, did
embrace.

Tal. Bring forth the body of
And here advance it in the market
The middle centre of this curdled
Now have I paid my vow unto the
For every drop of blood was drawn
There hath at least five Frenchmen
And that hereafter ages may
What ruin happen'd in revenge
Within their chiefest temple [the
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall
Upon the which, that every one
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans.

The treacherous manner of his death
And what a terror he had been to
But, lords, in all our bloody
I muse we met not with the
His new-come champion, virtuous
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord
Rous'd on the sudden from their
They did, amongst the troops
Leap o'er the walls for refuge
For smoke and dusky vapours
And sure I fear'd the Dauphin
When arm in arm they both
running.

Like to a pair of loving turtles
That could not live asunder, did
embrace.

And these things are set in order here,
And follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.
All hail, my lords! Which of this pincely train

Is the warlike Talbot, for his acts much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot: who would speak
[with him?]

The virtuous lady, countess of Au-vergne, admiring thy renown, [vergne, and her poor wattle where she lies, [safe glory fills the world with loud report.
Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our lady's grave to be encounter'd with.

Tal. Trust me, my lord, despite her gentle suit,
I will not prevail with all their oratory, [of men
her admission told her I return great thanks, and your honours hear me company! [will;
I have heard it said, unhidden guests will then, alone, [since there's no other, captain, [Whisperer.] You perceive my mind.

I do, my lord, and mean accordingly.

Scene III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;

And you have done so, bring the keys
[to me.]

Porter. Madam, I will.

Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall as I have said, the honour of this exploit, [out right,
the achievements of no less account: [ears,
for their counsels of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Count. Madam, according as your ladyship commanded,

So is lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this
the man?

Tal. Is this the scourge of France?
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Count. So much fear'd abroad,
[the man?]

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble
But since your ladyship is not at leisure, [you:
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?—Go ask him, whether he goes.

Count. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.

Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs:

But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,

That hast by tyranny, these many years,
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,

And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha! [shall turn to moan.

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth
To think that you have aught but Talbot's

Whereon to practise your severity. [shadow,
Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am, indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;

For what you see, is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity:

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,

Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the
He will be here, and yet he is not here: [notice;
How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently.

He winds a horn. Drums heard: then a peal of ordinance. The gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam! are you now persuaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himself? [strength,
These are his substance, sinews, arms, and
With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:
I find thou art no less than fame hath brail'd;

And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;

For I am sorry, that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art, [construe
Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor mistake the mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me:
No other satisfaction do I crave,

But only (with your patience) that we may Taste of your wine, and see what cates you have;

For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart; and think me honoured
To feast so great a warrior in my house.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.
Enter the Earls of Somerset, Suffolk, and Warwick; Richard Plantagenet, Vernon, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dure no man answer in a case of truth? [loud;
Suf. Within the temple hall we were too
The garden here is more convenient. [truth;

Plan. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the
Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then,
between us. [higher pitch;

War. Between two hawks, which flies the Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth; [temper;

Between two blades, which bears the better
Between two horses, which doth bear him best; [eye;—

Between two girls, which hath the merriest
I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment:

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw. [ance:

Plan. Tut, tut! here is a mannerly forbear-
The truth appears so naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident, [eye.
That it will glimmer through a blind man's

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so loth to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-born gentleman,
And stands upon the honour of his birth,

If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this briar pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no coward, nor no
flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all
Of base insinuating flattery, [colour
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young
Somerset;

And say withal, I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck
no more,

Till you conclude, that he, upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good master Vernon, it is well ob-
If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence. [jected:

Plan. And I. [the case,
Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of

I pluck this pale and maiden rose
Giving my verdict on the white rose

Som. Prick not your finger as you Lest, bleeding, you do paint the

And fall on my side so, against your
Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion

Opinion shall be surgeon to my hand,
And keep me on the side where still

Som. Well, well, come on: who Law. [To Somerset.] Unless my

my books be false,
The argument you held, was wrong

In sign whereof, I pluck a white Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your

ment?
Som. Here, in my scabbard;

Shall dye your white rose in a bloody Plan. Meantime, your cheeks do our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as with

The truth on our side. No, Plantagenet.

Som. 'Tis not for fear, but anger, that I
Blush for pure shame to counterple

And yet thy tongue will not come out
Plan. Hath not thy rose a colour?

Som. Hath not thy rose a colour?
Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, in his truth;

Whiles thy consuming cancer

Som. Well, I'll find friends to bleeding roses,

That shall maintain what I have said
Where false Plantagenet dare not Plan. Now, by this maiden's

hand,

I scorn thee and thy fashion, never
Suf. Turn not thy scorn to me

Plan. Proud Poole, I will, and him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof
Som. Away, away, good William

Poole!

We grace the yeoman, by counten-War. Now, by God's will,

him, Somerset;
His grandfather was Lionel, Duke

Third son to the third Edward,
land.

Spring crestless yeomen from the plow
Plan. He bears him on the plow

Or durst not, for his craven heart Som. By him that made my my words

On any plot of ground in Christen-

Was not thy father, Richard, a bridge,

For treason executed in our late
And, by his treason, stand'st not

Corrupted, and exempt from any His trespass yet lives guilty in the

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art Plan. My father was attached, and Condemn'd to die for treason, but

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerzet,
growing time once ripen'd to my will.
You are my parker Poole, and you yourself,
made you in my book of memory,
I charge you for this apprehension:
To it will, and say you are well warn'd.
Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee
still;

And know us, by these colours, for thy foes;
For these my friends, in spite of thee, shall wear.

And, by my soul, this pale and angry [rose, evidence of my blood-drinking hate,
set for ever, and my faction, wear,
with me to my grave,
to the height of my degree.
Go forward, and be choked with thy ambition!

And farewell, until I meet thee next. [Exit.
Have with thee, Poole. — Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.

How I am brav'd, and must performe [your house,

And this blot, that they object against me, will be out in the next parliament,
And I shall be not then created York;
I shall live to be accounted Warwick.
In signal of my love to thee,
I'll upon thy party wear this rose:

And here I prophesy,—this brawl to-day,
set upon this faction, in the Temple garden,
between the red rose and the white,
shall end, between the red rose and the white,
God master Vernon, I am bound
to you,

And on my behalf would pluck a flower.
In your behalf still will I wear the
And so will I. [same.

Thank, gentle sir.
Let us four to dinner: I dare say
I shall drink blood another day.

[Exit.

—London. A Room in the Tower.
Mortimer, brought in a chair by two Keepers.

Kind keepers of my weak decaying body, bid Mortimer here rest himself. [age, like a man now halld from the rack,

my limbs with long imprisonment;

Gray locks, long pursuivants of death,
in an age of care,

the end of Edmund Mortimer. [spent,
like lamps whose wasting oil is drawing to their extent: [grief;

children, overborne with burdening arms, like to a wither'd vine shows his sapless branches to the ground:

these feet, whose strengthless stay is to support this lump of clay, [numb,
with desire to get a grave,

As witting I no other comfort have.
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

I Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will
come:

We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber;
And answer was return'd, that he will come.
Nor, Enough: my soul shall then be satisfied,
Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
(Before whose glory I was great in arms,)
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then hath Richard been ob-scur'd,
Depriv'd of honour and inheritance.
But now, the arbitrator of despair,
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me
hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard Plantagenet.
I Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come. [he comes]

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend? is Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late despis'd Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp: [neck,
O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock, [spis'd]

Why didst thou say—of late thou wert de-Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;
And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease.
This day, in argument upon a case, [me;
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerzet and Among which terms he us'd a lavish tongue,
And did upbraid me with my father's death:
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.
Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for alliance sake, declare the cause
My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.
Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth,
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was;
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess. [soft,
Mor. I will, if that my fading breath per-
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king,
Depos'd his nephew Richard,—Edward's son,
The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent:
During whose reign the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne:
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this,

Waa—for that (young king Richard thus re-leaving no heir begotten of his body) [mov'd,
 I was the next by birth and parentage ;
 For by my mother I deriv'd am
 From Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son
 To king Edward the third ; whereas he
 From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
 Being but fourth of that heroic line.
 But mark : as, in this haughty great attempt,
 They labour'd to plant the rightful heir,
 I lost my liberty, and they their lives.
 Long after this, when Henry the fifth,
 Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
 Thy father, earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
 From famous Edmund Langley, duke of York, Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,
 Again, in pity of my hard distress,
 Levied an army, weening to redeem
 And have install'd me in the diadem ;
 But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
 And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
 In whom the title rested, were suppressed.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True ; and thou seest that I no issue
 And that my fainting words do warrant death :
 Thou art my heir ; the rest, I wish thee gather :
 But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail
 with me.

But yet, methinks, my father's execution
 Waa nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic :
 Strong fix'd is the house of Lancaster,
 And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
 But now thy uncle is removing hence ;
 As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
 With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle, would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age !

Mor. Thou dost, then, wrong me,—as the slaughterer doth,

Which giveth many wounds, when one will Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good ;
 Only, give order for my funeral :

And so, farewell ; and fair be all thy hopes,
 And prosperous be thy life in peace and war !

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul !

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
 And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.

Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast ;
 And what I do imagine, let that rest.

Keepers, convey him hence ; and I myself
 Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out the body of Mortimer.]

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer, Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort :
 And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
 Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
 I doubt not but with honour to redress ;

And therefore haste I to the parliament
 Either to be restored to my blood
 Or make my ill th' advantage of it.

ACT III

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Earl of

Warwick, Somerset, and

Bishop of Winchester, Rad-

genet, and others. Gloster

a bill ; Winchester snatches

Win. Com'st thou with deep lines,

With written pamphlets studiously

Humphrey of Gloster ? If thou can

Or ought intend'st to lay unto my

Do it without invention, suddenly

As I, with sudden and extempor

Purpose to answer what thou can

Glo. Presumptuous priest ! thou

mands my patience,

Or thou shouldst find thou hast

Think not, although in writing I

The manner of thy vile outrageous

That therefore I have forg'd, or ad

Verbatim to rehearse the method

No, prelate ; such is thy audac

ness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous, and discor

As very infants prattle of thy

Thou art a most pernicious

Forward by nature, enemy to Lascivious, wanton, more than

A man of thy profession and

And for thy treachery, what's more

In that thou laid'st a trap to take

As well at London Bridge, as at

Beside, I fear me, if thy thought

The king, thy sov'reign, is not

From envious malice of thy sweet

Win. Gloster, I do defy thee

vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall

If I were covetous, ambitious, or

As he will have me, how am I

Or how haps it, I seek not to

Or raise myself, but keep my

And for dissension, who prefer

More than I do,—except I be

No, my good lords, it is not

It is not that that hath incen

It is, because no one should

No one but he should be about

And that engenders thunder in

And makes him roar these accu

But he shall know, I am as

Glo.

Thou bastard of my grandfather

Win. Ay, lordly sir ; for what

But one imperious in another's

Glo. Am I not protector, su

And am not I a prelate of the church?
 Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
 And with it to patronage his theft.
 O, my reverent cloister!

Thou art reverent
 In thy spiritual function, not thy life.
 Home shall remedy this.

My lord, it were your duty to forbear.
 Hoam thither then.
 Methinks my lord should be religious,
 To leave the office that belongs to such.

He thanks his lordship should be
 A prelate so to plead. [Humbler;
 Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so

State holy, or unallow'd, what of The grace protector to the king? [that I Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue. [should;

 I so said, "Speak, sirrah, when you have bold verdict enter talk with lords!"

Uncles of Gloster, and of Winchester, watchmen of our English weal,

 If prayers might prevail,
 Your hearts in love and amity.

And a scandal is it to our crown,
 To see such noble peers as ye should jar!

My lords, my tender years can tell,
 How much a viperous worm,
 Hath eaten the bowels of the commonwealth.—

Down with the tawny
 Scoundrel's this! [coats!]
 An uproar, I dare warrant,

Through malice of the bishop's men.
 Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,
 The city of London, pity us!

And the duke of Gloster's men,
 Whom late to carry any weapon,
 Their pockets full of pebble-stones,

Throwing themselves in contrary parts,
 And so bet at one another's pate, [out:
 They have their giddy brains knock'd

down in every street,
 For fear, compell'd to shut our shops,
 And Winchester, the serving-men of Gloster and Winchester, with bloody pates,

 We charge you, on allegiance to
 peace.—

your slaughter hands, and keep the peace. Gloster, mitigate this strife.
 Nay, if we be stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

 [Skirmish again,
 My lord, we know your grace to be

Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
 [Skirmish again,
 My lord, we know your grace to be

Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
 [Skirmish again,
 My lord, we know your grace to be

Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
 [Skirmish again,
 My lord, we know your grace to be

Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
 [Skirmish again,
 My lord, we know your grace to be

Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
 [Skirmish again,
 My lord, we know your grace to be

Inferior to none but to his majesty:

And, ere that we will suffer such a prince,
 So kind a father of the commonweal,
 To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
 We, and our wives, and children, all will fight,
 And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails Shall pitch a field, when we are dead.

[Skirmish again.
 Glo. Stay, stay, I say!

And, if you love me, as you say you do,
 Let me persuade you to forbear a while. [soul!

K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my
 Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold

My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?
 Who should be pitiful, if you be not?

Or who should study to prefer a peace,
 If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my lord protector;—yield,
 Winchester;—

Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,
 To slay your sov'reign and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief, and what murder too,
 Hath been enacted through your enmity;

Then, be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.
 Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me
 stoop:

Or I would see his heart out, ere the priest
 Should ever get the privilege of me. [shakes

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,

As by his smother'd brows it doth appear:
 Why look you still so stern, and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard
 you preach,

That malice was a great and grievous sin;
 And will not you maintain the thing you teach,

But prove a chief offender in the same?
 War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly girl,—

 For shame, my lord of Winchester, relent!

What, shall a child instruct you what to do?
 Win. Well, duke of Gloster, I will yield to

thee:
 Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

Glo. [Aside.] Ay; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.

See here, my friends, and loving countrymen;
 This token serveth for a flag of truce,

Betwixt ourselves, and all our followers:
 So help me God, as I dissemble not! [fit not!

Win. [Aside.] So help me God, as I intend
 K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind duke of Gloster, how joyful am I made by this contract! [ter, Away, my masters! trouble us no more;

But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
 1 Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.

2 Serv. And so will I.
 3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

 [Exit Mayor, serving-men, &c.]

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign,
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my lord of Warwick:—
for, sweet prince,
As if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force
Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that
But all the whole inheritance I give, [alone,
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till this point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop, then, and set your knee against my foot;

And, in requerdon of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valliant sword of York:
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!

And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!

Alb. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York!

Som. [Aside.] Perish, base prince, ignoble
duke of York!

Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty,
To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France.
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.

K. Hen. When Gloster says the word, king
Henry goes;

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.
Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Flourish. Exeunt all except Exeter.

Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in
Not seeing what is likely to ensue: [France,

This late dissension, grown betwixt the peers,
Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love,

And will at last break out into a flame:
As fester'd members rot but by degrees,

Till bones, and flesh, and sinews fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.

And now I fear that fatal prophecy,
Which, in the time of Henry, nam'd the fifth,

Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—
That Henry born at Monmouth, should win

all;
And Henry born at Windsor, should lose all:
Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish

His days may finish ere the hapless time.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter La Pucelle, disguised, and dressed like countrymen, with their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the Rouen,

Through which our policy must needs
Take heed, be wary how you place your Talk like the vulgar sort of market
That come to gather money for their
If we have entrance, (as I hope we
And that we find the slothful watch
I'll by a sign give notice to our
That Charles the Dauphin takes

I Sold. Our sacks shall be a
the city,

And we be lords and rulers over Therefore we'll knock.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là?
Puc. Paysons, paysons pour le pain.

Poor market-folks, that come to Guard. [Opening the gates.]
the market-bell is ring-

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thee to the ground.

[La Pucelle, &c., Enter Charles, the Bastard of Orleans, son, and forces

Char. Saint Denis bless this
agen!

And once again we'll sleep secure in Dast. Here enter'd Pucelle,

Now she is there, how will she speed?
Where is the best and safest passage?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch tower;

Which, once discern'd, shows the ing is,—

No way to that, for weakness
enter'd.

Enter La Pucelle on a battlefield, out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy
torch,

That joineth Rouen unto her country
But burning fatal to the Talbot's

Bast. See, noble Charles, the
The burning torch in yonder tower

Char. Now shine it like a comet
A prophet to the fall of all our foes

Alen. Defer no time, delays have Enter, and cry "The Dauphin!"

And then do execution on the wretches
[They march.]

Alarum. Enter from the town English Soldiers.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this with thy tears,

If Talbot but survive thy treachery
Pucelle, that witch, that damnable

Hath wrought this hellish mischief
That hardly we escap'd the pride of [Pucelle, &c.,

Pucelle, that witch, that damnable
Hath wrought this hellish mischief
That hardly we escap'd the pride of Alarum: Excursions. Enter, from the town, Talbot, brought in sick in a chair, with Burgundy, and the English forces. Then, enter on the walls, La Pucelle, Charles, the Bastard of Orleans, Alençon, and others.

La Pucelle. Good morrow, gallants! Want ye corn for bread?
Talbot. The duke of Burgundy will fast, before he'll buy again at such a rate:
Charles. Full of darnel; do you like the taste?
Alençon. Doof on, vile fiend and shameless courtisan!
Talbot. And are long to choke thee with thine own, and make thee curse the harvest of that corn.
Charles. Your grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.
Talbot. O let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason!
Alençon. What will you do, good grey-beard?
Talbot. Run a tilt at death within a chair!
Charles. Full fiend of France, and hag of all despite,
Talbot. I'll pass it with thy lustful paramours!
Charles. I'll have a bout with you again,
Talbot. Let Talbot perish with this shame,
Charles. Are you so hot, sir? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;
Talbot. Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.
Alençon. Talbot and the rest consult together.
Charles. The parliament! who shall be the speaker?
Alençon. Dure ye come forth, and meet us in the field!
Charles. Unlike your lordship takes us, then, for fools, Talbot. I speak not to that railing Heate, Charles. Like Alençon, and the rest;
Alençon. Signior, no.
Talbot. Hang! — base muleteers of transient foot-boys do they keep the walls,
Charles. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls;
Talbot. Means no goodness, by his looks. —
Charles. You, my lord! we came but to tell you we are here.
Alençon. La Pucelle, &c., from the walls.
Charles. And there will we be too, ere it be long.
Talbot. Burgundy, by honour of thy house,
Charles. To get the town again, or die; [France,] Alençon. As were as English Henry lives,
Charles. In this late-betrayed town
Talbot. I swear to get the town or die. [yows.
Charles. My vows are equal partners with thy place,
Talbot. But ere we go, regard this dying

The valiant duke of Bedford. — Come, my lord, We will bestow you in some better place, Fitter for sickness, and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me: Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen, And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you. [I read,

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once That stout Pendragon, in his litter, sick, Came to the field, and vanquished his foes: Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts, Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast! — Then, be it so: — heavens keep old Bedford safe! —

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, But gather we our forces out of hand, And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt Burgundy, Talbot, and forces, leaving Bedford, and others.

Alarum: Excursions; in one of which enter Sir John Fastolf and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolf, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight: We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay, All the Talbots in the world, to save my life.

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit.

Retreat: Excursions. Re-enter from the town, La Pucelle, Alençon, Charles, &c., and exeunt, flying. [pleas, Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when Heaven For I have seen our enemies' overthrow, What is the trust or strength of foolish man? They, that of late were daring with their scoofs, Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried off in his chair.
Alarum. Re-enter Talbot, Burgundy, and others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again! This is a double honour, Burgundy: Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy Enshrines thee in his heart; and there erects Thy noble deeds, as valour's monument.

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep. [His gleaks? Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles What, all a-mort? Rouen hangs her head for That such a valiant company are fled. [grief, Now will we take some order in the town, Placing therein some expert officers; And then depart to Paris to the king.

For there young Hen with his nobles lies.

Bur. What wills lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget

The noble duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
But see his execrable fullfill'd in Rouen:
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings and mightiest potentates must die,
For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Plains near Rouen.

Enter Charles, the Bastard of Orleans, Alençon, La Pucelle, and forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail;
We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no diffidence:
One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy status in some holy
And have thee reverence'd like a blessed saint:
Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise:

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot, and to follow us. [That,

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do
France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirpated from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from
And not have title of an earldom here. [France,

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work,
To bring this matter to the wish'd end.

[Drums heard.
Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-wal.

An English march. Enter, and pass over,
Talbot and his forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

A French march. Enter the Duke of Burgundy and his forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and his:
Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

[A parley.
Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy!

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles! for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not so
Puc. Look on thy country, France,

And see the cities and the towns that
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe

As looks the mother on her lowly
When death doth close his tender eyes

See, see, the pining malady of France Behold the wounds, the most wounds,

Which thou thyself hast given

O, turn thy edged sword another way Strike those that hurt, and hurt not us help!

One drop of blood, drawn from my

Should grieve thee more than any foreign gore:

Return thee, therefore, with a dove
And wash away thy country's stain

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd my
Or nature makes me suddenly relent

Puc. Besides, all French and claims on thee,

Doubting thy birth and lawful Whom join'st thou with, but with a nation,

That will not trust thee but for proof

When Talbot hath set footing on
And fashion'd thee that instrument

Who then but English Henry will
And thou be thrust out, like a foreigner

Call we to mind,—and mark his face
Was not the duke of Orleans' face

And was he not in England prisoner
But when they heard he was alive

They set him free, without all hire
In spite of Burgundy and all his

See, then, thou fight'st against thy
men,

And join'st with them who will be thy Come, come, return; return, thou

lord;
Charles, and the rest, will take thee

Bur. I am vanquish'd; I am words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring waves
And made me almost yield upon my knees

Forgive me, country, and sweet
And, lords, accept this hearty kiss

My forces and my power of men
So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer

Puc. Done like a Frenchman turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke!
makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth begot new breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely
in this,

And doth deserve a coronet of Char. Now let us on, my lords,

powers;
And seek how we may preclude

ACT IV.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.
Enter King Henry, Gloster, Exeter, York,

Verona, Basset, &c. To them Talbot, and some of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable council,

Since your arrival in this realm,
I have my duty to my sovereign:

your obedience fifty tortoiseshell scales, and seven walled towns of

strength,
and five hundred prisoners of esteem,—

with automatic loyalty of heart, to the glory of his conquest got,

to my God, and next unto your grace,
I am, in this the lord Talbot, uncle

Gloster.

King. So long been resident in France!

Alen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!

I was young, (as yet I am not old,) remember how my father said,

since we were resolved of your truth,
I have your service, and your toil in war;

how have you fasted our reward,
I should not with so much as thanks,

all now, we never saw your face:
stand up; and, for these good deeds,

you create you earl of Shrewsbury;

in your commendation take your place.

[Flourish. Enter King Henry, Glo., Tal., and Nobles.

Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at seeing of these colours that I wear

in your noble lord of York,—[See,
and maintain the former words thou said'st:]

Yes, sir, as well as you dare patronage

my lord, the duke of Somerset.

Why, what is he? as good a man as I.

King. He is not so; in witness, take you
this.

Alen. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms as such.

who draws a sword, 'tis present death,
the blow should breach thy dearest throat.

into his majesty, and crave
that thou shalt see, I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Well, incontinent, I'll be there as soon
as you;

they meet you sooner than you would.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room of State.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, Exeter, York,
Suffolk, Somerset, Winchester, Warwick,

Talbot, the Governor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save king Henry, of that name Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,—

That you elect no other king but him;

Esteem none friends, but such as are his friends,
And none your foes, but such as shall pretend

Malicious practices against his state:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

[Exeunt Gov. and his train.
Enter Sir John Fastolfe.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from
To haste unto your coronation,

A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the duke of Burgundy and
thee!

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee
next,

To tear the garter from thy craven's leg,
[Plucking it off.

(Which I have done,) because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,

When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met, or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire, did run away:

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself, and divers gentlemen beside,

Were there surpris'd, and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;

Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yes, or no!

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,
And ill becoming any common man.

Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.
Tal. When first this order was ordain'd,

my lords,
Knights of the garter were of noble birth.

Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;

Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes.

He, then, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,

Profaning this most honourable order;
And should (if I were worthy to be judge)

Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hear'st thy doom:

Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a knight;
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death.

[Exit Fastolfe.]

And now, my loyal protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle duke of Burgundy.

Glo. [Viewing the superscription.] What means his grace, that he hath changed his style?

No more, but plain and bluntly,—"To the Rath he forgot he is his sovereign!" [King!]
Or doth this charlish superscription Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's here? [Reads.] "I have, upon especial
cause,—

Mord with compassion of my country's woe,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,—

Forsook your pernicious faction, [France,
And join'd with Charles, the rightful king of O, monstrous treachery! Can this be so,—

That in alliance, amity, and oaths, [Glo!]
There should be found such false dissembling

K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt? [foe.

Glo. He doth, my lord; and is become your K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain? [writes,

Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he K. Hen. Why then, lord Talbot, there, shall talk with him,

And give him chastisement for this abuse:—
How say you, my lord? are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege! Yes, but that I am prevented, [ploy'd,

I should have beg'd I might have been em-K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to flout his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes.

[Exit.

Enter Vernon and Bassett.
Vern. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign! [too!

Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat York. This is my servant; hear him, noble prince! [him!

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favour K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak,—

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom? [me wrong.

Vern. With him, my lord; for he hath done Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong. [both complain!

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you
First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into
France,

This fellow, here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraid me about the rose I wear;

Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth
About a certain question in the law,

Argu'd betwixt the duke of York and
With other vile and ignominious
In confutation of which rude ap-
And in defence of my lord's words
I crave the benefit of law of arms.

Vern. And that is my petition,
For though he seem, with forged
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provoked
And he first took exceptions at the Pronouncing, that the paleness of his Bewray'd the faintness of my master's York. Will not this malice, Somerset, left?

Som. Your private grudge, my lord,
will out,
Though ne'er so cunningly you mask
K. Hen. Good Lord, what mad brain-sick me,

When, for so slight and frivolous
Such factious emulations shall arise
Good cousins both, of York and Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be York. Let this discussion first fight,

And then your highness shall compare
Som. The quarrel toucheth none
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it,
York. There is my pledge,
Somerset.

Vern. Nay, let it rest where it
Bas. Confirm it so, mine honour Glo. Confirm it so! Confound strife!

And perish ye, with your audacious
Presumptuous vassals, are you not
With this immodest clamorous
To trouble and disturb the king and
And you, my lords,—methinks you
To bear with their perverse objections Much less to take occasion from
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves
Let me persuade you take a better
Ecc. It grieves his highness lords, be friends.

K. Hen. Come hither, you combatants:
Henceforth I charge you, as Quite to forget this quarrel and
And you, my lords, remember
In France, amongst a fickle
If they perceive division in our
And that within ourselves we
How will their grudging stomachs
To wilful disobedience, and rebel Beside, what infamy will there When foreign princes shall be
That for a toy, a thing of no
King Henry's peers, and chief Destroy'd themselves, and lost
France!

O, think upon the conquest of My tender years; and let us not That for a trifle, that was bought at so dear a price, if I wear this rose,

I say we should therefore be suspicious
of us to Somerset, than York:
I will they may upbraid me with my crown,
Your discretion, the king of Scots is crown'd.
I am able to instruct or teach:
Therefore, as we hither came in peace,
of York, we institute your grace and my lord of Somerset, unite your subjects, sons of your progenitors, and together, and digest
my lord protector, and the rest, some respite, will return to Calais; [long to England; where I hope ere presented, by your victories, [front.
Alençon, and that traitorous York, Suffolk, and Bassett.
My lord of York, I promise you, the thought, did play the orator.
And so he did; but yet I like it not,
he wears the badge of Somerset.
[York] that was but his fancy, blame his not;
presume, sweet prince, be thought no
as if I wish he did,—But let it rest;
[York] must now be managed.
[York] Wall didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;
the passions of thy heart burst out,
we should have seen decipher'd there ambitious spite, more furious raging
I can be imagin'd or suppos'd.
[York] no simple man that sees [York] discord of nobility
[York] considering of each other in the court,
[York] handling of their favourites,
[York] it doth presage some ill event.
[York] when sceptres are in children's [York] hands;
[York] when envy breeds unkind division:
[York] the ruin, there begins confusion.
[Exit.

II.—France. Before Bourdeaux.
Enter Talbot, with his forces.
Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpet your general unto the wall. [Peter [York] sends a party. Enter on the walls, [York] of the French Forces, and others.
[York] Talbot, captains, call you forth,
[York] in arms to Harry King of England;
[York] he would:—Open your city gates;

Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours.

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Glo. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well-fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stand with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacra-
ment,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit! [man,
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'dus thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colour'd,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.
[Drum afar off.

Mark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul:
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and perseu their
O, negligent and heedless discipline! [wings.
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pluck,
But rather moody mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.— [right,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.
Enter York, with forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Glo. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well-fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stand with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacra-
ment,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit! [man,
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'dus thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colour'd,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.
[Drum afar off.

Mark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul:
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and perseu their
O, negligent and heedless discipline! [wings.
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pluck,
But rather moody mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.— [right,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.
Enter York, with forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Glo. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well-fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stand with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacra-
ment,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit! [man,
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'dus thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colour'd,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.
[Drum afar off.

Mark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul:
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and perseu their
O, negligent and heedless discipline! [wings.
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pluck,
But rather moody mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.— [right,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.
Enter York, with forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Glo. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well-fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stand with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacra-
ment,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit! [man,
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'dus thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colour'd,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.
[Drum afar off.

Mark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul:
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and perseu their
O, negligent and heedless discipline! [wings.
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pluck,
But rather moody mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.— [right,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.
Enter York, with forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Glo. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well-fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stand with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacra-
ment,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit! [man,
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'dus thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colour'd,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.
[Drum afar off.

Mark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul:
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and perseu their
O, negligent and heedless discipline! [wings.
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pluck,
But rather moody mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.— [right,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.
Enter York, with forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Glo. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well-fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stand with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacra-
ment,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit! [man,
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'dus thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colour'd,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.
[Drum afar off.

Mark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul:
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.
[Exit General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and perseu their
O, negligent and heedless discipline! [wings.
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pluck,
But rather moody mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my
friends.— [right,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.
Enter York, with forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants:
Lean famine, quant'ring steel, and climbing
Who, in a moment, even with the earth [fire;
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Mess. They are return'd, my lord; and give it out,
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot: as he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered [led;
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin
Which join'd with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid;
And I am louted by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier:
God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,

Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,
And hemm'd about with grim destruction.
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! To Bourdeaux, York! [honour.

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's York. O God, that Somerset,—who in proud heart

Doth stop my cornets,—were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman,
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire, and wrathful fury, make me weep
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord.

York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily
All 'long of this vile traitor Somerset. [get;

Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul!

And on his son, young John; whom two hours since

I met in travel toward his warlike father.
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his grave!
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.—

Lucy. Farewell: no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.—
Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won away.

'Long all of Somerset and his delay. [Exit.

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglect doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scare-cold conqueror,
That ever-living man of memory,
Henry the fifth:—Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all, hurry to loss.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Other Plains of France

Enter Somerset, with his forces; and Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send this
This expedition was by York and I Too rashly plotted; all our general
Might with a sail of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-aching Hath sullied all his gloss of former
By this unheeded, desperate, wild
York set him on to fight, and dares That, Talbot dead, great York might name.

Off. Here is Sir William Lucy, who Set from our o'ermatch'd forces [exit.

Enter Sir William Lucy.
Som. How now, sir William? what you sent.

Lucy. Whither, my lord? from sold lord Talbot;

Who, ring'd about with bold adventure,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset
To heat assailing death from his war
And whiles the honourable captain Drops bloody sweat from his war-worn
And, in advantage ling'ring, looks You, his false hopes, the trust of honour.

Keep off aloof with worthless command
Let not your private discord keep us
The levied succours that should land
While he, renowned noble gentleman, Yields up his life unto a world of Orleans the bastard, Charles, and Alençon, Reigner, compass him
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on, York sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your claims;

Swearing that you withhold his love
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have the horse.

I owe him little duty, and less love
And take foul scorn to fawn on him.

Lucy. The fraud of England, and
of France,

Hath now entrapp'd the noble Talbot Never to England shall he bear his But dies, betray'd to fortune by your

Som. Come, go; I will despatch men straight:

Within six hours they will be at Lucy. Too late comes rescue; he or slain:

For fly he could not, if he would have
And fly would Talbot never, though

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot adieu!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world in you.

THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI.

English Camp near Bour-neau.

and John his Son.

Talbot! I did send for legions of war, [the might be in thee reviv'd, weak unable limbs,
 to his drooping chair,
 and ill-boding stars!—
 unto a feast of death,
 added danger: [horse;
 I mount on my swiftest
 now thou shalt escape me, daily not, begone.
 Talbot? and am I your

If you love my mother,
Mourable name,
And a slave of me!
Is not Talbot's blood,
A noble Talbot stood.
My death, if I be slain,
I will ne'er return again.
So will we both be sure to die.
Y, we both are sure to die.
Stay; and, father, do

Your regard should be ;
no loss is known in me.
French can little boast ;
if you all hopes are lost.
In honour you have won ;
no exploit have done :
every one will swear ;
say it was for fear.

ever I will stay,
 drink and run away.
 beg mortality,
 serv'd with infamy.

mother's hopes lie in one [womb, an I'll shame my mother's wing, I command thee go,
ill, but not to fly the foe,
ther may be sav'd in thee,
him but will be shame in lose it.

that renown, nor canst not renowned name: shall [that stain.
 charge shall clear thee from witness for me, being slain.
 out, then both fly.

followers here, to fight,
 nited with such shame.
 O youth be guilty of such er'd from your side, yourself in twain divide:

I will, the like do I;
my father die.

Take my leave of thee, fair
for this afternoon. (son,

Come, side by side together live and die;
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarm: Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemmed about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight;

The regent bath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot?—pause, and take thy breath:

I gave thee life, and rescu'd thee from death.
John. O, twice my father! twice am I thy

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done,
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age,
Quick'en'd with youthful spleen and warlike Rage.

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.
The ireful bastard Orleans,—that drew blood
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood

Of thy first fight,—I soon encountered,
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood ; and, in disgrace,
Bespoke him thus — “ Continued here,

Bespoke him thus,—“Contaminated, base,
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine, Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mineThou art!”

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave
Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy, Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's

Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?

Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead:
The help of one stands me in little stead.
O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat!

If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age :
By me they nothing gain, an if I stay,—
'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day :

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame :

All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are sav'd, if thou wilt fly away.
John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart; [heart:

These words of yours draw life-blood from my
On that advantage, bought with such a shame, (To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame,) My Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly.

The coward horse, that bears me, full and die,
And like me to the peasant boys of France;
To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won,
 As if I fly, I am not Talbot's son;
 Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
 If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet: [Crete,
 If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;
 And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another part of the Field.

Alarm: Excursions. Enter Talbot, wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life!—mine own is gone:— [John:—
 O, where's young Talbot! where is valiant Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity, Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at
 thee.—

When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my knee,
 His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,
 And, like a hungry lion, did commence
 Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience;
 But when my angry guardant stood alone,
 Tendering my ruin, and assail'd of none,
 Dizzy-ey'd fury, and great rage of heart,
 Suddenly made him from my side to start
 Into the clust'ring battle of the French;
 And in that sea of blood my boy did trench
 His overmounting spirit; and there died
 My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of John Talbot.

Serv. O, my dear lord, lo, where your son is borne! [here to scorn,

Tal. Thou anticl, death, which laugh'st at us
 anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
 Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
 Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
 In thy despite, shall 'scape mortality.— [death,
 O thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd
 Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath:
 Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no;
 Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe.— Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say, [to-day.—

Had death been French, then death had died
 Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms;
 My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
 Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
 Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. [Dies.

Alarm. Excursions. Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter Charles, Alençon, Burgundy, the Bastard of Orleans, La Pucelle, and forces. [rescue in,

Char. Had York and Somerset brought
 We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wood, [blood!
 Did dash his puny sword in Frenchmen's Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said,

"Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid."

But, with a proud majestic h
 He answer'd thus,—"Poore Talbot
 To be the pillage of a gilot wench,
 So, rushing in the bowels of the
 He left me proudly, as unworthy knight

Bur. Doubtless, he would have made a knight:

See, where he lies inhaled in the arms
 Of the most bloody nurner of his days

Bast. Hew them to pieces, back the asunder,

Whose life was England's glory.
 Char. O, no, forbear! for that which

During the life, let us not wrong it Enter Sir William Lucy, attended by

Herald proceeding.
 Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the place

To know who hath obtain'd the
 day.

Char. On what submissive meane
 Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! the French word;

 We English warriors wot not what it

I come to know what prisoners thou
 And to survey the bodies of the dead

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou
 But tell me whom thou seek'st

Lucy. Where is the great Alençon
 Valiant lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury

Created, for his rare success in arms
 Great earl of Washford, Waterbury

Valence;
 Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchfield

Lord Strange of Blackmere, lord of Alton,

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord of The thrice victorious lord of Paulson

Knight of the noble order of Saint Worthy Saint Michael, and the golden

Great mareschal to Henry the sixth
 Of all his wars within the realm of France

Puc. Here is a silly stately style
 The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms

Writes not so tedious a style as this Him, that thou magnificient with all thy

Stinking, and fly-blown, lies here at Lucy. Is Talbot slain,—the French

only scourge,
 Your kingdom's terror and black shadow

O, were mine eyeballs into lallets
 That I, in rage, might shoot them at you

O, that I could but call these dead
 It were enough to fright the realm of France

Were but his picture left among you
 It would amaze the proudest of you

Give me their bodies, that I may
 hence,

And give them burial as becoms the Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot

He speaks with such a proud spirit.

For God's sake, let him have
 They would but stink, and putrefy

Char. Go, take their bodies hence

I'll bear them hence:
 As, —liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
 Her beauty, and the value of her dower,—
 He doth intend she shall be England's queen.
K. Hen. [To the Amb.] In argument and
 proof of which contract,
 Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.
 And so, my lord protector, see them guarded,
 And safely brought to Dover; where, in shipp'd,
 Commit them to the fortune of the sea.
 [Exeunt King Henry and train: Gloster,
 Exeter, and Ambassadors.]

ACT V.

Sc. I.—London. A Room in the Palace.
Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Exeter.

Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,
 the earl of Armagnac?
Ex. Yes, my lord; and their intent is to have a godly peace concluded of,

 the realms of England and of France.
Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion?

Ex. Well, my good lord; and as the only way of union of our Christian blood, to establish quietness on every side.

Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always have both innocent and unnatural, [thought of such humanity and bloody strife to reign among professors of one faith.

Ex. Beside, my lord, the sooner to affect this knot of amity,
 of Armagnac,—near knit to Charles,
 of great authority in France,—

his only daughter to your grace marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.
Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas, my years are that is my study and my books,

 and the ambassador with a paramour.
 I will have their answers every one:

we are well content with any choice,
 to God's glory, and my country's weal.
Ex. Legate, and two Ambassadors, with Cardinal Beaufort, and appointed accordingly. [Enter install'd, aside.] What, is my lord of Winchester into a cardinal's degree?

the fifth did sometime prophesy,— that he come to be a cardinal, with his cap co-equal with the crown."

Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several opinions consider'd, and debated on, [suits of peace are both good and reasonable;
 therefore are we certainly resolv'd to conditions of a friendly peace;

 and for the lord of Winchester, we mean to transport presently to France.
 And for the proffer of my lord, your grace inform'd his highness so at large,

As,—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
 Her beauty, and the value of her dower,—
 He doth intend she shall be England's queen.

K. Hen. [To the Amb.] In argument and
 proof of which contract,
 Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.

And so, my lord protector, see them guarded,
 And safely brought to Dover; where, in shipp'd,
 Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt King Henry and train: Gloster,
 Exeter, and Ambassadors.]

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first
 The sum of money, which I promised [receive
 Should be deliver'd to his holiness
 For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I
 Or be inferior to this proud peer. [Enter Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
 That, neither in birth, or for authority,
 The bishop will be overborne by thee:
 I'll either make thee stoop, and bend thy knees,
 Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Angjou.
Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, La Pucelle, and forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lord, may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said, the stout Parisians do revolt,
 And turn again unto the warlike French.

Alen. Then, march to Paris, royal Charles
 of France,
 And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn Else, ruin combat with their palaces! [To us:]
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Success unto our valiant general,
 And happiness to his accomplices.

Char. What tidings send our scouts! I prythee, speak.

Mess. The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
 And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warn-
 But we will presently provide for them. [Enter:]

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there:
 Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Puc. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd:

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—France. Before Angiers.
Alarum: Excursions. Enter La Pucelle,

Puc. The regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, ye charming spells and periapts;
 And ye choice spirits that admonish me,
 And give me signs of future accidents.—

[Thunder.]
 You speedy helpers, that are substitutes

Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance, argues
Of your accustomed diligence to me, [poco]
Now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth, Help me this once, that France may get the field. [They walk about, and speak not.

O, hold me not with silence over-long,
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off, and give it you,
In earnest of a further benefit;
So you do condescend to help me now.—

[They hang their heads.

No hope to have redress!—My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart.

See, they forsake me: now the time is come,
That France must veil her lofty-plum'd crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with:
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

[Exit.

Alarum. Enter French and English fighting:
La Pucelle and York fight hand to hand:
La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast:

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty.—
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!
See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
As if, with Circe, she would change my shape.

Puc. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper
man;

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!

[while.

Puc. I prythee, give me leave to curse a York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake.

[Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Suffolk, leading in Lady Margaret.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

[Gazes on her.

O fairest beauty, do not fear, nor fly,
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.
I kiss these fingers [Kissing her hand] for eternal peace:

And lay them gently on thy tender side.

What art thou I say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,

The king of Naples; whose'er thou art,

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk;

Be not offended, nature's miracle,

Thou art allotted to be taken by me.

So doth the swan her downy cygnets rear,

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wing.

Yet if this servile usage once offend,

Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's wife.

[She turns away.

O stay!—I have no power to let her go.

My hand would free her, but my heart forbids.

As plays the sun upon the glassy stream,

Twinkling another counterfeited beam.

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eye.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not.

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my love.

Fig, De-la-Poole! disable not thyself.

Hast not a tongue? is she not human?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's look?

Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such.

Confounds the tongue, and makes a fool of wit.

Mar. Say, earl of Suffolk,—if thy love

What ransom must I pay before I go?

For, I perceive, I am thy prisoner.

Suf. [Aside.] How canst thou doubt to deny thy suit,

Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what dost thou must I pay?

Suf. [Aside.] She's beautiful, and

She is a woman, therefore to be wooed.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom?

Suf. [Aside.] Fond man! ransom

thou hast a wife;

Then, how can Margaret be thy prisoner?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he not hear.

Suf. [Aside.] There all is made lies a cooling earl.

Mar. He talks at random: smother

Suf. [Aside.] And yet a dissembler be had.

Mar. And yet I would that I

Suf. [Aside.] I'll win this Lady

For whom?

Why, for my king: tush, that's

Mar. [Overhearing him.] He talks

it is some carpenter.

Suf. [Aside.] Yet so my father

And peace established between them.

But there remains a scruple in my mind.

For though her father be the Duke of

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he

And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain,—are ye leisure?

Suf. [Aside.] It shall be so, if

Henry is youthful, and will quickly

Madam, I have a secret to reveal.

Mar. [Aside.] What though I be

he seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me.

Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.
[Aside.] Perhaps I shall be rescu'd
 by the French;
 then I need not crave his courtesy.

Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

[Aside.] Tush, women have been captivates ere now.

Lady, wherefore talk you so?

I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid pro quo.

Say, gentle princess, would you not exchange larry, to be made a queen?

To be a queen in bondage is more a slave in base servility; [vile should be free.

And so shall you,
 England's royal king be free. [me]

Why, what concerns his freedom unto

I'll undertake to make thee Henry's golden sceptre in thy hand, [queen;

precious crown upon thy head,

and condescend to be my—

What?
 His love.

I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

No, gentle madam; I unworthy am to be a dame to be his wife,

no portion in the choice myself.

ay you, madam,—are you so content?

As if my father please, I am content.

Then call our captains and our colours

—[Troops come forward.]

at your father's castle walls to give a hurley, to confer with him.

Enter Reigner, on the walls.

See, Reigner, see thy daughter price. To whom?

To me.

Suffolk, what remedy?

Soldier, and unapt to weep,

rejoice on fortune's tickleness.

Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:

for thy honour, give consent)

father shall be wedded to my king;

with pain have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

may have woo'd and won there—

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord,

Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the county Maine, and Anjou,

Free from oppression or the stroke of war,

My daughter shall be Henry's if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom,—I deliver her;

And those two counties, I will undertake,

Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,

As deputy unto that gracious king,

Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reigner of France, I give thee kingly

Because this is in traffic of a king:— [thanks,

[Aside.] And yet, methinks, I could be well

content

To be mine own attorney in this case.—

[To Reig.] I'll over, then, to England with this news,

And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.

So, farewell, Reigner: set this diamond safe

In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace

The Christian prince, King Henry, were he hers.

Mar. Farewell, my lord: good wishes,

praise, and prayers,

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.]

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam: but hark you,

Margaret,—

No princely commendations to my king!

Mar. Such commendations as become a

A virgin, and his servant, say to him. [mild,

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed.

But, madam, I must trouble you again,—

No loving token to his majesty? [heart,

Mar. Yes, my good lord, a pure unspotted

Never yet taint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.]

Mar. That for thyself: I will not so presume,

To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reigner and Margaret.]

Suf. O, wert thou for myself!—But, Suffolk,

stay;

Thou mayest not wander in that labyrinth;

There Minotaurs, and deadly treasons, lurk.

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount

Mad natural graces that extinguish art;

Repeat their semblance often on the seas,

That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,

Thou mayest bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Camp of the Duke of York, in Anjou. Enter York, Warwick, and others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter La Pucelle, guarded; and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright!

Have I sought every country far and near,

And, now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death! [thrice]
Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am descended of a gentler blood:
Thou art no father, nor no friend, of mine.

Shep. Out, out!—My lords, an please you,
'tis not so;
I did beget her, all the parish knows;
Her mother liveth yet, can testify
She was the first-fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage? [beon]

York. This argues what her kind of life hath Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be no obstacle!

God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh;
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I pray thee, gentle Joan.

Puc. Peasant, avaunt!—You have suborn'd
this man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her mother, Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl. [time]

Wilt thou not stoop? Now curs'd be the
Of thy nativity! I would the milk [breast]
Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her
Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake;
Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
Dost thou deny thy father, curs'd drab!
O, burn her, burn her! hanging is too good.

[Exit.
York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too
To fill the world with vicious qualities. [long]

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd;

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings;
Virtuous, and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits;
But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders, but by help of devils.
No; misconceived Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay;—away with her to execution!
War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a Spare for no fagots, let there be enow: [maid,
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting
Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity, [hearts!]

That warranteth by law to be thy
I am with child, ye bloody homicide!
Murder not, then, the fruit within me!
Although ye hale me to a violent death, York. Now, heaven forbid! the with child!

War. The greatest miracle that Is all your strict preciseness come to York. She and the Dauphin juggling:

I did imagine what would be her War. Well, go to; we will have Especially since Charles must follow.

Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child
It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon! that notorious
It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.

Puc. O, give me leave, I have done
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet

nam'd,
But Reiguler, king of Naples, that!

War. A married man! that's impossible.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think
There were so many, whom she made

War. It's sign she hath been lying York. And yet, forsooth, she is a

Strumpet, thy words condemn thy Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.

Puc. Then lead me hence;—
leave my curse,

May never glorious sun redden his face
Upon the country where you make

But darkness and the gloomy shades
Environ you, till mischief and despair

Drive you to break your necks, or selves!

York. Break thou in pieces, and Thou foul accus'd minister of hell!

Enter Cardinal Beaufort, Alençon.
Car. Lord regent, I do greet you

With letters of commission from
For know, my lords, the states of France

Mov'd with remembrance of these outrageous
Have earnestly implor'd a general

Between our nation and the Dauphin,
And here at hand the Dauphin, and Approacheth to confer about some York. Is all our travail turn'd to

After the slaughter of so many peers
So many captains, gentlemen, and

That in this quarrel have been over-
And sold their bodies for their benefit,

Shall we at last conclude offensive

Have we not lost most part of all
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery

Our great progenitors had conquer'd
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee

The utter loss of all the realm of France War. Be patient, York: if we

peace,
It shall be with such strict and

As little shall the Frenchmen gain

Charles, attended: Alençon, the Bastard of Orleans, Burgundy, and others.
Char. Hence, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
And peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in

France,
And none to be inform'd by yourselves
Of the conditions of that league must be.
John. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler

Shakes
The hollow passage of my prison'd voice,
Of these our baleful enemies. [Thus:

In regard king Henry gives consent,
And your compassion, and of lenity,
And your country of distressful war,

Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

John. Must he be, then, as shadow of him—Al yet, in substance and authority. [self:]
But privilege of a private man?
Charles. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd

Of more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverence'd for their lawful king:
Will I for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Be so much from that prerogative,

As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
John. I have, than, coveting for more,
And from possibility of all.
Charles. Assaulting Charles! hast thou by secret

Intervention to obtain a league, [means]
Now the matter grows to compromise,
And thou aloof upon comparison?
John. Proceeding from our king,

And out of any challenge of desert,
Will plague thee with incessant wars.
Charles. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To be in the course of this contract:

John. It be neglected, ten to one,
Will not find like opportunity.
Charles. [Aside to Charles:] To say the truth, it is your policy

To have your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen Proceeding in hostility;
And therefore take this compact of a truce,

Which you break it when your pleasure
Condition stand?
John. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our Country be still; only reserv'd, you claim no

Interest
Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
And art knight, never to disobey
Rebellious to the crown of England,—

John. nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.
[Charles, &c., give tokens of fealty.

So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.
Enter King Henry, in conference with Suffolk;
Gloster and Exeter following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, grac'd with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart;
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush, my good lord,—this superficial
 Is but a preface of her worthy praise; [tale
 The chief perfections of that lovely dame (Had I sufficient skill to utter them)

Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit:
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,

But, with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command,—
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.

Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd

Unto another lady of esteem;
How shall we, then, dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths:
 Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
 To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
 By reason of his adversary's odds:

A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?

Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
 The king of Naples and Jerusalem;
 And of such great authority in France,
 As his alliance will confirm our peace,
 And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the earl of Armagnac may do,
 Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower;

Where Reigimer sooner will receive, than give.
Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so
 your king,

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love,
Henry is able to enrich his queen,

And not to seek a queen to make him rich :
 So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
 As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
 Marriage is a matter of more worth,
 Than to be dealt in by attorneyship ;
 Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
 Must be companion of his nuptial bed :
 And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
 It most of all these reasons bindeth us,
 In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
 For what is wedlock forc'd, but a hell,
 An age of discord and continual strife ?
 Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
 And is a pattern of celestial peace.
 Whom should we match with Henry, being a
 king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king ?
 Her peerless feature, join'd with her birth,
 Approves her fit for none but for a king :
 Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit
 (More than in women commonly is seen)
 Will answer our hope in issue of a king,
 For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
 Is likely to beget more conquerors,
 If with a lady of so high resolve,
 As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.
 Then yield, my lords ; and here conclude with
 me

That Margaret shall be queen, and none but
 she,

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble lord of Suffolk, or for that

My tender youth was never yet attain'd
 With any passion of inflaming love,
 I cannot tell ; but this I am assur'd,
 I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
 Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
 As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
 Take, therefore, shipping ; post, my lord,
 France ;

Agree to any covenants, and procure
 That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
 To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd
 King Henry's faithful and anointed queen.
 For your expenses and sufficient charge,
 Among the people gather up a tenth.
 Be gone, I say ; for, till you do return,
 I rest perplex'd with a thousand cares.
 And you, good uncle, banish all offence,
 If you do censure me by what you were Not what you are, I know it will exceed
 This sudden execution of my will.
 And so, conduct me where, from hence
 I may revolve and ruminate my grief.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at this last. [Exeunt Gloster and Suffolk.]

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd ; and he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
 With hope to find the like event in love.
 But prosper better than the Trojan did,
 Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the land.
 But I will rule both her, the king, and me.

THE SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Henry the Sixth.
 Duke of Gloster, his Uncle.
 Beaufort, Bishop of Winchester,
 Great Uncle to the King.
 Plantagenet, Duke of York.
 and Richard, his Sons.
 Somerset,
 of Suffolk,
 of Buckingham,
 of Clifford, his Son,
 of Salisbury, of Warwick, } of the King's } Party.
 Sales, Governor of the Tower. Lord
 Sir Humphrey Stafford, and William Stafford, his Brother. Sir John Blount, Master, and Master's Mate.
 Captain, Master, and Master's Mate.

Two Gentlemen, prisoners with Suffolk. Vaux.
 Herald.
 Hume and Southwell, Priests. [him.
 Bolingbroke, a Conjurer. A Spirit raised by Thomas Horner, an Armourer. Peter, his
 Man.
 Clerk of Chatham. Mayor of St. Albans.
 Simpcox, an Impostor. Two Murderers.
 Jack Cade, a Rebel.
 George, John, Dick, Smith, the Weaver,
 Michael, &c., Cade's Followers.
 Alexander Iden, a Kentish Gentleman.
 Margaret, Queen to King Henry.
 Eleanor, Duchess of Gloster.
 Margery Jourdain, a Witch. Wife to Simpcox.
 Lords, Ladies, and Attendants; Herald, Petitioners, Aldermen, a Beadle, Sheriff, and Officers; Citizens, Prentices, Falconers, Guards, Soldiers, Messengers, &c.

SCENE.—In various parts of England.

ACT I.

London. A Room of State in the Palace.
 Enter King Henry, Duke of Gloster,
 Salisbury, Warwick, and Cardinal
 Beaufort; on the other, Queen Margaret, York, Somerset, Buck-
 ington, and others following.
 As by your high imperial majesty charge at my depart for France,
 I have committed to your excellence,
 my famous Margaret for your grace;
 the famous ancient city, Tours,
 the city of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops, and was espous'd:
 I have now, upon my bended knee,
 of England and her lordly peers,
 my title in the queen [substance most gracious hands, that are the great shadow I did represent;
 that ever marquess gave,
 that queen that ever king receiv'd.
 Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen
 Margaret:
 I have no kinder sign of love,
 this kind kiss.—O Lord, that lends me

Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
 For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
 A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
 If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious lord,
 The mutual conference that my mind hath had,
 By day, by night, waking and in my dreams,
 In courtly company or at my beads,
 With you, mine alder-liest sovereign,
 Makes me the bolder to salute my king
 With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
 And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish; but her grace in speech,
 Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
 Makes me from wondering fall to weeping
 joys;
 Such is the fulness of my heart's content.— Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. [Kneeling.] Long live queen Margaret,
 England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.
 Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,

Here are the articles of contracted peace,
 Between our sovereign, and the French king Charles,

For eighteen months concluded by consent.
 Glo. [Reads.] "Imprimis, It is agreed be-between the French king, Charles, and William de-la-Poole marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry king of England,—that the said Henry shall espouse the lady Margaret, daughter unto Reigner king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. Item, That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father—

K. Hen. Uncle, how now!

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord; Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,

And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. [Reads.] "Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the king of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry."

K. Hen. They please us well.—Lord marquess, kneel down:

We here create thee the first duke of Suffolk, And girt thee with the sword.—Cousin of York, We here discharge your grace from being regent

[months] I' the parts of France, till term of eighteen Be full expir'd.—Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloster, York, Buckingham, Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;

We thank you all for this great favour done, In entertainment to my princely queen. Come, let us in; and with all speed provide To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.]
Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,

To you duke Humphrey must unload his [grief] Your grief, the common grief of all the land. What! did my brother Henry spend his youth, His valour, coin, and people, in the wars? Did he so often lodge in open field, In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat, To conquer France, his true inheritance? And did my brother Bedford toil his wits, To keep by policy what Henry got? Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick, Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy? Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself, With all the learned council of the realm, Studied so long, sat in the council-house

Early and late, debating to and fro How France and Frenchemen might be kept And hath his highness in his infancy [in awe] Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes? And shall these labours, and these honours, die?

Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance, Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die? O peers of England, shameful is this league!

Fatal this marriage! cancelling Blotting your names from books of fame Razing the characters of your virtue Defacing monuments of conquest Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this discourse,

This peroration with such dramatics?

For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it. But now it is impossible we should Suffolk, the new-made duke of Anjou Hath given the duchies of Anjou and

Unto the poor king Reigner, whom Agrees not with the looseness of his

Sal. Now, by the death of Henry for all,

These counties were the keys of France. But wherefore weeps Warwick?

War. For grief that they are lost.

For, were there hope to conquer France, My sword should shed hot blood.

Car. Tis true, but we have no tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win those provinces these arms of France:

And are the cities, that I got with sword, Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

York. For Suffolk's duke, may I say That dims the honour of this war?

France should have torn and rent his heart,

Before I would have yielded to the king I never read but England's king.

Large sums of gold, and dowry of wives;

And our king Henry gives away his crown To match with her that brings him France.

Glo. A proper jest, and never true. That Suffolk should demand a dowry

For costs and charges in transportation? She should have stay'd in France.

Before—

Car. My lord of Gloster, now 'tis It was the pleasure of my lord of York.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I mind;

'Tis not my speeches that you do mind. But 'tis my presence that doth offend.

Rancour will out; proud malice will I see thy fury: if I longer stay,

We shall begin our ancient broils. Loadings, farewell; and say, when I prophesied France will be lost.

Car. So, there goes our prophet. 'Tis known to you he is a false prophet.

Nay, more, an enemy unto you and me. And no great friend, I fear me.

Consider, lords, he is the next of kin. And heir-apparent to the English crown.

Had Henry got an empire by his

of the smiling kingdoms of the west, reason he should be displeas'd at it.
 to the lords; let not his smoothing words pierce your hearts; be wise, and circum-

spect.
 Though the common people favour him,
 Humphrey, the good duke of Gloucester,
 [voice—
 "Maintain your royal excellence!"
 "And preserve the good duke Humphrey,"

 his hands, for all this flattering gloss,
 will be found a dangerous protector.
 Why should he, then, protect our sovereign,
 of age to govern of himself?—
 of Somerset, join you with me,
 together with the duke of Suffolk, quickly hold duke Humphrey from his

eyes.
 This weighty business will not brook delay.
 To the duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.
 Thomas of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride

 of his place be grief to us,
 his haughty cardinal;
 his more intolerable
 all the princes in the land beside:

He must be displac'd, he'll be protector.
 Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protect.

 Duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.
 [Re-enter Buckingham and Somerset.
 Pido went before, ambition follows

him.
 these do labour for their own preferment,
 it us to labour for the realm.
 saw but Humphrey, duke of Gloster,

like a noble gentleman.
 I seen the haughty cardinal,—
 like a soldier, than a man o' the church, proud, as he were lord of all,—

like a ruffian, and demean himself of the ruler of a common-weal.
 my son, the comfort of my age!
 my wife, thy plainness, and thy housekeeping.

 and the greatest favour of the commons,
 the hope but good duke Humphrey:—
 giving them to civil discipline;

like exploits done in the heart of France,
 him wert regent for our sovereign.
 made these fear'd and honour'd of the people:—

 together, for the public good, we can, to bridle and suppress of Suffolk and the cardinal, Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
 as we may, cherish duke Humphrey's

deeds,
 they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he lives
 And common profit of his country. [The land, York. And so says York, for he hath greatest cause. [unto the main.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost; [did win,
 That Maine, which by main force Warwick
 And would have kept, so long as breath did last! [Maine,

Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant
 Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury York. Anjou and Maine are given to the Paris is lost; the state of Normandy [French;
 Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
 Suffolk concluded on the articles; [pleas'd,
 The peers agreed; and Henry was well
 To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

I cannot blame them all: what is't to them!
 'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
 Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,
 And purchase friends, and give to courtesans,
 Still revelling, like lords, till all be gone;
 Whileas the silly owner of the goods [lands,
 Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless
 And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,

While all is shar'd, and all is borne away,
 Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own:
 So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue, While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold. [Ireland

Methinks the realms of England, France, and Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
 As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd,
 Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.
 Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!
 Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
 Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come, when York shall claim his
 own;
 And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,
 And make a show of love to proud duke
 Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
 For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:
 Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
 Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,
 Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
 Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
 Then, York, be still a while, till time do serve:
 Watch thou and wake, when others be asleep,
 To pry into the secrets of the state;
 Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,
 With his new bride and England's dear-bought queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:
 Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
 With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd;
 And in my standard bear the arms of York,

To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Duke of Gloster's House.

Enter Gloster and his Duchess.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like overripen'd corn
Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem, Enchased with all the honours of the world?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold:—

What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine;
And having both together heav'd it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven;
And never more abase our sight so low,
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts!
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world!
My troublous dream this night doth make me
and. [I'll requite it]

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and
With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,

Was broke in twain; by whom, I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund duke of Somerset,

And William De-la-Poole, first duke of Suffolk.
This was my dream; what it doth bode, God knows. [mont]

Duch. Tith! this was nothing but an argu-
That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove,
Shall lose his head for his presumption.

But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
Methought I sat in seat of majesty,
In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are crown'd. [me]

Where Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel'd to
And on my head did set the diadem. [right:]

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide out-Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, belov'd of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?

And wilt thou still be hampering
To tumble down thy husband, and
From top of honour to disgrace's
Away from me, and let me loose!

Duch. What, what, my lord! I am choleric
With Eleanor, for telling but her Next time I'll keep my dreams
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis pleasure

You do prepare to ride unto St. Albans,
Whereas the king and queen do move.

Glo. I go.—Come, Nell; thou
with us!

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll [Exit Gloster and Duchess]

Follow I must; I cannot go before While Gloster bears this base

Were I a man, a duke, and next
I would remove these tedious stum-
And smooth my way upon their

And, being a woman, I will not
To play my part in Fortune's

Where are you there, sir John?
We are alone; here's none but the Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal

Duch. What say'st thou? I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of Hume's advice,

Your grace's title shall be multiplied
Duch. What say'st thou, master?

as yet confer'd
With Margery Jourdain, the countess

With Roger Bolingbroke, the countess
To will they undertake to do me

Hume. This they have promised your highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of under
That shall make answer to such

As by your grace shall be proposed Duch. It is enough; I'll think questions:

When from St. Albans we do ride

We'll see these things effected in Here, Hume, take this reward

man,
With thy confederates in this

Hume. Hume must make duchess' gold;

Marry, and shall. But how Seal up your lips, and give no word

The business asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Eleanor gives gold to bribe

Gold cannot come amiss, were it
Yet have I gold flies from another

I dare not say, from the rich cardinal
And from the great and powerful

Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring ambition, resolved me to undermine the duchess,

 and thus these conjurations in her brain.
 I say—A crafty knave does need no words; Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.
 If you take not heed, you shall go down then both a pair of crafty knaves.
 It stands; and thus, I fear, at last,
 your knavery will be the duchess' wreck,
 for attainment will be Humphrey's fall:
 how it will, I shall have gold for all.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Peter and other Petitioners.

My masters, let's stand close: my protector will come this way by and by,
 and then we may deliver our supplications in his ear.

Marry, the lord protect him, for he's a good man! I pray, God bless him!

Enter Suffolk and Queen Margaret.
 Here 'a comes, methinks, and the duke with him. I'll be the first, sure.

Come back, fool! this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

How now, fellow! wouldst anything

I pray, my lord, pardon me; I took my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Glancing at the superscriptions.]
 In my lord protector's name are your supplications to his lordship! Let me see them: what the duke's name is, can't please your grace, but I'll keep my house, and lands, my lordship, and all, from me.

—What's yours?—What's here! [Reads.] Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.—How now, sir

Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of this township.

Presenting his petition.] Against my lord Thomas Horner, for saying that the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke say he was rightful heir to the crown?

That my master was? No, forsooth:
 he said that he was; and that the king

was his master.

Who is there! [Enter Servants.]—
 Tell the fellow in, and send for his master to be present presently:—we'll hear more of this matter before the king.

Exit Servants with Peter.
 Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected

Under the wings of our protector's grace,
 Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the petitions.]

Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone.

[Recount Petitioners.]

Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this this guise,

Is this the fashion of the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What, shall king Henry be a pupil still,

Under the surly Gloster's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours

Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,

I thought king Henry had resembled thee

In courage, courtship, and proportion:

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads:

His champions are the prophets and apostles;

His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.

I would the college of the cardinals [Rome,

Would choose him pope, and carry him to

And set the triple crown upon his head:

That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was caused

Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort, [ingham,

The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buck-

And grumbling York: and not the least of these,

But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all,

Cannot do more in England than the Nevills:

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half

so much,

As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.

She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies, [wife:

More like an empress than duke Humphrey's

Strangers in court do take her for the queen

She bears a duke's reverends on her back,

And in her heart she scorns our poverty:

Shall I not live to be avenged on her?

Contempts base-born callet as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions 'other day

The very train of her worst wearing gown

Was better worth than all my father's lands,

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,

That she will light to listen to the lays,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me;

For I am bold to counsel you in this.

Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the duke of York, this late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit.

So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King Henry, York, and Somerset;
Duke and Duchess of Gloster, Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick. [not which;

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care
Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deeny'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent; I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yet
Dispute not that; York is the worthier. [or no,

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak. [field.

War. The cardinal's not my better in the Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Suf. Peace, son! and show some reason,
Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure: these are no women's matters.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs
To be protector of his excellences? [your grace

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm;
And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it, then, and leave thine insolence.

Since thou wert king, (as who is king but thou?)
The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck;
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas;
And all the peers and nobles of the realm
Have been as bondmen to thy sov'reignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire,

Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution

Upon offenders, hath exceeded law,

And left thee to the merrcy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices and towns in
France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great,
Would make thee quickly hop without thy
head.

[Exit Gloster. The Queen drops her fan.
Give me my fan: what, minion! can you not!

[Giving the Duchess a box on the ear.
I cry you mercy, madam, was it you!

Duch. Was't it you, I'll weep for woman!

Could I come near your beauty yet
I'd set my ten commandments to

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet, her will.

Duch. Against her will! Good
She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee
Though in this place most wretched breeches,

She shall not strike dame Eleanor

Buck. Lord cardinal, I will follow
And listen after Humphrey, how he She's tickled now; her fume can She'll gallop far enough to her death.

[Exit Duke.
Re-enter Gloster.

Glo. Now, lords, my choleric being
With walking once about the quarter

I come to talk of commonwealth's
As for your spiteful false objections,

Prove them, and I lie open to the law;
But God in mercy so deal with my

As I in duty love my king and country
But, to the matter that we have in hand

I say, my sov'reign, York is unworthy
To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, pray
To show some reason, of no little moment

That York is most unworthy of any York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, what unmeet:

First, for I cannot flatter thee in private Next, if I be appointed for the place

My lord of Somerset will keep me
Without discharge, money, or reward

Till France be won into the Dauphin's
Last time I gave attendance on him

Till Paris was besieged, famish'd, and War. That can I witness; and Did never traitor in the land commit Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why shouldst thou my peace?

Enter Servants of Suffolk, bringing in and Peter.

Suf. Because here is a man worthy Pray God the duke of York excuse me

York. Doth any one accuse traitor!

K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk?

Suf. Please it your majesty, there is That doth accuse his master of high treason

His words were these,—that Richard
York,

Was rightful heir unto the English crown
And that your majesty was a usurper

K. Hen. Say, man, ward those words
Hor. An't shall please your majesty said nor thought any such matter witness, I am falsely accused by the Per. [Holding up his hands.] By my bouch, my lords, he did speak these words

one night, as we were scouring my York's armour.

York. Base duncill villain and mechanical,
I have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.—
I have all the rigour of the law.

Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spake
My accuser is my prentice; and I did correct him for his fault the other day; I have good witness of this;
I have all the rigour of the law.
Uncle, what shall we say to this in

This doom, my lord, if I may judge.
Somerset he regent o'er the French,
And let these have a day appointed them
To dole combat in convenient place,
To dole witness of his servant's malice:
To dole law, and this duke Humphrey's

Then be it so. My lord of Somerset, make your grace lord regent o'er the French.
I humbly thank your royal majesty.

Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, my grace! the spite of man prevaileth
I never be able to fight a blow; O Lord, [hang'd.]
Away with them to prison; and we shall be the last of the next month.—

[Exit.]
Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

IV.—London. The Duke of Gloster's
Garden.
Margery Jourdain, Hume, Southwell,
and Bolingbroke.

Come, my masters, the duchess, I expect performance of your promises.
Master Hume, we are therefore witnesses will her ladyship behold and hear [courage.]
Ay, what else I fear you not her

I have heard her reported to be a woman of invincible spirit; but it shall be seen whether we be busy below; and so, I pray
Mother Jourdain, and leave us.—[Exit Mother Jourdain, and let us to our work, and presently Hume.

Well said, my masters; and welcome to the ear: the sooner the better.
[All.]
Patience, good lady; wizards know their times.

One night, dark night, the silent of the night,

The time of night when Troy was set on fire:
The time when screech-owls cry, and bandogs howl, [graves,—
And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their
That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise,
We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they perform the ceremonies
appertaining, and make the Circle; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads, Con-juro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.]

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath,

By the eternal God, whose name and power
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence. [and done!]

Spir. Ask what thou wilt:—that I had said Boling. [Reads from a paper.] "First, of the king: what shall of him become?"

Spir. The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes
the answers.]

Boling. [Reads.] "What fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?"

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. [Reads.] "What shall befall the duke of Somerset?"

Spir. Let him shun castles;
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,
Than where castles mounted stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness, and the burn-
False fiend, avoid! [Ing lake!]

Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.

Enter York and Buckingham, hastily, with their Guards, and others.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash.

Beldame, I think we watch'd you at an inch.— What, madam, are you there! the king and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:
My lord protector will, I doubt it not,

See you well guardon'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's
king.

Injurious duke, that threat'st where is no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all: what call you this? [Showing her the papers.]

Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close,
And kept asunder.—You, madam, shall with Stafford, take her to thee.— [us.—

[Exit Duchess, above,
We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming,—
All, away!]

[Exit Southwell, Bolingbroke, &c., guarded.] [watch'd her well:]

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you
A pretty plot well chosen to build upon!

Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.

What have we here?

[Reveals.] "The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death."

Well, this is just,

Aio ie, Aacida, Romanos vincere posse.

Well, to the rest:

"Tell me what fate awaits the duke of Suffolk by water shall he die, and take his end."

"What shall betide the duke of Somerset?"

Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,
Than where castles mounted stand."

Come, come, my lords;

These oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly understood.

The king is now in progress towards St. Albans;
With him, the husband of this lovely lady:

Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them;

A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.

Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my lord of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good lord.—
Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servant.

Invite my lords of Salisbury, and Warwick,
To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—St. Albans.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloster, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers, hollaring.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day:
Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made,

And what a pitch she flew above the rest!—
To see how God in all his creatures works!

Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty,
My lord protector's hawks do tower so well;

They know their master loves to be aloft,
And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind,
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much: he'd be above the clouds.

Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal, how think you by that?

Were it not good your grace could fly to heaven?

K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!

Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart;

Pernicious protector, dangerous!

That smooth'st it so with king and

Glo. What, cardinal, is your grown peremptory!

Tantene animis celestibus ira!

Churchmen so hot! good uncle,

With such holiness can you do it?

Suf. No malice, sir; no more than

So good a quarrel, and so bad a

Glo. As who, my lord?

Suf. Why, as you

An't like your lordly lord-protector

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England know

Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloucester

K. Hen.

Good queen, and whet not on the pears;

For blessed are the peacemakers on

Car. Let me be blessed for the make,

Against this proud protector with

Glo. [Aside to Car.] Faith, lord

would 'twere come to that!

Car. [Aside to Glo.] Marry, where

Glo. [Aside to Car.] Make up

numbers for the matter;

In thine own person answer thy

Car. [Aside to Glo.] Ay, where not peep: an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the K. Hen. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, come

Had not your man put up the

denly,

We had had more sport.—[Aside]

Come with thy two-hand sword

Glo. True, uncle. [Least side of]

Car. Are you advis'd?—[Aside to]

Glo. [Aside to Car.] Cardinal,

you,

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle

Glo. Talking of hawking; no

lord.—[I'll shew you]

[Aside to Car.] Now, by God's

For this, or all my fence shall

Car. [Aside to Glo.] Notice

Protector, see to't well, protect

K. Hen. The winds grow high;

stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my

When such strings jar, what hope

I pray, my lords, let me compound

Enter One, crying, "A miracle!"

Glo. What means this noise!

Fellow, what miracle dost thou

One. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the king, and tell

One. Forsooth, a blind man at shrine,

Within this half-hour, hath receiv'd

A man that us'er saw in his life

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd, living souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort to Enter Buckingham.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

A sort of naughty persons, lowly bent,—
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ringleader and head of all this rout,—
Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches, and with conjurers;
Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
Raising up wicked spirits from under-ground,
Demanding of king Henry's life and death,
And other of your highness' privy council,
As more at large your grace shall understand.

Car. [Aside to Glo.] And so, my lord protector, by this means,

Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. [Edge:]
This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's
'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart:

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest groom.

K. Hen. O God, what mischiefs work the Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby!

Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy nest;

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,

How I have lov'd my king, and commonweal;

And, for my wife, I know not how it stands;

Sorry I am to hear what I have heard:

Noble she is; but if she have forgot Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such
As, like to pitch, defile nobility,
I banish her my bed and company,
And give her, as a prey, to law and shame,
That hath dishonour'd Gloster's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us here:

To-morrow toward London back again,
To look into this business thoroughly,

And call these foul offenders to their answers;
And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,
Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
In this close walk, to satisfy myself,

In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

York. Then thus:—
Edward the third, my lord, had seven sons;

The first, Edward the black prince, who was Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield, who was Lionel, duke of Clarence; next to him

Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster;

The fifth was Edmund Langley, who was
The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock;

Gloster;

William of Windsor was the seventh son, Edward, the black prince, that was

father;

And left behind him Richard, his only son,
Who, after Edward the third's death, was

as king;

Till Henry Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the name of Henry the fourth;
Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the king,

Seiz'd his poor queen to France, from whence she came,

And him to Pomfret,—where, as all men say,
Harmless Richard was murder'd.

War. Father, the duke has told me
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown;

York. Which now they hold by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, had
The issue of the next son's heir;

Sal. But William of Hatfield, who was an heir.

York. The third son, duke of Clarence,
(from whose line

I claim the crown,) had issue—
Who married Edmund Mortimer's

March;

Edmund had issue—Roger, earl of March;
Roger had issue—Edmund, duke of York;

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of broke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;
And but for Owen Glendower, who was

Who kept him in captivity till his death,
But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, who was
My mother, being heir unto the crown,

Married Richard, earl of Cambridge,
who was son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the first's
By her I claim the kingdom; she was

To Roger, earl of March; who married
Of Edmund Mortimer; who married

Sole daughter unto Lionel, duke of Clarence;
So, if the issue of the elder son

Succeed before the younger, I am
War. What plain proceeding is this?

Henry doth claim the crown for The fourth son; York claims it for Till Lionel's issue fails, his should

It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee;

And in thy sons, fair slips of such a Then, father Salisbury, kneel we to in the private plot, he was the first,

And sought to take our rightful sovereign

from us, to give him the crown.

Long live our sovereign Richard,
England's king!

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not of the crown; and that my sword be stain'd

With the blood of the house of Lancaster;
I will not suddenly be perform'd,

As I do, in these dangerous days,
At the duke of Suffolk's insolence,

At the duke of Gloucester's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of Lancaster's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At the duke of York's pride, at Somerset's ambition,

Protector be; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet;

And go in peace, Humphrey; no less belov'd,
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.

God and king Henry govern England's helm!
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff!—here, noble Henry, is my
As willingly do I the same resign, [staff:]

As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,

As others would ambitiously receive it. [Gave,
Farewell, good king; when I am dead and

May honourable peace attend thy throne. [Exit.

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen; [self]

And Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, scarce him-That bears so shrewd a man; two pulls at once,—

His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;

This staff of honour raught, there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Sig. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.
York. Lords, let him go. Please it your

majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;

And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,

So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O God's name, see the lists and all things fit:

Here let them end it; and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,

The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, Horner, and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters hearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum

before him; on the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneo.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your
man.

Hor. Let it come, I' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

1 Prent. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2 Prent. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me, I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.—Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow.

York. Despatch:—this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants.

[Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes down his Master.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right! [our sight;]

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from For, by his death, we do perceive his guilt: And God in justice hath reveal'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.—

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter Gloster and Servants, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;

And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.—
Sir, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
Uneath may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people, gazing on thy face,
With envious looks still laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot-wheels,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her move.
Enter the Duchess of Gloster, in a sheet, with papers pinned upon her feet bare, and a taper her hand; Sir John Stanley, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, well from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives Duch. Come you, my lord, to see
shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look
See how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their
And, in thy closet pent up, rue my
And ban thine enemies, both mine and Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell!

grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloster, teach me
For, whilst I think I am thy married And thou a prince, protector of the Methinks I should not thus be led Maid'd up in shame, with papers on
And follow'd with a rabble, that
To see my tears, and hear my tears
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender
And when I start, the envious people
And bid me be advised how I tread Ah, Humphrey! can I bear this yoke?

Trow'st thou, that e'er I'll look
Or count them happy that enjoy
No; dark shall be my light, and
To think upon my pomp, shall be Sometime I'll say, I am duke
wife;

And he a prince, and ruler of the
Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince
As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn
Was made a wonder and a punishment
To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush
Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly
For Suffolk,—he that can do all
With her that hateth thee, and
And York, and impious Beaufort, priest,

Have all lim'd bushes to betray
And, fly thou how thou canst, leave
these:

But fear not thou, until thy foot
Nor never seek prevention of thy

Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear! thou
I must offend before I be attain'd
And had I twenty times so many
And each of them had twenty
All these could not procure me
So long as I am loyal, true, and Wouldst have me rescue thee from proach?

Why, yet thy scandal were not

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury.

Sennet. Enter to the Parliament, King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, and others.

K. Hen. I muse my lord of Gloster is not come:

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will you not observe

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance? With what a majesty he bears himself; How insolent of late he is become, [self] How proud, how peremptory, and unlike him— We know the time since he was mild and affable;

And, if we did but glance a far-off look, Immediately he was upon his knee, That all the court admir'd him for submission; But meet him now, and, be it in the morn, When every one will give the time of day, He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye, And passes by with stiff unbowed knee, Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded when they grin; But great men tremble when the lion roars: And Humphrey is no little man in England. First, note, that he is near you in descent, And, should you fall, he is the next will mount. Me seemeth, then, it is no policy,—

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears, And his advantage following your decease,— That he should come about your royal person, Or be admitted to your highness' council.

By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts; And when he please to make commotion, 'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted; [garden]

Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.

The reverent care I bear unto my lord Made me collect these dangers in the duke. If it be found, call it a woman's fear:

Which fear if better reasons can supplant, I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the duke.

My lord of Suffolk,—Buckingham,—and Reprove my allegation, if you can, [York,—

Or else conclude my words effectual. [duke;]

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this And had I first been put to speak my mind,

I think I should have told your grace's tale. The duchess, by his subornation,

Upon my life, began her devilish practices; Or if he were not privy to those faults,

Yet, by reputing of his high descent,— As, next the king, he was successive heir,

And such high vaunts of his nobility,— Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,

By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall,

It is danger for the breach of law.
My greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell;
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
A few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.
I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this month.

Q. Mar. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein [before!]

My Nell, I take my leave:—and, mastersheriff, [Exit Herald.]

Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Q. Mar. Art please your grace, here my commission stays;

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now to take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Q. Mar. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?

Q. Mar. So am I given in charge, may't please you.

Q. Mar. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray you use her well; the world may laugh again, And I may live to do you kindness, if you do it her.

Q. Mar. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!

Q. Mar. With mine my tears, I cannot stay to speak. [Exit Gloster and Servants.]

Q. Mar. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee!

Q. Mar. I am alone with me: my joy is—death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,

Which I wished this world's eternity. I pray thee, go, and take me hence;

And convey me where thou art commanded. Madam, that is to the Isle of

Man:—

Q. Mar. To be us'd according to your state.

Q. Mar. That's bad enough, for I am but a reproach,

And shall I, then, be us'd reproachfully!

Q. Mar. Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's lady;

According to that state you shall be us'd.

Q. Mar. Though thou hast been conduct of my [shame!]

conduct, it is my office; and, madam, pardon me.

Q. Mar. Ay, farewell; thy office is discharged.

Q. Mar. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,

And we will attire you for our journey. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet;

And I will hang upon my richest robes, And show myself, attire me how I can.

Q. Mar. I long to see my prison. [Exit.]

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.

No, no, my sovereign; Gloster is a man
Uncounted yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth duke
Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once:—the care you have of us, [foot,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our la worthy praise; but shall I speak my con-
Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent [science?
From meaning treason to our royal person,
As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond alliance!

Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven:
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclined as is the rav'nous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those terri-les utterly bereft you; all is lost. [tories

K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset; but God's will be done!

York. [Aside.] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,

As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
But I will remedy this gear ere long,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!
Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloster, know, that thou art come too soon,

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,

Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you bribes of France,
And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers
By means whereof his highness
France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? Will that think it!

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch'd the Ay, night by night,—in studying England!

That doth that e'er I wrested from the king
Or any grant I boarded to my army
Be brought against me at my trial?
No; many a pound of mine own pocket
Because I would not tax the needy commons
Have I disbursed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord,
Glo. I say no more than truth,
God!

York. In your protectorship you did Strange tortures for offenders, never
That England was defaul'd by treason.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that was protector,

Pity was all the fault that was in me!
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for the felon.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that steal'd from me,
I never gave them condign punishment.
Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I thought
Above the felon, or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are deep,
answer'd:

But mightier crimes are laid unto you
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name,
And here commit you to my lord's custody
To keep until your farther time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster,
hope,

That you will clear yourself from all
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days
Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancorous hate.
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil'd your highness' court.
I know their complot is to have my life;
And, if my death might make this tyrant
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willing heart.
But mine is made the prologue to their
For thousands more, that yet are plotting,
Will not conclude their plotted treason
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes flash forth malice,

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy Sharp Buckingham unburdens with
The envious load that lies upon his back,
And dogged York, that reaches at the crown,

overcoming arm I have pluck'd back,
 My sense doth level at my life:
 O you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
 Have laid disgraces on my head,
 And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
 My heart to be mine enemy:
 All of you have laid your heads together,
 And all to notice of your conventicles;
 And all to make away my guiltless life.
 I will not want false witness to condemn me,
 Nor need of treasons to augment my guilt;
 And ancient proverb will be well effected,—
 For, my liege, his railing is intolerable:
 (I hope that care to keep your royal person
 From treason's secret knife, and traitor's rage,
 And the offender granted scope of speech,
 Will make them cool in zeal unto your grace.)
 But he not twit our sov'reign lady
 With base, [conch'd,
 With unbecoming words, though clerdy
 In his bad suborn'd some to swear Oaths, But I can give the loser leave to Chide. [indeed;—
 For truer spoke, than meant: I lose,
 And all such losers may have leave to speak.
 He'll wrest the sense, and hold us
 Here all day:—
 Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.
 Sir, take away the duke, and guard
 His sure. [scruteli, Ah, thus king Henry throws away his
 And his legs be firm to bear his body!
 Now is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
 And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee
 Next.
 Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
 O good king Henry, thy decay I fear.
 [Essent Attendants with Gloster.
 My lords, what to your wisdoms
 Becometh best,
 I'll undo, as if myself were here.
 Mar. What, will your highness leave the Parliament? [with grief,
 Mar. As, Margaret, my heart is drown'd
 In round begin to flow within mine eyes;
 What's more engirt with misery;
 What's more miserable than discontent?
 Humphrey, in thy face I see Honour, truth, and loyalty!
 O good Humphrey, is the hour to come,
 When I shall find thee false, or fear'd thy faith.
 O, how I long to see thee now, to see thy estate,
 And these great lords, and Margaret our
 Queen,
 And that subversion of thy harmless life!
 O, how I long to see thee now, to see thy estate,
 And these great lords, and Margaret our
 Queen,
 And that subversion of thy harmless life!
 O, how I long to see thee now, to see thy estate,
 And these great lords, and Margaret our
 Queen,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house;
 Even so, remorseless, have they borne him
 Hence:

And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
 Looking the way her harmless young one went,
 And can do nought but wail her darling's loss;
 Even so myself bewails good Gloster's case,
 With sad unhelpful tears; and with dimm'd eyes
 Look after him, and cannot do him good,—
 So mighty are his vowed enemies.
 His fortunes I will weep; and, 'twixt each groan,
 Say—"Who's a traitor, Gloster he is none."
 [Exit.

Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams:

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
 Too full of foolish pity: and Gloster's show
 Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
 With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
 Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowing bank,
 With shining cinquefo'd slough, doth sting a
 That for the beauty thinks it excellent. [child,
 Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,
 (And yet herein I judge mine own wit good,)
 'Tis Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
 To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
 But yet we want a colour for his death:
 'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
 The king will labour still to save his life,
 The commons haply rise to save his life;
 And yet we have but trivial argument,
 More than mistrust, that shows him worthy
 Death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fair as I!

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.— [Suffolk,—

But, my lord cardinal, and you, my lord of Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,—

Were't not all one an empty eagle were set
 To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
 As place duke Humphrey for the king's protector? [of death.

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure

Suf. Madam, 'tis true: and were't not madness, then,

To make the fox surveyor of the fold!
 Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
 His guilt should be but idly posted over,
 Because his purpose is not executed.
 No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
 By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
 Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson
 blood,—

As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege.
 And do not stand on quilllets how to slay him:
 Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
 Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
 So he be dead; for that is good deceit
 Which mates him first, that first intends deceit.

Q. Mar. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke, [done;]

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were
For things are often spoke, and seldom meant:
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my lord
of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,—
I tender so the safety of my legs. [doing.]

Suf. Here is my hand; the deed is worthy
Q. Mar. And so say I. [it.]

York. And I: and now we three have spoke
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come
To signify that rebels there are up, [again,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop:

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent
thither:

"Tis meet, that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,

He never would have stay'd in France so long.
York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast
done:

I rather would have lost my life betimes,
Than bring a burden of dishonour home,

By staying there so long, till all were lost,
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:

Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.
Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with:
No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still: [where]

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than naught? nay then,
a shame take all.

Som. And, in the number, thee, that wishest
shame.

Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kernes of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:

To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choicely, from each county some,

And try your hap against the Irishman?
York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish, he confirms:

Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content; provide me
lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.
Suf. A charge, lord York, hast thou perform'd.

But now return we to the false deceitful phrey.

Car. No more of him: for I will
him.

That henceforth he shall trouble us
And so break off; the day is almost Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of this.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within
At Bristol I expect my soldiers:

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord.

York. Now, York, or never, does
ful thoughts,

And change misdeeds to resolutions:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou
Resign to death,—it is not worth the Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the
And find no harbour in a royal heart:
Faster than spring-time showers come
on thought;

And not a thought but thinks on death:
My brain, more busy than the labours
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine
Well, nobles, well, 'tis policy done,
To send me packing with a host of
I fear me, you but warm the stars
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give
I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd,
You put sharp weapons in a madman's
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty
I will stir up in England some black Shall blow ten thousand souls to
hell;

And this fell tempest shall not cease
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the golden sun's transparent orb,
Do calm the fury of this mad, mad
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentish
John Cade of Ashford.

To make commotion, as full well he
Under the title of John Mortimer,
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn
Oppose himself against a troop of
And fought so long, till that his darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd pen,
And, in the end being reason'd, I have
him caper upright, like a wild Mare,
Shaking the bloody darts, as he did
Full often, like a shag-hair'd enny,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And, undiscover'd, come to me again,
And given me notice of their villanous
This devil here shall be my substitute,
For that John Mortimer, which new

York, in speech, he doth resemble:
He that should precede the commons' mind,
To be taken, rack'd, and tortur'd,
And make him say I mov'd him to those arms,
As that he thrive, (as 'tis great like he will),
From Ireland come I with my
deceit,

And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
The harvest being dead, as he shall be,
The harvest will be a part, the next for me. [Exit.]

York. My lord of Suffolk, within
At Bristol I expect my soldiers:

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord.

York. Now, York, or never, does
ful thoughts,

And change misdeeds to resolutions:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou
Resign to death,—it is not worth the
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the
And find no harbour in a royal heart:
Faster than spring-time showers come
on thought;

And not a thought but thinks on death:
My brain, more busy than the labours
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine
Well, nobles, well, 'tis policy done,
To send me packing with a host of
I fear me, you but warm the stars
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will
hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give
I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd,
You put sharp weapons in a madman's
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty
I will stir up in England some black Shall blow ten thousand souls to
hell;

And this fell tempest shall not cease
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the golden sun's transparent orb,
Do calm the fury of this mad, mad
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentish
John Cade of Ashford.

To make commotion, as full well he
Under the title of John Mortimer,
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn
Oppose himself against a troop of
And fought so long, till that his
darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd pen,
And, in the end being reason'd, I have
him caper upright, like a wild Mare,
Shaking the bloody darts, as he did
Full often, like a shag-hair'd enny,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And, undiscover'd, come to me again,
And given me notice of their villanous
This devil here shall be my substitute,
For that John Mortimer, which new

York, in speech, he doth resemble:
He that should precede the commons' mind,
To be taken, rack'd, and tortur'd,
And make him say I mov'd him to those arms,
As that he thrive, (as 'tis great like he will),
From Ireland come I with my
deceit,

And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
The harvest being dead, as he shall be,
The harvest will be a part, the next for me. [Exit.]

York. My lord of Suffolk, within
At Bristol I expect my soldiers:

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord.

York. Now, York, or never, does
ful thoughts,

And change misdeeds to resolutions:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou
Resign to death,—it is not worth the
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the
And find no harbour in a royal heart:
Faster than spring-time showers come
on thought;

And not a thought but thinks on death:
My brain, more busy than the labours
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine
Well, nobles, well, 'tis policy done,
To send me packing with a host of
I fear me, you but warm the stars
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will
hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give
I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd,
You put sharp weapons in a madman's
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty
I will stir up in England some black Shall blow ten thousand souls to
hell;

And this fell tempest shall not cease
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the golden sun's transparent orb,
Do calm the fury of this mad, mad
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentish
John Cade of Ashford.

To make commotion, as full well he
Under the title of John Mortimer,
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn
Oppose himself against a troop of
And fought so long, till that his
darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd pen,
And, in the end being reason'd, I have
him caper upright, like a wild Mare,
Shaking the bloody darts, as he did
Full often, like a shag-hair'd enny,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And, undiscover'd, come to me again,
And given me notice of their villanous
This devil here shall be my substitute,
For that John Mortimer, which new

York, in speech, he doth resemble:
He that should precede the commons' mind,
To be taken, rack'd, and tortur'd,
And make him say I mov'd him to those arms,
As that he thrive, (as 'tis great like he will),
From Ireland come I with my
deceit,

And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
The harvest being dead, as he shall be,
The harvest will be a part, the next for me. [Exit.]

York. My lord of Suffolk, within
At Bristol I expect my soldiers:

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord.

York. Now, York, or never, does
ful thoughts,

And change misdeeds to resolutions:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou
Resign to death,—it is not worth the
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the
And find no harbour in a royal heart:
Faster than spring-time showers come
on thought;

And not a thought but thinks on death:
My brain, more busy than the labours
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine
Well, nobles, well, 'tis policy done,
To send me packing with a host of
I fear me, you but warm the stars
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will
hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give
I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd,
You put sharp weapons in a madman's
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty
I will stir up in England some black Shall blow ten thousand souls to
hell;

And this fell tempest shall not cease
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the golden sun's transparent orb,
Do calm the fury of this mad, mad
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentish
John Cade of Ashford.

To make commotion, as full well he
Under the title of John Mortimer,
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn
Oppose himself against a troop of
And fought so long, till that his
darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd pen,
And, in the end being reason'd, I have
him caper upright, like a wild Mare,
Shaking the bloody darts, as he did
Full often, like a shag-hair'd enny,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And, undiscover'd, come to me again,
And given me notice of their villanous
This devil here shall be my substitute,
For that John Mortimer, which new

Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help!—O Henry, open thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again:—Madam, be
K. Hen. O heavenly God! [patient.]

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?
Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious
Henry, comfort! [comfort me!]

K. Hen. What! doth my lord of Suffolk
Come he right now to sing a raven's note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;
And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceiv'd sound?

Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words;
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting;
Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!

Upon thy eyeballs murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wound-
Yet do not go away:—come, basileus, [sing:—
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;
For in the shade of death I shall find joy,—
In life, but double death, now Gloucester's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Sul-folk thus?

Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he, most Christian-like, laments his death;
And for myself,—foe as he was to me,—
Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,
Or blood-consuming sighs, recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,

Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking
And all to have the noble duke alive. [sighs,
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow friends:
It may be judg'd I made the duke away;
So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach,
This get I by his death: ah me, unhappy!
To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man! [he is.]

Q. Mar. Be won for me, more wretched than What! dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leper; look on me.

What, art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?
Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn queen.
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?

Why, then, dame Margaret was never thy joy:
Erect his statue then, and worship it,
And make my image but an alchouse sign.

Was I for this high wreck'd upon the sea,
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime?
What boded this, but well-forewarning wind
Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?

What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts,
And he that loos'd them from their brazen caves;

And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock!

Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee:

The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me;

Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd

on shore,

[kindness:]

With tears as salt as sea, through thy un-

The splitting rocks cower'd in the sinking sands,

[sides:]

And would not dash me with their ragged

Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,

Might in thy palace perish Margaret.

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,

When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,

I stood upon the hatches in the storm;

And when the dusky sky began to rob

My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,

I took a costly jewel from my neck,—

A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—

And threw it towards thy land; the sea

receiv'd it:

And so I wish'd thy body might my heart:

And even with this I lost fair England's view,

And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,

And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,

For losing ken of Albion's wish'd coast.

How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue

(The agent of thy foul inconstancy)

To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did,

When he to madding Dido would unfold

His father's acts, commenc'd in burning Troy?

Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?

Ah me, I can no more! Die, Margaret,

For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick and Salisbury.

The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,

That good duke Humphrey trait'rously is murder'd

By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means.

The commons, like an angry hive of bees

That want their leader, scatter up and down,

And care not who they sting in his revenge.

Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,

Until they hear the order of his death.

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick,

'tis too true;

But how he died, God knows, not Henry:

Enter his chamber, view his breathless corse,

And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That shall I do, my liege.—Stay,

Salisbury,

With the rude multitude, till I return.

[Warwick goes into an inner chamber;

Salisbury retires.]

K. Hen. O Thou that judgest all things, stay

my thoughts,—

My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul

Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's

life!

If my suspect be false, forgive me, God;

For judgment only doth belong to

Fain would I go to chafe his pale lips

With twenty thousand kisses, and

Upon his face an ocean of salt tears

To tell my love unto his dead soul

And with my fingers feel his hand

But all in vain are these mean endeavours

And to survey his dead and earthy

What were it but to make my

[The doors of the inner chamber open, and Gloster is discovered bed: Warwick and others enter

War. Come hither, gracious

this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how

For with his soul fled all my world

For seeing him, I see my life in War. As surely as my soul

With that dread King, that took my

Him

To free us from His Father's wrath

I do believe that violent hands were

Upon the life of this thrice-cursed

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with

tongue!

What instance gives lord Warwick

War. See how the blood is

Oft have I seen a timely-parted

Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale,

less,

Being all descended to the labour

Who, in the conflict that it holds

Attracts the same for aidance

enemy;

Which with the heart there

To blush and beautify the cheek

But see, his face is black, and full

His eyeballs farther out than when

Staring full ghastly like a stricken

His hair uprear'd, his nostrils struggling;

His hands abroad display'd,

And tug'd for life, and was by

du'd:

Look on the sheets, his hair, your

His well-proportion'd beard

rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest

It cannot be but he was murder'd

The least of all these signs were

Suf. Why, Warwick, who

duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort find him in

And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers

War. But both of you were

Humphrey's foes;

And you, forsooth, had the good

'Tis like you would not forest him

And 'tis well seen he found an

Q. Mar. Then you, belike,

noblemen

As guilty of duke Humphrey's

War. Who finds the bleeding fresh,

but by a butcher with an axe,
I will suspect 'twas he that made the laughter?

How the partridge in the puttock's nest,
may imagine how the bird was dead,
though the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
How suspicious in this tragedy.

Where's the butcher, Suffolk?
Where's your knife? [talons]
I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping
men;
There's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
that shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart,
that slanders me with murder's crimson
tongue:
If thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwick—
[Re-enter Cardinal, Som., and others.]
What dares not Warwick, if false
Suffolk dares him?
Mat. He dares not calm his contumacious spirit, to be an arrogant controller, [times.]
Suffolk dare him twenty thousand Madam, be still,—with reverence may every word you speak in his behalf [I say;
I say,] blunt-witted lord, ignoble in de-measure!

Every lady wrong'd her lord so much,
that she took into her blameful bed
a stem anterior'd churl, and noble stock to graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit
thou art,
the scum of the Nevilles' noisome race.
But that the guilt of murder bucklers should rob the deathsmen of his fee, that they thereby of ten thousand shames,
that my sovereign's presence makes me
bold,
I should beg pardon for thy passed speech,
that it was thy mother that thou meant'st,
that thou thyself wast born in bastardy;
all this fearful homage done,
to thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell, Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy
blood,
In his presence thou dar'st go with me.
Away even now, or I will drag thee
hence:
though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
to some service to duke Humphrey's ghost. [Re-enter Suffolk and Warwick.]
What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted!
He arm'd that hath his quarrel just;
he is not asked, though lock'd up in steel,
for conscience with injustice is corrupted.
Mat. What noise is this?

[A noise within.]

Re-enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their weapons drawn.K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawnHere in our presence! dare you be so bold?
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here!Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men Set all upon me, mighty sovereign. [of Bury,
Enter Salisbury.]Sal. Sirs, stand
Apart; the king shall know your mind.—[me,
Dread lord, the commons send you word by Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories, [palace,
They will by violence tear him from your
And torture him with grievous lingering death.
They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died; [death;
They say, in him they fear your highness'
And mere instinct of love and loyalty,—
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,—
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person.
That if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge that no man should disturb your rest,In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary you were waked;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm might make the sleep
eternal:And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, wh'er you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenom'd and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my lord of Salisbury! [thinks,
Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd
Could send such message to their sovereign;
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won,
Is, that he was the lord ambassador, Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, or we will all break in!K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means;
And therefore, by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk!

No more, I say: if thou dost plead for him, Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath. Had I but said, I would have kept my word; But when I swear, it is irrevocable.—

[To Suffolk.] If after three days' space thou here be'st found,

On any ground that I am ruler of, The world shall not be ransom for thy life.— Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt K. Henry, Warwick, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you!

Heart's discontent and sour affliction Be playfellows to keep you company! There's two of you; the devil make a third! And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations, And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. He, coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?

Suf. A plague upon them! Wherefore should I curse them? [groan]

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's I would invent as bitter-searching terms, As curst, as harsh, as horrible to hear, Deliver'd strongly through my fix'd teeth, With full as many signs of deadly hate, As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave: My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint; My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract; Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban: And even now my burden'd heart would break, Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

[taste] Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees! Their chiefest prospect, murdering basilisks! Their softest touch, as smart as lizards' stings! Their music, frightful as the serpent's hiss, And hoding screech-owls make the concert All the foul terrors in dark-seated hall— [full]

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses,—like the sun 'gainst Or like an overcharg'd gun,—recoil, [glass] And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from, Well could I curse away a winter's night, Though standing naked on a mountain top, Where biting cold would never let grass grow, And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my morning tears: Nor let the rain of heaven wet this cheek: To wash away my woful memento: O, could this kiss be printed in thy heart!

That thou mightst think upon the seal,

Through whom a thousand sighs are sent: So, get thee gone, that I may leave this seal: 'Tis but surmis'd whilst thou art absent: As one that surfeits, thinking on a feast, I will repeat thee, or, be well assur'd, Adventure to be banish'd myself: And banish'd I am, if but from thee: Go; speak not to me; even now bid me: O, go not yet!—Even thus two hands demand Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand Leath' a hundred times to part thee: Yet now farewell; and farewell to my tears!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk wish'd,—

Once by the king, and three times by me: 'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou dead: A wilderness is populous enough: So Suffolk had thy heavenly company: For where thou art, there is the world: With every several pleasure in the world: And where thou art not, desolation: I can no more:—Live thou to joy thyself: Myself to joy in nought, but that thou liv'st.

[Exit Suf.]

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux, as he looks news, I pry thee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty That cardinal Beaufort is at point of death: For suddenly a grievous sickness took him: That makes him gasp, and stare, and stare at this air, Blaspheming God, and cursing men: Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost

Were by his side; sometime he scolds, And whispers to his pillow, as to himself: The secrets of his overcharg'd soul: And I am sent to tell his majesty That even now he cries aloud for Duke Humphrey.

Q. Mar. Go tell this heavy news to the king.

Ah me! what is this world! when thus these!

But wherefore grieve I at an hour's sorrow? Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's sorrow: Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee? And with the southern clouds tenra,— Theirs for the earth's increase, theirs for the king: Now get thee hence: the king's is coming;

If thou be found by me, thou art not dead: Suf. If I depart from thee, I am not dead: And in thy sight to die, what were I? But like a pleasant slumber in the night: Here could I breathe my soul into mild and gentle as the cradle-babe, lying with mother's dug between its lips :

 away from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
 and cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
 as I have then with thy lips to stop my mouth ;
 I should then either turn my flying soul,
 or I should breathe it so into thy body,
 that then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.
 I die by thee, were but to die in jest ;
 I die by thee, were torture more than
 death :

Q. Now, befall what may befall I
 A. Away I though parting be a fret-and sorrow.

applied to a deathful wound. [thee]
 O France, sweet Suffolk; let me hear from whosoever thou art in this world's globe,
 I have an Iris that shall find thee out.
 I go.
 O dear

And take my heart with thee.
 A jewel, lock'd into the wofull'st cask
 That ever did contain a thing of worth.
 As a splitted bark, so sunder we:
 In every fall I to death.

This way for me.
[Exeunt, severally.]
Cardinal Beaufort's Redchamber.

How fares my lord? speak. Beau-to purchase such another island,

will let me live, and feel no pain.
Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
death's approach is seen so terrible !
Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks

...bring me unto my trial when you will.

more men live, wher they will or no!—
I will confess more, I will confess.—

I will then show me where he is :
I will give a thousand pound to look upon him.—
I will then show me where he is :
I will give a thousand pound to look upon him.—

ACT IV.

SCUNE I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at Sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Muster, & Master's-Mate, Walter Whitmore, and others; with them Suffolk, and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful
Is crept into the bosom of the sea; [lay
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the fragile melancholy night;
Who, with their drowy, slow, and flapping wings, [jaws

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by water I should die;
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded;
Thy name is—Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier, or Walter, which it is, I care not;

Never yet did base dishonour blur our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot;
Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[Lays hold on Suffolk.]

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince,

The duke of Suffolk, William De-la-Poole.

Whit. The duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's The honourable blood of Lancaster, [blood, Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,

When I have feasted with queen Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;

Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride:
How in our volding lobby hast thou stood,

And duly waited for my coming forth?
This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,

And therefore shall it clann thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Poole.

Suf. Poole!

Cap. Poole! Sir Poole! lord!

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt
Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing the treasure of the realm:

Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep
the ground; [phrey's death,

And thou, that smil'dst at good duke Hum-
Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,

Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again;
And wouldst be thou to the hags of hell,

For daring to affy a mighty lord
Unto the daughter of a worthless king,

Having neither subject, wealth, nor aid
By devilish policy art thou grown

And, like ambitious Sylla, overgrown
With goblets of thy mother's blood;

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,
The false revolting Normans thou

Disdain to call us lord; and Peard
Hath slain their governors, surprised

And sent the ragged soldiers wandering
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils

Whose dreadful swords were never
As hating thee, are rising up in arms

And now the house of York,—flourish
crown,

By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,

Burns with revenging fire; whose colours

Advance our half-faced sun, striving Under the which is write Ivych's

The commons here in Kent are up in arms
And to conclude, reproach and

Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee.—Away! convey him

Suf. O that I were a god, to do
thunder

Upon these paltry, servile, abject
Small things make base men proud villain here,

Being captain of a pinnace, threatened

Than Barchus the strong Illyrian Drones suck not eagles' blood, but

It is impossible that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage, and not remorse;
I go of message from the queen to thee

I charge thee, wait me safely cross the river.

Cap. Walter,—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must wait
thy death.

Suf. Pene gelatus timor occupat me,
thou I fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear
I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? I now will I Gent. My gracious lord, suffer speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue to Us'd to command, untaught to favour.

Far be it we should honour such as thou
With humble suit:—no, rather let me

Stoop to the block, than these knees any,

Save to the God of heaven, and to my
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole

Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar
True nobility is exempt from fear

More can I bear than thou dare
Cap. Hail him away, and let him

more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what
That this my death may never be forgot

Great men oft die by vile barbarians!

rough murder and banditto slave
And a sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand

And Julius Caesar; savage islanders
The great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.

Suf. Whit. and others.

And as for these whose ransom we have set,

Let some one of them depart:—
Except all but first Gentleman.

There let his head and lifeless body lie,
All the queen, his mistress, bury it.

Whit. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Why will I bear unto the king:
Why will I bear unto the king:

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—
Dick. [Aside.] He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,— Dick. [Aside.] I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Ladies,— Dick. [Aside.] She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold heavy laces.

Smith. [Aside.] But now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable Dick. [Aside.] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. [Aside.] 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside.] No question of that; for I have seen him whipped three market days

together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside.] He need not fear the sword;
for his coat is of proof.

Dick. [Aside.] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt 't the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in common;

and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass;
and when I am king, (as king I will be)—

All, God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people:—there shall be no money: all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that purchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo

a man? Some say, the bee stings: but I say
'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since.

—How now! who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. 'Has a book in his pocket, with red

Cade. Nay then, he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die.—Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee: what is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick: They use to write it on the top of letters.—"I will go hard with you."

Cade. Let me alone.—Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him!
he's a villain, and a traitor.

Cude. Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.]

Enter Michael.

Mich. Where's our general?

Code. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself; he is but a knight, is 'a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford and William his Brother, with drum and forces.

Staf. Rebelious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, [down ;
Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons
Home to your cottages, forsake this groom :
The king is merciful, if you revolt. [to blood :

W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd
If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.
Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not:

It is to you, good people, that I speak,
O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;
For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain, thy father was a pl

W. Scaf. And what of that? Hearl of March.

Code Mary: this:—Edmond Mortimer.

Staf. Ay, sir. [he not]

W. Staf. That's false. ['tis true:
Carle. Ay, there's the question; but I say,
The elder of them, being put to nurse.

All. Ay, marry, will we, [Exit

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the duke's Cade. [Aside.] He lies, for I have self.—Go to, sirrah: tell the that, for his father's sake, Henry those time boys went to French crowns, I am content

but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And furthermore, will you

Say's head, for selling the discovery
Code. And good reason; for time land maimed, and fain to go that my puissance holds it up.

I tell you that that lord Rayn-commonwealth, and made it a more than that, he can speak

Staf. O, gross and miserable creature!

Cade, Nay, answer, if you can,
men are our enemies; go to, then!

Ms.—can be that speaks with

Alt. No, no; and therefore well

head, ...

W. Staf. Well, seeing how prevail,

Assail them with the army of the King

Staf. Herald, away; and Proclaim them traitors that

That those which fly before the battle to come to London, where we will have the sword borne before us.

If we mean to thrive and do good,
break open the jails, and let out the prisoners.
Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, march towards London.

[Exeunt.]

IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

King Henry, reading a supplication;
the Duke of Buckingham and Lord Say with him; at a distance, Queen Margaret, mourning over Suffolk's head.

Q. Mar. O! have I heard that grief softens the mind,
that makes it fearful and degenerate;

that therefore on revenge, and cease to weep,
who can cease to weep, and look on this?

How may his head lie on my throbbing breast;
the body that I should embrace?

What answer makes your grace to my supplication?

How! I'll send some holy bishop to endeavour to win him by the sword! And I myself, shall then bloody war shall cut them short,

they with Jack Cade their general:—

How! Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face

like a wandering planet, over me,
should it not enforce them to relent,

and be unworthy to behold the same?

How! Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

How! Ah, but I hope your highness shall have him, how now, madam!

[His.]
Lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's
death!

How! love, if that I had been dead, [Ans.]
I should not have mourned so much for him. No, my love; I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.
How! Now now! what news? why standest thou in such haste?

[Lord 1.]
The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord, for the Duke of Clarence's house;

from the duke of Clarence's house;
your grace murder openly.

How! Is a ragged multitude of peasants, rude and merciless:

they have slain Stafford and his brother's death
has broken their heart and courage to proceed:

How! Is a ragged multitude
of peasants, rude and merciless:

they have slain Stafford and his brother's death
has broken their heart and courage to proceed:

How! Is a ragged multitude
of peasants, rude and merciless:

they have slain Stafford and his brother's death
has broken their heart and courage to proceed:

How! Is a ragged multitude
of peasants, rude and merciless:

they have slain Stafford and his brother's death
has broken their heart and courage to proceed:

How! Is a ragged multitude
of peasants, rude and merciless:

they have slain Stafford and his brother's death
has broken their heart and courage to proceed:

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee;
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger;

The sight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this city will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter a second Messenger.
2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge; the citizens

Fly and forsake their houses:

The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear
To spoil the city, and your royal court. [Horae.]

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us. [Recess'd.]

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is K. Hen. [To Lord Say.] Farewell, my lord:
trust not the Kentish rebels. [Tray'd.]

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be be-
Sey. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—London. The Tower.
Enter Lord Scales and others, on the walls.

Then enter certain Citizens, below.
Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

1 Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: the lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels. [Command.]

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, you shall
But I am troubled here with them myself:
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.

But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Gough: Fight for your king, your country, and your lives;

And so, farewell, for I must hence again.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—London. Cannon Street.
Enter Jack Cade, and his followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city.
And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the piss-ing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me
other than lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.
Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there.
[They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more: I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them;

but first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—London. Smithfield.

Alarum. Enter, on one side, Cade and his company; on the other, Citizens, and the King's forces, headed by Matthew Gough. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and Matthew Gough is slain.

Cade. So, sirs:—Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word. [Come out of your mouth.]

Dick. Only, that the laws of England may John. [Aside.] Mass, 'twill be sore law, then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside.] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm; my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. [Aside.] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter George Boyis, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, he shall be behended for it ten times.—Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto monsieur Basimeen, the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a footcloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to have horse wear a cloak, when honest men then go in their hose and doublet.

Dick. And work in their shirt and hose, for example, that am a bullock.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this,—

Cade. Away with him, away with him, speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and I will show Kent, in the commentaries Caesar made, is term'd the civil'st place of all the world.

Sweet is the country, because full of peace. The people liberal, valiant, active, and free.

Which makes me hope you are not yet sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy.

Yet, to recover them, would I always have Justice with favour have I always Prayers and tears have mov'd me never.

When have I aught exacted at you? But to maintain the king, the realm, and large gifts have I bestow'd on to you.

Because my book prefer'd me to you, And seeing ignorance is the cause of Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.

Unless you be possess'd with devils, you cannot but forbear to murder me.

This tongue hath parley'd unto you for your behoof,—

Cade. Tat! when struck'st thou me?

Say. Great men have reaching arms, have I struck

Those that I never saw, and struck I never saw.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what's behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for will make 'em red again.

Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting, to determine Hath made me full of sickness and Cade. Ye shall have a hempen halibut and the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palay, and not fear, man.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as if he will stand steadier on a pole, or say, I'll be even with you: I'll send him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me, wherein have I

Have I affected wealth, or honour? Are my chests fill'd up with extortion?

Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye have

These hands are free from guilting shedding.

This breast from harbouring foul O, let me live.

Cade. [Aside.] I feel remorse for his words; but I'll bridle it: he it be but for pleading so well with him! he has a familiar under his arm; he speaks not o' God's name, Go, away, I say, and strike off his head;

and then break into his son-in-law's and bring them both upon two poles
It shall be done.

[hither.
Ah, countrymen! If when you make your prayers,
should be so obdurate as yourselves,
I would it were with your departed souls!

Therefore yet relent, and save my life.
Away with him! and do as I command

[Exeunt some, with Lord Say.
A proud peer in the realm shall not wear on his shoulders, unless he pay me there shall not a maid be married, shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere
I leave it: men shall hold of me in capite;
I charge and command, that their wives
as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

My lord, when shall we go to Cheap-and take up commodities upon our bills!
Slavery, presently. All. O, brave!
Rebels, with the heads of Lord Say and his Son-in-law.

But is not this braver? Let them another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest all about the giving up of some more in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of until night; for with these borne behind instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them away!

[Exeunt.
SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Enter Cade, and all his Rabblement.
Fish Street! down St. Magnus' and knock down! throw them down!—[A parley sounded, then a re-

What noise is this I hear? Dare any dare to sound retreat or parley, when I am here?

[Enter Buckingham, and Old Clifford, with forces.

Are there they be that dare, and will defy thee.

Alas, we come ambassadors from the king, to pronounce whom thou hast misled;

and pronounce free pardon to them all,
and go home in peace.

What say ye, countrymen? will ye take me to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you;

or will I lead you to your deaths? [don,
the king, and will embrace his par-

son's cap, and say God save his majesty!
and honours not his father,

that made all France to quake,
his weapon at us, and pass by.

God save the king! God save the king!
What, Buckingham, and Clifford, are you here? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one; and so, God's curse light upon you all.

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Cliff. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim, you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of
France,

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes!
Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil,

Unless by robbing of your friends, and us.
Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,

[quibbel,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquish'd, should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish
Methinks already in this civil broil,

[you?
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying—"Villagio!" unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.

[lost;
To France, to France, and get what you have Spare England, for it is your native coast;
Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king, and Clifford.

Cade. [Aside.] Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude? the name of Henry the fifth hales them to a hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate.
I see them lay their heads together, to surprise me: my sword make way for me, for here is no staying. In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels.

[Exit.
Buck. What, is he fled? go some, and follow him;

And he that brings his head unto the king
Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.
Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean
To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Kenilworth Castle.

Trumpet sounded. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and Somerset, on the terrace of the Castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle,
But I was made a king, at nine months old:
Was never subject long'd to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter Buckingham and Old Clifford.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty!
[Cade surprises'd.]

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a number of Cade's followers, with halberts about their necks.

Cliff. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;

And humbly thus, with halberts on their necks, Expect your highness' doom, of life, or death.

K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,

And show'd how well you love your prince
Continue still in this so good a mind,

And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind;

And so, with thanks, and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the king! God save the king!
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your grace to be advertised,
The duke of York is newly come from Ireland;

And with a puissant and a mighty power
Of Gallowglasses, and stout Kernes,

Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,

His arms are only to remove from thee [traitor].
The duke of Somerset, whom he terms a K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Like to a ship, that, having 'scap'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate:

But now is Cade driven back, his men dis-

pers'd;
And now is York in arms to second him.

I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him;
And ask him what's the reason of these arms;

Tell him, I'll send duke Edmund to the Tower;
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,

Until his army be dismiss'd from him.
Som. My lord,

I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case be not too rough in terms;

For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal,

As all things shall redound unto you good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet many England curse my wretched reign.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Fie on ambition! I sit on my throne have a sword, and yet am ready to These five days have I hid me in the and durst not peep out, for all the laid for me; but now I am so hungry

I might have a lease of my life for years, I could stay no longer. When a brick wall have I climbed into the

to see if I can eat grass, or pick a while, which is not akin to my stomach this hot weather. And I word "sallet" was born to do me

many a time, but for a sallet, my had been cleit with a brown bill, and time, when I have been dry, and marching, it hath served me well;

quart-pot to drink in; and now the
"sallet" must serve me to lead me

Enter Iden, with Servants carrying Iden. Lord, who would live thus the court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as this

This small inheritance, my father left Contenteth me, and worth a man's

I seek not to wax great by others' woe;
Or gather wealth, I care not with what

Sufficieth that I have maintain'd my
And sends the poor well pleased

Cade. [Aside.] Here's the lord come to seize me for a stray, for fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, will betray me, and get a thousand

the king by carrying my head to him;
make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and my sword like a great pin, ere thou Iden. Why, rude companion, thou be,

I know thee not; why, then, should

Is't not enough, to break into my
And, like a thief, to come to rob me?

Climbing my walls in spite of me,
But thou wilt brave me with these Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the that ever was broached, and heard

Look on me well: I have eat no five days; yet, come thou and and if I do not leave you all as dead nail, I pray God I may never eat

Iden. Nay, it shall never be England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Took odds to combat a poor farmer

Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to See if thou canst out-face me with Set limb to limb, and thou art for Thy hand is but a finger to my

Thy leg a stick, compared with this My foot shall fight with all the hast;

And if mine arm be heaved in the

Thy grave is digg'd already in the [Exeunt.]

to more words, whose greatness answers
[Iden.]

By my sword report what speech forbears.
upon that ever I heard. Steel, if thou on his side or out not the burly-boned to chains of steel ere thou sleep in thy

I beseech Jove ere thou kneest in thy [Iden.]

to be turned to hobnails. [They fight;
O, I am slain! Famine, and my half slain me: let ten thousand

I have lost, and I'll defy them all.

parten; and be henceforth a burying-word to all that do dwell in this house, because we conspired soul of Cade is fled.

[Iden.]

Let Cade that I have slain, that
traitor!

I will follow thee for this thy deed,
I shall thee o'er my tomb when I am dead:

thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
I shall have the honour that thy master got.

Iden. Fearwell; and be proud of thy
[Iden.]

Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her and exhort all the world to be for I, that never feared any, am How much thou wrong'st me, heaven is my judge.

[Bare thee!]

Thrust thy body in with my sword,
I might thrust thy soul to hell.

will I drag thee headlong by the heels
which shall be thy grave,

thrust out of thy most ungracious head;
I will bear in triumph to the king,

my trunk for crows to feed upon.
[Iden.]

With servants, dragging out the body.

ACT V.

Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

York's Camp on one side: on the other,
Somerset's his forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to [Iden.]

the crown from feeble Henry's head:
[Iden.]

blow; hurn, bonfires, clear and [Iden.]

great England's lawful king.
[Iden.]

great majestas! who would not buy thee
[Iden.]

that know not how to rule;
[Iden.]

was made to handle nought but [Iden.]

five due action to my words,
[Iden.]

a sword, or sceptre, balance it:
[Iden.]

shall I have.—Have I a soul,—
[Iden.]

I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

[Aside.] Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me? [Iden.]

The king hath sent him, sure: I must dis-Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet

thee well.
York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept

thy greeting,
Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread
liege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou,—being a subject as I am,—

Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, Shouldst raise so great a power without his

leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside.] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great:

O, I could hew up rocks, and fling with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;

And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!

I am far better born than is the king;
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts,

But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.

[Aloud.] Buckingham, I pray thee pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;

My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither,

Is, to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace, and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on your
But if thy arms be to no other end, [part:]

The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?
Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in St. George's field,

You shall have pay, and everything you wish
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,

Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love;

I'll send them all, as willing as I live: [have,
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I

Is his to use, so Somerset may die. [sion:]
Buck. York, I comment this kind submis-

We twain will go into his highness' tent.
Enter King Henry, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,

That thus he marcheth with this arm in arm?
York. In all submission and humility,

York doth present himself unto your highness.
K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from

hence;
And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade

Who since I heard to be discredited,

Enter Idem, with Cade's head.

Idem. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
May pass into the presence of a king, [tion,
Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade!—Great God, how just art thou!—
O, let me view his visage, being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.

Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew
him?

Idem. I was, an't like your majesty.

K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?

Idem. Alexander Idem, that's my name;

A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss

He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Idem, kneel down. [He kneels.]
Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks;

And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Idem. May Idem live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege!

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen:

Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen Margaret and Somerset.
Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,

But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd
thoughts,

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?

False king! why hast thou broken faith with knowing how hardly I can brook abuse? [me,
King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows of
mine;

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place: by heaven, thou shalt rule no more
O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee,
York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown:
Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

York. Would'st have me kneel? first let me
ask of thee,

If they can brook I bow a knee to man.—
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:

[Exit an Attendant.

I know, ere they will have me go to They'll pawn their swords for my
ment.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford! I bid
To say, if that the bastard boys of Shall be the surety for their traitor

York. O, blood-bespotted Neapolitan, Outcast of Naples, England's blood,

The sons of York, thy betters to thee,
Shall be their father's bail; and thou
That for my surety wilt refuse the Enter Edward and Richard Plantagenet.

forces at one side: at the other also, Old Clifford and his Son

See where they come: I'll wage make it good.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford Clif. [Kneeling.] Health and to my lord the king!

York. I thank thee, Clifford: news
news with thee?

Nay, do not fright us with an angry
We are thy sovereign, Clifford; know
For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my king, York, Edward take,

But thou mistak'st me much: I
To Bedlam with him! is the man
K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a Bedlam

cliff. He is a traitor; let him to the
And chop away that factious pate
Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will His sons, he says, shall give their

him.
York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our Rich. And if words will not weapons shall.

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors
York. Look in a glass, and call thyself
I am thy king, and thou a false heir!

Call hither to the stake my two
That with the very shaking of their
They may astonish these fell lords,
Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come Drums. Enter Warwick and Salisbury.

Clif. Are these thy bears? will bears to death,

And manacle the bear-ward in their
If thou dar'st bring them to the stake

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot Run back and bite, because he was
Who, being suffer'd with the bear-ward, Hath clapp'd his tail between his cried:

And such a piece of service will you
If you oppose yourselves to make wick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul
As crooked in thy manners as thy

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourself.

Edw. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Cliff. Why, shame to thy silver hair, and misleader of thy brain-sick son!—
Will thou on thy death-bed play the

And ask for sorrow with thy spectacles?—
O, where is loyalty?

Will thou find a harbour in the earth?—
O, where is honourable age with blood?

Are thou old, and want'st experience?
O, where dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

My lord, I have consider'd with myself
of this most renowned duke;

How my conscience do repulse his grace
From his seat to England's royal seat.

Hast thou not sworn allegiance
unto me?

For such an oath!
O, how canst thou dispense with heaven

For such an oath?—O, where is loyalty?
Will thou find a harbour in the earth?

Are thou old, and want'st experience?
O, where dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

My lord, I have consider'd with myself
of this most renowned duke;

How my conscience do repulse his grace
From his seat to England's royal seat.

Hast thou not sworn allegiance
unto me?

For such an oath!
O, how canst thou dispense with heaven

For such an oath?—O, where is loyalty?
Will thou find a harbour in the earth?

Are thou old, and want'st experience?
O, where dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

My lord, I have consider'd with myself
of this most renowned duke;

How my conscience do repulse his grace
From his seat to England's royal seat.

Hast thou not sworn allegiance
unto me?

For such an oath!
O, how canst thou dispense with heaven

For such an oath?—O, where is loyalty?
Will thou find a harbour in the earth?

Are thou old, and want'st experience?
O, where dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

My lord, I have consider'd with myself
of this most renowned duke;

How my conscience do repulse his grace
From his seat to England's royal seat.

Hast thou not sworn allegiance
unto me?

For such an oath!
O, how canst thou dispense with heaven

For such an oath?—O, where is loyalty?
Will thou find a harbour in the earth?

Are thou old, and want'st experience?
O, where dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

My lord, I have consider'd with myself
of this most renowned duke;

How my conscience do repulse his grace
From his seat to England's royal seat.

Hast thou not sworn allegiance
unto me?

For such an oath!
O, how canst thou dispense with heaven

For such an oath?—O, where is loyalty?
Will thou find a harbour in the earth?

Are thou old, and want'st experience?
O, where dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

My lord, I have consider'd with myself
of this most renowned duke;

How my conscience do repulse his grace
From his seat to England's royal seat.

Hast thou not sworn allegiance
unto me?

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatical, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.—St. Albans.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now,—when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,—
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!

Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is house with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.
How now, my noble lord! what, all a-foot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;

But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Old Clifford.
War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,

But that 'tis shown ignobly, and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy
sword,

As I in justice and true right express it!

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay!—address thee in-Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. [stantly.]

[They fight, and Clifford falls and dies.] York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will!

Enter Young Clifford.
Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout;

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of
hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:
He that is truly dedicate to war,
Hath no self-love; nor he, that loves himself,

Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour.— [Seeing his father.

O, let the vile world end,
And the premised flames of the last day
Knit heaven and earth together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence, and thy chair-days, thus
To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis
mine,

It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;

No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity:
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it,
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.

Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house:
[Taking up the body.

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then, Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.

Enter Richard Plantagenet and Somerset, fighting; Somerset is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there;—
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in St. Albans, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful
still:

Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill.

[Exit.
Alarums: Excursions. Enter King Henry,
Queen Margaret, and others, retreating.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good
Margaret, stay. [nor fight, nor fly:

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll
Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way; and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.
If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply 'scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect,)
We shall to London get: where you are lov'd;

And where this breach, now in our
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young Clifford.
Y. Clif. But that my heart's on fire, chief set,

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly
But fly you must; uncurable disease
Reigns in the hearts of all our prelates
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day, and then our fortune
Away, my lord, away!

SCENE III.—Field near St. Albans.
Alarum; Retreat. Flourish.
York, Richard Plantagenet,
Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report That winter lion, who in rage for Ag'd contusions and all brush of
And, like a gallant in the brow of Repairs him with occasion! this Is not itself, nor have we won one
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to Three times hestrid him, thrice I Persuaded him from any further
But still, where danger was, still
And like rich hangings in a homely
So was his will in his old feeble
But, noble as he is, look where he Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well fought to-day;
By the mass, so did we all.—I God knows how long it is I have
And it hath pleas'd him, that
to-day

You have defended me from imminent
Well, lords, we have not got that
have:

'Tis not enough our foes are this the Being opposites of such repairing.

York. I know our safety is to
For, as I hear, the king is fled to
To call a present court of parliament
Let us pursue him, ere the writ
What says lord Warwick? shall we
them?

War. After them! nay, before
Now, by my hand, lords, 'twas a p
St. Albans battle, won by famous Shall be eterniz'd in all ages to come Sound, drums and trumpets—sur
And more such days as these to us

THE THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Henry the Sixth.		Sir John Mortimer, } Uncles to the Duke of
Edward, Prince of Wales, his Son.		Sir Hugh Mortimer, } York.
Lewis XI., King of France.		Henry, Earl of Richmond, a Youth.
Duke of Somerset,		Lord Rivers, Brother to Lady Grey.
Duke of Exeter,		Sir William Stanley.
Earl of Oxford,		Sir John Montgomery.
Earl of Northumberland,		Sir John Somerville.
Earl of Westmoreland,		Tutor to Rutland.
Lord Clifford,		Mayor of York.
Edward Plantagenet, Duke of York.		Lieutenant of the Tower.
Edward, Earl of March, after-		A Nobleman. Two Keepers. A Hunts-
wards King Edward IV.,		man.
Richard, Earl of Rutland,		A Son that has killed his Father.
Edward, afterwards Duke of Clar-	his Sons.	A Father that has killed his Son.
ence,
Richard, afterwards Duke of Glos-
ter,		Queen Margaret.
Earl of Norfolk,		Lady Grey, afterwards Queen to Edward
Marquess of Montague,		IV.
Earl of Warwick,		Bona, Sister to the French Queen.
Earl of Pembroke,
Lord Hastings,		Soldiers, and other Attendants on King Henry
Lord Stafford,		and King Edward, Messengers, Watchmen, &c.

During part of the Third Act, in France; during the rest of the Play, in England

ACT I.

Scene I.—London. The Parliament-House.

Some Soldiers of York's party break in. Then, enter the Duke of York, Edward, Richard, Norfolk, Montague, Warwick, and others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursued the horsemen of the north,

He stole away, and left his men;

His warlike ears could never brook retreat,

He clomb up the drooping army; and himself,

Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast,

Along our main battle's front, and, breaking

Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wiltshire's blood, [To York, showing his.]

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's head.]

sons. York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my But, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset?

Norfolk. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's War. And so do I, victorious prince of Before I see thee seated in that throne [York.]

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.

This is the palace of the fearful king, And this the regal seat: possess it, York;

For this is thine, and not king Henry's heirs'. York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will;

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norfolk. We'll all assist you, he that flies shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk:—stay by me, my lords;—

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.

War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence,
Unless he seek to thrust you out by force.

[They retire.]

York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament,
But little thinks we shall be of her council:
By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king,
And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;

I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells.
I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares:—

[crown. Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English throne, [War. leads York to the throne, who seats himself.]

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Exeter, and others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the chair of state! belike he means [Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer]

To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king.
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father;
And thine, lord Clifford; and you both have your'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:

My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons, such as he:
He durst not sit there, had your father liv'd.
My gracious lord, here in the parliament

Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be

K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their back?

Exe. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from To make a shambles of the parliament house!

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,
Shall be the war that Henry means to use.

[They advance to the Duke.]
Thou factious duke of York, descend my throne,

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet:
I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine.

Exe. For shame, come down: he is duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the

In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow but

War. True, Clifford; and that a

duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and my throne?

York. It must and shall be so: I

self,

War. Be duke of Lancaster: let West. He is both king and duke of

ter;

And that the lord of Westmoreland

War. And Warwick shall disprove forget

That we are those which chas'd you

And slew your fathers, and with colour

March'd through the city to the palace

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember

grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and sons,

Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I'll

Than drops of blood were in my Clif. Urge it no more; I'll words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a

As shall revenge his death before

War. Poor Clifford! how I worthless threats!

York. Will you we show our

If not, our swords shall plead it in

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor,

crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, duke of

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer,

I am the son of Henry the fifth,

Who made the Dauphin and the steep,

And seiz'd upon their towns and

War. Talk not of France, with lost it all.

K. Hen. The lord protector lost it

When I was crown'd, I was but old.

Rich. You are old enough now,

Father, tear the crown from the

Edw. Sweet father, do so; and lead.

Ment. [To York.] Good brother,

love'st and honour'st at arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give

leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords!

And be you silent and attentive too,
For that interrupts him shall not live.

Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my singly throne, to my grandsire and my father sat?

I shall war unpeople this my realm;

And their colours,—often borne in France,
Now in England, to our heart's great sorrow,—

on my winding-sheet. Why faint you,
And prove it, Henry, and thou shalt know. Henry the fourth by conquest got the crown.

War. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.
Hen. [Aside.] I know not what to say:
my title's weak.

Clif. Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful in the view of many lords, [king;

and the crown to Henry the fourth, their my father was, and I am his.

Clif. He rose against him, being his sovereign, and made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd, think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Hen. No; for he could not so resign his

crown,
that the next heir should succeed and reign.
Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter?

Hen. 'Tis the right, and therefore pardon [answer not?
me. My conscience tells me he is lawful king. Hen. [Aside.] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

War. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou setst that Henry shall be so depos'd.

Hen. Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.
North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power

Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,— which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—

that the duke up in despite of me,
King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,

and Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:
I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive
my heart!

War. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.—

Hen. Matter you, or what conspire you, lords?
War. Do right unto this princely duke of York:

Or I will fill the house with armed men,

And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.] [one word:—

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but Let me for this my lifetime reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,

Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.
Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son! [himself!

War. What good is this to England, and West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.
North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen
these news. [king,

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands, for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be over-
come;

Or live in peace, abandon'd, and despis'd!
[Exit Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Ecc. They seek revenge, and therefore will
K. Hen. Ah, Exeter! [not yield.]

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?
K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick,

but my son,
Whom I unnaturally shall disinheret.

But, be it as it may; I here entail [ever:—
The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign,

And neither by treason, nor hostility,
To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne.

War. Long live king Henry! Plantagenet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are recon-cil'd. [kiss.]

Ecc. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them
[Sennet. The Lords come forward.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.
Nor. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came. [Exit York, and his Sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague,
Soldiers, and Attendants.]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter Queen Margaret and the Prince of Wales.

Exc. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:

I'll steal away. [Going.]

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.]

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee. [Stay.]

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?

Ah, wretched man! Would I had died a maid, And never seen thee, never borne thee son, Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father! Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus? Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I, Or felt that pain which I did for him once, Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood,— Thou wouldst have left thy dearest blood there,

Rather than have made that savage duke thine And disinherited thine only son. [Their.]

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me: If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son;

The earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforce'd me. [Will be forc'd.]

Q. Mar. Enforce'd thee! art thou king, and I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me; And given unto the house of York such head, As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance. To entail him and his heirs unto the crown, What is it, but to make thy sepulchre, And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais; Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas:

The duke is made protector of the realm; And yet shalt thou be safe! such safety finds The trembling lamb, environ'd with wolves.

Had I been there, which am a silly woman, The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,

Before I would have granted to that act. But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:

And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself, Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

Until that act of parliament be repeal'd, Whereby my son is disinherited. [Colours, The northern lords that have sworn to thy Will follow mine, if once they see them spread; And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace, And utter ruin of the house of York. Thus do I leave thee.—Come, son, let's away; Our army is ready; come, we'll alter them.]

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou shalt not a thing it is to wear a crown; all that poets feign of bliss and joy, shall be no longer thine: I cannot rest.

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by thy hand, the while thou say'st that I wear, be dy'd the blood of Henry's heart.

Prince. When I return with victory, thou shalt to London presently, [die.]

Q. Mar. Come, son, away! I will linger thus.

[Exit Queen Margaret and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love she to her son,

Hath made her break out into tears, Reveng'd may she be on that hateful Whose haughty spirit, winged with pride,

Will cost my crown, and, like an eagle, Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son.

The loss of those three lords forebode heart:

I'll write unto them, and entreat them to come, cousin, you shall be the need.

Exc. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them.

SCENE II.—A Room in Sandal Church, Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter Edward, Richard, and Mont.

Rich. Brother, though I be your uncle, me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the uncle to Mont. But I have reasons forcible.

Enter York.

York. Why, how now, sons, and at a strife!

What is your quarrel? how born it?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight conceit.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns the crown of England, father, which is dead.

York. Mine, boy! not till king is dead.

Rich. Your right depends not on his death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore now:

By giving the house of Lancaster, it will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should not.

Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath is broken:

I would break a thousand oaths to have the crown.

Rich. No; God forbid your grace should be forsworn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by oath to have the crown.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you will me speak.

York. Thou canst not, son; it is his oath.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, before a true and lawful marriage.

That hath authority over him that Henry had none, but did usurp the crown.

Then, seeing 'twas he that made you pose, Your oath, my lord, is vain and idle. Therefore, to arms. And, father, to arms.

Enter Clifford and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away: thy priesthood savas thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke, Whose father slew my father, he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company. [Puny.]

Clif. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent child.

Lest thou be hated both of God and man! [Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? Or is it fear?

That makes him close his eyes?—I'll open him. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch.

That trembles under his devouring paws; And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,

And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.— Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,

And not with such a cruel threatening look! Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die!

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath: Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood.

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter. [Again:]

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it. He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine.

Were not revenge sufficient for me: No; if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains, It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York Is as a fury to torment my soul;

And till I root out their accursed line, And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore— [Lifting his hand.]

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death!

To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath. [Slay me!]

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me; Lest in revenge thereof,—with God is just,—

He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days; And when I give occasion of offence,

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause!

Clif. No cause!

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die. [Stabs him.]

Rut. Disfaciant, laudis summa sit tibi tuum! [Dies.]

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet! And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade,

Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood, Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Plains.
Alarum. Enter York.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
 And all my followers to the eager foe
 Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind,
 Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starv'd wolves.
 My sons,—God knows what hath bechanced them, [selves

But this I know,—they have demean'd them-
 Like men born to renown by life or death.
 Three times did Richard make a lane to me;
 And thrice cried,—“Courage, father! fight it out!”

And full as oft came Edward to my side,
 With purple Faulchion, painted to the hilt
 In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
 And when the hardest warriors did retire, Richard cried,—“Charge! and give no foot of ground!”

And cried,—“*A crown, or else a glorious tomb/
 A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!*”

With this, we charg'd again: but, out, alas!
 We bodg'd again: as I have seen a swan
 With bootless labour swim against the tide,
 And spend her strength with over-matching waves. [A short alarum within.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue;
 And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury:
 And were I strong, I would not shun their fury.

The sands are number'd that make up my life;
 Here must I stay, and here my life must end.
Enter Queen Margaret, Clifford, Northumberland, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford,—rough Northumber-
 land,—

I dare your quenchless fury to more rage:
 I am your butt, and I abide your shot. [Ret.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantage-Cliff. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm, With downright payment, shew'd unto my
 father.

Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car,
 And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring
 A bird that will revenge upon you all: [North
 And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
 Scorning what'er you can afflict me with.
 Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear! [Further;

Cliff. So cowards fight when they can fly no
 So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
 So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
 Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once
 again,

And in thy thought o'er-run my former time;
 And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
 And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice, [this.

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere Cliff. I will not bandy with the word,

 But buckle with thee blows, twice

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford!
 thousand causes
 I would prolong a while the battle Wrath makes him deaf: speak
 umberland.

North. Hold, Clifford: do not To prick thy finger, though to
 heart:

What valour were it, when a cur
 For one to thrust his hand between
 When he might smite him with his
 It is war's prize to take all vanities
 And ten to one is no impeachment
 [They lay hands on York, who Cliff. Ay, ay, so strives the weak the gin.

North. So doth the coney strangle
 net. [York is taken.

York. So triumph thieves upon quer'd booty;

So true men yield, with valour
 North. What would your grace unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford
 umberland,

Come, make him stand upon the
 here,

That rought at mountains with out-Yet parted but the shadow with his What! was it you that would be
 king?

Was't you that revell'd in our park
 And made a preschment of your
 Where are your mess of sons to back
 The wanton Edward, and the husy

And where's that valiant crook-bow
 Dicky your boy, that with his grace
 Was wont to cheer his dad in man-Or, with the rest, where is your

land?
 Look, York: I stain'd this napkin

blood

That valiant Clifford, with his rapier
 Made issue from the bosom of the
 And if thine eyes can water for his
 I give thee this to dry thy cheeks

Alas, poor York! but that I hate
 I should lament thy miserable state

I prythee, grieve, to make me merry
 What, hath thy fiery heart so entrails,

 That not a tear can fall for sorrow?

Why art thou patient, man! thou art
 mad;

And I, to make thee mad, do mock Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may dance.

 Thou wouldst be fce'd, I see, to sport:

 York cannot speak, unless he were a

YORK!—and, lords, bow low to him.

[Putting a paper crown on his head.]

My merry, etc., now looks he like a king!

And this is he that took king Henry's chair;

And low is it that great Plantagenet

sway'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?

I think me, you should not be king

if our king Henry had shook hands with

death.

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,

and rob his temple of the diadem,

in his life, against your holy oath?

With the crown; and, with the crown, his

head?

What we breathe, take time to do him

due. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons

he makes.

Yor. She-wolf of France, but worse than lives of France,

has tongue more poisons than the adder's

ill-breeding is it in thy sex

trump, like an Amazonian trull,

to bear woes whom fortune captivates!

That thy face is, visor-like, unchanging,

independent with use of evil deeds,

away, proud queen, to make thee

flush!

But whence thou can'st, of whom not ashamed.

Yor. He bears the type of king of Naples,

the Sicils, and Jerusalem;

as wealthy as an English yeoman.

That poor monarch taught thee to insult!

And not, nor it boots thee not, proud

the adage must be verified,

queen;—

only that doth oft make women proud;

and he knows, thy share thereof is small:

contrary doth make them most admir'd;

and that makes thee wonder'd at:

and thereof makes them seem divine;

and that makes thee abominable:

and that makes thee good,

as opposite to every good,

the Antipodes are unto us,

the south to the septentrion.

And thou, wrapp'd in a woman's hide!

couldst thou drain the life-blood of the father wipe his eyes withal, [child,

yet he seen to bear a woman's face?

And he soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;

And he, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorse-

less!

And thou me rage! why, now thou hast

thy wish:

And thou have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will:

And thou wind blows up incessant showers,

and thou the rage allays, the rain begins.

And thou mine are my sweet Rutland's obsequies;

And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
Against thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passions move
That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

Yor. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood:

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,—
O, ten times more,—than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:

This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet
boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.

Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:

[Giving back the handkerchief.]

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;

Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say,—“Alas, it was a piteous deed!”—

There, take the crown, and, with the crown,
my curse:

And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee,
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!—

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,

I should not, for my life, but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my lord
Northumberland?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death.

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.

Yor. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious
God!

My soul flies through these wounds to seek out
thee.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;

So York may overlook the town of York.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter Edward and Richard, with their forces, marching.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father
'scap'd,

Or whether he be 'scap'd away, or no,
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit:

Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news;

Had he been slain, we should have heard the
news;

Or had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.—

How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about;
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought he bore him in the thickest troop,
As doth a lion in a herd of neat;
Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.
So far'd our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies my warlike father:
Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.
See how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trimm'd like a youngker, prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns? [sees suns]

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a person, Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky,
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable;
Now are they but one lump, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds, Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together,

And overshine the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I speak it,

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woful looker-on,
When as the noble duke of York was slain,
Your princely father, and my loving lord.

Edw. O, speak no more! for I have heard too much. [all.]

Rich. Say how he died, for I will bear it.
Mess. Environ'd he was with many foes;

And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest timber'd oak.

By many hands your father was subdu'd;
But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of murthering Clifford, and the queen,
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite; [wept,

Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he
The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks,
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood

Of sweet young Rutland, by ruthlessly slain;

And after many scorn, many foul token, They took his head, and on the gates
They set the same; and there it doth lie.

The saddest spectacle that e'er I saw of York, our prey

Edw. Sweet duke of York, our prey upon,
Now thou art gone, we have no staff
O Clifford, boast'rous Clifford! thou
The flower of Europe for his chivalry,
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd
For hand to hand he would have thrice!

Now my soul's palace is become a Ah, would she break from hence, the body

Might in the ground be clos'd up in
For never henceforth shall I joy more Never, O never, shall I see more joy

Rich. I cannot weep, for all my moisture

Scarcely serves to quench my burning Nor can my tongue unload my heavy burden;

For self-same wind, that I should speak
Is kindling coals that fire all my
And burn me up with flames, that cannot quench.

To weep is to make less the depth of Tears, then, for babes; blows and
me!

Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venture
Or die renown'd by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke with thee;

His dukedom and his chair with me
Rich. Nay, if thou be that prince bird,

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the
For chair and dukedom, throne and say;

Either that is thine, or else thou wert March. Enter Warwick and with forces.

War. How now, fair lords!
what news abroad?

Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if you
Our baleful news, and at each word
ance,

Stab poniards in our flesh till all were
The world would add more anguish
wounds.

O valiant lord, the duke of York is slain
Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that I
genet,

Which held thee dearly as his soul's re-
tion,

Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death War. Ten days ago I drown'd in tears;

And now, to add more measure to your
I come to tell you things sith then After the bloody fray at Wakefield your brave father breath'd his latest gasp;

 As swiftly as the posts could run,
 He brought me of your loss, and his depart.
 I, London, keeper of the king,
 Gather'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
 As very well appointed, as I thought, Towards St. Albans to intercept the king in my behalf along; I queen,
 By my scouts I was advis'd
 That he was coming with a full intent
 To make our late decree in parliament, [son.
 King Henry's oath, and your successful tale to make, — we at St. Albans met,
 And both sides fiercely
 fought;

Whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
 Or he'd full gently on his warlike queen,
 Or he'd the soldiers of their heated spleen;
 Or whether 'twas some report of her success;
 Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
 Or leaders to his captives — blood and
 death,
 I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
 Our weapons like to lightning came and went;
 Our soldiers — like the night-owl's lazy flight,
 Or like a lazy thresher with a flail, —
 Lay'd them up with justice of our cause,
 Of promise of high pay, and great rewards:

And in vain; they had no heart to fight,
 No, in them, no hope to win the day;
 We led; the king unto the queen;
 George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
 In haste, are come to join with you;
 On the marches here, we heard you were Another head to fight again.
 Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle
 Warwick?

When came George from Burgundy to [England?
 War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers;
 For your brother, he was lately sent
 By your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
 Out of soldiers to this needful war.

War. Was odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled;
 I heard his praises in pursuit,
 Till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear?
 Thou shalt know, this strong right hand
 [of mine
 Brought the diadem from saint Henry's head,
 And the awful sceptre from his fist,
 As famous, and as bold in war,
 As I am for mildness, peace, and prayer.

War. I know it well, lord Warwick;
 Blame me not:
 I bear thy glories makes me speak.
 In this troublous time, what's to be done?
 We go throw away our coats of steel,
 And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
 And ring our Ave-Maries with our beads;
 And we on the helmets of our foes

Tell our devotion with revengeful arms!
 If for the last, say — Ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague.
 Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
 With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
 And of their feather many more proud birds,
 Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
 He swore consent to your succession,
 His oath enrolled in the parliament;

And now to London all the crew are gone,
 To frustrate both his oath, and what beside
 May make against the house of Lancaster.
 Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
 Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
 With all the friends that thou, brave earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
 Will but amount to five and twenty thousand;
 Why, Via! to London will we march again;
 And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
 And once again cry — Charge upon our foes!
 But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
 That cries — Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean: [hour!]

And when thou fail'st, (as God forbid the Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forbids!)

War. No longer earl of March, but duke
 of York;

The next degree is, England's royal throne;
 For king of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
 In every borough as we pass along;
 And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
 Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.

King Edward, — valiant Richard, — Montague, —

Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown,
 But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,

(As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,)
 I come to pierce it, — or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums! — God and Saint George for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news! [by me,
 Mess. The duke of Norfolk sends you word
 The queen is coming with a puissant host;
 And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then it sorts, brave warriors;
 let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Before York.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with forces.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch enemy,

That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck:—

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.

Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity And harmful pity must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks? Not to the beast that would usurp their den.

Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick? Not his that spoils her young before her face.

Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting? Not he that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on; And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown, Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brows:

He, but a duke, would have his son a king, And raise his issue like a loving sire;

Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son, Didst yield consent to disinheret him,

Which argu'd thee a most unloving father. Unreasonable creatures feed their young;

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes, Yet, in protection of their tender ones, Who hath not seen them (even with those wings

Which sometime they have us'd with fearful Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,

Offering their own lives in their young's de- For shame, my liege, make them your prey:

Were it not pity that this goodly boy (cedent! Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,

And long hereafter say unto his child,— "What my great-grandfather and grandsire

My careless father fondly gave away?" [got, Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy;

And let his manly face, which promiseth Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart

To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the Inferring arguments of mighty force. [orator, But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear

That things ill got had ever bad success? And happy always was it for that son, Unsheath your sword, and dash him down, Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, And learn this lesson,—Draw thy sword right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,

And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a child.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be advised: For with a band of thirty thousand

Comes Warwick, backing of the duke's; And in the towns, as they do now, he

Proclaims him king, and many he hath Darraign your battle, for they are Clif. I would your highness would the field:

The queen hath best success where she

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune.

North. Be it with resolution, then.

Prince. My royal father, show them lords,

And hearten those that fight in your Unsheath your sword, good

"Saint George!"

March. Enter Edward, George, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, and

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry I will for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head, Or bide the mortal fortune of the

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy unloving sulking boy!

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in Before thy sovereign, and thy

Edw. I am his king, and he should I was adopted heir by his consent:

Since when, his oath is broken: for You, that are king, though he do

Was not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood, that durst

Edw. Northumberland, I hold thee rever-ation of the party; for scarce I can refrain from slaying thee, that cruel child-killer.

Clif. I slow thy father,—call'st thou him a

Edw. Ay, like a dastard, and a treacherous coward, that did kill our tender brother Rutland;

And now I'll make thee curse the dead.

Clif. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.

Edw. Duly thou, then, or else hold close thy lips. I pry thee, give no limits to my language, and privileg'd to speak. [tongue: I'll show thee the wound that bred this

word:—

That made us all, I am resolv'd,

Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Clif. Henry, shall I have my right, or war, if thou deny, their blood upon thy

head:

York to justice puts his armour on.

Edw. If that be right, which Warwick says is right,

Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him, [France, That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of

And heap'd isolation on his crown at home.

For what hath broach'd this tumult, but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek, our little still had slept;

And we, in pity of the gentle king, Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase,

We set the axe to thy usurping root: [selves, And though the edge hath something hit our-

Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edw. And in this resolution I defy thee;

Not willing any longer conference,

Since thou deny'st the gentle king to speak.—

Sound trumpets!—let our bloody colours

And either victory, or else a grave. [wave!—

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.

Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer

These words will cost ten thousand lives to-day.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a

I lay me down a little while to breathe; [races, For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,

Have rob'd my strong-knit sinews of their

strength,

And, spite of spite, needs must I rest a while.

Enter Edward, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, un-gentle death!

[clouded, For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is

War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good?

Enter George. [despair; Geo. Our hap is lost, our hope but and

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us:

What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight,—they follow us with wings;

And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,

Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's

lance;

And, in the very pangs of death, he cried,

Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,

"Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my

death!"

So, underneath the belly of their steeds,

That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking

blood,

The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood :

I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage ;
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors !
Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pause again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine ;

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine ;
And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to Thou setter up and plucker down of kings !
Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
That to my foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul !
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand ;—and, gentle Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms :
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away ! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay ;
And call them pillars that will stand to us ;
And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As victors wear at the Olympian games :
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts ;

For yet is hope of life, and victory.
Foreslow no longer ; make we hence amain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone ;

Suppose this arm is for the duke of York,
And this for Rutland ; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone :

This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York,
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland ;

And here's the heart that triumphs in their death,

And cheers these hands, that slew thy sire and
To execute the like upon thyself ; [Brother,
And so, have at thee.

[They fight. Warwick enters ; Clifford flies.]

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase ;

For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter King, Gloucester, and others.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the king's war.

When dying clouds contend with

What time the shepherd, blowing of

Can neither call it perfect day, nor

Now sways it this way, like a mighty

For'd by the tide to combat with the

Now sways it that way, like the self

For'd to retire by fury of the wind

Sometime the flood prevails, and

Now one the better, then another

Both tugging to be victors, breast to

Yet neither conqueror nor conquer'd

So is the equal pole of this fall war

Here on this molehill will I sit me

To whom God will, there be the victors

For Margaret my queen, and Clifford

Have chid me from the battle ; sweet

They prosper best of all when I am

Would I were dead ! if God's good will

For what is in this world but grief and

O God ! methinks it were a happy life

To be no better than a homely swain,

To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

To carve out dials quaintly, point by Thereby to see the minutes how they

How many make the hour full complete

How many days bring about the year

How many years a mortal man may live

When this is known, then to divide the

So many hours must I tend my rest

So many hours must I take my rest

So many hours must I sport myself

So many hours must I sweat with

So many days my ewes have been with

So many weeks ere the poor fools will

So many years ere I shall shear the

So minutes, hours, days, months, and

Pass'd over to the end they were cre

Would bring white hairs unto a quick

Ab, what a life were this ! how lovely !

Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweet

To shepherds, looking on their silly

Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy

To kings, that fear their subjects' tr

O, yes, it doth ; a thousand-fold, it

And to conclude,—the shepherd's curds,

His cold thin drink out of his leather

His wonted sleep under a fresh tree

All which secure and sweetly he enjoy

Is far beyond a prince's delicacies

His viands sparkling in a golden bowl

His body couched in a curious bed

When care, mistrust, and treason walk

Alarum. Enter a Son that has been

Father, with the dead body

Son. Ill blows the wind that blows

This man whom hand to hand I slew

They never, then, had sprung like summer flies;

I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
Had left no mourning widows for our death;
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.

For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?— [wounds;

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight:
The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
For at their hands I have deserved no pity;
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.— [rest;

Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the
I stab'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast, [He faints.

Alarm and Retreat. Enter Edward, George,
Richard, Montague, Warwick, and Soldiers.
Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause, [looks.—

And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves,
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:

And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.
[Clifford groans and dies.

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave? [departing.

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's
Edw. See who it is: and, now the battle's ended,

If friend or foe, let him be gently us'd.
Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;

Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murl'ring knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,—

I mean, our princely father, duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,
Your father's head, which Clifford plac'd there.

Instead whereof, let this supply the room:
Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.
[Soldiers bring the body forward.

War. I think his understanding is bereft.—

Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who to thee?—

Dark cloudy death o'er shades his face,
And he nor sees, nor hears us, nor Rich. O, would he did! and he he doth:

'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter
Which in the time of death he gave

Geo. If so thou think'st, vox tuam
words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and Edw. Clifford, repent in blood.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for Geo. While we devise tell coward faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and Edw. Thou patied'st Rutland

thine.

Geo. Where's captain Marston?
War. They mock thee, Clifford:

thou wast wopt.

Rich. What, not an oath?—
world goes hard,

When Clifford cannot spare his
I know by that, he's dead; and

If this right hand would buy two
That I in all despite might rail at

This hand should chop it off; and issuing blood

Stille the villain, whose unshrunk
York and young Rutland could not

War. Ay, but he's dead: off with traitor's head,

And rear it in the place your father
And now to London with triumph

There to be crown'd England's king,
From whence shall Warwick call

France,
And ask the lady Bona for thy queen

So shalt thou sinew both these kingdoms
And, having France thy friend, thou dread

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise

For though they cannot greatly Yet look to have th' m' bat, to

First, will I see the coronation;
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea

To effect this marriage, so it please Edw. Even as thou wilt, and let it be;

For on thy shoulder do I build my
And never will I undertake the

Wherein thy counsel and command
Richard, I will create thee duke of

And George, of Clarence: Warwick
self,

Shall do and undo, as him please Rich. Let me be duke of Gloucester of Gloucester,

For Gloucester's dukedom is too much

War. Tut! that's a foolish brag;
Richard, be duke of Gloucester. No

To see these honours in possession.

ACT III.

Scene I.—A Chase in the North of England.
Hunters Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shoot ourselves; [come;
through this brake anon the deer will bring the principal of all the deer. [shoot.
Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may cross-bow That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
stand we both, and aim we at the best;
for the time shall not seem tedious,
till then what befell me on a day,
I'll tell thee here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Henry, disguised, with a prayer-book.
Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,
to meet mine own land with my wishful sight.
Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,
thy realm would'st off wherewith thou wast possessed:

Keepers. Who will call thee Caesar now, who will anointers press to speak for right,
who will a man comes for redress of thee;
can I help them, and not myself?
Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee;

Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversaries;
you men say it is the wisest course.
Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

Hen. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little of your queen and son are gone to France for aid; [wick
as I hear, the great commanding Warwick gone, to crave the French king's aid for Edward; if this news be true, Warwick and son, your labour is but lost;

this is a subtle orator, [words.
a prince soon won with moving count, then, Margaret may win him;
she's a woman to be pitied much:

she will make a battery in his breast;
she will pierce into a marble heart;
she will be mild whiles she doth mourn,
and then will be tainted with remorse,
and see her plights, her brinish tears.

on his left side, craving aid for Henry;
on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
And says—her Henry is depos'd;
and says—his Edward is install'd;

That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no
more;
Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength, —
And in conclusion wins the king from her, —
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support king Edward's place. [soul,

O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor
Art then forsaken, as thou wast't forlorn!
2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:
A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I!

2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert
a king. [that's enough.
K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and 2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown? [my head;

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on
Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content,
A crown it is, that seldom kings enjoy.

2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
Your crown content, and you, must be contented

To go along with us; for, as we think,
You are the king, king Edward hath depos'd:
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath? [not now.

2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was king of England?

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months
old;

My father and my grandfather were kings;
And you were sworn true subjects unto me:
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

1 Keep. No; [oaths?
For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe
a man?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear.
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for of that sin
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;

And be you kings, command, and I'll obey.
1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry, if he were seated as king Edward is.

1. Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and To go with us unto the officers. [In the king's,

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd: [Fora;

And what God will, that let your king per- And what he will, I humbly yield unto.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Clarence, and Lady Grey.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at St. Albans field [slain,

This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:

Her suit is now, to repossess those lands; Which we in justice cannot well deny,

Because in quarrel of the house of York The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your highness shall do well to grant It were dishonour to deny it her. [her suit;

K. Edw. It were no less: but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. [Aside to Clar.] Yea: is it so? I see, the lady hath a thing to grant

Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. [Aside to Glo.] He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind!

Glo. [Aside to Clar.] Silence! [suit;

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay: [now;

May it please your highness to resolve me And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.

Glo. [Aside.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases him shall please you. Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. [Aside.] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall. [vantages.

Glo. [Aside.] God forbid that, for he'll take K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.

Clar. [Aside.] I think, he means to beg a child of her.

Glo. [Aside.] Nay, whip me, then; he'll rather give her two.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. [Aside.] You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

K. Edw. 'Twere pity, they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.

Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave.

[Retiring with Clarence.

Till youth take leave, and leave you to the scratch.

K. Edw. Now, tell me, how love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love you.

K. Edw. And would you not do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good, I would do them harm.

K. Edw. Then get your husband to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto you.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these things be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.

K. Edw. What service will they give me?

L. Grey. What you command, that I will give them.

K. Edw. But you will take exception to me to do.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do more.

L. Grey. Why then, I will do more grace commands.

Glo. [Aside.] He plies her hard; rain wears the marble.

Clar. [Aside.] As red as fire is her wax must melt.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? I hear my task!

K. Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to be a subject.

L. Grey. That's soon performed, my lord.

K. Edw. Why then, thy husband freely give thee.

L. Grey. I take my leave with a sad thanks.

Glo. [Aside.] The match is made; it with a court'sy.

K. Edw. But stay thee; 'tis the love I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, loving liege.

K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, I shall get!

L. Grey. My love till death, my thanks, my prayers; and with that love which virtue begs, and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I shall not have such love.

L. Grey. Why, then you were thought you did.

K. Edw. But now you partly say my mind.

L. Grey. My mind will never give your highness aims at, if I aim at you.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I love thee with thee.

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I love thee with thee.

K. Edw. Why then, thou shalt have thy husband's lands.

L. Grey. Why then, mine husband's lands.

For by that loss I will not purchase

E. Hen. Thence thou wrought'st thy child- then mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both then and me.

E. Hen. I do not with the sadness of my suit: I do not with the sadness of my suit:

E. Hen. Ay, if thou wilt say ay, or no.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

L. Grey. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

E. Hen. Then, my lord, my suit is at request.

K. Edw. See that he is convey'd unto the Tower:

And go ye, brothers, to the man that took him, To question of his apprehension.—

Widow, go you along:—Jords, use her honour- ably.

[Exeunt King Edward, Lady Grey, Clarence, and Noblemen.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honour- ably.— [ull,

'Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and 'That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,

To cross me from the golden time I look for! And yet, between my soul's desire and me,

(The lastful Edward's title buried,) Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,

And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies, To take their rooms, ere I can place myself;

A cold premeditation for my purpose! Why then, I do but dream of sovereignty;

Like one that stands upon a promontory, And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,

Wishing his foot were equal with his eye; And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,

Saying he'll lade it dry to have his way: So do I wish the crown, being so far off;

And so I chide the means that keep me from it; And so I say I'll cut the causes off,

Flattering me with impossibilities. [much, My eye's too quick, my heart o'erween's too.

Unless my hand and strength could equal them, Well, say there is no kingdom, then, for Richard;

What other pleasure can the world afford? I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks, And deck my body in gay ornaments, [looks,

That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,

Seeking a way, and straying from the way ;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out,—
Torment myself to catch the English crown ;
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile ;
And cry, content, to that which grieves my heart ;

And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall ;
I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk ;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor ;
Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could ;
And, like a Sinon, take another Troy ;
I can add colours to the chameleon ;
Change shapes with Proteus, for advantages ;
And set the murd'rous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown ?
Tut ! were it further off, I'll pluck it down.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis, the French King, and Lady Bona, attended : the King takes his state. Then enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and the Earl of Oxford.

K. Lew. [Rising.] Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us : it ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand, while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France : now
Margaret

Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve,
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days :
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground ;
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair ?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears, [caves.]

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like thyself,

And sit thee by our side : [Seats her by him.]
yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief ;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-laid sorrows leave to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland, a forlorn ;

While proud ambitious Edward, dethroned,
Usurps the regal title, and the seat
Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret,
With this my son, prince Edward, have Am come to crave thy just aid and help.
And if thou fail us, all our hope is lost.
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot ;
Our people and our peers are both our foes.
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
And, as thou seest, ourselves in deep distress.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break
Q. Mar. The more we stay, the grows our foe,

K. Lew. The more I stay, the succour thee.

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth
And see where comes the brother of our king.

Enter Warwick, attended.

K. Lew. What's his, approacheth
our presence ?

Q. Mar. Our earl of Warwick, greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick !
Brings thee to France ?

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second rise :

For this is he that moves both wind and War. From worthy Edward, King of My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed
I come, in kindness and unfeigned love.

First, to do greetings to thy royal
And then, to crave a league of amity.

And lastly, to confirm that amity
With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe
That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, thy is done.

War. [To Bona.] And, gracious
our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with you
To tell the passion of my sovereign's love.

Where fame, late entering at his side,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy
Q. Mar. King Lewis, and lady Bona, me speak,

Before you answer Warwick. His desire Springs not from Edward's well-meaning
love,

But from deceit, bred by necessity.
For how can tyrants safely govern
Unless abroad they purchase great aid ?

To prove him tyrant this reason may be
That Henry liveth still ; but were he dead, Yet here prince Edward stands, that is son.

Look therefore, Lewis, that by this and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and distress.

though usurpers away the rule a while,
The heavens are just, and time suppresseth
The injurious Margaret! [wrongs.]

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art prince, than she is queen.
Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And after John of Gaunt, Henry the fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And after that wise prince, Henry the fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France:
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse,
Thou dost not how Henry the sixth hath lost
at that which Henry the fifth had gotten?
Oxf. These peers of France should smile

at that.
For the rest, you tell a pedigree
Of three score and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,
And not obeyest thirty and six years,

And not bewray thy treason with a blush?
War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Once buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
Oxf. I leave Henry, and call Edward

king.
Oxf. Call him my king, by whose injurious and elder brother, the lord Aubrey Vere, [doom] was done to death? and more than so, my

father,
Was in the downfall of his mellow'd years,

Whom nature brought him to the door of death?
Oxf. Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
I will uphold the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.
Oxf. Queen Margaret, prince Edward,

and Oxford,
At our request, to stand aside.

Oxf. I use further conference with Warwick.
Oxf. Mar. Heaven grant, that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

Oxf. Now, Prince Edward and Oxford.

Oxf. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,
Wouldst thou with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine
honour.

Oxf. Mar. But is he gracious in the people's
eyes?
Oxf. The more, that Henry was unfortunate.

Oxf. Mar. Then further, all dissembling set aside,
Did he for truth the measure of his love

show our sister Bonn.
Oxf. Mar. Such it seems,
As my bosom a monarch like himself.

Oxf. Mar. I have often heard him say, and swear,
That his love was an eternal plant,

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's
sun;

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the lady Bonn quit his pain.

K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve. [mine:]

Bonn. Your grant, or your denial, shall be [To War.] Yet I confess, that often ere this day,
When I have heard your king's desert recounted,

Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus,—our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn Touching the jointure that your king must make, [pois'd.]—

Which with her dowry shall be counter-
Draw near, queen Margaret, and be a witness,

That Bonn shall be wife to the English king.
Prince. To Edward, but not to the English

king. [device]
Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy
By this alliance to make void my suit:

Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry's friend.
K. Lew. And still is friend to him and

Margaret;
But if your title to the crown be weak,

As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd.

From giving aid which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand,

That your estate requires, and mine can yield.
War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his

case,
Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.

And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you;

And better 'twere you troubled him than France.
Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless

Warwick, peace;
Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings!

I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold!

Thy sly conveyance, and thy lord's false love;
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A horn sounded within.]
K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us, or thee.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,

Sent from your brother, marquis Montague:—
These from our king unto your majesty:—

[To Margaret.] And, madam, these for you:
from whom I know not.

[They all read their letters.]
Oxf. I like it well, that our fair queen and

mistress
Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps, as he were nettled:

I hope all's for the best.

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news! and yours, fair queen!

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys, [content.

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's-disk.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the lady Grey?

And now, to soothe your forgery and his, send me a paper to persuade me patience!

Is this th' alliance that he seeks with France? Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before: [honesty.

This proveth Edward's love, and Warwick's War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;

Ne more my king, for he dishonours me; But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget, that by the house of York My father came untimely to his death?

Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? Did I impale him with the regal crown?

Did I put Henry from his native right? And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?

Shame on himself! for my desert is honour: And, to repair my honour, lost for him,

I here renounce him, and return to Henry: My noble queen, let former grudges pass,

And henceforth I am thy true servitor: I will revenge his wrong to lady Bona,

And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, And joy that thou becom'st king Henry's friend. [feign'd friend,

War. So much his friend, ay, his un- That, if king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us

With some few bands of chosen soldiers, I'll undertake to land them on our coast,

And force the tyrant from his seat by war. 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:

And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, He's very likely now to fall from him,

For matching more for wanton lust than honour,

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd,

But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live,

Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one. [yours.

War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's. Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd

You shall have aid. Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's interest in post,

And tell false Edward, thy supposed That Lewis of France is sending over

To revel it with him and his new bride. Thou seest what's past! go far withal. Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake. Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning

And I am ready to put armour on. War. Tell him from me, that he me wrong: And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere

There's thy reward: he gone. [But, War,

K. Lew. Thou and Oxford, with five thousand

Shall cross the seas, and bid false battle;

And, as occasion serves, this noble And prince shall follow with a fresh

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant That if our queen and this young prince

I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my To him forthwith in holy wedlock

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank your motion.

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous. Therefore delay not, give thy hand

And, with thy hand, thy faith prove. That only Warwick's daughter shall Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she serves it;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give [He gives his hand to

K. Lew. Why stay we now! Thou shall be levied,

And thou, lord Bonbon, our high Shall waft them over with our royal

I long, till Edward fall by war's true For mocking marriage with a dame

[Escort all except War. I came from Edward as an

But I return his sworn and mortal Matter of marriage was the charge

But dreadful war shall answer his Had he none else to make a stale

Then none but I shall turn his I was the chief that rais'd him down

And I'll be chief to bring him down Not that I pity Henry's misery,

But seek revenge on Edward's mockery

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, and others. Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence,

think you

of the new marriage with the lady Grey?
 Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to
 France;

How could he stay till Warwick made return?
 My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

And his well-chosen bride. [think.
 I mind to tell him plainly what I think. Enter King Edward, attended;
 the king, and others.

Now, brother Clarence, how like you our choice;

As well as Lewis of France, or the end of Warwick; [ment,

And they'll take no offence at our abuse.
 Suppose they take offence without cause, [Edward,

 we are but Lewis and Warwick: I am the king and Warwick's, and must have my will. [four king:

 And you shall have your will, because the king's marriage seldom proveth well.

Yea, brother Richard, are you the king's I forbid, that I should wish them

world. [I were pity,
 And you both join'd together: ay, and the king's, setting your scorn and your mis-

like aside,
 will you some reason why the lady Grey should not become my wife, and England's queen. [queen:

 Truly what you think.
 Then this is mine opinion, that king

your enemy, for mocking him [Lewis
 the king's marriage of the lady Bona.
 the king and Warwick, doing what you gave

in charge,
 dishonour'd by this new marriage.
 the king. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd

 by reversion as I can devise?
 the king. Yet, to have join'd with France in such alliance, [monwealth will more have strengthen'd this our com-the king's marriage, than any home-bred foreign storms,

 the king. Why, knows not Montague, that of the king's marriage, is safe, if true within itself? [itself the king. But the safer, when 'tis back'd with the king's marriage, [France:

 the king. 'Tis better using France, than trusting the king's marriage, to be back'd with God, and with the seas,

 the king's marriage, and in our hands only defend ourselves;
 the king's marriage, For this one speech lord Hastings

the king's marriage, well deserves
 the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

the king's marriage, the heir of the lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant;

And for this once my will shall stand for law.
 Glo. And yet methinks your grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of lord Scalus
 Unto the brother of your loving bride;
 She better would have fitted me, or Clarence:

But in your bride you bury brotherhood.
 Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir

Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
 And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife [thee.
 That thou art discontent? I will provide Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgment,

 Which being shallow, you shall give me leave

To play the broker in mine own behalf;
 And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be king,
 And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleased his
 To raise my state to title of a queen, [majesty
 Do me but right, and you must all confess

That I was not ignoble of descent;
 And meaner that myself have had like fortune.

But as this title honours me and mine,
 So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
 Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns;

What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,
 So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
 And their true sovereign, whom they must obey!

 Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
 Unless they seek for hatred at my hands;

Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
 And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glo. [Aside.] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger.
 K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or
 From France? [what news

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words;

But such as I, without your special pardon,
 Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore,
 in brief, [thence.
 Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess

What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters!

Mess. At my depart these were his very
 words:

"Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
 That Lewis of France is sending over muskers,
 To revel it with him and his new bride."

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry.

But what said lady Bona to my marriage?

Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain: [shortly,
"Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake."

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less; [sweetly
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's
For I have heard, that she was there in place.

Mess. "Tell him," quoth she, "my mourning weeds are done,
And I am ready to put armour on." [Amazon.

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incens'd against your majesty [words:
Than all the rest, discharged me with these

"Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere't be long."

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship, [wick's daughter.

That young prince Edward marries War-
Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself. [riage
You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.
Glo. [Aside.] Not I.

My thoughts aim at a further matter; I Shall not for love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case.
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war:
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exit Pembroke and Stafford.
But ere I go, Hastings and Montague,
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance:

Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him:
I rather wish you foes, than hollow friends:
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true! [cause]

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's
K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us! [you]

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I victorious.

Now therefore let us hence; and let us
Till we meet Warwick with his forces.

SCENE II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.
Enter Warwick and Oxford, with other forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all but well;

The common people by numbers well;
Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But see where Somerset and Clarence Speak suddenly, my lords,—are we not

Clar. Fear not that, my lord.

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome
And welcome Somerset; I hold it

To rest mistrustful where a noble
Hath pawn'd an open hand in

Else might I think that Clarence
brother,

Were but a feign'd friend to our
But welcome, sweet Clarence; rather shall be thine.

And now what rests, but in night
Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd

His soldiers lurking in the towns
And but attended by a simple guard

We may surprise and take him
Our scouts have found the Diamond

That as Ulysses, and stout Diomed With sleight and manhood stole the tents,

And brought from thence the Palladium

So we, well cover'd with the night mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward
And seize himself; I say not, Edward

For I intend but only to surprise
You, that will follow me to this advantage

Applaud the name of Henry with [They all cry]

Why, then, let's on our way in
For Warwick and his friends,

George!

SCENE III.—Edward's Camp near Enter certain Watchmen to guard the 1 Watch. Come on, my masters, take his stand;

The king, by this, is set him down
2 Watch. What, will he not to bed?

1 Watch. Why, no; for he has solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest Till Warwick or himself be quite

2 Watch. To-morrow, then, be the day,

3 Watch. But say, I pray, is that,

That with the king here resteth

1. War. 'Tis the lord Hastings, the king's
 2. War. O, is it so? But why commands
 3. War. 'Tis the more honour, because
 4. War. Ay, but give me worship and
 5. War. O, better than a dangerous honour.

6. War. Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
 7. War. Unless our halberds did shut up
 8. War. Ay, wherefore else guard we his
 9. War. Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset,
 10. War. and forces.

11. War. This is his tent; and see, where
 12. War. stand my masters: honour now, or never!

13. War. Now me, and Edward shall be ours.
 14. War. Who goes there?

15. War. Stay, or thou diest.
 16. War. And the rest cry all—"Warwick!

17. War. Warwick!" and set upon the guard; who
 18. War. crying—"Arm! Arm!" Warwick,

19. War. and the rest, following them.
 20. War. And trumpets sounding, re-

21. War. ward Warwick, and the rest, bringing the
 22. War. king out in his gown, sitting in a chair.

23. War. And Hastings fly.
 24. War. What are they that fly there?

25. War. Here's the duke.
 26. War. The duke! why, Warwick, when

27. War. I parted last,
 28. War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:

29. War. I degraded me in my embassy,
 30. War. and now you duke of York.

31. War. How should you govern any kingdom,
 32. War. how not how to use ambassadors;

33. War. how to be contented with one wife;
 34. War. how to use your brothers brotherly;

35. War. how to study for the people's welfare;
 36. War. how to shroud yourself from enemies!

37. War. Yes, brother of Clarence, art thou
 38. War. here too?

39. War. Then, I see that Edward needs must
 40. War. Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

41. War. and all thy complices,
 42. War. and will always bear himself as king;

43. War. Fortune's malice overthrow my state,
 44. War. and exceeds the compass of her wheel.

45. War. Then, for his mind, be Edward Eng-
 46. War. land's king:

47. War. [Takes off his crown.
 48. War. Now shall we wear the English crown,

49. War. and the true king indeed; then but the
 50. War. shadow.

51. War. I, Somerset, at my request,
 52. War. will forthwith duke Edward be convey'd

53. War. to his brother, archbishop of York. [Follows,
 54. War. and I have fought with Pembroke and his

55. War. I'll follow you, and tell what answer
 56. War. Lewis, and the lady Bona, send to him:

57. War. Now, for a while farewell, good duke of York.
 58. War. K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must

59. War. needs abide;
 60. War. It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

61. War. [Exit, led out; Somerset with him.
 62. War. Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to

63. War. But march to London with our soldiers! [Edw., 64. War. War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have

65. War. to do;
 66. War. To free king Henry from imprisonment,

67. War. And see him seated in the regal throne.
 68. War. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth and Rivers.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,

What late misfortune is befallen king Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then, is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,
 Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares:

And, as I farther have to understand,
 Is now committed to the bishop of York,

Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.
 Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of

grief;
 Yet, gracious madam, hear it as you may:

Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day,
 Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.

 And I the rather wean me from despair,

For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
 This is it that makes me bridle passion,

And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;
 Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,

And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
 Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown

King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.
 Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

 Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London,

 To set the crown once more on Henry's head:

Guess thou the rest; king Edward's friends must down.

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,
 (For trust not him that hath once broken faith,)

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
 To save at least the heir of Edward's right:

There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
 Come, therefore, let us fly while we may fly:

If Warwick take us, we are sure to die.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter Gloster, Hastings, Sir William Stanley, and others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley, leave off to wonder why I drew you hither, into this chiefest thicket of the park. Thus stands the case: you know, our king, my brother, is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands he hath good usage and great liberty; and often, but attended with weak guard, comes hunting this way to disport himself. I have advertis'd him my secret means, that if about this hour he make this way, under the colour of his usual game, he shall here find his friends, with horse and to set him free from his captivity. [men, Enter King Edward and a Huntsman.]

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand. [rest, Now, brother of Gloster, lord Hastings, and the Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?]

Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste:

Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whether shall we then?

Hunt. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning. [ness, K. Edw. Stanley, I will require thy forward-]

Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk. [thou go along?]

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt Hunt. Better do so, than tarry and be hang'd. [ado, Glo. Come then, away; let's have no more]

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown;

And pray that I may repossess the crown. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, Young Richmond, Oxford, Montague, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master Lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat, And turn'd my captive state to liberty,

My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys, At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieut. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But if a humble prayer may prevail, I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thee for that it made my imprisonment. Ay, such a pleasure as engaged him. Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts, At last, by notes of household love, They quite forget their loss of life. But, Warwick, after God, thou say'st And chiefly therefore I thank God, He was the author, thou the instrument. Therefore, that I may conquer fortune, By living low, where fortune cannot find me; And that the people of this blessed land May not be punish'd with my downfall, Warwick, although my head still be, I here resign my government to thee. For thou art fortunate in all thy doings.

War. Your grace hath still been virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as victors, By spying and avoiding fortune's snare.

For few men rightly temper with the world. Yet in this one thing let me blame you: For choosing me when Clarence is dead.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art wrong. To whom the heavens, in thy nation's Adjudg'd an olive branch, and peace, As likely to be blest in peace, and so.

And therefore I yield thee my brother's

War. And I choose Clarence only

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why then, though both be

We'll yoke together, like a double

To Henry's body, and supply his place.

I mean, in bearing weight of government.

While he enjoys the honour, and the

And, Clarence, now then, it is our

Forthwith that Edward be

And all his lands and goods be

Clar. What else? and that

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall

K. Hen. But, with the first of all

Let me entreat, (for I command not)

That Margaret your queen, and

Edward,

Be sent for, to return from France

For, till I see them here, by doing

My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my

K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth

My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope:

But (till to his head.) If secret powers

Be full of peaceful majesty;

And to wear a crown,

And himself

War. What news, my friend? [brother,

That Edward is escaped from your

Unsaucy news! but how made he

How he was convey'd by Richard duke of

Gloster,

And the bishop's huntsman rescu'd him;

My brother was too careless of his

For my sake that may betide.

War. King Henry, War, Clar., Lieut.,

My lord, I like not of this flight of

That we shall have more wars before't be long.

My heart with hope of this young

That may tell him, in these conflicts

Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,

Which we'll send him hence to Brittany,

For if Edward repossess the crown,

Let Richmond with the rest shall Therefore, let's about it speedily.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Before York.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Hastings, and

Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, lord Hast-

For fortune maketh us amends,

That once more I shall interchange

For Henry's regal crown.

Which we pass'd, and now repay'd the seas,

Which then remain, we being thus arriv'd

From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of

York.

Glo. The gates made fast!—Brother, I like not this;

For many men that stumble at the threshold,

Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man! abodeiments must not now fright us.

By fair or foul means we must enter in,

For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the Mayor of York and Aldermen.

May. My lords, we were forewarn'd of your

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;

For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be

your king,

Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York.

May. True, my good lord, I know you for no less. [my dukedom, K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but

As being well content with that alone.

Glo. [Aside.] But when the fox hath once

got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates; we are king Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so, the gates shall then be open'd. [Exit, with Aldermen, above, Glo. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded. [all were well, Hast. The good old man would fain that

So 'twere not long of him; but being enter'd,

I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade

Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor and Aldermen, below, K. Edw. So, master mayor, those gates must not be shut,

But in the night, or in the time of war.

What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys,

[Takes his keys, For Edward will defend the town and thee,

And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Drum. Enter Montgomery and forces, marching.

Glo. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,

Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

K. Edw. Welcome, sir John; but why come you in arms?

Mont. To help king Edward in his time of

As every loyal subject ought to go. [storm, K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim

Our dukedom, till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence

again:

I came to serve a king, and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A march begun, K. Edw. Nay, stay, sir John, a while; and we'll debate,

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.]

Have sold their lives unto the house of York;
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.
Enter Clarence, with forces, drum, and colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,
Of force enough to bid his brother battle;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails,
More than the nature of a brother's love!
Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick
call.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what [Taking the red rose out of his hat.]
Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:
I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou,
Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war
Against his brother, and his lawful king?
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:
To keep that oath, were more impiety
Than Jephtha's, when he sacrificed his daughter.
I am so sorry for my trespass made,
That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,
I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;
With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee if thou stir abroad,)
To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.
Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;
And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,
Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like. [Just!]

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and un-K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:

Lords, to the field; Saint George, and victory!

[March. Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Alarums and Excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing in Warwick, wounded.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.
Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. [Exit.]

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe,

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?
Why ask I that! my mangled body shows,

My blood, my want of strength, my shows,

That I must yield my body to the
And, by my fall, the conquest to Thus yields the cedar to the axe,
Whose arms gave shelter to the pine;
Under whose shade the rambling ivy Whose top-branch overpeer'd a dove's
tree,
And kept low shrubs from winter's These eyes, that now are dimm'd with black veil,

Have been as piercing as the mid-day
To search the secret treasons of the
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd
Were likeli'd oft to kingly sepulchres,
For who liv'd king, but I could die
And who durst smile when Warwick
brow?

Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and
My parks, my walks, my manors Even now forsake me; and, of all my is nothing left me, but my body's Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we [Enter Oxford and Somers.]

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick, how as we are,

We might recover all our loss again,
The queen from France hath brought sant power;

Even now we heard the news:—
War. Why, then, I would not Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take
And with thy lips keep in my soul
Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if Thy tears would wash this cold
blood,

That glues my lips, and will not let me
Come quickly, Montague, or I am
[Exit.]

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague
his last;

And to the latest gasp, cried out for
And said—"Commend me to my
brother."

And more he would have said; and
Which sounded like a cannon to That might not be distinguish'd; but I well might hear, deliver'd with a
"O farewell, Warwick!"

War. Sweet rest his soul!
Fly, lords, and save yourselves; for
You all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the power.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Flourish. Enter King Edward, with with Clarence, Gloster, and the K. Edw. Thus far our fortune upward course,

we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
In the midst of this bright-shining day,
A black, suspicious, threatening cloud,
Will encounter with our glorious sun,
To stain his careless western bed:
O lords, those powers that the queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast,
And we hear, march on to fight with us.
A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,
And show it to the source from whence it came:
Very beams will dry those vapours up;
The very cloud engenders not a storm.
The queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,
Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
We have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
The less will be fall as strong as ours.
We are advertis'd by our loving friends [bury:]
To hold their course toward Tewkesbury now the best at Barnet field,
As straight, for willingness rides way;
Our strength will be angry county as we go along. [mented up the drum; cry Courage! and away.
[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewkesbury.
[Enter Queen Margaret, Princes
Edward, Somerset, Oxford, and Soldiers.
Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and watch their loss,
They seek how to redress their harms.
Though the mast be now blown overboard,
And our sailors swallow'd in the flood;
Our pilot still is't meet that he
Have the helm, and, like a fearful lad,
Give more strength to that which hath
too much;
In his mean, the ship splits on the rock,
Industry and courage might have sav'd?
Alas! ah, what a fault were this!
Which was our anchor; what of that?
Which was our top-mast; what of him?
Which friends the tackles; what of
them?
[Enter Oxford here, another anchor I
Somerset, another goodly mast! [ling!
Which of France our shrouds and tackles unskillful, why not Ned and I Should the skilful pilot's charge!
Not from the helm, to sit and weep;
On our course, though the rough wind [wreck.
And rocks that threaten us with Edward but a ruthless sea!
But a quicksand of deceit!
But a ragged fatal rock!
The enemies to our poor bark.

Say, you can swim; alas, 'tis but awhile:
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly
sink:

Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,
Or else you finish, that's a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
In case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers,

More than with ruthless waves, with sands,
and rocks.

Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
'Twere childish weakness to lament, or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these Infuse his breast with magnanimity, [words,
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
I speak not this, as doubting any here;

For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes;
Lest, in our need, he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himself.

If any such be here, as God forbid!
Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage!

And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.— [father

O brave young prince! thy famous grand-
Doth live again in thee: long mayst thou live
To bear his image, and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a
hope,

Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset;—sweet
Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at Ready to fight; therefore be resolute. [hand,

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see you forwardness. [not budg.

Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will March. Enter, at a distance, King Edward,
Clarence, Gloster, and forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood, [strength,

Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out:

Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what I should say,

My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.

Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your
sovereign,

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
You fight in justice; then, in God's name,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight. [Lords, [Exeunt both armies.

SCENE V.—Another part of the Same.

Alarums; Excursions; and afterwards a retreat. Then enter King Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and forces; with Queen Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.
Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle straight;
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.
Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak. [words.

Off. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.
Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. [world, K. Edw. In proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and be his life?
Glo. It is; and lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince Edward.
K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What, can so young a thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!
Suppose, that I am now my father's mouth;
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to. [resolv'd]

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so
Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat, [caster.

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lan-
Prince. Let Aëop fable in a winter's night;
His curish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word. [to men.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague
Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.
Prince. I know my duty; you are all undutiful;

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjurd George,
And thou misshapen Dick, I tell ye all,

I am your better, traitors as ye are,
And thou usurp'st my father's right.
K. Edw. Take that, the wrong ruler here.

Glo. Sprawl'st thou! take that, the wrong agony.

Clar. And there's for twitting perjury.

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!
Glo. Marry, and shall. [When K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, hold, done too much.

Glo. Why should she live, to fill with words?

K. Edw. What, doth she swoon for her recovery?

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to
brother;

I'll hence to London on a serious
Ere ye come thence, be sure to hear Clar. What? what?

Glo. The Tower! the Tower!
Q. Mar. O, Ned, sweet Ned! my mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak?—O traitor,
They that stabb'd Caesar shed no
Did not offend, nor were not wrong'd.

If this foul deed were by, to equal
He was a man; this, in respect,
And men ne'er spend their fury on What's worse than murderer, that I

No, no, my heart will burst, and I
And I will speak, that so my heart
Butchers and villains! bloody

How sweet a plant have you untimely
You have no children, butchers!
The thought of them would have
But if you ever chance to have
Look in his youth to have him
As, deathsmen! you have rid the prince!

K. Edw. Away with her!
hence perforce.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear
spatch me here;
Here sheath thy sword, I'll

What, wilt thou not?—then,
thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will
Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do
ence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis What, wilt thou not? Where butcher,

Hard-favour'd Richard! Richard!
Thou art not here: murder
Petitioners for blood thou art!

K. Edw. Away, I say; I her hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you and this prince! [Exit,

Where's Richard gone? [guess,
To London, all in post; and, as I see, a bloody supper in the Tower.
He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.
[sort we hence; discharge the common pay and thanks, and let's away to London,
our gentle queen how well she fares;
I hope, she hath a son for me.

VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.
Henry is discovered sitting with a book
in his hand, the Lieutenant attending.
Cloister.

Good day, my lord. What, at your look so hard?
Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I
to better, good was little better;
thunder and good devil were alike, [lord.
both preposterous; therefore, not good to err, leave us to ourselves: we must [Exit Lieutenant.

So flies the reckless shepherd from the fold:
the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
at his throat unto the butcher's knife.
Of death hath Roscius now to act?
Fiction always haunts the guilty
soul:

I doth hear each bush an officer.
The bird that hath been limed in a bush,
adding wings misdotheth every bush;
at the hollow snare to one sweet bird,
the fatal object in my eye,
my poor young was lim'd, was caught,
and kill'd:

Why, what a peevish fool was that of his son the office of a fowl;
for, lo! his wings, the fool was drown'd.
Dadalus; my poor boy, I fear us;
thine, that denied our course;
that ear'd the wings of my sweet boy,
Edward; and thyself, the sea,
me with thy weapon, not with words!
can better brook thy dagger's point,
in my ears that tragic history. [life!
Think'st thou I am an executioner?

A persecutor, I am sure, thou art:
thou art an executioner.
son I kill'd for his presumption.
Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,
thou hadst liv'd to kill a son of mine.

I prophesy,—that many a thousand,
from my old man's sigh, and many a so orphan's water-standing eye,—

Men for their sons', wives for their husbands'
fate,
And orphans for their parents' timeless death,—
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees!

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's
hope;
To wit, an indigested and deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. [born,
Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast
To signify, thou cam'st to bite the world:
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou cam'st—

Glo. I'll hear no more;—Die, prophet, in thy speech! [Stabs him.
For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.
H. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.
O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee!

Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster [mounted.
Sink in the ground? I thought it would have See how my sword weeps for the poor king's
death!
O, may such purple tears be always shed
From those that wish the downfall of our
If any spark of life be yet remaining, [house!
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee
thither. [Stabs him again.
I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.
Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say,
I came into the world with my legs forward;
Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?
The midwife wonder'd; and the women cried,
"O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!"
And so I was; which plainly signified
That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.
Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother;
And this word—love,—which greybeards call
divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me: I am myself alone.
Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the
But I will sort a pitchy day for thee; [light;
For I will buz abroad such prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone;
Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad, till I be best.
I'll throw thy body in another room;
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

King Edward is discovered sitting on his throne; Queen Elizabeth with the infant Prince, Clarence, Gloster, Hastings, and others near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride?
Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions:
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;
And two Northumberlands, two braver men
Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound;
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick
and Montague,
That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security.
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy;
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself
Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.
Glo. [Aside.] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;

And heave it shall some weight, or back:

Work thou the way, and thou shalt work
K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloster, lovely queen;

And kiss your princely nephew, brother
Clar. The duty that I owe unto majesty,

I seal upon the lips of this sweet tale.
K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence, brother, thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from which thou sprang'st,
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.

[Aside.] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd Master,

And cried—all hail! when as he wrought harm.

K. Edw. Now am I scolded at delights.

Having my country's peace, and my Clar. What will your grace have Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the king of France,
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem.

And hither have they sent it for her ransom.
K. Edw. Away with her, and wait on her to France.

And now what rests, but that we should
time

With stately triumphs, mirthful shows,
Such as befit the pleasure of the court.

Sound, drums and trumpets!—farewell, annoy!

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Edward the Fourth.
 Edward, Prince of Wales,
 afterwards King Edward V.
 Richard, Duke of York,
 George, Duke of Clarence,
 Richard, Duke of Gloucester,
 afterwards King Richard III.,
 the young Son of Clarence.
 Henry, Earl of Richmond; afterwards King Henry VII.
 Cardinal Beuchier, Archbishop of Canterbury.
 Thomas Rotherham, Archbishop of York.
 John Morton, Bishop of Ely.
 John de Buckingham.
 John de Norfolk; Earl of Surrey, his Son.
 John Rivers, Brother to King Edward's Queen;
 Margaret of Dorset, and Lord Grey, her Earl of Oxford. Lord Hastings.

Lord Stanley. Lord Lovel.
Sir Thomas Vaughan. Sir Richard Ratcliff.
Sir William Catesby. Sir James Tyrrel.
Sir James Blount. Sir Walter Herbert.
Sir Robert Brakenbury, Lieutenant of the Tower. [Priest.
Christopher Urswick, a Priest. Another
Lord Mayor of London. Sheriff of Wiltshire.
Elizabeth, Queen of King Edward IV.
Margaret, Widow of King Henry VI.
Duchess of York, Mother to King Edward IV., Clarence, and Gloster.
Lady Anne, Widow of Edward, Prince of Wales, Son to King Henry VI.; afterwards married to the Duke of Gloster.
Lady Margaret Plantagenet, a young Daughter of Clarence.
Lords, and other Attendants; two Gentlemen, a Pursuivant, Scrivener, Citizens, Murderers, Messengers, Ghosts, Soldiers, &c.

SCENE,—England.

ACT I.

ACT I.
SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Gloucester.
 O! Now is the winter of our discontent
 A glorious summer by this sun of York;
 And all the clouds, that lower'd upon our
 house,
 The deep bosom of the ocean buried.
 Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
 Our broken arms hung up for monuments;
 Our stern alarms changed to merry meetings,
 Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
 'Twas thus our long'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
 And now — instead of mounting barb'd steeds,
 To fright the souls of fearful adversaries, —
 He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
 To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
 But, that I am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
 And made to court an amorous looking-glass;
 That I am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
 majesty,
 To countenance a wanton ambling nymph;
 That I am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
 That I am brief of feature by dissembling nature,
 That I am short of breath by this short time
 And that so lamely and unfashionable,

That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them :—
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my shadow in the sun,
And descant on mine own deformity :
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determin'd to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate the one against the other :
And, if king Edward be as true and just,
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says, that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here
Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, guarded, and Brakenbury.
 Brother, good day: what means this armed
 That waits upon your grace? [guard,

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause ?

Clar. Because my name is George.
Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours :

He should, for that, commit your godfathers.
O, belike his majesty hath some intent
That you should be new christen'd in the Tower.

But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I
As yet I do not; but, as I can learn, [protest
He hearkens after prophecies and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says a wizard told him, that by G
His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.
These, as I learn, and such like toys as these,
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women:

'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower;
My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she
That tempers him to this extremity.

Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her brother there, [Tower,
That made him send lord Hastings to the
From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think there is no man secure,

But the queen's kindred, and night-walking
That trudge betwixt the king and mistress Shore.

Heard you not, what a humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.
I'll tell you what, I think it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her men, and wear her livery:
The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-
women,

Are mighty gossips in our monarchy. [me:

Brak. I beseech your graces both to pardon
His majesty hath straitly given in charge
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with your brother.

Glo. Even so, an please your worship,
Brakenbury,

You may partake of anything we say:
We speak no treason, man;—we say the king
Is wise and virtuous; and his noble queen
Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous;—
We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue; [folks:

And that the queen's kindred are made gentle-
How say you, sir? can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have naught to do.

Glo. Naught to do with mistress Shore? I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brak. What one, my lord? [betray me?

Glo. Her husband, knave: wouldst thou

Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon and withal,

Forbear your conference with the noble Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen's attendants,
Brother, farewell: I will unto the king.
And whatsoever you will employ me in,
Were it to call king Edward's widow,
I will perform it to enfranchise you.
Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of you

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall
I will deliver you, or else lie for you.
Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce:

[Exeunt Clarence, Brakenbury, and Glo. Go, tread the path that leads to ne'er return,

Simple, plain Clarence! I do love thee
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands.
But who comes here? the new delivered?

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my lord!

Glo. As much unto my good lord!
Well are you welcome to this open air.
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as I must:

But I shall live, my lord, to give thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his
And have prevail'd as much on him, as on me.

Hast. More pity, that the eagle should mew'd,

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.
Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad,
The king is sickly, weak, and near his end,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by St. Paul, this news
O, he hath kept an evil diet long.

And over-much consumed his royal
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.
Glo. Go you before, and I will follow.

He cannot live, I hope, and must needs Till George be pack'd with postmen
heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty reasons.

And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live.

Which done, God takes king Edward's
And leave the world for me to live.

For then I'll marry Warwick's daughter.

But though I kill'd her husband, and her
father!
The readiest way to make the wench amends,
Is to become her husband, and her father:
Which will I; not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
To marry her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market:
Gentlemen still breathe; Edward still lives and reigns:
When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

Scene II.—London. Another Street.
Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth, laid in an open coffin; Gentlemen bearing hobblers to guard it; and Lady Anne, as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,—
Your honour may be shrouded in a hearse,— Whilst I a while obsequiously lament
The icy-cold figure of a holy king!
The walls of the house of Lancaster!
A bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
How lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
To witness the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Murder'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds!

How in these windows, that let forth thy life,
How in the helpless balm of my poor eyes:
How in the hand that made these holes!
How in the heart, that had the heart to do it!
How in the blood, that let this blood from
hence!

How dreadful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wratched by the death of thee,
That I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
And untimely brought to light,
To meet the hopeful mother at the view;
That he be heir to his unhappiness!
How have wife, let her be made Miserable by the death of him,
That I am made by my young lord, and thee!
How now toward Chertsey with your holy
load,

How from Paul's to be interred there;
How still, as you are weary of the weight,
How you, whilst I lament King Henry's corpse,
The bearers take up the corpse and advance.
Enter Gloucester.

Glouc. Stay, you that bear the corpse, and set it down.
Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
That doth devoted clugitable deeds!
Glouc. Villains, set down the corpse; or, by Saint Paul,
I'll make a corpse of him that disobeys!

I Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass. [command]

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I
Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.
[The bearers set down the coffin.]

Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?

Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.
Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell!

Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have; therefore, begone.

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so cruel.
Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake hence, and trouble us not!

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep exclaims.

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.

O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congel'd mouths, and bleed afresh!

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, [dwells];
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.

O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his
death!

O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his
death!

Either, heaven, with lightning strike the murderer dead;

Or, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

nor man:
Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

[beast.
Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no Anne. O wonderful! when devils tell the truth!

[angry.
Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed crimes, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself. [man,
Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Foulter than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

Glo. By such despair, I should accuse myself.
Anne. And by despairing, shalt thou stand excus'd;

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo. Say that I slew them not!

Anne. Then say they were not slain :
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.
Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.
Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest : queen
Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood ;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,

But that thy brothers beat aside the point.
Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue.

That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.
Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,

That never dreamt on aught but butcheries :
Didst thou not kill this king ?

Glo. I grant ye.
Anne. Dost grant me, hedge-hog ! then,
God grant me too,

Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed !
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous.

Glo. The sinner for the King of heaven, that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt Glo. Let him thank me, that help'd to send him thither ;

For he was sinner for that place than earth.
Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me Anne. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber.
Anne. Ill rest beside the chamber where thou liest !

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
Anne. I hope so.

Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method,
Is not the cause of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner ?

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accurs'd effect.

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So might I live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck ;

You should not blemish it, if I stood by :
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that ; it is my day, my life.

Anne. Black night o'ershades thy day, and death thy life !

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature ; thou Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee,

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon me.
Glo. He lives that loves thee better than himself.

Anne. Name him.
Glo. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why, that was my husband.
Glo. The self-same name, but one of another name.

Anne. Where is he ?
Glo. Here. [She spits at him.]

Thou spit at me !
Anne. Would it were mortal poison, that sake !

Glo. Never came poison from a lady's mouth.
Anne. Never hung poison on a lady's tongue.

Out of my sight ! thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have mine eyes.

Anne. Would they were basilisks to kill thee.
Glo. I would they were, that I might kill thee.

For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of salt tears,
These eyes, which never shed remembrance
No, when my father York and Edward
To hear the piteous moan that Richard
When black-faced Clifford shook his head at him :

Nor when thy wardlike father, like a eagle,
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause, to weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks
Like trees bedash'd with rain ; in that
time,

My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear,
And what these sorrows could not weep,
exhale,

Thy beauty hath, and made them bleed.
I never su'd to friend, nor enemy ;
My tongue could never learn sweet flattery,
But, now thy beauty is propos'd my foe,
My proud heart sues, and prompts me
to speak.

Teach not thy lip such scorn : for it was
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
Which if thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword,
And let the soul forth that adorns this body,
I lay it open to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my neck.

[He lays his breast open.]
Nay, do not pause ; for I did kill him
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch ; 'twas I that kill'd
young Edward.

[She again offers to kill him.]
Nay, do not pause ; for I did kill him
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch ; 'twas I that kill'd
young Edward.

[She again offers to kill him.]
Nay, do not pause ; for I did kill him
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch ; 'twas I that kill'd
young Edward.

But was thy heavenly face that set me on.
[She lets fall the sword.]
Up the sword again, or take up me.

Anne. Arise, dissembler : though I wish thy death, I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.

That was in thy rage ;
The sword, which for thy love, did kill thy love,
To kill thy death, shall thou be accessory.

Glo. I would I knew thy heart.
Anne. I fear'd in my tongue.

Glo. Then never man was true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say then, my peace is made.
Anne. But shall thou know hereafter.

Glo. All men, I hope, live so.
Anne. To take, is not to give.

[She puts on the ring.]
Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger.

As thy breast encloseth my poor heart ;
For both of them, for both of them are thine.
If the poor devoted servant may have one favour at thy gracious hand,

Anne. What is it ?
Glo. That it may please you leave these sad and presently repair to Crosby-place ;

After I have solemnly inter'd,
In some monastery, this noble king,
And set his grave with my repentant tears,
Which all expedient duty see you ;

For my unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart ; and much it joys
To see you are become so penitent.

Glo. And Berkeley, go along with me.
Anne. Bid me farewell.

Glo. This more than you deserve ;
Thus I have said farewell already.

Respect Lady Anne, Treasel, and Berkeley.
The Sir, take up the corpse.

Toward Chertsey, noble lord !
To White-Friars ; there attend my coming.

[Exit the rest, with the corpse.]
I have her in this humour won'd I have her ; but I will not keep her long.

That kill'd her husband, and his
father.

She has in her heart's extremest hate ;
Meaning witness of her hatred by ;
Thou, her conscience, and these bars
against me,

And I no friends to back my suit withal,
But the plain devil, and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her ! all the world to nothing !
Ha !

Hath she forgot already that brave prince, [since,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months
Stab'd in my angry mood at Tewkesbury ?

A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,
Fram'd in the prodigality of nature, [royal,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right
The spacious world cannot again afford :

And will she yet abase her eyes on me,
That crop'd the golden prime of this sweet
And made her widow to a woful bed ? [prince,
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety ?

On me, that halt, and am misshapen thus ?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while :

Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man,
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass ;
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body :

Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost,
But, first, I'll turn you fellow in his grave ;
And then return lamenting to my love.

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—London. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Queen Elizabeth, Rivers, and Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam ; there's no doubt, his majesty
Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him
worse :

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,

And cheer his grace with quick and merry
words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me ?

Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord.
Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,
To be your comfort when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young ; and his minority
Is put into the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector ?
Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet ;
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Stanley.
Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal State. God make your majesty joyful as you have been !

[Lord of Stanley,
Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my
To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance,

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds [malice].

From wayward sickness, and no grounded
Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now, the duke of Buckingham,
Are come from visiting his majesty. [and I,
Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment,
lords?]

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks
Q. Eliz. God grant him health! did you confer with him? [atonement]

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make Between the duke of Gloster and your brothers,

And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well!—But that will never be:

I fear our happiness is at the height.
Enter Gloster, Hastings, and Dorset.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:—

Who are they, that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.

Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair, [eog.
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceiver, and Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.

Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd

By sly, insinuating Jacks! [your grace?]
Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor grace.

When have I injur'd thee? when done thee
Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal grace, (Whom God preserve better than you would wish!)

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you trouble him with lewd complaints. [matter.]

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the
The king, on his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any sutor else;

Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself
Against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell:—the world is grown so bad,

That wrens make prey where eagles dare not Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster;

You envy my advancement, and my God grant, we never may have need of Glo. Meantime, God grants that I
need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means;
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while grant [monarchy]
Are daily given, to ennoble those, were
That scarce, some two days since, were
Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this
ful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd
I never did incense his jealousy
Against the duke of Clarence; but have
An earnest advocate to plead for him
My lord, you do me shameful injury
Falsely to draw me in these vile speeches

Glo. You may deny that you were
means
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—
Glo. She may, lord Rivers;—but knows not so!

She may do more, sir, than denying that
She may help you to many her treasons
And then deny her aiding hand therein
And lay those honours on your big words
What may she not? She may,— may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she!
Glo. What, marry, may she! marry
A bachelor, a handsome stripping too
I wis, your grandam had a worse son-in-law
Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, your long borne

Your blunt upbraidings, and your injuries
By heaven, I will acquit his majesty
Of those gross tattle that of I have
I had rather been a country servant
Than a great queen, with this soundless
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stom'd
Small joy have I in being England's queen
Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mar. [Apert.] And Jesus
small, God, I beseech him
Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me Glo. What! threat you me with the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look what
I will avouch in presence of the king
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower
'Tis time to speak, my palms are quail'd
Q. Mar. [Apert.] Out, devil! I
them too well!

Thou kill'st my husband Henry in
And Edward, my poor son, at the Tower
Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or band king,

I was a pack-horse in his great
A venter-out of his proud
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood, I spilt mine
Q. Mar. Ay, and much better
his, or thine.

You envy my advancement, and my God grant, we never may have need of Glo. Meantime, God grants that I
need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means;
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while grant [monarchy]
Are daily given, to ennoble those, were
That scarce, some two days since, were
Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this
ful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd
I never did incense his jealousy
Against the duke of Clarence; but have
An earnest advocate to plead for him
My lord, you do me shameful injury
Falsely to draw me in these vile speeches

Glo. You may deny that you were
means
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—
Glo. She may, lord Rivers;—but knows not so!

She may do more, sir, than denying that
She may help you to many her treasons
And then deny her aiding hand therein
And lay those honours on your big words
What may she not? She may,—
may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she!
Glo. What, marry, may she! marry
A bachelor, a handsome stripping too
I wis, your grandam had a worse son-in-law
Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, your long borne

Your blunt upbraidings, and your injuries
By heaven, I will acquit his majesty
Of those gross tattle that of I have
I had rather been a country servant
Than a great queen, with this soundless
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stom'd
Small joy have I in being England's queen
Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mar. [Apert.] And Jesus
small, God, I beseech him
Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me
Glo. What! threat you me with the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look what
I will avouch in presence of the king
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower
'Tis time to speak, my palms are quail'd
Q. Mar. [Apert.] Out, devil! I
them too well!

Thou kill'st my husband Henry in
And Edward, my poor son, at the Tower
Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or
band king,

I was a pack-horse in his great
A venter-out of his proud
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood, I spilt mine
Q. Mar. Ay, and much better
his, or thine.

You envy my advancement, and my God grant, we never may have need of Glo. Meantime, God grants that I
need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means;
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while grant [monarchy]
Are daily given, to ennoble those, were
That scarce, some two days since, were
Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this
ful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd
I never did incense his jealousy
Against the duke of Clarence; but have
An earnest advocate to plead for him
My lord, you do me shameful injury
Falsely to draw me in these vile speeches

Glo. You may deny that you were
means
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—
Glo. She may, lord Rivers;—but knows not so!

She may do more, sir, than denying that
She may help you to many her treasons
And then deny her aiding hand therein
And lay those honours on your big words
What may she not? She may,—
may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she!
Glo. What, marry, may she! marry
A bachelor, a handsome stripping too
I wis, your grandam had a worse son-in-law
Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, your long borne

Your blunt upbraidings, and your injuries
By heaven, I will acquit his majesty
Of those gross tattle that of I have
I had rather been a country servant
Than a great queen, with this soundless
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stom'd
Small joy have I in being England's queen
Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mar. [Apert.] And Jesus
small, God, I beseech him
Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me
Glo. What! threat you me with the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look what
I will avouch in presence of the king
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower
'Tis time to speak, my palms are quail'd
Q. Mar. [Apert.] Out, devil! I
them too well!

Thou kill'st my husband Henry in
And Edward, my poor son, at the Tower
Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or
band king,

I was a pack-horse in his great
A venter-out of his proud
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood, I spilt mine
Q. Mar. Ay, and much better
his, or thine.

You envy my advancement, and my God grant, we never may have need of Glo. Meantime, God grants that I
need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means;
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while grant [monarchy]
Are daily given, to ennoble those, were
That scarce, some two days since, were
Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this
ful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd
I never did incense his jealousy
Against the duke of Clarence; but have
An earnest advocate to plead for him
My lord, you do me shameful injury
Falsely to draw me in these vile speeches

Glo. You may deny that you were
means
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—
Glo. She may, lord Rivers;—but knows not so!

She may do more, sir, than denying that
She may help you to many her treasons
And then deny her aiding hand therein
And lay those honours on your big words
What may she not? She may,—
may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she!
Glo. What, marry, may she! marry
A bachelor, a handsome stripping too
I wis, your grandam had a worse son-in-law
Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, your long borne

Your blunt upbraidings, and your injuries
By heaven, I will acquit his majesty
Of those gross tattle that of I have
I had rather been a country servant
Than a great queen, with this soundless
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stom'd
Small joy have I in being England's queen
Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mar. [Apert.] And Jesus
small, God, I beseech him
Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me
Glo. What! threat you me with the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look what
I will avouch in presence of the king
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower
'Tis time to speak, my palms are quail'd
Q. Mar. [Apert.] Out, devil! I
them too well!

Thou kill'st my husband Henry in
And Edward, my poor son, at the Tower
Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or
band king,

I was a pack-horse in his great
A venter-out of his proud
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood, I spilt mine
Q. Mar. Ay, and much better
his, or thine.

And with thy scorn draw'st rivers from his eyes;
And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rut-
land:—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul
Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee; [death.]

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody
Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent. [heavens.]

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that
And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.
Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept
to see it. [I came.]

Q. Mar. What, were you snarling all, before
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with
heaven,

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my world's banishment,
Should all but answer for that peevish trait?

Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter
heaven!— [heavens.]

Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick
Thought not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward, my son, that was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence!

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Ouldest thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss;

And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;

And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,—
And so wast thou, lord Hastings,—when my son [him]

Was stab'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful with'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee! stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store,
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the trouble of the poor world's peace!

The worm of conscience still beguile thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog,
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

And with thy scorn draw'st rivers from his eyes;
And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout
Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rut-
land:—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul
Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon
thee; [death.]

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody
Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent. [heavens.]

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that
And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.
Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept
to see it. [I came.]

Q. Mar. What, were you snarling all, before
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with
heaven,

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my world's banishment,
Should all but answer for that peevish trait?

Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter
heaven!— [heavens.]

Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick
Thought not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward, my son, that was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence!

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Ouldest thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss;

And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;

And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,—
And so wast thou, lord Hastings,—when my son [him]

Was stab'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful with'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee! stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store,
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the trouble of the poor world's peace!

The worm of conscience still beguile thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog,
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

The slave of nature, and the son of hell!
Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honour, thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo.

Ha!

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glo. I cry thee mercy, then; for I did think,
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no
O, let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your queen, and you my sub-
O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.

Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatic.

Q. Mar. Peace, master marquess, you are malapert:

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce cur'd
O, that your young nobility could judge
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

They that stand high have many blasts to shake them;

And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

Glo. Good counsel, marry: learn it, learn it, marquess.

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.

Glo. Ay, and much more: but I was born so high,

Our airy bulldeth in the cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade;—
alas! alas!

Witness my son, now in the shade of death!
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy
Hath in eternal darkness folded up.

Your airy bulldeth in our airy's nest:
O God! that seest it, do not suffer it;

As it was won with blood, lost be it so!

Buck. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame
Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame,—
And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I
In sign of league and amity with thee!

Now fair befall thee, and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our curse,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never
The lips of those that breathe them out.

Q. Mar. I will not think but they
the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping
O Buckingham, take heed of your doings!

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites

His venom tooth will rankle to the death;
Have not to do with him, beware of him!

Sin, death, and hell, have set their
And all their ministers attend on him.

Glo. What doth she say, my lord?

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my lord.

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me gentle counsel?

And soothe the devil that I warn thee of,
O, but remember this another day.

When he shall spit thy very heart with
And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess.

Live each of you the subject to his law,
And he to yours, and all of you to him.

Hast. My hair doth stand on end her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine; I must be Glo. I cannot blame her: by

mother,
She hath had too much wrong; and I
My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my ledge.

Glo. Yet you have all the while
I was too hot to do somebody good.

That is too cold in thinking of it now.
Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid.

He is frank'd up to fattening for his God pardon them that are the cause of this.

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian clusion,

To pray for them that have done wrong,
Glo. [Aside.] So do I ever, being vis'd;

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd
Enter Catesby.

Cate. Madam, his majesty doth
you,—

And for your grace,—and you, my lord,
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come.—

go with me!

Riv. We wait upon your grace.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin
The secret mischiefs that I set abroad.

I lay unto the grievous charge of others
Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have

I do beweepe to many simple galls!

Sanely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
 And tell them 'tis the queen and her allies,
 That stir the king against the duke my brother.
 Now, they believe it; and withal what me
 To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:
 And then I sigh; and, with a piece of scripture,
 Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
 And thus I clothe my naked villainy
 With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ;
 And even a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.
 But soft! here come my executioners.

Are you now going to despatch this thing?
 I think we are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That may be admitted where he is.
 Well thought upon; I have it here about me; [Gives the warrant.

 Now you have done, repair to Crosby-place.

And be sudden in the execution;
 Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps may move your hearts to pity, if you mark

him. [Stand to prate;
 There are no good doers: be assur'd

We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.
 Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools'

eyes fall tears:
 You, lords, about your business straight;
 I go to despatch.

My lord,
 We will, my noble lord.

[Exit.
 Act IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.
 Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-

day?
 O, I have pass'd a miserable night,

Full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,
 As if I am a Christian faithful man,

Should not spend another such a night,
 To live to buy a world of happy days;

What was your dream, my lord? I may you, tell me. [The Tower,

Methought that I had broken from my embark'd to cross to Burgundy;

And to my company, my brother Gloucester:
 And my cabin tempted me to walk up a thousand heavy times, [England,

 The wars of York and Lancaster,

And the piddly footings of the hatches, Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in that thought to stay him, overcoming billows of the main. [drown'd]

Methought what pain it was to see a thousand fearful wrecks;

A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
 Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
 Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels,
 All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea: [holes
 Some lay in dead men's skulls: and in those Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
 (As 'twere in scorn of eyes) reflecting gems,
 That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
 And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd
 by. [death,

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of
 To gaze upon those secrets of the deep? [strive

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I
 To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood

Stopt in my soul, and would not let it forth
 To find the empty, vast, and wandering air;
 But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
 Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?
 Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd
 after life;

O, then began the tempest to my soul!
 I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,

With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
 Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
 Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;

 Who cried aloud, "What scourge for perjury
 Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?"

 And so he vanish'd: then came wandering by
 A shadow like an angel, with bright hair

Dabbled in blood; and he stat'd out aloud,
 "Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd
 Clarence,—

That stab'd me in the field by Tewkesbury;— Seize on him, Furies! take him to your torments!"

 With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends

Environ'd me, and howl'd in mine ears
 Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise,
 I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,

Could not believe but that I was in hell,
 Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted
 you;

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.
 Clar. O Brakenbury, I have done these things,

 That now give evidence against my soul,
 For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me! [these,

 O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease
 But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,

Yet execute thy wrath on me alone: [dren I
 O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor child—
 I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;

My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.
 Brak. I will, my lord: God give your grace good rest.— [Clarence sleeps.

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
 Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
 night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toll;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

2 Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.—
Let him see our commission; and talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to Brakenbury, who reads it.]

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble duke of Clarence to your hands:
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
There lies the duke asleep, and there the keys:
I'll to the king; and signify to him
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom:
Fare you well. [Exit Brakenbury.]

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?
[When he wakes.]

1 Murd. No; he'll say 'twas done cowardly.

2 Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake until the great judgment-day.
[Him sleeping.]

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say, we stabbed

2 Murd. The urging of that word "judgment," hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What, art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute.

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloster, and tell him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I pr'ythee, stay a little; I hope my holy humour will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done. [Reward.]

2 Murd. Zounds! he dies: I had forgot the

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. In the duke of Gloster's purse.

1 Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few or none will entertain it.

1 Murd. What if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it, it is a dangerous thing, it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot not lie with his neighbour's wife, but it accuses him: 'tis a blushing shame-faced creature, mutinies in a man's bosom; it kills the obstacles: it made me once restore a golden ring, that by chance I found; it keeps a man that keeps it: it is turned out of all mansions and cities for a dangerous thing; it kills a man, that means to live well, and to trust to himself, and live without it.

1 Murd. Zounds! it is even now at my elbow, perswading me not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy hand, believe him not: he would insinuate but to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-learn'd, he shall prevail with me.

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow, who respects his reputation. Come, shall we to work?

1 Murd. Take him on the costard of the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him

2 Murd. O, excellent device! and a malmsey-butt in the next room.

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike!

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? I have a cup of wine.

1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

1 Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thine eyes are humble.

1 Murd. My voice is now the thunder, looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly, and how dimly! Your eyes do menace me: why look you so?

Who sent you hither? Where come you?

Both Murd. To, to, to—

Clar. To murder me!

Both Murd. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the heart to do it, and therefore cannot have the brains to do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you? 1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but

king.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him, and 2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore, to die.

Clar. Are you drawn forth against me? To slay the innocent? What is my crime?

Where is the evidence that doth condemn me? What lawful quest have given you power

Unto the frowning judgel or the cruel king? The bitter sentence of poor Clarence's law

Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is more than I

I charge you, as you hope to come to heaven, By Christ's dear blood shed for our sins,

That you depart, and lay no hand upon me. The deed you undertake is dangerous.

Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.
Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our king.

Clar. Promiscuous vessel! the great King of kings in the table of his law commanded, that thou shalt do no murder; will you, then, break his edict, and fulfil a man's?

Murd. For he holds vengeance in his hand, to smite upon their heads that break his law.

Clar. And that same vengeance doth he bestow on thee, for murder too:

Murd. Who shall receive the sacrament, to fight in the house of Lancaster. [God, that break that vow; and, with thy treacher-

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed!

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Alas! for my brother, for his sake!

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. How canst thou urge God's dread-ful law to us, when thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with That he would labour my delivery. [sobs,

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you [heaven.

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of 2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord. [souls,

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And are you yet to your own souls so blind, That you will war with God by murdering me?

O, sirs, consider, they that set you on To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and woman-ish. [devilish.—

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, Which of you, if you were a prince's son,

Being pent from liberty, as I am now, If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life?—

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;

O, if thine eye be not a flatterer;

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me, As you would beg, were you in my distress.

A begging prince what beggar pities not!

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. [Stabs him.] Take that, and that: if all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsy-butt within. [Exit with the body.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands Of this most grievous guilty murder done!

Re-enter first Murderer.

1 Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been. [his brother!

2 Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;

For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.

1 Murd. So do not I: go, coward as thou Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole, [art,

Till that the duke give order for his burial;

And when I leave my mood, I will away;

For this will out, and then I must not stay. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, (led in sick,) Queen Elizabeth, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Buckingham, Grey, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so;—now have I done a good day's work:—

You peers, continue this united league;

I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;
And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hands;
Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before
your king;

Lest he, that is the supreme King of kings,
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not except Nor you, son Dorset, — Buckingham, not
you;

You have been factious one against the other.
Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your
And what you do, do it unfeignedly. [Hand;

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; — Hastings, love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces Dorset.

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal
thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. [To the Queen.] Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate

Upon your grace, but with all dutious love,
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love!
When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assur'd that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me! — This do I beg of heaven,
When I am cold in love to you or yours.

[Embracing Rivers, &c.

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloster here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good-morrow to my sov'reign king and
queen;
And princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.

Gloster, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incens'd peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sov'reign
Among this princely heap, if any here, [lord.

By false intelligence, or wrong

Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly

By any in this presence, I desire To reconcile me to his friendly

'Tis death to me to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my dukedom

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham;
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us

Of you, and you, lord Rivers, and of the
Of you, and you, lord Rivers, and of the

That all without desert have cover'd
Of you, lord Woodville, and lord Rivers

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed,
I do not know that Englishman alive

With whom my soul is any jot at odds
More than the infant that is born to-day

I thank my God for my humanity.
Q. Eliz. A holiday shall this be

I would to God all strife were pounded.

My sov'reign lord, I do beseech your
To take our brother Clarence to your

Glo. Why, madam, have I odds of you
To be so flouted in this royal presence?

Who knows not that the gentle duke is
You do him injury to scorn his

K. Edw. Who knows not he is a knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a Buck. Look I so pale, lord Dorset

rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no
But his red colour hath forsook his

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead?

Glo. But he, poor man, by your
And that a winged Mercury did

Some tardy cripple bore him hence,
That came too lag to see him turn'd.

God grant that some, less noble and Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not Deserve not worse than wretched

And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. A haen, my sov'reign, for my
done!

K. Edw. I pry thee, peace; my soul Stan. I will not rise, unless you hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once, what Stan. The forfeit, sov'reign, of my

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman Lately attendant on the duke of

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to brother's death,

And shall that tongue give pardon
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was

And yet his punishment was bitter
Who said to me for him? who, in my Kneel'd at my feet, and bad me be who spoke of love?

 He told me how the poor soul did forsake
 The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me!
 Who told me, in the field at Tewkesbury,
 How Edward had me down, he rescu'd me,
 And said, "Dear brother, live, and be a king!"
 He told me, when we both lay in the field,
 Almost to death, how he did lap me
 In his garments, and did give himself,
 All naked, to the numb-cold night?
 This from my remembrance brutish wrath
 Fully pluck'd, and not a man of you
 Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
 When your carters, or your waiting-vassals,
 Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
 The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
 You straight are on your knees for pardon;
 And I, unjustly too, must grant it you:—
 For my brother not a man would speak,—
 My brothers, speak unto myself
 My poor soul. The proudest of you all
 Have been beholden to him in his life;
 And some of you would once beg for his life.
 I fear, thy justice will take hold
 On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.
 Hastings, help me to my closet.
 [Exit Clarence.]

[Enter King, Queen, Hastings, Rivers, Dorset, and Grey.]
 This is the fruit of rashness! Mark'd
 You not,
 That the guilty kindred of the queen
 Did urge it still unto the king: [death]
 I fear, thy justice will take hold
 On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.
 Hastings, help me to my closet.
 [Exit Clarence.]

SCENE II.—The Same.
 The Duchess of York, with a Son and Daughter of Clarence.
 Good grandam, tell us, is our father
 Dead?

No, boy.
 Why do you weep so oft, and beat
 Your forehead?
 Why do you look on us, and shake
 Your head?
 We are all as orphans, wretches, castaways,
 Since our noble father be alive!

Sly pretty cousins, you mistake me
 For the sickness of the king. [both,
 To lose him, not your father's death;
 Then, you conclude, my grandam, he Is dead.]

My uncle is to blame for this:
 He will revenge it: whom I will importune
 With prayers all to that effect.
 And so will I.

[Love you well:
 The king doth
 Love, children, peace! the king doth
 And shallow innocents, [death, Cannot guess who caus'd your father's

Son. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle
 Gloster

Told me, the king, provok'd to it by the queen,
 Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:
 And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
 And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;
 Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
 And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shape,
 And with a virtuous visor hide deep vices!
 He is my son; ay, and therein my shame;
 Yet from my hugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you my uncle did dissemble,
 Duch. Ay, boy. [Grandam?]

Son. I cannot think it.—Hark: what noise is this?

Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly; Rivers and Dorset following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah, who shall hinder me to wail and weep,

To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
 I'll join with black despair against my soul,
 And to myself become an enemy. [patience?]

Duch. What means this scene of rude im-

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence.
 Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead.
 Why grow the branches when the root is gone?
 Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
 If you will live, lament; if die, be brief.
 That our swift-winged souls may catch the
 Or, like obedient subjects, follow him [king's];
 To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy
 As I had title in thy noble husband! [sorrow,
 I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
 And liv'd with looking on his images:
 But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
 Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
 And I for comfort have but one false glass,
 That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
 Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
 And hast the comfort of thy children left:
 But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms, [hands,—

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble
 Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I, (Thine being but a moiety of my own),
 To overgo thy woes, and drown thy cries?

Son. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's
 death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?
 Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmean'd;

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;
 I am not barren to bring forth complaints:
 All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
 That I, being govern'd by the wat'ry moon,
 May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world!

Ah, for my husband, for my dear lord, Edward!

Chil. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord
 Clarence!

Duch. Alas, for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a child. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss.

Alas, I am the mother of these griefs! Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general.

She for an Edward weeps, and so do I; I for a Clarence weep, and so do I;

These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I; I for an Edward weep, and so do they:—

Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd,

Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse, And I will pamper it with lamentation.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd

That you take with unthankfulness his doing: In common worldly things, 'tis call'd ungrateful,

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt, Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;

Much more to be thus opposite with heaven, For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,

Of the young prince your son: send straight Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives:

Drawn desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,

And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Under Gloster, Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, Rabeliff, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause

To wail the dimming of our shining star; But none can cure their harms by wailing them.

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy; I did not see your grace:—humbly on my knee

I crave your blessing. [In thy breast,

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man!

[Aside.] That is the butt-end of a mother's marvel that her grace did leave it out.

Back. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing peers,

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan, Now cheer each other in each other's love:

Though we have spent our harvest of this king, We are to reap the harvest of his son.

The broken rancour of your high-swollen hearts, But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,

Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept: Ne scometh good, that, with some little train,

Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be set Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why, with some little train, my lord of Buckingham!

Back. Marry, my lord, lent, by a multitude,

The new-heal'd wound of malice should bleed out;

Which would be so much the more griev'd By how much the estate is grown and ungovern'd:

Where every horse bears his command, And may direct his course as he please;

As well the fear of barn, as fear of law, In my opinion, ought to be prevent;

Glo. I hope the king made peace with you, And the compact is firm and true in you.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in you. Yet, since it is but green, it should be kept

To no apparent likelihood of breach, Which haply by much company might

Therefore I say with noble Buckingham, That it is meet so few should look on it.

Hast. And so say I. Glo. Then be it so; and go we to the king.

Who they shall be that straight shall follow.

Ludlow. Madam, and you my mother, will you

To give your censures in this business? [Exeunt all except Buckingham and Duch. My lord, whoever journey prince,

For God's sake, let not us two stay at home. For, by the way, I'll sort occasion

As index to the story we late told, to show To part the queen's proud ambition

Glo. My other self, my counsellor, My oracle, my prophet!—My dear

I, as a child, will go by thy direction Towards Ludlow then, for well I know behind.

SCENE III.—London.

Enter two Citizens, neighbours.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour!

2 Cit. I promise you, I search'd for you.

Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; that the Duke of York

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady!

the better:

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a deadly

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

1 Cit. Give you good

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of Edward's death?

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; the

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to it world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's grace,

3 Cit. Woe to that land that a child!

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of

That, in his nouch, cometh under

And, in his full and ripen'd ear,

No doubt, shall there, and all

well.

1 Cit. So stood the state, when

Was crown'd at Paris late at his

2 Cit. Good the state so? no, no, good friends, God wot;

For that this land was famously enrich'd

With politic grave counsel; then the king

And various uncles to protect his grace.

1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

2 Cit. But it were they all came by his father, there were none at all;

For now, who shall be nearest,

Will look as all too near, if God prevent not.

1 Cit. But of danger is the duke of Gloster!

And the queen's sons and brothers haught and

proud:

For they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

Shall land might solace as before.

2 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

1 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put their sun sets, who doth not look for

night!

For storms make men expect a dearth.

2 Cit. I say so; but, if God sort it so,

more than we deserve, or I expect.

1 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of the least occasion almost with a man.

2 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so:

For men's minds mistrust danger; as, by proof, we see water swell before a hoist rous storm.

1 Cit. I'll fall to God. Whither away?

2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the

palace.

1 Cit. And so was I; I'll bear you company.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the young Duke of York, Queen Elizabeth, and the Duchess of York.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Stony Stratford;

2 York. At Northampton they do rest to-night:

Arch. Of next day, they will be here.

2 York. I long with all my heart to see the

queen.

Arch. Is much grown since last I saw him.

2 York. But I hear, no; they say my son

of York

as usual occasion him in his growth.

Arch. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

2 York. My young cousin! it is good to grow.

Arch. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,

the Rivers told how I did grow

by my mother: "Ay," quoth my uncle

Richard,

"I would not grow so fast,

as west flowers are slow, and weeds

make haste."

2 York. Good faith, 'good faith, the saying is true.

Arch. In him that did object the same to thee:

He was the wretched'st thing when he was

So long a-growing, and so leisurely, (young,

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious

Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

Remember'd,

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,

To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd

mine.

[Let me hear it.]

Duch. How, my young York? I pry thee,

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast,

That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old:

'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I pry thee, pretty York, who told

York. Grandam, his nurse.

[Thee this!]

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

[Told me.]

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy!—go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

[Child.]

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger.

What news!

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

[Report.]

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news?

[To Pomfret.]

Mess. Lord Rivers and lord Grey are sent

With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes

Gloster and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd:

Why or for what the nobles were committed,

Is all unknown to me, my gracious lord.

Q. Eliz. Ah me, I see the ruin of my house.

The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;

Insulting tyranny begins to jut

Upon the innocent and awless throne;

Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!

I see, as in a map, the end of all.

[Days.]

Duch. Accurs'd and unquiet wrangling

How many of you have mine eyes beheld!

My husband lost his life to get the crown;

And often up and down my sons were tost,

For me to joy, and weep, their gain and loss:

And being seated, and domestic broils

Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,

Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,

Blood to blood, self against self: O, preposterous

And frantic outrage, and thy damm'd spleen;

Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to Madam, farewell.

[Sanctuary.]

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. [To the Queen.] My gracious lady, go:
And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep: and so betide to me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours!
Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, Gloster, Buckingham, Catesby, Cardinal Beaufort, and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber. [sovereign;]

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts
The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:
I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet divid'd into the world's deceit:
No more can you distinguish of a man, [knows,

Than of his outward show; which, God he Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles which you want were dangerous:
Your grace attended to their sugar'd words,

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:
God keep you from them, and from such false

friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends!
but they were none. [to greet you.

Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes Enter the Lord Mayor, and his train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord;—and thank you all.— [Exeunt Mayor, &c.]

I thought my mother, and my brother York,
Would long ere this have met us on the way:

Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell us whether they will come or no!

Enter Hastings.

Buck. And in good time here comes the sweating lord. [mother come!]

Prince. Welcome, my lord; what, will our not I, [York,

The queen your mother, and your brother
Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince

Would fain have come with me to meet your
grace,

But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Why, what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers!—Lord cardinal, will your Persuade the queen to send the duke of York

Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My lord of Buckingham, it is oratory

Can from his mother win the duke of York.

Anon expect him here; but if she be
To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid!

We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary: not for all that

Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless, platitudinous, Too ceremonious and traditional:

Weigh it but with the goodness of this
You break not sanctuary in seeking him.

The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have desert

place,
And those who have the wit to choose

This prince hath neither claim'd it serv'd it;

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have Then, taking him from thence that

there,
You break no privilege nor charter there

Of have I heard of sanctuary men;
But sanctuary children, ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall observe my for once.

Come on, lord Hastings, will you go with Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the haste you may.

[Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings.]

Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother comes
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two Your highness shall repose you at the

Then where you please, and shall be most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower.

Did Julius Caesar build that place, my Buck. He did, my gracious lord,

place;
Which, since, succeeding ages have

Prince. Is it upon record, or else
Successively from age to age, he built

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were ter'd,

Methinks the truth should live from
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity.

Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. [Aside.] So wise so young do ne'er live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say, without character, [to [Aside.] Thus, like the formal Vice,

I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was
man;

With what his valour did enrich his
His wit set down to make his valour

Death makes no conquest of this copy.

live in false, though not in life.—
 What, my gracious lord?

As if I live until I be a man, or an ancient right in France again,
 as I liv'd a king.

Short summers lightly have a forward spring.
 Enter York, Hastings, and the Cardinal.
 Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.

Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?

Well, my dread lord; so must I call
 you.

Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is
 yours.

He died that might have kept that title,
 by his death hath lost much majesty.

How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?

I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord, that idle weeds are fast in growth:

My brother hath outgrown me far.
 He hath, my lord.

And therefore is he idle?
 O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

Then he is more beholden to you than I.

He may command me as my sovereign;
 you have power in me as in a kinsman.

I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.
 My dagger, little cousin? with all my
 heart.

A beggar, brother?
 Of my kind uncle, that I know will give me a toy, which is no grief to give.

 A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

A greater gift! O, that's the sword
 Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

O, then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts?

Lighter things you'll say a beggar, nay.
 How it is too weighty for your grace to weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

 What, would you have my weapon,
 little lord?

I would, that I might thank you, as you call me.

How?
 My lord of York will still be cross
 in talk:

Your grace knows how to bear with me; to bear me, not to bear

me; that I am little, like an ape, that you should bear me on your shoulders.

[With his reasons.]
 With what a sharp-provided tongue, and aptly taunts himself:

and so young, is wonderful.

Glo. My lord, will't please you pass along?
 Myself and my good cousin Buckingham
 Will to your mother, to entreat of her
 To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower,
 my lord?

[It so.]
 Prince. My lord protector needs will have York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, what would you fear?
 York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry
 ghost:

My grandam told me he was murder'd there.
 Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope. [Fear.]
 Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not
 But come, my lord; and, with a heavy heart,
 Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[Sennet. Enter Prince, York, Hastings, Cardinal, and Attendants.]
 Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating
 Was not incensed by his subtle mother [York]
 To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a parlous
 Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable boy:
 He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest.
 Come hither, Catesby; thou art sworn
 As deeply to effect what we intend,
 As closely to conceal what we impart:
 Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way;
 What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter
 To make William lord Hastings of our mind,
 For the instalment of this noble duke
 In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,

[him.]
 That he will not be won to aught against Buck. What think'st thou, then, of Stanley?

will not he?

Cate. He will do in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: go gentle Catesby,

[Hastings.]
 And, as it were far off, sound thou lord
 How he doth stand affected to our purpose;
 And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,
 To sit about the coronation.
 If thou dost find him tractable to us,
 Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
 If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,
 Be thou so too; and so break off the talk,
 And give us notice of his inclination:
 For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
 Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.

Glo. Commend me to lord William: tell him, Catesby,

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
 To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret castle;
 And bid my lord, for joy of this good news,
 Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

[I can.]
 Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed
 Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere Gate. You shall, my lord.

[We sleep]

Glo. At Crosby-place, there you shall find us both. [Exit Catesby.]
Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glo. Chop off his head;—something we will do:—
 And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables
 Whereof the king, my brother, was possess'd.
Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand. [Kindness.]
Glo. And look to have it yielded with all Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards We may digest our complots in some form. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before Lord Hastings' House.
 Enter a Messenger.

Mess. [Knocking.] My lord! my lord!—
Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?
Mess. One from the lord Stanley.
Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?
Mess. Upon the stroke of four.
Enter Hastings.
Hast. Cannot my lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?
Mess. So it appears by that I have to say. First, he commends him to your noble self.
Hast. What then?
Mess. Then certifies your lordship, that this He dreamt the bear had razed off his helm: Besides, he says there are two councils held; And that may be determin'd at the one, Which may make you and him to rue at th' other.
 Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure,—
 If you will presently take horse with him, And with all speed post with him towards the north,
 To shun the danger that his soul divines.
Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord; Bid him not fear the separated councils: His honour and myself are at the one, And at the other is my good friend Catesby; Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us, Whereof I shall not have intelligence. Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance: And for his dreams, I wonder he's so simple To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers; To fly the bear, before the bear pursues, Were to incense the bear to follow us, And make pursuit, where he did mean no chase.
 Go, bid thy master rise and come to me; And we will both together to the Tower, Where, he shall see, the bear will use us kindly.
Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]
Enter Catesby.
Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; I am early stirring.
 What news, what news, in this our world?
Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord. And I believe will never stand upright. Till Richard wear the garland of the roses.
Hast. How! wear the garland of the roses? mean the crown?
Cate. Ay, my good lord.
Hast. I'll have this crown of mine should mean the crown;
 Before I'll see the crown so foul misplaced. But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?
Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to have it forward.
 Upon his party for the gain thereof. And thereupon he sends you this good news. That this same very day your enemy, The kindred of the queen, must die of his own news.
Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for news, Because they have been still my adversary. But, that I'll give my voice on Richard. To bar my master's heirs in true descent. God knows, I will not do it, to the death.
Cate. God keep your lordship in such a sound mind!
Hast. But I shall laugh at this a while. That they which brought me in my adversity I live to look upon their tragedy. Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me I'll send some packing that yet think me a lord.
Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my lord.
 When men are unprepar'd, and look for life.
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! I shall fall it out.
 With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so I shall. With some men else, who think themselves safe.
 As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are To princely Richard and to Burkingham.
Cate. The princes both make high of you,— [Aside.] For they account his head as precious as mine.
Hast. I know they do, and I have seen 'em serv'd it.
Enter Stanley.
 Come on, come on; where is your brother? Fear you the bear, and go so unprovided?
Stan. My lord, good morrow;—good morrow, Catesby:—
 You may jest on, but by the holy rod, I do not like these several counsels.
Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours;
 And never, in my days, I do pretend Was it so precious to me as 'tis now. Think you, but that I know our state is I would be so triumphant as I am!
Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they were from London,
 Were jocund, and suppos'd their lives were And they, indeed, had no cause to be so.

3, 4. *How yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercrest,
The golden stab of rancour I mislaid;
God, I say, I prove a needless coward!
What shall we toward the Tower! the day is spent.*

North. Come, come, have with you.—Wot you what, my lord?
South. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads,
Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats.
Enter a Pursuivant.
North. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow.
South. How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?

North. The better, that your lordship please to ask.
South. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me [to ask].
[we meet:]
North. When thou met'st me last, where now was I going prisoner to the Tower,
At the suggestion of the queen's allies;
And now, I tell thee, (keep it to thyself,) I am in better state than ere I was. [content!]

South. God hold it, to your honour's good! There, drink that dram of merriment, fellow.
North. I thank your honour.
Enter a Priest.
South. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

North. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my heart.
South. Your debt for your last exercise; I'll pay the next Sabbath, and I will content you.
Enter Buckingham.
North. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?

South. Friends at Pomfret, they do need the honour hath no surviving work in hand.
North. Good faith, and when I met this holy man, you talk of came into my mind.
South. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay to return before your lordship thence.

North. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.
South. [Aside.] And supper too, although [thou know'st it not].
North. I'll wait upon your lordship.
[Exit South.]

Scene III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.
Enter Ratcliff, with a Guard, conducting Grey, and Vaughan, to execution.
North. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee I shall thou behold a subject die for duty, and for loyalty. [of you!]
Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack of you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaughan. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Ratcliff. Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.
North. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody fatal and ominous to noble peers! [prison,]
Within the guilty closure of thy walls,
Richard the second here was hack'd to death;
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.
Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.
North. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,
Then curs'd she Hastings: O, remember, God,
To bear her prayer for them, as now for us!
And for my sister and her princely sons,
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spill'd!

Ratcliff. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.
North. Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan, let us farewell, until we meet again in heaven.
[Exit South.]

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.
Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Ratcliff, Lovel, and others, sitting at a table: Officers of the Council attending.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we is to determine of the coronation: [are met]
In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?
Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time?
Stanley. They are; and wants but nomination.
Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.
Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?

Who is most inward with the noble duke?
Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind. [hearts,] Buck. We know each other's faces; for our He knows no more of mine, than I of yours;
Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine:—
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well.
But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein: [time;]
But you, my honourable lords, may name the
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.
Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

Enter Gloster.
Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow.
I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design,
Which by my presence might have been concluded.
Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord.

William lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part,

I mean, your voice, for crowning of the king.
Glo. Than my lord Hastings no man might be bolder;

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,
I saw good strawberries in your garden there:
I do beseech you, send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart.

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.

Catesby hath sound'd Hastings in our business,
And finds the teaty gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his head, ere give consent
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself a while, I'll go with you.

Enter Gloucester and Buckingham.
Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.
Ely. Where is my lord, the duke of Gloucester?
I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning;

There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom
Can lesser hide his hate or love than he;
For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceived you in his
By any likelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.
Re-enter Gloucester and Buckingham.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve,

That do conspire my death with devilish plots
Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd
Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace,
my lord,

Makes me most forward in this princely pre-
To doom th' offenders: whose'er they be,
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil:

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm
Is like a blasted sapling wither'd up; [wiltch,
And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous
Consort with that harlot trumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have mark'd me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble
lord,—

Glo. If thou protector of this damned

Talk'st thou to me of traitor?

Off with his head!—now, by Saint Paul,
I will not dine until I see the execution.

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done.
The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me.

[Exeunt Council, with Gloucester and Hastings.] Hast. Woe, woe, for England! and woe for me:

For I, too fond, might have prevent'd this
Stanley did dream the bear did rage;
And I did scorn it, and disdain'd to fly.

Three times to-day my foot hath stumbled.

And started when he look'd upon the
Stanley did dream the bear did rage;
And I did scorn it, and disdain'd to fly.

I now repeat I told the parliament,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd.

And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O Margaret, Margaret, now thy beauty
Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched face.

Rat. Come, come, despatch; the duke
be at dinner:

Make a short shift; he longs to see you.
Hast. O momentary peace of mortal
Which we more hunt for than the good!

Who builds his hope in air of your great
Lives like a drunken miller on a mast,
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, despatch; the duke
Hast. O bloody Richard! time to draw up
I prophesy the fearfullest time to draw up
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.

Come, lead me to the block; bear him
They smile at me, who shortly shall be smother'd.

SCENE V.—London. The Tower.
Enter Gloucester and Buckingham, in armour, marvellous discomfited.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou change thy colour,

Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou wert distraught, and mad with grief?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the tragedian;

Speak and look back, and pry on over
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw, Intending deep espiesion: ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles.

And both are ready in their offices.
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the Enter the Lord Mayor and Catesby.

Buck. Lord Mayor,—
Glo. Look to the drawbridge there!

Buck. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.
Buck. Lord mayor, the reason

Look back, defend thee,—here are enemies.

God and our innocence defend and Lovel and Ratcliff, with Hastings' heart,
And Lovel, they are friends, Ratcliff and Lovel.

Now here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.

Look him for the plainest harmless creature,
That would upon the earth a Christian;
And his conversation with Shore's wife,—
The history of all her secret thoughts: [virtue, Which he dash'd his vice with show of his apparent open guilt omitted,—

In his conversation with Shore's wife,—
From all attainder of suspect.

Lov. Well, well, he was the covert's shelter'd traitor.

Can you imagine, or almost believe,
That he should by great preservation
Be so to tell it, the subtle traitor
Who had plotted, in the council-house,
To murder me, and my good lord of Gloucester?

Glo. Had he done so?
What, think you we are Turks or Infidels?

That we would, against the form of law,
Execute rashly in the villain's death,
The extreme peril of the case,
The safety of England and our persons' safety,
As to this execution?

Lov. Not, fair befall you! he deserv'd his
death.

Your good graces both have well provided for better at his hands,
To once tell in with mistress Shore.

Yet had we not determin'd he should die, your lordship came to see his end; [die,
And the loving haste of these our friends,
Against our meaning, hath proceeded.

My lord, we would have had you speak, and timorously confess
the purpose of his treasons;

And you might well have signified the same to the citizens, who haply may be so in him, and wail his death.

But my good lord, your grace's word shall serve.

As I had seen, and heard him speak:
I do not doubt, right noble princes both,
Of your just proceedings in this case.

And that end we wish'd your lordship here,
To witness the compass of the carping world.

But since you come too late of our business, what you hear we did intend:
My good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

Exit Lord Mayor.
Now after, after, cousin Buckingham.

Enter the Lord Mayor and Catesby.
Buck. Lord mayor, the reason

Why the mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post:

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying—he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed, his house,
Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust; [wives,
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
Even where his raging eye, or savage heart,
Without control list'd to make his prey.

Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:—
Tell them, when that my mother went with
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York, [child
My princely father, then had wars in France;
And, by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father:
Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off;
Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator,
As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.
Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's castle;

Where you shall find me well accompanied,
With reverend fathers, and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock,
Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

Exit.
Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Dr. Shaw,— [To Catesby.] Give thou to Master Penker;—bid them both
Meet me within this hour at Baynard's castle.
[Exeunt Lovel and Catesby.]
Now will I in, to take some privy order,
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give notice, that no manner person
Have any time recourse unto the princes. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—London. A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord Hastings:

Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's:

And mark how well the sequel hangs together:
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me;

The precedent was full as long a doing;
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unacquainted, free, at liberty.

Here's a good world the while! Who is so gross,
That cannot see this palpable device?

Yet who so bold, but says he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.—London. The Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Buckingham, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens?

Buck. Now by the holy mother of our Lord, The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with lady Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France;
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his inforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,—
As being got, your father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the duke:
Withal I did infer your lineaments,—
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch'd or slightly handled, in discourse:
And when my oratory drew toward end,
I bade them that did love their country's good,
Cry—"God save Richard, England's royal

Glo. And did they so? [king!"]

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word:

But, like dumb statues, or breathing stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful silence:

His answer was,—the people were not us'd
To be spoken to, but by the recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again,—
"Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferred!"

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine
own,

At lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, "God save king
Richard!"

And thus I took the vantage of those few,—
"Thanks, gentle citizens and friends," quoth
"This general applause, and cheerful shout, [I; Argues your wisdom, and your love to Richard:"

And even here brake off, and came away.

Glo. What tongueless blocks were they!
would they not speak?

Will not the mayor, then, and his brethren,
come? [some fear;]

Buck. The mayor is here at hand. Intend
Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good my
lord;

For on that ground I'll make a holy descent;

And be not easily won to our request;
Play the maid's part, still answer take it.

Glo. I go; and if you plead as well as
As I can say nay to thee for myself.
No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go, up to the house;
mayor knocks.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Citizens.

Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance
I think the duke will not be spoke with.

Enter, from the Castle, Catesby.
Now, Catesby, what says your lord's request?

Cate. He doth entreat your grace
To visit him to-morrow or next day;
He is within, with two right reverend Divinely bent to meditation;
And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd.

To draw him from his holy exercise.
Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the duke.
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen
In deep designs, in matter of great
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference

Cate. I'll signify so much unto his prince

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince
He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed;
But on his knees at meditation;

Not dallying with a brace of courtiers,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul.
Happy were England, would this prince
Take on his grace the sovereignty thereof.

But, sure, I fear, we shall not win him.

May. Marry, God defend his grace, say us may!

Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby
Re-enter Catesby.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him.
His grace not being warn'd thereof.

He fears, my lord, you mean to woo him.
Buck. Sorry I am my noble countess Suspect me, that I mean no good to him.
By heaven, we come to him in person,
And so once more return, and bid him
welcome.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis much to see
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter Gloster, in a gallery above, Bishops. Catesby returns.

May. See, where his grace stands two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a
To stay him from the fall of vanity!

And see, a book of prayer in his hand!

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit:
If you deny them, all the land will rue it.
Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?
Call them again. [Exit Catesby.]

I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.
Re-enter Buckingham and Catesby; the Mayor, &c.

Cousin of Buckingham,—and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, wher I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal, or foul-faced reproach,
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquaint me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;
For God he knows, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.
Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title,—

Long live king Richard, England's worthy
All. Amen. [King.]

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd?

Glo. Even when you please, for you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace:

And so, most joyfully, we take our leave.
Glo. [To the Bishops.] Come, let us to our holy work again.

Farewell, my cousin;—farewell, gentle friends.
[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, Queen Elizabeth, Duchess of York, and Marquess of Dorset; on the other, Anne, Duchess of Gloucester, leading Lady Margaret Plantagenet, Clarence's young Daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet,

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince.
Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both a happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! whither away?

Anne. No farther than the Tower; and, as upon the like devotion as yourselves, [I guess,] To gratulate the gentle prince there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together:—

Enter Brakenbury.
And, in good time, here the lieutenant Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the prince, and my young son York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By I may not suffer you to visit them; The king hath strictly charged [I mean] that I

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak. I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from a kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between this his mother and them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I am their mother: I am in law, in blood, in love, their mother.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in blood, in love, their mother.

Then bring me to their sights; I'll see them And take thy office from thee, on my word.

Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave you. I am bound by oath, and therefore

Enter Stanley.
Stan. Let me but meet you here, And I'll salute your grace of York with

And reverend looker-on of two fair daughters [To the Duchess of Gloucester.] Come, you must straight to Westminster.

There to be crown'd Richard's royal wife.

Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder! That my pent heart may have some vent.

Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news!

Anne. Desperate tidings! O, my news!

Dor. Be of good cheer: methinks I see thee gone.

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me of death and destruction; do thou at the Tower.

Thy mother's name is ominous to children; If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the sea.

And live with Richmond from the Tower.

Go, his thee, his thee from this place; Lest thou increase the number of the dead.

And make me die the thrall of a curse.

Nor mother, wife, nor England's daughter, Nor mother, wife, nor England's daughter.

Stan. Full of wise care is this young madam.

[To Dor.] Take all the swift advantage; You shall have letters from me to my lord.

In your behalf, to meet you on the way. Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of news! O my accursed womb, the bed of death!

A cockatrice hath thou hatch'd to the world, Whose uninvok'd eye is murderous.

Stan. Come, madam, come; I'll be your servant.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness. O, would to God that this inclusive robe

Of golden metal, that must round my body, Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the heart.

let me be with deadly venom;
And, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy death. No! why?—When he, that is my husband now,

As I follow'd Henry's corpse;
I saw the blood was wash'd from his hands.

I wash'd from my other angel husband,
That dead saint which then I weeping follow'd.

I look'd on Richard's face,
As my wish,—“Be thou,” quoth I,

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

“Be thou, so young, so old a widow!”
When thou wast set, let sorrow haunt thy

And thy assistance, is king Richard sent:
But shall we wear these glories for a day?

Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play
To try if thou be current gold indeed:

Young Edward lives; think now what I would Buck. Say on, my loving lord. [Speak.]

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my three-renewed
K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so; but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence,
That Edward still should live! “True, noble prince!”

Consist, thou wast not wont to be so dull;
Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead;

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now? I speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut! thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes;

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord.

Before I positively speak in this:
I will resolve you herein presently. [Exit.]

Cats. [Aside to another.] The king is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. [Descends from his throne.] I will converse with iron-witted fools.

And unresponsive boys: none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes:

High-reaching Buckingham grows circum-
Boy! [Exit.]

Page. My lord? [Knocking gold]

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom I will tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty

Gold were as good as twenty orators, [spirit:]
And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; go, call him hither, boy. [Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:

Hath he so long held out with me untried,
And stops he now for breath?—well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.
How now, lord Stanley! what's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled

To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;

I will take order for her keeping close;
Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman,

Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter;

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him. [out]
Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin:
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.—
Re-enter Page, with Tyrrel.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient
K. Rich. Art thou, indeed? [subject.]

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.
K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it: two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturber:
Are they that I would have thee deal upon:
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.
K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark,
come hither, Tyrrel:

Go, by this token.—Rise, and lend thine ear:
[Whispers.]

There is no more but so:—say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.]
Re-enter Buckingham.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is dead to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.
K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:—
well, look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd:

The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.
Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me.—Henry the Did prophesy that Richmond should be king.
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A king!—perhaps—
Buck. My lord,— [at that time]

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not Have told me, I being by, that I should kill
him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earl-

K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I saw
Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show'd me his son,
And call'd it—Rougemont: at which I started.

Because a bard of Ireland told me once
I should not live long after I saw dishonour'd.

Buck. My lord,—
K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus hold to just your
Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?
Buck. Upon the stroke of twelve.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.
Buck. Why let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a thief, keep'st the stroke

Between thy begging and my murther:
I am not in the giving vein today.

Buck. Why, then resolve me what thou will, or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me: I know [Exeunt King Richard and Buckingham.]

Buck. And is it thus? repays he me service

With such contempt? made I him
O, let me think on Hastings, and the
To Brecknock, while my fearful heart

SCENE III.—The Tower. Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody one's dead.
The most arch deed of piteous massacre

That ever yet this land was guilty of,
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did not know

To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody

Melting with tenderness and cold
Wept like to children in their death.

"O thus," quoth Dighton, "ay, thus tubes,"

"Thus, thus," quoth Forrest, "a gentle
Within their alabaster innocent arms

Their lips were four red roses on a green
Which in their summer beauty

A book of prayers on their pillow lay,
Which once," quoth Forrest, "I did not know

my mind:—
Buck. Q, the devil!—there told on,

When Dighton thus told on,—"the most
The most replenished sweet work of God

Thou, from the prime creation, art the best Hence both are gone with conscious

remorse:
They could not speak; and so I left them
To bear this tidings to the bloody king

And here he comes.—
Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy
news?

Tyr. It to have done the thing you charge your majesties, be happy then,

[Whispers.]

But didst thou see them dead?
I did, my lord.

And buried, gentle Tyrrel?
The chaplain of the Tower hath buried

them:
To say the truth, I do not know.

Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after
supper,

thou shalt tell the process of their death.
I think how I may do thee good,

inheritor of thy desire.
I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

The son of Clarence have I pent [Marriage:]

meanly have I match'd in Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom, my wife hath bid the world good

night.

I know the Bretagne Richmond aims Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,

that fast, looks proudly on the crown,
a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter Catesby.
My lord!

Good news or bad, that thou say'st is so bluntly!

Richmond;
Morton is fled to Windsor,

back'd with the hardy

York, fly with Richmond troubles me near,

and his rash-levied strength.
I have heard that fearful commenting servitor to dull delay;

is impatient and snail-paced beggary:

expedition be my wing,
and herald for a king!

my counsel is my shield;
the brief, when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.]
*SCENE IV.—Before the Palace.
Enter Queen Margaret.*

So, now prosperity begins to mellow,
On the rotten mouth of death.

The condors slily have I lurk'd,
The waiting of mine enemies.

in France; hoping the consequence as later, black, and tragical.

these, wretched Margaret: who
here

Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.

Alas, my poor princes! ah, my flowers, new-appearing sweets!

your souls fly in the air,
and in doom perpetual,

me with your airy wings,
your mother's lamentation!

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.
Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice, [mute.]

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?
Q. Mar. [Apert.] Plantagenet doth gull

Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God! fly from such gentle lambs,

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?
When didst thou sleep, when such a deed was done? [sweet son.]

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost, [life usurp'd,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by Brief abstract and record of tedious days,

Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth.
[Sitting down.]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!
Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave,

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat; [here,

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them
Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but we?

[Sitting down by her.]
Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,

Give mine the benefit of seniority,
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.

If sorrow can admit society,
[Sitting down with them.]

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;

I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him;
Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd

him;
Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.
Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death:
That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,

To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood;
To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood;

That foul defacer of God's handy-work;
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,

That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.

O, upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur

Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her paw-fellow with others' morn!

Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes!

God witness with me, I have wept for thine.
Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for vengeance,

And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;

Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;
Young York he is but boot, because both thy Match not the high perfection of my loss.
Thy Clarence he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward;

And the beholders of this tragic play, [Grey,
Th' adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,
Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves.
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligence;
Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls,
And send them thither: but at hand, at hand,
Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd from hence,
Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,
That I may live to say, the dog is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come,
That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad! [of my fortune;"]

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then, "vain flourish
I call'd thee then, "poor shadow, painted
queen;"

The presentation of but what I was,
The flattering index of a direful pageant;
One heav'd a-high, to be hurl'd down below;
A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;
A dream of what thou wast; a garish flag,
To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? [joy?]

Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou
Who sues, and kneels, and says—God save the queen!

Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?
Where be the thronging troops that follow'd
thee?

Decline all this, and see what now thou art:
For happy wife, a most distressed widow;
For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues;
For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care;
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;
For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;
For one commanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time; [wert,
Having no more but thought of what thou
To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?

Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd
yoke;

From which, even here, I slip my wearied
And leave the burden of it all on thee. [neck, Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mis-chance:— [France,

These English woes shall make me smile in Q. Eliz. O thou, well skill'd in curses, stay awhile,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the fast day;
Compare dead happiness with living
Think that thy babes were false
And he that slew them foul traitor
Bettering thy loss makes the bad worse
Revolving this will teach thee how to Q. Eliz. My words are dull; them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make thee and pierce like mine.
Duch. Why should calamity befall thee?
Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to Airy successors of intestate joys.
Poor breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope: though what Help nothing else, yet do they ease Duch. If so, then be not tongue-
with me,
And in the breath of bitter words be My damnd son, that thy two smother'd.

I hear his drum:—he copious in Enter King Richard, and his train.
K. Rich. Who intercepts me in
tion?

Duch. O, she that might have
(By strangling thee in her accursed
From all the slaughters, wretch,
done!

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that torch Where should be branded, if that right,

The slaughter of the prince that
And the dire death of my poor
brothers?

Tell me, thou villain-slave, where Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?
Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers?
Duch. Where is kind Hastings?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpet alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tale-bearers
Rail on the Lord's anointed: [Flourish
Either be patient, and untreat me
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?
K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my son.

Duch. Then patiently hear my K. Rich. Madam, I have a fearful condition,

That cannot brook the accent of ex-
Duch. O, let me speak!
K. Rich. Do, then; but be brief.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in K. Rich. And brief, good mother, in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have
then,
God knows in torment and in agony

And come I not at last to comfort
[it well,
So, by the holy road, thou know'st must on earth to make the earth my burden was thy birth to me; [heir,
and wayward was thy infancy;
days frightful, desperate, wild, and furious; [venturous:
of manhood daring, bold, and courageous, proud, subtle, sly, and ambitious;
[brutal:
but yet more harmful; kind in comfortable hour canst thou name, [Faith, none, but Humphrey that call'd your grace that once forth of my company.
[disgracious in your eye,
much on, and not offend you, madam.
[the drum!

I pray thee, hear me speak.
You speak too bitterly.

Hear me a word;
I pray thee, hear me speak.

Never speak to thee again.
[ordnance, thou wilt die, by God's just thou turn a conqueror;

and extreme age shall perish,
look upon thy face again.

take with thee my most heavy curse;
the day of battle, fire thee more the complete armour that thou

on the adverse party fight;
the little souls of Edward's children
the spirits of thine enemies,

from them success and victory.
art, bloody will be thy end;
thy life, and doth thy death

Through far more cause, yet much spirit to curse
me; I say amen to her.

Stay, madam; I must speak a word with you.
I have no more sons of the royal to slaughter: for my daughters, [queens;

praying monks, not weeping level not to hit their lives.

You have a daughter call'd and fair, royal and gracionsa.
and must she die for this? O, let her manners, stain her beauty;

as false to Edward's bed;
her the veil of infamy:

she was not Edward's daughter,
Wrong not her birth, she is of [so.
To save her life, I'll say she is not her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers. [opposite.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoids is the doom of destiny. [destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes
My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins. [cozen'd

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life,
Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction;
No doubt the murder's knife was dull and blunt,

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my
boys,

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling rest,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enter-
And dangerous success of bloody wars, [prize,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,
To be discover'd, that can do me good!

K. Rich. Th' advancement of your children, gentle lady. [their heads!

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of
honour,

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.
Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it,
Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine!

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,
Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul [wronge, Thou drown the sad remembrance of those Which thou supposest I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness
Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter. [with her soul.

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it
K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul: [brothers;
So, from thy soul's love, didst thou love her
And, from my heart's love, I do thank thee
for it. [meaning:

K. Rich. Be not too hasty to confound my
I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?

K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who

Q. Eliz. What, thou? [else should be?]

K. Rich. I, even I: what think you of it,

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her? [madam?]

K. Rich. That I would learn of you,

As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew

her brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave

Edward and York; then haply will she weep:

Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret

Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—

A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain

The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.

If this inducement move her not to love,

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;

Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,

Her uncle Rivers; ay, and, for her sake,

Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt

Anne.

K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not

To win your daughter. [the way]

Q. Eliz. There is no other way;

Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,

And not be Richard that hath done all this.

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her! [choose but hate thee,

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now

amended:

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,

Which after-hours give leisure to repent.

If I did take the kingdom from your sons,

To make amends I'll give it to your daughter.

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,

To quicken your increase, I will beget

Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter:

A grandam's name is little less in love,

Than is the doting title of a mother;

They are as children but one step below,

Even of your mettle, of your very blood;

Of all one pain,—save for a night of groans

Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.

Your children were vexation to your youth;

But mine shall be a comfort to your age.

The loss you have is but a son being king,

And by that loss, your daughter is made queen.

I cannot make you what amends I would,

Therefore accept such kindness as I can.

Dorset, your son, that with a fearful soul

Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,

This fair alliance quickly shall call home

To high promotions and great dignity:

The king that calls your beauteous daughter

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother; [wife,

Again shall you be mother to a king,

And all the ruins of distressful times

Repair'd with double riches of content.

What! we have many goodly days to live.

The liquid drops of tears that you have shed

Shall come again, transform'd to mirth.

Advantaging their loan with interest.

Of ten times double gain of happiness.

Go then, my mother, to thy daughter;

Make bold her bashful years with joy.

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale.

Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame

Of golden sov'reignty; acquaint her

With the sweet silent hours of marriage.

And when this arm of mine hath embrac'd

The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,

Bound with triumphant garlands will I

And lead thy daughter to a consecrated

To whom I will retail my conquest.

And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's

Q. Eliz. What were I best to do?

father's brother

Would be her lord? Or shall I not?

Or, he that slew her brothers and

Under what title shall I woo for her?

That God, the law, my honour, my

Can make seem pleasing to her?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase

K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that

mand, entreats.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which

K. Rich. Say, she shall be a

queen.

Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as

K. Rich. Say, I will love her

Q. Eliz. But how long shall I

last?

K. Rich. Sweetly in love

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly life last?

K. Rich. As long as heaven

lengthens it.

Q. Eliz. As long as hell and

of it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sov'reign,

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject,

sov'reignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speed plainly told.

K. Rich. Then, plainly to her

Q. Eliz. Plain, and not humbly

a style.

K. Rich. Your reasons are too

Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons and dead;

Too deep and dead, poor lack-

K. Rich. Harp not on that string that is past.

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still, shall

K. Rich. Now, by my crown, and my crown,—dishonour

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour

K. Rich. I swear.—

By nothing; for this is no oath:
 I have profan'd, hath lost his holy honour, blam'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue, nam'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.
 Now, by something that thou hast not sworn, by something that thou hast not sworn, by the world,— [wrong'd.
 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.
 My father's death,—
 Thy life hath that dishonour'd.
 Than, by myself,—
 'Thyself is self-misus'd.
 Why, then, by God,—
 God's wrong is most of all.
 Hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 the king my husband made,
 Hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 nor my brothers slain:
 what metal, circling now thy head,
 the tender temples of my child;
 with the princes had been breathing
 now, too tender bed fellows for dust, thou faith hath made a prey for worms.
 Hadst thou swear by now?
 The time to come,
 That thou hast wrong'd in the time past;
 have many tears to wash
 time, for time past wrong'd by thee.
 Thou live, whose parents thou hast wrong'd,
 to wait it in their age;
 Thou live, whose children thou hast
 wrong'd,
 to wait it with their age.
 By time to come; for that thou hast wrong'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast.
 As I intend to prosper and repent,
 in my dangerous attempt
 I myself confound!
 To mine ear no happy hours!
 I am not thy light, nor, night, thy shadow; if, with pure heart's love, devotion, holy thoughts,
 thy beautiful princely daughter!
 follows to myself and thee,
 and many a Christian soul,
 to be avoided, but by this;
 to be avoided, but by this.
 dear mother, (I must call you so,)
 of my love to her:
 I will be, not what I have been;
 works, but what I will deserve:
 and state of times,
 and shall I be tempted of the devil
 [good.
 Ar, if the devil tempt thee to do shall I forget myself, to be myself?

K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.

Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children.

K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them:

Where, in that nest of spicery, they shall breed
 Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will? [dead.

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the

Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me very shortly,
 And you shall understand from me her mind.

K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss; and so, farewell. [Kissing her. Exit

Queen Elizabeth.

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman!

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

How now! what news?

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore [coast
 Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
 Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back:
 'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;
 And there they hull, expecting but the aid
 Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk:—

Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?

Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste. [Salisbury:

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither: post to
 When thou com'st thither,—[To Catesby.]

Dull, unminifol villain, [duke?

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure.

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby;—bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,
 And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cate. I go. [Exit.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury? [before I go?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there?

Rat. Your highness told me I should post
 before.

Enter Stanley.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you?

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;

Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!

What need'st thou run so many miles about,
 When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way?
 Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there!

Stan. I know not, mighty sov'reign, but by K. Rich. Well, as you guess? [guess.]

Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton, [crown.]

Ha makes for England, here to claim the K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive, but we?

And who is England's king, but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess. [your liege,

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore, mistrust me not. [him back?

K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to beat
 Where be thy tenants and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,
 Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north. [in the north,

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they When they should serve their sov'reign in the west? [mighty king:

Stan. They have not been commanded,
 Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,
 I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace,
 Where and what time your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to
 But I'll not trust thee. [join with Richmond:

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
 You have no cause to hold my friendship
 I never was, nor never will be false. [doubtful:

K. Rich. Go, then, and muster men. But leave behind

Your son, George Stanley: look your heart be
 Or else his head's assurance is but frail. [firm,

Stan. So deal with him, as I prove true to you. [Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devon-
 As I by friends am well advertised, [shire,
 Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty pre-
 Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother, [late,
 With many more confederates are in arms.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms;

And every hour more competitors [strong.
 Flock to the rebels, and their power grows

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death! [He strikes him.

There, take thou that, till thou bring better
 news. [majesty

3 Mess. The news I have to tell your

Is, that by sudden floods and fall of Buckingham's army is dispers'd and
 And he himself wander'd away alone.
 No man knows whither. [I cry that

K. Rich. There is my purse, to cure that Hath any well advised friend promise

Reward to him that brings the traitor
 3 Mess. Such proclamation hath

my lord.

Enter a fourth Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, who guess Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshires
 But this good comfort bring I to

ness,—

The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by Richmond, in Dorsetshire, and so

Unto the shore, to ask those on the
 If they were his assistants, yea, or no

Who answer'd him, they came from Upon his party: he, mistrusting

Hois'd sail, and made his course
 Bretagne. [are ap

K. Rich. March on, march on,
 If not to fight with foreign enemies

Yet to beat down these rebels here
 Enter Cateys.

Cate. My liege, the duke of taken,

That is the best news: that the
 Is with a mighty power landed at

Is colder news, but yet they move K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury

we reason here,
 A royal battle might be won and

Some one take order Bucking
 To Salisbury;—the rest march on

SCENE V.—A Room in Lord Stanley's

Enter Stanley and Sir Christopher

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell me
 from me:—

That, in the sty of this most bloody
 My son George Stanley is frank

If I revolt, off goes young George's
 The fear of that holds off my

So, get thee gone: commend me to Withal, say that the queen hath sent

He should espouse Elizabeth her
 But, tell me, where is princely

Chris. At Pembroke or at in Wales.

Stan. What men of name resort
Chris. Sir Walter Herbert,

soldier:

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William
 Oxford, redoubt'd Pembroke, Sir

And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant
 And many other of great name

And towards London do they
 If by the way they be not fought

Well, his than to thy lord; I kiss his
My father will resolve him of my mind. [hand :
[Exit.

ACT V.

Salisbury. An open Place.
Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with Buckingham, led to execution.

Will not king Richard let me speak
with him?
No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Hatings and Edward's children,
King Henry, and thy fair son Edward,
and all that have miscarried through the clouds behold this present day, fellows, is it not?
It is, my lord.

body's dooms-day.
Why, then, All-Souls' day is my night, which, taking Edward's time,
to his children, or his wife's allies;

the day, wherein I wish'd to fall
the false faith of him whom most I trusted;
the determin'd respite of my wrongs:

high All-Seer, which I dallied with, turn'd my feign'd prayer on my head,
and given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.

both he force the swords of wicked men to turn their own points on their masters' [neck,—
When he, "quoth she, "shall split thy heart and arrows,

Margaret was a prophetess."—
Margaret, she, convey me to the block of shame:
I have both but wrong, and blame the due of [Exit.

Scene II.—A Plain near Tewworth.
Enter with drums and colours, Richmond,
Oxford, Sir James Blunt, Sir Walter Herbert, and others, with forces, marching.

Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
And underneath the yoke of tyranny,
And here receive we from our father Stanley words of fair comfort and encouragement.

bloody, and usurping hour,
I'll lay'd your summer fields, and fruitful [his trough your warm blood like wash, and makes even in the centre of this Isle, to the town of Leicester, as we learn :

thither is but one day's march.

In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war, [swords,
Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand
To fight against that bloody homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us. [friends for fear, Blunt. He hath no friends but what are
Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march : [wings;
True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter King Richard and forces; the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, and others.
K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.—

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?
Surr. My heart is ten times lighter than my K. Rich. My lord of Norfolk,— [looks.
Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks;
ha! must we not? [ing lord.
Nor. We must both give and take, my lov-
K. Rich. Up with my tent! here will I lie
to-night;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent.
But where to-morrow?—Well, all's one for that.—

Who hath descried the number of the traitors?
Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power. [account :
K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want.
Up with the tent!—Come, noble gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground ;—
Call for some men of sound direction :

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay ;
For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exit.

Enter, on the other side of the field, Richmond,
Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and other Lords. Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden
And, by the bright track of his fiery car, [set,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.—

Give me some ink and paper in my tent :
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small power.

My lord of Oxford,—you, Sir William Brandon,—
And you, Sir Walter Herbert,—stay with me.
The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment :

Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to
And by the second hour in the morning [him,
Desire the earl to see me in my tent :

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me;
Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mistak'n his colours much,

(Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done,)
His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak
with him,

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake
And so, God give you quiet rest to-night! [it;

Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt.
Come, gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business:
In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.

Enter, to his tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Ratcliff, and Catesby.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper time, my lord;
It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night,—
Give me some ink and paper.

What, is my beaver easier than it was?
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness. [charge;

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.

K. Rich. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power

Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night.

Fill me a bowl of wine.—Give me a watch.—

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.—

Look that my staves be sound, and not too
Ratcliff,— [heavy.

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord
Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself, [troop

Much about cock-shut time, from troop to Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers. [bowl of wine;

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a
I have not that alacrity of spirit,

Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

Set it down.—Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night, come to my

And help to arm me.—Leave me, I say. [tent,

[King Richard retires into his tent.

Exeunt Ratcliff and Catesby.

Richmond's tent opens, and discover himself his Officers, &c.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy Richm. All comfort that the dark night

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee,
Who prays continually for Richmond.

So much for that.—The silent hours
And flaky darkness breaks within the tent.

In brief, for so the season bids us be,
Prepare thy battle early in the morning.

And put thy fortune to the arbitrament
Of bloody strokes, and mortal staining.

I, as I may, (that which I would I cannot,
With best advantage will deceive the time.)

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms,
But on thy side I may not be too forward.

Best, being seen, thy brother, tender love,
Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell: the leisure and the fearful hour,
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,

And ample interchange of sweet discourse,
Which so long sunder'd friends should meet

upon:
God give us leisure for these rites of love!

Once more, adieu:—be vallant, and Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment;

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to

Lest laden slumber peise me down to sleep.
When I should mount with wings of love.

Once more, good night, kind lords, and
men. [Exeunt Lords, &c.,

O Thou, whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye.

Put in their hands thy blessing from above,
That they may crush down with a happy

Th' usurping helmets of our adversaries,
Make us thy ministers of chastisement.

That we may praise thee in thy victory,
To thee I do commend my watchful eyes.

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes,
Sleeping and waking, O, defend me!

The Ghost of Prince Edward, son to Henry Sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. [To King R.] Let me sit between soul to-morrow!

Think how thou stab'st me in my back
At Tewkesbury: despair, therefore,

Be cheerful, Richmond; for the day
souls

Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf,
King Henry's issue, Richmond, against thee.

The Ghost of King Henry the Sixth rises.
Ghost. [To King R.] When I was

my anointed body
By thee was punched full of deadly

Think on the Tower, and me: despair,
Harry the sixth bids thee despair,

[To Richmond.] Virtuous and lofty conqueror!

They had prophesied thou shouldst be king,
 And comfort thee in thy sleep: live, and flourish!

The Ghost of Clarence rises.
 [To King R.] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!
 That was wash'd to death with felse wine,
 Tomorrow, by thy guile betray'd to death!
 And all thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
 [To Richmond.] Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,
 The wretched heirs of York do pray for thee:
 Good angels guard thy battle! Live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, rise.
 [To King R.] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow,
 That died at Pomfret! Despair, and die!
 [To King R.] Think upon
 Grey, and let thy soul despair.
 [To King R.] Think upon
 Vaughan, and with guilty fear think our wrongs in Richard's bosom
 Will conquer him!—Awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of Hastings rises.
 [To King R.] Bloody and guilty,
 And in a bloody battle ead thy days! [die!—
 Thou on lord Hastings! and despair, and [To Richmond.] Quiet, untroubled soul, awake, awake!
 And, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake.

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.
 [To Richmond.] Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower:
 And be led within thy bosom, Richard,
 And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
 Thy unhappy souls bid thee despair, and die!—
 In joy;
 Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
 Live, and beget a happy race of kings!

The Ghost of Queen Anne rises.
 [To Richmond.] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;
 Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.
 [To King R.] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;
 The last was I that felt thy tyranny:
 To the battle think on Buckingham,
 And die in terror of thy guiltiness!

Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
 Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath!— [Lead thee aid:
 [To Richmond.] I died for hope, ere I could
 But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
 God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
 And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

[The Ghosts vanish. King Richard starts out of his dream.] K. Rich. Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—
 Have mercy, Jesu!—Soft! I did but dream.— O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!— [night.
 The lights burn blue.—It is now dead mid-
 Gold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
 What do I fear? myself? there's none else by.
 Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
 Is there a murderer here? No;—yes, I am:
 Then fly,—what! from myself! Great reason:
 Why?—
 Lest I revenge. What? Myself upon myself?
 Alack, I love myself. Wherefore? for any good
 That I myself have done unto myself?
 O, no: alas, I rather hate myself
 For hateful deeds committed by myself.
 I am a villain: yet I lie, I am not.
 Fool, of thyself speak well:—fool, do not flatter.
 My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
 And every tongue brings in a several tale,
 And every tale condemns me for a villain.
 Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree;
 Murder, stern murder, in the first degree;
 All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
 Throng to the bar, crying all,—Guilty! guilty!
 I shall despair.—There is no creature loves me;
 And if I die, no soul will pity me:—
 Nay, wherefore should they? Since that I Find in myself no pity to myself. [myself
 Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd
 Came to my tent; and every one did threat
 To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.
Rat. My lord,—
K. Rich. Who's there? [village cock Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early hath twice done salutation to the morn;
 Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour. [ful dream!—
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fear-
 What thinkest thou,—will our friends prove all
Rat. No doubt, my lord. [true!
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,— Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. [night
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
 Than can the substance of ten thousand
 soldiers,
 Arm'd in proof, and led by shallow Richmond,
 It is not yet near day. Come, go with me;
 Under our tents I'll play the cove-dropper,
 To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt King Richard and Ratcliff.]

Richmond wakes. Enter Oxford and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond!

Richm. Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,

That you have been a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep, the fairest-boding dreams

That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,

Have I since your departure had, my lords.

Methought your souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,

Came to my tent, and cried, "On! victory!"

I promise you, my heart is very jocund

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm, and give direction.

[He advances to the troops.]

More than I have said, loving countrymen,

The leisure and enforcement of the time

Forbids to dwell on: yet remember this,—

God and our good cause fight upon our side;

The prayers of holy saints and wrong'd souls,
like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;

Richard except, those whom we fight against.

Had rather have us win, than him they follow:

For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,

A bloody tyrant and a homicide;

One rais'd in blood, and one in blood estab-

One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil

Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;

One that hath ever been God's enemy.

Then, if you fight against God's enemy,

God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers;

If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,

You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;

If you do fight against your country's foes,

Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,

Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;

If you do free your children from the sword,

Your children's children quit it in your age.

Then, in the name of God and all these rights,

Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt

Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt

The least of you shall share his part thereof.

Sound drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;

God and Saint George! Richmond and victory!

[Exeunt.]

Re-enter King Richard, Bateliff, Attendants, and forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never train'd up in arms,

K. Rich. He said the truth: and what

Surrey then?

Rat. He said'd, and said, the better

K. Rich. He was 't the right; and what deed, it is.

Tell the clock there.—Give me a clock

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shew

the book,

He should have brav'd the east an hour

A black day will it be to somebody—

Rat. My lord,

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen

The sky doth frown and lower upon our

I would these dewy tears were from the

Not shine to-day! Why, what is that

More than to Richmond? for the sun

heaven

That frowns on me, looks sally upon

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord, the foe

the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle:—

my horse;—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his

I will lead forth my soldiers to the

And thus my battle shall be ordered:—

My foreward shall be drawn out all

Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Shall have the leading of this foot and

They thus directed, we will follow

In the main battle; whose puisance

Shall be well winged with our elated

This, and Saint George to boot!

think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike

This found I on my tent this morning

K. Rich. "Jackey of Norfolk, be not

For Dickon thy master is bought and

A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his

Let not our babbling dreams affright

Conscience is but a word that cowardly

Devis'd at first to keep the strong in

Our strong arms be our conscience,

our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to't

If not to heaven, then hand in hand

What shall I say more than I have

Remember whom you are to cope with

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and

A scum of Bretagne, and base

Whom their o'er-cloy'd country

To desperate ventures and assur'd

You sleeping safe, they bring you

You having lands, and bless'd with wives,

They would restrain the one, distrust

And who doth lead them, but a Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?
 And such cold as over shoes in snow?

Alarums. Enter from opposite sides King Richard and Richmond, and exeunt fighting. Retreat and flourish. Then re-enter Richmond, Stanley bearing the crown, and divers other Lords, and forces.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!

Lo, here, this long-usurp'd royalty,
 From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
 Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal;
 Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say amen
 to all!

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester
 town;

Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord
 Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled,

That in submission will return to us:

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,

We will unite the white rose and the red:—

Smile, heaven, upon this fair conjunction,

That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!—

What traitor hears me, and says not amen?

England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,

The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,

The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire:

All this divided York and Lancaster,

Divided in their dire division.

O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true successors of each royal house,

By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!

And let their heirs (God, if they will be so)

Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd
 peace,

With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous
 days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,

That would reduce these bloody days again,

And make poor England weep in streams of
 blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase,

That would with treason wound this fair land's
 peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives

That she may long live here, God say amen!

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY VIII.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Henry the Eighth.
 Cardinal Wolsey.
 Cardinal Campeius.
 Capucius, Ambassador from the Emperor,
Charles V.
 Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury.
 Duke of Norfolk. Duke of Suffolk.
 Duke of Buckingham. Earl of Surrey.
 Lord Chancellor. Lord Chamberlain.
 Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester.
 Bishop of Lincoln. Lord Abergavenny.
 Lord Sands.
 Sir Thomas Lovell. Sir Henry Guildford.
 Sir Anthony Denny. Sir Nicholas Vaux.
 Secretaries to Wolsey.
 Cromwell, Servant to Wolsey.
 Griffith, Gentleman-Usher to Queen Katharine.

Three other Gentlemen. Garter King of Arms.
 Doctor Butts, Physician to the King.
 Surveyor to the Duke of Buckingham.
 Brandon, and a Sergeant-at-Arms.
 Door-keeper of the Council Chamber.
 and his Man.
 Page to Gardiner. A Crier.
 Queen Katharine, Wife to King Henry.
 afterwards divorced.
 Anne Bullen, her Maid of Honour.
 wards Queen.
 An Old Lady, Friend to Anne Bullen.
 Patience, Woman to Queen Katharine.
 Several Lords and Ladies in the French Court.
 Women attending upon the Queen.
 which appear to her: Scribes, Clerks, Guards, and other Attendants.

SCENE,—Chiefly in London and Westminster; once, at Kimbolton.

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh: things
 now,

That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
 Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
 Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
 We now present. Those that can pity, here
 May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
 The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
 May here find truth too. Those that come to see
 Only a show or two, and so agree
 The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
 I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
 That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
 A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
 In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
 Will be deceived; for, gentle hearers, know,
 To rank our chosen truth with such a show
 As fool and fight is, besides forfeiting
 Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
 (To make that only true we now intend.)
 Will leave us never an understanding friend.
 Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town,
 Be sad, as we would make ye: think ye see
 The very persons of our noble story,
 As they were living; think you see them great,
 And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
 Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see

How soon this mightiness meets misery!
 And if you can be merry then, I'll say
 A man may weep upon his wedding day.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Ante-chamber
 the Palace.

Enter, on one side, the Duke of Norfolk,
 the other, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met,
 have you done.

Since last we saw in France!
 Nor.

Healthful; and ever since a fresh adieu
 Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely

Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber,
 Those sons of glory, those two lights of France,
 Met in the vale of Aiden.

Nor. Twixt Guyenne and

I was then present, saw them salute
 back;

Beheld them, when they lighted,
 In their embracement, as they grow together

Which had they, what four thousand
 Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the world

I was my chamber's prisoner. Then you

Nor.

The view of earthly glory: men might say,
All this time, pomp was single; but now married

To me above itself. Each following day
Because the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders its: to-day the French all diaphanous, all in gold, like heathen gods;
came down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain, India: every man that stood Shew'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were as cherubins, all gilt: the madams, too,
Not used to toil, did almost sweat to bear the pride upon them, that their very labour was to them as a paluting: now this mask was cruel incomparable; and the ensuing
night

Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings,
In lute, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
and him in praise; and, being present both,
I was said they saw but one; and no discerners
That wag his tongue in censure. When these [challeng'd as they phrase them] by their heralds and noble spirits to arms, they did perform beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
Being now been possible enough, got credit,
that was believ'd.

O, you go far.
As I belong to worship, and affect the honour honesty, the tract of every thing would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to.

All was royal;
The disposing of it nought rebell'd;
Each gave each thing view; the office did eminently his full function. Who did guide?
I mean, who set the body and the limbs to the great sport together?

As you guess:
That promises no element

I pray you, who, my lord?
This was ordered by the good discretion
Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed
From his ambitious finger. What had he to do in these fierce vanities? I wonder That such a keech can with his very bulk take up the rays of the benedictal sun,
And keep it from the earth.

Surely, sir,
He's in him stuff that puts him to these ends;
And being not propp'd by ancestry, whose Charles successors their way; nor call'd upon the high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
That force of his own merit makes his way;

A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him, let some graver
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride [eye Peep through each part of him: whence has he that?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil,
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privy o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file

Of all the gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
(The honourable board of council out,)
Must fetch him in the papers.

Aber. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many Have broke their backs with laying manors on
them

For this great journey. What did this vanity,
But minister communication of A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not
The cost that did conclude it. [values

Buck. Every man
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd: and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy,—That this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore
The ambassador is silenc'd!

Nor. Marry, is't.
Aber. A proper title of a peace; and pur-
At a superfluous rate! [chast'd

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. 'Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you, (And take it from a heart that wishes towards
you

Honour and plenteous safety,) that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency Together; to consider further, that What his high hatred would affect, wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and I know his sword Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and't may be
said,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend.

Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal Wolsey, (the Purse borne before him,) certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor, Where's his examination? (To him.)

1 Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

1 Secr. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Shall lessen this big look. (Buckingham)

(Exeunt Wolsey, and train.)

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I

(best) Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's
Out-worths a noble's blood. (book)

Nor. What, are you chaf'd?

Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance
Which your disease requires. (only)

Buck. I read in his looks

Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me, as his abject object: at this instant

He bores me with some trick: he's gone t' the I'll follow, and out-stare him. (king;)

Nor. Stay, my lord,

And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about: to climb steep hills,
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself,
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour quite ery down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself: we may outrun,
By violent swiftness, that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till it run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself;
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,

I am thankful to you; and I'll go along
By your prescription:—but this top-proud fellow,

(Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions,) by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, treasonous.

Buck. To the king I'll say't; and vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This lord
Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal to man)
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief
As able to perform't; his mind and tongue
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocal
Only to show his pomp as well in Treason
As here at home, suggests the king to
To this last costly treaty, the interview
That swallow'd so much treasure, and Did break t' the rinsing. Faith, and

Nor. (To him.)

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir.

(ning cardinal)
The articles o' the combination drawn
As himself pleas'd; and they were read
As he cried, "Thus let it be;" to an end,

As give a crutch to the dead; but Has done this, and 'tis well; for every sey,

Who cannot err, he did it. Now this (Which, as I take it, is a kind of parody To the old damn, treason)—Charles the Under pretence to see the queen his (For 'twas indeed his colour, but he was To whisper Wolsey,) here made a
His fears were, that the interview England and France might, through amity,

Breed him some prejudice; for he Peep'd harns that meant him: he Deals with our cardinal; and, as I
Which I do well; for, I am sure, he Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his granted

Ere it was ask'd;—but when the
And pay'd with gold, the emperor
sir'd,

That he would please to alter the
And break the foresaid peace. Let the

know

(As soon he shall by me) that thus he Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases
And for his own advantage. I am

Nor. (To him.)

To hear this of him; and could wish to Something mistaken in't. No, not a

Buck. (To him.)

I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon; a Sergeant-at-Arms

him.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute

Serg.

My lord the duke of Buckingham, and
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king. To you, my

Buck. (To him.)

The net has fall'n upon me; I shall Under device and practice. I am

Bran. (To him.)

Take you taken from liberty, to look on Your business present: 'tis his highness' pleasure to shut to the Tower.

It will help me nothing Innocence; for that dye is on [will of heaven makes my whitest part black. The in this and all things!—I obey.—
 Nay, be must bear you company.—
 [To Abern.] The king shall to the Tower, till you know he determines farther.

As the duke said,
 Here is a warrant from to attach lord Montacute; and the bodies of the duke's confessor, John de la Car, and Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

So, so;
 No more, I [hope.
 O, Michael Hopkins!
 He.
 My surveyor is false; the o'er great [already:
 show'd him gold: my life is spann'd
 the shadow of poor Buckingham, figure even this instant cloud puts on,
 by darkening my clear sun.—My lord, fare-
 well.

SCENE II.—The Council Chamber.
 Enter King Henry, Cardinal Wolsey,
 the Lords of the Council, Sir Thomas Lovell, Officers, Attendants. The King sits leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder.
 K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart
 of it,
 would you for this great care: I stood i' the fullcharg'd confederacy, and give thanks
 you that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us that gentleman of Buckingham's: in person I'll ease him his confessions justify;
 point by point the treasons of his master shall again relate.

The King takes his state. The Lords of the Council take their several places.
 The Cardinal places himself under the King's feet, on his right side.
 Enter the Queen, ushered by the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. The King rises from his state, takes her up,
 and placeth her by him. [a suitor.
 Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us:—half your suit
 next came to us; you have half our power:
 the other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
 we eat your will, and take it.
 Q. Kath.

Thank your majesty.

That you would love yourself, and in that love
 Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
 The dignity of your office, is the point
 Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.
 Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
 And those of true condition, that your subjects
 Are in great grievance; there have been commissions [heart
 Sent down among them, which hath flaw'd the
 Of all their loyalties:—wherein, although,
 My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
 Most bitterly on you, as putter-on
 Of these exactions, yet the king our master, (Whose honour heaven shield from soil!) even he escapes not

Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks
 The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
 In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
 It doth appear; for, upon these taxations,
 The clothiers all, not able to maintain
 The many to them longing, have put off
 The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
 Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
 And lack of other means, in desperate manner
 Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
 And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!
 Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal,
 You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
 Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir,
 I know but of a single part, in aught
 Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
 Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
 You know no more than others; but you frame Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome [must
 To those which would not know them, and yet Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, [are Whereof my sov'reign would have note, they Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear
 them,

The back is sacrifice to the load. They say
 They are devis'd by you: or else you suffer
 Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!
 The nature of it! In what kind, let's know,
 Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturesome
 Interrupting of your patience; but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon. The subject's grief [from each
 Comes through commissions, which compel
 The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
 Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France: this makes bold mouths:
 Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts
 Allegiance in them; their curses now [freeze

Live where their prayers did; and it's come to
This tractable obedience is a slave [pass,
To each incensed will. I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no pruner business.

K. Hen. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Vol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me but
By learn'd approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither
My faculties nor person, yet will be [know
The chronicles of my doing,—let me say,
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough bralce
That virtue must go through. We must not
Our necessary actions, in the fear [stint
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each
A trembling contribution! Why, we take From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber; [hack'd,
And, though we leave it with a root, thus
The air will drink the sap. To every county Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission: pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Vol. [To the Secretary.] A word with you.
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons

Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd,
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes; I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the duke of Buckingham

Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare
speaker;

To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,

And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet
When these so noble benefits shall prove [see,

Not well dispos'd, the mind grew
rupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times
Than ever they were fair. This nature pleas,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders,
Almost with ravish'd listening, could hear
His hour of speech a minute; he, my brother,
Hath into monstrous habits put the good
That once were his, and is become as I
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; hear

(This was his gentleman in trust) of his Things to strike honour and.—Did you see
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Vol. Stand forth, and with bold late what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. First, it was usual with him, that It would infect his speech, that if he Should without issue die, he'd carry
To make the sceptre his; these very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergarny; to whom by oath he Revenge upon the cardinal.

Vol. Please your highness
This dangerous conception in this point
Not friended by his wish, to your liking
His will is most malignant; and it
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. How grounded he his title to the crown
Upon our fall? to this point hast thou
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brother
By a vain prophecy of Michael Hopkin.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkin?

Surv. Sir, a Cheshire
His confessor; who fed him every
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou that?

Surv. Not long before your highness to France,

The duke being at the Rose, with in the Saint Lawrence Poultny, did of me
What was the speech among the lords?

Concerning the French journey: I say Men fear'd the French would prove To the king's danger. Presently the Said 'twas the fear, indeed; and doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk; "that if he

"Hath sent to me, wishing me to go
John de la Cor, my chaplain, a Frenchman

To hear from him a matter of some weight
Whom after, under the confession, I

He solemnly had sworn, that, what he
My chaplain to no creature living, to me, should utter, with demure confidence his heart, Neither the king, nor (Call you the duke,) shall prosper: bid him

To own the love o' the commonalty; the duke shall govern England."

If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o' the tenants: take good
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take heed;
I heartily beseech you.

Let him on.

On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I bid my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangerous for him

To calculate on this so far, until [He'd,
I saw him some design, which, being be-liev'd, much like to do: he answer'd, "Tush!
It do me no damage;" adding further,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads might have gone off.

Ha! what, so rank! Ah, ha! I know mischief in this man: canst thou say
I can, my liege.

Proceed.
Being at Greenwich,
About Sir William Blomer,—

I remember
That your highness had reprovd the duke
About Sir William Blomer,—

The duke retain'd him his.—But on; what
I remember
Of such a time:—being my sworn servant,
I once I heard, "If" quoth he, "I for this had been committed,
To the Tower, I thought,—I would have port my father meant to act upon [play'd
To worship Richard; who, being at Salisbury, these suit to come in his presence; which if
granted,
he must resemble of his duty, would
and his knife into him."

Now, madam, may his highness live
This man out of prison?

There's something more would out of thee! what say'st!

After "the duke his father," with "the he stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,
spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
discharge a horrible oath; whose tenor were he evil us'd, he would out go the other, by as much as a performance in an absolute purpose.

There's his period,
He is attach'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may perjury in the law, 'tis his; if none,

Let him not seek't of us: by day and night,
He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sands.
Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?
Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage is but merely A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones; [directly

For when thy hold 'em, you would swear
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones: one would take it,
That never saw them pace before, the spavin
Or springhalt reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out christendom.

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.
How now!

What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?
Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?
Lov. The reformation of our travel'd gallants, [tailors.

That fill the courts with quarrels, talk, and Cham. I am glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either (For so run the conditions) leave those remnants

Of fool and feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance Pertaining thereunto, (as fights and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom;) renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings, [travel,

Short blister'd breeches, and those types of
And understand again like honest men; [it,
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take
They may, cum privilegio, wear away [at,
The lag end of their lowliness, and be laugh'd Sands. 'Tis time to give them physic, their
Are grown so catching. [diseases

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whorizons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song, and a fiddle, has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle them ! I am glad they're going :

(For, sure, there's no converting of them ;) now, An honest country lord, as I am, beaten A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,

And have an hour of hearing ; and, hy'r lady, Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands ; Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord ; Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas, Whither were you a-going ?

Lon. To the cardinal's : Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true : This night he makes a supper, and a great one, To many lords and ladies ; there will be

The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lon. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us ; His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble ; He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord, he has where-withal : in him,

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doc-Men of his way should be most liberal ; [trine : They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so ; But few now give so great ones. My barge stays ;

Your lordship shall along.—Come, good sir We shall be late else ; which I would not be,

For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford, This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Presence-Chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small table under state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests.

Enter, on one side, Anne Bullen, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests ; on the other, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his Salutes ye all ; this night he dedicates [grace To fair content and you : none here, he hopes, In all this noble bevy, has brought with her

One care abroad ; he would have all as merry, As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome, [tardy : Can make good people. O, my lord, you're Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.

Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they come I think would better please them : by my

They are a sweet society of fair ones

Lon. O that your lordship were not To one or two of these !

Sands. They should find easy penance,

Lon. As easy as a down-bed would it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you Place you that side ; I'll take the other this : His grace is entering—Nay, you must Two women plac'd together make weather :—My lord Sands, you are one will keep the Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. And thank your lordship.—By your sweet ladies :

[Sits himself between Anne Bullen and another Lady.]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he most

Sands. O, very mad, exclaiming love too :

But he would bite none ; just as I do He would kiss you twenty with a Cham. Well said, my So, now you are fairly seated.—Gentle-

The penance lies on you, if these fair Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little

Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests noble lady,

Orgentleman, that is not freely merry Is not my friend. This, to comfort

And to you all, good health.

Sands. Your grace is Let me have such a bowl may hold my

And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord, I am beholden to you : cheer your Ladies, you are not merry :—gentle- Whose fault is this ?

Sands. The red wine first In their fair cheeks, my lord ; then, Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry

My lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my Here's to your ladyship ; and

For 'tis to such a thing.

Anne. You cannot

Sands. I told your grace, they were anon. [Drum and fife in the chambers.]

Wol.

Cham. Look out there, some of you.

Wol. [Exit a Servant.]
What warlike voice,
And to what end, is this?—Nay, ladies, fear
For all the laws of war you're privileg'd. [not;
Re-enter Servant.
Cham. How now, what is't?

A noble troop of strangers;
And how seem; they've left their barge, and
From foreign princes.

Good lord chamberlain,
French tongue; you can speak the
[them
And pray, receive them nobly, and conduct their presence, where this heaven of beauty shall shine at full upon them.—Some attend

[Exit Chamberlain, attended.]
All arise, and tables removed.
You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it.

A good digestion to you all: and, once more,
I give a welcome on ye;—welcome all.

Enter the King, and twelve others, at Maskers, habited like shepherds, with silen torch-bearers; ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd

To tell your grace,—That, having heard by
Of this so noble and so fair assembly. [same
They might to meet here, they could do no less,
Of the great respect they bear to beauty,
And leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,

Have leave to view these ladies, and entreat
to have of revels with them.

Say, lord chamberlain,
which I pay them [pleasures.
Ladies chosen for the dance. The King chooses Anne Bullen.

The fairest hand I ever touch'd.
[Music, Dance.

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd.
[Music, Dance.

Wol. Your grace!

Pray tell them thus much from me;
That should be one amongst them, by his name, worthy this place than myself; to whom,

I'll not know him, with my love and duty

I would surrender it.

I will, my lord.
[Goes to the Maskers, and returns.

Such a one, they all confess,
grace
[Exit, and he will take it.

Wol.

Let me see, then.—

[Comes from his state.

By all your good leaves, gentlemen;—here I'll My royal choice, [make

K. Hen. [Unmasking.] You have found him, cardinal:

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord;
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge you now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad
Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain,
Pr'ythee, come hither: what fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, Sir Thomas
Bullen's daughter, [women.

The viscount Rochford, one of her highness'
K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one!—
Sweetheart,

I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kiss you.—A health, gentlemen!

Let it go round.
Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet
I' the privy chamber? [ready

Lov. Yes, my lord.
Wol. Your grace,

I fear, with dancing is a little heated.
K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber. [sweet partner,

K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one:—
I must not yet forsake you:—let's be merry:—
Good my lord cardinal, I have half a dozen

healths
To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead them once again; and then let's dream
Who's best in favour.—Let the music knock it.

[Exit with trumpets,

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?
2 Gent. O.—God save you!

E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you That labour, sir. All's now done, but the
Of bringing back the prisoner. [ceremony

2 Gent. Were you there?
1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray, speak what has happened.
1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?
1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd
2 Gent. I am sorry for't. [upon it.

1 Gent. So are a number more.
2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it? [duke

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great Came to the bar; where, to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defend the law.

The king's attorney, on the contrary,
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses; which the duke desir'd
To have brought, viva voce, to his face:
At which appear'd against him, his surveyor;
Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,
Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?

1 Gent. The same.
All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he Could not;

And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
Was either pitied in him, or forgotten. [self]

2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear him-

1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear

His knell ring out, his judgment, he was stirr'd
With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2 Gent. I do not think he fears death.

1 Gent. Sure, he does not,
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.

2 Gent. Certainly
This cardinal is the end of this.

1 Gent. 'Tis likely
By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,
Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.

2 Gent. That trick of state
Was a deep envious one.

1 Gent. At his return,
No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally, whoever the king favours,
The cardinal instantly will find employment,
And far enough from court too.

2 Gent. All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathoms deep: this duke as much
They love and dote on; call him bounteous
The mirror of all courtesy. [Buckingham,

1 Gent. Stay there, sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter Buckingham from his arraignment;
tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side; with him Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Sir William Sands, and common people.

2 Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and thencego home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die; yet, heaven bear
witness,

And if I have a conscience let it sink me,

Even as the axe falls, if I be not faultless!
The law I bear no malice for my death.
It has done, upon the premises, but I
But those that sought it I could wish to Christians:

Be what they will, I heartily forgive them;
Yet let them look they glory not in Nor build their evils on the graves of
men;

For then my guiltless blood must cry
them.

For further life in this world I ne'er have Nor will I sue, although the king
More than I dare make faults.

lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buck-
His noble friends and fellows, whom I
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my seat.

And, as the long divorce of steel files on
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice
And lift my soul to heaven.—Lead him

name.

Lon. I do beseech your grace, for
If ever any malice in your heart

Were hid against me, now to forgive me
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I forgive all

As I would be forgiven: I forgive all
There cannot be those numberless injuries
'Gainst me, that I cannot take grace.

No black envy shall mark my grave;
Command me to his grace;

And, if he speak of Buckingham, I
him

You met him half in heaven: my
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul

Shall cry for blessings on him, I may Longer than I have time to tell his Ever belov'd and loving may his rule

And when old time shall lead him to his Goodness and he fill up one monument

Lee. To the water side I must come
grace;

Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. The duke is coming; see the large And fit it with such furniture as will

The greatness of his person.
Buck.

Let it alone; my state now will but
When I came hither, I was lord high

And duke of Buckingham; now, I am Bokun:

Yet I am richer than my base account
That never knew what truth meant, I

And with that blood will make them groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buck-
Who first rais'd head against our king

Flying for succour to his servant's hand
Being distress'd, was by that wretch

And without trial fell: God's peace be Henry the seventh succeeding, truly

And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd,
2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but
is't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this? The
Will have his will, and she must fall.
1 Gent. 'Tis woful,
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Exit.

SCENE II.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.
Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading letter.

Cham. "My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I have well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me;
with this reason,—his master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir."

I fear he will indeed: well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.
Nor. Well met, my lord chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces.
Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?
Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's wife, Has crept too near his conscience. [The wife,
Suf. No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so:
This is the cardinal's doing, the king cardinal:
That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune,
Turns what he list. The king will know him
one day. [Exit else.

Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know him.
Nor. How holily he works in all his business!
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd
the league

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew: [scatters
He dives into the king's soul, and there
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, Fears, and despair, and all these for his
marriage:

And, out of all these to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre:
Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with: even of her,
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not this courageous?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel!
'Tis most true, [speaks them,
These news are everywhere; every tongue
And every true heart weeps for't: all that dare

And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd,
2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but
is't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this? The
Will have his will, and she must fall.
1 Gent. 'Tis woful,
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Exit.

SCENE II.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.
Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading letter.

Cham. "My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I have well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me;
with this reason,—his master would be served
before a subject, if not before the king; which
stopped our mouths, sir."

I fear he will indeed: well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.
Nor. Well met, my lord chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces.
Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?
Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's wife, Has crept too near his conscience. [The wife,
Suf. No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so:
This is the cardinal's doing, the king cardinal:
That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune,
Turns what he list. The king will know him
one day. [Exit else.

Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know him.
Nor. How holily he works in all his business!
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd
the league

Between us and the emperor, the queen's
great nephew: [scatters
He dives into the king's soul, and there
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, Fears, and despair, and all these for his
marriage:

And, out of all these to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre:
Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with: even of her,
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not this courageous?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel!
'Tis most true, [speaks them,
These news are everywhere; every tongue
And every true heart weeps for't: all that dare

And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd,
2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but
is't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this? The
Will have his will, and she must fall.
1 Gent. 'Tis woful,
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Exit.

SCENE II.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.
Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading letter.

Cham. "My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I have well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me;
with this reason,—his master would be served
before a subject, if not before the king; which
stopped our mouths, sir."

I fear he will indeed: well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.
Nor. Well met, my lord chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces.
Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?
Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's wife, Has crept too near his conscience. [The wife,
Suf. No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Look into these affairs, see this main end,—
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open

The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages: all men's honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed:
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
I knew him and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king
From these sad thoughts, that work too much
upon him:

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me elsewhere: besides,
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.

Norfolk draws the curtain. The King is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much
K. Hen. Who is there, ha? [afflicted.

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations?

Who am I, ha? [seizes

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all of Malice no'er meant: our breach of duty this Is business of estate; in which we come [way
To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold:
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business:

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?—

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal!—O, my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a king.—[To Campeius.]

You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us, and it.—[To Wolsey.] My good lord,
I be not found a talker. [have great care

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

K. Hen. [To Norfolk and Suffolk.] We are busy; go.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] This priest has no pride in him.

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] Not to speak of;

I would not be so sick though for his joy:
But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] If it do,
I'll venture one have-it him.

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] I another [Exit Norfolk and Suffolk.]

Wol. Your grace has given a precious wisdom,

Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Clarendon!

Who can be angry now? what envy reacheth
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to

Must now confess, if they have any credit,
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in Christian lands

Have their free voices: Rome, the voice of judgment,

Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good and

This just and learned priest, cardinal Campeius:
Whom once more I present unto your grace.

K. Hen. And once more in mine arms him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their love:
They have sent me such a man I would not wish'd for.

Cam. Your grace must needs deserve strangers' loves,

You are so noble. To your highness I tender my commission; by whose virtue

[The court of Rome commanding] you
lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me
In the impartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen's be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come.—When Wol. I know your majesty has lov'd her

So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law.

Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her.
K. Hen. Ay, and the best, also shall and my favour

To him that does best: God forbid else
dinal,

Pr'ythee, call Gardiner to me, my new
I find him a fit follow.

Re-enter Wolsey, with Gardiner.

Wol. [Aside.] Give me your hand:
joy and favour to you;

You are the king's now.

Gard. [Aside.] But to be commanded
For ever by your grace, cardinal

K. Hen. Come hither, [They converse with

Cam. My lord of York, was not our
In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, my lord.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, my lord.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill
Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How?

They will not stick to say, you envied
him?

And since he would rise, he was so virtuous,
that a foreign man still; which so griev'd

him, Heaven's peace be with him!

Wol. A Christian care enough: for living menures

He would needs be virtuous: that good
follow,

I command him, follows my appointment:
I will have none so near also. Learn this,

As he not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
I'll deliver this with modesty to the most convenient place that I can think of, [Exit Gardiner.]

There ye shall meet about this weighty business.

My lord, see it furnish'd. O my lord,
I do not grieve an able man to leave his service:—

But, conscience, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

science, con-

And venture maidenhead for't; and so would
For all this spice of your hypocrisy: [you,

You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,
Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet

Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:
Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and which [Savings your mining] the capacity

Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,

If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth,— Old L. Yes, troth, and troth;—you would not be a queen!

Anne. No, not for all the riches under Old L. 'Tis strange: a three-pence bow'd would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it: but, I pray you,

What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made: pluck off a little;

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to: if your back

Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen

For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing: I myself

Would for Carnarvonshire, although there
'long'd!

No more to the crown but that.—Lo, who Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morning, ladies. What were't worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking;

Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and become
The action of good women: there is hope [ing

All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's

Taken of your many virtues, the king's majesty Commands his good opinion of you to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing Than marchioness of Pembroke; to which title

A thousand pound a-year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know

What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my all is nothing: nor my prayers

Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities: yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience

As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;
Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you.—[Aside.] I have perus'd her well;
Beauty and honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the king: and who knows yet,
But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle!—[To her.] I'll to the
And say, I spoke with you. [King,
Anne. My honour'd lord.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court, (Am yet a courtier beggarly,) nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late,
For any suit of pounds: and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here, (fie, fie, fie upon This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth
Before you open it. [Sil'd up,

Anne. This is strange to me.
Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.

There was a lady once, ('tis an old story,)
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt:—have you heard it?
Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme, I could O'er-mount the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect!
No other obligation! By my life,
That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess:—say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard, to her.

Old L. What do you think me?
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-Friars.

*Trumpets, cornets, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the Archbishop of Canterbury, alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, at some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the Great Seal, and a Cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross;
then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed,
accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms,
bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after* *them, side by side, the two Wolsey and Campden; two with the sword and mace. The King and Queen, and their King takes place under the cloth;

the two Cardinals sit under The Queen takes place of from the King. The Bishop selves on each side the couch,
of a consistory; below them,
The Lords sit next the Bishop and the rest of the Attendants convenient order about the Wol. Whilst our commission from*

Let silence be commanded. [What's
K. Hen. It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allow'd;
You may, then, spare that time.

Wol. Scribe. Say, Henry king of England, into the court.

Crier. Henry king of England,
K. Hen. Here. [Come into the Scribe. Say, Katharine queen of England,
Crier. Katharine queen of England,

[The Queen makes no answer, rises her chair, goes about the court, the King, and kneels at his feet
speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me
And to bestow your pity on me; for I
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger
Born out of your dominions; having
No judge indifferent, nor no more
Of equal friendship and proceeding.
In what have I offended you? what Hath my behaviour given to your
That thus you should proceed to put
And take your good grace from me?
witness,

I have been to you a true and humble
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yes, subject to your countenance, since
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which Have I not strove to love, although I
He were mine enemy? what friend
That had to him deriv'd your anger,
Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharged. Say,
mind

That I have been your wife, in this Upward of twenty years, and have
With many children by you; if, in the
And process of this time, you can
And prove it too, against mine honour
My bond to wedlock, or my love and Against your sacred person, in God's Turn me away; and let the foul'st
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please

The king, your father, was reputed for a prince most prudent, of an excellent and unmatch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand, my father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one of the wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

a year before: it is not to be question'd that they had gather'd a wise council to them of every realm, that did debate this business, who deem'd our marriage lawful: wherefore

I humbly
beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel
I will inquire: if not, if the name of God, your pleasure be fulfill'd!

You have here, lady,
(these reverend fathers; men of singular integrity and learning, the elect o' the land, who are assembled to plead your cause: it shall be therefore without loss

that longer you desire the court; as well for your own quiet, as to rectify that is unsettled in the king.

His grace
will at this royal session do proceed;
that, without delay, their arguments be now produc'd and heard.

Lord cardinal,
Your pleasure, madam? Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that we are a queen, (or long have dream'd so),
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Be patient yet.
I will, when you are humble;
or that will punish me. I do believe, that I am mine enemy: and make my challenge you shall not be my judge: for it is you have blown this coal betwixt my lord and

me.—
Which God's dew quench!—Therefore I say stirly abhor, yea, from my soul [again, you for my judge; whom, yet once
more,

I hold my most malicious foe, and think not at all a friend to truth.

I do profess
I speak not like yourself; who ever yet were clad to charity, and display'd the effects of disposition gentle, and of wisdom in a woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:
I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
to you, or any: how far I have proceeded,
how far farther shall, is warranted
by a commission from the consistory,—

Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me

That I have blown this coal: I do deny it:
The king is present: if it be known to him
That I gain say my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood! you, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which before

His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speak-
And to say so no more. [ing,

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd; [ing,

You sign your place and calling, in full seem-
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favour,
Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted [words,

Where powers are your retainers; and your Domestics to you, serve your will as't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
you,

You tender more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual: that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope.
To bring my whole cause fore his holiness,
And to be judg'd by him.

[She courtesies to the King, and offers to depart.

Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again. Into the court, Crier. Katharine queen of England, come Grif. Madam, you are called back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way: [help!
When you are call'd, return.—Now, the Lord
They vex me past my patience!—Pray you,
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more [pass on:
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exit Queen, Griffith, and her other Attendants.

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man if the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,—

Obeying in commanding,—and thy parts Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out.)
The queen of earthly queens:—she's noble
born;

And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Pol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing Of all these ears, (for where I am robb'd and bound,

There must I be unloos'd; although not there
At once, and fully satisfied,) whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness; or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't? or ever
Have to you,—but with thanks to God for such A royal lady,—spake one the least word that Be to the prejudices of her present state, [might
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do; by some of these
The queen is put in anger. You're excus'd:
But will you be more justified? you ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business;
never

[oft,
Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd,
The passages made toward it:—on my honour,
I speak my good lord cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,

I will be bold with time, and your attention:—
Then mark th' inducement. Thus it came;— give heed to't:—

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness,
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador;

Who had been hither sent on the debating
A marriage 'twixt the duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary: i' the progress of this Ere a determinate resolution, he [business,
(I mean, the bishop) did require a respite:
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, Sometime our brother's wife. This respite shook

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble

[way,
The region of my breast; which forc'd such
That many maz'd considerations did throng,
And press'd in with this caution. First, me-
thought

I stood not in the smile of Heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't, than
To be grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them: hence I took a
thought,

This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom,

Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should not

Be gladdened in't by me: then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realm might
By this my issue's fall; and that gave to Many a groaning throat. Thus having
The wild sea of my conscience, I did then Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well;
By all the reverend fathers of the law,
And doctors learn'd:—first I began to pray
With you, my lord of Lincoln; you remember How under my oppression I did seek,
When I first mov'd you,

Lin. Very well, and long. I have spoke long:—
K. Hen. I have spoke long:—
How far you satisfied me. [Goes out.]

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment to't,
And consequence of dread,—that I could
The daring at counsel that I had to do,
And did entreat your highness to this point,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. Then I mov'd
My lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this present summons:—
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded Under your hands and seals: therefore For no dislike i' the world against the
Of the good queen, but the sharp forward
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my law,
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with Katharine our queen, before the world.
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, tis a new hindrance
That we adjourn this court till further
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her grace
She intends unto his holiness.

K. Hen. [Aside.] I may
These cardinals trifle with me: I doubt
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome
My learn'd and well-belov'd servants
Pr'ythee, return! with thy approach,
My comfort comes along.—Break up the
I say, set on.

[Exit, in manner as they were going.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. Palace at Whitehall.

A Room in the Queen's Apartments.

The Queen, and some of her women, with

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench; it grows sad with troubles;
Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst.

SONG.

Uphens with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops that freeze,
Saw themselves, when he did sing
To his music, plants and flowers
In spring; as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring
Everything that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Droop their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart,
Full asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.
Kath. How now!

Cardinal. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals

Kath. Would they speak with me!
Cardinal. They will'd me say so, madam.

Kath. Pray their graces [Exit Gent.] What can be
[favour]

Kath. A poor weak woman, fallen from their business
[favour]

Kath. I don't like their coming, now I think on't.
[favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

Kath. I should be good men; their affairs as [favour]

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady.

I am sorry my integrity should breed
(And service to his majesty and you)
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow; [blessed,
You have too much, good lady; but to know How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam,

My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,— Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure

Both of his truth and him, (which was too
Offers, as I do, in sign of peace, [far],—
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside.] To betray me.

My lords, I thank you both for your good wills:

Ye speak like honest men: (pray God, ye prove so!)

But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,
(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,

In truth, I know not. I was set at work Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking

Either for such men, or such business.
For her sake that I have been, (for I feel
The last fit of my greatness,) good your graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause:

Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless!

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England

But little for my profit: can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness'

pleasure, [ast,]

(Though he be grown so desperate to be hon-
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must go to, live not here:

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,
In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your grace

Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection;

He's loving, and most gracious: 'twill be much
Both for your honour better, and your cause;

For if the trial of the law o'ertake you,
You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly.

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,
—my ruin:

Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a Judge
That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us.

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men
I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear ye; Mend them, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady?
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries;
I have more charity: but say, I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest
at once

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Vol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon ye,

And all such false professors! Would ye have (If ye have any justice, any pity;

If ye be anything but churchmen's habits)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?

Alas, he has banish'd me his bed already;
His love, too long ago! I am old, my lords,

And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen

To me above this wretchedness? all your
Make me a curse like this. [studies

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—(let me speak myself, [one]

Since virtue finds no friends,)—a wife, a true
A woman (I dare say without vain-glory)

Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections

Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven?
obey'd him?

Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?

And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,

One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his
pleasure;

And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience.

Vol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at. [so gullible]

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself
To give up willingly that noble title

Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Vol. Pray, hear me.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,

Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.

What will become of me now, wretched lady?
I am the most unhappy woman living.

[To her women.] Alas, poor wretches,
are now your fortunes!

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no
No friends, no hope; no kindred woe!

Almost no grave allow'd me:—like the
That once was mistress of the field and I'll hang my head and perish. If your

I will.

Could but be brought to know our honest,

You'd feel more comfort: why should
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas, you

The way of our profession is against
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow

For goodness' sake, consider what you do!
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly

Grow from the king's acquaintance,
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,

So much they love it; but to stubborn
They swell, and grow as terrible as

I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray,

Those we profess, peace-makers,
servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. Ye
With these weak women's fears: a wretched

As yours was put into you, ever cast Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The loves you;

Beware you lose it not: for us, if you

To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords, pray, forgive me,

If I have us'd myself unmannerly;
You know I am a woman, lacking wit

To make a seemly answer to such Pray, do my service to his majesty:

He has my heart yet; and shall have my While I shall have my life. Come, my fathers,

Bestow your counsels on me: she now

That little thought, when she sat from
She should have bought her dignity

SCENE II.—Ante-chamber to the King's
ment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of folk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in plaints,

And force them with a constancy, the Cannot stand under them: if you will

The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain more new

With these you bear already. I am Sur.

To meet the least occasion that may Remembrance of my father-in-law, the

He reveng'd on him. Which of the Sig.

Have unconcern'd gone by him, or neglected? when did he regard himself in any person,

My lords, you speak your pleasures:
that we can do to him, (though now the time way in us,) I much fear. If you cannot the access to the king, never attempt anything on him; for he hath a witchcraft over the king in his tongue.

O, fear him not;
the king hath found himself against him, that for ever mars of his language. No, he's settled, and will come off, in his displeasure.

Sir,
I could be glad to hear such news as this every hour.

Believe it, this is true:
the divorce his contrary proceedings
all unfolded; wherein he appears,
I would wish mine enemy.

How came

Most strangely.

O, how, how?

The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried.

read, to the eye o' the king: wherein was the cardinal did entreat his holiness to take place, "I do," quoth he, "perceive the king is tangled in affection to the queen's lady Anne Bullen."

Has the king this?

Believe it.

Will this work?

The king in this perceives him, how he hedges his own way. But in this point of his tricks founder, and he brings his physic

to his patient's death: the king already had married the fair lady.

May you be happy in your wish, my lord, I promise you have it.

Now, all my joy

My amen to't!

All men's!

There's order given for her coronation:

this is yet but young, and may be left to some ears unrecounted.—But, my lords, and and feature: I persuade me, from her shall fall some blessing to this land, which shall be memoriz'd.

But, will the king

this letter of the cardinal's?

Lord forbid!

Marry, amen!

No, no:

there be more wasps that buzz about his nose,

Will make this sting the sooner, Cardinal
Campellus

Is stolen away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;

Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,

To second all his plot. I do assure you

The king cried, ha! at this.

Now, God incense him,

And let him cry ha! louder!

But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which

Have satisfied the king for his divorce,

Together with all famous colleges

Almost in Christendom; shortly, I believe,

His second marriage shall be publish'd, and

Her coronation. Katharine no more

Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,

And widow to prince Arthur.

This same Cranmer's

A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain

In the king's business.

He has; and we shall see him

For it an archbishop.

So I hear.

'Tis so.

The cardinal.

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Observe, observe, he's moody.

The packet, Cromwell, gave it you

the king?

To his own hand in his bedchamber.

Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?

Presently

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind; a heed

Was in his countenance. You he bade

Attend him here this morning.

Is he ready

To come abroad?

I think, by this he is.

Leave me awhile.—[Exit Cromwell.]

It shall be to the duchess of Alençon,

The French king's sister; he shall marry her.—

Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for

him:

There's more in't than fair visage.—Bullen!

No, we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish

To hear from Rome.—The marchioness of

Nor. He's discontented. [Pembroke!]

May be, he hears the king

Does what his anger to him.

Sharp enough,

Lord, for thy justice!

The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter, [queen!]

To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's

This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;

Then, out it goes.—What though I know her virtuous

And well deserving? yet I know her for

A spleeny Latheran; and not wholesome to

Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of

Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up

A heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.
Suf. I would 'twere something that would
The master-cord of's heart! [fret the string,
Suf. The king, the king!

Enter the King, reading a schedule; and Lovell.

K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated

To his own portion! and what expense by the hour [of thrift,

Seems to flow from him! How, if the name
Does he rake this together!—Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. [Advancing.] My lord, we have Stood here observing him: some strange commotion

Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange
We have seen him set himself. [postures

K. Hen. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd: and wot you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly!
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing,—
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household;
which

I find at such proud rate, that it outspeaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will:
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.

Wol. Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness.

K. Hen. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind; the which You were now running o'er: you have scarce
time

To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span,
To keep your earthly audit: sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which
I bear in the state; and nature does require

Her times of preservation, which pro-
I, her frail son, amongst my business
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have
Wol. And ever may your highness
together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying! [Tis well said,
K. Hen. Tis well said,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds.

Wol. My lord,
He said he did; and with his deed
His word upon you. Since I had
I have kept you next my heart; now
Employ'd you where high profits

home,
But pard' my present having, to loose
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside to the others.] The king
crease this business!

K. Hen. Have I not
The prime man of the state! I port

me
If what I now pronounce you have
And, if you may confess it, say what
If you are bound to us, or no. What Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your graces,

Show'd on me daily, have been
My studied purposes requite; while
Beyond all man's endeavour—my desire
Have ever come too short of my desire
Yet fill'd with my abilities: mine own
Have been mine so, that evermore they
To the good of your most sacred
The profit of the state. For your
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserving,
Can nothing render but allegiance
My prayers to heaven for you; my love
Which ever has and ever shall be
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: the honour of
Does pay the act of it: as, if the con-
The foulness is the punishment
That as my hand has open'd bounty
My heart dropp'd love, my power

our more
On you than any; so your hand and
Your brain, and every function of your
Should, notwithstanding that you
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. That for your highness' good I ever
More than mine own; that am
will be,
Though all the world should crack Abound, as thick as thought could
and

Her times of preservation, which pro-
I, her frail son, amongst my business
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have
Wol. And ever may your highness
together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying! [Tis well said,
K. Hen. Tis well said,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds.

Wol. My lord,
He said he did; and with his deed
His word upon you. Since I had
I have kept you next my heart; now
Employ'd you where high profits

home,
But pard' my present having, to loose
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside to the others.] The king
crease this business!

K. Hen. Have I not
The prime man of the state! I port

me
If what I now pronounce you have
And, if you may confess it, say what
If you are bound to us, or no. What Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your
graces,

Show'd on me daily, have been
My studied purposes requite; while
Beyond all man's endeavour—my desire
Have ever come too short of my desire
Yet fill'd with my abilities: mine own
Have been mine so, that evermore they
To the good of your most sacred
The profit of the state. For your
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserving,
Can nothing render but allegiance
My prayers to heaven for you; my love
Which ever has and ever shall be
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: the honour of
Does pay the act of it: as, if the con-
The foulness is the punishment
That as my hand has open'd bounty
My heart dropp'd love, my power

our more
On you than any; so your hand and
Your brain, and every function of your
Should, notwithstanding that you
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. That for your highness' good I ever
More than mine own; that am
will be,
Though all the world should crack Abound, as thick as thought could
and

Wol. To form more horrid; yet my duty,
I, her frail son, amongst my business
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have
Wol. And ever may your highness
together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying! [Tis well said,
K. Hen. Tis well said,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds.

Wol. My lord,
He said he did; and with his deed
His word upon you. Since I had
I have kept you next my heart; now
Employ'd you where high profits

home,
But pard' my present having, to loose
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside to the others.] The king
crease this business!

K. Hen. Have I not
The prime man of the state! I port

me
If what I now pronounce you have
And, if you may confess it, say what
If you are bound to us, or no. What Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your
graces,

Show'd on me daily, have been
My studied purposes requite; while
Beyond all man's endeavour—my desire
Have ever come too short of my desire
Yet fill'd with my abilities: mine own
Have been mine so, that evermore they
To the good of your most sacred
The profit of the state. For your
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserving,
Can nothing render but allegiance
My prayers to heaven for you; my love
Which ever has and ever shall be
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: the honour of
Does pay the act of it: as, if the con-
The foulness is the punishment
That as my hand has open'd bounty
My heart dropp'd love, my power

our more
On you than any; so your hand and
Your brain, and every function of your
Should, notwithstanding that you
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. That for your highness' good I ever
More than mine own; that am
will be,
Though all the world should crack Abound, as thick as thought could
and

Her times of preservation, which pro-
I, her frail son, amongst my business
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have
Wol. And ever may your highness
together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying! [Tis well said,
K. Hen. Tis well said,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds.

Wol. My lord,
He said he did; and with his deed
His word upon you. Since I had
I have kept you next my heart; now
Employ'd you where high profits

home,
But pard' my present having, to loose
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside to the others.] The king
crease this business!

K. Hen. Have I not
The prime man of the state! I port

me
If what I now pronounce you have
And, if you may confess it, say what
If you are bound to us, or no. What Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your
graces,

Show'd on me daily, have been
My studied purposes requite; while
Beyond all man's endeavour—my desire
Have ever come too short of my desire
Yet fill'd with my abilities: mine own
Have been mine so, that evermore they
To the good of your most sacred
The profit of the state. For your
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserving,
Can nothing render but allegiance
My prayers to heaven for you; my love
Which ever has and ever shall be
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: the honour of
Does pay the act of it: as, if the con-
The foulness is the punishment
That as my hand has open'd bounty
My heart dropp'd love, my power

our more
On you than any; so your hand and
Your brain, and every function of your
Should, notwithstanding that you
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. That for your highness' good I ever
More than mine own; that am
will be,
Though all the world should crack Abound, as thick as thought could
and

Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for them, and, no
doubt,

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal
You ask with such a violence, the king (Mine and your master) with his own hand
gave me;

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life; and to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents;—now, who'll take Sur. The king, that gave it. [It Wol. It must be himself, then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.
Wol. Proud lord, thou hast:

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bawling land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals (With thee and all thy best parts bound together)

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your
You sent me deputy for Ireland; [policy!
Far from his succour, from the king, from all That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him;

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts: how innocent I was.

From any private malice in his end,
His nobles jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour;

That, in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master, Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel

My sword if the life-blood of thee else.—My
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance! [lords
And from this fellow! If we live thus tamely
To be thus fad'd by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap, like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaming all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You writ to the pope, against the king: your goodness,

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My lord of Norfolk,—as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles

Wol. I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which
I bear in the state; and nature does require

Her times of preservation, which pro-
I, her frail son, amongst my business
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have
Wol. And ever may your highness
together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying! [Tis well said,
K. Hen. Tis well said,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds.

Wol. My lord,
He said he did; and with his deed
His word upon you. Since I had
I have kept you next my heart; now
Employ'd you where high profits

home,
But pard' my present having, to loose
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside to the others.] The king
crease this business!

K. Hen. Have I not
The prime man of the state! I port

me
If what I now pronounce you have
And, if you may confess it, say what
If you are bound to us, or no. What Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your
graces,

Show'd on me daily, have been
My studied purposes requite; while
Beyond all man's endeavour—my desire
Have ever come too short of my desire
Yet fill'd with my abilities: mine own
Have been mine so, that evermore they
To the good of your most sacred
The profit of the state. For your
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserving,
Can nothing render but allegiance
My prayers to heaven for you; my love
Which ever has and ever shall be
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: the honour of
Does pay the act of it: as, if the con-
The foulness is the punishment
That as my hand has open'd bounty
My heart dropp'd love, my power

our more
On you than any; so your hand and
Your brain, and every function of your
Should, notwithstanding that you
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. That for your highness' good I ever
More than mine own; that am
will be,
Though all the world should crack Abound, as thick as thought could
and

Collected from his life:—I'll startle you
Worse than the sacking bell, when the brown
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal. [wrench Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it.

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand:

But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you.
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and cry they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections; if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than my head.—
Have at you!

First, that, without the king's assent or know-
You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus [else Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the
To be your servant. [king

Suf. Then, that, without the knowledge Either of king or council, when you went Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance, [science,

[By what means got, I leave to your own con-
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord,
Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them.
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
So little of his great self. [him

Sur. I forgive him.
Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,

Because all those things you have done of late,
By your power legatine, within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a premunire.—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenelements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be Out of the king's protection:—this is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your tations

How to live better. For your table
About the giving back the great seal
The king shall know it, and, no more,
thank you.

So fare you well, my little good lord,
(Exeunt all save Wol.)

Wol. So, farewell to the Duke bear me.

Farewell, a long farewell, to all my
This is the state of man: to-day he
The tender leaves of hope; to-morrow

And bears his blushing honours
The third day comes a frost; a killing frost
And,—when he thinks, good day! and surely

His greatness is a ripening.—Who
And then he falls, as I do. I have Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-
At length broke under me; and now
Weary and old with service, to the vilest
Of a rude stream, that must for ever
Vain pomp and glory of this world,
I feel my heart new open'd. O, how Is that poor man that hangs on favours:

There is, betwixt that smile we would
That sweet aspect of princes, and their More pangs and fears than wars or
And, when he falls, he falls like lightning Never to hope again.—

Enter Cromwell, anxious.
Why, how now, Wol?

Crom. I have no power to speak.

Wol. At my misfortunes? can thy spirit
A great man should decline? [Cromwell
I am fallen indeed. How does your Wol.

Never so truly happy, my good lord,
I know myself now; and I feel with
A peace above all earthly dignities.
A still and quiet conscience. The cur'd me,

I humbly thank his grace; and
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, have
A load would sink a navy, too much
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a Too heavy for a man that hopes for Crom. I am glad your grace has right use of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able (Out of a fortitude of soul I feel.)
To endure more miseries, and greater Than my weak-hearted enemies dare
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the best
Is your displeasure with the king.
Wol.

The next is, that Sir Thomas More counselor in your place. [is chosen

That's somewhat sudden: May he continue in his highness' favour, and do justice
To his conscience; that his blessings,
He has run his course and sleeps in a tomb of orphans' tears wept on
[them.

That Cromwell is return'd with wel-
come.

Wol. That's news indeed!

Last, that the lady Anne,
was view'd in secrecy long married,
in a chapel; and the voice is now about her coronation.

There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell,

That one woman I have lost for ever:
shall ever usher forth mine honours,
my smiles. Go, get thee from me,
Cromwell;

A poor fallen man, unworthy now
My lord and master: seek the king;
I pray, may never set! I have told
[thee;

And how true thou art: he will advance
my noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

My noble nature, I not let
[well,

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee:

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, [not;
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st,
O Cromwell,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king;
And,—pr'ythee, lead me in:

There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell,
Cromwell!

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You are well met once again.

2 Gent. So are you. [and behold

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here,
The lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter.

The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd
This, general joy. [sorrow,

2 Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens, [minds;
I am sure, have shown at full their royal
As, let them have their rights, they are ever forward

In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater;
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that con-
That paper in your hand? [tains,

1 Gent. Yes, 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day,
By custom of the coronation.

The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high steward; next, the duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl-marshal: you may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir: had I not known those customs,

I should have been beholden to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off

From Amphill, where the princess lay; to which [not:]

She was often cited by them, but appear'd And, to be short, for not appearance, and The king's late scruple, by the main assent Of all these learned men she was divorc'd, And the late marriage made of none effect: Since which she was removed to Kimbolton, Where she remains now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady!—

[Trumpets.]

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

The Order of the Procession.

A lively flourish of trumpets; then, enter

1. Two Judges. [before him,
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace
3. Choristers, singing. [Music.]

4. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown.

5. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronet of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.

6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.

7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair, richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I Who's that that bears the sceptre? [know:—
1 Gent. Marquess Dorset:

And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That The duke of Suffolk? [should be

1 Gent. 'Tis the same; high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?

1 Gent. Yes. [bless thee]

2 Gent. [Looking on the Queen.] Heaven Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.— Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel:

Our king has all the Indies in his arms, And more and richer, when he strains that lady: I cannot blame his conscience.

1 Gent. They that bear The cloth of honour over her, are four barons Of the Cinque-ports. [all, are near her

2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. [Enter
And sometimes falling ones. No more

1 Gent.

[Exit Procession, with a flourish of trumpets.]

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?

3 Gent. Among the crowd of the where a finger

Could not be wedg'd in more: I am With the mere rankness of their joy

2 Gent. You saw the ceremony?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it?

3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able.

Of lords and ladies, having brought To a prepar'd place in the choir.

A distance from her; while her grace To rest a while, some half an hour

In a rich chair of state, opposing The beauty of her person to the people

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest That ever lay by man: which when

Had the full view of, such a noise As the shrouds make at sea in a storm

As loud, and to as many tunes: hap (Doublets, I think) drew up; and faces

Been loose, this day they had been I never saw before. Great-bellied

That had not half a week to go, In the old time of war, would shake

And make them reel before them. living

Could say, "This is my wife," there So strangely in one place.

2 Gent. But, what follow'd?

3 Gent. At length her grace rose

Came to the altar; where she knelt saint-like,

Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and devoutly.

Then rose again, and bow'd her to the When by the archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown

The rod, and bird of peace, and emblems

Laid nobly on her: which performed With all the choicest music of the Together sung Te Deum. So she And with the same full state pass'd

To York-place, where the feast is 1 Gent.

You must no more call it York past;

For, since the cardinal fell, that title 'Tis now the king's, and call'd a Whore

3 Gent.

But 'tis so lately alter'd, that the old Is fresh about me.

What two reverend bishops
That went on each side of the [Winchester,
Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of London, the other of the king's secretary.]

He of Winchester
A great good lover of the archbishop's, Cranmer.

All the land knows that;
Yet there's no great breach; when
[him.]

Who may that be, I pray you?
Thomas Cromwell;

much esteem with the king, and [truly]

Thomas Cromwell;
already, of the jewel-house,
He will deserve more.

Yes, without all doubt,
Men, ye shall go my way, which to the court, and there ye shall be my guests!

I can command. As I walk thither,
You command us, sir.

Exit.
SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

Katharine, Dowager, sick; led between Griffith and Patience.

How does your grace?
O Griffith, sick to death;

like laden branches, bow to the [chair:—

to leave their burden. Reach a
[me,

great child of honour, cardinal [Wolsey,

madam; but I think your grace,
the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Well, the voice goes, madam;
the stout earl Northumberland and brought him forward sorely tainted) to his answer,

At last, with easy roads, he came to the abbey; where the reverend gave these words,—“O father broken with the storms of state,

his weary bones among ye;
a little earth for charity!”

where eagerly his sickness

Pursu'd him still; and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, (which he himself Foretold should be his last,) full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
And yet with charity:—He was a man [him,

Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one, that, by suggestion,
Tied all the kingdom: sinuous was fair play,

His own opinion was his law: i' the presence
He would say untruths; and be ever double,
Both in his words and meaning. He was

But where he meant to ruin, pitiful: [never,
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.

Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness

To hear me speak his good now?
Kath. Yes, good Griffith,
I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal,
Though from a humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading:
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not;

But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you,

Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with
him,

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,

That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him.

For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little!
And, to add greater honours to his age [God.

Than man could give him, he died fearing Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,

To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith,
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made

With thy religious truth and modesty. [me,
Now in his ashes honour: peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower;

I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that and note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solemn music.]

Grif. She is asleep: good wench, let's sit down quiet.

For fear we wake her: softly, gentle Patience. The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden visards on their faces; branches of bays, or palm, in their hands. They first conge unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head: at which, the other four make reverent court stes: then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head; which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as it were by inspiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye? Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for: Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No! Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?

They promis'd me eternal happiness; And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, [feel assuredly.]

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave, They are harsh and heavy to me.

[Music ceases. Do you note

How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden? How long her face is drawn! How pale she And of an earthy cold! Mark her eyes! [looks,] Grif. She is going, wench: pray, pray,

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—

Kath. You are a saucy fellow: Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame, Knowing she will not lose her wonted great-To use so rude behaviour: go to, kneel, [mess,]

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying

A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but Let me ne'er see again. [this fellow [Exeunt Griffith and Messenger.

Re-enter Griffith, with Cap.

You should be lord ambassador

emperor,

My royal nephew, and your name

Cap. Madam, the same, your grace

Kath. The times and titles now are also

With me, since first you know me

What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. First, mine own service to your grace

The king's request that I would visit

Who grieves much for your weakness

Sends you his princely commendations

And heartily entreats you take good

Kath. O my good lord, that courtesy

'Tis like a pardon after execution

me;

But now I am past all comfort

How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, he is

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever

When I shall dwell with woman, and

name

Banish'd the kingdom!—Patience

I can't you write, yet sent away!

Pat. [Grieving if it be

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray

This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing

Kath. In which I have commended

goodness

The model of our chaste love,

daughter!

The dews of heaven fall thick do

her!

Beseeching him to give her

(She is young, and of a noble

I hope, she will deserve well) and

To love her for her mother's sake,

him,

Heaven knows how dearly.

Is, that his noble grace would

Upon my wretched woman, that

Have follow'd both my fortune

Of which there is not one, I dare

(And now I should not lie,) but

For virtue and true beauty

For honesty and decent carriage

A right good husband, let him

And, sure, those men are happy

have them.

The last is, for my men—they

But poverty could never draw

me!

That they may have their

And something over to remember

If heaven had pleas'd to have

And able means, we had not

These are the whole contents

my lord,

that you love the dearest in this world,
and that poor people's friend, and urge the
this last right.

[King By heaven, I will,
I thank you, honest lord. Remember the long trouble now is passing the world: I tell him, in death I bless'd

—Griffith, farewell.—Farewell,

not leave me yet: I must to bed;

women.—When I am dead, good with honour: strew me over know flowers, that all the world may chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,

me forth: although unqueen'd, yet daughter to a king, inter me. [like —Exeunt, leading Katharine.

ACT V.

—London. A Gallery in the Palace.

Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page

and a lord before him; met by Sir Thomas

—One o'clock, boy, it's not!

It hath struck.

delights: times to repair our nature

these times.—Good hour of night,

Come you from the king, my lord?

I did, sir Thomas; and left him at the Duke of Suffolk.

—I must to him too,

not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

you are in haste: an if there be of your late business: affairs, that my spirits do) at midnight, have

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

—My lord, I love you;

She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—

Hear me, sir Thomas: you're a gentleman
Of mine own way: I know you wise, religious;

And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,—
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me,—

Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and Sleep in their graves.

Loe. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for

Cromwell,—

Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made minister
O' the rolls, and the king's secretary; further,

stands in the gap and trade of more prefer-
With which the time will load him. The archbishop

Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare
One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd

To speak my mind of him: and indeed this Sir, (I may tell it you,) I think I have [day,

incens'd the lords o' the council, that he is,
(For so I know he is, they know he is,)

A most arch-heretic, a pestilence [mor'd,

That does infect the land: with which they Have broken with the king; who hath so far

Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mis-chiefs

Our reasons laid before him, hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board

He be convicted. He's a rank weed, sir
Thomas,

And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good night, sir Thomas.

Loe. Many good nights, my lord: I rest your servant.

[Exeunt Gardiner and Page.

As Lovell is going out, enter the King and
the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-
night;

My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;

Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play.—
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Loe. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman

I sent your message: who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your

Most heartily to pray for her. [highness]

K. Hen. What say'st thou, ha!

To pray for her? what is she crying out?

Loe. So said her woman; and that her Almost each pang a death. [sufferance made]

K. Hen. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and With gentle travail, to the gladdening of Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles; Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone; For I must think of that, which company Would not be friendly to.

Sig. I wish your highness A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.
[Exit Suffolk.]

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the arch-
As you commanded me. [bishop]

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.
[Exit Denny.]

Lov. [Aside.] This is about that which the I am happily come hither. [bishop spake:
Re-enter Denny, with Cranmer.]

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.
[Lovell seems to stay.]

Ha!—I have said,—Begone.

What!—[Exit Lovell and Denny.]

Cran. [Aside.] I am fearful:—wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do de-Wherefore I sent for you. [sire to know]

Cran. [Kneeling.] It is my duty
To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: come, come, give me
your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows:
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you; which, being consider'd,

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower; you a brother
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness [of us,
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your highness;
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my
And corn shall fly asunder: for, I know, [shall There's none stands under more calumnious
Than I myself, poor man. [tongues]

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury:
Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted [up:
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy-dame,

What manner of man are you?
look'd

You would have given me your pains
I should have taken some pains to gether

Yourself and your accusers;
Without indurance, further. Most Cran. The good I stand on is my truth and If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies

Will triumph o'er my person; while Being of those virtues vacant. I have What can be said against me.

K. Hen. How your state stands if the world,
whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not practices

Must bear the same proportion;
The justice and the truth o' the carries

The due o' the verdict with it: as Might corrupt minds procure know

To swear against you? such things
done.

You are potently oppos'd; and with
Of as great size. When you of better

I mean in perjured witness, than Whose minister you are. Go to Upon this naughty earth? Go to You take a precipice for no leap of

And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God and Protect mine innocence, or I fall
The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer
They shall no more prevail, than Keep comfort to you; and this

You do appear before them: What chance,

In charging you with matters, to
The best persuasions to the contrary

Fail not to use, and with what
The occasion shall instruct you: I

Will render you no remedy, this Deliver them, and your appeal to There make before them.—Lovell

man weeps!
He's honest, on mine honour

I swear, he is true-hearted; and None better in my kingdom.—Old L.

And do as I have bid you.—Enter
He has strangled
His language in his tears.

Enter Old Lady.
Gent. [Within.] Come back: Old L.

Old L. I'll not come back: Enter
I bring
Will make my boldness manners

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade
Under their blessed wings! Now, by

K. Hen. I guess thy message. Is the queen
Say, ay: and of a boy.

Ay, ay, my liege;
 Now and ever bless her!—'Tis a girl,
 Your visitation, and to be Wed with this stranger: 'tis as like you
 As I am to cherry.

Lovell, —

Re-enter Lovell.

Re. Give her a hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit.
 L. A hundred marks! by this light, I'll have more, or scold it out of him.
 For this, this girl was like to him!
 Have more, or else away't; and now,
 'Tis not, I'll put it to the issue.

[Exit.

II.—The Lobby before the Council
 Chamber.

Cranmer; Servants, Door-keeper, &c., attending.

I hope I am not too late; and yet
 the gentleman, [me
 sent me to me from the council, pray'd great haste.—All fast! what means this?—Hail!

—Sure, you know me!
 Yes, my lord;
 I cannot help you. Cran. Why?
 Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

So.
 [Aside.] This is a piece of malice.

the way so happily: the king understand it presently. [Exit.
 [Aside.] 'Tis Butts,

physician: as he past along,
 he cast his eyes upon me!
 he sound not my disgrace! For of purpose laid by some that hate me, from their hearts! I never sought their [make me

 at door, a fellow-counsellor,
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their mine honour: they would shame to [make me

 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

and I attend with patience.
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

What's that, Butts!
 I think your highness saw this many
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

There, my lord,
 promotion of his grace of Canterbury;
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

What's that, Butts!
 I think your highness saw this many
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

There, my lord,
 promotion of his grace of Canterbury;
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

What's that, Butts!
 I think your highness saw this many
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their
 [make me
 boys, groom, and lackeys. But their

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed:
 Is this the honour they do one another!

'Tis well there's one above them yet. I had thought,

They had parted so much honesty among them,
 (At least, good manners,) as not thus to suffer
 A man of his place, and so near our favour,
 To dance attendance on their lordships'

pleasures,
 And at the door too, like a post with packets.

By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery:
 Let them alone, and draw the curtain close:
 We shall hear more anon. [Exit above.

The Council Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, and Cromwell. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Archbishop of Canterbury. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. Cromwell

at the lower end as secretary.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secre-

Why are we met in council? [ary;
 Crom. Please your honour,

The chief cause concerns his grace of Canter-

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it? [bury, Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords!

Gar. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop;

And has done half an hour, to know your

Chan. Let him come in. [pleasures.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now.

[Cranmer approaches the Council-table.

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry

To sit here at this present, and behold

That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
 In our own natures frail, and capable Of our flesh: few are angels: out of which frailty, [teach us,
 And want of wisdom, you, that best should Have misdeem'd yourself, and not a little,
 Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
 The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,
 (For so we are informed,) with new opinions,
 Divers and dangerous; which are heresies,
 And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, [horses
 My noble lords; for those that tame wild Pace them not in their hands to make them gentle,
 But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur them,
 Till they obey the manage. If we suffer (Out of our easiness and childish pity
 To one man's honour) this contagious sickness,
 Farewell all physic: and what follows then!
 Commotions, uproars, with a general taint

Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can clearly witness,
Yet freshly pittied in our memories. [progress]

Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the
Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching,
And the strong course of my authority,
Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living
(I speak it with a single heart, my lords)

A man that more detests, more stirs against,
Both in his private conscience and his place,
Defacers of a public peace, than I do.

Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart
With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment,
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships,
That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment, [pleasure,

We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness'
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good lord of Winchester, I thank you; [pass,

You are always my good friend; if your will
I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
You are so merciful: I see your end,
'Tis my undoing: love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition:
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt, as you do conscience,
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary;
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers, [ness.

To men that understand you, words and weak-

Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little, [noble,

By your good favour, too sharp; men so
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty
To lead a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so true Men's prayers then would seek you, and fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold lea-

Crom. Remember your bold life too. This is his Chan. Forbear, for shame, my lords. I have

Gar. Crom.

Chan. Then thus for you, my etands agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith

You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner

There to remain, till the king's further

Be known unto us: are you all agreed?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way?

But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. Would you expect? you are strangely

some,

Let some o' the guard be ready

Enter Guard.

Cran. Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. I have a little yet to say. Stay, good

By virtue of that ring, I take my leave

Out of the gripes of cruel men, and

To a most noble judge, the king my Chan. This is the king's ring. 'Tis an

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven

ye all,

When we first put this dangerous

rolling,

'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my

The king will suffer but the little

Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too

How much more is his life in value

Would I were fairly out o' it. My mind

Crom. In seeking tales and informations

Against this man, (whose honesty

And his disciples only envy at.

Ye blew the fire that burns ye. Now

Enter the King, frowning on them

his seat.

Gar. Dread sov'reign, how much bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such

Not only good and wise, but most

One that, in all obedience, and, to

The chief aim of his honour; and, to

That holy duty, out of dear respect

His royal self in judgment comes to

The cause betwixt her and this great

K. Hen. You were ever good commendations,

Winchester. But know, I come not so thin and base to hide offences.
You cannot reach; you play the spaniel, bark with wagging of your tongue to win me:

What's'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure
I had a cruel nature and a bloody.

[Enter.] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest that's most, but wag his finger at thee:
that's holy, he had better starve,
and once think this place becomes thee

May it please your grace,— [not] thought, I had had men of some understanding

of my council; but I find none.
In direction, lords, to let this man,
and man, (how of you deserve that title,) man, wait like a lousy footboy before door, and one as great as you are?

What a shame was this? Did my commission

as far forget yourselves? I gave ye a groom: there's some of ye, I see,
of malice than integrity,

for him to the utmost, had ye mean;
ye shall never have while I live.

Thus far,
I dread so'vel reign, may it like your grace
my tongue excuse all. What was purpose his imprisonment, was rather to faith in men) meant for his trial, for pardon to the world, than malice,

in me.
Well, well, my lords, respect him;
and use him well, he's worthy of it.

say thus much for him, if a prince beholden to a subject, I love and service, so to him.

no more ado, but all embrace him:
for shame, my lords!—My lord of Canterbury,

which you must not deny me:
a fair young maid that yet wants
a father,

be godfather, and answer for her.
The greatest monarch now alive may honour: how may I deserve it, and humble subject to you?

Come, come, my lord, you'd spare
your spoons:

have two noble partners with you;
of Norfolk, and lady marquess of Pembroke;

please you?—
my lord of Winchester, I charge and love this man. [you]

With a true heart
I do it.

Can. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart:

The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus, "Do my lord of Canterbury

A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever."
Come, lords, we trifle time away: I long
To have this young one made a Christian.

As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Palace-Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise, anon, ye rascals; do you take the court for Paris-garden?
ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones:

these are but switches to 'em.—I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings?
Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

[possible]

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much im-(Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons)

To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be.
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd!
Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot [in]
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.
Man. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor Collbrand,

[any]

To mow them down before me: but if I spar'd
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,

Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again;
And that I would not for a cow, God save her!

[Within.] Do you hear, master porter?
Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?
Port. What should you do, but knock them down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir.
There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face; for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days now reign in's nose: all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance. That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pinked porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, "Clubs!" when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; made good my place: at length they came to the broom-staff with me; I defied 'em still: when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of them in Lambo Patrum, and these they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beads, that is to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here! [coming.]

They grow still too; from all parts they are As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters, hand fellows:

his own vine, what he plants; and sing
songs of peace to all his neighbours:
he truly known; and those about her shall read the perfect ways of honour, and by those claim their greatness, not by
blood.

shall this peace sleep with her; but as when
of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix, new create another heir
in admiration as herself;

shall she leave her blessedness to one,
heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness.)

from the sacred ashes of her honour, like rise, as great in fame as she was,
stand fix'd: peace, plenty, love, truth,
terror,

more the servants to this chosen infant,
then be his, and like a vine grow to him:
over the bright sun of heaven shall shine, honour and the greatness of his name and make new nations: he shall like a mountain cedar, reach his branches about him:—our children's children

this, and bless heaven.

Thou speakest wonders.
Thou shalt be, to the happiness of

England,
princess; many days shall see her,
no day without a deed to crown it.
I had known no more! but she must

die,
saints must have her, yet a

A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn

K. Hen. O lord archbishop, [her.

Thou hast made me now a man! never, before
This happy child, did I get anything:

This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,

That when I am in heaven I shall desire

To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all.—To you, my good lord mayor,

And your good brethren, I am much beholden;

I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,

And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords; [thank ye;

Ye must all see the queen, and she must

She will be sick else. This day, no man think

He has business at his house; for all shall stay:

This little one shall make it holiday. [Recount.

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please

All that are here: some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,

We've frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,

They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the city

Abus'd extremely, and to cry,—"That's witty!"

Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,

All the expected good we're like to hear

For this play at this time, is only in

The merciful construction of good women;

For such a one we shoud them: if they smile,

And say 'twill do, I know, within a while

All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap,

If they hold, when their ladies bid them clasp.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Priam, King of Troy.

Hector,

Troilus,

Paris,

Deiphobus,

Helenna,

Æneas,

Antenor,

Calchas, *a Trojan Priest, taking part with theGreeks.*Pandarus, *Uncle to Cressida.*Margarelon, *a Bastard Son of Priam.*Agamemnon, *the Grecian General.*Menelaus, his Brother.

Achilles,

Ajax,

Ulysses,

Nestor,

Diomedes,

Patroclus,

Thersites, *a deformed and scurrilous*Alexander, *Servant to Cressida.*Troilus, *Servant to Paris; Servant*Helen, *Wife to Menelaus.*Andromache, *Wife to Hector.*Cassandra, *Daughter to Priam; a good*Cressida, Daughter to Calchas.Trojan and Greek Soldiers and Attendants.

SCENE.—Troy, and the Grecian Camp before it.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crowns regal, from the Athenian bay

Put forth toward Phrygia: and their vow is made

To ransack Troy; within whose strong im-
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the
To Tenedos they come; [quarrel.And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their war-like fraughtage: now on Dardan plainsThe fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilios, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples,
And responsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard: and hither am I come
A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice; but suited
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play Leaps o'er the vauit and firstlings of those broils,Beginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.Like, or find fault; do as your pleasure
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Troy. Before Priam's Palace.

*Enter Troilus armed, and Pandarus.*Tro. Call here my varlet; I'll answer
Why should I war without the walls of Troy?
That find such cruel battle here within Each Trojan that is master of his house,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas, hath Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?Tro. The Greeks are strong, and will their strength,Fierce to their skill, and to their
But I am weaker than a woman's tooth,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skillless as unpractis'd infancy.Pan. Well, I have told you enough for my part, I'll not meddle nor say further. He that will have a cake of wheat, must tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you want

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you want

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; the knowing in the word "hereafter," the know-making of the cake, the heating of the and the baking; nay, you must stay ing too, or you may chance to burn your stay behind her father; let her to and so I'll tell her the next time I

Oyes. Good, and what of him?

δημόσιο Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Θεσσαλονίκης

Alex. They say he is a very man, per se,
And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men, — unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion:
there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attain, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair; he hath the joints of everything; but everything so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Cres. Who comes here?

Enter Pandarus.

Alex. Madam, your uncle, Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: What do you talk of? — Good morrow, Alexander. — How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I saw was Hector armed and gone, ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she? [up.]

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not.

Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his Pan. Was he angry? [anger.]

Cres. So he says, here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that: and there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before, and knew

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus. [him.]

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector. [degrees.]

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would Cres. So he is. [he were.]

Pan. Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself; —
'a were himself! Well, the gods are time must friend, or end: well, Troilus
— I would my heart were in her cell —
Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you tell me another tale, when the other Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have

Pan. Nor his qualities; —

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him, if he better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece; — herself swore th' other day, that Troilus brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must needs brown neither, —

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not

Pan. She prais'd his complexion already.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour somewhat better.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have to if she praised him above, his complexion higher than his; he having colour and the other higher, is too slender for a good complexion. I had as lief golden tongue had commended Troilus copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Troilus him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does to him th' other day into the window, — and, you know, he has three or four hairs on his chin, —

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's scutcheon soon bring his particulars therein.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and he, within three pound, lift as much brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and lifter?

Pan. But, to prove to you that he him, — she came, and puts me her to his cloven chin, —

Cres. Juno have mercy! how could his smiling becomes him better than

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis almost in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in Pan. Why, go to, then; — but I

you that Helen loves Troilus, —

Cres. Troilus will stand to the you'll prove it so.

Troilus! why, he esteems her no more than an addle egg.

If you love an addle egg as well as I do, you would eat chickens with it.

I cannot choose but laugh, to think he had his chin;—indeed, she has a white hand, I must needs confess,—

Without the rack. [hair on his chin.
And she takes upon her to spy a white hair, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

But there was such laughing!—queen laughed, that her eyes ran o'er,—
With mill-stones.

And Cassandra laughed,—
But there was more temperate fire in the jet of her eyes: did her eyes run
And Hector laughed. [o'er too!

At what was all this laughing?
Helen, at the white hair that Helen Troilus' chin.

As't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

They laughed not so much at the pretty answer.

What was his answer?
Cressida, "Here's but one and fifty white hairs, and one of them is white."

That's her question.
That's true; make no question of one and fifty hairs," quoth he, "and that white hair is my father, and the rest are his sons." "Jupiter!" quoth he, "The forked one," quoth he;
and give it him." But there was no chafed, and all the rest so that it passed.

So let it now; for it has been a great thing, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday.

Cress. So I do.
To be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep
over a man born in April.

And I'll spring up in his tears, an dread against May.

[A retreat sounded.
Hark! they are coming from the field:
stand up here, and see them, as they pass.]

Good niece, do: sweet
Cress. At your pleasure.

Here, here, here's an excellent place;
you may see most bravely: I'll tell you their names, as they pass by; but stand above the rest.

Stand not so loud.

Antenor passes.
That's Antenor: is not that a brave man of the flowers of Troy, I can mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Antenor passes.
That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit,

I can tell you; and he's a man good enough:
he's one o' the soundest judgments in Troy,
whosoever, and a proper man of person.—
When comes Troilus?—I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at
me.

Cress. Will he give you the nod?
Pan. You shall see.

Cress. If he do, the rich shall have more.
Hector passes.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector!
—There's a brave man, niece!—O brave Hector!
—Look how he looks! there's a countenance! Is't not a brave man?

Cress. O, a brave man!
Pan. Is't not? It does a man's heart good:
—look you what hacks are on his helmet!
look you yonder, do you see? look you there;
there's no jesting; there's laying on, take't off
who will, as they say; there be hacks!

Cress. Be those with swords?
Paris passes.

Pan. Swords? anything, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one: by god's lid, it does one's heart good.—Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece: is't not a gallant man too, is't not?
—Why, this is brave now.—Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troilus now!—You shall see Troilus anon.

Cress. Who's that?
Helenus passes.

Pan. That's Helenus:—I marvel where Troilus is:—that's Helenus:—I think he went not forth to-day:—that's Helenus.

Cress. Can Helenus fight, uncle?
Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight indifferent well.—I marvel where Troilus is.— Hark! do you not hear the people cry, Troilus?
—Helenus is a priest.

Cress. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?
Troilus passes.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus:
—'tis Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!
—Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cress. Peace, for shame, peace!
Pan. Mark him; note him:—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece; look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helmet more hacked than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth!
he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris!— Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen,
to change, would give an eye to boot.

Cress. Here comes more.
Forces pass.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die i' the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles; a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well!—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man; and then to be baked with no date in the pie,—for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these; and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where? [you.]

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [him.]

[Exit Boy.]

I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle,—

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token,—you are a bawd.

[Exit Pandarus.]

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice offers in another's enterprise: [fice,

But more in Troilus thousandfold I see,

Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;

Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing:

Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing:

That she below'd knows nought, that knows not this,—

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:

That she was never yet, that ever knew

Love got so sweet as when desire did sue:

Therefore this maxim out of love I teach,—

Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech:

Then, though my heart's content firm love doth bear,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.
Agamemnon's Tent.

Sennet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Menelaus, and others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jannet on
The ample proposition, that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below, Fails in the promisd largeness: such disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest

As knots, by the conflux of meeting

Infect the sound pine, and draw the Tortive and errant from his course

Nor, princes, is it matter now to us

That we come short of our supposed

That, after seven years' siege, yet stand

stand;

Sith every action that hath gone before

Whereof we have record, trial did draw

Bias and thwart, not answering the

And that unbolled figure of the thought

That gave't surmised shape. Woe princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our

And call them shames, which are nought else

But the protractive trials of great Love

To find persistive constancy in men

The fineness of which metal is not found

In fortune's love; for then, the coward,

The wise and fool, the artist and un-

The hard and soft, seem all abash'd

But, in the wind and tempest of her

Distinction with a broad and pow'ful

Puffing at all, winnows the light away

And what hath mass, or matter, by

Lies rich in virtue, and unmingled

Nest. With due observance of the Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall speak

Thy latest words. In the reproval of Lies the true proof of men: the sea smooth,

How many shallow bauble boats drive

Upon her patient breast, making their

With those of nobler bulk!

But let the ruffian Boreas once come

The gentle Thetis, and anon, tides

The strong-ribb'd bark through tains cut,

Bounding between the two moist shores

Like Perseus' horse: where's the boat,

Whose weak untimber'd sides but

Co-rival'd greatness! either to

Or made a toast for Neptune.

Doth valour's show, and valour's

In storms of fortune: for, in brightness,

The herd hath more annoyance by the

Than by the tiger; but when the wind

like the knot of knotted oaks, shed under shade, why, then, the thing of courage,
 with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
 with an accent tun'd in self-same key,
 to sliding fortune.

Agamemnon, — great commander, nerve and bone of

of our numbers, soul and only spirit, the temper and the minds of all about up, — hear what Ulysses speaks, the applause and approbation

Ulysses. — [To Agam.] most mighty for thy peace and sway, —

 And thou most reverend for thy steadfast-out life, — to both your speeches, — which were such

and the hand of Greece

and up high in brass; and such again

able Nestor, hatch'd in silver, [tree with a hand of air, strong as the axle-heaven rides, knit all the Greekish

[both, —
 Ulysses'd tongue, — yet let it please

Ulysses. — and wise, — to hear Ulysses

[less expect Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of other needless, of importless burden,

thy lips, than we are confident,

Thersites opens his mastick jaws,

and hear music, wit, and oracle.

Troy, yet upon his basis, had been great Hector's sword had lack'd a these halcyons. [master, of rule hath been neglected:

how many Grecian tents do stand upon this plain, so many hollow fac-

the general is not like the hive,

the foragers shall all repair, [arded,

is expected? Degree being viz-

what shows as fairly in the mask.

themselves, the planets, and this green, priority, and place, [centre,

course, proportion, season, form,

in all line of order:

is the glorious planet, Sol,

the other; whose mercurial eye

all aspects of planets evil,

like the commandment of a king,

to good and bad; but when the

to disorder wander, [planets,

and what portents! what

The enterprise is sick. How could communities,

Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
 Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,

The primogenitive and due of birth,
 Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,

But by degree, stand in authentic place?
 Take but degree away, untune that string,

And, hark, what discord follows! each thing
 meets

In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,

And make a sop of all this solid globe:
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,

And the rude son should strike his father dead:
 Force should be right; or rather, right and

wrong

(Between whose endless jar justice resides)
 Should lose their names, and so should justice

Then everything includes itself in power, [too.
 Power into will, will into appetite;

And appetite, a universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,

Must make perforce a universal prey,
 And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,

This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
 Follows the choking.

And this neglect of degree it is,
 That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose

It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
 By him one step below; he, by the next;

That next, by him beneath: so every step,
 Exemplified by the first pace that is sick

Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
 Of pale and bloodless emulation:

And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
 Not her own minews. To end a tale of length,

Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength. [cover'd

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here dis-
 The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
 What is the remedy? [Ulysses,

Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns

The sinew and the forehead of our host,
 Having his ear full of his airy fame,

Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
 Lies mocking our designs: with him, Patro-

Upon a lazy bed, the livelong day [Juno,

Breaks scurril jests;
 And with ridiculous and awkward action,

(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,)
 He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamem-

Thy topless deputation he puts on; [non,

And, like a strutting player, — whose conceit
 Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich

To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffold-

age, —
 Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming

He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms un-

squard,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
dropp'd,

Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff,
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;

Cries, "Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy
As he, being 'drest to some oration." [beard,
That's done;—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife:

Yet good Achilles still cries, "Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patro-Arming to answer in a night alarm." [claus,
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit;
And, with a palay-fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, "O, enough, Patroclus;
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen." And in this fashion,

All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain (Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice) many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him;
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
Boils as an oracle; and sets Thersites
(A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint)
To match us in comparison with dirt,
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice:

Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Foretell prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on; and know, by measure

Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war;
So that the ram that batters down the wall,
For the great awing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine,

Or those that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse Makes many Thetis' sons. [A tucket sounds.

Agam. What trumpet! look, Menelaus,
Men. From Troy.

Agam. What would you fore our tent?
Ane. Is this

Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you!

Agam.

Ane. May one, that is a herald and Do a fair message to his kingly ear?

Agam. With surety stronger than Fore all the Greekish heads, and general.

Call Agamemnon head and general.

Ane. Fair leave, and large security.
A stranger to those most imperial looks,
Know them from eyes of other mortals!

Agam.

Ane. Ay;
I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush

Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus:

Which is that god in office, guiding
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorus us, as the
Are ceremonious courtiers.

Ane. Courtiers are free, as I have arm'd,

As bending angels; that's their time to But when they would seem soldiers, they galls,

Good arms, strong joints, true event,

Nothing so full of heart. But peace,
Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on the lip

The worthiness of praise distains his
If that the praised himself bring

forth:
But what the replying enemy commends

That breath same blows; that praise pure, transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call son
Ane. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray?

Ane. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately.

Ane. Nor I from Troy come not to
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;

To set his sense on the attentive
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as thou
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hours

That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake
He tells thee so himself.

Ane. Trumpet, how Send thy brass voice through all the
tents;

And every Greek of mettle, let him know
What Troy means fairly shall be known.

We have, great Agamemnon, here in A prince call'd Hector,—Priam is his name

Who in this dull and long continued
Is rusty grown: he bade me take a word

And to this purpose speak.—[King
lords]

If there be one among the file of That holds his honour higher than his That seeks his praise more than his peril;

That knows his valour, and knows his mistress more than in confession

vows to her own lips he loves, her beauty and her worth
—to him this challenge.
to view of Trojans and of Greeks, make it good,—or do his best to do it,—
a lady, wiser, fairer, truer, Greek did compass in his arms;
will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
between your tents and walls of Troy,
a Grecian that is true in love:
Hector shall honour him;
he'll say in Troy, when he retires, our dainties are sun-burn'd, and not of a lance. Even so much.

This shall be told our lovers, lord of them have soul in such a kind,
from all at home: but we are soldiers;
that soldier a mere recreant prove,
hath not, or is not in love!
or hath, or means to be,
tell him of Nestor; if none else, I am he.
Hector's grandaie suck'd: he is old man that hath one spark of fire, his love, tell him from me,— my entrance put this wither'd brawn;
him, will tell him that my lady more than his grandam, and as chaste in the world: his youth in flood, the truth with my three drops of

Now heavens forbid such scarcity of Amen.
Fair lord Aeneas, let me touch your fashion shall I lead you, sir.
shall have word of this intent;
each lord of Greece, from tent to tent;
shall feast with us before you go,
the welcome of a noble foe.

Except all except Ulysses and Nestor,
Hector!
What says Ulysses?
I have a young conception in my time to bring it to some shape.
What is't?
Ulysses. This 'tis:
ages rive hard knots: the seeded to this maturity blown up [pride, Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,
breed a nursery of like evil,
us all.

Well, and how? [sends,
He challenge that the gallant Hector is spread in general name,
the purpose only to Achilles. [substance the purpose is perspicuous even as grouns little characters sum up:

And, in the publication, make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, (though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough,) will with great speed of
judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him. [you]

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet: whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring those honours off,
If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful com-
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells; [bat,
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate; and trust to me,
Our imputation shall be addly pois'd [Ulysses,
In this wild action; for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scattering
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice;
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election; and doth boll,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering part,

To steel a strong opinion to themselves!
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech;—
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,
By showing the worse first. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes:
what are they? [Hector,

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Were he not proud, we all should share with
But he already is too insolent; [him:
And we were better parch in Afric sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair: if he were foil'd,
Why, then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among our-
Give him allowance for the better man; [selves,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall

His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,

Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Now, Ulysses, I begin to relish thy
And I will give a taste of it forthwith [advice];
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.

Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites,—

Ther. Agamemnon,—how if he had boils?
full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites,—

Ther. And those boils did run?—Say so,— did not the general run then? were not that a

Ajax. Dog,—

[Botchy core!]

Ther. Then would come some matter from him; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel, then.

[Strikes him.]

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak, then, thou vineyard's leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strikest me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsome scab of Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—

Ther. Thou grumblest and raillest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur! [Beating him.]

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord!
thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an asinine may tutor thee: thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans: and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian;

thou use to beat me, I will begin to and tell what thou art by inches, of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog.

Ajax. You cur!

Ther. Mars him idiot! do, rudeness camel; do, do.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax!

Ther. You this!

How now, Thersites! what's the matter
Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well! why, I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon for, whosoever you take him to be, he is a

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what madman he utters! his evasions have more than he have bobbed his brain more than he my bones: I will buy nine sparrows penny, and his pia mater is not worth ninth part of a sparrow.

Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly,
guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this

[Ajax offers to strike him.]

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit,—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Hector for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and order but the fool will not: he there; that he you, there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go tenor of the proclamation, and he

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was 'twas not voluntary, no man is tary: Ajax was here the voluntary under an impress.

Ther. Even so;—a great deal of too, lies in your sinews, or else they Hector shall have a great catch, if he out either of your brains: 'a was crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Ther?

Ther. There's Ulysses and his whose wit was mouldy ere your on their toes,—yoke you like draught and make you plough up the war.

What, what? [Ajax to!]
Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to,
I shall cut out your tongue.

That no matter; I shall speak as thou, afterwards.

No more words, Thersites; peace!
I will hold my peace when Achilles'
shall me, shall I?

There's for you, Patroclus,
I will see you hanged, like clotpolls,

some any more to your tents; I will there is wit stirring, and leave the of fools.

A good riddance. [all our host:—
Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy,

now morning call some knight to arms, grow a stomach; and such a one, that
[well.

I know not what; 'tis trash. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

I know not, it is put to lottery;
[otherwise,
O, meaning you.—I will go learn more of it.

[Exit.
—Troy, A Room in Priam's Palace.
Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

After so many hours, lives, speeches
spent,
Helen again says Nestor from the Greeks:

Helen, and all damage else,—
of time, travail, expense, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd

in this cormorant war,— struck off?—Hector, what say you [than I,

though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I, soothly my particular, yet, dread

no lady of more softer bowels,
ready to suck in the sense of fear, ready to cry out—"Who knows what honour is: the wound of peace is surety, but modest doubt is call'd
the name of the worst. Let Helen go:
the first sword was drawn about this [dishes, soul, 'mongst many thousand as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:
we lost so many teeth of ours,
that thing not ours, nor worth to us,
the name, the value of one ten;
it is in that reason which denies of her up?

Fie, fie, my brother!
the worth and honour of a king,

So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters
The past-proportion of his infinite? [sum
And buckle in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? No, for godly shame!

Hec. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons
You are so empty of them. Should not our
father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, Because your speech hath none that tells him
so? [brother priest;

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers,
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know an enemy intends you harm;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, Or like a star dis-orb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason, [honour
Let's shut our gates, and sleep: manhood and Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect
Make livers pale, and lustihood deject.

Hec. Brother, she is not worth what she
The holding. [doth cost

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued?
Hec. But valued wells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity,
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself,
As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is attributive
To what infection itself affects,
Without some image of th' affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will ensindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment: how may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elects,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench from this, and to stand firm by
honour:

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands

We do not throw in unrespective sieve, Because we now are full. It was thought meet, [Greeks:
Paris should do some vengeance on the
Your breath of full consent belied his sails;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce, [desir'd;
And did him service: he touch'd the ports
And, for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive, [freshness
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning.

[Exit.]

Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl, Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cried—"Go,
go.")

If you'll confess he brought home noble prize, (As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,

And cry'd—"Inestimable!" why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggard the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O, theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep!
But, thief, unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her

Cas. [Within] Cry, Trojans! [voice.]

Hec. It is Cassandra.

Enter Cassandra, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hec. Peace, sister, peace! [Exit.]

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

[Exit.]

Hec. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these
Of divination in our sister work [high strains
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,

We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst
us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for, and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levity

As well my undertakings as your courage.
But, I attest the gods, your full consent Gave wings to my propulsion, and out of All fears attending on so dire a project
For what, alas! can these my single words
What propugnation is in one man's voice
To stand the push and enmity of these?
This quarrel would excite! Yet, I protest
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath said,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delusion.
You have the honey still, but these the gall.

So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to reward

The pleasure such a beauty brings with it.

But I would have the soil of her fair eyes

Wip'd off, in honourable keeping here.

What treason were it to the ratsuck'd state

Disgrace to your great worths, and then

Now to deliver her possession up.

On terms of base compulsion! Can I be

That so degenerate a strain in your

Should once set footing in your blood?

There's not the meanest spirit on our side

Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw

When Helen is defended; nor none so true

Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death to shun

Where Helen is the subject; then, I pray

Well may we fight for her, whom, if we lose,

well,

The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hec. Paris, and Troilus, you both said well;

And on the cause and question now in hand

Have glaz'd,—but superficially; not so

Unlike young men, whom Aristotle

Unfit to hear moral philosophy;

The reasons you allege do more conduct

To the hot passion of distemper'd blood

Than to make up a free determination

'Twixt right and wrong; for passion

Have ears more deaf than adders to the truth

Of any true decision. Nature craves

All dues be render'd to their owners;

What nearer debt in all humanity

Than wife is to the husband? If this you

Of nature be corrupted through affection

And that great minds, of partial inducements

To their benumb'd wills, resist the same

There is a law in each well-order'd nature

To curb those raging appetites that are

Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king,

As it is known she is,—these moral laws

Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud

To have her back return'd: this is to wrong

In doing wrong extenuates not wrong.

But makes it much more heavy.

Tro. My opinion

Is this, in way of truth: yet, notwithstanding

My spritely brethren, I propend to go.

to keep Helen still;
 that hath no mean dependance
 on point and several dignities.
 Why, there you touch'd the life of our glory that we more affected, performance of our heaving spleens,
 not wish a drop of Trojan blood in her defence. But, worthy of honour and renown;
 to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
 present courage may beat down our
 in time to come, canonize us:
 come, brave Hector would not lose advantage of a promis'd glory,
 upon the forehead of this action,
 this world's revenge.

I am yours,
 offering of great Priamus.—
 meeting challenge sent amongst and furious toables of the Greeks, amazement to their drowsy spirits,
 strength'n their great general slept,
 resolution in the army crept:
 Priamus, will wake him. [Exeunt.

III.—The Grecian Camp. Before
 Achilles' Tent.

Enter Thersites.
 How now, Thersites! what, lost in wrath of thy fury! Shall the elephant it thus! he beats me, and I rail at worthy satisfaction! Would it were that I could beat him, whilst he me, 'till I learn to conjure and this, but I'll see some issue of my spite-retributions. Then, there's Achilles,—a If Troy be not taken till these come it, the walls will stand till they themselves. O thou great thunder-of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the craft of thy caduceus; if ye take little less-than-little wit from they have! which short-armed ignor-knows is so abundant scarce, it will convention deliver a fly from a spider, drawing their many irons and cutting After this, the vengeance on the rather, the bone-ache! for is the curse dependant on war for a placket. I have said my and devil envy, say Amen.—What, thou Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.
 Why's there? Thersites! Good Ther-sit, I could have remembered a gilt not, thou wouldst not have slipped out contemplation; but it is no matter; upon thyself! The common curse of folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then, if she that lays thee out, says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't, she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen.—

 Where's Achilles? [prayer!

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.
 Achil. Who's therē?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come?
 Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles:—then, tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites:—then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus: then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayst tell, that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Aga-memnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus

Patr. You rascal! [is a fool.

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man,—Proceed,
 Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.—
 Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuck-old and a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon.
 Now, the dry serpigio on the subject! and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord. [here.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are
 He shent our messengers; and we lay by
 Our appertainments, visiting of him;
 Let him be told so; lest perchance he think
 We dare not move the question of our place,
 Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent:
He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart:
you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why, why? let him show us a cause. A word,
my lord.

[Taking Agamemnon aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument that has his argument.—Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their faction is more our wish than their faction: but it was a strong composure a fool could disamite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not,
folly may easily untie.—Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry,
If anything more than your sport and pleasure
Did move your greatness, and this noble state,
To call upon him: he hopes it is no other,
But, for your health and your digestion sake,—
An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus:
We are too well acquainted with these answers:
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outly our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath; and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him: yet all his virtues,—
Not virtuously on his own part beheld,—
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss;
Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him,
We come to speak with him: and you shall not
If you do say we think him over-proud (sin,
And under-honest; in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself,

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance; yea, watch
His pettish lures, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tide. Go tell him this: and add,
That if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report,—
Bring action hither, this cannot go to war:
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant:—tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;
We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter
you.

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks Ajax. Is he so much? Do you

he thinks himself a better man than I

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his name

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as valiant, as wise, no less noble, more gentle, and altogether more tractable

Ajax. Why should a man be proud?

doth pride grow? I know not what

Agam. Your mind is the clearest your virtues the fairer. He that up himself: pride in his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and praises itself but in the deed, devours

in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I engendering of toads.

Nest. [Aside.] Yet he loves his Re-enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely

But carries on the stream of his despair

Without observance or respect of any

In will peculiar and in self-admiration

Agam. Why will he not, upon my quest,

Untent his person, and share the air

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for sake only,

He makes important: possessed by greatness;

And speaks not to himself, but with

That quarrels at self-breath: much

Holds in his blood such swollen

course,

That, 'twixt his mental and his action

Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion

And batters down himself: what else

He is so plagu'd proud, that the death

Cry—"No recovery."

Agam. Let Ajax go

Dear lord, go you and meet him in his

'Tis said, he holds you well; and

At your request, a little from him

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it out

We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax

When they go from Achilles: and

lord,

That bastes his arrogance with his

And never suffers matter of the world

Enter his thoughts,—save such as

And ruminate himself,—shall shipp'd

Of that we hold an idol more than

No, this thrice-worthy and right

Must not so stale his palm, nobly

Nor, by my will, asubjugate his

As amply titled as Achilles is,

By going to Achilles:

That were to enlard his fat already

And add more coals to Cancer when

With entertaining great Hyperion go to him! Jupiter forbid:

 [Aside.] O, this is well; he rubs the [Aside.] And how his silence drinks up this applause.
 If I go to him, with my armed fist I'll smite over the face.
 O, no, you shall not go.
 An' a be proud with me, I'll please you: let me go to him.
 Not for the worth that hangs upon

A paltry, insolent fellow!
 [Aside.] How he describes himself!
 Can he not be sociable?
 [Aside.] The raven chides blackness.
 I'll let his humours blood.
 [Aside.] He will be the physician,
 As all men were o' my mind.

[Aside.] Wit would be out of fashion.
 A should not bear it so, 'a should be that: shall pride carry it?
 [Aside.] An't would, you'd carry half.
 [Aside.] 'A would have ten shares.
 I will knead him, I will make him

[Aside.] He's not yet through warm; him with praises. Pour in, pour in; his will dry.
 [To Agam.] My lord, you feed too
 on this dilute.
 Our noble general, do not do so.
 You must prepare to fight without

Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.
 A man—but 'tis before his face;

Wherefore should you so?
 Know the whole world, he is as a whorson dog, that shall palter thus
 Would he were a Trojan!
 What a vice were it in Ajax now,—
 If he were proud,—

Or covetous of praise,— Ay, or surly borne,—
 Or strange, or self-affected!
 Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of

Or sweet composure;
 [suck:]
 him that got thee, her that gave thee labor, and thy parts of nature and discipline'd thy arms to fight,

And divide eternity in twain,
 And bid half: and, for thy vigour,
 Give Milo his addition yield

Alex. I will not praise thy wisdom, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines and dilated parts: here's Nestor, by the antiquary times, [ter,—
 he is, he cannot but be wise;—
 Nestor, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,
 You should not have the eminence of him,
 But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Ulyss. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart
 Achilles

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general
 To call together all his state of war:
 Fresh kings are come to Troy: to-morrow,
 We must with all our main of power stand fast:
 And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west,

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.
 Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:
 Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks
 draw deep. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you,—pray you, a word: do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman;
 I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

Pan. Grace! not so, friend: honour and lordship are my titles.—[Music within.] What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music

Pan. Know you the musicians? [in parts.]

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another:
 I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning.
 At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir: marry, sir, at the request of Paris, my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul,—

Pan. Who, my cousin, Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business aethes.

Sorr. Sudden business! there's a stewed phrase, indeed!

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measures, fairly guide them!—especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.—Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no. Helen. O, sir,—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude. [in fits.]

Par. Well said, my lord! Well, you say so.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord,—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus— [lord,—

Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey-sweet

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you,—

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, I faith. [sour offence.]

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very sweet queen!

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night? Helen. Nay, but my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups. [sida.]

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Crea-

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide; come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if I can not my lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, they are twain.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more.

Helen. I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, prythee now.

Helen. Sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love.

Pan. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid,

Par. Love! ay, that it shall, I love.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so.

[Sings.]

Love, love, nothing but love, still and true.

For, oh! love's bono

Shouts back and down:

The shaft confounds

Not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!

Yet that which seems the worst

Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! ha!

So dying love lives still:

Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!

Helen. In love, I faith, to the very death.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love that breeds hot blood, and hot blood

hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget

and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love?

blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds?

they are vipers: is love a-beld to-day?

—Sweet lord, who's a-beld to-day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, and all the gallantry of Troy: I will have armed to-day, but my brother have it so. How chance my brother went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at some you know all, lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen,— hear how they sped to-day.—You'll your brother's excuse!

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen.

[Exit.]

Par. They're come from field.

Prism's hall, Sweet Helen,

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen,

To help unarm our Hector: for buckles,

With these your white enchantment

Shall more obey than to the steel

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall

Than all the island kings,—

Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud

Yea, what he shall receive of us

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too: our kindred, though they be long ere they are woo'd, they are constant, being won: they are hurs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart:

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid, then, so hard to win? [my lord,

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, With the first glance that ever—pardon me,— If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now; but not, till now, so much But I might master it:—in faith, I lie; My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown [fools!

Too headstrong for their mother:—see, we Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us, When we are so unsecret to ourselves?— But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not; And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man, Or that the women had men's privilege Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence, Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws My very soul of counsel: stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues

Pan. Pretty, I' faith. [thence.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me; 'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss: I am ashamed;—O heavens! what have I done!—

For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you; But an unkind self, that itself will leave, To be another's fool. I would be gone:

Where is my wit! I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely. [than love;

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft And fell so roundly to a large confession, To angle for your thoughts; but you are wise; Or else you love not; for to be wise, and love, Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above. [woman,

Tro. O, that I thought it could be in a (As, if it can, I will presume in you,) To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love; To keep her constancy in plight and youth, Outliving beauty's outward, with a soul That doth renew swifter than blood in veins. Or, that persuasion could not draw from you That my integrity and truth to you Might be affronted with the match and love Of such a winnow'd purity in love. How were I then uplifted! but, alas! I am as true as truth's simplicity, And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. When right with right wars who shall win right!

True swains in love shall, in the world's esteem, Approve their truths by Troilus: whose rhymes,

Full of protest, of oath, and big conceits, Want smiles, truth tir'd with jests. As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to the heavens, Yet, after all comparisons of truth, As truth's authentic author, to be wish'd, As true as Troilus shall grow up the world, And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,

When time is old, and hath forgot the truth, When waterdrops have worn the stones,

Tro. And blind oblivion swallow'd smiles up,

And mighty states characterless are grown, To dusty nothing; yet let memory,

From false to false, among false mounds, Upbraid my falsehood! when they hear,

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, As fox to lamb, as wolf to hatter's coat,

Pard to the hind, or steed to the horse, Yea, let them say, to stick the heart,

As false as Cressid.

Pan. Go to, a bargain made; and it; I'll be the witness. Here I hold you here, my cousin's. If ever you prove to another, since I have taken you to bring you together, let all pitiful gods be called to the world's end, and after call them all—Pandara; let all women be Troiluses, all false women Cressids,

all brokers-between Pandars I say, Amen.

Tro. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will

a chamber and a bed; which both shall not speak of your pretty encounter

it to death: away!

And Cupid grant all tongues tied to the Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide the SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes,

Ajax, Menelaus, and Calcas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service done you,

Th' advantage of the time prompts for recompense. Appear it to your [Jove through the night I bear in things, to a traitor's name; expos'd myself, and possess'd conveniences, fortunes; sequestering from me [Edition, acquaintance, custom, and confession, and most familiar to my nature;

to do you service, am become into the world, strange, unacquainted:
though you, as in way of taste,
now a little benefit,
these many register'd in promise,
you say, live to come in my behalf,
What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?
[Antenor,
he has a Trojan prisoner, call'd you (often have you thanks therefore)
I have in right great exchange, [Troil. I still denied: but this An-such a wroth in their affairs, [Antenor, negotiations all must slack, his manage; and they will almost a piece of blood, a son of Priam, of him: let him be sent, great [Antenor
shall buy my daughter; and her praise crick off all service I have done,
I am pleas'd.

Let Diomedes bear him,
as Cressid hither: Calchas shall requests of us.—Good Diomed, [have you fairly for this interchange:
word if Hector will to-morrow
in his challenge: Ajax is ready.
I shall I undertake; and 'tis a
I am proud to bear.
[Antenor
Diomedes and Calchas.
Achilles and Patroclus, before their tent.
Achilles stands in the entrance of his tent:—

Our general to pass strangely by him,
I have forgot; and, princes all,
I have forgot and loose regard upon him:
Tis like he'll question me,
I have decision eyes are bent, why turn'd between your strangeness and his pride,
I have will shall have desire to drink:
I have good: pride hath no other glass
I have self, but pride; for supple knees
I have and are the proud man's fees.
We'll execute your purpose, and put
I have strangeness as we pass along:— [on
I have lead; and either greet him not,
I have distastefully, which shall shake him
I have look'd on. I will lead the way.
I have What, comes the general to speak
I have my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us? [General

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the Achil. No. Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you? [Exit.

Achil. What! does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha! Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles? [used to bend,

Patr. They pass by strangely; they were
To send their smiles before them to Achilles;

To come as humbly, as they used to creep

To holy alters.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune, [is,

Must fall out with men too: what the declin'd
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,

As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer;

And not a man, for being simply man, [ours
Hath any honour; but honour for those hon-

That are without him, as place, riches, and

Prizes of accident as oft as merit: [favour,

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,

Do one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:

Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess, [find out

Save these men's looks; who do, methinks,
Something not worth in me such rich beholding

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses:

I'll interrupt his reading.—

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me, That man, how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without or in,

Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;

As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they report that heat again

To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses!

The beauty that is borne here, in the face,
The bearer knows not, but commends itself

To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself
(That most pure spirit of sense) behold itself,

Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form:

For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd there

Where it may see itself. This is not strange

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position, [at all.

It is familiar, but at the author's drift;

Who, in his circumstances, expressly proves

That no man is the lord of anything [ing] (Though in and of him there be much consist-
 Till he communicate his parts to others ;
 Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
 Till he behold them form'd in the applause
 Where they are extended ; which, like an arch, reverberates

The voice again ; or, like a gate of steel
 Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in And apprehended here immediately [this ;
 The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there ! a very horse ;
 That has his knows not what. Nature, what things there are,

Most abject in regard, and dear in use !
 What things, again, most dear in the esteem,
 And poor in worth ! Now shall we see tomorrow,— [him,—

An act that very chance doth throw upon Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men
 While some men leave to do ! [do,
 How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,
 Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes !
 How one man eats into another's pride,
 While pride is fasting in his wantonness !
 To see these Grecian lords !—why, even already
 They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
 As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
 And great Troy shrieking. [me,

Achil. I do believe it ; for they pass'd by
 As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me Good word or look. What, are my deeds forgot !

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his Wherein he puts alms for oblivion, [back,
 A great-sized monster of ingratitude :
 Those scraps are good deeds past ; which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
 As done : perseverance, dear my lord, [hang Keeps honour bright : to have done, is to Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail [way ;
 In monumental mockery. Take the instant
 For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
 Where one but goes abreast : keep, then, the
 For emulation hath a thousand sons, [path ;
 That one by one pursue : if you give way,
 Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
 Like to an enter'd tide, they all rush by,
 And leave you hindmost ;—

Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
 Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O'er-run and trampled on : then, what they do in present, [yours ;

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top
 For time is like a fashionable host, [hand ;
 That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
 And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
 Grasp in the corner : welcome ever smiles,
 And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not Remuneration for the thing it was, [virtue seek
 For beauty, wit,
 High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,

Love, friendship, clarity, are subjects to
 To envious and calumniating time.
 One touch of nature makes the whole
 That all, with one consent, praise

gawds,
 Though they are made and monied of
 And give to dust, that is a little gift,
 More land than gift o'er-dusted.
 The present eye praises the present object
 Then, marvel not, thou great and good
 man,

That all the Greeks begin to worship thee
 Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
 Than what that not stirs. The cry went
 And still it might ; and yet it may
 If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive
 And cease thy reputation in thy tomb Whose glorious deeds, but in thy name
 late,

Made emulous missions 'mongst
 And drove great Mars to faction.
 Achil.

I have strong reasons.
 Ulyss. But 'gainst your
 The reasons are more potent and deep
 'Tis known, Achilles, that you are a son
 With one of Priam's daughters. [his father

Achil. Ulyss. Is that a wonder !
 The providence that's in a watchful
 Knows almost every grain of dust
 Finds bottom in th' uncomprehending Keeps place with thought, and all about
 the gods,

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb
 There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of man
 Which hath an operation more divine Than breath or pen can give expression to All the commerce that you have had
 As perfectly is ours, as yours, my lord
 And better would it fit Achilles' mood
 To throw down Hector, than Polyxene
 But it must grieve young Pyrrhus
 When fame shall in our island sound
 And all the Greekish girls shall tell
 " Great Hector's sister did Achilles love
 But our great Ajax bravely beat down
 Farewell, my lord : I see your love
 The fool slides o'er the ice that you break.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, has
 you :

A woman impudent and mannish
 Is not more loath'd than an effeminate
 In time of action. I stand confounded
 They think, my little stomach to the work
 And your great love to me, restrains
 Sweet, rouse yourself ; and the next day
 Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his bow
 And, like a dew-drop from the flower
 Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with me ?

And perhaps receive much honour
 I see my reputation is at stake;
 I'll shew myself bravely.

O, then, beware;
 To do what is necessary [selves:
 I'll be an eagle, subtly taints
 When we sit idly in the sun. [elus:
 Good! Therites hither, sweet Patro-clus the foot to Ajax, and desire him
 the Trojan lords, after the combat, here unarm'd: I have a woman's that I am sick withal, [longing, great Hector in his weeds of peace;
 with him, and to behold his visage,
 may full of view. A labour sav'd!
 Enter Therites.

Enter Therites.
 What!
 I'll go up and down the field asking for himself.
 He must fight singly to-morrow with and is so prophetically proud of a calling, that he raves in saying
 How can that be? [nothing.
 Why, he stalks up and down like a stride, and a stand: ruminates, that hath no arithmetic but her to set down her reckoning: bites his lip in this head, as who should say there is that it lies as coldly in him as fire in a will not show without knocking.
 undone for ever; for if Hector
 this week! the combat, he'll break it in glory. He knows not me; Good-morrow, Ajax;" and he remends, Agamemnon, "What think the man, that takes me for the general?
 a very land-fish, languageless, a a plague of opinion! a man may for both sides, like a leather jerkin.
 There must be my ambassador to him. If why, he'll answer nobody:
 he not answering: speaking is far he wears his tongue in his arms. I when his pronoun: let Patroclus make to me, you shall see the pageant of to him, Patroclus: tell him, I desire the valiant Ajax to invite the Hector to come unarm'd to my to procure safe conduct for his personal honour, and most illustrious, army, Agamemnon, &c. Do this.

 I'll bless great Ajax!
 I'll come from the worthy Achilles,— Who most humbly desires you to to his tent,—

Ther. H'm!

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Ther. Agamemnon! [Agamemnon.

Patr. Ay, my lord. Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other: howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none,—unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse;
 for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain
 And I myself see not the bottom of it. [stirr'd; [Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, on one side, Aeneas, and Servant with a torch; on the other, Paris, Deiphobus, Antenor, Diomedes, and others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Dei. It is the lord Aeneas.

Aene. Is the prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long, [business
 As you, prince Paris, nothing but heavenly Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord Aeneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Aeneas, take his hand;
 Witness the process of your speech, wherein
 You told how Diomed, a whole week by days,
 Did haunt you in the field.

Aene. Health to you, valiant sir,
 During all question of the gentle truce;
 But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
 As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.
 Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long,
 health;

But when contention and occasion meet,
 By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life,
 With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Aene. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will dy [ness,
 With his face backward.—In human gentle-
 Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life,
 Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,

No man alive can love, in such a sort,
The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize:—Jove, let Aeneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun!
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die,
With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Aene. We know each other well. [worse.]

Dio. We do; and long to know each other

Par. This is the most despicable gentle greeting,

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.—
What business, lord, so early? [I know not.]

Aene. I was sent for to the king; but why,

Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas to bring this Greek

To Calchas' house; and there to render him,
For the enforced Antenor, the fair Cressid:
Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us: I constantly do think (Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge)
My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:

Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear
We shall be much unwelcome.

Aene. That I assure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time

Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Aene. Good morrow, all. [Exit with Servant.]

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; 'faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,—
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, Myself or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:

He merits well to have her, that doth seek her (Not making any scruple of her sojourn)

With such a hell of pain and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her that defend her
(Not palating the taste of her dishonour)

With such a costly loss of wealth and friends:
He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece;

You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors:

Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor
But he as he, the heavier for a whore. [more:]

Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman. [Paris:]

Dio. She's bitter to her country: hear me,
For every false drop in her bawdy veins,
Of Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight, [speak]

A Trojan hath been slain: since she could
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this virtue well,—
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.

Here lies our way. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Troy. A Court before the of Pandarus.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call
He shall unbolt the gates. [Trouble not yourself]

Tro. To bed, to bed: sleep kill these pangs
And give us soft attachment to the night.

As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow, to bed.

Tro. Pr'ythee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you weary?

Tro. O Cressida! but that the day
Walk'd by the lark, hathrousd these pangs

And dreaming night will hide our longer,

I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been Troy. Beshrew the witch! with wights she stays

As tediously as hell; but flies the
love,

With wings more momentary—
thought.

You will catch cold, and cause me
Prythee, now

Cres. You men will never tarry.—
O foolish Cressid!—I might have told you

And then you would have tarried there's one up.

Par. [Within.] What, are all the open here?

Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter Pandarus.

Cres. A pestilence on him! now mocking:

I shall have such a life!

Par. How now, how now! how now!
heads!—Here, you maid! where's your Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty
ing uncle!

You bring me to do, and then you Par. To do what? to do what?

say what!—what have I brought you Cres. Come, come, beshrew you you'll ne'er be good,

Nor suffer others.

Par. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch!
capocchia!—hast not slept to-night?

not, a naughty man, let it sleep!
take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you?—
knock'd o' the head!

Who's that at door? good uncle,
My lord, come you again into my

You smile, and mock me, as I naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, no such thing.—

...they knock.—Pray you, come not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Enter Troilus and Cressida.]
[Going to the door.] Who's there?

What's the matter? will you beat down the door now? what's the matter?

Enter Aeneas.
Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Who's there? my lord Aeneas! By what I know you not: what news with

you?

Is not prince Troilus here?

Here! what should he do here?

Come, he is here, my lord; do not ask: it doth import him much to speak

to me.

Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I could have sworn:—for my own part, I came to see him.

What should he do here?

Why!—say, then:—come, come,

do him wrong ere you're ware: you'll be true to him, to be false to him: do not deny him, but yet go fetch him hither:

he is going out, enter Troilus.

Now! what's the matter?

My lord, I scarce have leisure to say you,

but so rash: there is at hand

my brother, and Delphobus,

Diomed, and our Antenor

is here; and for him, forthwith,

let him sacrifice, within this hour,

and give up to Diomedes' hand

his person.

Is it so concluded?

By Paris, and the general state of

Troy:

his hand, and ready to effect it.

How my achievements mock me!

My chance; and, my lord Aeneas,

you did not find me here.

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus,

'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane: he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my

father;

I know no touch of consanguinity;

No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me,

As the sweet Troilus.—O you gods divine!

Make Cressid's name the very crown of false-

hood,

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and

death,

Do to this body what extremes you can;

But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very centre of the earth,

Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in and weep,—

Pan. Do, do. [praised cheeks;]

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my

heart.

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from

Troy. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Troy. Before Pandarus' House.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Aeneas, Deiphobus,

Antenor, and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour pre-fix'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek

Comes fast upon:—good my brother Troilus,

Tell you the lady what she is to do,

And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house;

I'll bring her to the Grecian presently;

And to his hand when I deliver her,

Think it an altar; and thy brother Troilus

A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

[Exit.]

Par. I know what 'tis to love;

And would, as I shall pity, I could help!—

Please you, walk in, my lords. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Pandarus' House.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?

The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,

And no less in a sense as strong as that

Which causeth it: how can I moderate it?

If I could temporize with my affection,

Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,

The like allayment could I give my grief:

My love admits no qualifying dross;

No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes, sweet duck!

Cres. [Embracing him.] O Troilus! Troilus!

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here!

Let me embrace too. "O heart,"—as the goodly saying is,—

"O heart, heavy heart, Why sigh'st thou without breaking?"
where he answers again,

"Because thou canst not ease thy smart,
By friendship nor by speaking."
There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse: we see it, we see it.—How now, lamba!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity,
That the bless'd gods,—as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Put back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents Our lock'd embraces, strangles our dear vows

Even in the birth of our own labouring breath:
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time, now, with a robber's haste,
Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how:
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses
He fumbles up into a loose adieu: [them,
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Anc. [Within.] My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd: some say, the Genius so

Cries, "Come!" to him that instantly must die.—

Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root. [Exit.]

Cres. I must, then, to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woful Cressid 'mougat the merry Greeks!

When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love: be thou but true of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I speak not "be thou true," as fearing thee;

For I will throw my glove to death
That there's no maculation in thy heart.
But, "be thou true," say I, to (what?)
My sequent protestation; be thou true
And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, dangers

As infinite as imminent! but I'll be true
Tro. And I'll grow friend with thee
Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove, when I shall
you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecians
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens! I love!

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
They're loving, well compos'd, with nature flowing,

And swelling o'er with arts and eloquence How novelty may move, and parts with Alas, a kind of godly jealousy (Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous Makes me afear'd.

Cres. O heavens! you have Tro. Die I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith to question
So mainly as my merit: I cannot see
Nor heed the high lavell, nor sweeten
Nor play at subtle games: fair virtue
To which the Grecians are most prone pregnant:

But I can tell, that in each grace of them
There lurks a still and dumb-discourteous
That tempts most cunningly: but I tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done, that we
And sometimes we are devil to ourselves
When we will tempt the frailty of our own Presuming on their changeful passions.

Anc. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,
Tro. Come, kiss; and let me
Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come!

And bring Aeneas, and you be true!

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice,
While others fish with craft for greediness,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity.
Whilst some with cunning gild their villainies
crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear
Fear not my truth: the moral of my life
Is—plain and true:—there's all the Enter Aeneas, Paris, Antenor, and Diomedes.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the
Which for Antenor we deliver you
At the port, lord, I'll give her to the
And by the way possess thee what she Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, I'll stand at mercy of my sword, and thy life shall be as safe

as mine in them.

Fair lady Cressid,
you save this thanks this prince
express:
in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
your fair usage; and to Diomed shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Diomed, thou dost not use me court-
tongue;
the zeal of my petition to thee,
I tell thee, lord of Greece,
is far high-sounding o'er thy praises,
not worthy to be call'd her servant.
Use her well, even for my charge:
the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
shall tear the great bulk Achilles by thy guard,
thy throat.

O, be not mov'd, prince Troilus:
I'm privileg'd by my place and message,
I'm speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll come to my last; and know you, lord,
I do on charge: to her own worth be priz'd; but that you say—Be't so, it is in my spirit and honour.—No.
Come to the port.—I'll tell thee, Diomed, I shall oft make thee to hide thy face.

Give me your hand: and, as we walk,
I'll show you our needful talk.
[Exeunt Troil., Cress., and Diom.]

Trumpet heard.
Mark! Hector's trumpet.

How have we spent this morning!
How must I think me tardy and remiss,
to ride before him to the field.

'Tis Troilus' fault: come, come, to ride with him.
Let us make ready straight.

Yes, with a bridegroom's fresh dexterity,
to tend on Hector's heels:

of our Troy doth this day lie
at stake, and single chivalry.

[Exeunt.]
The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.
Here, armed, Agamemnon, Achilles, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, and others art thou in appointment fresh and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Here art thou in appointment fresh
and fair.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
blood;

Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.
Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days.
Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas'
daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;

He rises on the toe: that spirit of his in aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomedes, with Cressida.
Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?

Diom. Even she.
Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel; I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady;

Achilles bids you welcome.
Men. I had good argument for kissing once, Patr. But that's no argument for kissing
now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment,
And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O, deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads, to gild his horns.
Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;—this,
mine;

Patroclus kisses you.
Men. O, this is trim!

Patr. Paris, and I, kiss evermore for him.
Men. I'll have my kiss, sir.—Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?
Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.
Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady! every man is odd.
Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you.
Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.
Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn:—

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.
Cres. Why, beg, then.

Ulyss. Why, then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due, [you.]

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of Dio. Lady, a word:—I'll bring you to your father, [Leads out Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie, upon her! There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out

At every joint and motive of her body. O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue, That give a coasting welcome ere it comes, And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts To every ticklish reader! set them down For sluttish spoils of opportunity, And daughters of the gume.

[Trumpet heard.]

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop. Enter Hector, armed; Æneas, Troilus, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done

To him that victory commands! Or do you purpose

A victor shall be known! will you, the knights Shall to the edge of all extremity Pursue each other; or shall be divided By any voice or order of the field? Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,

A little proudly, and great deal misprising The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir.

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles; but, whate'er, know this;—

In the extremity of great and little, Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector; The one almost as infinite as all, The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well, And that which looks like pride is courtesy. This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood: In love whereof, half Hector stays at home; Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek [Greek.]

This blended knight, half Trojan and half Achil. A maiden battle, then?—O, I perceive you.

Re-enter Diomedes.

Agam. Here is sir Diomed; go, gentle knight,

Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight, So be it; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath: the combatants being kin, Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists.]

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already. Agam. What Trojan is that state that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Prius, a knight;

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of mind, Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his words; Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, calm'd:

His heart and hand both open, and both true For what he has he gives, what shows;

Yet gives he not till judgment shows bounty,

Nor dignifies an impair thought with his bounty. Mainly as Hector, but more dangerous;

For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, looks plain To tender objects; but he, in heat of battle, Is more vindictive than jealous love.

They call him Troilus; and so Menelaus, A second hope, as fairly built as Hector, Thus says Æneas; one that knows the world Even to his inches, and, with private hand, Did in great Ilium thus translate his name.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax.]

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Tro. Hector, thou art awake thee!

Agam. His blows are well disposed.

Ajax!

Dio. You must no more.

Æne. Princes, enough, as yet.

Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us in.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why, then will I fight.

Thou art, great lord, my father's son, A cousin-german to great Prius's son, The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:

Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan,

That thou couldst say—This know I do

all,

And this is Trojan; the sire of this

All Greek, and this all Trojan; yet

blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this

Bounds in my father's: "by Jove's name,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a drop member

Wherein my sword had not imprinted

Of our rank feud: but the just gods

That any drop thou borrow'dst

mother,

My sacred aunt, should by my mortal

Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax,

By him that thunders, thou hast lov'd me

Hector would have them fall upon me

Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee.

Thou art too gentle and too free a soul

I came to kill thee, cousin, and hear thee

A great addition earn'd in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolomus so mildly

weight great Fame with her loud'st ("Act 1") could promise to himself of aided honour torn from Hector.
 There is expectation here from both sides,
 and you will do.

We'll answer it;

embracement:—Ajax, farewell,
 (I might in entreaties find success,
 I have the chance,) I would desire to our Grecian tents.
 Agamemnon's wish; and great to see unarm'd the valiant Hector, call my brother Troilus to this loving interview [me:

 to our home.—Give me thy hand, my

at with thee, and see your knights, Great Agamemnon comes to meet us
 the worthiest of them tell me, name

his name;
 Achilles, mine own searching eyes
 him by his large and portly size.
 Worth of arms! as welcome as to be rid of such an enemy;

 so welcome: understand more clear,
 and what's to come, is strew'd
 in the ruin of oblivion:

the instant moment, faith and troth,
 away from all hollow bias-drawing,
 with most divine integrity,
 of very heart, great Hector, wel-

I thank thee, most imperious Aga-memnon.
 (To Troilus.) My well-fam'd lord of thy, as loss to you.

let me confirm my princely brother's the;
 of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
 When must we answer?

O you, my lord? by Mars his gaunt-
 the noble Menelaus.
 that I affect the untraded oath;

When wife swears still by Venus'
 O you, but bade me not commend her name her not now, sir; she's a deadly

O person; I offend.
 have, thou gallant Trojan, seen time of,
 for destiny, make cruel way of Greekish youth; and I have

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
 Despising many forfeits and subduements,
 When thou hast hung thy advanced sword
 i' th' air,
 Not letting it decline on the declin'd,
 That I have said to some my standers-by,
 "Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!"
 And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath, [thou in,
 When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd
 Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
 But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
 I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
 And once fought with him: he was a soldier
 good;

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
 Never like thee: let an old man embrace thee;
 And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.
Anc. 'Tis the old Nestor.
Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle, [time:—
 That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,
 As they contend with thee in courtesy.
Hect. I would they could.
Nest. Ha!
 By this white beard, I'd fight with thee tomorrow.
 Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the
 time.
Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
 When we have here her base and pillar by us.
Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses,
 well.
 Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan
 dead,
 Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
 In Ilium, on your Greekish embassy.
Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:
 My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
 For yonder walls, that pertly front your town,
 You towers, whose wanton tops do buss the Must kiss their own feet. [clouds,
Hect. I must not believe you:
 There they stand yet, and modestly I think,
 The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
 A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all;
 And that old common arbitrator, time,
 Will one day end it.
Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
 Most gentle and most valiant Hector, wel-
 come:
 After the general, I beseech you next
 To feast with me, and see me at my tent.
Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses,
 thou!—
 Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
 I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
 And quoted joint by joint.
Hect. Is this Achilles?
Achil. I am Achilles,

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second time,

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport, thou'lt read me o'er;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st. Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body [or there?]

Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, That I may give the local wound a name,

And make distinct the very breach whereout Hector's great spirit flew: answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, To answer such a question: stand again:

Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly, As to prenominate in nice conjecture

Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so, I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,

I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er.— You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,

His insolence draws folly from my lips; But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,

Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin:— And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,

Till accident or purpose bring you to't: You may have every day enough of Hector,

If you have stomach; the general state, I fear, Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field: We have had pelting wars, since you refus'd

The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector? To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;

To-night, all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convive you: afterwards, As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him. Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,

That this great soldier may his welcome know. [Exeunt all except Troilus and Ulysses.]

Tro. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus:

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night; Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth,

But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound so much

After we part from Agamemnon's tent To bring me thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me. As gentle tell me, of what honour you

That waits her absence?

Tro. O, sir, to such as householders are

A mock is due. Will you walk on? She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, she

But, still, sweet love is fool for folly.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp.

Achilles' Tent.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with wine to-night.

Which with my scimitar I'll cut to pieces. Patroclus, let us feast him to the death.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Achil. How now, thou son of a whore?

Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the matter?

Ther. Why, thou picture of a fool, seemest, and idol of idiot-venerations, a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, braggart?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of hell, from the tent of the great Hector.

Patr. The surgeon's box, or the soldier's?

Patr. Well said, adversity! these tricks!

Ther. Pr'ythee, be silent, but by thy talk: thou art thought to be a male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you mean a whore.

Ther. Why, his masculine name, the rotten diseases of the soul, gripping, ruptures, cold palsies, the back, lethargies, cold palsies, dirty-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, full of imposthume, sciaticas, and palm, incurable bone-achings, and fee-simple of the tetter, take and such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why, thou damnable fellow, thou, what meanest thou to curse me?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you raincoat whoremonger indistinguishable from a

Ther. No! why art thou, thou idle immaterial skinn of a green sarconet flap for a sword, a prodigal's purse, thou! Ah, world is pestered with such natives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch egg!

My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted
My great purpose in to-morrow's battle.
From her daughter, my fair love ;
and gaging me to keep breake ; fall fame ; I will not break it :
your vow lies here, this I'll obey.
Therites, help to trim my tent ;
it is banquetting all must be spent. —

[Exit Achilles and Patroclus.]
With too much blood and too little two may run mad ; but if with too and too little blood, they do, I'll of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, but he has not so much brain as ear-
the goodly transformation of Jupiter his brother, the bull,—the primitive and oblique memorial of cuckolds ; a coming-horn in a chain, hanging at his leg,—to what form, but that he will be larded with malice, and malice with wit, turn him to ? To an ass, soling ; he is both ass and ox : to an soling ; he is both ox and ass. To a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a puttock, or a herring without
I would not care ; but to be Menelaus, and conspire against destiny. Ask me
I would be, if I were not Therites, to be the louse of a lazar, so I Menelaus. — Hay-day ! spirits and

Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomedes,
We go wrong, we go wrong.
No, yonder 'tis ;
I trouble you.

Here comes himself to guide you.
Enter Achilles.
Welcome, brave Hector ; welcome,
[good night.]
So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid
the guard to tend on you.
Thanks, and good night, to the general.
Good night, my lord.
Good night, sweet lord Menelaus.
Sweet draught ; sweet, quotha ! sweet server.
Good night, and welcome, both at to those larry.
Good night.

[Exit Agamemnon and Menelaus.]
Old Nestor tarries ; and you too, your company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord ; I have important
business,
The tide whereof is now. — Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.
Ulyss. [Aside to Troilus.] Follow his torch ;
he goes

To Calchas' tent : I'll keep you company.
Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good night.
[Exit Diomedes ; Ulysses and Troilus following.]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.
[Exit Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave ; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses : he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabblers the hound ; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it ; it is prodigious, there will come some change ; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him : they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent : I'll after. Nothing but lechery ! all incontinent varlets. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Grecian Camp. Before Calchas' Tent.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. What, are you up here ! ho ! speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls ?

Dio. Diomed. — Calchas, I think. Where's
your daughter ?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses, at a distance ;
after them Therites, who remains apart.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter Cressida.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him !

Dio. How now, my charge ?

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian ! — Hark, a word with you. [Whispers.]

Tro. Yea, so familiar !

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff ; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember !

Cres. Remember ! yes.

Dio. Nay, but do, then ; and let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember !

Ulyss. List.

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery !

Dio. Nay, then, —

Cres. I'll tell you what, —

Dio. Pho, pho ! come, tell a pin : you are forsworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot : what would you have me do !

...leads, must err: O, then conclude
...by eyes, are full of turpitude.
[Exit.
...proof of strength she could not
...said, "My mind is now turn'd
...All's done, my lord.

It is.
Why stay we, then?
To make a recordation to my soul
...that here was spoke.
...how these two did co-act,
...there is a credence in my heart,
...so obstinately strong,
...invert the attest of eyes and ears;
...these organs had deceptions functions,
...only to calumniate,
...and here!

I cannot conjure, Trojan.
She was not, sure.

Most sure she was.
Why, my negation hath no taste of ...mine, my lord: Cressid was here
...not be believ'd for womanhood!
...and mothers: do not give advantage
...on critics, apt, without a theme,
...to square the general sex
...rule: rather think this not Cressid.
...What hath she done, prince, that can
...our mothers!
...Nothing at all, unless that this were

Will be swagger himself out on's own
...This she! no, this is Diomed's Cressida.
...I have a soul, this is not she;
...could vow, if vows be sanctimony,
...may be the gods' delight,
...rule in unity itself,
...O madness of discourse,
...sets up with and against itself!
...[rebellion] where reason can revolt
...retort: this is, and is not, Cressid!
...my soul there doth conduce a fight
...more wider than the sky and earth;
...the spacious breadth of this division
...to choose for a point as subtle
...O nature's broken woof, to enter.
...O nature's strong as Pluto's gates;
...O nature's tied with the bonds of heaven:
...O nature's strong as heaven itself;
...of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and

...another knot, five-finger-tied,
...of her faith, orts of her love,
...scrap, the bits, and greasy
...faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express!
Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged
well.

In characters as red as Mars his heart Inflamed with Venus: never did young man fancy

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed:
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it; not the dreadful spout,
Which shipmen do the hurricano call,
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my prompted sword Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.
Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Aeneas.
Anc. I have been seeking you this hour, my
lord:

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince.—My courteous lord, adieu.—

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.
Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt Troilus, Aeneas, and Ulysses.]

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus would give me anything for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond, than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: a burning devil take them!

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Troy. Before Priam's Palace.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hec. You train me to offend you; get you in:

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hec. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister: arm'd, and bloody in intent.

Consort with me in loud and dear petition,

Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, 'tis true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens,
sweet brother,

Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish
vows:

They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O, be persuaded: do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow;

But vows to every purpose must not hold:
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the brave man Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.—

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight
to-day!

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit Cassandra.]

Hect. No, 'faith, young Troilus; dost thy harness, youth;

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.

Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave
boy,

I'll stand to-day for thee, and me, and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in Which better fits a lion than a man. [You.]

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Gre-cians fall.

Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector!

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers;
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hect. Pie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight
to-day

Tro. Who should withhold me!

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;

Not Priamus and Heubia on knees,

Their eyes o'ergall'd with remorse of soul,
Nor you, my brother, with your tears
drawn,

Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my
But by my ruin.

Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold

fast:

He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, come,

Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother's visions;

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet audaciously surging.

To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. And I do stand engaged to many Grecians

Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not

Hect. I must not break my faith.

You know me dutiful; therefore, dear

Let me not shame respect; but give me

To take that course by your consent

Which you do here forbid me, royal

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him!

And. Do not, do not!

Hect. Andromache, I am offended

Upon the love you bear me, get you in

Tro. This foolish, drowning, sup-

girl

Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear

Look, how thou dost look, how turns pale!

Look, how thy wounds do bleed vents!

Hark, how Troy roars! how Hector

out!

How poor Andromache shrills

forth!

Behold, distraction, frenzy, and

Like witless antics, one another

And all cry—Hector! Hector!

Hector!

Tro. Away! Away!

Cas. Farewell.—Yet, soft!—Hector!

my leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege claim:

Go in, and cheer the town: we'll

fight;

Do deeds worth praise, and tell you

night.

Pri. Farewell: the gods with about thee!

[Exeunt severally Priam and Alarums.]

Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus! [Exit.
Dio. Ay, there, there.
Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face;
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Ajax. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office,
Ere that correction.—Troilus, I say! what,
Troilus!

Enter Troilus.

Tro. O traitor Diomed!—Turn thy false face, thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!

Dio. Ha! art thou there? Diomed.

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand,

Dio. He is my prize; I will not look upon.

Tro. Come both, you coggng Greeks;
have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yes, Troilus! O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now I do see thee. Ha!—have at thee, Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan:

Be happy that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriend thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well:—

I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee.—How now, my brother!

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him: I'll be taken too,
Or bring him off:—Fate, hear me what I say!
I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.

Enter one in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark:—

No! wilt thou not?—I like thy armour well;
I'll frush it, and unlock the rivets all,

But I'll be master of it:—with thee I'll abide!

Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for my prey!

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you midons;

Mark what I say. Attend me where I strike not a stroke, but keep your
breath:

And when I have the bloody Hector
Empale him with your weapons round about,
In fellest manner execute your arms.

Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings
It is decreed—Hector the great must die.

SCENE VIII.—The Same.

Enter Menelaus and Paris, fighting with Thersites.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold are at it. Now, bull! now, dog!
Paris, 'loo! now, my double-headed 'loo, Paris, 'loo!—The bull has the
'ware horns, ho!

[Exeunt Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Margaret.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love
I am a bastard begot, bastard bastard in mind, bastard in valour, thing illegitimate. One hear will another, and wherefore should one Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous if the son of a whore fight for a tempts judgment: farewell, bastard!

Mar. The devil take thee, coward!

SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrified core, so full Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thee
Now is my day's work done; I'll
breath;

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of
death.

[Put off his helmet, and hangs it behind him.

Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the son set;

How ugly night comes breathing Ever with the veil and darkness of the
To close the day up, Hector's life is Hect. I am unarm'd; forego the Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike man I seek.

So, lion, fall thou next! now, Troy
Hercules thy heart, thy sinews, and thy

And cry you all amain, Hath the mighty Hector slain."

[A retreat sounded.]

And retire upon our Grecian part.

The Trojan trumpets sound the like,

My lord,

The dragon wing of night o'er-

spreads the earth,

And soldier-like, the armies separates.

Half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have led,

And with this dainty hit, thus goes to bed.—

[Sheathes his sword.]

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou

great-sized coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's

thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.]

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! [shame]

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds,

how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill

requited! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me

see:—

[Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;

And being once subdu'd in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall,

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be

made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this,

Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss;

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;

And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.]

But dare all imminence, that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead;

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away;

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet:—you vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou

great-sized coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's

thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.]

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! [shame]

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching

bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the

poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds,

how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill

requited! Why should our endeavour be so

loved, and the performance so loathed? what

verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me

see:—

[Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;

And being once subdu'd in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your

painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall,

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be

made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this,

Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss;

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;

And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.]

But dare all imminence, that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead;

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away;

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet:—you vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou

great-sized coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's

thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.]

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! [shame]

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching

bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the

poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds,

how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill

requited! Why should our endeavour be so

loved, and the performance so loathed? what

verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me

see:—

[Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;

And being once subdu'd in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your

painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall,

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be

made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this,

Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss;

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;

And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.]

But dare all imminence, that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead;

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away;

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet:—you vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou

great-sized coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's

thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.]

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! [shame]

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching

bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the

poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds,

how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill

requited! Why should our endeavour be so

loved, and the performance so loathed? what

verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me

see:—

[Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;

And being once subdu'd in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your

painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall,

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be

made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this,

Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss;

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;

And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.]

But dare all imminence, that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead;

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away;

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet:—you vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou

great-sized coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's

thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.]

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! [shame]

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching

bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the

poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds,

how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill

requited! Why should our endeavour be so

loved, and the performance so loathed? what

verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me

see:—

[Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;

And being once subdu'd in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your

painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall,

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Timon, a noble Athenian.

Lucius, Lucullus, Sempronius, } Lords, and flatterers of Timon.

Ventidius, one of Timon's false friends.

Apemantus, a churlish Philosopher.

Alcibiades, an Athenian General.

Flavius, Steward to Timon.

Flaminius, Lucilius, Servilius, } Servants to Timon.

Capitis, Philotus, } Servants to Timon's Creditors.

Titus,

Lucius,

Hortensius,

Servants of Isidore,

Cupid and Maskers.

Three Strangers.

A Fool.

Poet, Painter, Jeweller, and Merchant.

Phrynia,

Timandra,

Lords, Senators, Officers, Soldiers,

and Attendants.

SCENE.—Athens, and the Woods adjoining.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Hall in Timon's House.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you're well.

Poet. I have not seen you long: how goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange, Which manifold record not matches? See, Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; the other's a

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord. [Jeweller.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd, as it were,

To an untirable and continue goodness:

He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here—

Mer. O, pray, let's see't; for the lord Timon, sir? [that—

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for Poet. [Reciting to himself.] "When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good." [form.

Mer. [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are wrapt, sir, in some work, To the great lord. [some dedication Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes

From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire i' the flint

Shows not, till it be struck; our poesy

Provokes itself, and, like the current,

Each bound it chafes. What have you

Pain. A picture, sir. When some book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my prose

Let's see your piece. 'Tis a good piece.

Pain. So 'tis: this comes off well

Poet. Indifferent. Admirable: How

Poet. Speaks his own standing! what a

power

This eye shoots forth! how big Moves in this lip! to the dumb

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of

Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I'll say

It tutors nature: artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than

Enter certain Senators, who follow

Pain. How this lord is follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confidence

I have, in this rough work, shap'd

Whom this beneath world doth hug

With amplest entertainment: my

Halts not particularly, but moves

In a wide sea of war: no lovell'd

Infests one comma in the course

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you.

how all conditions, how all minds
Will of glib and slippery creatures, as
And answer quality) tender down Services to lord Timon: his large for-
[flatterer]
And gracious nature hanging,
And properties to his love and tend-
[flatterer]
Of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd
[flatterer]
That few things loves better
Than to adore himself: even he drops down
Before him, and returns in peace
And in Timon's nod.

I saw them speak together.
[flatterer]
I have upon a high and pleasant
[flatterer]
Fortune to be thron'd: the base o'
[flatterer]
With all deserts, all kind of natures,
[flatterer]
On the bosom of this sphere
[flatterer]
State their states: amongst them all,
[flatterer]
You are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
[flatterer]
A personage of lord Timon's frame,
[flatterer]
Fortune with her ivory hand waxes to [flatterer]
Present grace to present slaves and [flatterer]
His rivals.

'Tis conceiv'd to scope.
[flatterer]
This Fortune, and this hill, me-
[flatterer]
Than beckon'd from the rest below,
[flatterer]
His head against the steepy mount
[flatterer]
His happiness, would be well ex-
[flatterer]
Nay, sir, but hear me on:
[flatterer]
Were his fellows but of late,
[flatterer]
Than his value, on the moment
[flatterer]
His strides, his lobbies fill with tend-
[flatterer]
Official whisperings in his ear, [ance
[flatterer]
Even his stirrup, and through him
[flatterer]
The free air.

Ay, marry, what of these?
[flatterer]
When Fortune, in her shift and change
[flatterer]
Down her late belov'd, all his depend-
[flatterer]
Pour'd after him to the mountain's
[flatterer]
On their knees and hands, let him slip
[flatterer]
Accompanying his declining foot.
[flatterer]
A common:
[flatterer]
Moral paintings I can show,
[flatterer]
Which demonstrate these quick blows of [flatterer]
Fortune's
[flatterer]
More powerfully than words. Yet you do
[flatterer]
Lord Timon, that mean eyes have [flatterer]
Above the head.

Enter Timon, attended;
[flatterer]
Imprison'd is he, say you?
[flatterer]
Ay, my good lord: five talents is [flatterer]
The most short, his creditors most strait:
[flatterer]
A considerable letter he desires

To those have shut him up; which, failing, Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather, to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know
A gentleman that well deserves a help, [him Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Ven. Ser. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send him ransom;

And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me:

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,

But to support him after. Fare you well.

Ven. Ser. All happiness to your honour!
[Exit.]

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius!

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon,
this thy creature,

By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift;

And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well: what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,

On whom I may confer what I have got:

The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,

And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine

Attempts her love: I pry'thee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;

Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:

His honesty rewards him in itself;

It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:

Our own precedent passions do instruct us

What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord; and she accepts
of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be

I call the gods to witness, I will choose

Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,

And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,

If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all. [une long]

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd

To build his fortune I will strain a little,

For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy

daughter;

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship; never
That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you!

[Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian.]

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me Go not away.—What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do
Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: these pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work;
And you shall find, I like it; wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman; give me
your hand;

We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extolled,
It would unclaw me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give: but you well
know,

Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters: believe 't, dear
You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.
Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,

Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here: will you be Enter Apemantus.

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Jew. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apem-antus!

Apem. 'Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves
Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves?
thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus! (thy name.

Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt do for me.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be a deed.

Tim. How likest thou this picture?

Apem. The best, for the image of a

Tim. Wrought he not well that Apem. He wrought better that painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of Pain. You're a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Will dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No: I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst

Apem. O, they eat lords; so they great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehendest it: and thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this Apem. Not so well as plain dealing.

will not cost a man a dole.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking.

Poet. How now, philosopher?

Apem. Thou liest.

Apem. Yes.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Apem. Then, thou liest: look in work, where thou hast forg'd him a

Poet. That's not forg'd, he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee;

pay thee for thy labour: he that flattered is worthy o' the flatterer.

that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does: and a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no envy yet to lord.—Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if thou

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god; and thy found thee!

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Ser. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some

All of companionship.

Tim. Pray entertain them; give them to us.—[Exeunt some]

You must needs dine with me—

hence,

Till I have thank'd you: when shall Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your

Enter Alcibiades, with his company.

Most welcome, sir!

Apem. So, so, there!

Aches contract and starve your supplies

That there should be small love sweet knaves.

And all this courtesy! The

Into baboon and monkey.

you have sav'd my longing, and on your sight.

[I feed Right welcome, sir!
we'll share a bounteous time of pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all except Apemantus.
Enter two Lords.
What time o' day is't, Apemantus?

Time to be honest.
That time serves still. [omitt'at it.
No more accus'd thou, that still thou art going to lord Timon's ay, to see meat fill knives, and face thee well, face thee well.

Thou art a fool to bid me farewell

Why, Apemantus?
Shouldst have kept one to thyself,
to give thee none.

Hang thyself!
No, I will do nothing at thy bidding:
I'll requests to thy friend.

Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll hang thyself!

I will fly, like a dog, the heels of an opposite to humanity.

[Exit.
Come,
lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
all kindness.

He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold, no need, but he repays the giver a return exceeding

The noblest mind he carries, Long may he live in fortunes! Shall I keep you company.

[Exeunt.
II.—Athena. In Timon's House.
playing loud music. A great banquet, then enter Timon, Alcibiades, Lords, senators, Ventidius and Attendants.

Timon comes, dropping after all, Apemantus discontentedly.

Most honoured Timon, plac'd the gods to remember my all his long peace.

[father's age,
and has left me rich:
I am bound to grateful virtue I am bound

I do return those talents, with thanks and service, from whose liberty.

O, by no means,
you mistake my love:
I'm freely ever; and there's none
he gives, if he receives: [dare others play at that game, we must not play with them; faults that are rich are fair.

A noble spirit,
[They all stand ceremoniously looking on Timon.

Tim.
Nay, my lords,
Ceremony was but devis'd at first,
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs
none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.
1 Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.
Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus,—you are welcome.
Apem. No, you shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie, thou'rt a churl; you have got a humour there
Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.—
They say, my lords, ira furor brevis est;
But yond' man is ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for't, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apparel, Timon:
I come to observe; I give thee warning on't.
Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian; therefore, welcome: I myself would have no power; pr'ythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee. O you gods, what a number of men eat Timon, and he sees them not! It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat in one man's blood; and all the madness is, he cheers them up too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men:
Methinks they should invite them without knives;

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There's much example for't; the fellow, that sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him: it has been proved. If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals;

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous
notes:
Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

[go round.
Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health
2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.
Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow!
he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire:
Here's that, which is too weak to be a slaver;
This and my food are equals: there's no odds:
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods, Apemantus's Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no self;
I pray for no man but myself:
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his oath or bond;
Or a harlot, for her weeping;
Or a dog, that seems a sleeping;

*Or a keeper with my freedom ;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't :
Rich men sin, and I eat root.*

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus !
Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now. [Lord.]

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies, than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em : I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends ; but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you : how had you been my friends else ? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart ? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf ; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of them ? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for them ; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits : and what better or properer can we call our own, than the riches of our friends ? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes ! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born ! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks : to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weepest to make them drink, Timon. [eyes.]

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our And, at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho ! I laugh to think that babe a retard. [me much.]

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd Apem. Much ! [Tucket sounded.]

Tim. What means that trumpet ?—

Enter a Servant.

How now !

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies ? What are their wills ?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon :—
all

That of his bounties taste !—[The first] Acknowledge thee their patron ; and freely

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom : the Taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy store
They only now come but to feast thine eyes

Tim. They are welcome all ! let them kind admittance :—Music, make them
come.

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how auspicious belov'd.

Music. Re-enter Cupid, with a mask as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hey-day ! what a sweep of comes this way !

They dance ! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and rose
We make ourselves fools to drink them
And spend our flatteries, to drink them
Upon whose age we void it up again.

With poisonous spite and envy.
Who lives, that's not depraved or depraved
Who dies, that bears not one spurn to
Of their friend's gift !

I should fear, those that dance below Would one day stamp upon me ! it is
done ;

Men shut their doors against a selling
The Lords rise from table, with masks of Timon ; and, to show their singles out an Amazon, and all with women, a lofty strain or deep haulboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasure
grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment
Which was not half so beautiful and kind
You have added worth unto't, and have
And entertain'd me with mine own shadow
I am to thank you for it.

1 Lady. My lord, you take no care Apem. 'Faith, for the worst is done would not hold taking, I don't me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle haughtiness Attends you : please you to dismount,

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord
[Exeunt Ladies.]

Tim. Flavius. [Flav.] My lord,
Tim. The little casket brings me word Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside.] More yet !

There is no crossing him in his humour Else I should tell him,—well, I will
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd
'Tis pity bounty had not eyes to That man might ne'er be wretched
mind.

1 Lord. Where be our men !
Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness

Lord. Our horses.
Tim. O, my friends,
 one word to say to you:—look you,
 my good lord,
 I must entreat you, honour me so much,
 to advance this jewel; accept it and wear
 it by lost.
Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,— so are we all.
Enter a Servant.
Tim. My lord, there are certain nobles of Athens newly alighted, and come to visit us. They are fairly welcome.

Lord. I beseech your honour, me a word; it does concern you to hear these:
Tim. why, then, another time I'll be provided to show them
 my entertainment.

Lord. I scarce know how.
Enter a second Servant.
Tim. May it please your honour, lord Lucius, the free love, hath presented to you a white horse, trapp'd in silver.
 I shall accept them fairly: let the entertainment be.

Enter a third Servant.
Tim. How now! what news?
 My man, lord Lucullus, entreats your honour to-morrow to hunt with him; and your honour two brace of greyhounds.
 I'll hunt with him; and let them be without fair reward.

Lord. What will this come to?
 I'll out of an empty coffer.
 I'll know his purse; or yield me this,
 what a beggar his heart is,
 in power to make his wishes good:
 he speaks is all in debt, he owes a word: he is so kind, that he now forgets; his land's put to their use.

Lord. I were gently put out of office,
 I were forc'd out!
 he that has no friend to feed,
 as do his enemies exceed.
Exit.

Tim. You do yourselves wrong, you hate too much of your own merit, a trifle of our love.
 With more than common thanks I will receive it.
Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty!
 now I remember, my lord, you wrote the other day of a bay courser
 to me: it is yours, because you lik'd it.
Tim. O, beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know, no man
 Can justly praise, but what he does affect:
 I weigh my friend's affection with my own;
 I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. None so welcome.
Tim. I take all, and your several visitations,
 So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;
 Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
 And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
 Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
 It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living
 Is 'mongst the dead; and all the lands thou Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defil'd land, my lord.
1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound,— Tim. And so
 Am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd,—
Tim. All to you.—Lights, more lights!
1 Lord. The best of happiness,
 Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord
Tim. Ready for his friends. [Timon!]
 [Exit Alcibiades, Lords, &c.]

Apem. What a coil's here!
 Serving out of becks, and jutting out of bums!
 I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs: [legs]
 Methinks false hearts should never have sound Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not
 I would be good to thee. [snellen] Apem. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee; and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me, thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, pomps, and vain glories?

Tim. Nay, as you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
 Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.]

Apem. So;—thou wilt not hear me now,— Thou shalt not then; I'll lock thy heaven from O, that men's ears should be [thee]
 To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Room in a Senator's
 House.

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore [sum]
 He owes nine thousand; besides my former Which makes it five-and-twenty.—Still in motion
 Of raging waste! It cannot hold; it will not.
 If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog,
 And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold:

If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight
And able horses: no porter at his gate;
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold: no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to lord Timon;

Importune him for my moneys; be not ceas'd
With slight denial; nor then silenc'd, when—
"Commend me to your master"—and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus:—but tell him,
My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn
Out of mine own; his days and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have suit my credit: I love and honour him;
But must not break my back to heal his finger:
Immediate are my needs; and my relief
Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone.
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. Ay, go, sir, take the bonds along with
And have the dates in compt. [you,

Caph. I will, sir.

Sen. Go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Athens. A Hall in Timon's
House.

Enter Flavius, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! no senseless of expense,
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account
How things go from him; nor resumes no care
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? He will not hear, till fool:

I must be round with him, now he comes from Fie, fie, fie, fie! [hunting.

Enter Caphis, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro: what,
You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord!

Enter Timon, Alcibiades, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done we'll forth
again,

My Alcibiades.—With me? what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues,

Tim. Dues? Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath
To the succession of new days this month.

My master is awak'd by great occasion
To call upon his own; and humbly prays

That with your other noble parts you'll
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine house

I prythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good my lord,—

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore

He humbly prays your speedy payment.

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on fortnight's day.

Isid. Serv. Your steward paid me

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep me
I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt Alcibiades and

Flavius. Come hither: you

[To Flavius.]

How goes the world, that I am counter'd

With clamorous demands of date-bills

And the detention of long-since due

Against my honour?

Flav. Please you

The time is unagreeable to this business.

Your importunity ceases till after

That I may make his lordship understand

Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my

See them well entertain'd.

Flav. Pray, draw

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes

Apemantus: let's have some sport

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, he'll

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No, 'tis to thyself.

Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. [To the Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's

Apem. No, thou stand'st single, thou

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question rogues, and usurers' men! I have gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Answer.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you do not know yourselves.

Fool. How do you, gentleman?

This night englutted! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord Timon's!

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!
Ah, when the means are gone that buy this
praise,

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter
These flies are couch'd. [showers,

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart:
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use,
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends: you shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.

Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter Flaminius, Servilius, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord, my lord,—

Tim. I will despatch you severally: you, to lord Lucius; to lord Lucullus you; I hunted with his honour to-day; you, to Sempronius:
commend me to their loves; and, I am proud,
say, that my occasions have found time to use them toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord. [h'm!]

Flav. [Aside.] Lord Lucius, and Lucullus?

Tim. Go you, sir, to the senators, [have (Of whom, even to the state's best health, I Deserv'd this hearing,) bid them send o' the
A thousand talents to me. [instant

Flav. I have been bold,
(For that I knew it the most general way,)
To them to use your signet, and your name:
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,— [not—

But yet they could have wish'd—they know
Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—
'tis pity;—

And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,

With certain half-caps, and cold-moving
They froze me into silence. [nods,

Tim. You gods, reward them!
Pr'ythee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows

Have their ingratitude in them here. [they Their blood is call'd, the cold, it seldom
'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not
And nature, as it grows again toward
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy [To a Serv.] Go to Ventidius.—[To Serv.]

Pr'ythee, be not sad,
Thou art true and honest; ingenuously I say
No blame belongs to thee.—[To Serv.]

tidius lately
Buried his father; by whose death, he was
Into a great estate: when he was found Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends
I clear'd him with five talents; great he was Bid him suppose some good necessity Touches his friend, which craves to member'd

With those five talents.—[To Flav.]

had, give it these fellows.
To whom 'tis instant due. Near

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends
sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it;
thought is bounty's foe;

Being free itself, it thinks all others
sink.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Athens.—A Room in Lucius's
House.

Flaminius waiting. Enter a Servant with a letter.

Serv. I have told my lord at your coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.
Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of lord Timon's a gift, I warrant. Why, this little dremant of a silver basin and sweet Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are spectively welcome, sir. Fill me some [Exit Servant.] And how does that able, complete, free-hearted good Athens, thy very bountiful good

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his well, sir; and what hast thou there cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I can treat your honour to supply; which great and instant occasion to use bath sent to your lordship to present thing doubting your present assistance

Lucul. La, la, la, la, nothing says he? alas, good lord! a noble
'tis, if he would not keep an empty
Many a time and often I have dined and told him on't; and come again to him, of purpose to have him and yet he would embrace no counsel warning by my coming. Every man honour is his: I have told him on't, and he'll get him from it.

Enter Servant with wine.
 Flamineus, I have noted thee always to these.

Your lordship speaks your pleasure. I have observed thee always for a prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and know what belongs to reason; and the time well, if the time use thee and parts in thee.—[To the Servant.]
 Flamineus, I have noted thee always to these.

[Exit Servant.] Draw Flamineus. Thy lord's a gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou art well enough, although thou sayest that this is no time to lend thyself upon bare friendship, with Flamineus's three solidaries for thee: I'll take at me, and say, thou saw'st me these well. [Much differ, if possible the world should so alive that liv'd! Fly, damn'd base-deal worships thee.]

[Throws back the money.]
 Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and say these add to the number that coin be thy damnation.

Thou art such a faint and milky heart, in less than two nights! O you gods! Master's passion. This slave Flamineus has my lord's meat in him: and it thrive, and turn to nutriment, and turn to poison! I'll work upon't! [of nature that sick to death, let not that part be paid for, be of any power to prolong his hour!]

[Exit.]
 Athens. A public Place.

Enter Lucius, with three Stangers.
 Lucius, the lord Timon? he is my very friend, and an honourable gentleman.

We know him for no less, though he is a stranger to him. But I can tell you, my lord, and which I hear from Flamineus: now lord Timon's happy and past, and his estate shrinks [want for money.]

Do not believe it; he cannot but believe you this, my lord, that, one of his men was with the lord to borrow so many talents; nay, Flamineus for't, and show'd what ne-cessity he had, and yet was denied.

I tell you, denied, my lord. That's a strange case was that! now, Flamineus, I am ashamed on't. Denied Flamineus! there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his: yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Servil. See, my good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. My honoured lord,—

[To Lucius.]

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Servil. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord, he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Servil. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me; He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants less, if his occasion were not virtuous, [my lord. I should not urge it half so faithfully.]

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Servil. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to dis-furnish myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part and undo a great deal of honour!—Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do't, the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind:—and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Servil. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servi-lius.—

[Exit Servilius.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; And he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit.]

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why, this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend that dips in the same dish! for, in My knowing, Timon was been this lord's father, And kept his credit with his purse; Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money

Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks,
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet (O, see the monstrousness of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: but, I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Athens. A Room in Sempronius's House.

Enter Sempronius and a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't,—h'm!
'bove all others?

He might have tried lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,
They have all been touch'd and found base
For they have all denied him. [metal:]

Sem. How! have they denied him?
Have Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
And does he send to me? Thren! h'm!
It shows but little love or judgment in him.
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

Thrice give him over? must I take the cure
He has much disgrac'd me in't; I am angry at him, [sense for't.]

That might have known my place: I see no
But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er receiv'd gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll requite it last? No; so it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And I amongst the lords be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
H'd sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;
I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join:
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit.]

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politic, he cross'd himself by't: and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous coppies to be wicked; like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord's best hope; and all
Save the gods only: now his friends Doors, that were ne'er acquainted wards

Many a bounteous year, must be expell'd
Now to guard sure their master,
And this is all a liberal course allow;
Who cannot keep his wealth must
house.

SCENE IV.—Athens. A Hall in Timon's House.

*Enter two Servants of Varro, and the of Lucius, meeting Titus, Hortensius, other Servants of Timon's creditors,
ing his coming out.*

1 Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro,
Hor.

What, do we meet together! Ay, and
Luc. Serv.

One business does command us all;
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs, and ours.
Enter Philotas.

Luc. Serv. And, sir Philotas, Good day,
Phi.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother,
What do you think the hour?

Phi. So much? Is not my lord
Luc. Serv.

Phi. I wonder on't; he was new at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the day is
You must consider, that a practical

Is like the sun's; but not, like his, re-
I fear, 'tis deepest winter in his

purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough

Find little.
Phi. I am of your fear for the

Tit. I'll show you how t' observe
Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true.
Tit. And he wears jewels now

For which I wait for money.
Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange Timon in this should pay more than

And e'en as if your lord should wear
And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I'm weary of this charge,
I know my lord hath spent of Timon's

And now ingratitude makes it stealth.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine's (How crowns: What's yours?)

Luc. Serv. Five thousand, mine
1 Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep from by the sum,

confidence was above mine ;
 he had equalled.
Enter Flaminius.
One of lord Timon's men.
Flaminius. Sir, a word ; pray, be ready to come forth ?
 He, indeed, he is not. [so much.
 He attend his lordship ; pray, signify
 I need not tell him that ; he knows too diligent. [Exit Flaminius.
Flav. Ha ! is not that his steward away in a cloud ; call him, call him.
 By your leave, sir,—
 What do you ask of me, my friend ?
 We wait for certain money here, sir.
 Ay,
 as certain as your waiting,
 I prefer'd you not your suras and take masters eat of my lord's meat ?
 I could smile and fawn upon his our maws. [ous maws.
 I turn the interest into their gluttonyourselves but wrong to stir me up ;
 my lord and I have made an end :
 more to reckon, he to spend.
 Ay, but this answer will not serve.
 If 'twill not serve,
 as you ; for you serve knaves.
 [Exit.
Serv. How ! what does his cashier'd matter ?
Serv. No matter what ; he's poor, revenge enough. Who can speak that he that has no house to put his
 I such may rail against great buildings.
Enter Servilius.
Servilius. Now we shall know if I might beseech you, gentlemen, for some other hour, I should derive
 ; for, take 't of my soul, my lord has forsook him ; he's much out of keeps his chamber. [are not sick ;
 Many do keep their chambers,
 as far beyond his health,
 he should the sooner pay his debts,
 a clear way to the gods.
 Good gods !
 cannot take this for answer, sir.
 [Flav.] Servilius, help ! my lord !
 in a rage ; Flaminius following.
 What are my doors oppos'd against
 I am ever free, and must my house be snowy, my gaol !
 which I have feasted, does it now,
 show me an iron heart ?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.
Tit. My lord, here is my bill.
Luc. Serv. Here's mine.
Hor. And mine, my lord.
Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.
Phi. All our bills.
Tim. Knock me down with 'em, cleave me
Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord,— [to the girl.
Tim. Cut my heart in sums.
Tit. Mine, fifty talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.

What yours ?—and yours !
 1 Var. Serv. My lord,—
 2 Var. Serv. My lord,—
Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you ! [Exit.
Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money : these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Re-ent.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.
Tim. They have e'en put my breath from Creditors !—devils ! [me, the slaves.
Flav. My dear lord,—
Tim. What if it should be so ?
Flav. My lord,—
Tim. I'll have it so.—My steward !
Flav. Here, my lord.
Tim. So fitly ? Go, bid all my friends again,
 Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius ; all :
 I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord
 You only speak from your distracted soul :
 There is not so much left to furnish out
 A moderate table.
Tim. Be't not in thy care : go,
 I charge thee, invite them all : let in the tide
 Of knaves once more ; my cook and I'll provide. [Re-ent.

SCENE V.—Athens. The Senate House.
The Senate sitting.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it ;
 the fault's bloody ; 'tis necessary he should die.
 Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true ; the law shall bruise him.
Enter Alcibiades, attended.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate !

1 Sen. Now, captain.
Alcib. I am a humble suitor to your virtues ;
 For pity is the virtue of the law,
 And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
 It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
 Upon a friend of mine : who, in hot blood,
 Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth
 To those that, without heed, do plunge into 't.
 He is a man, setting his fate aside,
 Of comely virtues :
 Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice,
 (An honour in him which buys out his fault ;)
 But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe :

And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair :
Your words have took such pains, as if they

labour'd [quarrelling
To bring manslaughter into form, and set

Upon the head of valour ; which, indeed,
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born :
He's truly vallant, that can wisely suffer

The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs [carelessly ;

His outsize, to wear them like his raiment,
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,

To bring it into danger,
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,

What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill !
Alcib. My lord, —

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look
To revenge is no valour, but to bear. [clear :

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon
If I speak like a captain. — [me,

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats ? sleep upon 't,

And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy ? if there be

Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad ? why then, women are more valiant,

That stay at home, if bearing carry it ; [felon,
And the wss more captain than the lion ; the

Loaden with Irons, wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,

As you are great, be pitifully good :
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood ?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust ;
But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.

To be in anger, is impiety ;
But who is man, that is not angry ?

Weigh but the crime with this,
2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain ! his service done
At Lacedæmon, and Byzantium,

Were a sufficient briber for his life.
1 Sen. What's that ? [service,

Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fair
And slain in fight many of your enemies :

How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous

wounds ! [them,
2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with He's a sworn rioter : he has a sin, that often

Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner :
If there were no foes, that were enough

To overcome him : in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages

And cherish factions : 'tis infer'd to us,
His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.
Alcib. Hard fate ! he might have died in

My lords, if not for any parts in him, [war,

(Though his right arm might purchase
time,

And be in debt to none,) yet, more in men,
Take my deserts to his, and join them

And, for I know your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all

My honour to you, upon his good nature,
If by this crime he owes the law his life

Why, let the war receive 't in valour,
For law is strict, and war is nothing more

1 Sen. We are for law, he dies ;
more,

On height of our displeasure :
He forfeits his own blood that spills

Alcib. Must it be so ? it must not be so !
I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How !
Alcib. Call me to your remembrance

3 Sen.
Alcib. I cannot think but you forgot me ;

It could not else be, I should prove

To see, and he denied such common
My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare
'Tis in few words, but spacious to read

We banish thee for ever. Banish me !
Alcib.

Banish your dotage ; banish usury ! [banish
That makes the senate ugly.

1 Sen. If, after two days' absence, [banish Attend our weightier judgment

swell our spirit,
He shall be executed presently.

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on I am worse than mad : I have kept foes,

While they have told their money, I will

Their coin upon large interest, I will Rich only in large hurts. All those

Is this the balsam, that the warring Pours into captains' wounds ? [banish

It comes not ill ; I hate not to be hurt
It is a cause worthy my spleen and

That I may strike at Athens. I'll My discontented troops, and lay the

'Tis honour with most hands to be Soldiers should brook as little wrong

SCENE VI.—Athens. A Banquet
Timon's House.

Music. Tables set out : Servants
Enter divers Lords, at several

1 Lord. The good time of day to you
2 Lord. I also wish it to you honourable lord did but try in this 1 Lord. Upon that were my when we encountered : I hope it is with him as he made it seem in the several friends.

It should not be, by the persuasion
I should think so: he hath sent me nothing, which many my near old urge me to put off; but he hath beyond them, and I must needs

In like manner was I in debt to my kindness, but he would not hear
I am sorry, when he sent to borrow my provision was out, that my grief too, as I am sick of that grief too, as I have all things go.

Every man here's so. What would you of you?
A thousand places.
A thousand pieces!
What of you?

He sent to me, sir.—Here he comes.
Timon and Attendants.

With all my heart, gentlemen both:
[your lordship.]
[The swallow follows not summer than we your lordship.]

Nor more willingly leaves summer-birds are men.—Gentleman will not recompense this long summer with the music a while, if you so harshly of the trumpet's sound;
I hope it remains not unkindly lordship, that I returned you an answer.

My noble lord,—
My good friend, what cheer?
[The banquet brought in.]
My most honourable lord, I am in shame, that when your lordship sent to me, I was so unfortunate not on't, sir.

[fore,— if you had sent but two hours before, bring in all together.
All covered dishes!
Royal cheer, I warrant you.
I thought not that, if money and the gold it.

How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

I pray you, upon what?
I'll tell you more anon. Here's a
worthy friend, will you draw near?
[The banquet brought in.]
How do you? What's the news?
Alcibiades is banished: hear you of
it? I am so; I am sure of it.
[it?]
How I how!

as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.—

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another: for,
were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common tag of people,
—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap. [The dishes uncovered are full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?
Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke, and lukewarm water

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who, stuck and spangled you with flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces [Throwing water in their faces.]

Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd, and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek
bears, [flies,

You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's
Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!

Of man, and beast, the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er.—What, dost thou go?
Soft, take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou;— [Throws the dishes at them and drives them out.]

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none,—
What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest. [He Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated
Of Timon, man and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Lords.

1 Lord. How now, my lords! [mon's fury?]
2 Lord. Know you the quality of lord Ti-
3 Lord. Pish! I did you see my cap?
4 Lord. I have lost my gown.
1 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has bent it out of my hat:—did you see my jewel?

3 Lord. Did you see my cap?
2 Lord. Here 'tis.
4 Lord. Here lies my gown.
1 Lord. Let's make no stay.

2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.
 3 Lord. I feel't upon my bones.
 4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall,
 That girdest in those wolves, div'd in the earth,
 And fence not Athens! matrons, turn incontinent!
 Obedience fall in children! slaves and fools,
 Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,
 And minister in their steads! to general filth
 Convert o' the instant, green virginity,—[fast;
 Do't in your parents' eyes! bankrupts, hold
 Rather than render back, out with your knives,
 And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants,
 steal!

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,
 And pill by law; maid, to thy master's bed,—
 Thy mistress is o' the brothel! son of sixteen,
 Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire,
 With it beat out his brains! piety, and fear,
 Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
 Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,
 Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
 Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,
 Decline to your confounding contraries,
 And let confusion live!—Plagues, incident to Your potent and infectious fevers heap [men,
 On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold scismatic,
 Gripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
 As lamely as their manners! lust and liberty
 Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
 That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,

And drown themselves in riot! itches, blains,
 Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop
 Be general leprosy! breath infect breath,
 That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee,
 But nakedness, thou detestable town!
 Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!
 Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
 The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. [all]

The gods confound (hear me, you good gods
 The Athenians both within and out that wall!
 And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
 To the whole race of mankind, high and low!
 Amen. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in Timon's House.

Enter Flavius, with two or three Servants.

1 Serv. Here you, master steward, where's our master?
 Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack, my fellows, what shall
 to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous
 I am as poor as you.

1 Serv. So noble a master fallen! All good men
 One friend to take his fortune by the hair,
 And go along with him!

2 Serv. As we do turn out
 From our companion thrown into the street,
 So his familiars to his buried form
 Slink all away; leave their sides some room
 Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor
 A dedicated beggar to the air,
 With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
 Walks, like contempt, alone—[Exit.] fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a
 house.

3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear livery:

That see I by our faces; we are fellows Serving alike in sorrow: look'd as our
 And we, poor mates, stand on the edge Hearing the surges threat: we must Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
 The latest of my wealth I'll share
 Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our
 and say,

As 'twere a knell unto our masters' hearts,
 "We have seen better days."

[Giving them
 Let each take Nay, put out all your hands,
 more:

Thus part we rich in sorrow, part [They embrace, and part
 O, the fierce wretchedness that glory
 Who would not wish to be from wealth
 Since riches point to misery and Who 'ld be so mock'd with glory!
 But in a dream of friendship
 To have his pomp, and all what pounds,

But only painted, like his varnish'd Poor honest lord, brought low by
 heart,
 Undone by goodness! Strange, un-
 When man's worst sin is, he does
 good!

Who then dares to be half so kind
 For bounty, that makes gods, also
 men.

My dearest lord,—bless'd, to be meet Rich, only to be wretched,—thy great
 Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas,
 He's flung in rage from this ingratitude
 Of monstrous friends;
 Nor has he with him to supply his
 Or that which can command it;
 I'll follow, and enquire him out;

Give me his mind with my best will;
I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

[Exit.

III.—The Woods. Before Timon's Cave.

Enter Timon, with a spade.

O blessed breeding sun, draw from
The earth's womb; below thy sister's orb
The air! Twinn'd brothers of one generation, residence, and birth, Divulant,—touch them with several kisses;

Thou scorn'st the lesser: not nature,
All sorts lay siege, can bear great tempt of nature. [fortune,

Thou longer, and deny't that lord:
Thou shalt bear contempt hereditary,
Thou native honour.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

Thou art the brother's sides,
Thou art the brother's lean. Who dares,
That makes him lean.

When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand;—
Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

[Reserving some gold,
Enter Alcibiades, with drum and staff, in warlike manner; Phrynia and Timandra.

Alcib. What art thou there?
Speak. [gnaw thy heart,

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The causer
For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hate-
That art thyself a man? [fol to thee,

Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.
For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well,
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee.

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules,
gules:

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; [thine
Then what should war be? This fell whore of Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubin look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off!
Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot re-
To thine own lips again. [turns

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change? [to give:

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light
But then, renew I could not, like the moon;
There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon,
What friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon?
Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries. [parity.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had pros-Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed
time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timon. Is this the Athenian minion, whom Vice'd so regardfully? [the world

Tim. Art thou Timandra?
Timandra. Yes. [that use thee:

Tim. Be a whore still! they love thee not,
Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
Make use of thy salt hours: season the slaves
For tubs, and baths; bring down rose-cheek'd
To the tub-fast and the diet. [youth

Timandra. Hang thee, monster!
Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities,
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band: I have heard, and griev'd,
How curs'd Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states, [them,—

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon Tim. I pr'ythee, beat thy drum, and get these gone. [Timon.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear
Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou
I had rather be alone. [lost trouble?

Alcib. Why, fare thee well:
Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it.

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest;

And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That, by killing of villains,
Thou wast born to conquer my country.

Put up thy gold: go on, here's gold, go on;
Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison

In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one;

Let it not honour'd age for his white beard,—

He is a usurer: strike me the counterfeit

It is her habit only that is honest, [matron,—

Herself's a bawd: let not the virgin's cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk-paps, [eyes,

That through the window-bars bore at men's

Are not within the leaf of pity writ, [the babe,

But set them down horrible traitors: spare not

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust

their mercy:

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle [cut,

Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall

And mince it sans remorse: swear against objects;

Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes,

Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:

Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent,

Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the

Not all thy counsel. [gold thou giv'st me,

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee!

Phr. & Timon. Give us some gold, good

Timon: hast thou more?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear

her trade, [sluts,

And to make whores, a bawd. Hold up, you

Your aprons mountant: you are not oath-

able,—

Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear,

Into strong shudders, and to heavenly agues,

The immortal gods that hear you, —

oath,

I'll trust to your conditions: be whom

And he whose pious breath would to

you,

Be strong in whore, allure him, lure him

Let your close fire predominate his

And be no turncoats: yet may your months,

Be quite contrary: and thatch your

With burdens of the dead —

hang'd,

No matter: — wear them, betray your Paint till a horse may mire upon your

A box of wrinkles!

Phr. & Timon. Well, more cold

Believe't, that we'll do anything for

Tim. Consumptions now

In hollow bones of man; strike

shins, Crack the

And mar men's spurring.

voice,

That he may never more false little

Nor sound his quillets shrilly: hear

That scolds against the quality of

And not believes himself: down with

Down with it flat: take the bridge

Of him, that, his particular to force,

Smells from the general west: strike

pate ruffians bald;

And let the unscar'd braggarts of the

Derive some pain from you: plague

That your activity may defeat and

The source of all erection. — There's

Do you damn others, and let this

And ditches grave you all!

Phr. & Timon. More commend

money, bounteous Timon

Tim. More whore, more mischief have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards

Farewell, Timon:

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee

Alcib. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me

Alcib. Call't thou that?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee

And take thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but

Strike! [Drum beats, Enter Alcib.

Phrynia, and Timon.

Tim. That nature being sick of

kindness,

Should yet be hungry! Common

Whose womb unmeasurable, and

breast,

Teems, and feeds all; whose self

Whereof thy proud child, arrant

puff'd,

Engenders the black toad and adder

The gilded newt and eyeless venom

With all the abhorred births below

Timon's quickening fire doth who all thy human sons doth hate, thy plenteous bosom, one poor fertile and conception womb,

more bring out ingrateful man!
with tigers, dragons, wolves, and new monsters, whom thy upward the married mansion all above [face ment!—O, a root,—dear thanks!— the marrow, vines and plough-torn ingrateful man, with liquorish wha

visions, greases his pure mind,
all consideration slips!

Enter Apemantus.
Plague! plague!
I am directed hither: men report, affect my manners, and doat use

the dog; [a dog;
they, because thou dost not keep would imitate. Consumption catch this is in thee a nature but infected;

melancholy, sprung [place of fortune. Why this spade? this habit? and these looks of care?

yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
shouldst perfumes; and have forgot

Timon was. Shame not these woods, on the cunning of a carper.
which has undone thee: hinger thy knee,

very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
they cap; praise his most vicious strain, excellent: thou was told thus;

thine ears, like tapsters that bid and all approachers: 'tis most just thy reason: hadst thou wealth again, could have't. Do not assume my

Were I like thee, I'd throw away [like thyself;
thou hast cast away thyself, being long, now a fool. What, think'st thou art, thy boisterous chamberlain, thy shirt on warm? Will these moss'd thou'd the eagle, page thy heels, when thou point'st out? Will the brook,

thou, candle thy morning taste, n'er night's surfeit? call the natures live in all the spite heaven: whose bare unhoused

the elements expos'd, [trunks, nature, bid them flatter thee;

A fool of thee: depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem.

Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say thou art a craft.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem.

To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in't?

Apem.

Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou

Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again,

Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery

Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:

The one is filling still, never complete; [less,

The other, at high wish: best state, content-

Hath a distracted and most wretched being,

Worse than the worst, content.

Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm

With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog.

Hadst thou, like us, from our first swail, pre-
ceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords

To such as may the passive drugs of it

Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd
thyself

In general riot; melted down thy youth

In different beds of lust; and never learn'd

The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd

The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,

Who had the world as my confectionary;

The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men

At duty, more than I could frame employment;

That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves

Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush

Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare

For every storm that blows;—I, to bear this,

That never knew but better, is some burden;

Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time

Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men? [given]

They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou

If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,

Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff

To some she beggar, and compounded thee

Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!

If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,

Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem.

Art thou proud yet?

Tim.

Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem.

I, that I was

No prodigal.

Tim.

I, that I am one now:

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,

I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.

That the whole life of Athens were in this!

Thus would I eat it.

[Eating a root.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.
Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.
Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.
Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but if not, I would it were. [botch'd;
Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?
Tim. Those thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
 Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.
Apem. Here is no use for gold.
Tim. The best, and truest;
 For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.
Apem. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon?
Tim. Under that's above me.
 Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?
Apem. Where my stomach finds meat: or, rather, where I eat it.
Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!
Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?
Tim. To sauce thy dishes.
Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity: in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee.
Tim. On what I hate, I feed not. [eat it.
Apem. Dost hate a medlar?
Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.
Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?
Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?
Apem. Myself.
Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.
Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?
Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?
Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?
Apem. Ay, Timon.
Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee; and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury:

wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse: wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wert thou a leopard, thou wouldst be slain by the lion, and thou wert german to the lion, and thy kindred were jurors on thy life: thy safety were remotion, and thy defence, subject to a beast: and what a beast wert thou already, that seemst not thy loss in reputation.
Apem. If thou couldst please me with saying to me, thou mightst have hit upon the commonwealth of Athens is the forest of beasts.
Tim. How has the ass broke the way thou art out of the city?
Apem. Yonder comes a post, and a plague of company light upon thee: fear to catch it, and give way: what not what else to do, I'll see thou art not.
Tim. When there is nothing living, thou shalt be welcome. I lead rather a beggar's dog, than Apemantus.
Apem. Thou art the cap of all the cities.
Tim. Would thou wert clear enough upon!
Apem. A plague on thee, thou art a plague.
Tim. All villains, that do stand by thee, pure.
Apem. There is no leprosy but in thee.
Tim. If I name thee, I'll beat thee, but I should infect my tongue.
Apem. I would my tongue would infect thee off!
Tim. Away, thou issue of a man! Choler does kill me, that thou wert here to swoon to see thee.
Apem. Would thou wert here to see me.
Tim. Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I have a stone by thee.
Apem. Beast!
Tim. Slave!
Apem. Rogue, rogue!
Tim. I am sick of this false world, and But even the mere necessities upon me. Then, Timon, presently prepare thy Lie where the light foam of the sea Thy grave-stone daily, make thine That death in me at other lives.
 O thou sweet king-killer, and dear Twixt natural son and sire! thou villain Of Hymen's purest bed! thou villain Thou ever young, fresh, lovely, woeful, Whose blush doth thaw the snowy That lies on Dian's lap! thou villain That soldier's close impossibilities And mak'st them kiss! that every To every purpose! O thou touch of Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy confounding odds, that beasts

the world in empires!

Would 'twere so:
I'll say, thou'st gold:
throng'd to shortly.

Throng'd to! Ay.
My back, I pr'ythee.

Live, and love thy misery!
Long live so, and so die!

[Exit Apemantus.
I am quit.
like men?—Eat, Timon, and
on them.

Enter Thieves.
Where should he have this gold?

your fragment, some slender ort of the mere want of gold, and of his friends, drove him into only.

sure, be both a mass of trea-not for, he will supply us easily; if we reserve it, how shall's get it?

time; for he hears it not about
I want this he?
[him, 'tis hid.

his description.
He; I know him.
Save these, Timon,
how, thieves?

Soldiers, not thieves.
and women's sons.

We are not thieves, but men that do want.

and you want? Behold, the earth will break forth a hundred springs;
hear me, the briars scarlet lips;

some housewife, nature, on each bush will moss before you. Want? why

We would live on grass, on berries, and birds, and fishes.

water, on the beasts themselves, the only and fishes;

and men. Yet thanks I must you confess'd; that you work professions. Rascal thieves, [grape, Go, suck the subtle blood of the over scathe your blood to froth, hanging: trust not the physician;

you are poison, and he slays
you; rob: take wealth and lives

do, since you protest to do't, example you with thievery:
Go, suck the subtle blood of the

the moon's an arrant thief,
the sun are the matches from the sun:
a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

The moon into salt tears; the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement: each thing's a thief:
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough

power
Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves;
away!

Rob one another. There's more gold: cut
throats;

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal,
But thieves do lose it. Steal not less, for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!
Amen.

3 Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery. [give over my trade.

2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens:
there is no time so miserable, but a man may be true. [Exit Thieves.

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods!

Is you despised and ruinous man my lord?
Full of decay and failing? O monument,
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!

What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made!

What viler thing upon the earth, than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies!

Grant I may ever love, and rather woo [do]
Those that would mischief me, than those that
He has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,
Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

Timon comes forward from his cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men; [forgot thee.

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:

I never had an honest man about me, I;

All I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to Flav. The gods are witness, [villains.

Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief

For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer;

—then I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st

Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping: [with weeping]

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my

lord,

To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor wealth

To entertain me as your steward still. [lasts,

Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable?
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face.—Surely, this man
Was born of woman.—
Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one;
No more, I pray,—and he's a steward.—
How fain would I have hated all mankind!
And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee,
I fell with curaces.
Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou mightst have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,)
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness; and, as rich men
Expecting in return twenty for one? [deal gifts,

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late;
You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast:

Suspect still comes when an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind, [love,
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope or present, I'd exchange [wealth
For this one wish, that you had power and
To requite me, by making rich yourself. [man,

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so! Thou singly honest
Here, take: the gods, out of my misery, Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy;

But thus condition'd: thou shalt build from Hate all, curse all: show charity to none;
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow 'em, [blasted woods,

Debts wither 'em to nothing: be men like
And many diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay,
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hat'st Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and
free:

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.
[Exit Flavius. Timon retires to his cave.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Woods. Before Timon's Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter, Timon observing them from his cave.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him?—
the rumour held for true, that he had gold!

Pain. Certain; Alcibiades reports it.
Timon and Timandra had gold of him, and were enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said, he gave more steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his heart but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him palm in Athens again, and flourish with highest. Therefore 'tis not unlikely that our loves to him, in this suppos'd state, his: it will show honestly in us, and likely to lead our purposes with him, travell for, if it be a just and true report goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to promise him at this time but of an tion; only, I will promise him an piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too: tell him an intent that's coming towards him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promise him very air o' the time: it opens the eyes pectation: performance is ever the death his net; and, but in the plainer and kind of people, the dead of a man's out of use. To promise is most easy, fashionable: performance is a great testament, which argues a great his judgment that makes it.

Enter Timon, from his cave.

Tim. [Aside.] Excellent workman!
canst not paint a man so bad as I am?

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say provided for him: it must be a person himself: a satire against the actions of perity, with a discovery of the infirmities that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a thine own work! Do so, I have faults in other men! Do so, I have Poet. Nay, let's seek him:

Then do we sin against our own nature.

Pain. True;
When we may profit meet and come to

Pain. True;
When the day serves, before black Find what thou want'st by day and
Come.

Tim. [Aside.] I'll meet you at the
What a god's gold!

That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark, and Settlest admir'd reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship! and thy saints be
Be crown'd with plagues, that thou shalt Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!
Pain. Our late noble master.

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two
men!

of your open bounty tasted,
 you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
 the class nature—O abhorred spirits!
 the ships of heaven are large enough—you, like nobleness gave life and whole being! I am rapt, and cannot some bulk of this ingratitude out of words.

[Better:
 let it go naked, men may see't the are honest, by being what you are,
 from back even and known.

He and myself
 in the great shower of your gifts,
 only felt it.

Ay, you are honest men.
 We are come hither to offer you our most honest men! [requite you?]

Why, how shall I not roots, and drink cold water? no.
 What we can do, we'll do, to do you [that I have gold;

you have heard
 you have; speak truth; you are men. [fore
 said, my noble lord: but there-my friend, nor I. [counterfeit honest men! Thou draw'st a all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best;
 counterfeit at most lively.

So, so, my lord.
 you so, sir, as I say. And, for thy [to the Poet] [smooth, some swell with stuff so fine and seem natural in thine art.—
 of this, my honest-natur'd friends, say you have a little fault:
 is not monstrous in you; neither much pains to mend, [wish I known to us. Beseech your honour

You'll take it ill.
 Doubt it not, worthy lord.
 There's never a one of you but trusts wholly deceives you. [a knave,
 Do we, my lord? see him
 and you hear him cog, see him
 patchery, love him, feed him,
 your honour; yet remain assur'd,
 I know none such, my lord.

Nor I.
 Nor I. I love you well; I'll give villains from your companies;
 or stab them, drown them in a
 by some course, and come gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.
 Tim. You that way, and you this,—but two in company:
 Each man apart, all single and alone,
 Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
 [To the Pain.] If, where thou art, two villains shall not be,
 Come not near him. [To the Poet.] If thou wouldst not reside
 But where one villain is, then him abandon.
 Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for gold,
 ye slaves:
 [To the Pain.] You have done work for me,
 there's payment: hence!
 [To the Poet.] You are an alchemist, make Out, rascal dogs! [gold of that.
 [Exit, beating them and driving them out.
 Enter Flavius and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;
 For he is set so only to himself,
 That nothing but himself, which looks like is friendly with him. [man, 1 Sen. Bring us to his cave:
 It is our part, and promise to the Athenians,
 To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike Men are not still the same: 'twas time and grief [hand,
 That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer
 Offering the fortunes of his former days,
 The former man may make him. Bring us to
 And chance it as it may. [him,
 Flav. Here is his cave.—
 Peace and content be here! Lord Timon!
 Timon! [ians,
 Look out, and speak to friends: the Athen-
 By two of their most reverend senate, greet Speak to them, noble Timon. [thee:

Enter Timon, from his cave.
 Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!
 Speak, and be hang'd:
 For each true word, a blister! and each false
 Be as a cant'ring to the root o' the tongue,
 Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon,— Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon. [Timon.
 2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Tim. I thank them, and would send them back the plague,
 Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget
 What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
 The senators, with one consent of love,
 Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
 On special dignities, which vacant lie
 For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess,
 Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross;
 Which now the public body, which doth seldom Play the recanter, feeling in itself
 A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
 Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon;

And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,
 Together with a recompense more fruitful
 Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;
 Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth, [theirs,
 As shall to these block out what wrongs were
 And write in thee the figures of their love,
 Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
 Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
 Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,
 And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return
 with us,
 And of our Athens (thine and ours) to take
 The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks, Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good
 name

Live with authority: so soon we shall drive
 Of Alcibiades the approaches wild; [back
 Who, like a bear too savage, doth root up
 His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir;
 If Alcibiades kill my countrymen, [thus—
 Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, [Athens,
 That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair
 And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
 Giving our holy virgins to the stain
 Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
 Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks
 In pity of our aged and our youth, [it,
 I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not,
 And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not,

While you have throats to answer: for myself,
 There's not a whistle in the unruly camp,
 But I do prize it at my love, before [you
 The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave
 To the protection of the prosperous gods,
 As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.
Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
 It will be seen to-morrow: my long sickness
 Of health and living now begins to mend,
 And nothing brings me all things. Go, live
 Be Alcibiades your plague, you his, [still;
 And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country; and am
 One that rejoices in the common wrack, [not
 As common bruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
 men,—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great
 In their applauding gates, [triumphers

Tim. Commend me to them;

And tell them, that, to ease them of their Their fears of hostile strokes, their losses,

Their pangs of love, with other incident
 That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain In life's uncertain voyage, I will recover
 ness do them,—

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades
2 Sen. I like this well; he will recover

Tim. I have a tree, which grows close,

That mine own use invites me to cut
 And shortly must I fell it; tell my Tell Athens, in the sequence of days,
 From high to low throughout, that
 To stop affliction, let him take his leave Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the
 And hang himself: I pray you, do my Flav. Trouble him no further;

 still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again;
 Timon hath made his everlasting home
 Upon the beach'd verge of the salt sea,
 Which once a day with his embow'd
 The turbulent surge shall cover: Timon
 And let my grave-stone be your oracle Lips, let sour words go by, and how
 What is amiss, plague and infection Graves only be men's works, and let gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath reign.

1 Sen. His discontents are coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead,
 And strain what other means we have
 In our dear peril.

1 Sen. It requires well took.

SCENE II.—The Walls of Athens
Enter two Senators and a Messenger

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discours'd
 As full as they report? I have heard

Mess. Besides, his expedition promises Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much amazed, Mess. I met a courier, one of
 friend;

Whom, though in general part
 Yet our old love made a particular
 And made us speak like friends: he
 From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
 With letters of entreaty, which His fellowship i' the cause against
 In part for his sake mov'd.

1 Sen. Enter Senators from Timon, 2 Sen. No talk of Timon, we expect.

The enemies' drum is heard, and Doth choke the air with dust;

Ours is the fall, I fear; our

Timon—The Woods, Timon's Cave, and a Tombstone seen,
by a Soldier, seeking Timon.

By all description this should be the
[is this?]
Who hath outstretch'd his [man?]
And this his grave. What's on the character I'll take with wax:

I'll have in every figure skill,
I'll have Athens he's set down by this,
The mark of his ambition is. [Exit.]

Before the Walls of Athens.
Enter Alcibiades and forces.
And to this coward and lascivious town approach.

[A parley sounded.]
Senators on the Walls.
We have gone on, and fill'd the time
In useless measure, making your wills
To justice; till now, myself, and such As this shadow of your power,
With our travers'd arms, and rainily: now the time is flush,

The narrow, in the bearer strong,
"No more," now breathless
In your great chairs of ease;
And violence shall break his wind
And hoard flight.

Noble, and young,
Griefs were but a mere conceit,
Power, or we had cause of fear,
To give thy rages balm,
Our magnitudes with loves Quantity.

So did we woo
To our city's love,
And by promis'd means:
All mankind, nor all deserve
Stroke of war.

These walls of ours
By their hands from whom We have your griefs; nor are they Great towers, trophies, and schools
To fall in them.

Nor are they living
Motives that you first went out:
They wanted cunning, in excess,
To their hearts. March, noble lord,
With thy banners spread:

And a tithed death,
Longer for that food,
[Leaves] take thou the destin'd
Of the spotted die, [tenth]; Putted.

1 Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a sheep-herd,

Approach the fold, and call th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than hew to't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall open;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more; and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.
Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

[The Senators descend, and open the gates.]
Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impres-Interprets for my poor ignorance. [Exit.]

Alcib. [Reads.] "Here lies a wretched corpse,
Of wretched soul bereft:

Seek not my name: a plague consume you Wicked catiffs left!" [Exit.]

Here lie I, Timon: who, alive, all living men
Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay
Not here thy gait."

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorrest in us our human griefs, Scorn'st our brain's flow, and those our droplets which

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit [aye]
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon: of whose memory

Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword;
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war;
make each

Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.]

THE TRAGEDY OF CORIOLANUS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Caius Marcius Coriolanus, a noble Roman.
 Titus Lartius, } Generals against the Volscians.
 Cominius, }
 Menenius Agrippa, Friend to Coriolanus.
 Sicinius Velutus, } Tribunes of the People.
 Junius Brutus, }
 Young Marcius, Son to Coriolanus.
 A Roman Herald.
 Tullus Aufidius, General of the Volscians.
 Lieutenant to Aufidius.
 Conspirators with Aufidius.

A Citizen of Antium.
 Two Volscian Guards.
 Volumnia, Mother to Coriolanus.
 Virgilia, Wife to Coriolanus.
 Valeria, Friend to Virgilia.
 Gentlewoman, attending on Virgilia.
 Roman and Volscian Senators,
 — Adiles, Lictors, Soldiers, Citizens,
 sengers, Servants to Aufidius,
 Attendants.

SCENE, — Partly in Rome; and partly in the territories of the Volscians and Antium.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear
All. Speak, speak. [me speak.]

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than
All. Resolved, resolved. [to famish?]

1 Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

All. No more talking on't; let it be done:
 away, away!

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians good. What authority surfeits on, would relieve us: if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularise their abundance;
 our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes:
 for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

1 Cit. Against him first: he's a very dog to

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: the conscientious men can be content to say for his country, he did it to please his and to be partly proud; which he

 the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help to do you account a vice in him. You way say he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not of accusations; he hath faults, with to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] shouts are these! The other side is risen: why stay we prating here?

All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa, hath always loved the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough

the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my country hand! Where go you? The matter

With bats and clubs! The matter

1 Cit. Our business is not angry senate; they have had inkling the

what we intend to do, which new 'em in deeds. They say poor strong breaths: they shall know strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good

Will you undo yourselves?

1 Cit. We cannot, sir, we are

Men. I tell you, friends, most

Have the patricians of you.

Your suffering in this dearth, you

Strike at the heaven with your

them

Against the Roman state; whose

The way it takes, cracking the strong link asunder, than can ever be your impediment. For the dearth, not the patricians, make it; and those to them, not arms, must help.

transported by calamity [Alack,
where more attends you; and you of the state, who care for you like you curse them as enemies. [fathers, Care for us!—True, indeed! They care for us yet.—Suffer us to famish, store-houses crammed with grain;

for usury, to support usurers; refrain any wholesome act established rich; and provide more piercing to chain up and restrain the of the wars eat us not up, they will;
all this love they bear us.
father you must

yourself wondrous malicious, and of folly. I shall tell you
I know it may be, you have heard it;
it serves my purpose, I will venture
a little more.
Well, I'll hear it, sir: yet you must to rob off our disgrace with a tale:
please you, deliver. [members
There was a time, when all the body's must the belly; thus accus'd it:— like a gulf it did remain of the body, idle and unactive, feeding the vizard, never bearing with the rest; where the other and learn, devise, instruct, walk, feel, actively participate, did minister to appetite and affection common body. The belly answered,— Well, sir, what answer made the [smile]

I shall tell you.—With a kind of it came from the lungs, but even you, I may make the belly smile [thus [smile] if tauntingly replied [parts contented members, the mutinous no receipt; even so most fitly our senators, for that such as you.

Your belly's answer? What,
crowded head, the vigilant eye,
your heart, the arm our soldier,
the leg, the tongue our trumpeter, instruments and petty helps of fabric, if that they—

What then?—
This fellow speaks!—What then?
[restrain'd,
Well, what then?
former agents, if they did com-
the belly answer?

I will tell you;

If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little)

Patience a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.
1 Cit. You're long about it.

Men. Notes me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd.
"True is it, my incorporate friends," quoth
"That I receive the general food at first, [he,
Which you do live upon: and fit it is;
Because I am the store-house, and the shop
Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart, to the seat o' the brain;

And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins,
From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live: and though that all at once,
You, my good friends," this says the belly,

1 Cit. Ay, sir; well, well. [mark me;—

Men. "Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran." What say you to't?

1 Cit. It was an answer: how apply you this? [belly,

Men. The senators of Rome are this good
And you the mutinous members: for, examine Their counsels and their cares; digest things rightly

Touching the weal o' the common; you shall
No public benefit which you receive, [And,
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And no way from yourselves.—What do you
You, the great toe of this assembly?—[Unlink?

1 Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest, [most:
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st fore-
Thou rascal, that are worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.—

But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs:
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle;
The one side must have bale.—

Enter Caius Marcius.

Hail, noble Marcius!

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentions rogues,
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?

1 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter

Beneath abhorring.—What would you have,
you curs,

That like nor peace, nor war? the one affrights you, [you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;

Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,

Or halloo in the sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy whose offence subdues
him, [greatness,
And curse that justice did it. Who deserves Deserves your hate; and your affections are A sick man's appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours, swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye!
Trust ye?

With every minute you do change a mind;
And call him noble that was now your hate, Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter,

That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feed on one another?—What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof,
The city is well stor'd. [they say,

Mar. Hang 'em! They say!
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What's done i' the Capitol; who's like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines; side factions,
and give out

Conjectural marriages; making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough!

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let us use my sword, I'd make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as
As I could pick my lance. [high

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;

For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I be-
What says the other troop? [seech you,

Mar. They are dissolv'd; hang 'em!
They said, they were a-hungry; sigh'd forth
proverbs, [eat,
That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich men only;—with these shreds
They vented their complainings; which being answer'd,

And a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale,) they threw their caps

As they would hang them on the horns o' the Shouting their emulation. [moon,

Men. What is granted them?
Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms,

Of their own choice: one's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not.—'Sdeath!
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me: it will in time Win upon power, and throw forth greater
For insurrection's arguing. [themes

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go, get you home, you ragged
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Whose? [Caesar's?]

Mar. Here: what's the
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Mess. The news is, sir, the
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Mar. I am glad on't: than we
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Our musty superfluity.—Sen. our
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, and Senators; Junius Brutus and Sicinius

1 Sen. Marc'us, 'tis true that you
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

The Volscians are in arms. They have a
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Mar. Tullius Aufidius, that will put you to [Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

I sin in envying his nobility;
And were I anything but what I am,
I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought for
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Mar. Were half to half the world
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Only my wars with him; he is a lion
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

That I am proud to hunt.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

1 Sen. Then, worthy
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Attend upon Cominius to these wars
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Com. It is your former promise.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Mar. And I am constant.—Titus Lartius,
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Shalt see me once more strike at Volscians
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

What, art thou still? stand at our
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Tit. No, Caesar's
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

I'll lean upon one crutch, and
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Ere stay behind this business.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Men. Your company to the Capitol
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

1 Sen. I know,
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Our greatest friends attend us.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Tit. Follow, Cominius; we must follow
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Right worthy you priority.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Com. [To the Citizens.]
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

1 Sen. [To the Citizens.]
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Mar. Nay, let them
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

The Volscians have much corn, take [Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

thither,
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

To gnaw their garners.—Wardship
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Your valour puts well forth; your
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

[Exeunt Senators, Cominius, and Men.]

Sic. Was ever man so proud
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Bru. He has no equal.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

people,—
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eye?
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Sic. Nay, but
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Sic. Bemoan the modest moon.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Bru. The present wars devour
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Too proud to be so valiant.
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Sic. Each
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Tickled with good success,
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

shadow
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

Which he treads on at noon; but
[Enter a Messenger, hastily.]

can brook to be commanded

Fame, at the which he aims, already he is well grac'd, cannot be told, nor more attain'd, than by the first: for what miscurries
the general's fault, though he perform the most of a man; and giddy censure cry out of Marcius, "O, if he were the bushiness!"

Besides, if things go well, that so sticks on Marcius, shall rob Cominius.

Come;
Cominius' honours are to Marcius, Marcius earn'd them not; and all his honours shall be honours, though, indeed, his merit not.

Let's hence and hear despatch is made; and in what his singularity, he goes [Fashion, present action.

Let's along. [Exeunt.
II.—Corioli. The Senate-House.
Aulidius and certain Senators.
Your opinion is, Aulidius,
of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
how we proceed.

Is it not yours?
I have been thought on in this state,
and brought to bodily act ere Rome sentence? 'Tis not four days gone and thence; these are the words; I utter here; yes, here it is:—[think [Reads.

press'd a power, but it is not for war, or west; the dearth is great;
and it is rumour'd, Marcius, your old enemy,
whose name hated than of you,
Marcius, a most valiant Roman,
is sent on this preparation of war: most likely, 'tis for you:

Our army's in the field:
yet made doubt but Rome was [ready
Nor did you think it folly your great pretences veil'd, till when they show themselves; which in [covery, brought to Rome. By the dishonour'd in our aim; which was,
many towns, ere, almost, Rome
we were about.

Noble Aulidius,
hile you to your bands:
down before us, for the remove of our army; but, I think, you'll find prepared for us.

Ang. O, doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more,
Some parcels of their power are forth already
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!
Auf. And keep your honours safe!
1 Sen. Farewell.
2 Sen. Farewell.
All. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Rome. A Room in Marcius'
House.

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia: they sit down on two low stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: if my son were my husband, I would freelier rejoice in absence wherein he won honour, than in the embracements of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of king's entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame.
To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter,—I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam, how then?

Vol. Then, his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely:—had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.
Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not. [Myself.
Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum;
See him pluck Aulidius down by the hair;
As children from a bear, the Volscies shunning
him;
Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus,—
"Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear, Though you were born in Rome!" his bloody brow [goes;
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he
Like to a harvest-man, that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man,
Than gilt his trophy; the breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
[blood
Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth
At Grecian swords' contending.—Tell Valeria,
We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.
Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with Valeria and her Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Val. O' my word, the father's son; I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again: and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again: or whether his full enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mummok'd it!

Vol. One of his father's moods.

Val. Indeed, he, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of Val. Not out of doors! [doors.

Val. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you? [loye.

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, he, go with me; you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there you go to

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; I came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true: I thought I should speak it. Thus it is:—The Volscian army forth; against whom our general is gone, with one part of our power; your lord, and Titus Lartius, down before their city Corioli; they doubt prevailing, and to make it true. This is true, on mine honour; and go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; obey you in everything hereafter.

Val. Let her alone, lady; as she will will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth, I think she would you well, then.—Come, good sweet, Pr'ythee, Virgilia, turn thy door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then, farewell.

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with drum and colours, Marcius, Lartius, Officers, and Soldiers.

Lartius, Officers, and Soldiers.

Mar. Yonder comes news;—

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell, nor give you him, I will,

Mar. For half a hundred years.—Senators

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile.

Mar. Then shall we hear their

Mar. Now, Mars, I pr'ythee, make us good

Mar. That we with smoking swords

Mar. To help our fielded friends!

Mar. A parley sounded.

Mar. Tullus Aufidius, is he within your

1 Sen. No, nor a man that

Mar. That's lesser than a little.

Mar. Are bringing forth our youth;

Mar. Rather than they shall pound us

Mar. Which yet seem shut, we have

Mar. rushes;

Mar. They'll open of themselves.

Aufidius; list, what work he makes
On your cloven army.

O, they are at it!
[fight] Let's be our instruction.—

Volscian enter, and pass over the stage.
They fear us not, but issue forth their your shields before your hearts, and more proof than shields.—Ad-

we have Titus!
[fight] I'll take him for a Volscian,

and count Romans and Volscians,
The Romans are beaten back to Re-enter Marcian.

All the contagion of the south light

you herd of—Boils and that you may be abhor'd

and one infect another
You souls of geese,
how have you that apes would beat! Pluto and backs red, and faces pale and aged fear! Mend, and charge I'll leave the foe, look to't: come fast, we'll beat them to their trenches follow'd. [wives,

The Volscians and Romans

the fight is renewed. The Volscians enter the gates, and Marcian

are open:—now prove good Fortune widens them,
mark me, and do the like.

Marcian enters the gates; is shut in.
Poor hardiness! not I.

Nor L
To the pot, I warrant him.

[Alarum continues.]
What is become of Marcian?

Slain, sir, doubtless.
The fliers at the very heels,

he enters: who, upon the sudden,
all the city.

O noble fellow!
outdares his senseless sword,

stands up! Thou art entire, as big as thou art,

Thou wast a soldier

Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks, and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the
Were feverous, and did tremble. [world

Re-enter Marcian, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.
Look, sir!

O, 'tis Marcian!
Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the city.]

SCENE V.—Within Corioli. A Street.
Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2 Rom. And I this. [silver,
3 Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for [Alarum continues still afar off.]

Enter Marcian and Titus Lartius, with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours [spoons,
At a crack'd drachm! Cushions, leaden irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves, [with them!—

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up!—down
And hark, what noise the general makes!—To

him!
There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,
Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus,

take
Convenient numbers to make good the city;
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will

To help Cominius. [haste
Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent

For a second course of fight.
Mar. Sir, praise me not;
My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you

The blood I drop is rather physical [well:
Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentle-
man,
Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she places highest! So, farewell.
Lart. Thou worthiest Marcian!—

[Exit Marcian.]
Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers of the town,
Where they shall know our mind: away!

[Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of Cominius.
Enter Cominius and forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought:
we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sir,

We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck, [heard
By interluna and conveying gusts we have
The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods,
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts
encountering,

May give you thankful sacrifice!—

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issu'd,
And given to Lartius and to Marcia's battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long

Mess. Above an hour, my lord. [is't since?

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:

How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscies Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were slay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcia; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. [Within.] Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a labor,
More than I know the sound of Marcia's
From every manner man. [tongue

Enter Marcia.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,

But mantled in your own.

Mar. O, let me clip you
In arms as sound as when I woo'd; in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward!

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the other;

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your
Where is he? Call him hither. [trenches?

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth; but for our gentlemen, [them!]

The common file, (A plague!—Tribunes for
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat, as they did
From rascals worse than they. [budge

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? Are you loath
If not, why cease you till you are at the

Com. Marcia, we have as much purpose

And did retire, to win our purpose. [know]

Mar. How lies their battle? know which side

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcia

Their hands i' the vaward are the Antioch

Of their best trust; o'er them Antioch

Their very heart of hope. I do bemoan

Mar. By all the battles wherein we have

By the blood we have shed together

vows

We have made to endure friends,

Set me against Antioch and his soldiers,

And that you not delay the present

Filling the air with sworis advanced

We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could

You were conducted to a gentle bed

And balm applied to you, yet dare I

Deny your asking: take your choice

That best can aid your action.

Mar. That most are willing.—If any such (As it were sin to doubt) that love the

ing

Wherein you see me smear'd; if any

Lesser his person than an ill report

If any think, brave death outweighs pain

And that his country's dearer than himself

Let him, alone, or so many so minded

Wave thus, to express his disposition

And follow Marcia.

[They all shout, and wave their swords,

him up in their arms, and cast up caps.

O, me alone! Make you a sword of

If these shows be not outward, which

But is four Volscies? None of you

Able to bear against the great Antioch

A shield as hard as his. A certain sword

Though thanks to all, must I submit

the rest

Shall bear the business in some other

As cause will be obey'd. Please you

And four shall quickly draw out my

Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my

Make good this ostentation, and you

Divide in all with us.

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli

Titus Lartius, having set a guard upon going with drum and trumpet

Cominius and Caius Marcius

a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers

Scout.

Lart. So let the ports be guarded your duties.

As I have set them down. If I do

Those centuries to our aid; the rest holding; if we lose the field,

Keep the town.

Fear not our care, sir.
Keep your gates upon house, and shut your gates upon us. Come; to the Roman camp con-

[Exeunt.]
VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Enter from opposite sides Marcius and Aufidius.

I'll fight with none but thee; for I am a promise-breaker. [do hate thee

We hate alike:

thy face and envy. Fix thy foot.
The first bulger die the other's doom him after! [slave,

If I fly, Marcius,

like a hare.
Within these three hours, Tullus,

ought in your Corioli walls, what work I pleas'd; 'tis not my you seek me mask'd; for thy re-power to the highest. [venge,

Wert thou the Hector,
the whelp of your bragg'd progeny,

couldst not escape me here.— [They fight, and certain Volscies come to the aid of Aufidius.

not not valiant, you have sham'd me seconds.

and fighting, driven in by Marcius.

IX.—The Roman Camp.
A Retreat sounded. Flourish.

from one side, Cominius and from the other side, Marcius,

his arm in a scarf, and other
I should tell thee o'er this thy day's

[it, believe thy deeds: but I'll report

shall mingle tears with smiles;
patricians shall attend, and shrug, admirers; where ladies shall be quak'd, hear more; where the

the fasty plebeians, hate thine against their hearts, "We thank such a soldier!" [the gods,

you to a morsel of this feast,

and before.
Lartius with his powder, from the per suit.

O general, -

the caparison:
Pray now, no more: my mother,

to extol her blood.

When she does praise me, grieves me. I have done [done]

As you have done,—that's what I can; in
As you have been,—that's for my country;

He that has but effected his good will,
Hath overtaken mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know

The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traduce-

ment,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,

Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest: therefore, I beseech

(In sign of what you are, not to reward you,
What you have done,) before our army hear

me.
Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and

To hear themselves remember'd. [they start
Com. Should they not,

Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses, [of all (Whereof we have taken good, and good store,)

The treasure, in this field achiev'd and city,
We render you the tenth; to be taken forth,

At the common distribution, at Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take

A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those

That have beheld the doing.
[A long flourish. They all cry "Marcius!

Marcius!" cast up their caps and lances:
Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane, [shall

Never sound more: when drums and trumpets
In the field prove flatterers, let courts and Made all of false-fac'd soothing: [cities be

When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk,

Let him be made an overture for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd

My nose that bled, or foil'd some debile wretch,
Which, without note, here's many else have

You shout me forth [done,
In acclamations hyperbolic;
As if I lov'd my little should be dieted

In praises sauc'd with lies.
Com. Too modest are you!

More cruel to your good report, than grateful
To us that give you truly: by your patience,

If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you [manacles,

(Like one that means his proper harm) in Then reason safely with you.—Therefore, be it known,

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius

Wear this war's garland: in token of the
which,

My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this

time,

For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS.—
Bear the addition nobly ever!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.
All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank
you:—

I mean to stride your steed; and at all times,
To undercrest your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.
Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that
now

Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it; 'tis yours. What is't?
Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli

At a poor man's house; he used me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity; I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg'd!
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name!
Cor. By Jupiter, forgot:—
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.—
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to; come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Aufidius, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!
I Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good

Auf. Condition!— [condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsc, be that I am.—Condition!

What good condition can a treaty find
I' the part that is at mercy? Five times,

Marcius, [beat me;
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou
And wouldst do so, I think, should we

encounter

As often as we eat.—By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,

He's mine, or I am his: mine emulation
Hath not that honour in't it had; for where

I thought to crush him in an equal force, (True sword to sword,) I'll potch at him some

Or wrath or craft may get him. [way,
I Sol. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so valiant,
valour's poison'd

With only suffering stain by him; for he Shall fly out of itself; nor face nor cap.

Being naked, sick; nor face nor cap.

The prayers of priests nor times of season
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up

Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius; where I find him, I

At home, upon my brother's guard, would I Against the hospitable canon, would I

Wash my fierce hand in's heart. O Rome,
the city;

Learn how 'tis held; and what they are
Be hostages for Rome.

I Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the express pray you,

(Tis south the city mill,) bring me
How the world goes, that to the loss of

I may spur on my journey. I shall, sir.

I Sol.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Menenius, Sicinius, and others.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall
Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.
Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.
Men. Ay, to devour him; as the plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb, indeed, that does Men. He's a bear, indeed, that does lamb. You two are old men; tell me thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but
Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in the Men. This is strange now; do you know how you are censured here in the mean of us of the right-hand file?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now, you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a little thief of occasion will rob you of a deal of patience; give your displeasure reins, and be angry at your pleasure to ride

least, if you take it as a pleasure to ride
so. You blame Marcius for being proud.

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little for your helps are many, or else your wondrous single; your abilities will like, for doing much alone.

 O that you could turn your as the napes of your necks, and an interior survey of your good that you could!

What then, sir?

Why, then you should discover a summing, proud, violent, testy
 (alas fools) as any in Rome. [too
 Menenius, you are known well enough
 I am known to be a humorous paone that loves a cup of hot wine, drop of allaying Tiber in't; said to imperfect in favouring the first heavy and tunder-like upon too trivial one that converses more with the but-night, than with the forehead of What I think I utter, and spend as my breath. Meeting two such as you are, (I cannot call you Ly-menius, I make a crooked face at it.

 your worship have delivered the when I find the ass in compound major part of your syllables: and I am content to bear with those that are reverend grave men, yet they that tell you you have good faces.

 This is in the map of my microcosm,
 that I am known well enough too?

Can your lissom conspectivities of this character, if I be known well
 enough.

Enough, sir, come, we know you well
 You know neither me, yourselves, nor
 You are ambitious for poor knaves'

you wear out a good wholesome in hearing a cause between an and a fasset-seller; and then re-controversy of three-pence to a of audience. When you are hear-between party and party, if you be pinched with the colic, you make clamours; set up the bloody flag of audience; and, in roaring for a

 to dismiss the controversy bleeding, laughed by your hearing: all the made in their cause is, calling both knaves. You are a pair of strange knave, come, you are well understood a better glaze for the table than a brother in the Capitol.

Very jests must become mockers,
 to counter such ridiculous subjects
 When you speak best unto the

is not worth the wagging of your your heels deserve not so hon-as to stuff a botcher's cushion, mounted in an ass's pack-saddle.

in saying, Marc'us is proud;
 estimation, is worth all your since Deucalion; though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good den to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain,

 being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians:
 I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Brutus and Sicinius retire.

Enter Volun'ia, Virgilia, and Valeria, &c.
 How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches: for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marc'us coming home!

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee.—Hoo! Marc'us coming home!

Vol. Vir. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel tonight:—a letter for me!

[saw it.

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I

Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricute, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench.—Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded,

Vir. O, no, no, no. [fort.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much:— brings a victory in his pocket!—The wounds become him.

Vol. On's brows: Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes,—they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stay'd by him, I would not have been so fidius'd for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them.
 Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go.—Yes, yes, yes;
 the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war:
 he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly. [of him.

Vol. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true.—
 Where is he wounded?—[To the Tribunes, who come forward.] God save your good worships! Marc'us is coming home: he has more cause to be proud.—[To Vol.] Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' the shoulder, and i' the left arm:
 there will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body.

Men. One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh, —there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now, it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him

He carries noise, and behind him he leaves Death, that dark spirit, in's nery arm doth lie; Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men die.

A sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter Cominius and Titus Lartius; between them Coriolanus, crowned with an oak leaf garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli gates: where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these In honour follows, Coriolanus:—

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Al. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. O, you have, I know, petition'd all the gods

For my prosperity!

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up; My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,

What is it? Coriolanus must I call thee?

But O, thy wife!

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home,

That weep'st to see me triumph! Ah, my dear, Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,

And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet?—[To Valeria.] O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn:—O, welcome home;

And welcome, general;—and you are welcome

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,

And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy:

A curse begin at very root on's heart,

That is not glad to see thee!—You are three,

That Rome should dote on; yet by the faith of men

We have some old crab-trees here at home, Be grafted to your relish. Yet, welcome,

We call a nettle but a nettle, and [warriors; The faults of fools but folly.

Com. Ever right,

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on!

Cor. [To his Wife and Mother.]

hand,—and yours:

Ere in our own house I do shade my face

The good patricians must be visited;

From whom I have receiv'd not only love

But with them change of honours.

Vol.

To see inherited my very wishes,

And the buildings of my fancy; only

There's one thing wanting, which I do

Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor.

I had rather be their servant in their

Than away with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol!

[Flourish. Coriolanus, Cominius, Titus Lartius, and the Tribunes, with the Soldiers, follow.]

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and blear'd sights

Are spectacled to see him: your

Into a rapture lets her baby cry

While she chats him: the kitchen maids

Her richest lockram 'bout her neck;

Clamb'ring the walls to eye him: still

Are smother'd up, lends him

With variable complexions; all agree

In earnestness to see him: sold shows

Do press among the popular throng,

To win a vulgar station: our val'd

Commit the war of white and damask

Their nicely-gawdied cheeks, to the spoils

Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a

As if that whatsoever god who leads

Were silly crept into his human power

And gave him graceful posture.

Sic.

I warrant him consul.

Bru.

Then our chief

During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately

honours

From where he should begin, and end

Lose those he hath won

Bru.

In that there's

Sic. Doubt not, the common

we stand,

But they, upon their ancient malice

Forget, with the least cause, the

honours

Which that he'll give them, make

As he is proud to do't.

Bru.

I heard the

Were he to stand for consul, now

Appear i' the market-place, nor on

The napless vesture of humility:

Nor, showing (as the manner is)

To the people, beg their stinking

Sic.

Bru. It was his word,

Sic. O, he would rather

by the will of the gentry to him,
the pleasure of the nobles.

I wish no better have him hold that purpose, and to put
[it

'Tis most like he will.
[It shall be to him, then, as our good construction.

So it must fall out our authorities. For an end, suggest the people, in what hatred

all hath held them; that to's power he
[and shall themmales, silenc'd their pleaders, their freedoms: holding them,

action and capacity,

nor will, nor fitness for the world,
in the war; who have their pro-
[and bearing burdens, and sore blows

[and line when his soaring insolence and the people, (which time shall not put upon't: and that's as easy [want,

those on sleep) will be his fire their dry stubble; and their blaze
[and

After a Messenger.
What's the matter?
What are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis men shall be consul: I have seen men throng to see him, and the matrons flung gloves, maids their scarfs and handker-

as he pass'd: the nobles bended statue; and the commons made thunder with their caps and are the like.

Let's to the Capitol;
with us ears and eyes for the time,
for the event.

Have with you.
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Rome. The Capitol.
Two Officers to lay cushions.

come, they are almost here.
stand for consulships?

Yes, they say; but 'tis thought of Coriolanus will carry it.

That's a brave fellow; but he's ven-erous, and loves not the common

With there have been many great battered the people, who ne'er and there be many that they have know not wherefore; so that if they know not why, they hate upon ground: therefore, for Coriolanus

neither to care whether they love or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and, out of his noble carelessness, lets them plainly see't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he wou'd indifferently twist doing them neither good nor harm: but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite.
Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people, is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, honneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report; but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man.
Make way, they are coming.

A sennet. Enter with Lictors before them,
Cominius the Consul, Menenius, Coriolanus, many other Senators, Sicinius, and Brutus. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volscies,
And to send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that hath thus Stood for his country: therefore, please you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom
We meet here, both to thank, and to remember
With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us
think

Rather our state's defective for requital, Than we to stretch it out. Masters o' the
people,

We do request your kindest ears; and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are contented
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Brutus. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people, than He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off:

I would you rather had been silent. Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru.

Most willingly :

But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men.

He loves your people :

But tie him not to be their bedfellow.—

Worthy Cominius, speak.—

[Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.

Nay, keep your place.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus ; never shame to hear What you have nobly done.

Cor.

Your honours' pardon :

I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru.

Sir, I hope

My words dis-bench'd you not.

Cor.

No, sir : yet oft,

When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words.

You woot'd not, therefore hurt not : but, your
I love them as they weigh.

Men.

Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
i' the sun,

When the alarm were struck, than idly sit.
To hear my nothings monster'd.

Men.

Masters of the people,

Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter, (That's thousand to one good one,) when you now see,

He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one of his ears to hear it!—Proceed,

Cominius.

[Coriolanus

Com. I shall lack voice : the deeds of
Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is held,

That valour is the chiefest virtue, and

Most dignifies the haver : if it be,

The man I speak of cannot in the world

Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,

When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought

Beyond the mark of others : our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,

When with his Amazonian chin he drove

The bristled lips before him : he bestrid

An o'er-press'd Roman, and i' the consul's view

Slew three opposers : Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee : in that day's feats,

When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field ; and for his meed

Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sen ;

And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this

Before and in Corioli, let me say, [last,
I cannot speak him home : he stopp'd the fliers ;

And, by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport : as weeds before

A vessel under sail, so men obey'd [stamp,
And fell below his stem : his sword, (death's

Where it did mark, it took : from face to foot

He was a thing of blood, whose every vein

Was tim'd with dying cries : alone he

The mortal gate of the city, which he

With shunless destiny ; additions came

And with a sudden reinforcement stream'd

Corioli like a planet : now all's his ;

When, by and by, the din of war 'gan

His ready sense ; then straight he

Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigued ;

And to the battle came he ; where he

Run reeking o'er the lives of men, so it

'Twere a perpetual spoil ; and till we

Both field and city ours, he never

To ease his breast with panting.

Men. He cannot but with measure

Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he

And look'd upon things precious, as he

The common muck o' the world ; he

Than misery itself would give ; he

His deeds with doing them ; and he

To spend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right

Let him be called for.

1 Sen. He doth appear.

Off. He doth appear.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are

To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them

My life and services.

Men. It then remains

That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do

Let me o'erleap that custom ; for I

Put on the gown, stand naked, and

them,

For my wounds' sake, to give their

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the

Must have their voices, neither will

One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not

Pray you, go fit you to the custom ;

Take to you, as your predecessors

Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is

That I shall blush in acting, and

Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you

Cor. [Aside to Sic.] Thus I

To brag unto them,—thus I

thus ;—

Show them the unaching scars which

As if I had receiv'd them for the

Of their breath only !—

Men. Do not stand

We recommend to you, tribunes of

Our purpose to them ;—and to our

Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy

Flourish. [Flourish]

Bru. You see how he friends

people.

May they perceive his intent! He will require them, and will content what he requested to be us them to give.

Come, we'll inform them proceedings here: on the market-place, they do attend us.

Exeunt.
SCENE III.—Rome. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

Once, if he do require our voices, we must not deny him.

We may, sir, if we will.

We have power in ourselves to do it, and to make us his wounds, and tell us his power that we have no power to do;
we are to put our tongues into those and speak for them: so, if he tell us of them, we must also tell him our acceptance of them. Ingratitude is and for the multitude to be in-were to make a monster of the multi-of the which, we, being members,
bring ourselves to be monstrous mem-

And to make us no better thought of,
he will serve; for once, when we stood in the corn, he himself stuck not to call us a many-headed multitude.

We have been called so of many;
some surnam'd some brown, some so diversely coloured: and truly, I all our wits were to issue out of one they would fly east, west, north, south;
to all the points of one direct way should be to all the points of the compass.

Think you so? Which way do you think it would fly?
Ay, your wit will not so soon out as mine will, 'tis strongly wedged up in my head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould,
Why that way? [sure, southward.
To lose itself in a fog; where being lost, it would return for conscience' sake, to seek for a wife.

You are never without your tricks:
you may.

You all resolved to give your voices? I say, if he would incline to that, there was never a worthier man.

Coriolanus and Menenius.
We are not to stay all
to come by him where he stands, by twos, and by threes. He's to be requested by particulars; wherein of us has a single honour, in giving our voices with our own tongues:
I'll follow me, and I'll direct you how to go by him.

Content.

[Exeunt.]

Men. O, sir, you are not right; have you not
The worthiest men have done't? [Known]

Cor. What must I say?—
"I pray, sir,"—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace:—"Look, sir; my wounds;—

I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and ran
From the noise of our own drums."

Men. O me, the gods!
You must not speak of that: you must desire
To think upon you. [them]

Cor. Think upon me! Hang 'em!
I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by them.

Men. You'll mar all:
I'll leave you: pray you, speak to them, I pray
in wholesome manner. [you,

Cor. Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean.—[Exit Menenius.]
So, here comes a brace.

Enter two Citizens.

You know the cause, sir, of my standing here!

1 Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought
Cor. Mine own desert. [you to't.]

2 Cit. Your own desert?

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire.

1 Cit. How! not your own desire!

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

1 Cit. You must think, if we give you anything, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well, then, I pray, your price of the consulship?

1 Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly, sir? I pray, let me ha't: I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, sir; what say you?

2 Cit. You shall have it, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir.—There is in all two worthy voices begged.—I have your alms:

1 Cit. But this is something odd. [adieu.]

2 Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter. [Exeunt the two Citizens.]

Enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

3 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

3 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends;
you have not, indeed, loved the common
people.

Cor. You should account me the more vir-tuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them;
'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly;

that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!—
Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.
Why in this woolvish toge should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,
Their needless vouchers? Custom calls me

to't:—
What custom wills, in all things should we
The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
For truth to o'er-peer. Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus.—I am half through;

The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.
Here come more voices.—

Enter three other Citizens.
Your voices; for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen and heard of; for your voices,
Have done many things, some less, some more;
Your voices: indeed I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

8 Cit. Therefore let him be consul: the gods give him joy, and make him good friend
All. Amen, amen.— [to the people!]
God save thee, noble consul!

[Exeunt Citizens.]
Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter Menenius, with Brutus and Sicinius.
Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in the official marks invested, you Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done? [charg'd;
Sic. The custom of request you have dis-
The people do admit you; and are summon'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?
Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?
Sic. You may, sir. [myself again,

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing Repair to the senate-house. [along]

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.
[Exeunt Coriol. and Menen.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks
'Tis warm at his heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he His humble weeds. Will you dismiss people?

Re-enter Citizens.
Sic. How now, my masters! have you

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods he may do us
love.

2 Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor
He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. He scolded us downright.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save but says

He used us scornfully: he should have
us

His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no more.

3 Cit. He said he had wounds, could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in
"I would be consul," says he, "myself"

But by your voices, will not so permit
Your voices therefore: "when we grow"

Here was, "I thank you for your
thank you,—

Your most sweet voices:—now you your voices,

I have no further with you."—Was mockery?

Sic. Why either were you ignorant
Or, seeing it, of such childish trivial

To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him
As you were lesson'd?—When he bid

But was a petty servant to the state

He was your enemy; ever spoke
Your liberties, and the charters that

P' the body of the weal; and now
A place of potency, and sway of the

If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeil, your voices

Be curses to yourselves! You should
That, as his worthy deeds did claim

Than what he stood for, so his grace
Would think upon you for your Translate his malice towards you into Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. That to
As you were fore-advic'd, had

spirit,
And tried his inclination: from his

Either his gracious promise, which you
As cause had call'd you up, have

Or else it would have gall'd his
Which easily endures not artifice

Tying him to aught; so, putting
You should have taken the advantage

And pass'd him unselected. Bru.

Will you in free contempt, [think that did need your loves; and do you contempt shall not be bruising to you, to have power to crush? Why, had your bodies
 among you? or had you tongues to the rectorship of judgment? [cry
 Have you,
 denied the asker? and now again,
 that did not ask, but mock, bestow
 for tongues?
 He's not confirm'd; we may deny
 And will deny him:
 five hundred voices of that sound.
 Ay, twice five hundred, and their words to piece 'em. [friends, you hence instantly; and tell those who chose a consul that will from them make them of no more voice that are as often beat for barking, as apt to do so.

Let them assemble;
 his judgment, all revoke
 election: enforce his pride, old hate unto you: besides, forget not contempt he wore the humble weed;
 with he scorn'd you: but your loves,
 upon his services, took from you union of his present portance, gibingly, ungravelly, he did moderate hate he bears you.
 Lay
 on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd, sentiment between,) but that you must election on him.

Say, you chose him
 our commandment, than as guided true affections; and that, your with what you rather must do, you should, made you against the consul: lay the fault on us.
 spare us not. Say, we read lee-contin'd: and what stock he [came o' the Marcians; from whence Marcius, Numa's daughter's son, great Hostilius, here was king;

 house Publius and Quintus were,
 had water brought by conduits nobly named so,
 was his great ancestor.

One thus descended,
 aside well in his person wrought high in place, we did commend remembrances: but you have found,
 present bearing with his past,

That he's your fix'd enemy, and revoke
 Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had done't, (Harp on that still,) but by our putting on:
 And presently, when you have drawn your number,
 Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so: almost all Repent in their election. [Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. Let them go on;
 This mutiny were better put in hazard,
 Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
 If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
 With their refusal, both observe and answer
 The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol, Come, we'll be there before the stream o' the
 people;
 And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
 Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Titus Lartius, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius, then, had made new
 head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was,
 Our swifter composition. [which caus'd

Cor. So then, the Volscies stand but as at first;

Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make Upon us again. [road

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
 That we shall hardly in our ages see
 Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me; and did curse
 Against the Volscies, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How! what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to
 sword;

That of all things upon the earth he hated
 Your person most; that he would pawn his
 To hopeless restitution, so he might [fortunes
 Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
 To oppose his hatred fully.—[To Lartius.]
 Welcome home.—

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.
 Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
 The tongues o' the common mouth: I do despise them,
 For they do prank them in authority,
 Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. I pass no further.
Cor. Ha! what is that?
Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no further.
Cor. What makes this change? [i]ther.
Men. The matter?
Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the Bru. Cominius, no. [i]commons?
Cor. Have I had children's voices?
1 Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.
Bru. The people are incens'd against him.
Sic. Stop,
 Or all will fall in broil.
Cor. Are these your herd?—
 Must these have voices, that can yield them
 now, [i]are your offices?
 And straight disclaim their tongues?—What You being their mouths, why rule you not their
 Have you not set them on? [i]teeth?
Men. Be calm, be calm.
Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by
 To curb the will of the nobility: [i]plot,
 Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule,
 Nor ever will be rul'd.
Bru. Call't not a plot:
 The people cry, you mock'd them; and of late,
 When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
 Scandal'd the suppliants for the people, call'd
 them
 Time-plensers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.
Cor. Why, this was known before.
Bru. Not to them all.
Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence?
Bru. How! I inform them!
Cor. You are like to do such business.
Bru. Not unlike,
 Each way, to better yours.
Cor. Why, then, should I be consul? By yon
 clouds,
 Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
 Your fellow tribune.
Sic. You show too much of that
 For which the people stir: if you will pass
 To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,
 Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
 Or never be so noble as a consul,
 Nor yoke with him for tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.
Com. The people are abus'd; set on. This paltering
 Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
 Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
 'T' the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!
 This was my speech, and I will speak't again,—
Men. Not now, not now.
1 Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My noble friends,
 I crave their pardons:
 For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,
 In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate

The cockle of rebellion, insolence,
 Which we ourselves have plough'd and scatter'd.
 By mingling them with us, the honour'd
 Who lack not virtue, no, nor power,
 Which they have given to buggars.
Men. Well, no more words, we beseech you.
1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. As for my country I have shed my blood
 Not fearing outward force, so shall my Coin words till they decay, against meazels,
 Which we disdain should tetter us, yet
 The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speak o' the
 As if you were a god to punish, not
 A man of their infirmity.
Sic. 'Twere well
 We let the people know't.
Men. What, what? [i]the Cor. Choler!
 Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
 By Jove, 'twould be my mind!
Sic. It is a
 That shall remain a poison where it is,
 Not poison any further.
Cor. Shall remain
 Hear you this Triton of the minnows?
 His absolute "shall!" 'Twas from the
Com. 'Twas from the
Cor. O good, but most unwise patricians!
 You grave, but reckless senators, have Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
 That with his peremptory "shall,"
 The horn and noise o' the monster,
 spirit
 To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,
 And make your channel his! If he should Then veil your ignorance; if you are Your dangerous lenity. If you are Be not as common fools; if you are Let them have cushions by you plebeians,
 If they be senators: and they are no
 When, both your voices blended, taste
 Most palates theirs. They choose the trate;
 And such a one as he, who puts his
 His popular "shall," against a grave
 Than ever frown'd in Greece.
 self,
 It makes the consuls base! and not
 To know, when two authorities are Neither supreme, how soon contending
 May enter 'twixt the gap of both,
 The one by the other.
Com. Well,—on to the matter.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel,
 The corn o' the store-house gratis,
 Sometime in Greece,
Men. Well, well, no more words.

though there the people had more
power,
nurish'd disobedience, fed of the state.

Why, shall the people give thus, their voice?

I'll give my reasons, than their voices. They know

recompense, resting well assur'd did service for't: being press'd to the naval of the state was touch'd, not thread the gates: this kind of corn gratis: being i' the war, and revolts, wherein they spoke not for them: the accusa-have often made against the senate, donation. Well, what then?

bosom multiplied digest courtesy? Let deeds express to be their words:—"We did re-greater poll, and in true fear

our demands."—Thus we debase of our souls, and make the rabble fears; which will in time break of the senate, and bring in the crows

the eagles.

Come, enough.
with over-measure.

No, take more:
be sworn by, both divine and

and withal!—This double wor-does disdain with cause, the

at all reason: where gentry, title, dada, but by the yea and no travancance,—it must omit lies, and give way the while slightness: purpose so barr'd, it done to purpose. Therefore, bewill be less fearful than discreet;

the fundamental part of state,

you doubt the change on't: that before a long, and wish [prefer only with a dangerous physic of death without it,—at once

of his tongue; let them not lick which is their poison: your dis-judgment, and bereaves the state city which should become it;

the power to do the good it would which doth control it.

He has said enough.

Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall
As traitors do. [answer

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!— [tribunes!

What should the people do with these bald
On whom depending, their obedience fails

To the greater bench: in a rebellion, [law,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was

Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet, be said, it must be meet,

And throw their power i' the dust.
Bru. Manifest treason!

Sic. This is a consul? no.
Bru. The Aediles, ho!—Let him be apprehended. [whose name, myself

Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit Brutus] in Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,

A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee,

And follow to thine answer.
Cor. Hence, old goat!

Sen. and Pat. We'll surely him.
Com. Aged sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake
Out of thy garments. [thy bones

Sic. Help, ye citizens!
Re-enter Brutus, with the Aediles and a rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect.

Sic. Here's he that would Take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, Aediles!
Citizens. Down with him! down with him!

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons!
[They all bustle about Coriolanus.

Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—what ho!
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!

Citizens. Peace, peace, peace! stay, hold,
peace! [breath;

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of Confusion's near; I cannot speak.—You, tribunes

To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:—
Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people; peace!
Citizens. Let's hear our tribune; peace!—

Speak, speak, speak.
Sic. You are at a point to lose your liberties;

Marcus would have all from you; Marcus,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

1 Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.
Sic. What is the city, but the people?

Citizens. True,
The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all, we were estab-
The people's magistrates. [sh'd

Citizens. You so remain.
Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation,

And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.

Sic. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it.—We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o' the people, in whose power
We are elected theirs, Marcius is worthy Of present death.

Sic. Therefore lay hold of him;
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ediles, seize him!
Citizens, Yield, Marcius, yield!

Men. Hear me one word;
Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Ed. Peace, peace! [friends,
Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's
And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous

Where the disease is violent.—Lay hands upon
And bear him to the rock. [him,

Cor. [Drawing his sword.] No, I'll die here.
There's some among you have beheld me
fighting: [seen me,

Come, try upon yourselves what you have Men. Down with that sword!—Tribunes, withdraw a while.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.
Men. Help Marcius, help.

You that be noble; help him, young and old!
Citizens. Down with him! down with him!

[In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the people are beaten in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone,
All will be naught else. [away!

2 Sen. Get you gone.
Cor. Stand fast;

We have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?

1 Sen. The gods forbid!
I prythee, noble friend, home to thy house;

Leave us to cure this cause.
Men. For 'tis a sore upon us,
You cannot yourself be gone, beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us.
Cor. I would they were barbarians, (as they are, [they are not,

Though in Rome litter'd,) not Romans, (as Though call'd 'the porch o' the Capitol!)

Men. Begone!
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;

One time will owe another.
Cor. On fair ground,
I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric.—Will you hence,
Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are us'd to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone!

I'll try whether my old wit be in my
With those that have but little; for
With cloth of any colour.

Com. [Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius,
1 Pat. This man has mark'd me
Men. His nature is too noble for
He would not flatter Neptune for his power,
Or Jove's power to thunder.

his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his
And, being angry, does forget the
He heard the name of death. I'd Here's goodly work!

2 Pat. I would they were in Men. I would they were in the vengeance,

Could he not speak them fair!
Re-enter Brutus and Sicinius.

Sic. That would depopulate the city,
Be every man himself!

Men. You would Sic. He shall be thrown down the rock

With rigorous hands: he hath
And therefore law shall score him
Than the severity of the public power,
Which he so sets at naught.

1 Cit. The noble tribunes are the people's
And we their hands.

Citizens. He shall, sure on't.
Men. Sir, sir,—

Sic. Peace!
Men. Do not cry havoc, where
With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes it
Have help to make this rescue?

Men. As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults.

Sic. The consul Coriolanus.
Men. No, no, no, no, no, no,
Citizens. No, no, no, no, no, no,
Men. If, by the tribunes' leave,
I may be heard, I would crave a
The which shall turn you to no
Than so much loss of time.

Sic. For we are peremptory to dispatch
This viperous traitor: to send him
Were but one danger; and to stay him
Our certain death: therefore it is

He dies to-night.
Men. Now the good
That our renowned Rome, who Towards her deserved children,
In Jove's own book, like an
Should now eat up her own Sic. He's a disease that must be Men. O, he's a limb, that Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it he done to Rome that's worthy

The blood he hath lost, is more than that he country: he dropp'd it for his
to the end o' the world.

Men. This is clean kam.
When he did love his country,

The service of the foot,
is not then respected

We'll hear no more.—
pluck him thence;
belong of catching nature,

One word more, one word.
when it shall find to his heels. Proceed by proval Rome with Romans.

If 'twere so,— had a taste of his obedience!
ourselves resisted?

Consider this:—he has been bred i'
would draw a sword, and is ill school'd without distinction. Give me leave, and undertake to bring him to his utmost peril.

Noble tribunes,
the other course
and the end of it

Noble Menenius,
as the people's officer.—
Go not home.

We'll at-bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
I'll bring him to you.—
Let me desire your com-must will follow.

Pray you, let's to him.
[Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus' House.
let them
pull all about mine ears;
the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
the hills on the Tarpeian rock,
a precipitation might down stretch

Below the beam of sight; yet will I still Be thus to them.

1 Pat. You do the nobler.
Cor. I muse my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call them woollen vassals; things created
To buy and sell with grouts; to show bare heads

In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace, or war.

Enter Volumnia.
I talk of you:

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me

False to my nature? Rather say I play
The man I am.

Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.
Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,

With striving less to be so: lesser had been
The thwarting of your dispositions, if You had not show'd them how you were dis-
Ere they lack'd power to cross you. [pos'd,

Cor. Let them hang.
Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter Menenius and Senators.
Men. Come, come, you have been too rough,
something too rough;

You must return and mend it
1 Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray, be counsel'd;
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but
that

The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour
Which I can scarcely bear. [you,

Cor. What must I do?
Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then? what then?
Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I, then, do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak, I have heard
you say,

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I the war do grow together: grant that, and tell me,

In peace what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!
Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem

The same you are not, (which, for your best ends,

You adopt your policy,) how is it less or worse, That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour, as in war; since that to both it stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak To the people; not by your own instruction, Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you,

But with such words that are but rotes in Your tongue, though but bastards, and syl- Of no allowance to your bosom's truth. [Iable, Now, this no more dishonours you at all, Than to take in a town with gentle words, Which else would put you to your fortune, and The hazard of much blood.

I would dissemble with my nature, where, My fortunes and my friends at stake, requir'd I should do so in honour: I am in this, Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles; And you will rather show our general louts How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon them,

For the inheritance of their loves, and safe- Of what that want might ruin. [guard

Men. Noble lady!—

Come, go with us; speak fair: you may salve Not what is dangerous present, but the loss [so, Of what is past.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son, Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand; And thus far having stretch'd it, [here be with them,] [business

Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant

More learn'd than the ears,) waving thy head, Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart, Now humble as the ripest mulberry That will not hold the handling: or say to them, [broils,

Thou art their soldier, and, being bred in Hast not the soft way, which, thou dost con- Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim, [fess, In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame

Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done, Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours;

For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free As words to little purpose.

Vol. Pr'ythee now, Go, and be ruled: although I know thou hadst Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf, [rather Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter Cominius.

Com. I have been i' the market-place; and, sir, 'tis fit

You make strong party, or defend yourself By calmness or by absence: all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech
Com. I think 'twill
Can thereto frame his spirit. He must,

Vol. Pr'ythee now, say you will, and go

Cor. Must I go show them my sconce?

Must I, with my base tongue, give
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I

Yet, were there but this single plot
This mould of Marcius, they to grind it,

And throw't against the wind.—You

You have put me now to such a
I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll go

Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet hast said,

My praises made thee first a soldier
To have my praise for this, perform
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Will, I

Away, my disposition, and power
Some harlot's spirit! My throat

turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, like

Small as a eunuch, or the virgin
That babies lulls asleep! The Tent in my cheeks; and school take up

The glasses of my sight! A loss Make motion through my lip; and knees,

Who bow'd but in my stirrup,

That hath receiv'd an alms!—I will Lest I surcease to honour mine

And, by my body's action, teach
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy

To beg of thee, it is my more Than thou of them. Come all to Thy mother rather feel thy pride,

Thy dangerous stoutness; for I

With as big heart as thou. Do not Thy valiantness was mine, thou

But owe thy pride thyself. Pro

Cor. Mother, I am going to the market-Chide me no more. I'll loves,

Cog their hearts from them. Look

Of all the trades in Rome. I'll Commend me to my wife. I'll

Or never trust to what my tongue
I' the way of flattery further. Do you

Vol. Com. Away! the tribunes do arm yourself

To answer mildly; for they are
With accusations, as I hear, that

Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The world is, mildly
Let them accuse me by invention
Will answer in mine honour

Well, mildly be it, then; mildly.
Ay, but mildly.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Rome. The Forum.
Enter Sicinius and Brutus.
In this point charge him home, that he affect power: if he evade us there,
time with his envy to the people;
that the spell got on the Antiates is distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.
He's coming.
What, will he come?

How accompanied!
With old Menenius, and those senators always favour'd him.

Have you a catalogue
of the voices that we have procur'd,
by the poll?

I have; 'tis ready.
Have you collected them by tribes?

I have.
I shall inform the people hither:
they hear me say, "It shall be so,
right and strength to the commons," be

[them,
for fine, or banishment, then let me cry "Fine,"—if death, cry
"Death," the truth o' the cause.

I shall inform them.
And when such time they have begun
to cry,

not cease, but with a din confus'd
the present execution
we chance to sentence.

Very well.
Make them be strong, and ready for what shall hap to give't them. [this hint, Go about it.

[Exit Ædile.
Call me straight: he hath been us'd to anger, and to have his worth in decision: being once chaf'd, he cannot again to temperance; then he speaks to break his neck; and that is there, which will, here he comes.

[looks Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius,
Senators, and Patricians.

Calmly, I do beseech you.
As an ostler, that for the poorest from the knife by the volume.—The in safety, and the chairs of justice with worthy men! plant love among our large temples with the shows of our streets with war!

A noble wish.
[peace,
Amen, amen.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Æd. List to your tribunes; audience;

peace, I say!

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both. Tri. Well, say.—Peace, ho!

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this Must all determine here? [present]

Sic. I do demand,

If you submit you to the people's voices,

Allow their officers, and are content

To suffer lawful censure for such faults

As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor. I am content.

Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content:

The warlike service he has done, consider;

Think upon the wounds his body bears, which

Like graves i' the holy churchyard. [show

Cor. Scratches with briars,

Scars to move laughter only.

Men. Consider further,

That when he speaks not like a citizen,

You find him like a soldier: do not take

His rougher accents for malicious sounds,

But, as I say, such as become a soldier,

Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Cor. What is the matter,

That being pass'd for consul with full voice,

I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour

You take it off again?

Sic. Answer to us.

Cor. Say, then: 'tis true, I ought so.

Sic. We charge you, that you have con-triv'd to take

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind

Yourself into a power tyrannical;

For which you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How! Traitor!

Men. Nay, temperately; your promise.

Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold in the people!

Call me their traitor!—Thou injurious tribune!

Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,

In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in

Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say,

Thou liest, unto thee, with a voice as free

As I do pray the gods.

Sic. Mark you this, people!

Citizens. To the rock! to the rock with him!

Sic. Peace!

We need not put new matter to his charge:

What you have seen him do, and heard him

speak,

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,

Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying

Those whose great power must try him; even

So criminal, and in such capital kind, [this,

Deserves the extreme death.

Bru. But since he hath

Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor. What do you prate of service!

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You!

Men. Is this
The promise that you made your mother?

Com. Know,
I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no further:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, flogging, pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their merry at the price of one fair word;
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have't with saying, good morrow.

Sic. For that he has
(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power; as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it; in the name of the people,

And in the power of us, the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city;
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates: if the people's name,
I say, it shall be so.

Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so; let He's banish'd, and it shall be so. [him away]

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common
friends,—

Sic. He's sentenc'd; no more hearing,
Com. Let me speak:

I have been consul, and can show for Rome,
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,
And treasure of my loins; then, if I would Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift:—speak what?
Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people and his country:
It shall be so.

Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so.
Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath
I hate

As reek of the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air, I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes, Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till at length
Your ignorance, (which finds not, till it feels,) Making but reservation of yourselves, (Still your own foes,) deliver you, as most Abated captives, to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back:
There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Menenius,
Senators, and Patricians.]

Ed. The people's enemy is gone.
Citizens. Our enemy is banish'd!
Hoo! hoo!

[Shouting and throwing up dust.
Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and
him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all due
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let's Attend us through the city.

Citizens. Come, come, let's see him at gates; come!

The gods preserve our noble tribunes!

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before a Gate of the City.
Enter Coriolanus, Volumentius,

nus, Cominius, and several young men.

Cor. Come, leave your tears; a well:—the beast

With many heads butts me
Where is your ancient courage?

To say, extremity was the trial of That common chance common

bear;
That, when the sea was calm, all

Show'd masterful in the blows,

When most struck home, belonging

A noble cunning: you were used to
With precepts, that would make

The heart that can't thum.
Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I'll not
Vol. Now the red pestilence trades in Rome,

And occupations perish.

Cor. What? I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd.
Resume that spirit, when you were

If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done.

Your husband so much sweat—Drop not; adieu.—Farewell, my

mother:
I'll do well yet.—Then old and young

Thy tears are saltier than a young
And venomous to thine eyes.

general,
I have seen thee storn, and thou hast

Heart-hardening spectacles,
women,

'Tis fond to wall inevitable
As 'tis to laugh at them.—My

My hazards still have been your Believe't not lightly, (though I

Like to a lonely dragon, that Makes fear'd and talk'd of your son

Will or exceed the common, or

With cautious baits and practices

Vol.

Will thou go? Take good Cominius
while I determine on some course, I'll follow thee a month, devise with
the gods!

O the gods!
[us,] thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of thy repeal, we shall not send a single man;
which doth ever cool
the needer.

Fare ye well:
and thou art too
curfite, to go rove with one sweet wife, my dearest mother, and of noble touch; when I am forth,
I pray you, come,
I remain above the ground, you shall from me still; and never of me aught is like me formerly.

That's worthy
Come, let's not weep.
old arms and legs, by the good [gods,
Give me thy hand:
[Exeunt.

Rome. A Street near the Gate.
Sicinius, Brutus, and an Ædile.
I no further.
are vor'd, who, we see, have aided
Now we have shown our power;
it was doing.

Bid them home:
their enemy is gone, and they their ancient strength.
Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.
his mother.

Let's not meet her. Why?
They say, she's mad.
they have ta'en note of us: keep on
your way;
you're well met: the hoarded plague
Peace, peace; be not so loud.
[o' the gods
I could for weeping, you should shall hear some.—[To Brutus.] [To Sicin.] You shall stay too: I would I had the power to my husband.

Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame?—note but this fool. [ship]

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou fox-
To banish him that struck more blows for Than thou hast spoken words? [Rome]

Sic. O blessed heavens!
Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise words; [yet go:—

And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what;
Nay, but thou shalt stay too:—I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?
Vol. What then?
He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.—
Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Men. Come, come, peace. [Rome]

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country,
As he began; and not unkut himself,
The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.
Vol. I would he had! 'Twas you incens'd the rabble;—

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those mysteries, which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.
Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:
You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this;

As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,
(This lady's husband here, this, do you see,)
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you!
Sic. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.— [Exeunt Tribunes.

I would the gods had nothing else to do,
But to confirm my curses! Could I meet them
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home;
And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup
with me!

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's
go,

Leave this faint piling, and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.
Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsc, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.
Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are,
as you are, against them: know you me yet?

Vol. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vol. You had more heard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well appeared by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been? Is it ended, then? Our state thinks not so: they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again: for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished!

Rom. Banished, sir. [Enter Nicanor.]

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one; the centurions and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Antium. Before Aufidius' House.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium; City, 'Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars Have I heard groan and drop: then, know me not;

Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones,

In puny battle slay me.—

Save you, sir.

Old. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be possible,

Where great Aufidius flows: is he in the field?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the city

At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, please you?

Cit. This, here, before you.

Cor. Thank you, friends.

O world, thy slippery turns!

sworn,

Whose double bosoms seem to wear

Whose hours, whose bed, whose

exercise,

Are still together, who twin, as twins,

Unseparable, shall within this hour

On a dissension of a doit, break you

To bitterest enmity: so, fellows,

Whose passions and whose plots

their sleep

To take the one the other, by some

Some trick not worth an egg, shall

friends,

And interjoin their issues. So with

My birth-place hate I, and my love

This enemy town. 'T'll enter: if he

He does fair justice; if he give me

I'll do his country service.

SCENE V.—Antium. A Hall within

House.

Music within. Enter a Servant.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine!—

is here! I think our fellows are

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus! my for him. Cotus!

Enter Coriolanus.

Cor. A goodly house; the feast

Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servant.

1 Serv. What would you

Whence are you? Here's no place pray, go to the door.

Cor. I have deserved no better

In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2 Serv. Whence are you, porter his eyes in his head, that trance to such companions!—

Cor. Away!

2 Serv. Away! Get you away!

Cor. Now, thou art troublesome.

2 Serv. Are you so heavy?

talked with anon.

Enter a third Servant.

3 Serv. What fellow's this?

1 Serv. A strange one as ever I

I cannot get him out of the call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do

Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will

3 Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have
The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down, — [know'st
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou Thy country's strength and weakness, — thine own ways;
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, or destroy. But come in;
Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say "Yea" to thy desires. A thousand wel-
And more a friend than e'er an enemy; [comes!
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand:
most welcome!

[Re-enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.
1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have struck him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought, — I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were, —
Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn; he is simply the rarest man i' the world.

1 Serv. I think he is; but a greater soldier than he, you wot one.

2 Serv. Who, my master?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Serv. Worth six on him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither: but I take him to be the greatest soldier.

2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3 Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news; news,
you rascals!

1, 2 Serv. What, what, what! let's partake.

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lief be a condemned man.

1, 2 Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general, — Caius Marcius, [general?

1 Serv. Why do you say, thwack our

3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general;
but he was always good enough for him.

2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends;
he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Corioli, he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given,
he might have broiled and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But, more of thy news.

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on me as if he were son and heir to Marcius;
upper end o' the table; no question him by any of the senators, but bald before him: our general, [thinks a mistress of him; sanctifies [himself hand, and turns up the white of the discourse. But the bottom of the general is out i' the middle, and [he of what he was yesterday; for the half, by the entreanty and grant of table. He'll go, he says, and [leave of Rome gates by the ears: he will all before him, and leave his peace

2 Serv. And he's as like to do
I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do! he will do! [for sir,) he has as many friends as [I friends, sir, (as it were,) [durst not sir,) show themselves (as we term it) whilst he's in directitude.

1 Serv. Directitude! what's that?

2 Serv. But when they shall crest up again, and the man in will out of their burrows, like can and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this for?

3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day, [we shall have the drum struck up [thru'
'tis, as it were, a parcel of their [lives
be executed ere they wipe their [sweat 2 Serv. Why, then we shall have rust again. This peace is not rust iron, increase tailors, and [the makers.

1 Serv. Let me have war, say I;
peace as far as day does night, [the waking, audible, and full of voice, very apoplexy, lethargy; muffled insensible; a getter of more lethargy, than war's a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'Tis so; and as war, [as may be said to be a ravisher, [and denied, but peace is a great maker 1 Serv. Ay, and it makes [men another.

3 Serv. Reason; because they [are one another. The wars for [not hope to see Romans as cheap [as They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in!

SCENE VI.—Rome.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Sic. We hear not of him, [but fear him;

His remedies are tame i' the present
And quietness of the people, [whereas Were in wild hurry. How do
friends

Blush that the world gone well [and Though they themselves did [not Dissentious numbers pestering [the

...singing in their shops, and
...functions friendly. [going Enter Menenius.
...stood to't in good time. Is this
...his he: O, he is grown most
...Hall, sir! [kind

Hail to you both!
Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd,
...his friends: the commonwealth doth

...do, were he more angry at it.
...all's well; and might have been much
...have temporized. [better, if Where is he, hear you?
Nothing: his mother and
...water from him. [his wife
The gods preserve you both!

Good-den, our neighbours.
Good-den to you all, good-den to you [on our knees,
...our wives, our children,
...to pray for you both.

Live, and thrive!
...kind neighbours: we wish'd
...you as we did. [Coriolanus
Now the gods keep you!
Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Citizens.
...is a happier and more comely time
...these fellows ran about the streets

Caius Marcius was
...the war; but insolent,
...with pride, ambitious past all think-
...ing,
And affecting one sole throne,

I think not so. [tion,
...should by this, to all our lamenta-
...your forth consul, found it so.
...The gods have well prevented it, and
...and still without him. [Rome
Enter an Edile.

Worthy tribunes,
...whom we have put in prison,
...the Volscians with two several powers
...in the Roman territories;
...the deepest malice of the war
...that lies before them.

'Tis Aufidius,
...our Marcius' banishment,
...with his horns again into the world;
...isabel'd when Marcius stood for
...not once peep out. [Rome,
Come, what talk you

this rumourer whipp'd.—It
...date break with us. [cannot be
...That very well it can;
...examples of the like have been
...age. But reason with the fellow,

Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your informa-
And beat the messenger who bids beware [tion,
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me:
I know this cannot be.
Bru. Not possible.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate-house: some news is come,
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave;—
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his Nothing but his report. [raising;
Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?
Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
(How probable I do not know,) that Marcius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst
Rome,
And vows revenge as spacious as between
The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely!
Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may Good Marcius home again. [wish
Sic. The very trick on't.
Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone,
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.
2 Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius,
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took

What lay before them.
Enter Cominius.
Com. O, you have made good work!
Men. What news! what news!
Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your paten:
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses.—
Men. What's the news! what's the news?
Com. Your temples burned in their cement;
and
Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news!—
You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray, your news!—
If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,— Com. If!

He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work,

You and your apron-men; you that stood so
Upon the voice of occupation, and [much
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made Bru. But is this true, sir? [fair work!

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?

Your enemies, and his, find something in him.
Men. We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they [him, even Should say, "Be good to Rome," they charg'd
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, "Beseech you, cease."—You have made fair hands,

You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!
Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Both Trib. Say not, we brought it.
Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him;
but, like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your
Who did hoot him out o' the city. [clusters,

Com. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer:—desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.
Men. Here come the clusters.—
And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip: as many coxcombs,

As you threw caps up, will be tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: that we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly to his banishment, yet it was against

Com. You're goodly things, you are

Men. Good work, you and your cry!

Com. O, aye, what else!

Sic. Go, masters, get you home,
dismay'd:

These are a side that would be glad to
This true, which they so seem to
And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us!
masters, let's home. I ever said we the wrong when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But, come, let's [Exit Citizens]

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol:—would Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go.

SCENE VII.—A Camp, at a small from Rome.

Enter Aufidius and his Lieutenants.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Romans?

Lieu. I do not know what him, but

Your soldiers use him as the grass
Their talk at table, and their hearts

And you are darken'd in this action
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help
Unless, by using means, I lame the
Of our design. He bears

prouder,
Even to my person, than I thought

When first I did embrace him:—
In that's no changeling; and I

What cannot be amended. Yet I Lieu.

(I mean, for your particular)
Join'd in commission with him;—

Had borne the action of yourself;
To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well;
When he shall come to his account

not
What I can urge against him

And so he thinks, and is no less
To the vulgar eye, that he fairly,

And shows good husbandry in Fights dragon-like, and does as

As draw his sword; yet he hath

That which shall break his neck
Whene'er we come to our account

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, let carry Rome!

Auf. All places yield to him
And the nobility of Rome are

The senators and patricians love
The tribunes are no soldiers;

in the repeal, as hasty
 I think he'll be to Rome to the fish, who takes it of nature. First he was to them; but he could not even: whether 'twas pride, of daily fortune ever taints man; whether defect of judgment, to be disposing of those chances was lord of; or whether nature, other than one thing, not moving to the cushion, but command-with the same austerity and garb the war; but one of these with spices of them all, not all,
 to far free him,) made him fear'd,
 and so banish'd: but he has a merit in the offence. So our virtues the interpretation of the time:
 to unto itself most commendable,
 what so evident as a chair
 out one fire; one nail, one nail;
 this fouler, strengthen by strengths [thine,
 When, Caius, Rome is at of all; then shortly art thou [Exit.

ACT V.

A Public Place.

Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, and others.
 not go: you hear what he sometimes his general; who lov'd particular. He call'd me father:
 that! Go, you that banish'd him;
 his tent fall down, and knee
 his mercy: nay, if he cry'd
 Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.
 He would not seem to know me.
 Do you hear?
 one time he did call me by my old acquaintance, and the drops have blest together. Coriolanus not answer to: forbade all names;
 of nothing, titleless,
 and forc'd himself a name i' the fire
 Why, so,—you have made good of violence, that have rack'd for Rome,
 a noble memory!
 him, how royal 'twas to less expected: he replied, more petition of a state
 they had punish'd.
 Very well: could he say less?
 I used to awaken his regard

For his private friends; his answer to me was,
 He could not stay to pick them in a pile
 Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly,
 For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
 And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two I
 I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
 And this brave fellow too, we are the grains;
 You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
 Above the moon: we must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid

In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good
 tongue,

More than the instant army we can make,
 Might stop our countryman.

Men. No, I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
 For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius Return me, as Cominius is return'd, Unheard; what then?

But as a discontented friend, grief-shot

With his unkindness? say't be so?

Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the
 As you intended well. [measure

Men. I'll undertake it:
 I think, he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip,
 And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts
 He was not taken well; he had not din'd: [me.
 The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
 We pout upon the morning, are unapt

To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd [blood

These pipes and these conveyances of our
 With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
 Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll Till he be dieted to my request, [watch him
 And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his
 And cannot lose your way. [kindness,

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him, Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success. [Exit.

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye
 Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his injury

'Tis gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
 'Twas very faintly he said, "Rise;" diamas'd me [do,

Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would He sent in writing after me; what he would
 not,

Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions;
 So that all hope is vain,

Unless his noble mother, and his wife,

Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him

For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—An advanced post of the Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guard at their stations.

Enter to them, Menenius.

1 G. Stay: whence are you?

2 G. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well: but, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

1 G. You may not pass, you must return:
Will no more hear from thence. [our general]

2 G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with You'll speak with Coriolanus. [fire, before]

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks,
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your
Is not here passable. [same]

Men. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been [read]
The book of his good acts, whence men have
His fame unparallel'd, haply, amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends, [verity]
(Of whom he's chief,) with all the size that Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw; and in his praise

Have almost stamp'd the leasing. Therefore,
I must have leave to pass. [fellow,

1 G. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely. Therefore, go back.

Men. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar (as you say you have), I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass.
Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy general is.

1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to live intended fire your city is ready to with such weak breath as this? No, deceived; therefore, back to Rome, pare for your execution: you are our general has sworn you out of my pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain know here, he would use me with estimation

2 G. Come, my captain knows

Men. I mean, thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you
I say, go; lest I let forth your blood; blood;—back—that's the almost having;—back.

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow—
Enter Coriolanus and another

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, [I] errand for you: you shall perceive am in estimation; you shall perceive

Jack guardant cannot offend me
Coriolanus; guess, but by my name with him, if thou stand'st not hanging, or of some death more tutorship, and crueler in suffering

now presently, and sworn for what upon thee.—The glorious gods

ayn'd about thy particular prosper thee no worse than thy old father does! O my son, my son! thou art ing fire for us; look thee, how quench it. I was hardly moved thee; but being assured none but move thee, I have been blown gates with sighs; and conjure thee

Rome, and thy petitionary country good gods assuage thy wrath, and drege of it upon this varlet here, like a block, hath denied my access

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know
Are servanted to others: though I

My revenge properly, my revenge in Volscian breasts. That we familiar,

Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison

Than pity note how much
gone.

Mine ears against your suits are Your gates against my force.

thee,
Take this along; I writ it for thy

And would have sent it.

Menenius,
I will not hear thee speak.—Thou

Was my belov'd in Rome: you

Any. You keep a constant love

[Exeunt Coriolanus and another]

1 G. Now, sir, is your name

2 G. 'Tis a spell, you see, of you know the way home again

Do you hear how we are absent for your greatness back! [swoon?] Cause, do you think, I have to such care for the world, nor your things as you, I can scarce to die by himself, fears it not from your general do his worst. For that you are, long; and your misery with your age! I say to you, as I was away!
 A noble fellow, I warrant him.
 The worthy fellow is our general: he
 the oak not to be wind-shaken.

[Exit.

III.—The Tent of Coriolanus, Coriolanus, Aufidius, and others.
 We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow.
 My partner in this action, report to the Volsian lords, how this business.

[plainly

Only their ends rejected; stopp'd your ears against out of Rome; never admitted whisper; no, not with such friends that them are of you.

This last old man,
 a crack'd heart I have sent to the measure of a father;
 no, indeed. Their latest refuge him; for whose old love, I have show'd sourly to him) once more conditions, which they did refuse, now accept; to grace him only he could do more, a very little to: fresh embassies and suits, the state nor private friends, here-[shout is this?

[Shout within.] Ha! what tempted to infringe my vow time 'tis made! I will not.—

young Marcius, Virgilia, Volunian, Valeria, and foremost; then the honour'd the trunk was train'd, and in her child to her blood. [affection!
 privilege of nature, break!

But, out,
 court'st any worth? or those Joves' gods forsworn?—I melt, and earth than others.—My mother to a molehill should follow not; and my young boy of intercession, which cries, "Deny not."—Let the and harrow Italy: I'll never

Be such a gosling to obey instinct; but stand
 As if a man were author of himself,
 And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!
 Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus Makes you think so. [changed,

Cor. Like a dull actor now,

I have forgot my part, and I am out,
 Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
 Forgive my tyranny; but do not say,

For that, "Forgive our Romans." O, a kiss

Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!

Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss

I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip

Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods! I pray,

And the most noble mother of the world

Leave unsaluted: sink, my knee, to the earth.

[Kneels.

Of thy deep duty more impression show

Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless'd!

Whiles, with no softer cushion than the flint,

I kneel before thee; and unproperly

Show duty, as mistaken all this while

Between the child and parent. [Kneels.

Cor. What is this?

Your knees to me! to your corrected son?

Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach

Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds

Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun;

Murd'ring impossibility, to make

What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;

I help to frame thee.—Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,

The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle,

That's curdled by the frost from purest snow,

And hangs on Dian's temple:—dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours.

[Pointing to the child.

Which, by the interpretation of full time,

May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,

With the consent of supreme Jove, inform

Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst

prove

To shame invulnerable, and stick it the wars

Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,

And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy!

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and my-
 Are suitors to you. [self,

Cor. I beseech you, peace:

Or, if you'd ask, remember this before,—

The things I have forsworn to grant may never

Be held by you denials. Do not bid me

Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate

Again with Rome's mechanics:—tell me not

Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not

To allay my rages and revenges with

Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more !
You have said you will not grant us anything ;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already : yet we will ask,
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness : therefore hear us. [we'll

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscues, mark ; for Hear nought from Rome in private.—Your request ? [our raiment,

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak,
And state of bodies, would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thy-
self,

How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither : since that thy sight,
which should [comforts,
Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with Constrains them weep, and shake with fear
and sorrow ;

Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we Thine enmity's most capital : thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy ; for how can we,
Alas, how can we for our country pray, Whereto we are bound,—together with thy victory,

Whereto we are bound ? Alack, or we must lose

The country, our dear nurse ; or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win ; for either Must, as a foreign recreant, be led [thou
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till [these
These wars determine : if I cannot persuade Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread (Trust to't, thou shalt not) on thy mother's womb,

That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your living to thine. [name

Boy. He shall not tread on me ;
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll
fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy The Volscues whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour : no ; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them : while the Volscues

May say, "This mercy we have done
Romans,

"This we receiv'd ;" and each in ear
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, "This For making up this peace !" That great son,

The end of war's uncertain ; but this
That, if thou conquer Rome, thou shalt Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such Whose repetition will be done, as with Whose chronicle thus writ,
noble,

But with his last attempt he would Destroyed his country ; and his name
To the ensuing age abhorred.

son :
Thou hast affected the fire strain of
To imitate the graces of the gods
To tear with thunder the wide world
And yet to charge thy sulphur
That should but rive an oak.

Speak ?
Think'st thou it honourable for Still to remember wrongs ?—Do
you :

He cares not for your weeping—
Perhaps thy childishness will move Than can our reasons.—There is the world

More bound to his mother ; yet he Like one of the stocks. Thou thy life

Show'd thy dear mother any comfort
When she, (poor hen!) had of brood,

Has cluck'd thee to the wars
Loaden with honour. Say, my son,
And spurn me back : but if it be Thou art not honest ; and the gods
thee,

That thou restrain'st from me the
To a mother's part belongs.—He Down, ladies ; let us shame
knees.

To his surname, Coriolanus, down
Than pity to our prayers. Down
This is the last ;—so we will bow
And die among our neighbours.

us :

This boy, that cannot tell what he
But kneels and holds up hands to Does reason our petition with Than thou hast to deny't.—Come

This fellow had a Volscian wife
His wife is in Corioli, and his child Like him by chance.—Yet give
I am hush'd until our city be
And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. [Holding Volantula by the mother, mother ! Behold
What have you done ! Behold
The gods look down, and this
They laugh at. O my mother
You have won a happy victory

your son,—believe it, O, believe it,— usually you have with him prevail'd,
I must mortal to him. But, let it come.— though I cannot make true wars, convenient peace. Now, good Au-fusius,

in my stout, would you have heard less or granted less, Aufidius?
I was mov'd withal.

I dare be sworn you were:
It is no little thing to make you to sweat compassion. But, good sir, peace you'll make, advise me: for my to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray me in this cause.—O mother! wife!
[Aside.] I am glad thou hast set thy way and thy honour in thee: out of that I'll work
a better fortune.

The ladies make signs to Coriolanus.
Ay, by and by;
and you shall hear conditions, would have counter-seal'd.
with us. Ladies, you deserve a temple built you: all the swords
and her confederate arms, and have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

IV.—Rome. A Public Place.
Under Menenius and Sicilius.
See you yond' coigns o' the Capitol, [Pointing to the Capitol]

what of that?
If it be possible for you to displace it from little finger, there is some hope the of Rome, especially his mother, may with him. But I say, there is no hope throats are sentenced, and stay upon it possible that so short a time can condition of a man?

There is difference between a grub utterly; yet your butterfly was a grub.
Coriolanus is grown from man to dragon;
he's more than a creeping thing.
He loved his mother dearly.

So did he me: and he no more re-his mother now, than an eight-year-
The tartness of his face sours ripe when he walks, he moves like an en-the ground shrinks before his tread-to pierce a corselet with his eye;
his state, as a thing made for Alex-
What he bids be done, is finished knell. He wants nothing of a god Heaven to throne in.

Yea, mercy, if you report him truly.
I paint him in the character. Mark his mother shall bring from him:
more mercy in him, than there is in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.
Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your
house:

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter a second Messenger.
Sic. What's the news?

2 Mess. Good news, good news;—the ladies have prevail'd.

The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone;
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,
Art thou certain this is true? Is it most certain?

2 Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt
of it?

[Tide.]
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown
As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you!

[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,
Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you!]

[Shouting again.]
Men. This is good news;

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians;
A city full of tribunes, such as you, [day:
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-
This morning for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Shouting and music.]
Sic. First, the gods bless you for your Accept my thankfulness. [tidings; next.]

2 Mess. Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city!

2 Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
And help the joy. [Going.]

Enter the ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and people. They pass.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers
before them:

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius;
Repeal him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry,—"Welcome, ladies, welcome!"

All. Welcome, ladies, Welcomes! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Antium. A Public Place.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
Even in theirs, and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse,
The city ports, by this, hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: despach.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so,
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent, wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:
We must proceed, as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst

'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of Makes the survivor heir of all. [either]

Auf. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I paw'd [heighten'd,
Mine honour for his truth: who being so He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,

Seducing so my friends; and, to this end,
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping,—

Auf. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his design-
ments

In mine own person; help to reap the fame
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last,
When we had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory,—

Auf. There was it;—
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
him.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are

As cheap as lies, he sold the blood of
Of our great action: therefore shall he
And I'll renew me in his fall. [Drums and trumpets sound, and shouts of the people.]

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd
And had no welcomes home; but he Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. Whose children he hath slain,
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your
Bre he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him fall
sword.

WHEN we will second. When he has
After your way his tale pronounced
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the city.
Lords. You are most welcome home.
Auf. I have not done.

But, worthy lords, have you with head
What I have written to you?

Lords. And glow'd
1 Lord. What faults he made before the law:
Might have found easy lines: but then
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering
With our own charge, making a treaty
There was a yielding,—this admittance
Auf. He approaches: you shall see.

Enter Coriolanus, with drums and a crowd of Citizens with him.
Cor. Hall, lords! I am returned
soldier;

No more infected with my country's Than when I parted hence, but still Under your great command. You have
That prosperously I have attempted
With bloody passage, led your wars
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have
home,

Do more than counterpoise, a full
The charges of the action.

peace,
With no less honour to the Antians Than shame to the Romans; and deliver,

Subscrib'd by the consuls and patres
Together with the seal of the senate,
We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, I pray you.
But tell the traitor, in the highest
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor! How now?
Auf. Ay, traitor!

Cor. Ay, Marcius, Calus Marcius
then think

I'll grace thee with that robbery
Coriolanus in Corioli!

And heads of the state, perfidiously
 betray'd your business, and given up, your city to his wife and mother;
 his oath and resolution, like rotten silk; never admitting of the war; but, at his nurse's tears,
 and roar'd away your victory;
 and blush'd at him, and men of heart wondering each at other.

Hear'st thou, Mars?
 Name not the god, thou boy of tears!

Ha!
 [Heart
 for what contains it. Boy! O

My lords, 'tis the first time that ever I loved to scold. Your judgments, my lords, give this cur the lie: and his own notion wears my stripes impress'd upon him;

My beating to his grave) shall join the lie unto him.

Peace, both, and hear me speak.
 Peace, Volscies; men and your edges on me.—Boy! False writ your annals true, 'tis there,

as an eagle in a dove-cote, I your Volscians in Corioli:
 Did it.—Boy!

Why, noble lords,
 put in mind of his blind fortune,
 was your shame, by this unholy brag-

your own eyes and ears?
 Let him die for't.

[Speaking promiscuously.] Tear do it presently: he killed my daughter;—he killed my cousin

 he killed my father.—

Peace, ho!—no outrage:—peace!
 noble, and his same folds in

of the earth. His last offence to us

Shall have judicious hearing.—Stand, Aufidius,
 And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O that I had him,
 With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
 To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!
 Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

[Aufidius and the Conspirators draw, and kill Coriolanus, who falls: Aufidius stands on him.]

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold!
 Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus!

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters all,
 be quiet.—

Put up your swords.
 Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage,

Provok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger
 Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice

That he is thus cut off. Please it your hon-
 To call me to your senate, I'll deliver [ours

Myself your loyal servant, or endure
 Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,—
 And mourn you for him!—let him be regarded

As the most noble corse that ever herald
 Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience
 Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame,
 Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone;
 And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him
 up:—

Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.—

Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully:
 Trail your steel pikes.—Though in this city he

Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
 Which to this hour bewail the injury,

Yet he shall have a noble memory.

Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the body of Coriolanus. A dead march sounded.]

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF JULIUS CÆSAR

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Julius Cæsar, Octavius Cæsar, } Triumvirs, after the Marcus Antonius, } death of Julius Cæsar.
 M. Æmil. Lepidus, } Cicero, Publius, } Senators.
 Popilius Lena, }
 Marcus Brutus, }
 Cassius, }
 Casca, }
 Trebonius, } Conspirators against Julius Ligarius, } Cæsar.
 Decius Brutus, }
 Metellus Cimber, }
 Cinna, }

Flavius and Marullus, Tribunes.
 Artemidorus, a Sophist of Cildes.
 A Soothsayer.
 Cinna, a Poet. Another Poet.
 Lucilius, Vitinius, Messala, Young Cato's Volumnius; Friends to Brutus.
 Cassius.
 Varro, Clitus, Claudius, Strato, Leads
 danius; Servants to Brutus.
 Pindarus, Servant to Cassius.
 Calphurnia, Wife to Cæsar.
 Portia, Wife to Brutus.
 Senators, Citizens, Guards, Attendants

SCENE.—Rome: afterwards near Sardis and Philippi.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and a rabble of Citizens.

Flav. Hence! hence, home, you idle creatures, get you home;
 Is this a holiday? What! know ye not,
 Being mechanical, you ought not walk
 Upon a labouring day without the sign
 Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art

1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter. [thou?
 Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—
 You, sir, what trade are you?

1 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman,
 I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

2 Cit. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience: which is, indeed, sir,
 a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!

2 Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them proper men as ever trod upon them;

 have gone upon my handywork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop?
 Why dost thou lead these men streets?

 2 Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their get myself into more work. I do we make holiday, to see Cæsar, and in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome,
 To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
 You blocks, you stones, you worse than less things,

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
 Knew you not Pompey? Many a man
 Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
 To towers and windows, yea, to the tops of Your infants in your arms, and then
 The live-long day, with patient eye,
 To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome,
 And when you saw his chariot pass,
 Have you not made a universal shout,
 That Tiber trembled underneath his heels,
 To hear the replication of your voices
 Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best apparel
 And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way,
 That comes in triumph over Pompey's

Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
 Pray to the gods to intermit the triumph!

That needs must fight on this day!

What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the general good,
Set honour in our eye, and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Caesar; so were you:
We both have fed as well; and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he:
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Caesar said to me, "*Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,*

And swim to yonder point!" Upon the word, Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so, indeed, he did.
The torrent roar'd; and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside,
And stemming it, with hearts of controversy;
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Caesar cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink!"

I, as Aeneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Did I this tired Caesar: and this man [Tiber
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.

He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:

His coward lips did from their colour fly;
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the
world,
Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans [books,
Mark him, and write his speeches in their Alas, it cried, "Give me some drink, Titinius,"
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. [Flourish, and shout.

Bru. Another general shout?
I do believe that these applauses are [Caesar.
For some new honours that are heap'd on
Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow
Like a Colossus; and we petty men [world,
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus, and Caesar: what should be in that Caesar? [yours?
Why should that name be sounded more than Write them together, yours is as fair as Sound them, it doth become the man;

Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with Brutus will start a spirit as soon as
Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar
That he is grown so great! Ant.
shun'd!

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble
When went there by an age, and flood,
But it was fam'd with more than with
When could they say, till now, that

Rome,
That her wide walls encompass'd
Now is it Rome indeed, and room
When there is in it but one only
O, you and I have heard our fathers
There was a Brutus once, that brook'd

Th' eternal devil to keep his state in
As easily as a king.
Bru. That you do love me, I am
jealous:

What you would work me to, I have How I have thought of this, and of
I shall recount hereafter; for this I would not, so with love I might Be any further mov'd. What you
I will consider; what you have to
I will with patience bear; and that Both meet to hear, and answer,
things.

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon
Brutus had rather be a villager,
Than to repute himself a son of Under these hard conditions, as that is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad that my well
Have struck but thus much show
Brutus.

Re-enter Caesar and his Bru. The games are done, returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck
And he will, after his sour fashion,
What hath proceeded, worthy
Bru. I will do so: but, look!
The angry spot doth glow on
And all the rest look like a chide;
Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Looks with such ferret and such As we have seen him in the Being cross'd in conference by

Cas. Cassa will tell us what Cas. Antonius.
Ant. Caesar.

Cas. Let me have men about me
Sleek-headed men, and such as Yond' Cassius has a lean and hungry
He thinks too much; such men Ant. Fear him not, Caesar; nor ons;

He is a noble Roman, and well

Would he were fatter! but I fear him
 I know the man I should avoid that spare Cassius. He reads through the deeds of men; he loves no

Antony; he hears no music;
 he smiles; and smiles in such a sort,
 he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
 as he be never at heart's ease,
 they behold a greater than themselves;
 therefore are they very dangerous.
 I tell thee what is to be fear'd,
 I fear, for always I am Cæsar.
 my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
 tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Exit Cæsar and his train, Casca stays behind.]

I am pull'd me by the cloak; would
 I were with him, were you
 Ay, Cæsar; tell us what hath chanc'd
 Why, you were with him, were you

[to-day,
 [had chanc'd.
 I should not, then, ask Casca what Why, there was a crown offer'd of his hand, thus; and then the

What was the second noise for?
 Why, for that too.
 Why, for that too.
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]
 Why, for that too. [last cry for]

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like, he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I,
 And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that;
 but, I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleas'd and displeas'd them, as they used to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man. [self]

Bru. What said he, when he came unto him?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he re-fus'd the crown, he pluck'd me ope his doubt-let, and offer'd them his throat to cut:—an I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said anything amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, "Alas, good soul!" and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus and Casca. Ay. [away]

Cas. Did Cicero say anything?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him, smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's indiges, are put to silence.
 Fare you well. There was more foolery yet,
 if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so: farewell, both. [Exit]

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise,

However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,

Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite. [you]

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,

I will come home to you; or, if you will,

Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world. [Exit Brutus.]

 Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,

Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd : therefore 'tis meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes ;
For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd ?
Cæsar doth bear me hard ; but he loves
Brutus :

If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name ; wherein obscurely

Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at ;
And, after this, let Cæsar seat him sure ;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Rome. A Street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter from opposite sides, Cæsar, with his sword drawn, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Cæsar : brought you Cæsar home ?

[so ?

Why are you breathless ? and why stare you Cæsar. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm ? O Cicero,
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds
Have riv'd the knotty oaks ; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,
To be exalted with the threatening clouds ;
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

[ful ?

Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonder-Cæsar. A common slave (you know him well by sight)

[burn

Held up his left hand, which did flame and Like twenty torches join'd ; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides, (I have not since put up my sword,)
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me : and there were drawn Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear ; who swore they saw

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,
" These are their reasons,—they are natural ;"
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange disposed time :
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow ?

Cæsar. He doth ; for he did bid
Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow.
Cic. Good night, then, Cæsar ;
Is not to walk in.

Cæsar. Farewell, Cicero.
Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there ?
Cic. Cassius, by your leave.

Cæsar. Your ear is good.
night is this ?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest Cæsar. Who ever knew the heavens

so ?
Cas. Those that have known the world
For my part, I have walk'd about the streets
Submitting me unto the perilous night ;
And, thus unbraced, Cæsar, as you
Have har'd my bosom to the tempest
And, when the cross-blue lightning

open
The breast of heaven, I did present
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Cæsar. But wherefore did you tempt the heavens ?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods, to astonish us,
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Cæsar ; and I am
That should be in a Roman you do not

Or else you use not. You look pale,
And put on fear, and cast yourself

To see the strange impatience of the times
But if you would consider the truth
Why all these fires, why all these lightnings

Why birds and beasts, from quality
Why old men, fools, and children

Why all these things change,
ordenance,

Their natures, and pre-ordained functions
To monstrous quality ;—why, you will That heaven hath infus'd them with spirits,

To make them instruments of fear

Unto some monstrous state.
Now could I, Cæsar, dance to the music

Most like this dreadful night ;
That thunders, lightens, opens graves

As doth the lion in the Capitol.
A man no mightier than thyself

In personal action ; yet prodigious
And fearful, as these strange

Cæsar. 'Tis Cæsar that you meet
Cassius ?

Cas. Let it be who it is ; for I Have throwed and limbs like to tell

But, woe the while ! our fathers
dead,

And we are govern'd with our
Our yoke and sufferance show us

Cæsar. Indeed, they say, the Mean to establish Cæsar as a king

And he shall wear his crown by
In every place save here in Italy

Cas. I know where I will wear it

He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend: so Cæsar may; Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities:
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow
And kill him in the shell. [mischievous;

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir.

[word.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me

Luc. I will, sir.

[Exit.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air,
Give so much light, that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter, and reads—

"*Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!*"

Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!"

Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.

"Shall Rome, &c." Thus must I piece it out;
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe?
What, Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
"Speak, strike, redress!"—Am I entreated To speak, and strike? O Rome, I make the promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receiv'st
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knocking within.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks.

[Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The genius, and the mortal instruments,
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the
Who doth desire to see you.

[door,

Bru.

Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru.

Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour,

Bru.

Let them come.

They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Shun'st thou to show the dangerous trait?
When evils are most free! O, then, I see Where wilt thou find a cavern dark
To mask thy monstrous visage!
Hide it in smiles and affability:
For if thou path, thy native countenance
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your Good morrow, Brutus! do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour; and yet
night.

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and yet
here,

But honours you; and every one doth
You had but that opinion of yourself,
Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome. He is welcome.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus. He is welcome.

Bru. He is welcome.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose
Betwixt your eyes and night!

Cas. Shall I entreat a word?

Dec. Here lies the east; doth not the sun rise here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yet it
lives

That fret the clouds, are men's imaginations deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun
Which is a great way growing on the east,
Weighing the youthful season of the year,
Some two months hence, up to the sky
the north

He first presents his fire; and the Stands, as the Capitol, directly seen.

Bru. Give me your hands all joined Cassius. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: the time
The sufferance of our souls, the time
If these be motives weak, break off
And every man hence to his idle bed!

So let high-sighted tyranny range
Till each man drop by lottery.

As I am sure they do, bear like men
To kindle cowards, and to stand with The melting spirits of women?

men,

What need we any spur, but our own
To prick us to redress? what other Than secret Romans, that have eyes
And will not palter? and what honesty engag'd,

 (him shall he, or we will fall for it)
 And cowards, and men cautelous,
 And suffering souls
 To wrongs; unto bad causes swear
 As men doubt; but do not stain
 The virtue of our enterprise,
 The unexpressive mettle of our spirits,
 That our cause or our performance
 Shall be an oath; when every drop of blood,
 Every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
 To break the smallest bastardy,
 To keep the promise that hath pass'd from him.
 But what of Cicerō? Shall we sound
 him?
 he will stand very strong with us.
 Let us not leave him out.

No, by no means.
 O let us have him; for his silver hairs
 Purchase us a good opinion,
 And men's voices to commend our deeds:
 He will, his judgment rul'd our hands;
 His wisdom and wildness shall no whit appear,
 O, name him not: let us not break
 the will never follow anything [with him;
 men begin.

Then leave him out.
 Indeed, he is not fit. [Cæsar?
 shall no one else be touch'd but only Decius, well urg'd:—I think it is not Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar, who will find of him
 and contriver; and, you know, his means, improve them, may well stretch so far as all: which to prevent,
 Antony and Cæsar fall together.
 Our course will seem too bloody, Caius

the head off, and then hack the limbs, with death, and envy afterwards;
 Antony is but a limb of Cæsar:
 to sacrifice, but not butchers, Caius.
 And up against the spirit of Cæsar;
 the spirit of man there is no blood:
 that we could come by Cæsar's spirit,
 remember Cæsar! But, alas, blood for it! And, gentle friends, bid him boldly, but not wrathfully;
 bid him as a dish fit for the gods,
 our hearts, as subtle masters do, bear servants to an act of rage, [make seem to chide them. This shall necessary, and not envious;
 shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
 Mark Antony, think not of him;
 do no more than Cæsar's arm,
 Cæsar's head is off.

Yet I fear him;
 O engrafted love he bears to Cæsar,—

Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of
 If he love Cæsar, all that he can do [him:
 Is to himself, take thought, and die for Cæsar;
 And that were much he should; for he is given
 To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not
 die;
 For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

[Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet,
 Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day, or no;
 For he is superstitious grown of late;
 Quite from the main opinion he held once
 Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies:
 It may be, these apparent prodigies,
 The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
 And the persuasion of his augurers,
 May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd
 I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear
 That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
 And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
 Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;
 But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
 He says he does; being then most flattered.
 Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent,
 And I will bring him to the Capitol. [him.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the utter-most?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.
Met. Cains Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
 Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
 I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:
 He loves me well, and I have given him
 reasons;

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon us; we'll leave you, Brutus: [member

And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all re-
 What you have said, and show yourselves true
 Romans. [morally;

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and Let not our looks put on our purposes;
 But bear it as our Roman actors do,
 With untir'd spirits and formal constancy;
 And so, good morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all except Brutus.

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep! It is no matter;
 Enjoy the heavy honey-dew of slumber:
 Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies,
 Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
 Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit
 Your weak condition to the raw-cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've un-gently, Brutus,
 Stola from my bed; and yesternight, at supper,
 You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
 Musing and sighing, with your arms across;
 And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
 You star'd upon me with ungentle looks:
 I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your
 head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot:
 Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not;
 But, with an angry wafure of your hand,
 Gave sign for me to leave you: so I did;
 Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
 Which seem'd too much enkindled; and,

withal,
 Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
 Which sometime hath his hour with every man,
 It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;
 And, could it work so much upon your shape,
 As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
 I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
 Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.
Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do: good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
 To walk unbraced, and mock up the humours
 Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick,
 And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
 To dare the vile contagion of the night,
 And tempt the rheumy and unpurg'd air,
 To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
 You have some sick offence within your mind,
 Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
 I ought to know of; and, upon my knees,
 I charm you, by my once commended beauty,
 By all your vows of love, and that great vow
 Which did incorporate and make us one,
 That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
 Why are you heavy; and what men to-night
 Have had resort to you, for here have been Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
 Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
 Is it excepted, I should know no secrets
 That appertain to you? Am I yourself
 But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
 To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
 And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasures? If it be no more,
 Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife;
 As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
 That visit my sad heart. [this secret.

Por. If this were true, then should I know
 I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
 A woman that lord Brutus took to wife.

I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
 A woman well-reputed,—Cato's daughter,
 Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
 Being so father'd, and so husband'd?
 Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose them:
 I have made strong proof of my constancy,
 Giving myself a voluntary wound
 Here, in the thigh: can I bear that withal,
 And not my husband's secrets?

Bru.
 Render me worthy of this noble wife.

Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go to the door.
 And by and by thy bosom shall partake
 The secrets of my heart:
 All my engagements I will construe to thee,
 All the charactery of my mind and brow;
 Leave me with haste.

Lucius, who's that?
Enter Lucius and Ligarius.
Luc. Here is a sick man, that would
 with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus
 Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius, Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a
 tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you To wear a kerchief! Would you were Lig.

I am not sick, if Brutus have a
 Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.
Lig. By all the gods that Romans worship,
 I here discard my sickness! Soul of Rome,
 Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins,
 Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
 My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
 And I will strive with things impossible;
 Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that are men whole.

Bru. That must we also. What's to do?

Caius,
 I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,
 To whom it must be done.

Lig.
 And, with a heart new-fred, set on foot,
 To do I know not what: but it shall be
 That Brutus leads me on.

Bru.

SCENE II.—Rome. In Caesar's Thunder and lightning. Enter Caesar

Cas. Nor heaven nor earth but peace to-night:
 Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep
 "Help, ho! They murder Caesar!" within!

Enter a Servant.
Serv. My lord!

Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
 And let me hear their opinions of success.
 I will, my lord.

Enter Calphurnia.
 What mean you, Cæsar? Think you
 To walk forth?

Will not stir out of your house to-day.
 Cæsar shall forth: the things that

Amateur'd me,
 Look'd but on my back; when they shall See Cæsar, they are vanish'd. [see]

Amateur'd me,
 I never stood on ceremonies,
 Yet they fright me. There is one within,

Who shows the things that we have heard and seen,
 And tells of most horrid sights seen by the watch.

My wife hath told me, in the streets; [dead;
 My warriors yawn'd, and yielded up their Arms, and squadrons, and right form of war,

 Drizzled blood upon the Capitol;

And the dead, and dying men did groan;
 And the ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

 These things are beyond all use,
 And I do fear them.

What can be avoided,
 Must be purposed by the mighty gods;
 And I shall go forth; for these predictions

When beggars die, there are no comets
 And the heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

 And towards die many times before their

death;
 I never taste of death but once.

It is the wondrous that I yet have heard,
 That death, a necessary end, [fear;
 When it will come.

Re-enter Servant.
 What say the augurers?

They would not have you to stir forth
 To-day.

The entrails of an offering forth,
 They would not find a heart within the beast.

The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
 Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,
 If he should stay at home to-day for fear.

Cæsar shall not: Danger knows full well
 That Cæsar is more dangerous than he;
 And he shall go forth.

Alas, my lord,
 Freedom is consur'd in confidence.

Go forth to-day; call it my fear,
 But not my honour, and not your own.

Mark Antony to the senate-house;
 And say you are not well to-day:

Mark Antony shall say I am not well;
 And for my honour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.
 Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar:

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.
Cas. And you are come in very happy time
 To bear my greeting to the senators,

And tell them that I will not come to-day:
 Cannot be false; and that I dare not, falser:
 I will not come to-day, tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.
Cas. Shall Cæsar send a lie?

Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
 To be afraid to tell gray-beards the truth?

Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.
Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some
 cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.
Cas. The cause is in my will, I will not come;
 That is enough to satisfy the senate.

But, for your private satisfaction,
 Because I love you, I will let you know.
 Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:

She dreamt to-night she saw my statue,
 Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
 Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
 Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it;
 And these does she apply for warnings, and portents,
 And evils imminent; and on her knee
 Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted:
 It was a vision fair and fortunate:
 Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
 In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
 Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck Reviving blood; and that great men shall press
 For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
 This by Calphurnia's dream is signified. [it.
Cas. And this way have you well expounded
Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:
 And know it now: the senate have concluded
 To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
 If you shall send them word, you will not come,
 Their minds may change. Besides, it were a Apt to be render'd, for some one to say, [mock
 "Break up the senate till another time, When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams."

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
 "Lo, Cæsar is afraid!"

Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear love
 To your proceeding bids me tell you this;
 And reason to my love is liable. [Calphurnia]
Cas. How foolish do your fears seem now,
 I am ashamed I did yield to them.
 Give me my robe, for I will go:
Enter Publius, Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Cæsar, Trebonius, and Cinna.
 And look where Publius is come to fetch me.
Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.
Cas. Welcome, Publius,—

What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?—
Good morrow, Casca.—Caius Ligarius,
Caesar was ne'er so much your enemy,
As that same ague which hath made you
What is't o'clock? [Lenn.—

Br. Caesar, 'tis stricken eight.

Ces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up.—Good morrow, An-
Ant. So to most noble Caesar. [Tony.

Ces. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.

Now, Cinna: now, Metellus: what, Trebo-
I have an hour's talk in store for you; [nius!
Remember that you call on me to-day;
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Caesar, I will:—[Aside.] and so near will I be, [forth.

That your best friends shall wish I had been Cas. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me; [together.

And we, like friends, will straightway go Br. [Aside.] That every like is not the same, O Caesar,

The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Rome. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter Artemidorus, reading a paper.

Art. "Caesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius.
There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou be'st not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee!
Thy lover, ARTEMIDORUS."

Here will I stand till Caesar pass along,
And as a sutor will I give him this,
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Caesar, thou mayst live;
If not, the fates with traitors do contrive.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I pr'ythee, boy, run to the senate-house;
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here
again,
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do
there,—

O constancy, be strong upon my side!
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else!

And so return to you, and nothing else!
Por. Yea, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth: and take heed
What Caesar doth, what sutors press to him!

Hark, boy! what noise is that?
Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Pr'ythee, hear me!
I heard a bustling rumour, like a Troy,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.
Enter Artemidorus.

Por. Come hither, boy!

Which way hast thou been?

Art. At mine own house, madam.

Por. What is't o'clock?

Art. About the ninth hour, madam.

Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Art. Madam, not yet: I go to see him.

To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar?

Art. None that I know will be heard.

that I fear may chance.

Good morrow to you. Here the
The throng that follows Caesar at the house
Of senators, praetors, common sutors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death.

I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Caesar as he comes along.

Por. I must go in. Ah me, how
The heart of woman is! O Brutus,

The heavens speed thee in this enterprise!

Sure, the boy heard me: Brutus took
That Caesar will not grant. O, I grow
Run, Lucius, and commend me to him.

Say I am merry: come to me soon.
And bring me word what he doth say.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Rome. The Capitol: a street leading to the senate-house.

A crowd of people in the street leading to the Capitol, among them
the Soothsayer, Flurinus, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony,
Popilius, Publius, and others.

Cas. The Ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not come to harm.

Art. Hail, Caesar! Road the Yulius doth desire you to o'er-read,

 O' Caesar, read mine first; for mine's Caesar nearer: read it, great
 What touches us ourself shall be last Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.
 What, is the fellow mad?

Strah, give place.
 What, urge you your petitions in the Capitol?

What, under the Capitol, the rest following.
 I wish your enterprise to-day may
 What enterprise, Popilius?

Thrive.
 Fare you well.
 [Advances to Caesar.]

What said Popilius Lena?
 He wish'd to-day our enterprise might
 Our purpose is discovered.

Thrive.
 Look, how he makes to Caesar: mark
 What he adds.

Caesar, be sudden, for we fear pre-
 What shall be done? If this be known,
 Caesar never shall turn back,
 I'll slay myself.

Cassius, be constant:
 Cassius speaks not of our purposes;
 You, he smiles, and Caesar doth not [you, Brutus,

Popilius knows his time; for, look
 Mark Antony out of the way.
 [Exit Antony and Trebonius.]

Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him
 I prefer his suit to Caesar. [Go.]
 He is address'd: press near and second

What, you are the first that rears your
 Are we all ready?

What is now amiss,
 Most high, most mighty, and most Caesar,
 Caesar throws before thy seat

I must prevent thee, Cimber.
 Thou art the blood of ordinary men,
 The first degree
 Of children. Be not fond,
 That Caesar bears such rebel blood,
 Will be thaw'd from the true quality
 Of which methinks fools; I mean, sweet

By decree is banish'd:
 And pray, and fawn for him,
 Like a cur out of my way.
 Thou dost not wrong, nor without Cause

These no voice more worthy than More sweetly in great Caesar's ear,
 Of my banish'd brother?

Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery,
 Caesar;

Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may
 Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Cas. What, Brutus!

Cas. Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon:
 As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
 To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Cas. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you;
 If I could pray to move, prayers would move
 But I am constant as the northern star, [me:
 Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
 There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
 They are all fire, and every one doth shine;
 But there's but one in all doth hold his place:

So, in the world, 'tis furnish'd well with men,
 And men are flesh and blood, and apprehen-
 Yet in the number I do know but one [save;
 That unassailable holds on his rank,
 Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he,
 Let me a little show it, even in this,
 That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
 And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O, Caesar,—

Cas. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Caesar,—

Cas. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca. Speak, hands, for me!

[Casca stabs Caesar in the neck. Caesar catches hold of his arm. He is then stabbed by several other conspirators, and last by Marcus Brutus.]

Cas. Et tu, Brute!—Then fall, Caesar!

[Dies.]

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!
 Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets,

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry
 out,

"Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!"

Bru. People, and senators, be not affrighted,
 Fly not; stand still:—ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's

Should chance— [cheer:]

Bru. Talk not of standing.—Publius, good
 There is no harm intended to your person,
 Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius: lest that the people,

Rushing on us, should do your age some mis-Bru. Do so:—and let no man abide this
 But we, the doers. [deed,

Re-enter Trebonius.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd.
 Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and
 As it were doomsday.

[rum,

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures:—

That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time,
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Casca. Why, be that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit;
So are we Cæsar's friends that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans,
stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords;
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place,
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry, "Peace, freedom, and liberty!"

Cas. Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages hence

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over,
In states unborn, and accents yet unknown!

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed
in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along,
No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft! who comes here! A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving;
Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say, I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd
If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living, but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state,
With all true faith. So says my master
Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant
I never thought him worse. [Roman;
Tall him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.

Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may; but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter Antony.

Bru. But here comes Antony.
Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low,
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well!
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else must die,
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death-hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech you, if ye hear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do red,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die;
No place will please me so, no mean of end,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off.
The choice and master spirits of this age

Bru. O Antony, beg not your death of us;
Though now we must appear bloody and
As, by our hands, and this our present
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done;
Our hearts you see not, they are pale as
And pity to the general wrong of Rome
(As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity)
Hath done this deed on Cæsar.
To you our swords have leaden points.

Antony;
Our arms no strength of malice, and our
Of brothers' temper, good thoughts,
With all kind love, good thoughts,
Cas. Your voice shall be as strong to
In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have
The multitude, beside themselves with love,
And then we will deliver you the cause.
Why I that did love Cæsar when I saw him
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your Let each man render me his bloody
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake hands with;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—
Metellus;

Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Cæsar's friend,
Though last, not least in love, I take you Trebolius.

Gentlemen all,—alas, what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must go on:
Either a coward or a flatterer.
That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, that I
If, then, thy spirit look upon us here,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than his own,
To see thy Antony making his bow,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy
Had I as many eyes as thou hast ears, Weeping as fast as they stream from
It would become me better than this show,
In terms of friendship with thee to Pardon me, Julius! Here was brave heart;

Here didst thou fall; and here

By spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.
 Thou wast the forest to this hart;
 O world, the heart of thee.—
 A deer, stricken by many princes,
 Here lies he!

Mark Antony.—
 Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
 Of Cæsar shall say this;
 I know it is cold modesty.

I name you not for praising Cæsar so;
 Compact mean you to have with us?
 I prick'd in number of our friends;
 On, and not depend on you?
 Before, I look your hands; but was,

[Cæsar.]
 At the point, by looking down on
 I with you all, and love you all;
 Hope, that you shall give me reasons
 Wherein Cæsar was dangerous.
 Or else were this a savage spectacle.
 Are so full of good regard,

you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
 Shall be satisfied.

That's all I seek:
 Moreover suitor that I may
 Be tudy to the market-place;
 The pulpit, as becomes a friend,
 In the order of his funeral,
 You shall, Mark Antony.

Brutus, a word with you.
 You know not what you do: do not speak in his funeral;
 How much the people may be mov'd
 Which he will utter!

By your pardon;—
 Into the pulpit first,
 The reason of our Cæsar's death:
 I shall speak, I will protest
 I leave and by permission;

we are contented Cæsar shall Advantage more than do us wrong.
 I know not what may fall; I like it not.
 Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's
 body.

not in your funeral speech blame us,
 you all good you can devise of Cæsar,
 you do't by our permission;
 you not have any hand at all funeral: and you shall speak pulpit whereto I am going,
 my speech is ended.

He it so;
 And follow us.
 [Exeunt all except Antony.]

Mark Antony, thou bleeding piece of and gentle with these butchers!
 In the ruins of the noblest man
 Now lies in the tide of times.
 Thou hand that shed this costly blood!
 How do I prophesy,—

Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips,

To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,—
 A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
 Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
 Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
 Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
 And dreadful objects so familiar,
 That mothers shall but smile when they behold
 Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
 All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds:
 And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
 With Atë by his side, come hot from hell,
 Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
 Cry "Havoc!" and let slip the dogs of war;
 That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
 With carrion men, groaning for burial.—

[Enter a Servant.]
 You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony. [Rome.]

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming;

And bid me say to you by word of mouth,— [Seeing the body.]

O Cæsar!— [weep.]

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
 Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
 Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome, [what hath chanc'd:]

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him
 Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
 No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
 Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while;
 Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corpse

Into the market-place: there shall I try,
 In my oration, how the people take
 The cruel issue of these bloody men;
 According to the which, thou shalt discourse
 To young Octavius of the state of things.
 Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt, with Cæsar's body.]

SCENE II.—Rome. The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied. [hence, friends.]

Brutus. Then follow me, and give me audi-Cassius, go you into the other street,
 And part the numbers. [here;

Those that will hear me speak, let them stay
 Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;

And public reasons shall be rendered
 Of Cæsar's death.

1 CIL. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 CIL. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons.

When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens;
 Brutus goes into the rostrum.]

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: silence!
Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If, then, that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer,—not that I lov'd Cæsar less, but that I lov'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves; than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar lov'd me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him: there is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Citizens. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enroll'd in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Antony and others, with Cæsar's body.
 Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart,—that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Citizens. Live, Brutus! live, live!

1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Cit. Let him be Cæsar.

4 Cit. Cæsar's better parts shall be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

2 Cit. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, And, for my sake, stay here with Antony: Do grace to Cæsar's corse, and grace his speech

[Antony.
 Tending to Cæsar's glories; which Mark By our permission, is allowed to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.

1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let the people hear Antony.

3 Cit. Let him go up into the public place; We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am bound to speak to you.

4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus? He says, for Brutus' sake, I am bound to speak to you.

3 Cit. He finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no more than Brutus here.

1 Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant. Nay, that's not true.

3 Cit. We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony says.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Citizens. Peace, ho! let us hear.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears:

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. The evil that men do lives after them;

The good is oft interred with their bones; So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious;

If it were so, it was a grievous fault; And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it. Here, under leave of Brutus and the noble Romans, I come to speak to you.

(For Brutus is an honourable man.) So are they all, all honourable men.

Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral. Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral, and justly so; He was my friend, faithful and just to me;

But Brutus says he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome, whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept: Ambition should be made of sterner stuff: Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man. You all did see that on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown;

Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition? Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And, sure, he is an honourable man. I speak not to disprove what Brutus says; But here I am to speak what I do believe.

You all did love him once, not without cause: What cause withholds you then, to speak against him?

O judgment, thou art fled to heaven; Ambition does not live;—

And men have lost their reason. Hear me; My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar, And I must pause till it come to earth.

1 Cit. Methinks there is more in this than meets the eye.

2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Cæsar has had great wrongs.

3 Cit. I fear there will a worse come in him.

4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? I fear there will a worse come in him.

Therefore 'tis certain he was not a tyrant.

Show you sweat Caesar's wounds, poor, poor
dumb mouths, [Brutus,

And bid them speak for me: but were I
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Citizens. We'll mutiny.

1 Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

3 Cit. Away, then! come, seek the conspirators. [me speak.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear Citizens. Peace, ho! Hear Antony, most noble Antony. [not what:

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know
Wherein hath Caesar thus deserv'd your loves?
Alas, you know not; I must tell you, then:
You have forgot the will I told you of.

Citizens. Most true; the will: let's stay and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Caesar's
To every Roman citizen he gives, [seal:
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

2 Cit. Most noble Caesar! we'll revenge his

3 Cit. O royal Caesar! [death.

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Citizens. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks, [ards,
His private arbours, and new-planted orchard
On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever, common pleasures,
To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Caesar! when comes such another!

1 Cit. Never, never! Come, away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place.

And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body. 2 Cit. Go fetch fire.

3 Cit. Pluck down benches. [thing.

4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any-[Exeunt Citizens, with the body.

Ant. Now let it work: mischief, thou art Take thou what course thou wilt!— [about,

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him:
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us anything.

Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome. [people,

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the
How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Cinna, the poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Caesar,

And things unlucky charge my fantasy:

I have no will to wander forth of Rome.
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

1 Cit. What is your name?

2 Cit. Whither are you going?

3 Cit. Where do you dwell?

4 Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?

2 Cit. Answer every man directly.

1 Cit. Ay, and briefly.

4 Cit. Ay, and wisely.

3 Cit. Ay, and truly; you were born

Cin. What is my name? Am I a going? Where do I dwell? Then, to answer man, or a bachelor? Then, to answer man directly and briefly, wisely and wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

2 Cit. That's as much as to say, you are fools that marry: you'll hear me say that, I fear. Proceed; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's

1 Cit. As a friend, or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

2 Cit. That matter is answered directly.

4 Cit. For your dwelling, briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

3 Cit. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

2 Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

4 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

2 Cit. It is no matter, his name is a pluck but his name out of his heart, him going.

3 Cit. Tear him, tear him! Prick him ho! firebrands! To Brutus, to Cassius, to all: some to Decius' house, and some to some to Ligarius: away, go!

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Room in a

House.

Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus, seated at a table.

Ant. These many, then, shall names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die.

Lep. I do consent. Prick him down.

Oct. Upon condition Publius shall

Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look,

damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house,

Fetch the will thither, and we will

How to cut off some charge in it.

Lep. What, shall I find you there?

Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol.

Ant. This is a slight unmeet

But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy, and with respect
enough;

But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling: ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be
quarter'd;

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.

Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.
[March within.]

March gently on to meet him.
Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand! Within. Stand!

Within. Stand! [wrong.]

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me
Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine
enemies!

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides
And when you do them— [wrongs;]

Bru. Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly, I do know you
well:—

Before the eyes of both our armies here, [us,
Which should perceive nothing but love from
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground. [in an
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of Brutus.
Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear
in this:

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.

But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy, and with respect
enough;

But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling: ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be
quarter'd;

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.

Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.
[March within.]

March gently on to meet him.
Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand! Within. Stand!

Within. Stand! [wrong.]

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me
Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine
enemies!

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides
And when you do them— [wrongs;]

Bru. Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly, I do know you
well:—

Before the eyes of both our armies here, [us,
Which should perceive nothing but love from
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground. [in an
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of Brutus.
Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear
in this:

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm!
You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your
last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,

And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.
Cas. Chastisement! [remember]

Bru. Remember March, the ides of March
Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;

Have mind upon your health, tempt me no
Bru. Away, slight man! [further.

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted, when a madman stares?

Cas. O ye gods, ye gods! Must I endure
all this? [heart break;

Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?

Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you; for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well: for mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus;

I said an elder soldier, not a better:

Did I say, better?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not!

Cas. I durst not!

Cas. What, durst not tempt him?

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon me;
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your looks;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you For certain sums of gold, which you

me;—
For I can raise no money by vile means;
By heaven, I had rather coin my head
And drop my blood for drachmas, than wring

From the hard hands of peasants the tenth
By any indirection: I did send

To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: was that

Should I have answer'd Cains?

When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous
To lock such rascal counters from his

Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not; he was the

That brought my answer back.

riv'd my heart.

A friend should bear his friend's sorrows,
But Brutus makes mine greater than mine.

Bru. I do not, till you practice.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like

Cas. A friendly eye could see faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, but do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and your

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aware of the web that Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his

Check'd like a bondman; all serv'd,

Set in a note-book, learn'd, and count

To cast into my teeth. O, I come

My spirit from mine eyes!—
dagger,

And here my naked breast, richer

Dearer than Plutus' mine, take

If that thou be'st a Roman, will

I, that denied thee gold, will give

Strike, as thou didst hate him, with

When thou didst hate him, with

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. I shall

Be angry when you will, if shall

Do what you will, dishonour shall

You are yoked with a lamb
As the flint bears fire;
Much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And is sold again.

Hath Cassius liv'd
With mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
And blood ill-temper'd, vexeth
[too.
When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd
Do you confess so much? Give me
And my heart too, [your hand.

O Brutus,—
What's the matter?
Have not you love enough to bear
With my rash humour which my mother [gave me
Yes, Cassius; and, from henceforth,
You are over-earnest with your Brutus,
Think your mother chides, and leave you.

[Noise within.
[Within.] Let me go in to see the [grooms;
[Within.] Some grudge between them, 'tis not [meet [Within.] You shall not come to [stay me.
[Within.] Nothing but death shall [followed by Lucius and Titinius.
[Within.] What's the matter?
[Within.] You generals! What do

[be;
[Within.] More friends, as two such men should
[be;
[Within.] More years, I am sure, than ye.
[Within.] How vilely doth this cynic
[hence!
[Within.] You hence, sirrah; saucy fellow,
[Within.] I know his humour, when he knows
[hence!
[Within.] The wars do with these jiggling [fools?
[Exit Port.
[Within.] Away, away, be gone!
[Exit Port.
[Within.] Lucius, bid the com-and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,

Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

[Exit Lucilius and Titinius, bid the companies to-night,
Come yourselves, and bring Mes-
sala with you,
Ready to us.

And grief that young Octavius with Mark
Antony
Have made themselves so strong—for with her death

That tidings came:—with this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire,
Cas. And died so! Bru. Even so.
Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Enter Lucius, with wine and tapers.
Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine.—

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge,—

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.
Bru. Come in, Titinius. Welcome, good
Messala.

Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru. No more, I pray you.—
Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition towards Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same Bru. With what addition? [tenor.
Mes. That by proscription, and bills of out-
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus, [lawry,
Have put to death a hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree Mine speak of seventy senators that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one?
Mes. Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?
Bru. No, Messala.

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of Bru. Nothing, Messala. [her?
Mes. That, methinks, is strange.
Bru. Why ask you? Hear you ought of Mes. No, my lord. [her in yours?
Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.
Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die,
Messala:

With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you
Of marching to Philippi presently? [think Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?
Cas. This is it:
'Tis better, that the enemy seek us;
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,

Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection;
For they have grudg'd us contribution;
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up, [ag'd;
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encour-
From which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our
And nature must obey necessity; [talk,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say!

Cas. No more. Good night:
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown.—[Exit Lucius.]
Farewell, good Messala:

Good night, Titinius: noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother!
This was an ill beginning of the night;
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Everything is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit., Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exit Cas., Tit., and Mes.]

Re-enter Lucius, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro and Claudius!

Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and
It may be I shall raise you by and by [sleep;
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and wait your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so: the door
It may be I shall otherwise betide me.
Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for;
I put it in the pocket of my gown.

Luc. I was sure your lordship it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes a while?
And touch thy instrument a stroke or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, as't please you.

Bru. I trouble thee too much, but thou
I know young bloods look for a time.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty;
I know young bloods look for a time.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done; and thou
again;

I will not hold thee long; if I do
I will be good to thee.

This is a sleepy tune: O murderous Lay'st thou thy leaden pipe upon my ear?

That plays thee music? Gentle
night;

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy watch;

I'll take it from thee; and, good
night.

Let me see, let me see;—is not the book
Where I left reading? Here it is, I see.

The Ghost of Caesar enters.

How ill this taper burns!—In it
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes

That shapes this monstrous appearance:
It comes upon me. Art thou some god,

Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair un-
Speak to me what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why comest thou?

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee
Ghost.

Bru. Why, I will see thee
then.

Now I have taken heart thou comest again;
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.

Boy, Lucius!—Varro! Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are tuned.

Bru. He thinks he still is at his tent;
Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord?

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius?

Luc. My lord, I do not know.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst: didst thou Luc.

Bru. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.

Var. Sleep again, Lucius.

Var. My lord!

Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your clasp. Did we, my lord? [sleep?
 Ay! saw you anything?
 No, my lord, I saw nothing.
 Nor I, my lord,
 commend me to my brother
 on his powers betimes before,
 It shall be done, my lord.
 [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.
Octavius, Antony, and their army.
 Now, Antony, our hopes are answer'd:
 The enemy would not come down,
 The hills and upper regions;
 Not so: their battles are at hand;
 Before we do demand of them.
 Yet I am in their bosoms, and I know
 They do it; they could be contented
 In other places; and come down
 With bravery, thinking by this face
 In our thoughts that they have [courage;

Enter a Messenger.
 Prepare you, generals:
 Soon comes on in gallant show;
 The sign of battle is hung out,
 And to be done immediately.
 Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
 Left hand of the even field. [Left.
 You the right hand I; keep thou the
 Why do you cross me in this exigent?
 I do not cross you; but I will do so.
 [March.
Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their army;
Titinius, Messala, and others.
 They stand, and would have parley.
 Titinius: we must out and [battle?

Antony, shall we give sign of Caesar, we will answer on their [words.
 The generals would have some not until the signal. [men?
 before blows: is it so, country-that we love words better, as you [strokes, Octavius. words are better than bad
 words:
 you made in Caesar's heart,
 hail, Caesar!"
 Antony,
 of your blows are yet unknown;
 your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
 and honeyless.

Not stingsless too.
 and soundless too;

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
 And very wisely threat before you sting.
 Ant. Villains, you did not so when your vile daggers
 Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar:
 You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd
 like hounds,
 And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
 Whilst damn'd Casca, like a cur, behind Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers!
 Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank
 yourself:

This tongue had not offended so to-day,
 If Cassius might have rul'd. [make us sweat,
 Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing
 The proof of it will turn to redder drops.—
 Look, I draw a sword against conspirators;
 When think you that the sword goes up again?
 Never, till Caesar's three and thirty wounds
 Be well aveng'd; or till another Caesar
 Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors'—
 Unless thou bring'st them with thee. [hands,
 Oct. So I hope:
 I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain, [able,

Young man, thou couldst not die more honour-Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such Join'd with a masker and a reveller! [honour,
 Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony, away;—
 Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth;
 If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
 If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and their army.
 Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
 Bru. Ho, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.
 Lucil. My lord!

[Brutus and Lucilius talk apart.

Cas. Messala,—
 Mes. What says my general?

Cas. Messala,

This is my birth-day; as this very day
 Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:

Be thou my witness, that, against my will,
 As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know that I held Epicurus strong,
 And his opinion: now I change my mind,
 And partly credit those that do presage.

Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd,

Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
 Who to Philippi here consorted us:

This morning are they fled away and gone;
 And in their stead do ravens, crows, and kites,
 Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
 As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
 A canopy most fatal, under which
 Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.
Cas. I but believe it partly;
 For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
 To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.
Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
 The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
 Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
 But, since the affairs of man rest still uncertain,
 Let's reason with the worst that may befall,
 If we do lose this battle, then is this
 The very last time we shall speak together;
 What are you, then, determin'd to do?

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy,
 By which I did blame Cato for the death
 Which he did give himself: I know not how,
 But I do find it cowardly and vile,
 For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
 The time of life; arming myself with patience,
 To stay the providence of some high powers
 That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
 You are contented to be led in triumph
 Thorough the streets of Rome?

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,

That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
 He bears too great a mind. But this same day
 Must end that work the ides of March begun;
 And whether we shall meet again, I know not.
 Therefore, our everlasting farewell take:—
 For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
 If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
 If not, why, then, this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
 If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
 If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Bru. Why, then, lead on. O, that a man might know

The end of this day's business, ere it come!
 But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
 And then the end is known.—Come, ho! away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Philippi. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills

Unto the legions on the other side:

[Loud alarum.]

Let them set on at once; for I perceive
 But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
 And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
 Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
 Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy;
 This ensign here of mine was turning back;
 I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early;

Who, having some advantage on Cæsar,
 Took it too eagerly: his soldiers, till to Whilst we by Antony are all confound'd.

[Enter Pindarus.]

Pin. Fly farther off, my lord, fly farther off:
 Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord.
 Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough.

Titinius. Are those my tents where I perceive the Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Mount thou my horse, and ride thy
 him,

Till he have brought thee up to me:
 And here again; that I may see thee
 Whether yond' troops are indeed of mine.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on thy horse:
 My sight was ever thick; regard not
 And tell me what thou dost about thee.

This day I breathed first: time is come
 And where I did begin, there shall I end.
 My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what's Pin. [From the hill.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. [Above.] Titinius is enclosed
 With horsemen, that make to him
 spur;

Yet he spurs on; now they are almost
 Now, Titinius! now some light!

Cas. He's ta'en; [Shout.] and, hark! they
 too:—

Cas. Come down; help! help!

O, coward that I am, to live so long,
 To see my best friend ta'en before me!

[Enter Pindarus.]

Come hither, sirrah:

In Parthia did I take thee prisoner,
 And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,

That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
 Thou shouldst attempt it.

Thine oath;

Now be a freeman; and, with this sword,
 That ran through Cæsar's bowels,

Stand not to answer; here, take the sword.

And, when my face is cover'd,
 Guide thou the sword.

Even with the sword that kill'd thy reveng'd,

Pin. So, I am free; yet would I
 been;

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius, Far from this country Pindarus shall Where never Roman shall take more

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius:
 Is overthrow by noble Brutus' hand,
 As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort did you leave him?

All disconsolate,
His bondman, on this hill.

That he that lies upon the ground?

He may not like the living. O my heart!
Is not that he?

No, this was he, Messala,
O setting sun,

Thou dost sink to-night,
And blood Cassius' day is set.

Our day is gone;
And dangers come; our deeds

Of my success hath done this deed,
Must of good success hath done

Error, melancholy's child,
Thou show to the apt thoughts of

That are not! O Error, soon
Thou canst not unto a happy birth,

At the mother that engender'd thee!
Pindarus! Where art thou,

Look him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
Brutus, thrusting this report

I may say, thrusting it;
Of steel, and darts envenom'd,

As welcome to the ears of Brutus,
Of this sight.

Hie you, Messala,
Seek for Pindarus the while.

[Exit Messala.]
Thou send me forth, brave Cassius?

Thou dost not thy friends? and did not they browns this wreath of victory, me give it thee? Didst thou not hear thou shouldst?

Thou misconstru'd everything!
Take this garland on thy brow;

Did me give it thee, and I Midding.—Brutus, come apace,

I regarded Calus Cassius.—
Folds;—this is a Roman's part;

sword, and find Titinius' heart.
[Dies.]

Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and where, Messala, doth his body lender; and Titinius mourning it.

Roman's face is upward.
He is slain.

He is slain.
Thou art mighty yet!

Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on,
And see wh'er Brutus be alive, or dead;

And bring us word, unto Octavius' tent,
How everything is chang'd.

[Exit.]
SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

To this dead man, than you shall see me pay.
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.

Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body;
His funerals shall not be in our camp.

Best it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
And come, young Cato;—let us to the field.—

Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on:—
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night

We shall try fortune in a second fight.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.
Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both armies; then Brutus, Cato, Lucilius, and others.

Brut. Yet, countryman, O, yet hold up your heads!

[with me]
Cato. What bastard doth not! Who will go
I will proclaim my name about the field:

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
[Charges the enemy.]

Brut. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; Brutus, my country's friend; know me for

Brutus! [Exit, charging the enemy.]
Cato is overpowered, and falls.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou down!

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius;
And mayst be honour'd being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Lucil. Only I yield to die;

There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight;
[Offering money.]

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.
1 Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!

2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news: here comes the general—

Enter Antony.
Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?
Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough;

I dare assure thee, that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him, or alive, or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself.
Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe,

Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on,

And see wh'er Brutus be alive, or dead;
And bring us word, unto Octavius' tent,

How everything is chang'd.
[Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.
Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and

Volumnius.

Brut. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,
He came not back: he is or ta'en, or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.
[Whispering.]

Cl. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the Bru. Peace, then, no words. [world.]

Cl. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whispers.]

Dar. Shall I do such a deed?

Cl. O, Dardanius!

Dar. O, Clitus!

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cl. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a

Vol. What says my lord? [word.]

Bru. Why this, Volumnius:

The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me

Two several times by night: at Sardis once,

And this last night here in Philippi fields,

I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;

Our enemies have beat us to the pit:

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves,

Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,

Thou know'st that we two went to school together:

Even for that our love of old, I pr'ythee,

Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord. [Alarum still.]

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying

here.

Bru. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you,

Volumnius,—

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;

Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen,

My heart doth joy, that yet, in all my life,

I found no man but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing day,

More than Octavius and Mark Antony

By this vile conquest shall attain unto,

So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history:

Night hangs upon mine eyes; my house is

rest,

That have but labour'd to attain this

[Alarum. Cry within, Fly, fly, fly.]

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly. Hence! I will

Bru. [Exit Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.]

I pr'ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour

Hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Str. Give me your hand first: I will well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—[He takes his sword.] Cæsar, now be still;

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

[Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Messala, Lucilius, and Strato.]

Messala, Lucilius, and Strato,

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man. Strato,

thy master!

Str. Free from the bondage you

The conquerors can but make a fire of

For Brutus only overcame himself,

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found.

thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will

them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with

Str. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, and he did

Str. I held the sword, and he did

Mes. Octavius, then take him to my

That did the latest service to my

Ant. This was the noblest Roman

All the conspirators, save only he,

Did that they did in envy of great

He, only, in a general honest thought

And common good to all, made one of His life was gentle; and the elements

So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand

And say to all the world, "This was a

Oct. According to his virtue let us

With all respect and rites of burial

Within my tent his bones to-night

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably

So, call the field to rest; and let's away

To part the glories of this happy day.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Triumvirs.

Friends to Antony.

Friends to Caesar.

Menas,
Menecrates, } Friends to Pompey.
Varrus, }

Taurus, Lieutenant-General to Caesar.

Canidius, Lieutenant-General to Antony.

Silius, an Officer under Ventidius.

Euphronius, Ambassador from Antony to Caesar.

Alexas, Mardian, Seleucus, and Diomedes,
Attendants on Cleopatra.

A Soothsayer. A Clown.

Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt.

Octavia, Sister to Caesar, and Wife to Antony.

Charinian, } Attendants on Cleopatra.
Iras, }

Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE,—Dispersedly in several Parts of the Roman Empire.

ACT I.

Alexandria. A Room in Cleopatra's Palace.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Say, but this dotage of our general's measure: those his goodly eyes, the files and musters of the war lost, like plated Mars, now bend,and devotion of their view toward front: his captain's heart, the scuffles of great fights hath burst on his breast, reneges all temper,and the bellow and the fan pipe's lust. [Flourish within.] Look where they come:Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Attendants, fanning her.The pillar of the world transform'd.
Demetrius's fool: behold and see.But be love, indeed, tell me how much more beggary in the love that can surpass reckoning.I'll set a bourn how far to be lov'd.
Then must thou needs find out new ways, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

My good lord, from Rome.

Grates me: the sum,
hear them, Antony:

Perchance, is angry; or, who knows

If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, "Do this, or this;Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that;
Perform't, or else we damn thee."

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance—nay, and most like, [sion
You must not stay here longer; your dismiss-Is come from Caesar: therefore hear it, Antony.— [say? Both!—Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's, I would Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen, [thineThou blushest, Antony; and that blood of Is Caesar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame [sengers!When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The mes-Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide archOf the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of lifeIs to do thus, [Embracing,] when such a mutual pair,
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet,
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood!

Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her!— I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony
Will be himself.—

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.—

Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours,

Let's not confound the time with conference harsh :

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now: what sport to-Cleo. Hear the ambassadors, [night?

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom everything becomes,—to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every passion fully strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd!
No messengers but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'll wander through the streets, and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it:—speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleo., with their train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight!

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who Thus speaks of him at Rome: but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O! that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer!
Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.
Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine
Cleopatra's health to drink. [enough

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.
Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you

Char. He means, in flesh. [are.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.
Char. Hush! [lov'd.

Sooth. You shall be more believing than be-Char. I had rather heat my liver with drink.

Alex. Nay, hear him. [ing.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortunes!

Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius
Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a
Than that which is to approach [form

Char. Then, belike, my children [day no names: prythee, how many [a wenches must I have!

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a
And fertile every wish, a million

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee [h

Alex. You think none but your [h pry to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras how Alex. We'll know all our fortunes

Eno. Mine, and most of our [h night, shall be,—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm-presser [h

nothing else.

Char. Even as the o'erflowing [h

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a prognostication, I cannot scratch [h

Prythee, tell her but a worky-day [h

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike

Iras. But how! but how! I give [h

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune [h

Char. Well, if you were but an [h

tune better than I, where would you [h

Iras. Not in my husband's [h

Char. Our worse thoughts, his [h

Alexas,—come, his fortune, his [h

let him marry a woman that can [h

I, I beseech thee: and let [h

give him a worse! and let [h

till the worst of all follow him [h

grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! [h

me this prayer, though thou [h

of more weight; good I, I [h

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, [h

prayer of the people! for, as [h

breaking to sea a handsome [h

so it is a deadly sorrow to behold [h

uncuckolded: therefore, dear [h

corum, and fortune him accordingly [h

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in [h make me a cuckold, they would [h

selves whores, but they'd do't [h

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony [h

Char. [Not he!]

Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to [h

A Roman thought hath struck [h

Eno. Madam?

Cleo. Seek him, and bid [h

Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service.

with a Messenger and Attendants.

We will not look upon him; go with us.

[Exit.] Fulvia, thy wife, first came into the about my brother Lucius? [field.]

And when had end, and the time's state of them, joining their forces about Caesar?

Ant. In the war, from Italy, encounter, drive them.

Well, what worst?
The nature of bad news infects the

when it concerns the fool, or coward.
[On:]
that was past, are done, with me. 'Tis

no true, though in his tale lie death, to be flatter'd.

Labiens
[news] hath, with his Parthian force,
and from Euphrates;

some banner brook, from Syria and to Iona; whilst—

Ant. say, thou wouldst say,— my lead!

to me home, [general tongue,
as she is call'd in Rome;

to Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my all licence, as both truth and malice to utter. O, then we bring forth quick winds lie still; and our illa

to you noble pleasure. [Exit.] Seyon, ho, the news! Speak man from Seyon,—is there such he stays upon your will. [a one]

Let him appear.— Egyptian letters I must break, in dotage.—

Enter another Messenger.

What are you?
Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Where died she?
In Seyon;

of sickness, with what else more to know, this bears. [serious]

[Giving a letter.]
Forbear me.

[Exit second Messenger.]
Thou spirit gone! Thus did I desire again; the present pleasure, lowering, does become of itself: she's good, being gone;

and pluck her back, that shov'd

this enchanting queen break off;
become, more than the ill I know,
dash hatch. Ho, Enobarbus!

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women:
we see how mortal an unkindness is to them;
if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die: it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing.
Cleopatra catching but the least noise of this,
dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: we cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blessed withal, would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia!

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat:—and, indeed, the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the Cannot endure my absence. [state]

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our expedience to the queen,
And get her love to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches
Do strongly speak to us; but the letters, too,
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands
The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver,

Till his deserts are past) begin to throw
 Pompey the Great, and all his dignities,
 Upon his son; who, high in name and power,
 Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
 For the main soldier; whose quality, going on,
 The sides o' the world may danger; much is breeding,

Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
 And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
 To such whose place is under us, requires
 Our quick remove from hence.

Eno.

I shall do it.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Churrian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:

I did not send you. If you find him sad,

Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report.

That I am sudden sick: quick, and return.

[Exit Alex.]

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,

You do not hold the method to enforce

The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool, the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish,

In time we hate that which we often fear.

But here comes Antony.

[Enter Antony.]

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I

It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature

Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman? You may go:

Would she had never given you leave to come!

Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here,—

I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O, never was there queen

So mightily betray'd! yet at the first

I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine,

and true,

Though you in swearing shake the throned

Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous

madness,

To be entangled with these mouth-made vows,

Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour
 going,

But bid farewell, and go: when you shall Then was the time for words: no going

Eternity was in our lips and eyes,

Bliss in our brows bent; none our

But was a race of heaven: they are

Or thou, the greatest soldier of the Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant.

Cleo. I would I had thy face, shouldst know

There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant.

The strong necessity of time commands

Our services awhile; but my full heart

Remains in use with you. Our Italy

Shines o'er with civil swords: Scarce

Makes his approaches to the part of Equality of two domestic powers

Breeds scrupulous factions: the

to strength,

Are newly grown to love: the

Pompey,

Rich in his father's honour, creeps

Into the hearts of such as have not

Upon the present state, whose threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest,

By any desperate change: my more

And that which most with you should

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could me freedom,

It does from childishness:—

Ant. She's dead, my queen;

Look here, and, at thy sovereign's

The garboils she awak'd; at the

See when and where she died.

Cleo.

Where be the sacred vials thou

With sorrowful water? Now I see

In Fulvia's death, how mine

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be

know

The purposes I bear; which are,

As you shall give the advice: by

That quickens Nilus' slime, I go

Thy soldier, servant; making

As thou affect'st.

Cleo. O, my love, Charmian

But let it be:—I am quickly

So Antony loves.

Ant.

And give true evidence to his

An honourable trial.

Cleo.

I prythee, turn aside, and weep

Then bid adieu to me, and say

Belong to Egypt: good now, play

Of excellent dissembling; and let

Like perfect honour.

Ant.

You'll heat my

can do better yet; but this is Now, by my sword,—

And target.—Still he mends;
Is not the best:—look, prythee, Char-merleus Roman does become

Of his chafe.

Thy leave you, lady.

Courteous lord, one word.
I must part—but that's not it:
I have loved—but there's not it;
I know well: something it is I would,—
It is a very Antony,
All forgotten.

But that your royalty
My subject, I should take you
Myself.

'Tis sweating labour
So near the heart,
But, sir, forgive me;
I know you kill me, when they do not
To you: your honour calls you hence;
I deal to my unpitied folly,
I go with you! upon your sword
I go to victory! and smooth success
Before your feet!

Let us go. Come;
I will abide, and flies;
I will abide here, go'st yet with me,
I will abide, here remain with thee.

[Exeunt.]

Caesar's House.
Caesar, Lepidus, and Attendants.

How may we see, Lepidus, and henceforth
Your natural vice to hate [know,
Your competitor: from Alexandria
He fishes, drinks, and wastes
His nights in revel: is not more manner the queen of Ptolemy

Than he: hardly gave audience,
[And there
He had partners: you shall Find the abstract of all faults
Follow.]

I must not think there are
In him all his goodness:
He seems as the spots of heaven,
By night's blackness; hereditary,
Which he cannot change,
Choose.

Let's grant, it
Is on the bed of Ptolemy;
Let him for a mirth; to sit
On a stool of tipping with a slave;
At noon, and stand the buffet
That small of sweat: say, this Must be rare indeed,
Which cannot blench, yet must

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great a weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones
Call on him for't: but, to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud

As his own state and ours,—'tis to be child
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and
every hour,

Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cas. I should have known no less:
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the ebb'd man ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth
love, [body,

Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Meneceates and Menas, famous pirates, [wound
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt:
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cas. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against, [more

Though daintily brought up, with patience
Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle,
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brows'd'st; on the Alps,

It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: and all this
(It wounds thy honour, that I speak it now)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Cas. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field; and, to that end,

Assemble me immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly,
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: what you shall know meantime

Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond.
[Exit.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. In the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian,—

Char. Madam,

Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap
My Antony is away. [of time,

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O, 'tis treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian,—

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no
pleasure

In aught a eunuch has; 'tis well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affec-

Mar. Yes, gracious madam, [tions]

Cleo. Indeed! [nothing]

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do
But what in deed is honest to be done;
Yet have I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian, Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he,
or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, "Where's my serpent of old Nile?"

For so he calls me: now I feed myself
With most delicious poison:—think on me,
That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time! Broad-fronted Cæsar,

When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my
brow;

There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo. How much unlike art thou
Antony!

Yet, coming from him, that great motion
With his tinct gilded thee.—
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd,—the last of many kisses.

This orient pearl:—his speech it was,
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it from him.

Alex. "Good friend,"
"Say, the firm Roman to great Antony,
This treasure of an oyster: at some
To mend the petty present, I will give Her opulent throne with kingdoms:—
Say thou, shall call her mistress:—
And soberly did mount an acre
Who neig'd so high, that whilom
Was beastly dumb'd by him."

Cleo. What, was he such?

Alex. Like to the time o' the year,
the extremes

Of hot and cold, he was not sad nor Cleo. O well-divided disposition!

Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the note him:

He was not sad; for he would show
That make their looks by his:

merry,
Which seem'd to tell them his joy;
In Egypt with his joy; but between O heavenly mingle!—He's at thou and
The violence of either thee become So does it no man else.—Met at thou Alex. Ay, madam, twenty
Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. When I forget to send to Antony, Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper,
Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I Ever love Cæsar so?

Char. O that brave
Cleo. Be chok'd with such Say the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee
If thou with Cæsar paragon again.

My man of men.
Char. By your most precious
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My salad days
When I was green in judgment:—
To say as I said then! But come,
Get me ink and paper:
He shall have every day a several
Or I'll unpeople Egypt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Pom. If the great gods be just,
The deeds of justest men.

Know, worthy Pompey,
While we are suitors to their throne,
We, ignorant of ourselves,

bring our own harms, which the wise
do us for good; so find we profit,
From our prayers.

I shall do well:
The sea is mine;
And my aspiring hope

Will come to the full. Mark Antony Without doors: Caesar gets money Lepidus flatters both,

but he neither loves,
Nor cares for him.

Caesar and Lepidus
Have strength they carry.
Where have you this? 'tis false.

From Silvius, sir.
He dreams: I know they are in Rome
together.

Antony. But all the charms of Love, soft'ning thy want's lip!
I'll join with beauty, lust with both!

My time in a field of feasts:
With Epicurean cooks,
And feeding may prorogue his

honour,
Enter Varrus.
How now, Varrus!

I am most certain that I shall do once every hour in Rome. [Enter once he went from Egypt, 'tis farther travel.

I could have given less matter to Menas, I did not think surfeiter would have down'd his other twin: but let us rear our opinion; that our stirring the tap of Egypt's widow pluck last-wearied Antony.

I cannot hope,
Antony shall well greet together:
That's dead, did trespasses to Caesar:

war'd upon him; although, I
think,
I know not, Menas,
enemies may give way to greater.

that we stand up against them all,
they should square between
I am entertained cause enough their divisions, and bind up we yet not know.

It only stands
to use our strongest hands.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in Lepidus'
House.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat you
To soft and gentle speech. [Captain

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
Let Antony look over Caesar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,

Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave't to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give Eno. Not if the small come first. [Way.]

Lep. Your speech is passion:
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony

Enter Antony and Ventidius.
Eno. And yonder, Caesar.
Enter Caesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark you, Ventidius.

Cas. I do not know, Mecenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not

A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard: when we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit

Murder in healing wounds: then, noble part-
(The rather, for I earnestly beseech,) [Nervus, Touch you the sourest points with sweetest
Nor carstness grow to the matter. [Terminus,
Ant. 'Tis spoken well.

Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.

Cas. Welcome to Rome.
Ant. Thank you.

Cas. Sit. Ant. Sit, sir.

Cas. Nay, then.
Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are Or, being, concern you not. [Not so.]

Cas. I must be laugh'd at,
If, for nothing, or a little, I Should say myself offended; and with you

Chiefly if the world: more laugh'd at, that I should

Once name you derogately, when to sound
It not concern'd me. [Your name]

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,
What was't to you? [Rome]

Cas. No more than my residing here at Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?
Cas. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent, [brother,
By what did here befall me. Your wife, and

Made wars upon me; and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never

Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not Discredit my authority with yours; [rather
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause! Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel

As matter whole you have to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Cæs. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain o't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he
fought,

Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,

I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurbable her garboils, Cæs.

Made out of her impatience (which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too), I grieving grant, Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria: you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i' the morning: but, next day,
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Cæs. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæs.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it: but on, Cæs.
The article of my oath.

Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when I re-
The which you both denied. [quid them;

Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up [may,

From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I
I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty

Shall not make poor my greatness
power

Work without it. Truth is, that Poly-
To have me out of Egypt, made wars for
For which myself, the ignorant mother
So far ask pardon, as belia mine honour
To stoop in such a case. 'Tis notly ap-

Lep. further
Mec. If it might please you, to forget them

The griefs between ye: to forget them
Were to remember that the present Speaks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mec.
Eno. Or, if you borrow one another for the instant, you may, when you more words of Pompey, return it shall have time to wrangle in, while nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak Eno. That truth should be almost almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence;
Eno. Go to, then; your countenance

Cæs. I do not much dislike the manner
The manner of his speech; for it
We shall remain in friendship, yet
So differing in their acts. Yes, I
What hoop should hold us staunch
O' the world I would pursue it.

Ag. Give me leave
Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.

Ag. Thou hast a sister by the name
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reputation
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married,
Agrippa further speak.

Ag. To hold you in perpetual amity
To make you brothers, and to knit
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty
No worse a husband than the look of Whose virtue and whose general grace
That which none else can utter

marriage,
All little jealousies, which now
And all great fears, which now

dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths
Where now half tales be truths

both,
Would, each to other, and all love
Draw after her. Pardon what I
For 'tis a studied, not a present

By duty ruminated. Will Cæs.

Ant. Not till he hears how Antony
Cæs. With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is it
If I would say, "Agrippa, be it
To make this good!"

The power of Caesar, and into Octavia.

May I never purpose, that so fairly shows, impediment!—Let me have thy act of grace; and from this hour of brothers govern in our loves,

our great designs!

There is my hand,
whom no brother have so dearly; let her live kingdoms, and our hearts; and [never loves again!

Happily, amen!
to draw my sword
Pompey;

did not think
with strange courtesies, and great,
upon me: I must thank him only,
remembrance suffer ill report;
that, defy him.

Time calls upon us:
Pompey presently be sought,
he calls out us.

Where lies he?
the Mount Misenum.

What's his strength and increasing: but by sea absolute master.

So is the fame,
had spoke together! Haste we for it:
put ourselves in arms, despatch we we have talk'd of.

With most gladness;
to my sister's view,
straight I'll lead you.

Let us, Lepidus,
your company.

Noble Antony,
should detain me.

Caesar, Antony, and Lepidus,
come from Egypt, sir.

the heart of Caesar, worthy Me-honourable friend, Agrippa!— have cause to be glad that mat-well digested. You stay'd well by we did sleep day out of coun-

the night light with drinking.

wild boars roasted whole at a and but twelve persons there; is was but as a fly by an eagle; we more monstrous matter of feast, deserved nothing.

a most triumphant lady, if re-
to her.

the first met Mark Antony, she heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

she appeared indeed; or my well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten
Purple the sails, and so perfum'd, that [gold;
The winds were love-sick with them; the oars
were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
The water, which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own
person,

It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth-of-gold of tissue,)
O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem

To glow the delicate cheeks which they did
And what they undid, did.

Aggr. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereids,
So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes,
And made their bends adornings: at the helm
A seeming mermaid steers: the silken tackle Swell with the touches of those flower-soft
hands,

That yarely frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd i' the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Aggr. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better he became her guest,
Which she entreated: our courteous Antony, Whom ne'er the word of "No" woman heard
speak,

Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
And, for his ordinary, pays his heart.
For what his eyes eat only.

Aggr. Royal wench!
She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed;
He plough'd her, and she crop'd'd.

Eno. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted

That she did make defect perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry
Where most she satisfies: for vilest things
Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Ag. Let us go.—
 Good Enebarbus, make yourself my guest Whilst you abide here.

Ene. Humbly, sir, I thank you.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Rome. Caesar's House.

*Enter Caesar, Antony, Octavia between them;
 and Attendants.*

Ant. The world, and my great office, will Divide me from your bosom. [sometimes]
Oct. All which time,
 Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
 To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir.—My Octavia,
 Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
 I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, Oct. Good night, sir. [dear lady.]
Ces. Good night.

[Exit Caesar and Octavia.]

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah, you do wish yourself in Egypt? [nor you thither!]

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence,

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in my motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet lie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me, whose fortunes shall rise Caesar's, or mine? [higher,]

Sooth. Caesar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
 Thy demon, (that's thy spirit which keeps thee,) [is,] Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
 Where Caesar's is not; but, near him, thy angel

Becomes a Fear, as being o'erpower'd: there-
 Make space enough between you. [fore,]

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
 Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck, [thickens,]

He beats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre
 When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
 Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
 But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:

Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him.—

[Exit Soothsayer.]

He shall to Parthia. Be it art, or hap,
 He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
 And, in our sports, my better cunning faints
 Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds;
 His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
 When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
 Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
 And though I make this marriage for my peace,
 I'll eat my pleasure lies.

Enter Ventidius.

O, come, Ventidius,

You must to Parthia: your commission's ready;
 Follow me, and receive it. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Rome. [A Street.]
Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further Your generals after.

Ag. Sir, Mark Antony
 Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll

Lep. Till I shall see you in your dress,

Which will become you both, [Agrippa]
Mec.

As I conceive the journey, he at the Before you, Lepidus. [Your way is]

Lep. My purposes do draw me much about You'll win two days upon me. [Sir, go]

Mec. Ag.

Lep. Farewell.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. [A Room in the]
Palace.]

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Attendant.

Cleo. Give me some music; none
 Of us that trade in love. [The music]

Attend. Enter Mardian.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards

Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore; best not

Cleo. As well a woman with a wound

As with a woman. Come, you'll play

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. [I'll not]

Give me mine angle, — wall to the river

My mind playing far off, I will [rest]

Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended

piece

Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw

I'll think them every one an Antony

And say, "Ah, ah! you're caught."

Char. "Two" [two]

You wager'd on your angling; when Did hang a salt-fish on his hook,

With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time I—

I laugh'd him out of patience; and

I laugh'd him into patience; and

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to

Then, put my tires and mantles on

I wore his sword Philippan.— O,

Enter a Messenger.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in

That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam,

Cleo. Antony's dead! if thou

Thou kill'st thy mistress: but

If thou so yield him, there is gold

My bluest veins to kiss, a hand that

Have kiss'd, and trampled kisses

Mess. First, madam, he is Why, there's more gold.

 mark, we use
 the dead are well: bringing it to that,
 I give them will I melt, and pour my blustering throat.
 Most madam, hear me.

Well, go to, I will;
 no goodness in thy face, if Antony and beautiful:—so tart a flavour of such good tidings! if not well, let come like a fury crown'd with a formal man.

Will't please you hear me?
 I have a mind to strike thee ere thou say Antony lives, is well,
 with Caesar, or not captive to him,
 in a shower of gold, and hail upon thee.

Madam, he's well.
 Well said,
 And friends with Caesar.

Thou'rt an honest man.
 Caesar and he are greater friends than make thee a fortune from me. [ever.

But yet, madam,—
 I do not like "but yet," it does allay confidence; lie upon "but yet!"

as a gaoler to bring forth your malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend, the pack of matter to mine ear,
 and had together: he's friends with

free.
 health, thou say'st, and thou say'st, madam! no; I made no such into Octavia.

[report:
 For what good turn?
 the best turn I the bed.

I am pale, Charmian.
 Madam, he's married to Octavia.
 the most infectious pestilence upon

[Strikes him down.
 madam, patience.
 What say you?—Hence,

[Strikes him again.
 or I'll spurn thine eyes
 before me; I'll unhair thy head:

[She hales him up and down.
 be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd
 in brine,

Gracious madam,
 the news, made not the match.
 He not so, a province I will give [hadst thy fortunes proud: the blow thou thy justice, for moving me to rage;

 lead thee with what gift beside

He's married, madam.
 thou hast liv'd too long.
 [Draws a dagger.

Nay, then, I'll run.
 madam! I have made no
 [Exit.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within
 The man is innocent. [yourself:

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
 Turn all to serpents!—Call the slave again!
 Though I am mad, I will not bite him: call.

Char. He is afraid to come.
 Cleo. I will not hurt him:—

[Exit Attendant.
 These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
 A meaner than myself; since I myself
 Have given myself the cause.—

Re-enter Attendant, with Messenger.
 Come hither, sir.

Though it be honest, it is never good
 To bring bad news: give to a gracious message
 A host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves, when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.
 Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worse than I do,
 If thou again say, "Yes."

Mess. He's married, madam.
 Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

 Mess. Should I lie, madam!

Cleo. O, I would thou didst,
 So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made

A cistern for scald'd snakes! Go, get thee
 hence:
 Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me

Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?

Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.
 Cleo. He is married?

Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend you:
 To punish me for what you make me do,

Seems much unequal. He is married to Octavia. [of thee,

Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knave
 That art not what thou'rt sure of!—Get thee
 hence: [Rome

The merchandise which thou hast brought from
 Are all too dear for me: lie they upon thy
 hand,

And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.
 Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony, I have disprais'd Caesar.

Char. Many times, madam.
 Cleo. I am paid for't now.

Lead me from hence.
 I faint. O Iris!—Charmian!—"Tis no matter—

Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
 Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
 Her inclination, let him not leave out

The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly.
 [Exit Alexas.

Let him for ever go:—let him not—Charmian,
 Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
 The other way's a Mars:—[To Mardian.]

Bid you Alexas

Bring me word, how tall she is.—Pity me,
 Charmian,
 But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter Pompey and Menas, from one side, with drum and trumpet; from the other, Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, Enobarbus, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you
 And we shall talk before we fight. [mine;]
Cas. Most meet,

That first we come to words; and therefore
 Our written purposes before us sent; [have we
 Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
 If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,
 And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
 That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
 The senators alone of this great world,
 Chief factors for the gods,—I do not know
 Wherefore my father should revengers want,
 Having a son and friends; since Julius Caesar,
 Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
 There saw you labouring for him. What was't That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus,
 With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous
 freedom,

To drench the Capitol: but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden
 The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant
 To scourge the ingratitude that desp'iteful Rome
 Cast on my noble father.

Cas. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails;

We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou
 How much we do o'ercount thee. [know'st]

Pom. At land, indeed,
 Thou dost o'ercount me of my father's house;
 But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
 Remain in't as thou mayst.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us
 (For this is from the present) how you take
 The offers we have sent you.

Cas. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but What it is worth embrac'd. [weigh]

Cas. And what may follow,
 To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
 Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon,
 To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
 Our targets undinted.

Cas., Ant., Lep. That's our offer.
Pom. Know, then,

I came before you here, a man prepar'd
 To take this offer: but Mark Antony
 Put me to some impatience:—though I lose

The praise of it by telling, you must When Caesar and your brother were at Your mother came to Sicily, and did
 Her welcome friendly. [I have heard it.]

Ant. And am well studied for a liberal thank Which I do owe you. [Let me have your]

Pom. I did not think, sir, to have met you Ant. The beds I the east and west

thanks to you,
 That call'd me, tineller than my
 For I have gain'd by it. [Since I saw]

Cas. There is a change upon you. [Well, I have]
Pom. What counts harsh fortune casts upon me

But in my bosom shall she move
 To make my heart her vessel. [Till]

Lep. Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.— agreed:

I crave, our composition may be writ
 And seal'd between us. [That's the way]

Cas. Pom. We'll feast each other, are Draw lots who shall begin. [That will I]

Ant. Pom. No, Antony, take the lot
 Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery

Shall have the fame. [I have heard]
 Grew fat with feasting there. [You have heard]

Ant. Pom. I have fair meanings, sir
Ant. And fair words

Pom. Then, so much have I heard
 And I have heard, Apollodorus

Eno. No more of that:—he did
Pom. A certain queen to Caesar

Eno. I know thee now: how
 And well am like to do; for, I perceive Four feasts are toward.

Pom. I never hated thee: I have seen thee
 When I have envied thy behaviour

Eno. I never lov'd you much; but I have When you have well deserv'd ten times as
 As I have said you did. [Enjoy thy]

Pom. It nothing ill becomes thee—
 Aboard my galley I invite you all:
 Will you lead, lords?

Cas., Ant., Lep. Show us the way
Pom. [Exeunt all except Menas and Pompey]

Men. [Aside.] Thy father, Pompey, ne'er have made this treaty.—You known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.
Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by me

And you by land.
I will praise any man that will praise me; it cannot be denied what I have
done.
Nor what I have done by water.
Yes, something you can deny for your sake: you have been a great thief by

And you by land.
There I deny my land service. But your hand, Menas: if our eyes had not here they might take two thieves

All men's faces are true, whatso'er they are.
But there is never a fair woman has a true face.
We came hither to fight with you.
For my part, I am sorry it is turned to fortune. Pompey doth this day laugh

at me.
I do so, sure, he cannot weep it back at you. You have said, sir. We looked not for Antony here: pray you, is he married?

His sister is call'd Octavia.
True, sir: she was the wife of Caius
Antony.

And she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.
[Antony.]

And he, for ever knit
to me, I would not prophesy so.
I think, the policy of that purpose in the marriage, than the love of

it.
I think so too. But you shall find, that seems to tie their friendship shall be the very strangler of their friendship: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still temper.

Who would not have his wife so?

He will to his Egyptian dish shall the sighs of Octavia blow the strength of their amity, shall be the author of their variance.

And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you take it, sir: we have used our best, let's away.

[Exeunt.]
[On board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.] Enter two or three Servants, with a banquet.

Here they'll be, man. Some o'
the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured. [Drink.]

1 Serv. They have made him drink almost.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, "No more;" reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partisan
I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, Pompey, Agrippa, Menas,
Enobarbus, with other Captains.

Ant. [To Caesar.] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales i' the pyramid; they know,
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth,

Or foison, follow: the higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seeds-
man

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there?

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred, now, of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so. [Lepidus.]

Pom. Sit,—and some wine.—A health to Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies' pyramids are very goodly things;
without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside.] Say in mine ear: what is't?

Men. [Aside.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Aside.] Forbear me till anon. This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs; it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so: and the tears of it are wet.

Caes. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Go hang, sir, hang!
Tell me of that I away!

Do as I bid you. Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise from thy stool. [The matter?]

Pom. [Aside to Men.] I think, thou'rt mad, [Rises; and walks aside with Menas.]

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith.
Be jolly, lords. [What's else to say?—

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

Pom. How should that be? [That's twice.]

Men. But entertain it,

And though thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:
Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,

Is thine, if thou wilt have't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have done,
And not have spoke on't! In me, 'tis villany;

In thee, 't had been good service. Thou must
know,

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour;
Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy tongue

Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown,

I should have found it afterwards well done;
But must condemn it now. Desist and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this,

I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more,—
Who seeks, and will not take, when once 'tis

Shall never find it more. [Offer'd,]

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off Lepidus.]

Men. Why?

Eno. He bears

The third part of the world, man; see'st not?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would
That it might go on wheels! [It were all,]

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Drinks vessels, ho!

Here is to Caesar! I could well forbear it.

Eno. It's monstrous labour, when I wash my

And it grows fouler. He a child o' the time?

Ant. Possess it, I'll make answer;

But I had rather fast from all four days

Than drink so much in one. Ha, my brave emper-

Eno. [To Ant.] Ha, my brave emper-

Shall we dance now the Egyptian?—
And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good

Ant. Come, let's all take hands, Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd sense.

In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All the

Make battery to our ears with the loud

The while I'll place you: then, the sing;

The holding every man shall bear, as best

As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. Enobarbus places hand in hand.

SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the world,

Plumy Bacchus, with your

In thy vats our cares be drown'd,

With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd,

Cup us, till the world go round,

Cup us, till the world go round!

Ces. What would you more? Pompey night. Good brother,

Let me request you off: our graver

Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, be

You see, we have burnt our candles

Enobarbus

Is weaker than the wine; and mine

Splits what it speaks: the wild almost

Antick'd us all. What needs more?

Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the Ant. And shall, sir: give's your

Pom. Or Antony

You have my father's house—tak-

are friends.

Come, down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed, Caesar, Antony

[Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony]

Attendant.

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my

These drums! these trumpets,

Let Neptune hear, we bid a loud

To these great fellows: sound, and sound out!

Eno. Ho! says 'a.—There's my

Men. Ho!—noble captain, sound

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Ventidius, in triumph, Silius, and other Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of Paccus borne before him.

Now, darling Parthia, art thou struck:
And how
And how does Marcus Crassus' death revenge. Bear the king's son's body away. Thy Paccus, Orodes, for Marcus Crassus.

Noble Ventidius, Parthian blood thy sword is [Media, Parthians follow: spur through and the shelters whither thy: so thy grand captain, Antony, these on triumphant chariots, and on thy head.

Silius, Silius,
enough: a lower place, note well,
too great an act; for learn this,

undone, than by our deed
such a fame, when him we serve's Antony have ever won [away.

their officer, than person: Sossius, place in Syria, his lieutenant,
annihilation of renown, achiev'd by the minute, lost his

the wars more than his captain his captain's captain: and ambition, virtue, rather makes choice of which darkens him.

to do Antonius good, [loss, offend him; and in his offence performance perish.

Then hast, Ventidius, that which a soldier, and his sword, distraction. Thou wilt write to humbly signify what in his name,

word of war, we have effected;
lancers and his well-paid ranks,
cavalry horse of Parthia

led out o' the field.
Where is he now?
Athens: whither,

what haste
that convey with us will permit, before him. On, there; pass
[Exeunt.

Antony. An Ante-chamber in Caesar's House.

Antony and Enobarbus, meeting.
The brothers parted?
have despatch'd with Pompey;

are weeping. Octavia weeps home; Caesar is sad; and Lepidus,

Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green sickness.

Ag. 'Tis a noble Lepidus,
Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Caesar! [Antony!

Ag. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark
Eno. Caesar! Why, he's the Jupiter of men.
Ag. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Caesar? How! the nonpareil!

Ag. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!
Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say, "Caesar," —go no further.

Ag. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises. [Antony:
Eno. But he loves Caesar best, yet he loves

Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho!
His love to Antony. But as for Caesar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Ag. Both he loves.
Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle.—So,— [Trumpets.

This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.
Ag. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.
Ant. No further, sir. [self;
Ca. You take from me a great part of my-
Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife.

As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band

Shall pass on thy approval. Most noble Antony,
Let not the piece of virtue, which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love,

To keep it builded, be the ram to batter
The fortress of it; for better might we Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts

This be not cherish'd.
Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.

Ca. I have said.
Ant. You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious, the least cause
For what you seem to fear: so, the gods keep
you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!

We will here part. [well;
Ca. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee
The elements be kind to thee, and make

Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.
Oct. My noble brother! [spring,
Ant. The April's in her eyes: it is love's And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house;
Ca. What, Octavia? [and—
Oct. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart obey her tongue; the swan's-down feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
And neither way inclines.

Eno. [Aside to Agr.] Will Cæsar weep?

Agr. [Aside to Eno.] He has a cloud in's face. [that, were he a horse;

Eno. [Aside to Agr.] He were the worse for
So is he, being a man.

Agr. [Aside to Eno.] Why, Enobarbus,
When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead,
He cried almost to roaring; and he wept,
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. [Aside to Agr.] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;
What willingly he did confound, he wail'd:
Believe't till I weep too.

Cæs. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still; the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu; be happy!
Lep. Let all the number of the stars give
To thy fair way! [light

Cæs. Farewell, farewell!
[Kisses Octavia.
Farewell!

Ant. [Trumpets. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria, A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeared to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter a Messenger.
Come hither, sir.

Alex. Good majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,
But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have; but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it? Come Mess. Most gracious majesty,— [thou near.

Cleo. Didst thou behold

Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome
I look'd her in the face: and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.
Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrilltongu'd, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak: she is low-voic'd. [long.

Cleo. That's not so good: he cannot like her

Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If e'er thou look'dst on majesty,

Mess.

Her motion and her station are as one:
She shows a body rather than a life!

A statue, than a breather. [Is this visible?

Cleo.

Mess. Or I have no observation.
[Thou art a

Char.

Cannot make better note. [He's very know

Cleo.

I do perceive't: there's nothing in her yet.
The fellow has good judgment. [Excellent

Char.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I pray thee. [What

Mess.

She was a widow,— Widow! Charmian

Cleo.

Mess. And I do think she's thirty.
Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind?

Cleo.

long, or round? [long, or round?

Mess.

Round, even to faultiness.
Cleo. For the most part, too, they are

Cleo.

Her hair, what colour? [What colour?

Mess.

Brown, madam; and her face
As low as she would wish it. [There's gold in

Cleo.

Thou must not take my former sharpness
I will employ thee back again: I shall

Cleo.

Most fit for business: go, make thee
Our letters are prepar'd. [A proper

Char.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I suspect me
That so I hurried him. [Why, madam?

Char.

Nothing, madam.
Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty

Char.

should know.
Char. Hath he seen majesty?

Cleo.

And serving you so long! [Good

Cleo.

I have one thing more to say
But 'tis no matter: thou shalt be Where I will write. All may be well

Char.

I warrant you, madam.
SCENE IV.—Athena. A Room in the House.

Enter Antony and Octavia.
Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only

Oct.

That were excusable, that, and the
Of semblable import,—but he had

Oct.

New wars 'gainst Pompey; made
To public ear: Spoke scantily of me; when

Oct.

But pay me terms of honour, and He vented them; most narrow
me:
When the best hint was given
Or did it from his teeth. [O my

I shall pray, "O, bless my lord and that prayer, by crying out as loud, my brother! Husband win, win and destroys the prayer; no midway between extremes at all.

Gentle Octavia, best love draw to that point, which preserve it: if I lose mine honour, yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
shall go between us: the mean time,
the preparation of a war [lady,
your brother: make your soonest haste: to my lord.

Thanks to my lord.
of power make me most weak, most
[be Wara 'twixt you twain would the world should cleave, and that slain under up the rift. [men it appears to you where this displeasure that way; for our faults be so equal, that your love move with them. Provide your [what cost

your own company, and command
[Exeunt.

V.—Athens. Another Room in Antony's House.

Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.
Now now, friend Eros!
What strange news come, sir.

What man?
Cesar and Lepidus have made wars
this is old: what is the success?

They are old: what is the success?
Cesar, having made use of him in the war, presently denied him honour, and not resting here, accuses him he had formerly wrote to Pompey, his own appeal, seizes him: so the world, till death enlarge his confine.

And thou hast a pair of chaps,
between them all the food thou hast,
and the one the other. Where's [and spurns
walking in the garden—thus;
thou lies before him; cries, "Fool,

the throat of that his officer,
Pompey.

Our great navy's rigg'd.
Italy, and Caesar. More, Do-comes you presently: my news told herafter.

Eno. 'Twill be nought;
But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in Caesar's
House.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, and Mecenas.

Ces. Contemning Rome, he has done all this and more.

In Alexandria: here's the manner of it:—
I' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd: at the feet sat
Cesarion, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the 'stablishment of Egypt; made her
Of Lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,
Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?

Ces. I' the common show-place, where they exercise,

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia, [kings:
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia: she
In the habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audi-
As 'tis reported, so. [cenes,

Mec. Let Rome be thus inform'd.

Agg. Who, queasy with his insolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him.

Ces. The people know it; and have now
His accusations. [receiv'd

Agg. Whom does he accuse?

Ces. Caesar: and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' the isle: then does he say, he lent
Some shipping unrestor'd: lastly, he frets, [me
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Agg. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Ces. 'Tis done already, and the messenger
gone.

I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abus'd,
And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Ces. Nor must not, then, be yielded to in [this, Enter Octavia.

Oct. Hail, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear Caesar!

Ces. That ever I should call thee east-away!

Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause. [You come not

Ces. Why have you stol'n upon us thus!
Like Caesar's sister: the wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach,

Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way
Should have borne men, and expectation fainted,

Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Hail'd by your populous troops; but you are
come

A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation of our love, which, left un-shown,

Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you
By sea and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
Of my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted
My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I begg'd
His pardon for return.

Ces. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Ces. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.
Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens.

Ces. No, my most wrong'd sister; Cleopatra ^[Empire]
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his
Up to a whore; who now are levying
The kings of the earth for war: he hath assembled

Bocchus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas;
King Malchus of Arabia; king of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas,
The kings of Mede, and Lycania,
With a more larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends,
That do afflict each other!

Ces. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth;
Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wrong'd,
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determin'd things to destiny [Rome];
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high
To you do justice, make their ministers [gods],
Of us and those that love you. Best of com-
And ever welcome to us. [fort];

Ant. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?

Ces. Most certain. Enter, welcome!
you,
Be ever known to patience: my dear

SCENE VII.—Antony's Camp, near to the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will even with thee, should it be

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forepoken my being to thee
And say'st, it is not fit. Well, is it not?

Eno. Cleo. If not denounc'd against me,

Be there in person!

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply
If we should serve with horse and
together,

The horse were merely lost: the man
A soldier, and his horse.

Cleo. Your presence needs most

Eno. Antony;

Take from his heart, take from his love
What should not then be spared. He is Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome
That Photinus a cunuch, and your Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome; and their

That speak against us! A charge

i the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom,
Appear there for a man. Speak not

I will not stay behind. Nay, I have

Eno. Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Canidius.
Ant. Is it not strange

That from Tarentum, and Brundisium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian

And take in Torgue? You have Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke
Which might have well become the
To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he does

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage his battle Where Caesar fought with Pompey; but offers,

Which serve not for his vantage, but

And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well
Your mariners are multicolour'd, rough,

Ingress'd by swift impress: in Caesar's Are those, that often have

fought;

Their ships are yare; your horse
grace

Will you for refusing him at sea, [Exit] I'll fight at land.

By sea, by sea.
Most worthy sir, you therein throw
Your soldiership you have by land;
Your army, which doth most consist
Of renowned footmen; leave unexecuted
Your promises assurance; and Yourself merely to chance and hazard,
For security.

I'll fight at sea,
I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.
Your overplus of shipping will we burn;
With the rest, full-mann'd, from the head
Of Actium
The approaching Caesar: but if we fail,
We can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.
Thy business?
The news is true, my lord; he is [Exit] taken Toryne.
Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
That his power should be.—Canidius,
Thou shalt hold by land, Twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ships; Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.
How now, worthy soldier!
O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Let's to rotten planks: do you misdoubt Yourself, and these my wounds? Let the Romans, go a ducking: we Will conquer, standing on the earth,
And give foot to foot.

Well, well: away!
[Exit] Ant., Cleo., and Enobarbus.
By Hercules, I think I am 't the right.
Soldier, thou art; but his whole action
Shows power on't: so our leader's led,
By women's men.

You keep by land
And the horse whole, do you not?
Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justinius,
And Octavius, are for sea:
The whole by land. This speed of [Exit] Caesar's
While he was yet in Rome,
Went out in such distractions,
Who's his lieutenant, hear you?
They say, one Taurus.

Enter a Messenger.
Well I know the man.
The emperor calls Canidius.
Now news the time's with labour;
[Exit] some,

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Caesar, Taurus, Officers, and others.

Caes. Taurus,— Taur. My lord!

Caes. Strike not by land; keep Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll;
Our fortune lies upon this jump. [Exit.]

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yon side o'
the hill,

In eye of Caesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exit.]

Enter Canidius, marching with his land army one way; and Taurus, the lieutenant of Caesar, with his army, the other way.
After they are gone, the noise of a sea-fight is heard.

Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:

The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder:
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods, and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's that passion?

Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence, Where death is sure. You ribald-rid mug of Egypt,

[Light,

Whom leprosy o'ertake! 't the midst o' the
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The brize upon her, like a cow in June,— Hoists sails, and flies.

Eno. That I beheld;

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could Endure a further view. [not

Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, [land,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting fool
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter Canidius.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why, then,
good night, indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

Can. To Caesar will I render
My legions, and my horse: six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my Sits in the wind against me.

[reason
[Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Attendants.

Ant. Hark, the land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is ashame'd to bear me!—Friends, come
I am so lated in the world, that I [hither,
Have lost my way for ever;—I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it, fly,
And make your peace with Caesar.

Attendants. Fly! not we.
Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards

To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be
I have myself resolv'd upon a course, [gone;
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone: you shall

Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of leathiness; take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left Which leaves itself: to the sea-side straight-
way:

I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now:—
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command, Therefore I pray you:—I'll see you by and by.

[Sits down.

Enter Eros and Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Iras.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort Iras. Do, most dear queen. [him.

Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie!

Char. Madam,—

Iras. Madam, O good empress,—

Eros. Sir, sir,—

[kept

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes;—he, at Philippi,
His sword e'en like a dancer; while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended; he alone Dealt on lieutenant, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: yet now—No

Cleo. Ah, stand by. [matter.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:
He is unqualified with very shame.

Cleo. Well then—sustain me—O!

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the approaches;

Her head's declin'd, and death will seize
Your comfort makes the reason.

Ant. I have offended reputation,
A most unnobble swerving.

Eros.

Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Eros?
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo.

Forgive my fearful sails: I little thought
You would have follow'd.

Ant.

My heart was to thy rudder tied by the reins,
And thou shouldst tow me after: yet my Thy full supremacy then know'st, and I Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods

Command me.

Cleo.

O, my pardon! Now I

Ant.

To the young man send humble thanks
And palter in the shifts of lowliness;
With half the bulk o' the world plant
pleas'd,

Making and marring fortunes. You do
How much you were my conqueror; and

My sword, made weak by my affection,
Obey it on all cause.

Cleo.

Ant. Fall not a tear, I pray; nor
All that is won and lost: give me a kiss, Even this repays me.—We seal our
master;

Is he come back?—Love, I am full of Some wine, within there, and our Fortune known.

We scorn her most when most she wails
[Exit.

SCENE X.—Caesar's Camp in Egypt.

Enter Caesar, Dolabella, Thigraus, and Caes. Let him appear that's come to Know you him!

Dol.

An argument that he's plac'd, when
He sends so poor a pindon of his will;

Which had superfluous kings for measure,
Not many moons gone by.

Caes.

Euphr. Such as I am, I come from
I was of late as petty to his mule,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Caes.

Euphr. Lord of his fortunes he
and

Requires to live in Egypt: which not He lessens his requests; and to the
To let him breathe between the
A private man in Athens: this for he Next, Cleopatra does confess thy her to thy night; and of thee craves of the Ptolemies for her heirs, sought to thy grace.

For Antony,
nor desire, shall fail; so she drive her all-disgraced friend,
his life there: this if she perform, not see unheard. So to them both.
Antony pursues thee!

Bring him through the bands.
[Exit Euphronius.
To try thy eloquence, now 'tis despatch:

Antony win Cleopatra: promise,
mine, what she requires; add more,
lure, offers: women are not fortunes strong; but want will [Thyreus;
thy cunning, try thy cunning, edict for thy pains, which we as a law.

Cesar, I go.
How Antony becomes his slave, thou think'st his very action speaks power that moves.

Cesar, I shall.
[Exit.
Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Antony, or we, in fault for this?
Antony only, that would make his will reason. What though you fled great face of war, whose several other, why should he follow?

his affection should not then his captainship; at such a point, to half the world oppos'd, he being question: 'twas a shame no less loss, to course your flying flags, his navy gazing.

Pr'ythee, peace.
Antony, with Euphronius.
that his answer?
my lord.

queen shall, then, have courtesy, [so she
He says so.

Let her know it.—
and this grizzled head,
all my wishes to the brim

That head, my lord!
tell him, he wears the
him; from which the world
note
particular; his coin, ships, legions,

May be a coward's; whose ministers would
Under the service of a child, as soon [prevail
As i' the command of Caesar: I dare him,
To lay his gay comparisons apart, [therefore
And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone: I'll write it: follow me.

[Exit Antony and Euphronius.
Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will [show

Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the Against a sword. I see, men's judgments are A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness!—Caesar, thou hast
His judgment too. [subdu'd

Enter an Attendant.
Att. A messenger from Caesar.
Cleo. What, no more ceremony? See, my women! [noise,
Against the blown rose may they stop their
That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him, sir.

[Exit Attendant.
Eno. [Aside.] Mine honesty and I begin to square.
The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith mere folly: yet he, that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i' the story.

Enter Thyreus.
Cleo. Caesar's will!

Thyr. Hear it apart.
Cleo. None but friends: say boldly.
Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.
Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has;
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know,
Whose he is, we are, and that is Caesar's.

Thyr. So,—
Thus then, thou most renown'd: Caesar en-treats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Caesar.

Cleo. Go on: right royal.
Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not
Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!
Thyr. The scars upon your honour, there-Does pity, as constrained blemishes, [fore, he Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right: mine honour was not
But conquer'd merely. [yielded, Eno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou'rt so lenky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit.

Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Caesar this,—in disputation
I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt

To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel:
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Caesar's father oft,
When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!—
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Eno. [Aside.] You will be whipp'd.

Ant. Approach, there!—Ay, you kite!—
Now, gods and devils!
Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried, "ho!"

Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth,
And cry, "Your will?"—Have you no ears?

Enter Attendants.

I am Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp,
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him:—Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries [them]

That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find So saucy with the hand of she here (What's her name,

Since she was Cleopatra?) Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy: take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Anthony,—

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd, Bring him again: this Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

[Exeunt Attendants with Thyreus.]
You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,
(O misery on't!) the wise gods seal our eyes

In our own filth; drop our clear judgment, make us

Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we
To our confusion.

Cleo.

Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold Dead Caesar's trencher; nay, you fragment

Of Cæsar's Pompey's; besides what I have Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out: for, I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance
You know not what it is.

Cleo.

Ant. To let a fellow that will take
And say, "God quit you!" be familiar
My playfellow, your hand! O, that I
And pligher of high hearts! to outstar
Upon the hill of liason, to outstar
The horn'd herd! for I have saved
And to proclaim it civilly, were like A halter'd neck, which does the
For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants, with Thyreus.

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cried he? and begg'd he?

1 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him Thou wast not made his daughter; and be sorry

To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following henceforth,

The white hand of a lady fever thee;
Shake thou to look on't. Get thee

Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou
He makes me angry with him; for he Proud and disdainful, harping on what I
Not what he knew I was: he made me
And at this time most easy 'tis to do it.

When my good stars, that were
Have empty left their orbs, and shot
Into the abyss of hell. If he misdeed

My speech, and what is done, tell him
Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd hand,
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or
As he shall like, to quit me: with it
Hence with thy stripes, begone.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our tears
Is now eclips'd; and it portends
The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay here.

Ant. To flatter Caesar's point?

With one that ties his point?

Cleo.

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me!

Cleo.

From my cold heart let heaven
And poison it in the source; and let Drop in my neck: as it determines Dissolve my life! The next

...the memory of my womb,
...with my brave Egyptians all,
...considering of this pelleted storm,
...till the flies and gnats of Nile
...eat them for prey!

I am satisfied.
...down in Alexandria; where
...his fate. Our force by land
...held; our sever'd navy, too,
...again, and fleet, threatening most
...like. [hear, lady!]
...thou been, my heart! Dost thou
...the field I shall return once more
...thus, I will appear in blood;
...sword will earn our chronicle:
...it's not yet.

That's my brave lord!
...treble-sinew'd, hearted,
...maliciously: for when mine hours
...and lucky, men did ransom lives
...; but now I'll set my teeth,
...in darkness all that stop me: come,
...one other gaudy night: call to me
...captains; fill our bowls; once more
...at the midnight bell.

It is my birthday:
...to have held it poor; but, since
...again, I will be Cleopatra, [my lord
...will yet do well.
...all his noble captains to my lord.
...so, we'll speak to them; and to-
...I'll force
...through their scars.—Come on,
...queen;
...yet. The next time I do fight,
...death love me; for I will contend
...his pestilent scythe.

[Exit all but Enobarbus.
...outstare the lightning. To ...[mood,
...frighted out of fear; and in that
...will peck the estridge; and I see still,
...in our captain's brain
...heart: when valour preys on reason,
...sword it fights with. I will seek
...to leave him. [Exit.

ACT IV.

Alexandria. Caesar's Camp.
...Caesar, reading a letter; Agrippa,
...Menas, and others.
...calls me boy; and chides, as he
...out of Egypt; my messenger
...whipp'd with rods; dares me to
...most combat.
...Antony: let the old ruffian know,
...other ways to die; meantime,
...challenge.

Caesar must think,

When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight: within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done:
And feast the army: we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Char-mian, Iras, Alexas, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Demetrius.
Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better
He is twenty men to one. [fortune,

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood [well!
Shall make it live again. Woot thou fight
Eno. I'll strike, and cry, "Take all."

Ant. Well said; come on.
Call forth my household servants: let's to-
Be bounteous at our meal. [night

Enter Servants.

Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast
thou;— [serv'd me well,
Thou,—and thou,—and thou;—you have
And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. What means this?
Eno. [Aside to Cleo.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service,
So good as you have done.

Servants. The gods forbid!
Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me
to-night:

Scant not my cups; and make as much of me,
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to Eno.] What does he mean?
Eno. [Aside to Cleo.] To make his followers
weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;
May be, it is the period of your duty:
Haply, you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,
I turn you not away; but, like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't!

Eros. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they
weep;

And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd: for shame,
Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!
Now, the witch take me, if I meant it thus!
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty
friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense;
For I spake to you for your comfort:—did desire you [hearts,

To burn this night with torches: know, my
I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you,
Where rather I expect victorious life, [come,
Than death and honour. Let's to supper,
And drown consideration. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. Before the Palace.
Enter two Soldiers, to their guard.

1 Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day. [well.

2 Sold. It will determine one way; fare you Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing. What news?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you. Good night, good night.

[The first and second place themselves at their posts.

4 Sold. Here we:

[The third and fourth take their posts.

And if to-morrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope

Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

[Music as of haulboys underground.

4 Sold. Peace! what a noise!

1 Sold. List! list!

2 Sold. Hark!

1 Sold. Music! 't' the air.

3 Sold. Under the earth.

4 Sold. It signs well, does it not?

3 Sold. No.

1 Sold. Peace, I say! What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony

Now leaves him. [lov'd,

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen

Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another post.

2 Sold. How now, masters!

Soldiers. [Speaking together.] How now!

How now! do you hear this?

1 Sold. Ay; is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters! do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how't will give off.

Soldiers. [Speaking together.] Content. 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra; Charinus, others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. No, my chuck, Eros!

Ant. No, my chuck, Eros!

Enter Eros, with armour.
Come, good fellow, put mine iron on—
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we have her:—come, Nay, I'll help!

Cleo. What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! I'll help!

The armourer of my heart:—false, false, false!

Cleo. Sooth, in, I'll help; thus it goes.

Ant. We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my Go, put on thy defences. Briefly, in.

Eros. Eros is not this buckled well?

Ant. He that unbuckles this, till we do
To do! for our repose, shall hear Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's More tight at this, than thou: dep—
love,

That thou couldst see my wars to-day
The royal occupation! Thou shouldst
A workman in't.

Enter an Officer, armed.
Good morrow to thee; welcome!

Thou look'st like him that knows a
To business that we love, we also
And go to't with delight.

Off. A thousand
Early thought't be, have on their rivets
And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Flourish of trumpets.]
Enter other Officers and Soldiers.

2 Off. The morn is fair.—Good
All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'Tis well, boys.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth,
That means to be of note, begins to So, so; come, give me that: this we said.

Fare thee well, dame, what's'er become
This is a soldier's kiss;—[Kisses her.]

able,
And worthy shameful check it were,
On more mechanic compliment: I'll Now, like a man of steel. You that Follow me close; I'll bring you to [Exeunt Ant., Eros, Officers, and Char. Please you, retire to your
Cleo.

He goes forth gallantly. That in might

Determine this great war in single
Then, Antony,—but now,—well,

Antony's Camp.
Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

The gods make this a happy day to [once prevail'd]
 Would thou, and those thy scars, had me fight at land!

Had'st thou done so,
 that have revolted, and the soldier this morning left thee, would have thy heels.

Who's gone this morning?
 Who?

Who? call for Enobarbus, not hear thee; or from Caesar's camp am none of thine."

What say'st thou?
 Sir,

Sir, his chests and treasure
 with him.

Is he gone?

Most certain.
 Eros, send his treasure after; do it;

I charge thee: write to him
 gentle adieus, and greetings:

I wish he never find more cause to master. O, my fortunes have honest men! Despatch. — Eno-

[Exit.]
Before Alexandria. Caesar's Camp.

Enter Caesar, with Agrippa, Enobarbus, and others.

Agrippa, and begin the fight:
 Antony be took alive;

even.
 I shall.

[Exit.]
 time of universal peace is near:
 prosperous day, the three-nook'd

olive freely. [world]
Enter a Messenger.

Antony
 Go, charge Agrippa

that have revolted in the van;
 may seem to spend his fury

[Exit Caesar and his train.]
 old revolt; and went to Jewry

Antony; there did persuade to incline himself to Caesar,

master Antony: for this pains, would him. Caudius, and the rest have entertainment, but I have done ill;

because myself so sorely,
 no more.

Enter a Soldier of Caesar's.
 Enobarbus, Antony

sent all thy treasure, with the messenger

guard; and at thy tent is now his mules.

Eros. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.

I tell you true: best you sa'd the bringer
 Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
 Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit.]

Eros. I am alone the villain of the earth,
 And feel I am so most. O Antony, Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have My better service, when my turpitude [paid]
 Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows
 my heart:

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
 Shall outstrike thought: but thought will do't,
 I feel.

I fight against thee! — No: I will go seek
 Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
 My latter part of life. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter Agrippa and others.

Agg. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far:

Caesar himself has work, and our oppression
 Exceeds what we expected. [Exit.]

Alarum. Enter Antony and Scarus, wounded.
Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!

Had we done so at first, we had driven them
 With clouts about their heads. [home]

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.
Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
 But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.
Scar. We'll beat them into bench-holes: I Room for six scotches more. [have yet]

Enter Eros.
Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our ad-
 For a fair victory. [vantage serves]

Scar. Let us score their backs,
 And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind:
 'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
 Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
 For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exit.]

SCENE VIII.—Under the walls of Alexandria.
Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scarus, and forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp: run
 one before,

And let the queen know of our gestic. Tomorrow,

Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
 That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all;

For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
 Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,

Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears [Miss

Wash the congealment from your wounds, and
The honour'd gashes whole. [To Scarus.]

Give me thy hand;

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee.—O thou day o'
the world, [all,

Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and Through proof of harness to my heart, and Ride on the pants triumphing. [there

Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue! 'com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though grey [yet have we

Do something mingle with our younger brown;
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;

Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand:
Kiss it, my warrior:—he hath fought to-day,
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had

Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled
Like holy Phoebus' car. Give me thy hand:

Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe
Had our great palace the capacity [them:

To camp this host, we all would sup together,
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear,
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines;
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds
together,

Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Cæsar's Camp.

Sentinels on their post.

1 Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard; the
night

Is shiny; and, they say, we shall embattle
By the second hour if the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to us.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—
3 Sold. What man is this?

2 Sold. Stand close, and list him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed
When men revolted shall upon record [moon,

Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!—

1 Sold. Enobarbus!

3 Sold. Peace;
Hark further. [choly,

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melan-
The poisonous damp of night dispunge upon
That life, a very rebel to my will, [me,

May hang no longer on me: throw up Against the flint and hardness of my soul
Which, being dried with grief, will break out powder,

And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous;
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive.

O Antony! O Antony!
2 Sold. Let's speak to him,
1 Sold. Let's hear him, for the [thine

May concern Cæsar.
3 Sold. Let's do so. But he
1 Sold. Swoons rather; for so [and a

Was never yet for sleep. Go we to him.
2 Sold. Awake, sir, awake; speak to [Hear ye

3 Sold. Awake, sir, awake; speak to [Hear ye
2 Sold. [Drums
1 Sold. The hand of death hath reach'd [Hark! the Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us [to

To the court of guard: he is of note; our
Is fully out. 3 Sold. Come on, then
He may recover yet. [Exeunt with drums

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scarus, with forces.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea.
We please them not by land. For both, [no

Scar. For both, [no

Ant. I would they'd fight 't the air;
the air;

We'd fight there too. But this [it; and

Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us: order for sea is [given

They have put forth the laven: further Where their appointment wemay [be

And look on their endeavour.
Enter Cæsar, and his forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will [have

land,
Which, as I take't, we shall; for his [be

Is forth to man his galleys. To the [the

And hold our best advantage! [When

Re-enter Antony and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd. [The pine does stand.

I shall discover all: I'll bring thee [the Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Swallows

Scar. In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the [the

Say, they know not,—they cannot tell,
grinly,

And dare not speak their knowledge.
Is valiant, and dejected; and, by [the

His fretted fortunes give him hope, [the

Of what he has, and has not.
[Alarum afar off, as at a [the

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me.
My fleet hath yielded to the [the their caps up, and carouse together long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore!

me to this novice; and my heart was on thee. Bid them all fly;
I am reveng'd upon my charm,
all: bid them all fly; be gone.
[Exit Scarnus.
My price shall I see no more:
Antony part here; even here hands.—All come to this?—The me at heels, to whom I gave do discandy, melt their sweets Cesar; and this pine is bark'd, topp'd them all. Betray'd I am:

soul of Egypt! this grave charm.—
back'd forth my wars, and call'd
home;
was my crown'd, my chief end,— silly, half, at first and loose,
to the very heart of loss,
Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.
Ah, thou spell! Avaunt!
is my lord enrag'd against his or I shall give thee thy de-
[thee, Cesar's triumph. Let him take up to the shouting plebeians:
chariot, like the greatest spot er; most monster-like, be shown diminutives, for doits; and let plough thy visage up prepared nails.

[Exit Cleo.
'Tis well thou'rt gone,
to live; but better 'twere into my fury; for one death prevented many. Eros, ho!
mine is upon me: teach me,
mine ancestor, thy rage:
Lichas on the horns o' the moon;
hands, that grasp'd the heaviest worthiest self. The witch shall die:
Roman boy she hath sold me,
plot; she dies for't. Eros, ho!

[Exit.
Alexandria. A Room in the
Palace.
Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.
[Mad
help me, my women! O, he is more for his shield; the bear of emboss'd.
[Thee saly
To the monument;
yourself, and send him word you body rive not more in parting, going off.
To the monument:—

Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was "Antony."
And word it, pr'ythee, piteously: hence,
Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death.—
To the monument! [Exit.

SCENE XII.—Another Room in the Palace.
Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble lord.
Ant. Sometimes we see a cloud that's dragonish;
A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen
They are black vespers' pageants, [these signs;
Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.
Eros. It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain Even such a body: here I am Antony, [is Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,—
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine;
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto't
A million more, now lost,—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false play'd my Unto an enemy's triumph.— [glory
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter Mardian.
O, thy vile lady!
She has robb'd me of my sword.
Mar. No, Antony;
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes
With thine entirely. [mingled
Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace!
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.
Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once, [wouldst do,
And that she has discharg'd: what thou
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake
Was, "Antony! most noble Antony!"
Then, in the midst, a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead, then?
Mar. Dead.
Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is
done,
And we must sleep:—That thou depart'st hence
Does pay thy labour richly; go. [safe, [Exit Mardian.
O, pluck off:
The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent;
Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace,
No more a soldier; bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne. From me a while.

[Exit Eros.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture: since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no farther: now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength; seal then, and all is done.
Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros! stay for
me:

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts
Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops, [gaze:]
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros! Eros!

Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back

With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she, which by her death her Caesar tells,
"I am conqueror of myself." Thou art sworn,

Eros, [now]
That, when the exigent should come, (which Is come indeed,) when I should see behind me
The inevitable prosecution of disgrace
And horror, that, on my command, thou then Wouldst kill me: do't; the time is come:
Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant. Eros,
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome,
and see

Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending
His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd [down]
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensu'd?

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cured.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn

Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all

But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance,

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo, thee! [Turning from him.]

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant.

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros.

My captain, and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man; and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief.

Ant.

Eros. Why, then, then?

Ant. Thus do I escape the sword.

Of Antony's death.

Ant. Thrice nobler than mine.

Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what

I should, and thou couldst not.

And Eros

Have, by their brave instruction, not mine.

A nobleness in record: but I will not

A bridegroom in my death, and run to bed

As to a lover's bed. Come, then, to do this

Thy master dies thy scholar; to do this

I learn'd of thee. How! not dead?

The guard, ho! O, despatch me!

Enter Decretus and Guard.

1 Guard. What's the word?

Ant. I have done my work ill.

Of what I have begun. The star is fallen.

2 Guard. And time is at his period.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard. Nor I.

2 Guard. Nor any one.

3 Guard. Nor any one.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy sword

ers fly.

This sword but shown to Caesar, with

Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed, there.

Dio. Lives he?

Der. Thou not answer, man? [Exit Der.]

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed?

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed?

sword, and give me

Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute

My mistress, Cleopatra, sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument.

prophesying fear

Of what hath come to pass; for when

(Which never shall be found) you did

She had dispos'd with Caesar, and I would not be purg'd, she sent you

But, fearing since how it might work,

Me to proclaim the truth; and I am

I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed; call my

I pry'thee.

Enter some of the Guard.
Wha! ho, the emperor's guard! The your lord calls! [Guard, what, ho!]

Ant. Dear me, good friends, where Cleopatra is the last service that I shall command you.
Guard. Woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear
our true followers out.

Most heavy day!
Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
cross it with your sorrows: bid that welcome to punish us, and we punish it to bear it lightly. Take me up:

Ant. You art: carry me now, good friends, and have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt, bearing Antony.
Enter, above, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.
O Charmian, I will never go from hence.
Ir. Be comforted, dear madam.

No, I will not:
our deaths and terrible events are welcome, should to our cause, must be as great that which makes it.

Enter, below, Diomedes.
How now! is he dead?

How now! is he dead?
Ant. Not o' the other side your monument;
but have brought him thither.

Antony, borne by the Guard.
O sun,
the great sphere thou mov'st in! darkness stand on the shore o' the world! O Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Peace!
Antony's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
Antony's hath triumphed on itself.

So it should be, that none but Antony should conquer Antony: but woe 'tis so!
I am dying, Egypt, dying; only my thousand kisses the poor last upon thy lips.

I dare not, dear,—
Antony, pardon,—I dare not,
but fortune'd Caesar ever shall be taken with me: if knife, drugs, serpents, or operation, I am safe: [have Octavia, with her modest eyes, in conclusion, shall acquire no honour upon me. But come, come,

Antony,—
my women,—we must draw thee
up;—
O, quick, or I am gone.

My women,—we must draw thee
up;—
O, quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport indeed!—How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness, [power,
That makes the weight: had I great Jove's
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up, [little,—

And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a Wishers were ever fools.—O, come, come, come; [They draw Antony up.
And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast
liv'd:

Quickened with kissing; had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight!
Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.
Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her Provok'd by my offence. [wheel,

Ant. One word, sweet queen:
Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety.

Cleo. They do not go together. [—O!
Ant. Gentle, hear me:

None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius.
Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;
None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament no sorrow at; but please your thoughts,
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world,

The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to My countryman,—a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going;
I can no more. [Antony dies.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die!
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty?—O, see, my women,

The crown o' the earth doth melt:—my lord!—
O, wither'd is the garland of the war, [Girls
The soldier's pole is fallen: young boys and
Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon. [Faints.

Char. O, quietness, lady!
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Char. Lady,—
Iras. Madam.—

Char. O madam, madam, madam!—
Iras. Royal Egypt!
Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras. [mandal
Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and com-
By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest chares.—It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them that this world did equal theirs, Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but nought;

Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: then, is it sin
To rush into the secret house of death,

Ere death dare come to us?—How do you, women? [Charmian!]
 What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! look, Our lamp is spent, it's out!—Good wits, take heart:— [To the Guard below.
 We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's noble, Let's do it after the high Roman fashion, And make death proud to take us. Come, away! This case of that huge spirit now is cold: Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend But resolution, and the briefest end.
 [Exeunt; those above bearing off Antony's body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Alexandria. Caesar's Camp.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mecenas, Gallus, Proculeius, and others.

Cas. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield; Being so frustrate, tell him, he mocks us by The praises that he makes.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.

Enter Decretas, with the sword of Antony.

Cas. Wherefore is that! and what art thou, Appear thus to us? [that dar'st

Der. I am call'd Decretas; Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be served; whilst he stood up and spoke He was my master; and I wore my life To spend upon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life.

Cas. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.

Cas. The breaking of so great a thing should A greater crack: the round world [make Should have shook lions into civil streets, And citizens to their dens: the death of Antony Is not a single doom; in the name lay A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar; Not by a public minister of justice, Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand, Which writ his honour in the acts it did, Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend Splitted the heart. This is the sword; [it, I rob'd his wound of it; behold it stained With his most noble blood.

Cas. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings To wash the eyes of kings.

Agg. And strange it is, That nature must compel us to lament Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours Wag'd equal with him.

Agg. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us Some faults to make us man. Caesar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror
 He needs must see himself. O Antony!

Cas. I have follow'd thee to this,—but we do see Diseases in our bodies: I must perform
 Have shown to thee such a declining day,
 Or look on thine; we could not let me languish
 In the whole world: but yet let me languish
 With tears as sovereign as the blood of heaven
 That thou, my brother, my competitor
 In top of all design, my mate in empire,
 Friend and companion in the front of war,
 The arm of mine own body, and the heart
 Where mine his thoughts did kindle,
 Unreconcilable, should divide
 Our equalness to this. Fear me,
 friends,—

But I will tell you at some meeting
 Enter a Messenger.

The business of this man looks out of him
 We'll hear him what he says. Where's
 you?

Mec. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen
 Confin'd in all she has, her mourning
 Of thy intents desires instruction,
 That she preparedly may frame herself
 To the way she's forced to.

Cas. Bid her have good heart
 She soon shall know of us, by some of ours
 How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Caesar cannot live
 To be ungentle.

Mec. So the gods preserve him!

Cas. Come hither, Proculeius. Go
 We purpose her no shame: give her comforts

The quality of her passion shall regulate Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal
 She do defeat us; for her life in Rome
 Would be eternal in our triumph. Agg.
 And, with your speediest, bring us word
 And how you find of her.

Pro. Caesar, I shall.

Cas. Gallus, go you alone. Where's he?

To second Proculeius! Dolabella!

Agg. Mec.

Cas. Let him alone, for I remember How he's employ'd: he shall in time
 Go with me to my tent, where you shall see How hardly I was drawn into this war
 How calm and gentle I proceeded all In all my writings; go with me, and What I can show in this.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. The Messenger

Enter, above, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Cleo. My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis pity to see

 Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's slave
 A minister of her will; and it is To do that thing that ends all other things
 Which shackles accidents, and binds up and never palates more the dung,

 Caesar's nurse and Caesar's.
Below, to the gates of the Monument, Proculeius, Gallus, and Soldiers.
Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the queen of

Egypt;
 And bids thee study on what fair demands
 He hath to have him grant thee.
 What's thy name?

My name is Proculeius.
 Antony
 And of you, bade me trust you; but
 He gave no care to be deceiv'd,
 Have a queen his beggar, you must tell
 Me, to keep decorum, must [him,
 For more than a kingdom; if he please
 To conquer'd Egypt for my son,
 Give me to much of mine own, as I
 Said to him with thanks.

Be of good cheer;
 Be fallen into a princely hand, fear
 Nothing:
 I'll give thee full reference freely to my lord,
 That's full of grace, that it flows over
 That need: let me report to him
 Thy dependency; and you shall find
 That grace that will pray in aid for kindness
 For grace is kneel'd to.

Pray you, tell him
 Fortune's vassal, and I send him
 That he has got. I hourly learn
 Of obedience; and would gladly
 Of the face.

This I'll report, dear lady.
 That caus'd it.
 I know your plight is pitied
 And to Pro.] You see how easily she May be surpris'd.

And two of the Guard, ascend the Ladder, and come behind
 Some of the Guard unbar
 Over the gates, discovering the lower Part of the monument.

Pro.] Guard her till Caesar come.
 [Exit.

Alas queen!
 O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!
 Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a dagger.
 Hold, worthy lady, hold!
 [Seizes and disarms her.
 Yourself such wrong, who are in this
 But not betray'd.

What, of death too,
 Of dogs of languish!

Cleopatra,
 Of your master's bounty, by
 Of yourself: let the world see How well acted, which your death
 Hath let come forth.

Where art thou, Death?
 Come, come, come, and take a Busy babes and beggars!
 [queen

Pro. O, temperance, lady!
 Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,
 If idle talk will once be necessary; [sir:
 I'll not sleep neither: this mortal house I'll ruin,

Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
 Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court;
 Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
 Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
 And show me to the shouting varletry
 Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
 Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud
 Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
 And hang me up in chains.

Pro. You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.
 Dol. Proculeius,
 What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
 And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen,
 I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
 It shall content me best:—be gentle to her.
 [To Cleo.] To Caesar I will speak what you
 If you'll employ me to him. [shall please,
 Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers.
 Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard Cleo. I cannot tell. [of me]

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.
 Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard, or known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their Is't not your trick? [dreams;]

Dol. I understand not, madam.
 Cleo. I dream'd there was an emperor
 Antony:—

O, such another sleep, that I might see
 But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,— Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and
 The little O, the earth. [lighted]

Dol. Most sovereign creature,— Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his roar'd arm

Crested the world: his voice was property'd
 As all the tun'd spheres, and that to friends;
 But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
 He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
 There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas,
 That grew the more by reaping: his delights
 Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
 The element they liv'd in; in his livery Walk'd crowns, and crownets; realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.
 Dol. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be,
 As this I dream'd of? [such a man,

Dol. Gentle madam, no.
Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
 But, if there be, or ever were, one such,
 It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff
 To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine
 An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam.
 Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it
 As answering to the weight: would I might O'ertake pursued success, but I do feel, [never
 By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
 My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.
 Know you what Caesar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loth to tell you what I would you

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,— [knew.

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph!

Dol. Madam, he will; I know it.

[Within.] Make way there!—Caesar!

Enter Caesar, Gallus, Proculeius, Mecænas,

Seleucus, and Attendants.

Cæs. Which is the queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam.

[Cleopatra kneels.

Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel.

I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods

Will have it thus; my master and my lord

I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts:

The record of what injuries you did us,

Though written in our flesh, we shall remember

As things but done by chance. [ber

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world,

I cannot project mine own cause so well

To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties, which before

Have often sham'd our sex.

Cæs. Cleopatra, know,

We will extenuate rather than enforce:

If you apply yourself to our intents, [find

(Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall

A benefit in this change; but if you seek

To lay on me a cruelty, by taking

Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself

Of my good purposes, and put your children

To that destruction which I'll guard them from,

If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours; and we, [shall

Your scutcheons, and your signs of conquest,

Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord. [patra.

Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleo-

Cleo. [Giving a scroll.] This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,

I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valu'd;

Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak,

my lord;

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
 To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam,

I had rather seal my lips, than, to my point,
 Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?
 Purchase what you will.

Sel. Enough to purchase what you will,
 made known.

Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I will Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, mine will now be How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be
 And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild: O slave, of us now Than love that's hid!—What, if I should back I thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll satiate
 Though they had wings: slave,

O rarely base!

Cæs. Good quom, let's not Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit
 Doing the honour of thy lordship

To one so meek, that mine own secret Parcel the sum of my disgrace by

Addition of his envy! Say, good
 That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,

Immortal toys, things of such dignity
 As we great modern friends would have

Some nobler token have I kept apart
 For Livia, and Octavia, to induce

Their mediation; most I be unwilling With one that I have bred! The smites me

 Beneath the fall I have. [To Sel.]

go hence;
 Or I shall show the cinders of my name

Through the ashes of my shame;
 Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cæs. [To Sel.]

Cleo. Be it known, that we, who are are misthought

For things that others do; and, when we
 We answer others' merits in our own

Are therefore to be pitied. [Cleopatra]

Cæs. Not what you have reserv'd, nor what ledg'd,

Put we! the roll of conquest; still to Bestow it at your pleasure; and to

Caesar's no merchant, to make a price
 Of things that merchants sold.

heard;
 Make not your thoughts your price;

For we intend so to dispose you,
 Yourself shall give us counsel.

Our care and pity is so much upon you
 That we remain your friend; and my lord

Cleo. My master, and my lord.

Cæs. [Flourish. Exit Caesar]

His words me, girls, he words me, that I should not able to myself, but, hark thee, Charmian.

[Whispers Charmian.
Finish, good lady; the bright day is for the dark.
[done,

Hie thee again;
and it is provided;

Madam, I will.
Behold, sir. [Exit.
Dolabella?
Where is the queen?

Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

my love makes religion to obey,
this: Caesar through Syria
his journey; and, within three days,
your children will be sent before;

your heat use of this: I have perform'd measure, and my promise.

Remain your debtor.

I am your servant.
I must attend on Caesar.

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?
Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown as well as I: mechanic slaves, aprons, rules, and hammers, shall be to the view; in their thick breaths, of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,

to drink their vapour.

The gods forbid!
Iras: saucy

rhymers
at us, like strumpets; and scald out of tune: the quick comedians will stage us, and present sadian revels; Antony brought drunken forth, and I shall see speaking Cleopatra boy my greatness of a whore.

O, the good gods!
that is certain.

I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my than mine eyes.

Why, that's the way preparation, and to conquer abroad intents.

Re-enter Charmian.
Now, Charmian,

my women, like a queen: go fetch more; I am again for Cydnus,

Mark Antony: sirrah Iras, go;— Charmian, we'll despatch indeed;
thou hast done this charge, I'll give leave

my ill doer may.
Bring our crown and [Exit Iras. A noise heard.

Enter one of the Guard.
Here is a rural fellow,

That will not be denied your highness' pre-
He brings you figs.

[sense;
Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guard.]
What poor an instrument,

May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing

Of woman in me; now from head to foot
I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown, bringing in a basket.

Guard. This is the man.
Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly, I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it, do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died
on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too.
I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt, truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm; but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.
Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

[Sets down the basket.

Cleo. Farewell.
Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay, farewell.
Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for,
indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.
Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?
Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman; I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not; but, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.
Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.

Re-enter Iras, with a robe, crown, &c.
Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown;
I have

Immortal longings in me: now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:
Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I hear Antony call; I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men

KING LEAR.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Physician.

Fool.

Officer, employed by Edmund.

Gentleman, Attendant on Cordelia.

A Herald.

Servants to Cornwall.

Goneril,

Regan,

Cordelia,

} Daughters to Lear.

Knights of Lear's train, Officers, Messengers,
Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE,—Britain.

ACT I.

A Room of State in King Lear's
Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

I thought the king had more affected
Albany, than Cornwall.It did always seem so to us: but now, Division of the kingdom, it appears notof the dukes he values most; for equal-choice of either's moiety.

Is not this your son, my lord?

His breeding, sir, hath been at my
I have so often blushed to acknowledge, that now I am brazed to it.

I cannot conceive you.

How this young fellow's mother could;

She grew round-wombed, and had,
A son for her cradle ere she had a bed. Do you smell a fault?

I cannot wish the fault undone, the
Of being so proper.But I have a son, sir, by order of law, More elder than this, who yet is no dearerto me: though this knave came some-way into the world, before he wasknown at his mother's fair; there was acknowledged, and the whoresonEdmund. Do you know this No, my lord.The lord of Kent: remember him here-fore my honourable friend.I must love you, and sue to know you
As I shall study deserving.Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again.—The king is coming.

[Sennet within.]

Enter Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goneril,

Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy. I shall, my liege. [Gundy, Gloster.]

[Exeunt Gloster and Edmund.]

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose. [divided]

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have

In three, our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent

To shake all cares and business from our age;

Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany,

We have this hour a constant will to publish

Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife

May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,

Long in our court have made their amorous

sojourn, [daughters,

And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my (Since now we will divest us, both of rule,

Interest of territory, cares of state,)

Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?

That we our largest bounty may extend

Where nature doth with merit challenge.—

Our eldest born, speak first. [Goneril,

Gon. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter;

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty;

Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty,

honour:

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found;

A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable ;

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. [Aside.] What shall Cordelia do ? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this, [rich'd,

With shadowy forests, and with champains With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,

We make thee lady : to thine and Albany's issue, [daughter,

Be this perpetual.—What says our second Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall ? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,

And prize me at her worth. In my true heart I find she names my very deed of love ;

Only she comes too short,—that I profess Myself an enemy to all other joys,

Which the most precious square of sense And find I am alone felicitate [possesses ;

In your dear highness' love.

Cor. [Aside.] Then, poor Cordelia ! And yet not so ; since, I am sure, my love's More richer than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine, hereditary ever, Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom ;

No less in space, validity, and pleasure, Than that conferr'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy, [love

Although our last, not least ; to whose young The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,

Strive to be interest'd ; what can you say, to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters ? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing ! Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing : speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave My heart into my mouth : I love your majesty According to my bond : nor more, nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia ! mend your speech a little,

Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord, You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me : I Return those duties back as are right fit ;

Obey you, love you, and most honour you. Why have my sisters husbands, if they say

They love you all ? Haply, when I shall wed, That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry Half my love with him, half my care, and duty : Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,

To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this ?

Cor. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender ?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true. [dower ;

Lear. Let it be so,—thy truth, then, be thy Port, by the sacred radiance of the sun,

The mysteries of Hecate, and the night ; By all the operation of the orbs

From whom we do exist, and cease to be ; Here I disclaim all my paternal care,

Propinquity and property of blood, And, as a stranger to my heart and mine,

Hold thee, from this, for ever. The heavens

Or he that makes his generation men

To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom

Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and relieved, As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Lear. Peace, Kent ! Come not between the dragon and his wife ;

I lov'd her most, and thought to set my love On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight !—

So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her !—Call France who stirs ? Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany,

With my two daughters' dowers, dismiss third : Let pride, which she calls plainness,

I do invest you jointly with my power, Pre-eminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty. Ourself, by course,

With reservation of a hundred knights, By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode

Make with you by due turns. Only, we retain

The name, and all th' additions to a king ; The sway,

Revenue, execution of the rest, Belov'd sons, be yours ; which to conduct

This coronet part between you.

Kent. Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,

Lov'd as my father, as my master, as As my great patron thought, [I have prayers,—

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, [hence

Kent. Let it fall rather, [hence invade The region of my heart ; be Kent of mine

When Lear is mad. What would'st thou old man ? Think'st thou that duty shall have speak, When power to flattery bows ? To bow

honour's bound, When majesty falls to folly,

And, in thy best consideration, This hideous rashness : answer my judgment, Thy youngest daughter does

Nor are those empty-hearted, whose Reverbs no hollowness.

Lear. Kent. My life I never held for a

To wage against thine enemies ; Thy safety being the motive

Lear.

Gods, gods! 'tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind;
Thou lovest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine; for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see

That face of hers again:—therefore, be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloucester, and Attendants.]

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you
And, like a sister, am most loath to call Your faults as they are nam'd. Love well our father:

To your profess'd bosoms I commit him;
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Gon. Prescribe not us our duty.

Reg. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience scanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning
Who covers faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia, [Exeunt France and Cordelia.]

Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you;
next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most,
and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then, must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is farther compliment of leavtaking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, the surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and I think

SCENE II.—A Hall in the East of the Castle.

Enter Edmund, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; law

My services are bound. Wherefore art thou Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen shines

Lag of a brother? Why bastard? When my

When my dimensions are as well as yours,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue? Why brand'st thou

With base? with baseness? bastardy?

Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take

More composition and fierce quality

Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired

Go to the creating a whole tribe of Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well, then,

Legitimate Edgar, I must have your

Our father's love is to the bastard

As to the legitimate: fine word, well

Well, my legitimate, if this letter

And my invention thrive, Edmund

Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I

Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banished thus! And my choler parted!

And the king gone to-night! All this done

Confin'd to exhibition! All this done

Upon the gad!—Edmund, how now?

Edm. So please your lordship, none

[Putting up the letter.]

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No! What needed, then, the despatch of it into your pocket? I have nothing hath not such need to

Let's see: come, if it be nothing, I need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me a letter from my brother, that I have o'er read; and for so much as I have

I find it not fit for your o'er-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to

The contents, as in part I understand

Are to blame.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's sake,

he wrote this but as an essay or virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] "This policy, and the world bitter to the best of our fortunes from us, till our old-men relish them. I begin to find an bondage in the oppression of aged men, not as it hath power, but

 red. Come to me, that of this I know. If our father would sleep till you should enjoy half his revenue and live the beloved of your brother.— [Conspiracy.]—“Sleep till I should enjoy half his revenue.”
 [Edgar.] Had he a hand to write heart and brain to breed it in?— it was not brought me, my lord, of it; I found it thrown in of my closet. [Brother's!] you know the character to be your if the matter were good, my lord, I if it were his; but, in respect of that,
 I think it were not.

It is his hand, my lord; but I hope it is not in the contents.
 I have never heretofore sounded you ever, my lord: but I have often maintain it to be fit, that, sons at and fathers declined, the father as ward to the son, and the son revenue.

Edg. Villain!—His very opinion [Edg.]—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, villain! worse than brutish!
 seek him; I'll apprehend him:
 villain!—Where is he?

I do not well know, my lord. If it you to suspend your indignation my brother, till you can derive from testimony of his intent, you shall course; where, if you violently against him, mistaking his purpose, it a great gap in your own honour, pieces the heart of his obedience. I down my life for him, that he hath to feel my affection to your honour,
 other pretence of danger.
 ask you so?

If your honour judge it meet, I will where you shall hear us confer as an arduous assurance have your order; and that without any further this very evening.

He cannot be such a monster—
 nor is not, sure.

Edg. My father, that so tenderly and loves him.—Heaven and earth!—
 him out; wind me into him, I from the business after your own
 I would mistake myself, to be in a solution.

Edg. I will seek him, sir, presently; consider the business as I shall find means, and you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus,
 yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves.—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully.—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange! [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune (often the surfeit of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity;
 fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves,
 and treachers, by spherical predominance;
 drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star!
 My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under ursa major; so that, it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut! I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—

Enter Edgar.

and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! Fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of, succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and malefactions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts,
 nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go: there's my key.—If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—

[Exit Edgar.]

A credulous father! and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty

My practices ride easy!—I see the business.—
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril and Oswald.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam. [Every hour]

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me: He flashes into one gross crime or other, That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it: His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us [ing]

On every trifle.—When he returns from hunt- I will not speak with him; say, I am sick:— If you come slack of former services,

You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.]

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,

You and your fellows; I'd have it come to If he distrusts it, let him to my sister, Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man, [one] That still would manage those authorities, That he hath given away!—Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd With checks as flatteries,—when they are seen Remember what I have said. [abund.]

Osw. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so:

I would breed from hence occasion, shall,

That I may speak:—I'll write straight, To hold my course.—Prepare for dinner.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Kent disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accounts, That can my speech diffuse, my good May carry through itself to that end, For which I raz'd my likeness.—Now,

Kent,

If thou canst serve where thou dost, So may it come, thy master, whom thou

Shall find these full of labours. Enter Lear, Goneril, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for this, get it ready.—[Exit an Attendant.]

now! what art thou? Kent. A poor

Lear. What dost thou wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no better, seem; to serve him truly that will trust: to love him that is honest; to trust with him that is wise, and say a little judgment; to fight when I cannot, and to eat no fish.

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a while, is for a king, thou art poor enough, wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that countenance, which I would fain call Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest company, mar a curious tale in telling it, and plain message bluntly: that which men are fit for, I am qualified in;

best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a of singing; nor so old, to do a thing: I have years on my back

Lear. Follow me: thou shalt

I like thee no worse after dinner, part from thee yet.—Dinner, my Where's my knave? my fool?

call my fool hither.

Enter Oswald.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,—

Lear. What says the fellow?

back. Where's my fool, ho?—I world's asleep. How now! where's [not well.]

he says, my lord, your daughter is Why came not the slave back to me,
him?

Sir, he answered me in the roundest
he would not.

My lord, I know not what the but, to my judgment, your high-entertained with that ceremonious

as you were wont: there's a great of kindness appears, as well in the pedants, as in the duke himself

your daughter.
I sayest thou so?

I beseech you, pardon me, my lord,
taken; for my duty cannot be silent,
but rememberest me of mine

ception: I have perceived a most act of late; which I have rather mine own jealous curiosity, than as ance and purpose of unkindness: I further into't.—But where's my fool?

—I have seen him this two days.
Since my young lady's going into the fool hath much pined him

no more of that; I have noted it you, and tell my daughter I would

her.—

Re-enter Oswald.
Oswald, you come you hither, sir: who

my lady's father.
My lady's father! my lord's knave:

you slave! you cur!
I am none of these, my lord; I be-your bandy looks with me, you [Striking him.]

been tripped neither, you base foot-[Tripping up his heels.]

I thank thee, follow; thou servest
I'll love thee,

Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you away, away! If you will measure your length again, tarry: but away!

have you wisdom! so.

[Pushes Oswald out.
My friendly knave, I thank earnest of thy service.]

Re-enter Kent.
[Giving Kent money.]
I bid him too:—Here's my cox-

[Giving Kent his cap.]
How now, my pretty knave? how sirrah, you were best take my cox-

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why, for taking one's part that's out of favour: nay, an' thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb: why, this fellow has banished two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my cox-comb.—How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah, the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when Lady, the brach, may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. [To Kent.] Sirrah, I'll teach thee a

Lear. Do. [speech.]

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

Have more than thou shinest,

Speak less than thou knowest,

Lend less than thou owest,

Ride more than thou goest.

Learn more than thou knowest,

Set less than thou throwest;

Leave thy drink and thy whore,

And keep in-a-door,

And thou shalt have more

Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then, 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer,—you gave me nothing for't.—
Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. [To Kent.] Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee

To give away thy land,

Come place him here by me,

Do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;

The one in molley here,

The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part out, and loads too: they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg 't the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown 't the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

[Singing.]

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year:

For wise men are grown foppish:

And know not how their wits to wear,

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers: for when thou gavest them the rod, and puttest down thine own breeches,

[Singing.]

Then they for sudden joy did weep,

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep,

And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie. [whipped.]

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped. Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are; they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'll have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing 't the middle:—here comes one o' the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter? what makes that frontlet on?

Methinks you are too much of late 't the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing.—[To Goneril.] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum,

He that keeps not crust nor crumb,

Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a shealed peascod. [Pointing to Lear.]

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd But other of your insolent retinue. [Fool.]

Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you,

To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,

By what yourself too late have spoke and done, That you protect this course, and put it on By your allowance; which if you should, the fault

Would not 'scape censure, nor your sleep.

Which, in the tender of a wholesome Might in their working do you that Which else were shame, that these Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you trow, nuncle, The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so, That it had its head bit off by its own bill.

So, out went the candle, and we were left in the dark.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught, and

These dispositions, which of late

From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when he draws the horse?—Whoop, Jig!

Lear. Does any here know me?

not Lear: does Lear walk thus? or his discernings are lathargied.

Where are his eyes? Either his not waking?—Ha! sure 'tis not so.

that can tell me who I am!

Fool. Lear's shadow.

Lear. I would learn that; for, by of sovereignty, knowledge and reason,

be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make as Lear. Your name, fair gentleman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is most

favour

Of other your new pranks. I do

To understand my purposes aright:

As you are old and reverend, should

Here do you keep a hundred squires:

Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd and

That this our court, infected with manners,

Shows like a notorious inn; whose

Make it more like a tavern, or a

Than a grac'd palace. The shame

For instant remedy: be, then, down

By her, that else will take the train:

A little to disquantity your train;

And the remainder, that shall still

To be such men as may besort your

Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Saddle my horses; call my train

Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble

Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike me people; and order'd rabble

Make servants of their betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late

Is it your will? Speak, sir.—

horses.—

Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted

More hideous, when thou show'st

Than the sea-monster!

[To Gon.] Pray, sir, be patient.
 These are men of choice and rarest parts,
 Of the most exact regard support
 Whom thou in Cordelia show! [fault,
 Like an engine, wrenched my frame of Love, drew from my heart all
 To the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
 That let thy folly in.
 [Striking his head, out!—Go, go, my
 dear judgment
 lord, I am guiltless, as I am
 you.
 It may be so, my lord,—
 dear goddess, hear!
 If thou didst intend
 this creature fruitful!
 To convey sterility!
 her organs of increase;
 To honour her! If she must teem,
 her child of spleen; that it may live,
 To thwart himself'd torment to her!
 To wrinkle in her brow of youth;
 To fret channels in her cheeks;
 To mother's pains and benefits and contempt; that she may feel more than a serpent's tooth it is a thankless child!—Away, away.

[Exit. gods that we adore, whereof
 this!
 Never afflict yourself to know the disposition have that scope [cause;
 give it.
 Re-enter Lear.
 Fifty of my followers, at a clap!

What's the matter, sir?
 I tell thee,—[To Gon.] Life and I am ashamed [thus;
 I have power to shake my manhood
 That tears, which break from me
 Upon thee!
 Upon thee! Blasts and fogs
 The worth them. Wounds of a father's curse
 I sense about thee!—Old fond eyes,
 Thou case again, I'll pluck you out,
 With the waters that you lose,
 To drown your daughter.
 Ha! let it be so:—
 As kind and comfortable;
 Shall hear this of thee, with her nails
 Thy woful visage. Thou shalt find
 The shape, which thou dost
 Think
 Re-enter Lear, Kent, and Attendants.
 How you mark that?
 I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
 As to love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald,
 ho!—

[To the Fool.] You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
 And such a daughter,
 Should sure to the slaughter,
 If my cap would buy a halter:
 So the fool follows after. [Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel:—
 a hundred knights!

'Tis politic, and safe, to let him keep At point a hundred knights: yes, that, on every dream,

Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, diallike,
 He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
 And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I

Alb. Well, you may fear too far. [say!—
 Gon. Safer than trust too far:

Let me still take away the harms I fear,
 Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart.
 What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister:
 If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
 When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter Oswald.
 How now, Oswald!

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?
 Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to Inform her full of my particular fear; [horse:
 And thereto add such reasons of your own,
 As may compact it more. Get you gone;
 And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald.

No, no, my lord,
 This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
 Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,
 You are much more attack'd for want of
 Than praised for harmful mildness. [wisdom, Alb. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell:

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
 Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; the event. [Re-enter.

SCENE V.—Court before the Duke of Albany's
 Palace.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with anything you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in a heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I prythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly: for though she's as like thee, as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell. Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side's nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into. Lear. I did her wrong:—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house. Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make a good fool. [Ingratitude!]

Lear. To take it again perforce!—Monster

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old before thou hadst been wise. [Heaven!]

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gen. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

[my departure,

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloucester.

Enter Edmund and Curan, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: you have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments!

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and

Edm. Not a word. [Albany?]

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night! The better! best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my father. And I have one thing, of a quony question. Which I must act:—brother, and brother's work!—

Brother, a word: descend:—brother, I say

Enter Edgar.

My father watches:—O sir, fly this place. Intelligence is given where you are hid.

You have now the good advantage of the night:—

Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Albany? He's coming hither, now, i' the night.

Edm. haste,

And Regan with him: have you nothing

Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edm. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming:—

In cunning, I must draw my sword: Draw: seem to defend yourself:—

you well.—

Yield:—come before my father.—

Fly, brother.—Torches, torches!—

Some blood drawn on me would be good:—

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have drunkards

Do more than this in sport.—Father, stop, stop!—No help!

Enter Gloucester, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, with sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring To stand auspicious mistress:—

Glo. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain?

Edm. Fled this way, sir.

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after: means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after: some Servants.] "By no means."

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of lordship;

But that I told him, the ravens come 'Gainst parricides did all their haunt;

Spoke, with how manifold and terrible The child was bound to the father.

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, he charged

With his prepared sword, he charged My unprovided body, lance'd mine arm:

But when he saw my best alarm'd Bold in the quarrel's right, he smote counter,

Or whether gasted by the noise I fell suddenly he fled. Let him fly.

Glo. Not in this land shall he remain. And found—despatch.—The noise master.

thy arch and patron, comes to-night :
 authority I will proclaim it, [thanks, which finds him shall deserve our
 the murderous coward to the stake ;
 I conceal him, death.

When I dissuaded him from his intended him pight to do it, with curse to discover him : he replied,
 "I will stand against thee, would the re-trust, virtue, or worth, in thee [possithy words faith'd ! No : what I should

I would ; ay, though thou didst pro-my character), I'd turn it all [durst suggestion, plot, and damned practice :
 thou must make a dullard of the world,
 I thought the profits of my death my payment and potential squire these such it."

Strong and fasten'd villain !
 deny his letter, said he ?—I never the duke's trumpets ! I know not [Tucket within.

I'll bar ; the villain shall not 'scape ;
 thou must grant me that : besides, his and far and near, that all the kingdom does note of him ; and of my land, a natural boy, I'll work the means thus capable.

Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.
 How now, my noble friend ! since I can call but now,) I have heard of thee true, all vengeance comes too to pursue th' offender. How dost, my madam, my old heart is crack'd—[your life ?

What, did my father's godson seek my father nam'd ? your Edgar ?
 O lady, shame would have it hid !
 Was he not companion with the upon my father ? [ristons knights

I know not, madam : 'tis too bad,
 yes, madam, he was of that consort.
 No marvel, then, though he were ill

to put him on the old man's death,
 the expense and waste of his revenues,
 the present evening from my sister all intern'd of them ; and with such comes to sojourn at my house,

 Nor I, assure thee, Regan,—
 I hear that you have shown your [father

Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice ; and re-ceiv'd

This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
 Corn. Is he pursu'd ?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.
 Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more

Be fear'd of doing harm : make your own purpose, [Edmund,

How in my strength you please.—For you,
 Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
 So much commend itself, you shall be ours :
 Natures of such deep trust we shall much need ;
 You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
 Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your grace.
 Corn. You know not why we came to visit

you,— [ey'd night ;
 Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-

Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poise,
 Wherein we must have use of your advice :—
 Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
 Of differences, which I best thought it fit
 To answer from our home ; the several messengers [friend,

From hence attend despatch. Our good old
 Lay comforts to your bosom : and bestow
 Your needful counsel to our business,
 Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam :
 Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Kent and Oswald, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend : art of this house ? Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses ?
 Kent. I' the mire.

Osw. Prythee, if thou love me, tell me.
 Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why, then, I care not for thee.
 Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

 Osw. Why dost thou use me thus ? I know thee not. Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

 Osw. What dost thou know me for ?

Kent. A knave ; a rascal ; an eater of broken meats ; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave ; a lily-liver'd, action-taking knave ; a whorson glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue ; one-trunk-inheriting slave ; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel-bitch : one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee !

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me ! Is it two days since I tripp'd up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue: for, though it be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you: Draw, you whoreson callionly barber-monger, draw.

[Drawing his sword.]

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king; and take Vanity, the puppet's part, against the royalty of her father: draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, you rascal; come your ways.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave, strike.

[Beating him.]

Osw. Help, oh! murder! murder!
[Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloucester, Edmund, and Servants.]

Edm. How now! What's the matter?

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, if you please: come, I'll flesh you; come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons! arms! Where's the matter?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives; [here? He dies, that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I at suit of his grey beard,— [have spar'd

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail!

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no revenge?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry? [a sword]

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwain Which are too intrinse t' unloose; smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebels; Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods; Reneged, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks With every gale and vary of their masters, Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.—A plague upon your epileptic visage! Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool!

Goose, if I had you upon Sarah plain, I'd drive ye cackling home to Cambridgeshire.

Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain.

I have seen better faces in my time Than stands on any shoulder that I see Before me at this instant.

Corn. Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the truth

Quite from his nature: he cannot hate, An honest mind and plain,—he must

truth!

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plainness.

These kind of knaves I know, which Harbour more craft, and more corruption Than twenty silly ducking observance.

That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in shrewd sooth, Under th' allowance of your grand

Whose influence, like the wreath of

On flickering Phoebus' front.

Corn. What mean'st thou?

Kent. To go out of my dated service, I discommend so much. I know, sir, I flatterer: he that beguiled you in a cent was a plain knave; which, for will not be, though I should win your sure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was the offence you

Osw. I never gave him any;

It pleas'd the king, his master, very

To strike at me, upon his misconstruction

When he, compact, and flattering

sure,

Tripp'd me behind; being down, I

And put upon him such a deal of

That worthied him, got praise of the

For him attempting who was self

And in the freshment of this deed

Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these reasons, sir.

But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the

You stubborn ancient knave, you

We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to Call not your stocks for me: I know

On whose employment I was sent

You shall do small respect, show

malice

Against the grace and person of my Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the life and honour, there shall he sit [night too.

Till noon / till night, my lord; and all Way, madam, if I were your father's should not use me so.

[dog,
Sir, being his knave, I will.

[Stocks brought out.

This is a fellow of the self-same colour speaks of.—Come, bring away the

Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
is much, and the good king his master back him for't: your purpos'd low cor-

as basest and contemn'd wretches, and most common trespassers,
d with: the king must take it ill,
so slightly valu'd in his messenger,
have him thus restrain'd.

I'll answer that.

My sister may receive it much more
worse,
has her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—

[Kent is put in the stocks.

my lord, away.
[Exeunt Regan and Cornwall.

I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,
disposition, all the world well knows,
not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for
thee.

Pray, do not, sir: I have watch'd,
and travel'd hard;
and I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.

your war's fortune may grow out at heels:
you good morrow!
The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be all taken.

God king, that must approve the common saw,
out of heaven's benediction com'st forth, thou beacon to this under globe,

thy comfortable beams I may this letter!—Nothing, almost, sees miracles.

I know 'tis from Cordelia,
most fortunately been inform'd of your course; and shall find time this enormous state,—seeking to give their remedies.—All weary and o'er-watched,

heavy eyes, not to behold
a good night.

Smile once more; turn [He sleeps.

III.—A Part of the Heath.
Enter Edgar.

I heard myself proclaim'd;
the happy hollow of a tree
the hunt. No port is free; no place, guard, and most unusual vigilance,

Does not attend my taking. While I may
'scape
I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That ever penury, in contempt of man, Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth;

Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in knots;
And with presented nakedness out-face
The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills, Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers, [Tom!
Enforce their charity.—Poor Tarlygod! poor
That's something yet:—Edgar I nothing am.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger.

Gen. As I learn'd,

The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. Ha!

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters,
Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears
by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty at legs,
then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he, that hath so much thy
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,—

Your son and daughter.

Kent. Yes. Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no, they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do't;

They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home

I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show'd

My duty kneeling, there came a recking post, Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting

forth

From Goneril, his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission.

Which presently they read : on whose contents
They summoned up their meiny, straight took Commanded me to follow, and attend [horse ;
The leisure of their answer ; gave me cold looks ;
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd (Being the very fellow which of late [mine, Display'd so saucily against your highness,)
Having more man than wit about me, drew ;
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass
The shame which here it suffers. [worth

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

*Fathers, that wear rags,
Do make their children blind ;
But fathers, that wear bags,
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—*

But, for all this, thou shalt have as many colours for thy daughters, as thou canst tell in a year. [my heart !

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward Hysterica passio,—down, thou climbing sorrow,

Thy element's below !—Where is this daugh-
Kent. With the earl, sir, here within. [ter ?

Lear. Follow me not ;
Stay here. [Exit.

Gen. Made you no more offence than what Kent. None. [you speak off !

How chance the king comes with so small a train !

Fool. And thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool ?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter.
All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men ; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it ; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again ;
I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

*That sir, which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,*

*Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.*

*But I will tarry ; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly :*

*The knave turns fool that runs away ;
The fool no knave, perdy.*

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool ?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter Lear, with Gloster.

Lear. Deny to speak with me ! They are sick ! They are weary !

They have travell'd hard to-night ! Mere fetches ;

The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer. My dear look
Glo.

You know the fiery quality of the duke
How unremovable and fix'd he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance ! plague ! death !
Fiery ! what quality ! Why, Gloster, Gloster, I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd Lear. Inform'd them ! Dost thou think
Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commends
Are they inform'd of this ?—My heart's
blood !—

Fiery ! the fiery duke !—Tell the hot duke
No, but not yet ;—may be, he is not well ;

Infirmary doth still neglect all others, [I feel
Where to our health is bound ; we are not well ;

When nature, being oppress'd, commands
To suffer with the body : I'll forbear ;

And am fallen out with my pure healing
To take the indispos'd and sickly
For the sound man. Death on my neck !

[Looking on Kent.]—Wherefore
Should he sit here ! This net personal
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my sword ;

Go, tell the duke and his wife, I'd speak with
them,

Now, presently : bid them come
Or at their chamber door I'll beat the duke
Till it cry sleep to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you and them.

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart, but, down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cock to the eels, when she put them i' the water ;
alive ; she rapt'd 'em o' the coxcombs, down
stick, and cried, "Down, wantons, down !"

'Twas her brother, that, in pure kindness his horse, butt'r'd his lay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants.
Lear. Good morrow to you both.
Hall to your highness !

Reg. I am glad to see your highness Lear. Regan, I think you are ; I have reason

I have to think so : if thou shouldst
I would divorce me from thy mother's Sepulchring an adultress.—[To Kent]

are you free ?

Some other time for that.—Belov'd Thy sister's naught ; O Regan, she has Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture

here,—

I can scarce speak to thee ; thou'lt not
With how depriv'd a quality—O Regan, Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience.

know how to value her desert,
to scant her duty.

Say, how is that?
I cannot think my sister in the least to fall her obligation: if, sir, perchance,
I have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
on each ground, and to such wholesome ends her from all blame.

[Enter]
My curses on her!

O, sir, you are old;
you stand on the very verge of discretion, that discerns your state better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you, to our sister you do make return; [you,
you have wrong'd her, sir.

Ask her forgiveness!
but mark how this becomes the house:

[Kneeling] daughter, I confess that I am old;
and necessary: on my knees I beg your pardon, sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:

Never, Regan:
I abate me of half my train; [tongue,
I speak upon me; struck me with her dard vengeance of heaven fall regretful top! Strike her young bones, with lameness!

Fie, sir, fie!
blinding flames
corrupt eyes! Infect her beauty, and blast her pride!

[sun]
O the best gods! So will you wish the rash mood is on.

[on me]
No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse: the corrupted nature shall not give [curse;
to harshness: her eyes are fierce;

and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
my pleasures, to cut off my train, silly words, to scant my sizes,
my coming in: thou better know'st
of nature, bond of childhood, of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
and of the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
these endow'd.

Good sir, to the purpose.
Who put my man in the stocks?

[Tucket within]
What trumpet's that?

[Enter Oswald]
Oswald, my sister's; this approves
[come]
I shall soon be here.—Is your lady a slave, whose easy-borrow'd behold grace of her he follows.—
from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope [O heavens,
Thou didst not know of't. Who comes here?

[Enter Goneril]
If you do love old men, if your sweet away
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down, and take my part!— [beard!—

[To Con.] Art not ashamed to look upon this O Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?

All's not offence that indiscretion finds,
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides, you are too tough;
Will you yet hold?—How came my man in the stocks? [disorder]

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?
Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision

Which shall be needful for your entertainment.
Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd!

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity of the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her!

Why, the hot-blooded France, that downy took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg

To keep base life afoot.—Return with her!
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom. [Looking at Oswald,

Gon. At your choice, sir.
Lear. I prythee, daughter, do not make me
mad!

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell:
We'll no more meet, no more see one another:—
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my
daughter;

Or, rather, a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:
Mend when thou canst; be better at thy
leisure:

I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;

For those that mingle reason with your passion,

Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?

Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: what, fifty followers?

Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, with that both charge and danger
[one house,
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
[mine?
From those that she calls servants, or from

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chance'd to slack you,

We could control them. If you will come to (For now I spy a danger,) I entreat you [me,
To bring but five and twenty: to no more
Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my deposit—
But kept a reservation to be follow'd [aries;
With such a number. What, must I come to you

With five and twenty, Regan? said you so?

Reg. And speak't again, my lord: no more with me. [well-favour'd,

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look
When others are more wicked; not being the worst,

[go with thee:
Stands in some rank of praise.—[To Gon.] I'll Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord:

What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest
Are in the poorest thing superfluous: [beggars
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a
If only to go warm were gorgeous, [lady;
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st, [true need,— Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for You heavens, give me that patience, patience
I need.

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger!
O, let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural
I will have such revenges on you both, [bags,
That all the world shall—I will do such things,— [shall be

What they are, yet I know not; but they
The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep:—

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart

Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or ere I'll weep.—O fool, I shall go mad!
Or ere I'll weep.—O fool, I shall go mad!

Corn. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm.
[Exeunt Lear, Gloster, Kent, and Cordelia.]

Storm heard at a distance.
Reg. This house is little: the old man

Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself

And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive

But not one follower. So I am purposed.

Gon. Where is my lord of Gloster?

Reg. Follow'd the old man forth:—

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth:—

Re-enter Gloster. He is returned.

Glo. The king is in high rage. Whither is he gone?

Corn. He calls to horse; but will whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; no more

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means

stay.

Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and

Do sorely rattle; for many miles about

There's scarce a bush. O, air, to wild

Reg. The injuries that they themselves procure.

Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up

He is attended with a desperate hum to,

And what they may incense him to,

To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'twill wild night:

My Regan counsels well: come out of storm.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A Storm, with thunder and lightning.
Kent and Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded, like the weather,

unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the ivy of the Bids the wind blow the earth into the

Or swell the curled waters 'bove the

That things might change or cease; or white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with

Catch in their fury, and make

Strives in his little world of man

The to-and-fro-conflicting wind

This night, wherein the cub draws

The lion and the lolly-pinked

Keep their fur dry, unconnected

And bids what will take all.

Kent. None but the fool; who Gent. None but the fool; who

His heart-struck injuries. Sir, I do

Kent.

upon the warrant of my note,
 a dear thing to you. There is yet the face of it be cover'd cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall; (stars as who have not, that their great servants, who seem no to France the spies and speculations of our state; what hath been seen,
 in muffs and packings of the dukes;
 hard rein which both of them have the old kind king; or something [deeper, perchance, these are but furnish-
 [power it is, from France there comes a alter'd kingdom; who already,
 our negligence, have secret feet of our best ports, and are at point their open banner.—Now to you:
 your credit you dare build so far your speed to Dover, you shall find will thank you, making just report natural and bemoaning sorrow
 both cause to plain.
 a man of blood and breeding;
 in some knowledge and assurance,
 I will talk further with you. [offer

No, do not.
 out wall, open this purse, and take contains. If you shall see Cordelia, will tell you who that fellow is you do not know.—Pie on this storm!
 Give me your hand: have you no few words, but, to effect, more than we have found the king, (in which I'll this,) he that first lights on him, [Exit severally.

Another Part of the Heath.
 Storm continues.
 Enter Lear and Fool.
 Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks!
 Howl! blow!
 and hurricanes, spout
 Have drench'd our steeples, drown'd our towers and thought-executing fires,
 of oak-cleaving thunder-bolts, white head! And thou, all-shaking of the thick rotundity o' the world!
 moulds, all germens spill at once, this court holy-water in a dry
 more than this rain-water out o' door.

Good nurse, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing:
 here's a night pities neither wise men
 nor fools. [spout, rain!

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire!
 Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
 I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness:
 I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
 You owe me no subscription: then, let fall
 Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,

A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man:—
 But yet I call you servile ministers,
 That will with two pernicious daughters join
 Your high engender'd battles, 'gainst a head
 So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in, has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house,

Before the head has any,

The head and he shall touse;—

So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make,

Shall of a corn cry woe,

And turn his sleep to wake.

—for there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece;
 that's a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love night, [skies

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful
 Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,

And make them keep their caves: since I was man, [thunder

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid
 Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot Th' affliction, nor the fear. [carry

Lear. Let the great gods,
 That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads,

Find out their enemies now, Tremble, thou
 wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
 Unwhipp'd of justice: hide thee, thou bloody

hand;
 Thou perjur'd, and thou simular of virtue

Thou art incestuous: catiff, to pieces shake,
 That under covert and convenient seeming

Hast practis'd on man's life;—close pent-up guilts,

Rive your concealing continents, and cry
 These dreadful summoners grace.—I am a man

More sinn'd against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!
 Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;

Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest:

Repose you there; while I to this hard house,
 (More hard than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd,

Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in) return and force
Their scantied courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.— Come on, my boy: how dost, my boy? Art cold? [fellow]

I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come,
your hovel.—

Poor fool, and knave, I have one part in my That's sorry yet for thee. [heart

Fool. [Singing.]

He that has, and a little tiny wit,—

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,—

Must make content with his fortunes fit;

Though the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exit Lear and Kent.]

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a court-ezan.— I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:

When priests are more in word than matter;

When brewers mar their malt with water;

When nobles are their tailors' tutors;

No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors;

When every case in law is right;

No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;

When slanders do not live in tongues;

Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;

When usurers tell their gold i' the field;

And bawds and whores do build;

Then shall the realm of Albion

Come to great confusion:

Then comes the time, who lives to see't,

That going shall be us'd with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural! [him.]

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night;
—'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home: there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him and privily relieve him; go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king, my old master, must be relieved.
There is some strange thing toward, Edmund;
pray you, be careful. [Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke

Instantly know; and of that letter too.
This seems a fair deserving, and must
That which my father loses, no less
The younger rises, when the old doth fall.

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Hovel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord;

lord, enter:

The tyranny of the open night's too
For nature to endure.

Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Will break up.

Kent. I'd rather break mine own

my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis touch'd

Invades us to the skin; so 'tis to thee.

But where the greater malady is fix'd,

The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'ldst

But if thy flight lay toward the south,

Thou'ldst meet the bear i' the mouth

the mind's free,

The body's delicate: the tempest in

Doth from my senses take all feeling

Save what beats there.—Fill'd

Is it not as this mouth should bear

For lifting food to't?—But I will

home:—

No, I will weep no more.—In such a

To shut me out!—Pour on; I will

In such a night as this! O Jagan,

Your old kind father, whose frank

all,—

O, that way madness lies; let me

No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord,

Lear. Prythee, go in thyself own ease:

This tempest will not give me leave

On things would hurt me more.—

[To the Fool.] In, boy; go first.—

less poverty,—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and sleep.

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er

That bide the pelting of this pitiless

How shall your houseless heads

sides,

Your loop'd and window'd rags

From seasons such as these? O,

Too little care of this! Take you

Expose yourself to feel what you

That then mayst shake the super-

And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and

and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out.]

Fool. Come not in here, you

Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Will

Edg. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom,
What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Edg. Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?
Edg. What art thou that dost grumble

brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.— Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: says suum, mun, nunny. Dolphin my boy, my boy; sessa! let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.]
Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume.—Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated! Thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.
 —Off, off, you lendings!—Come, unbutton here.—[Tearing off his clothes.]

Pool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart,— a small spark, all the rest on's body cold.—
 Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet:
 he begins at curfew, and walks to the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

St. Withold footed thrice the old;
 He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
 Bid her alight,
 And her troth plight,
 And, aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?
Enter Gloster, with a torch.
Lear. What's he?
Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?
Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water-newt; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallots; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tything to tything, and stock'd, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear;—
 But nice, and rats, and such small deer,
 Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Glo. What, hath your grace no better company?
Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;
 Mado he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,
 That it doth hate what gets it.
Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard commands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard com-
 mands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard com-
 mands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard com-
 mands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard com-
 mands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard com-
 mands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
 To obey in all your daughter's hard com-
 mands:
 Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,

Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philoso-
What is the cause of thunder? [phoe.—

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned
What is your study? [Theban.—

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him to go once more, my
His wits begin to unsettle. [Lord;

Glo. Canst thou blame him?
His daughters seek his death:—ah, that good

Kent.—man!

He said it would be thus,—poor banish'd
Thou say'st the king grows mad: I'll tell thee,

friend,

I am almost mad myself: I had a son, [Life,
Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my

But lately, very lately, I lov'd him, friend—
No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,

[Storm continues.
The grief hath craz'd my wits.—What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir.—

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold. [Thee warm.

Glo. In, fellow, there, into the hovel: keep Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him

Glo. Take him you on. [Take the fellow.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. No words, no words;

Hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still,—Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death: but a provoking merit, set a-work
by a reproveable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens!
that this treason were not, or not I the detector! Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made me of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comfort-[To Corn.] I will persevere in my com-loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in an Outbuilding adjoining the Castle.

Enter Gloster, Lear, Kent, Fool, and

Glo. Here is better than the open air; it thankfully. I will piece out the with what addition I can; I will not from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits he way to his impatience.—The gods reward
kindness!

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me is an angler in the lake of darkness, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No, he's a yeoman, that has a man to his son; for he's a mad yeoman, sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with me,
Come whizzing in upon them.

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the
of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done: I will and straight.—

[To Edg.] Come, sit thou here, most
[To the Fool.] Thou, sapient sir, sit

Now, ye she foxes!

Edg. Look, where he stands and Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me.

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,
And she must not speak to me.

Why she dares not come over to me.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Lear;
voice of a nightingale. Hopdance!

Tom's belly for two white herrings,
black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand!

amaz'd:

Will you lie down and rest upon the Lear. I'll see their trial first.—

[To Edg.] Thou robed man of justice, [To the Fool.] And thou, his fool,

equity,

Bench by his side:—[To Kent.] You are commission,

Sit you too,

Let us deal justly.
 Thy sheep be in the corn;
 And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,
 Thy sheep shall take no harm.
 The cat is grey.
 Arra! her first; 'tis Goneril. I here
 Swear with before this honourable assembly,
 That I will not be the poor king her father.
 Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril? She cannot deny it.
 Ory you mercy, I took you for a joint-stocker. And here's another, whose warp'd tongue her heart is made on.—Stop her
 there!
 Arra, sword, fire!—Corruption in the palace, why hast thou let her 'scape?
 Bless thy five wits! [now,
 O pity!—sir, where is the patience
 you so oft have boasted to retain?
 [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much,
 That I fear my counterfeiting.
 The little dogs and all,
 Whine, Blanche, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark
 at me.
 Tom will throw his head at them.—
 O, you curs!
 O my mouth or black or white,
 With that poisons if it bite;
 Mad as a greyhound, mongrel grim,
 Or spaniel, brach or lynx,
 Or tumbler, or trundel-tail,—
 You would make them weep and wail;
 For, with throwing thus my head,
 You leap the hatch, and all are fled.
 O, do, do, do. Souse! Come, march to your old fairs, and market-towns.—Poor my horn is dry.
 Then let them anatomize Regan; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any of your nature, that makes these hard hearts?
 [To Edgar.] You, sir, I entertain you for all my hundred; only I do not like the show of your garments: you will say, they are stolen stiles; but let them be changed.
 Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest a while.
 Make no noise, make no noise; draw curtains: so, so, so: we'll go to supper i'
 the hall. And I'll go to bed at noon.
 Re-enter Gloucester.
 Come hither, friend: where is the king?
 Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone. [thy arms;
 Good friend, I pray thee, take him in a little ready; lay him in't,
 And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet welcome and protection. Take up thy

If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,
 With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
 Stand in assured loss: take up, take up;
 And follow me, that will to some provision
 Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:—
 This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken
 Which, if convenience will not allow, [senses, Stand in hard cure.—[To the Fool.] Come,
 help to bear thy master;
 Thou must not stay behind.

Glo. Come, come, away.
 [Exeunt Kent, Gloucester, and the Fool, bearing away Lear.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woos,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
 Who alone suffers, suffers most i' the mind,
 Leaving free things and happy shows behind;
 But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip, [ship,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellow-
 How light and portable my pain seems now,
 When that which makes me bend, makes the king bow;

He childed, as I father'd!—Tom, away!
 Mark the high noises; and thyself bewray,
 When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,

In thy just proof, repeals and reconciles thee.
 What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the
 king!

Lurk, lurk. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloucester's Castle.
 Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed.—Seek out the traitor Gloster. [Exeunt some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.
 Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.— Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister:— farewell, my lord of Gloucester.

Enter Oswald.
 How now! Where's the king? [hence:]

Osw. My lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him
 Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
 Hot questrists after him, met him at gate;
 Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,

Are gone with him toward Dover; where they boast

To have well-armed friends.
 Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—

[Exeunt Goneril and Edmund.

Go seek the traitor Gloster,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exeunt other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not control.—Who's there?
The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with Gloster.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What mean your graces? Good my friends, consider [friends,

You are my guests: do me no foul play,

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.

Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor!

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.

Corn. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find—

[Regan plucks his beard.

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly
To pluck me by the beard. [done

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughty lady.

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin, [host:

Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France? [truth,

Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the Corn. And what confederacy have you with late footed in the kingdom? [the traitors

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king? Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that. [stand the course,

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs. [sister

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endur'd, would have

And quench'd the starved fires: [buoy'd up,

Yet, poor old heart, he help the heavens to rain. [time,

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern
Thou shouldst have said, "Good porter, turn the key,"

All cruels else subscrib'd; but I shall see
The wing'd vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See it shall thou never—hold the chair.—

Upon these eyes of mine I'll set my foot
Glo. He that will think to live till he be old

Give me some help!—O cruel!—O ye gods!
[Gloster's eyes are plucked out.

Reg. One side will mock another;
Corn. If you see vengeance,—

1 Serv. Hold your hand, for
I have served you ever since I was a child.

But better service have I never done you
Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you
If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What Corn. My villain!

1 Serv. Nay then, come on, and take chance of anger.

[Draws. They fight. Cornwall is Reg. Give me thy sword.—A piece of up thus!

[Takes a sword from another servant
and strikes him.

1 Serv. O, I am slain!—My lord, you one eye left.

To see some mischief on him,—O!

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it—vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—O my son Edmund!

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous
Thou call'st on him that hates thee!

That made the overture of thy treason!

Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. Then Edgar was abus'd.—
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper

Reg. Go thrust him out at gate;
him small

His way to Dover.—How is't, my lord?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt;
lady.—

Turn out that eyeless villain;—
Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed

Untimely comes this hurt: Give me [Exit Cornwall, led by the Servants and lead him out.

2 Serv. I'll never care what wicked
If this man come to good.

3 Serv. And, in the end, meet the old earl Women will all turn monsters.

2 Serv. Let's follow the old earl To lead him where he would; his

madness
Allows itself to anything.

3 Serv. Go thou: I'll fetch some
To apply to his bleeding face.

help him!

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Yet better thus, and known to be con-[worst, will condemn'd and flatter'd. To be most dejected thing of fortune, in experience, lives not in fear:
change is from the best;
returns to laughter. Welcome, then, substantial air, that I embrace!
wretch, that thou hast blown unto the
[there?— thing in thy blasts.—But who comes Enter Gloucester, led by an Old Man. poorly led?—World, world, O
[thee,
thy strange mutations make us hate not yield to age.
O my good lord, I have been tenant, and your father's tenant, these years.
Away, get thee away; good friend, be-
[eyes;
fects can do me no good at all;
they may hurt.
Alack, sir, you cannot see your [eyes;
I have no way, and therefore want no
when I saw: full oft 'tis seen, secure us, and our mere defects commodities.—Ah, dear son Edgar,
of thy abused father's wrath!
I had live to see thee in my touch,
[Aside.] O gods! Who's there?
[I am at the worst?] Who is't can say,
more than e'er was.
[Tis poor mad Tom.
And worse I may be yet: the
[This is the worst."
Fellow, where goest?
Is it a beggar-man?
[beg.
has some reason, else he could not made me think a man a worm: my son into my mind; and yet my mind these scarce friends with him: I have learn'd more since.
[wanton boys, are we to the gods,—
[Aside.]
[How should this be?— the trade that must play fool to sorrow, himself and others.—[To Glo.] Bless thee, the naked fellow?
Ay, my lord.
Ay, my lord, get thee gone; if, for

Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I' the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he is mad,
Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone. [I have,

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parcel' that Come on't what will. [Exit.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow,—

Edg. Poor Tom is a-cold.—[Aside.] I cannot daub it further.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—[To Glo.]
Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom had been scared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbiddance, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibberti-gibbet, of mopping and mowing,—who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women.
So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, [still]

Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man,

That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power

quickly;
So distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough.—Dost thou know
Edg. Ay, master. [Dover?

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,
With something rich about me: from that

I shall no leading need. [place
Edg. Give me thy arm;

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exit.

SCENE II.—*Before the Duke of Albany's
Palace.*

*Enter Goneril and Edmund; Oswald meeting
them.*

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband [master?

Not met us on the way.—Now, where's your Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd.

I told him of the army that was landed;

He smil'd at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was, "The worse:" of Gloucester's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side
out:—

What most he should dislike, seems pleasant
What like, offensive.

Gon. [To Edmund.] Then, shall you go no
It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs,
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on this way

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my Hasten his masters, and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech;

Decline your head: this kiss, if it dare speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester!

[Exit Edmund.]

O, the difference of man and man!

To thee a woman's services are due:

My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord.

[Exit.]

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face.—I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contemns its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile, seem vile:

Filths savour but themselves. What have Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd!
A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,

Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?

A man, a prince, by him so benefited!

If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come,

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering: that not knew'st,

Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd

Ere they have done their mischief.

thy drum!

France spread his tanners in our
With plumed helm thy alayor is Whilst thou, a moral fool, still'st all your

"Alack, why does he so?"

Alb. Proper deformity seems not in the soul.

So horrid, as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou chang'd and self-corred for shame.

Be-monster not thy feature. Were?

To let these hands obey my blood,

They are apt enough to dislocate and break

Thy flesh and bones:—how'er thou art

A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news!

Mess. O, my good lord, the duke of Slain by his servant, going to put on

The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes?

Mess. A servant that he bred, touch'd

Oppos'd against the act, bending his

To his great master; who, therat

Flew on him, and amongst them

dead;

But not without that harmful stroke

Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you

You justicers, that these our

So speedily can vengeance!—But, O

Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both.

This letter, madam, craves a speed

'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like

But being widow, and my Gloucester

May all the building in my fancy

Upon my hateful life: another way

This news is not so tart.—[To Mess.]

and answer.

Alb. Where was his son, when take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. No, my good lord; I

Alb. Knows he the wickedness

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas against him:

And quit the house, on purpose that Might have the freer course.

Alb. To thank thee for the love thou

king,

And to revenge thine eyes—

Tell me what more thou know'st.

SCENE III.—The French Camp.

Enter Kent and Gloucester.

Kent. Why the king of France

denly gone back, know you the

Gen. Something he left imperfect in the [which] since his coming forth is thought of;
to the kingdom so much fear and
danger,
his personal return was most requir'd

Whom hath he left behind him,
[Le Far.]
The Mareschal of France, Monsieur Did your letters pierce the queen to demonstration of grief?
Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence,
and then an ample tear trill'd down her delicate cheek: it seem'd she was a queen passion: who, most rebel-like,
to be king o'er her.

O, then it mov'd her.
patience and sorrow [seen] express her goodliest. You have and rain at once: her smiles and tears
a better way: those happy smilets, play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to
know
from guests were in her eyes; which parted from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief, to be a rarity most belov'd, if all to become it.

Made she no verbal question?
Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of "father"
forth, as if it press'd her heart;
sisters!—Shame of ladies!
sisters! sisters!—What? & the storm!
the night?
any water from her heavenly eyes, honour moisten'd: then away she started with grief alone.

It is the stars,
our self mate and mate could not begot different issues. You spoke not with her [since?]
Was this before the king return'd?
No, since.
the poor distress'd Lear's
in the town,
sometime, in his better tune, remembers that we are come about, and by no means red to see his daughter.

Why, good sir?
his own unkindness
scold'd her from his benediction, turn'd her carnalities, gave her dear rights his dog-hearted daughters,—these things and so venomously, that burning shame him from Cordelia.

Gen. Alack, poor gentleman!
Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gen. 'Tis so, they are afoot. [Lear,
Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master
And leave you to attend him: some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up a while;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Tent.

Enter Cordelia, Physician, and Soldiers.
Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why, he was met even
now

As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds,
With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-
flowers,

Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye.—[Exit an Officer.]

What can man's wisdom,
In restoring his hereav'd sense?
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpuddish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant and remediate [him]!

In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek, for Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.
Mess. News, madam;
The British powers are marching hitherward.
Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands

In expectation of them.—O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France [pity'd].
My mourning, and importun'd tears, hath
No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right,
Soon may I hear and see him! [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Regan and Oswald.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Osw. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?
Osw. Madam, with much ado;

Your sister is the better soldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home!

Osw. No, madam.

Reg. What night import my sister's letter
to him?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter. [out.]

It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being To let him live: where he arrives he moves All hearts against us; Edmund, I think, is gone, In pity of his misery, to despatch His nighted life; moreover, to desery The strength o' the enemy. [my letter.]

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay The ways are dangerous. [with us.]

Osw. I may not, madam: My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you

Transport her purposes by word? Belike Something—I know not what:—I'll love thee Let me unseal the letter. [much;]

Osw. Madam, I had rather—

Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;

I am sure of that: and, at her late being here, She gave strange eyeliads, and most speaking looks [bosom.]

To noble Edmund. I know you are of her Osw. I, madam? [know it;]

Reg. I speak in understanding: you are, I Therefore I do advise you, take this note:

My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd; And more convenient is he for my hand,

Than for your lady's:—you may gather more. If you do find him, pray you, give him this;

And when your mistress hears thus much from you,

I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her. So, fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor, Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Osw. Would I could meet him, madam! I What party I do follow. [would show]

Reg. Fare thee well. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter Gloster, and Edgar dressed like a peasant.

Glo. When shall I come to the top of that same hill? [labour.]

Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we

Glo. Methinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep;

Hark, do you hear the sea?

Glo. No, truly.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow By your eyes' anguish. [imperfect]

Glo. So may it be, indeed.

Methinks thy voice is altered; and thou speak'st

In better phrase and matter than thou didst.

Edg. You're much deceiv'd; in nothing am

But in my garments. [I chang'd]

Glo. Methinks you're better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still.—How fearful

And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low! The crows, and choughs, that wing the way air,

Show scarce so gross as beetles! Half way Hangs one that gathers squalid trade!

Methinks he seems no bigger than his trade! The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,

Appear like mice; and you tall men, that walk Diminish'd to her cock; her cock, a lamp

Almost too small for sight: the muffled surge,

That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes, Cannot be heard so high.—I'll look no more;

Lest my brain turn, and the deficient topple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you think fit.

Edg. Give me your hand: you are within a foot

Of the extreme verge: for all behold Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, is another punishment; Well worth a poor man's taking:—fare you prosper it with thee! Go thou first, and bid me farewell, and let me hear thee

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir. With all my heart.

Glo. Why I do trouble thee is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods!

This world I do renounce, and, in your Shake patiently my great affliction off;

If I could bear it longer, and not fall To quarrel with your great oppos'd will,

My snuff, and loathed part of nature, Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, let me

Now, fellow, fare thee well. Gone, sir:—fare you well.

Edg. [Gloster leaps, and falls.]

[Aside.] And yet I know not how to yield to the thief: had he been

thought,

By this, had thought been past. [To Glo.] Ho, you sir! friend—fare you well.

Thus might he pass indeed:—yet he

What are you, sir? Away, and let me

Glo. Hadst thou been night but feathers, air,

So many fathom down precipitating Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg:—but breathes;

Hast heavy substance; bland'st not Ten masts at each make not the ship

Which thou hast perpendicularly in Thy life's a miracle. Speak, yet

Glo. But have I fallen, or no? Edg. From the dread summit of Look up a-height;—the shrill cannot be seen or heard: do but

Alack, I have no eyes.—
wretchedness depriv'd that benefit, and itself by death? 'Twas yet some
comfort,
and misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
and frustrate his proud will.

Give me your arm:
Feel you your legs?
Too well, too well.

[You stand.
This is above all strangeness, the crown o' the cliff, what thing was parted from you?

[that
A poor unfortunate beggar.
As I stood here below, methought his
eyes
two full moons; he had a thousand whok'd and way'd like the enridg'd was some bend; therefore, thou happy
father,
the dearest gods, who make them
humours
a responsibilities, have preserv'd thee.

I do remember now: henceforth I'll behold, till it do cry out itself, [bear though, enough, and die. That thing you speak of,
I think it for a man: often 'twould say,
and, the bend; he led me to that
place.

Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?

Anticlimax dressed with flowers.
This comes will ne'er accommodate comes thus.

No, they cannot touch me for coining the king himself.

O, thou side-piercing sight!
Nature's above art in that respect.
Your press-money. That fellow his how like a crow-keeper; draw his piece.—Look, look, a mouse!

—There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it gaunt.—Bring up the brown bills.—O,
give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

—Give the world.
—Give the world.
—Give the world.

I pardon that man's life.—What was thy Adultery?—[cause?—
Thou shalt not die: die for adultery? No:
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell! for I lack soldiers.—
Behold you simpering dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;

The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't
With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit, Beneath is all the fiends; there's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—He, he, he,
pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination:
there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand! [tally.
Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mor-Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world [me]
Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know
Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squint at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge: mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. [Aside.] I would not take this from
And my heart breaks at it. [report; it is,
Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes?
Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse!
Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light; yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.
Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how your justice rails upon you simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-andy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.—
Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozenor.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin
with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless break ;
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
None does offend, none,—I say none ; I'll able 'em :

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes ;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now,
now, now ;

Pull off my boots :—harder, harder :—so.

Edg. [Aside.] O, matter and impertinency Reason in madness ! [Exit]

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

I know thee well enough ; thy name is Gloucester :
Thou must be patient ; we came crying hither :
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,

We wawl and cry. I will preach to thee :

Glo. Alack ! alack the day ! [mark me.]

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools.—This a good
It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe [block] ?—
A troop of horse with felt : I'll put it in proof ;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill ! [law,

Enter Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gen. O, here he is : lay hand upon him.—
You most dear daughter— [Sir,

Lear. No rescue ! What, a prisoner ! I am even

The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well ;
You shall have ransom. Let me have a sur-
I am cut to the brains. [Gen.]

Gen. You shall have anything.

Lear. No seconds ! All myself !

Why, this would make a man a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and laying autumn's dust.

Gen. Good sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely, [joyful :
Like a smug bridegroom. What ! I will be Come, come ; I am a king, my masters, know you that !

Gen. You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa. [Exit. Attendants follow.]

Gen. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, [daughter,

Past speaking of in a king !—Thou hast one
Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir !

Gen. Sir, speed you : what's your will ?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward ?

Gen. Most sure, and vulgar : every one Which can distinguish sound. [Hears that,

Edg. But, by your favour,

How near's the other army ?

Gen. Near, and on speedy foot ; the main Stands on the hourly thought, [descri

Edg.

Gen. Though that the queen on Her army is mov'd on.

Edg.

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my soul
from me ;

Let not my worse spirit tempt me
To die before you please !

Edg.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you ?

Edg. A most poor man, made lame
fortune's blows ;

Who, by the art of known and feeling
Am pregnant to good pity.

I'll lead you to some blinding. [Hearty thanks.

Glo.

The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot !

Enter Oswald.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize ! Most That eyeless head of thine was last flesh

To raise my fortunes.—Thou old
traitor,

Briefly thyself remember :—the award
That must destroy thee.

Glo.

Now let thy friendly
Put strength enough to it. [Edgar

Osw. Wherefore, traitor ?

Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor ?
Lest that infection of his fortune take

Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Ch'ill not let go, sir, without

Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your way poor folk pass. And ch'ill not let go ger'd out of my life, 'twould not be long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come the old man ; keep out, che vor ye, whether your costard or my hollow harder. Ch'ill be plain with you.

Osw. Out, dunghill !

Edg. Ch'ill pick your teeth, sir, with matter for your foins.

[They fight ; and Edgar kills Oswald.]

Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me.

Take my purse :

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body
And give the letters, which thou hast

To Edmund earl of Gloucester ; seek him out Upon the British party :—O, with

Edg. I know thee well ; a service

As dutious to the vices of thy mind
As badness would desire. What

Glo.

Edg. Sit you down, father ; let's see Let's see his pockets : these letters speaks of,

May be my friends.—He's dead,
He had no other deathman.—

Leave, gentle war ; and, master,

not :

our enemies' minds, we'd rip their papers, is more lawful.
[Hearts;
Let our reciprocal vows be renew'd: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is no more, if he return the conqueror: then the prisoner, and his bed my goal; from that warmth whereof deliver me, and the place for your labour.

"Four (wife, so I would say)
"affectionate servant,
"GONERIL."
"affecting space of woman's will!
upon her virtuous husband's life;
exchange, my brother!—Here, in the winds,
I'll take up, the post unsanctified mercenary lechers: and, in the mature
time,
this ungracious paper strikes the sight of the death-practic'd duke: for him 'tis well,
of thy death and business I can tell.
The king is mad: how still is my vile

state;
I stand up, and have ingenious feeling of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:
I should my thoughts be sever'd from my pride.
Now, by wrong imaginations, lose knowledge of themselves.

"Methinks, I hear the beaten drum:
father, I'll bestow you with a friend, [Exitant.

ACT VII.—A Tent in the French Camp.
a bed, asleep: Physician, Gentleman, and others attending.

Enter Cordelia and Kent.
O thou good Kent! how shall I live without thy goodness? My life will be too short, to be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-reporting go with the modest truth; [paid.
nor clipp'd, but so.

Be better suited;
Pardon, dear madam;
I make it, that you know me not,
and I think meet.

Then be't so, my good lord.—[To the Madam, sleeps still.
O you kind gods,
stand and jarring senses, O, wind up this child-changed father!

So please your majesty,
wake the king; he hath slept
long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed

I the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?
Gen. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Phy. Be by, good madam, when we do
I doubt not of his temperance. [awake him:
Cor. Very well.

Phy. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repairs those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds?

To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder in the most terrible and nimble stroke (der!
Of quick, cross lightning! to watch (poor perdu!)

With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog, Though he had bit me, should have stood that
night

Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!

'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to

Phy. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest. [him.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? [the grave:—

Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out o'
Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know; when did

Cor. Still, still, far wide. [you die?

Phy. He's scarce awake: let him alone
a while. [Fair day-light!—

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?— I am mightily abus'd.—I should even die with pity, [say.—

To see another thus.—I know not what to
I will not swear these are my hands;—let's see;
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd
Of my condition!

Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me:—
No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me:

I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more or

And, to deal plainly, [Dess;
I fear I am not in my perfect mind. [man;

Methinks I should know you, and know this Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not [at me;

Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh

For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am!

Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, 'Faith, I pray, weep not:

If you have poison for me, I will drink it.

I know you do not love me; for your sisters

Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:

You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me. [rage,

Phy. Be comforted, good madam: the great

You see, is cur'd in him: and yet it is danger

To make him even o'er the time he has lost.

Desire him to go in; trouble him no more,

Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me:

Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

[*Exeunt Lear, Cordelia, Physician,
and Attendants.*

Gen. Holds it true, sir, that the duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gen. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloster.

Gen. They say Edgar, his banish'd son, is with the earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

Gen. The arbitrement is like to be bloody.
Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,

Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought.
[Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, Edmund, Regan, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold;

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course: he's full of alteration,
And self-reproving;—bring his constant pleasure. [To an Officer, who goes out.

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's
To the forefended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have conjoint

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call
Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her; dear
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not:
She, and the duke her husband.

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.
Gen. [Aside.] I had rather lose the duke

than that sister

Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be Sir, this I hear,—the king is come to

daughter,

With others, whom the rigour of our state

Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not

honest,

I never yet was valiant: for this battle

It toucheth us, as France invades our

Not holds the king, with others, whom

Most just and heavy causes make opposi-

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this?

Gen. Combine together 'gainst the

For these domestic and particular truth

Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's then de-

With the ancient of war on our proceed

Edm. I shall attend you presently

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gen. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray

Gen. [Aside.] O, ho! I know the

Alb. [Aloud.] I will go.

As they are going out enter Edgar, and

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech

Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.

[Exeunt Edmund, Regan, and Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edg. Before you fight the battle,

letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet

For him that brought it: wretched

seem,

I can produce a champion that will

What is avouch'd there. If you

Your business of the world hath

And machination ceases. Fortune

Alb. Stay till I have read the Edg.

When time shall serve, let but the

And I'll appear again.

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy's in view;

powers.

Here is the guess of their true

forces

By diligent discovery;—but your

is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;

jealous of the other, as the stung adder. Which of them shall I take?
one! or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd.

Will remain alive: to take the widow,
poor wretch, makes mad, her sister Goneril;
and I shall I carry out my side, and being alive. Now, then, we'll [done,] allowance for the battle; which being done, who would be rid of him, devise how to take off. As for the mercy he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,— little does, and they within our power, never see his pardon; for my state on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.]

II.—A Field between the two Camps.

within. Enter, with drum and Edm., Lear, Cordelia, and their forces;
Edm. Enter Edgar and Gloucester.

Now, father, take the shadow of this your good host; pray that the right may return to you again, [thrive:] and you comfort.

Grace go with you, sir!
[Exit Edgar. Re-enter

Edm. Away, old man, give me thy hand, thou hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en;

thy hand; come on. [here,

What, in all thoughts again? Men must endure
long patience, even as their coming hither:

Come on.

And that's true too.
[Exit.]

III.—The British Camp, near Dover.
in conquest, with drum and colours,
Edm., Lear and Cordelia, as prisoners;
Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Some officers take them away; good with best meaning. We are not the first, oppressed king, am I cast down;

not one these daughters, and these sisters? [sisters?]
no, no, no, no. Come, let's away to some will sing like birds i' the cage:

some dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel

And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them
too,—

Who loses, and who wins; who's in, who's out;
And take upon's the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sets of great ones,
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.
Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee? [heaven,

He that parts us shall bring a brand from
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
The conjurers shall devour them, flesh and fell,
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Come. [Exeunt Lear and Cordelia, guarded.]

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark, Take thou this note; [Giving a paper.] go,
follow them to prison:

One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: know thou this,—that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded [ment
Does not become a sword:—thy great employ-
Will not bear question; either say thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means.

Capt. I'll do't, my lord.
Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou'st done.

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down. [outs;]

Capt. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried
If it be man's work, I will do it. [Exit.]

Flourish. Enter Albany, Goneril, Regan, Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain, [captives
And fortune led you well: you have the
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you, so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes,
Which do command them. With him I sent
the queen;

My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear Where you shall hold your session. At this time [friend;]

We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness:—
The question of Cordelia and her father Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,

Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compares the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye, that told you so, look'd but askint.
Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer

From a full-flowing stomach.—General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine;
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.
Reg. [To Edmund.] Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest, [Pointing to Gon.] This gilded serpent.—For your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,

And I, her husband, contradict your banns.

If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster:—let the trumpet sound:

If none appear to prove, upon thy person,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; [Throwing down a glove.]

I'll prove it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O sick!

Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust poison.

Edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a glove.] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,
On him, on you, (who not?) I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho! a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; be
soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharges.

Reg. My sickness grows upon
Enter a Herald.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my [Exit Reg.]

Come hither, herald,—let the trumpet
And read out this.

Off. Sound, trumpet! [A trumpet
Herald reads.]

"If any man of quality, or degree,
The list of the army, will maintain Edmund, supposed earl of Gloster, to be a manifest traitor, let him appear at the sound of the trumpet; he is bold in his own [Edm. Sound!]
[Her. Again!]
[Her. Again!]

[Trumpet answers]
Enter Edgar, armed, preceded by a [Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he Upon this call of the trumpet. What art
[Her.]

Your name! your quality! and why you
This present summons!

Edg. Know, my name is
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and eaten out
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary Edg. What's he that speaks for earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself:—what say'st thou to [Edg.]

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here I
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honour
My oath, and my profession: I swear Maugre thy strength, youth, place,
eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and bloody
Thy valour and thy heart,—thou art
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious
And, from the extremest upward
head,

To the descent and dust below the
A most toad-spotted traitor. For This sword, this arm, and my heart bent

To prove upon thy heart, where'thine
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should not
But, since thy outside looks so fair and
And that thy tongue some 'scintillation
breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well
By rule of knighthood, I should not Back do I toss these treasons to my
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm'd Which,—for they yet glance by, bruise,—

word of mine shall give them instant way, they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets,
speak!

Edmund falls.
They fight. Save him, save him!

This is practice, Gloucester:
thou wast not bound to thou art not vanquish'd,

and beguill'd.

Shut your mouth, dame;
this paper shall I stop it:—hold, sir;

than any name, read thine own
—

lady; I perceive you know it.
[Gives the letter to Edmund.

say, if I do,—the laws are mine, not straight me for't? [thine:]

Most monstrous!
Ask me not what I know.

[Exit.
After her; she's desperate; govern

[To an Officer, who goes out.
What have you charg'd me with, that

I done;
much more; the time will bring out, and so am I.—But what art thou, this fortune on me! If thou'rt noble,

Let's exchange charity.
I am more than thou art, Edmund;

Edgar, and thy father's son,
and of our pleasant vices

elements to plague us;
and vicious place where thee he got,

Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true;
has come full circle; I am here.

though the very gait did prophesy
—I must embrace thee:

split my heart, if ever I Worthy!

Worthy prince, I know't:
have you hid yourself? [father:]

By pursuing them, my lord.—Last a [burst:]

is told, O that my heart would proclamation to escape, [ness:]

me so near, (O, our lives' sweet-
the pain of death would hourly die, die at once!) taught me to shift

—I must assume a semblance father with his bleeding rings, and in this habit

new lost: became his [despair:]

for him, and'd him from half-hour past, when I was arm'd;

though hoping, of this good success,
bleeding, and from first to last

Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart, (Alack, too weak the conflict to support!)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good: but speak you

on;
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding

Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting,
His grief grew piteous, and the strings of life

Began to crack; twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him, trans'd.

Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise

Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife
Gent. Help, help, O help!

Edg. What kind of help?
Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?
Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—O, she's dead!
Alb. Who dead? speak, man. [sister]

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her
By her is poison'd; she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both: all Now marry in an instant. [three]

Edg. Here comes Kent.
Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead!— [trample,

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us

Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.
Enter Kent.

O, is this he!

The time will not allow the compliment,
Which every manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night:

Is he not here?
Alb. Great thing of us forgot!

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Seest thou this object, Kent? [Cordelia]—

Kent. Alack, why thus?
[The bodies of Conrail and Regan are brought in.

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd

The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so.—Cover their faces, [to do,
Edm. I pant for life:—some good I mean Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
 Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
 Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:—
 Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run!
Edg. To whom, my lord?—Who has the office? send

Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword,
 Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.
[Exit Edgar.]

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife
 To hang Cordelia in the prison, and [and me
 To lay the blame upon her own despair,
 That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her!—Bear him
 hence a while. [Edmund is borne off.]

*Enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms;
 Edgar, Officer, and others.*

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men of stones!
 Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vault should crack.—She's gone for ever!—

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
 She'd dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass;
 If that her breath shall mist or stain the stone,
 Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promised end?
Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall, and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,
 It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
 That ever I have felt.

Kent. [Kneeling.] O, my good master!

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! [ever!—

I might have sav'd her; now, she's gone for Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!

What is't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in woman.—

I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lord, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow?

I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion

I would have made them skip: I am old now,
 And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you? [straight.

Mine eyes are not o' the best:—I'll tell you

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and
 One of them we behold. [hated,

Lear. This is a dull sight:—are you not Kent?

Kent. The same,
 Your servant Kent. Where is your servant
 Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you.
 He'll strike, and quickly too:—He's a rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord: I am the straight.

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of all.

Lear. Have follow'd your sad steps.

Kent. You are welcome.

Kent. Nor no man else.—All's but a dark, and deadly;

Your eldest daughters have fordone their
 And desperately are dead. Ay, so I think.

Lear. He knows not what he says;—

That we present us to him. Very loudly.

Edg. Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a better thing.

Edg. You lords, and noble friends, know our
 What comfort to this great decay may come Shall be applied: for us, we will not
 During the life of this old majesty,
 To him our absolute power:—[To Kent,
 Kent.] you, to your rights;
 With boot, and such addition as your Have more than merited.—All but taste
 The wages of their virtue, and all for
 The cup of their deservings.—O, you Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd!
 no life!
 Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
 And thou no breath at all? Thou Never, never, never, never, never,
 Pray you, undo this button: let me
 sir.—
 Do you see this? Look on her;
 Look there, look there!
Edg. He faints!—My lord, my lord,
Kent. Break, heart; I pray thee, look Edg. Look on her;
Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, he
 he hates him,
 That would upon the rack of this tough
 Stretch him out longer. He is dead,
Edg. He is dead,
Kent. The wonder is he hath
 He but usurp'd his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence;—
 business
 Is general woe. [To Kent,
 Friends of my soul, you
 Rule in this realm, and the same Kent. I have a journey, sir, ere My master calls me, I must not Alb. The weight of this sad time
 obey,
 Speak what we feel, not what we
 The oldest hath borne many young,
 Shall never see so much, nor live so [Kneeling, with a

CYMBELINE, KING OF BRITAIN.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Cymbeline, King of Britain.
Queen, Mother to the Queen by a former Husband.
Posthumus, a gentleman, Husband of Morgan.
Belarius, a banished Lord, disguised under the names of Polydore and Cadwal, supposed Sons to Belarius.
Imogen, Daughter to Cymbeline, disguised under the names of Polydore and Cadwal, supposed Sons to Belarius.
Philario, Friend to Posthumus, } Italians.
Philario, Friend to Philario, } General of the Roman Forces.

A Roman Captain.
Two British Captains.
Pisanio, Servant to Posthumus.
Cornelius, a Physician.
Two Lords of Cymbeline's Court.
Two Gentlemen of the same.
Two Gaolers.
Queen, Wife to Cymbeline. [Queen.
Imogen, Daughter to Cymbeline by a former Helen, Woman to Imogen.
Lords, Ladies, Roman Senators, Tribunes, Apparitions, a Soothsayer, Musicians, Officers, Captains, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

Britain. The Garden of Cym-beline's Palace.
Enter two Gentlemen.

You do not meet a man but frowns;
As does the heavens, than our courtiers
But what's the matter?

His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom he married, hath refus'd herself a poor but worthy gentleman: she's banish'd; she imprison'd: all sorrow: though, I think, the king at very heart.

None but the king?
That hath lost her, too: so is the [courtier, though they wear their faces to the bent king's looks, hath a heart that is not of the thing they scowl at.

And why so?
That hath mis'd the princess is
and for report: and he that hath her,
that married her,—alack, good man!— therefore banish'd,) is a creature such as will through the regions of the earth be like, there would be something that should compare. I do not think

So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gen. You speak him far.
1 Gen. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

2 Gen. What's his name, and birth?
1 Gen. I cannot delve him to the root: his
father

Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan;
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success;
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o' the time, Died with their swords in hand; for which their father

(Then old and fond of issue) took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus
Leonatus; [chamber:

Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-
Puts to him all the learnings that his time Could make him the receiver of; which he
As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd; [took,
And in his spring became a harvest: liv'd in court

(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lov'd: [nature,

A sample to the youngest; to the more
A glass that fented them: and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price

Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

2 Gen. I honour him,
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell
Is she sole child to the king? [me,

1 Gen. His only child.
He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stolen; and to this hour no guess in Which way they went. [knowledge

2 Gen. How long is this ago?

1 Gen. Some twenty years.

2 Gen. That a king's children should be so convey'd!

So slackly guarded! and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1 Gen. Hows'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gen. I do well believe you. [gentleman,

1 Gen. We must forbear: here comes the
The queen, and princess. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter,

After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,

So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good,
You lean'd unto his sentence, with what
Your wisdom may inform you. [patience

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:—
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections; though the
king

Hath charg'd you should not speak together.
[Exit Queen.

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,

I something fear my father's wrath; but no—
(Always reserv'd my holy duty) what [thing
His rage can do on me: you must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth:

My residence in Rome at one Posthumus's
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my
And with mine eyes I'll drink the wine
Though ink be made of gall.

Queen. [Re-enter Queen. He bid, I pray
If the king come, I shall incur I know
How much of his displeasure.—[Aside]

I'll move him

To walk this way: I never do him wrong
But he does buy my injuries, so be it Pays dear for my offences.

Post. Should we be talking
As long a term as yet we have to live
The loathsomeness to depart would grow?

Imo. Nay, stay a little:

Were you but riding forth to air your Such parting were too petty. Look how This diamond was my mother's!

But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how! I shall
You gentle gods, give me but this [I shall
And sear up my embracements from a
With bonds of death!—Remain, remain here [Putting on the crown]

While sense can keep it on! And, I fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss; so in our
I still win of you: for my sake, wear it
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet on her arm] O the Imo.

When shall we see again?

Post. Enter Cymbeline and Iach Cym. Thou basest thing, away!
from my sight!

If after this command thou transgress
With thy unworthiness, thou shalt Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods preserve
And bless the good remainder of thy
I am gone.

Imo. There cannot be a place
More sharp than this is. O disloyal
Cym.

That shouldst repair my youth, I have
A year's age on me!

Imo. I have Harm not yourself with your
I am senseless of your wrath;

Subdues all pangs; all fears;
Cym. That I may
Imo. Past hope, and in despair, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had
Imo. O bless'd, that I may
And did avoid a puttock.

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar
A seat for baseness.

No; I rather added

O thou vile one!

Sir,

your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus;
and him as my play-fellow; and he is worthy any woman; overbuys me
the sun he pays.

What, art thou mad?

Would I were

thy daughter, and my Leonatus thy neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.

Thou foolish thing!

you have done
my command. Away with her,

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Re-enter Queen.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.—Have I hurt him? [his patience.]

2 Lord. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as

1 Lord. Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having;
gave you some ground.

2 Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

2 Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground. [and refuse me!]

Clo. And that she should love this fellow,

2 Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. You'll go with us!

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Britain. A Room in Cymbe-line's Palace.

Enter Imogen and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores of the haven,

And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,

As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. It was, His queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wad'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!

And that was all!

Pis. No, madam; for so long

As he could make me with his eye or ear Distinguish him from others, he did keep

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and starts of his mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
crack'd them, but

To look upon him; till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle;
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good
When shall we hear from him? [Pisanio, Pis. Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts and such; or I could make him
The shes of Italy should not betray [swear Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him, [tough,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at mid-
To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my
father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the Shakes all our buds from growing. [worth,

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them
I will attend the queen. [despatch'd.—

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Rome. An Apartment in Philario's
House.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tailed by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And, then, his banishment.—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those, that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. [Enter Posthumus.] Here comes the Briton; let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with good of your knowing, to a stranger of his qual-

I beseech you all, he better know to gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is, I leave to appear hereafter, rather than him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been soldier for courtesies, which I will be over to you yet pay still.

French. Sir, you over-rate my cour-ness: I was glad I did atone my country and you; it had been pay you should been put together with as mortal a pay as then each here, upon impudence alight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was the young traveller; rather shunned to with what I heard, than in my way be guided by others' experience: but my mended judgment, (if I offend it is mended,) my quarrel was not slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the treatment of swords; and by such two would, by all likelihood, have continued
the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a in public, which may, without contumsuffer the report. It was much like ment that fell out last night, where fell in praise of our country mistress;
gentleman at that time vouching warrant of bloody affirmation; he to fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, and less attainable, than any of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living;
gentleman's opinion, by this, was Post. She holds her virtue still and mind.

Iach. You must not so far pro-ours in Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I
France, I would abate her nothing;
I profess myself her adorer, not her Iach. As fair, and as good, (a in-hand comparison,) had been fair, and too good, for any lady If she went before others I have diamond of yours outlustered beheld, I could not but believe many: but I have not seen the diamond that is, nor you the lady Post. I praised her as I rated my stone. Iach. What do you Post. More than the world Iach. Either your upbraidings dead, or she's out-prized by a Post. You are mistaken: she was given, if there were wealth enough for to possess, or merit for the gift: the other thing for sale, and only the gift of the

Which the gods have given you?

Iach. By their graces, I will keep.

You may wear her in title yours: but,
I charge fowl light upon neighbour-
Your ring may be stolen, too; so,
of amizable estimations, the one in a that-way-accomplished courtier, and the winning both of first and

Your Italy contains none so accomplished to convince the honour of my it is in the holding or loss of that,
I do nothing doubt, you of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear

Let us have here, gentlemen.

Iach. I thank him, makes no stranger of
we are familiar at first.

With five times so much conversation,
I shall get ground of your fair mistress;
I shall go back, even to the yielding, had I for no no.

I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of
to your ring; which, in my opinion, is something: but I make my against your confidence than her and, to bar your offence herein attempt it against any lady in the

You are a great deal abused in too bold ness; and I doubt not you sustain what of by your attempt.

What's that?

A repulse: though your attempt, as gentlemen, enough of this: it came lightly; let it die as it was born, and, I would I had put my estate, and my on the approbation of what I

What lady would you choose to as-sue; whom in constancy, you think,
I will lay you ten thousand to your ring, that, commend me to the that your lady is, with no more ad-
I will bring from thence that I will wage against your gold, gold to
I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part

You are a friend, and therein the
if you pay ladies' flesh at a million a you cannot preserve it from tainting;
and you have some religion in you, that

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue;
you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return:—let there be covenants drawn between us: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one.—If I bring you no sufficient testimony, that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too; if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours;
—provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us.—Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand that you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy: she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: we will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]
French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's
Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;

Milke hasts: who has the note of them?

I Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch. [Exeunt Ladies.]

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Please your highness, ay: here they are, madam: [Presenting a small box.]

But I beseech your grace, without offence,
(My conscience bids me ask,) wherefore you have

Commanded of me these most poisonous
Which are the movers of a languishing death:

But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been

Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me
To make perfumes? distill? preserve? yea, so

That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confections! Having thus far proceeded,

(Unless thou think'st me dev'lish,) is't not
That I did amplify my judgment in [meet
Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none human.)

To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their act; and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your
heart:

Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.—

Enter Pisanio.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon
Will I first work: he's for his master, [him
And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio?—
Doctor, your service for this time is ended;
Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To Pisanio.] Hark thee, a word.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has

[Spirit,
Strange lingering poisons: I do know her
And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has Will stupify and dull the sense a while;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats
and dogs,

Then afterwards up higher: but there is No danger in what show of death it makes,
More than the locking up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time

She will not quench, and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? Do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my
son,

I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then
As great as is thy master; greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name
Is at last gasp: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another;
And every day that comes, comes to decay
A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,
To be dependor on a thing that leans,—
Who cannot be new-built, nor has no friends,

[The Queen drops the box: Pisanio takes it up.

So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak'st up

Thou know'st not what; but take up
labour;

It is a thing I made, which hath the name
Five times redeem'd from death.—I do
know

What is more cordial—say, I pray thee
It is an earnest of a further good

That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress
The case stands with her; do't as from thy

Think what a chance thou changes't
think

Thou hast thy mistress still,—to look on Who shall take notice of thee: I'll

To any shape of thy preferment, such As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I'll

That set thee on to this desert, an honest
To load thy merit richly. Call my

Think on my words. A sly and constant

Not to be shak'd: the agent for his master
And the remembrancer of her, to hold

The handfast to her lord.—I have given
Which, if he takes, shall quite unprop
Of leigers for her sweet; and which shall

Except she bend her humour, shall be
To taste of too.—

Re-enter Pisanio and Ladies.
So, so;—well done, well done;

The violets, cowslips, and the primroses
Bear to my closet.—Fare thee well, Pisanio

Think on my words. [Exit Queen and Ladies.
And shall do

Pis. But when to my good lord I prove wrong
I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Palace.
Enter Imogen.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-mother
A foolish sutor to a wedded lady,—

That hath her husband banish'd,— husband!

My supreme crown of grief! and of Verations of it! Had I been that

As my two brothers, happy! had I been able

Is the desire that's glorious; blessed How mean see'er, that have their

Which seasons comfort.—Where now
Fie!

Enter Pisanio and Ladies.
Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman

Comes from my lord with letters.
Ladies. Change your

The worthy Leonatus is in safety;
And greets your highness dearly.

Imo. You are kindly welcome.

Lach. [Aside.] All of her, that is most rich!

If she be furnish'd with a mind as good
She is alone the Arabian bird; and and his wager. Boldness be my friend!

 instantly, from head to foot!
 the Partisan, I shall flying fight;
 directly fly.
 He is one of the noblest note,
 I am most infinitely tied,
 you him accordingly, as you value Leonatus."

head aloud:
 the very middle of my heart
 by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
 welcome, worthy sir, as I
 to bid you; and shall find it so,
 I can do.

Thanks, fairest lady.— Hath nature given men mad? Hath nature given
 eyes
 the vaulted arch, and the rich crop land, which can distinguish 'twixt
 the above, and the twinn'd stones the number'd beach? and can we not make with spectacles so precious and soul?

What makes your admiration?
 cannot be i' the eye; for apes and such shes, would chatter this way, with mows the other: nor i' the
 judgment;
 In this case of favour, would definite: nor i' the appetite;
 to such neat excellence oppos'd,
 make desire vomit emptiness,
 what'd to feed.

What is the matter, trow?
 The cloy'd will,
 yet unsatisfied desire
 both fill'd and running, ravening long after for the garbage. [First

What, dear sir,
 Are you well?
 Thanks, madam: well.—[To Pis.] seek you, sir, desire the blood where I did leave him: he and peevish.

I was going, sir,
 Continue well, my lord! His health,
 Well, madam.
 to be dispos'd to mirth! I hope he is.
 Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger and so game some: he is call'd a reveller.

When he was here,
 to sadness; and oft-times
 knowing why.

I never saw him sad.
 Frenchman, his companion, one,
 and moustier, that, it seems, much at home: he furnaces [loves him; while the jolly [cries,
 I mean] laughs from his free lungs.

"O, can my sides hold, to think, that man,—
 who knows

By history, report, or his own proof,
 What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose But must be,—with his free hours languish for Assured bondage!"

Imo. Will my lord say so?
 Iach. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood it is a recreation to be by, [with laughter:
 And hear him mock the Frenchman. But,
 heavens know,
 Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.
 Iach. Not he: but yet heaven's bounty towards him might [much;
 Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis
 In you,—which I count his, beyond all talents,
 Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
 To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?
 Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?
 You look on me: what wreck discern you in Deserves your pity? [me,

Iach. Lamentable! What,
 To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
 I' the dungeon by a snuff!

Imo. I pray you, sir,
 Deliver with more openness your answers
 To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
 I was about to say, enjoy your—But it is an office of the gods to venge it,
 Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me: pray
 you,

(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more Than to be sure they do; for certainties
 Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
 The remedy then born;) discover to me
 What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this check To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,

Whose every touch, would force the feeler's
 To the oath of loyalty: this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
 Fixing it only here;—should I (damn'd then)
 Slayer with lips as common as the stairs
 That mount the Capitol; join gripe with hands

Made hard with hourly falsehood, (falsehood, as
 With labour;) then by-peeping in an eye,
 Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
 That's fed with stinking tallow,—it were fit
 That all the plagues of hell should at one time
 Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
 Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
 Inclined to this intelligence, pronounce The beggary of his change; but 'tis your
 graces

That, from my muteest conscience, to my Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.

Jach. O dearest soul, your cause doth strike
my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick! A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
Would make the great'st king double,—to be partner'd

With tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with disease'd ventures,

That play with all infirmities for gold [stuff,
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd!

How should I be reveng'd! If this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse,) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd!

Jach. Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets, Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse! Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
More noble than that runagate to your bed;
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure.

Imo. What, ho, Pisanio!

Jach. Let me my servicetender on your lips.

Imo. Away!—I do condemn mine ears, that have

So long attended thee.—If thou wert honour-Thou would'st have told this tale for virtue,
not

For such an end thou seek'st, as base, as Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady, that disdains [sanio!—
Thee and the devil alike.—What, ho, Pi-

The king, my father, shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,

A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Roman stew, and to expound

His beastly mind to us,—he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all.—What, ho, Pisanio!

Jach. O, happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit that thy lady hath of thee [ness
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect good-
Her assur'd credit.—Blessed live you long!

A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.

I have spoken this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er; and he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies into him;
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends,

Jach. He sits 'mongst men, like a
He hath a kind of honour sets him off.

More than a mortal seeming. He has Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd

To try your taking of a false report; which Honour'd with confirmation your great

In the election of a sir so rare,
Which, you know, cannot err: the love

him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods

Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, you don.

Imo. All's well, sir: take my leave.
Jach. My humble thanks. I had

forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small

And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble

Are partners in the business. Pray, you
Imo.

Jach. Some dozen Romans of us, have
lord,

(The best feather of our wing,) have
To buy a present for the emperor;

Which I, the factor for the rest, have
In France: 'tis plate of rare device, and

Of rich and exquisite form: their value
And I am something curious, better

To have them in safe storage: may it
To take them in protection?

Imo.
And pawn mine honour for their safe

My lord hath interest in them, I
In my bedchamber.

Jach. They are in a Attended by my men: I will make

To send them to you, only for their
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo.
Jach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall

word,
By lengthening my return.

I cross'd the seas on purpose, and to
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for
But not away to-morrow! O, I must Jach.

Therefore I shall beseech you, if you

To greet your lord with writing; which I have outstood my time; which is To the tender of our present. I will

Imo.

Send your trunk to me; it shall
And truly yielded you. You're not

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Britain. Court before
Palace.

Enter Cloten and two Lords.

Clot. Was there ever man but when I kiss'd the jack, upon an way! I had a hundred pound on't: and a thousand jackanapes must take me up as if I borrowed nine oaths of heaven. What got he by that? You have got into with your bowl.

[Aside.] If his wit had been like mine, it would have run all out. When a gentleman is disposed to be not for any standers-by to curtail [the ears of them.] No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop Thomson down!—I give him satisfaction. I had been one of my rank! [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool. I am not vexed more at anything in the world. A par on't! I had rather not be with the queen my mother: every jackanape of the queen my mother: every jackanape with his belly full of fighting, and I must be down like a cock that nobody can beat. [Aside.] You are cock and capon and you crow, cock, with your comb on. Sayest thou?

It is not fit your lordship should have every companion that you give to you.

So I know that; but it is fit I should be known to my inferiors.

As, it is fit for your lordship only.

Why, so I say.

Did you hear of a stranger, that's a stranger, and I not know on't!

[Aside.] He is a strange fellow and knows it not.

There's an Italian come; and, 'tis one of Leonatus' friends.

Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's a what-ever he be. Who told you of one of your lordship's pages.

Is it fit I want to look upon him? Is degradation in't?

You cannot derogate, my lord.

[Aside.] You are a fool, granted; but being foolish, do not come. I'll go see this Italian; what I shall find out to-day at howls, I'll win to-night, of your lordship.

[Recount Cloten and first Lord.]

And right the world this age! a woman, that is like two from her brain; and this her son

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

is like two from twenty, for his heart,

Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou mayst
stand,

To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber: on one side, a trunk.

Imogen reading in her bed; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman, Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours, then; mine eyes are weak:

Fold down the leaf where I have left; to bed;
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four of the clock,
I pray thee, call me. Sleep has seized me wholly. [Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies, and the tempters of the night,
Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. Iachimo comes from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea, [Silly!]
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss: one kiss!—Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't!—'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame of the taper

Bows toward her; and would under-peep her
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows, white and azure, lac'd With blue of heaven's own tinct.—But my design,

To note the chamber: I will write all down:—
Such and such pictures;—there the window;
—such

Th' adornment of her bed;—the arras, figures,
Why, such and such;—and the contents o'
the story.

Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory:
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her senses but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off;—
[Taking off her bracelet.]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque spotted, like the crimson drops
I' the bottom of a cowslip: here's a voucher,
Stronger than ever law could make: this secret

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock,
and ta'en [what end?]

The treasure of her honour. No more. To
Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late [down]

The tale of Terens; here the leaf's turn'd
Where Philomel gave up.—I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning

May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.

One, two, three,—time, time!

[Goes into the trunk. The Scene closes.

SCENE III.—An Ante-Chamber adjoining Imogen's Apartment.

Enter Cloten and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.—

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too:
if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-concoited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins arise,

His steeds to water at those springs
On challic'd flowers that lie;

And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;

With everything that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise;

Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs, and calves'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exit Musicians.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done, for Good morrow to your majesty, and to gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the deed of our
daughter?

Will she not forth? [Prochaites no]

Clo. I have assail'd her with music, and

Cym. The exile of her minion is too

She hath not yet forgot him: some

Must wear the print of his remembrance

And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to this

Who lets go by no vantages that may

Prefer you to his daughter. Pray you

To orderly sollicit, and befriend

With aptness of the season; make

Increase your services; so soon, as if

You were inspir'd to do those duties

You tender to her; that you in all

Save when command to your damsel

And therein you are senseless.

Clo. [Enter a Messenger]

Mess. So like you, sir, ambasci

The one is Caius Lucius, A worthy

Cym. [Enter a Messenger]

Albeit he comes on angry purpose

But that's no fault of his: we must

According to the honour of his

And towards himself, his goodness

on us, Our duty

We must extend our notice. Our

When you have given good mistress, attend the queen and us; we shall

To employ you towards this our queen.

[Exit Cym., Queen, Lords]

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with Let her lie still, and dream.—By

ho!

I know her women are about her:

If I do lose one of their hands,

Which buys admittance; or if and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves,

Their deer to the stand o' the

gold

Which makes the true man kill,

Nay, sometime hangs both thier

Can it not do, and undo? I will

One of her women lawyer to me;

I yet not understand the case my

By your leave.

Lady. Who's there, that knock

Clo.

Lady.

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's

Lady.

Than some, who's tailors are

Can justly boast of. What's pleasure!

Clo. Your lady's person: it is chamber.

[good report.
How! my good name? or to report

of you
I shall think is good!—The princess!
Enter Imogen.

Good morrow, fairest; sister, your sweet
head.
[Exit Lady.
Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains pursuing but trouble; the thanks I give,

you that I am poor of thanks,

Still, I swear, I love you.
If you but said so, 'twere as deep with as still, your recompense is still I need it not.

That that you shall not say I yield,
being silent,
I pray you, spare me:
equal discourtesy [faith,

your best kindness: one of your great knowing being taught, forbearance.

To leave you in your madness, 'twere
[my sin:
Fools are not mad folks.

Do you call me fool?
As I am mad, I do:
patient, I'll no more be mad;

As I am bold, I am much sorry, sir,
I will not forget a lady's manners,
so verbal; and learn now, for all,

which know my heart, do here profess
very truth of it, I care not for you;
to hear the lack of charity, myself, I hate you; which I had than make 't my boast. [rather You sin against which you owe your father. For pretend with that base wretch, of alms, and foster'd with cold

[none:
of the court, it is no contract,
it be allow'd in meaner parties, than he more mean? to knit their

there is no more dependency and beggary) in self-figur'd knot;
out'd from that enlargement by quence of the crown; and must not note of it with a base slave,

for a livery, a squire's cloth,

Profane fellow!
the son of Jupiter, and no more than art besides, thou wert too base room; thou wert dignified enough, point of envy, if 'twere made

Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come [ment

To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest gar-
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisanio?

Enter Pisanio.
Clo. His garment! Now, the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman his thee pre-

Clo. His garment! [sently,— Imo. I am sprighted with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse:—go, bid my

Search for a jewel, that too casually [woman
Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's;
If I would lose it for a revenue [shrew me,
Of any king's in Europe. I do think

I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so; go, and search.

[Exit Pis.
Clo. You have abus'd me:—
His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay, I said so, sir:
If you will make't an action, call witness to't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent. [Exit.

Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—
His meanest garment!—Well. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Rome. An Apartment in Philario's House.

Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish That warmer days would come: in these scur'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do's commission thoroughly: and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearsages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remem-
Is yet fresh in their grief. [urance

Post. I do believe, (Statist though I am none, nor like to be.)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed

In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Caesar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at: their discipline (Now mingled with their courage) will make known

To their approvers, they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Enter Iachimo.

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by
land,

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope the briefness of your answer
The speediness of your return. [made]

Iach. Your lady

Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And therewithal the best, or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenor good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet,— Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I had lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours: if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances
Being so near the truth as I will make them, Must first induce you to believe: whose
strength

I will confirm with oath; which, I would You'll give me leave to spare, when you
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber (Where I confess I slept not, but, perchance, Had that was well worth watching.)

hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the chamber Proud Cleopatra, when she met her lover,
And Cydrius swell'd above the banks of the Nile

The press of hosts, or pride: a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did grow
In workmanship and value; which, I would Could be so rarely and exactly wrought

Since the true life on't was—

Post. This is too long.

And this you might have heard of her

Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars

Must justify my knowledge. So they may

Post. Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chamber

Is south the chamber; and the chamber

Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I

So likely to report themselves; the room

Was as another nature, dumb; outward

Motion and breath left out. This is too long

Post. Which you might from relation

Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof of the chamber

With golden cherubins is fretted; here

(I had forgot them) were two windows

Of silver, each on one foot standing,

Depending on their bands. This is too long

Post. Let it be granted you have seen all

praise

Be given to your remembrance, the diamond

Of what is in her chamber, nothing more

The wager you have laid. To be too long

Iach. Be pale: I beg but leave to all

see!—

And now 'tis up again: it must be too long

To that your diamond; I'll keep the Post. Once more let me behold it: is it that

Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (thank you)

She stripp'd it from her arm: I saw

Her pretty action did outsell her

And yet enrich'd it too: she gave it

said,

She priz'd it once.

Post. To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you

Post. O, no, no, no! 'tis too long this too;

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,

Kills me to look on't.—Let there be

There is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
there's another man; the vows of
women more bondage be, to where they are to their virtues; which is no[thing.—
Have patience, sir,
take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
I'm sure if one of her women, being corrupted,
can get it from her?

Very true;
I hope, he came by't.—Back my ring,
to me some corporal sign about her,
resolent than this; for this was stolen.
By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.
Mark you, he swears; by Jupiter he —nay, keep the ring,—'tis true. I could not lose it: her attendants are so, and honourable:—they induc'd to a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
because of her incontinency
—she hath bought the name of whore dearly.—
Take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Sir, be patient:
I'm strong enough to be believ'd persecuted well of—

Never talk on't;
If you seek a satisfying, under her breast the pressing) lies a mole, right proud of delicate lodging: by my life, and it gave me present hunger again, though full. You do remember upon her?

Ay, and it doth confirm as big as hell can hold,
there's no more but it.

Will you hear more?
Spare your arithmetic: never count
the terms;
that a million!

I'll be sworn,—
No swearing.
I'll swear you have not don't, you lie;
I'll kill thee, if thou dost deny made me cuckold.

I will deny nothing.
O that I had her here, to tear her from there, and do't; I'll the court; be-—I'll do something—
[Exit.
Quite beside patience!—You have won:

Let's follow him, and pervert the present
He hath against himself. [wrath
lach. With all my heart.
[Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Room in Philario's
House.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women

Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools [seem'd

Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother
The Dian of that time; so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this.—O, vengeance, vengeance!

Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her [devils!—

As chaste as unsunn'd snow;—O, all the
This yellow lachino, in an hour,—was't not?—
Or less,—at first: perchance he spoke not, but,
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cried, "oh!" and mounted; found no opposition [she

But what he looked for should oppose, and Should from encounter guard.—Could I find out [motion

The woman's part in me! For there's no
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving,
hers; [hers;

Last and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges,
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, dis-
Nice longing, slanders, mutability, [daim,
All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell
knows,

Why, hers, in part, or all; but, rather, all:
For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, [skill,

Detest them, curse them:—yet 'tis greater
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter, at one door, Cymbelins, Queen, Cloten, and Lords; and at another, Caius Lucius,
and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus
Cæsar with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar (whose remembrance yet [tongues Lives in man's eyes, and will to ears and Be theme and hearing ever) was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle (Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee
Is left untender'd. [lately

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Caesars, Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from us, to resume

We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors; together with
The natural bravery of your isle; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribb'd and pal'd in
With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies'

boats, [conquest
But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of Caesar made here; but made not here his brag
Of "came," and "saw," and "overcame;" with shame [carried

(The first that ever touch'd him) he was From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping,

(Poor ignorant baubles!) on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd

As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
(O gilot fortune!) to master Caesar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid; our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars: other of them may have crook'd noses; but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say I am one;
but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambition, [stretch (Which swell'd so much, that it did almost The sides o' the world,) against all colour,
here

Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon

Ourselves to be. We do say, though, that Our ancestor was that Malmudius, which Ordain'd our laws (whose use the

Caesar
Hath too much margled; whose repair Shall, by the power we hold, be no
dead,

Though Rome be therefore angry
[marius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did His brows within a golden crown, and Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus (who (Caesar, that hath more kings his than

Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy, Receive it from me, then:—your and In Caesar's name, pronounce I [Caesar look

For fury not to be resisted.—Then deliver
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art well-wish'd to Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth
Much under him; of him I gather'd
Which he, to seek of me again, perform'd Behoves me keep at utterance. I
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians
Their liberties, are now in arms;
Which not to read would show the
So Caesar shall not find them.

Luc. Let protest
His majesty bids you welcome pastime with us a day or two, or O master! what a strange infection
you seek us afterwards in other shall find us in our salt-water grove beat us out of it, it is yours; if you adventure, our crowns shall fare like you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.
Cym. I know your master's pleasure.
All the remain is, welcome.

SCENE II.—Another Room in Cym-
beline's Palace.

Enter Pisanio, reading a letter.
Pis. How! of adultery! What you not

What monster's her accuser?—Is
O master! what a strange infection
Is fallen into thy ear! What tale (As poisonous tongued, as hand) vail'd

On thy too ready hearing?—O, how She's punish'd for her truth; and More goddess-like than wife—O, how
As would take in some virtue—O,
Thy mind to her is now as low,
Thy fortunes.—How! that I Upon the love, and truth, and Have made to thy command—
If it be so to do good service—
Let me be counted servicable—
That I should seem to lack as this fact comes to?—[Reading.]

Let's the letter
How canst thou, by her own command
Give me this opportunity?"—O damn'd paper!
Is the ink that's on thee! Senseless

foolery for this act, and look'st like without!—I, here she comes.
Enter Imogen.
Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

What thy lord? that is my lord,— Indeed were that astronomer
the stars as I his characters:
they the future open.—You good gods,
that is here contain'd relish of love,
his health, of his content,—yet not,
two are asunder; let that grieve

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

—[then,
gods are med'cinable; that is one of
physic love)—of his content,
that!—Good wax, thy leave:—
[Lovers,
that make these locks of counsel
in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
lofters you cast in prison, yet
—Good news,

We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
 How many score of miles may we well ride
 'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
 Madam, 's enough for you, and too much, too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution,
 man,

Could never go so slow; I have heard of riding wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the
 That run in the clock's behalf:—but this is foolery:—

 Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say She'll home to her father; and provide me

presently
 A riding suit, no costlier than would fit
 A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man: nor here, nor
 here,

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
 That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'y-

thee;
 Do as I bid thee: there's no more to say;
 Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such [this gate

Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys:
 Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you

 To morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs
 Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through

And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair

heaven,
 We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so
 As prouder livers do. [Hardly

Qui. Hail, heaven!
Arr. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport: up to you hill: [Consider,

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.
 When you above perceive me like a crow,

That it is place which lessens and sets off:
 And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,

 Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
 This service is not service, so being done,

But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus Draws us a profit from all things we see;

And often, to our comfort, shall we find
 The sharded beetle in a safer hold,

Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
 Is nobler, than attending for a cheek;

Richer, than doing nothing for a babe;
 Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:

Such gain the cap of him that makes them fine,
 Yet keeps his book uncross'd. No life to ours.

Qui. Out of your proof you speak; we, poor untledg'd,

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest: nor know not

What air's from home. Haply this life is
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you, [best,
That have a sharper known; well correspond-
With your stiff age: but unto us it is [ing
A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of
When we are as old as you? when we shall hear

The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away! We have seen nothing:

We are beastly; subtle as the fox for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court,
As hard to leave, as keep: whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies
I' the search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure:—O boys, this story

The world may read in me: my body's mark'd
With Roman swords; and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;

And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: then was I as a tree,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but, in one night,

A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my
And left me bare to weather. [leaves,
Gul. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)

But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so,
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty years,

This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world:

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains!

This is not hunter's language:—he that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister:

And we will fear no poison, which attends

In place of greater state. I'll need you to the valleys.
[Exeunt Cym. and Arv.]
How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!

These boys know little they are alive
king;

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive
They think they are mine: and, though I up thus meanly

I' the cave wherein they bow, their throne
The roofs of palaces; and nature's prison
them,

In simple and low things, to prince it out
Beyond the trick of others. The Polynian
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who

The king his father call'd Guiderius, who When on my three-foot stool I sit, and he
The warlike feats I have done, his speech

out Into my story: say, "Thus mine was
And thus I set my foot on his neck!"

then
The princely blood flows in his cheek Strains his young nerves, and puts him in posture

That acts my words. The younger son (Once Arviragus,) in as like a figure, I see

Strikes life into my speech, and shows more
more

His own conceiving.—Hark, this Cymeline!
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my own

knows
Thou didst unjustly banish me: when
At three, and two years old, I stole thee

Thinking to bar thee to succession
Thou reit'st me of my lands. But thou Thou wast their nurse; they fondly

their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan's son,
They take for natural father. The poor

SCENE IV.—Near Milford Hill.
Enter Pisanius and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we were horse, the place

Was near at hand:—ne'er long'd my eyes
To see me first, as I have now—
Man!

Where is Posthumus? What is he to do That makes these stare thus? Woe'st thou that sigh

From th' inward of thee! One, who Would be interpreted a thing of sorrow

Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a 'haviour of less fear, ere thou Vanquish my staidler senses. What matter!

Why tender'st thou that paper to me
A look under? I't be some new Smile to't before; if winterly, the

But keep that countenance still band's hand!
That drag-damn'd Italy hath cut me at some hard point.—Speak, man:

thy tongue
take off some extremity, which to read be even mortal to me.

Please you, read;
disdain'd of fortune.

[Reals.] Thy mistress, Pisanio,
the trumpet in my bed; the teswhereof lie bleeding in me. I speak weak surmises; but from proof as my grief, and as certain as I expect That part, thou, Pisanio, must if thy faith be not tainted with the of hers. Let thine own hands take my life; I shall give thee opportunity at Madam: she hath my letter for the where, if thou fear to strike, and to certain it is done, thou art the to her dishonour, and equally to me

What shall I need to draw my sword?

the paper
her throat already.—No, 'tis slander, edge is sharper than the sword; whose [breath
some all the worries of Nile; whose in the posting winds, and doth belie of the world: kings, queens, and nations, nay, the secrets of the grave sland'ring enters.—What cheer,

False to his bed! What is it, to be false?
watch there, and to think on him?
twist clock and clock? if sleep charge

it with a fearful dream of him, myself awake! that's false to his bed,

Also good lady!
[Iachimo, false! Thy conscience witness:— must accuse him of incontinency;
then look'd like a villain; now, me-

looks,
her good enough.—Some jay of Italy, another was her painting, hath betray'd

me;
I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
I am richer than to hang by the walls,
be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O,

there are women's traitors! All good revolt, O husband, shall be thought so for villainy; not born where't grows, a bait for ladies.

Good madam, hear me.
men being heard, like [weeping time, thought false; and Sinon's many a holy tear; took pity wretchedness: so thou, Post-

the heaven on all proper men;

Goodly and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd,
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou
honest:

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou seest
A little witness my obedience: look! [him,
I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things but grief;
Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: do his bidding; strike.
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-
There is a prohibition so divine, [slaughter That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart:— [defence;

Something's afore't:—Soft, soft! we'll no [Takes some Letters from her bosom.

Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools [betray'd

Believe false teachers: though those that are
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness; and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disord'g'd by her
That now thou fir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, despatch: [knife!

The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O, gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed, then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore, then,
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence! this place!
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour!
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be absent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment; in the which I have consider'd of a course: good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear,

Therein false struck, can take no greater
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak. [wound,

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:

Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtizan.
Pis. No, on my life.

I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while! where bide! how live!

Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado

With that harsh, noble, simple nothing;
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines! Day,

night, [volume
Are they not but in Britain? 'T' the world's
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: pr'ythee, think There's liver out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, to appear itself, must not yet be
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty, and full of view; yea, haply, near The residence of Posthumus; so nigh, at least,

That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well, then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience, fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly, Woman its pretty self,) into a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek, Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan; and forget

Your labour-some and dainty trim, whence
You made great Juno angry. Nay, to what?

Imo. I see into thy end, and am almost A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like a man,
Forethinking this, I have already it

(Tis in my cloak-bag) doublet, hat, hose,
That answer to them: would you, in serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow

From youth of such a season, 'twould
Lucius

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, (which you'll him know,

If that his head have ear in music, do you

With joy he will embrace you; for he's ourable,

And, doubling that, most holy.
You have me, rich; and I will never

Beginning nor supplement.
Imo. Thou art all the

The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee There's more to be consider'd; but will

All that good time will give us: this I'm soldier to, and will abide it with

A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.
Pis. Well, madam, we must take a

farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My Here is a box: I had it from the queen

What's in't is precious; if you are such
Or stomach-quail'd at land, a dram

Will drive away distemper.—To some
And fit you to your manhood.—May Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen. I thank you.

Imo. Amen. I thank you.

SCENE V.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius,
Lords,

Cym. Thus far; and so, farewell. Thanks, my

Luc. My emperor hath wrote; I must report
And am right sorry that I must report

My master's enemy. Our subjects

Cym. Will not endure his yoke; and for
To show less sovereignty than

Appear unkinglike. So, sir, I leave

Luc. A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your grace.

Cym. My lords, you are appointed
office:

The due of honour in no point omit
So, farewell, noble Lucius. Your hand

Luc. Clo. Receive it friendly; but, for

forth
I wear it as your enemy.

Sir, the event

name the winner: fare you well.

Leave not the worthy Lucius, good

my lords,

has crossed the Severn.—Happiness!

[Exeunt Lucius and Lords.]

He goes hence frowning; but it honours us,

we have given him cause.

'Tis all the better;

Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor

It fits us therefore, ripely, sharots and horsemen be in readiness:

that he already hath in Gallia can be drawn to head, from whence he for Britain.

'Tis not sleepy business;

Our expectation that it would be thus as forward. But, my gentle queen, is our daughter? She hath not appeared

the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd of the day: she looks us like more made of malice, than of duty:

we noted it.—Call her before us; for have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Royal sir,

of Posthumus, most retir'd life been; the cure whereof, my lord,

must do, Beseech your majesty,

sharp speeches to her: she's a lady of rebukes, that words are strokes,

make death to her.

Re-enter Attendant.

Where is she, sir? How contempt be answer'd?

Please you, sir,

are all lock'd; and there's no

My lord, when last I went to visit me to excuse her keeping close;

into constrain'd by her infirmity,

would that duty leave unpaid to you,

daily she was bound to proffer; this would me to make known; but our great me to blame in memory.

[Court]

Her doors lock'd?

Grant, heavens, that which I

[Exit.]

Son, I say, follow the king.

That man of hers, Pisanio, her old not seen these two days.

[servant.]

Go, look after.—

[Exit Cloten.]

then that stand't at so for Posthumus!—

take a drug of mine; I pray, his absence swallowing that; for he believes

It is a thing most precious. But for her, Where is she gone! Haply, despair hath seiz'd her;

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus: gone she is To death, or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: she being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Cloten.

How now, my son!

Cloten. 'Tis certain she is fled.

Go in and cheer the king: he rages; none

Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: may

This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit.]

Cloten. I love, and hate her: for she's fair and royal, [quarrel]

And that she hath all courtly parts, more ex-

Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one

The best she hath, and she, of all compounded,

Outsells them all,—I love her therefore; but,

Disdaining me, and throwing favours on

The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment, [point]

That what's else rare is chok'd; and in that

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,

To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools

shall—

Enter Pisanio.

Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah?

Come hither: ah, you precious pander!

Villain,

Where is thy lady? In a word; or else

Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Cloten. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter—

I will not ask again. Close villain,

I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip

Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?

From whose so many weights of baseness cannot

A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord,

How can she be with him? When was she

He is in Rome. [miss'd]

Cloten. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;

No farther halting: satisfy me home

What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Cloten. All-worthy villain!

Discover where thy mistress is at once,

At the next word,—no more of worthy lord,—

Speak, or thy silence on the instant is

Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,

This paper is the history of my knowledge

Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Cloten. Let's see't.—I will pursue her

Even to Augustus's throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.

She's far enough; and what he learns by this,

May prove his travel, not her danger.

Cloten. Humph!

Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead.
O Imogen,

Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I knew't.— Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry,—that is, what villainy soe'er
I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly,
—I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldest neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord,

Clo. Wilt thou serve me?—For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine:—wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon:
—even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would these garments were come.
She said upon a time (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised)—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me re-joicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisanio, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord. [Milford-Haven?]

Clo. How long is't since she went to Mil-

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be voluntary mate to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true
to thee,

Were to prove false, which I will never be,

To him that is most true.—To Milford
And find not her whom thou pursuest.
flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her!—This speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour to the SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of Pisanio.

Enter Imogen, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one.
I have tir'd myself; and for two days
gether
Have made the ground my bed. I should
But that my resolution helps me.—Alas!
When from the mountain top Pisanio
thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I thought Foundations fly the wretched soul.
Where they should be reliev'd. Two
told me

I could not miss my way; will poor souls
That have afflictions on them, know
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no more When rich ones scarce tell true of fulness
Is sorer, than to lie for need; and then
Is worse in kingly than beggary.

lord!
Thou art one o' the false ones; now I
My hunger's gone; but even before I
At point to sink for food.—But some Here is a path to it: 'tis some cavity
I were best not call; I dare not famine,

Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, make it Plenty, and peace, breads cowardly ever

Of hardness is mother.—Ho! Who's If anything that's civil, speak; (I Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer!
enter.

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarce
on't.

Such a foe, good heavens! [Goes into the cave.]

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.
Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd man, and

Are master of the feast: Cadwal and I Will play the cook and wait.

match:—
The sweat of industry would dry
But for the end it works to.

stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury
Can snore upon the flint, when rest

Finds the down pillow hard.—
Poor house, that keep'st thyself
I am through

Gui.
Are I am weak with toll, appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat I'll Whilst what we have kill'd be eat oppositions: yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Post-humus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may, hardly, be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter from the cave, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. [To Imogen.] You are not well: remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. [To Imogen.] Brother, stay here: Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be; But clay and clay differs in dignity, Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not,—yet I am not well; But not so citizen a wanton, as

To seem to die, ere sick: so please you, leave me;

Stick to your journal course: the breach of Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by Cannot amend me: society is no comfort [me To one not sociable. I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here;

I'll rob none but myself; and let me die, Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it: How much the quantity, the weight as much, As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how! how!

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me In my good brother's fault; I know not why I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason: the bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say, My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain! O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness! Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and I am not their father; yet who this should be, Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me,— 'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health.—So please, sir,

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage but at court! Experience, O, thou disprove it! report! The imperious seas breed monsters; for the Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish. I am sick still; heart sick.—Phanilo, I'll now taste of thy drug.

Gui.

He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate! Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arv. Thus did he answer me: I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field! [To Imo.] We'll leave you for this time, in, and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. For you must be our housewife.

Imo. I am bound to you.

Bel. And shall be ever.

This youth, how'er distressed, appears to Good ancestors.

Arv.

Gui. But his neat cookery! he outdoes in characters;

And sauc'd our broth, as Juno had her own.

Arv.

A smiling with a sigh; as if the sigh Was that it was, for not being such a

The smile mocking the sigh, that it would From so divine a temple, to commit

With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui.

That grief and patience, rooted in his breast, Mingle their spurs together.

Arv.

And let the stinking elder, grief, His perishing root with the increased

Bel. It is great morning. Who's there!

Arv.

Clot. I cannot find these roses; Hath mock'd me:—I am faint

Bel.

Means he not us! I partly know him, Cloten, the son o' the queen.

I saw him not these many years, and I know 'tis he.—We are held

Arv.

Gui. He is but one: you and me What companies are near: pray you, Let me alone with him.

Arv.

Clot. That fly me thus! some villain answer I have heard of such.—What slave

Gui.

More slavish did I ne'er, than to know A "slave" without a knock.

Clot.

A law-breaker, a villain: yield thee

Gui.

Thou art a law-breaker, a villain: yield thee

Clot.

Thou art a law-breaker, a villain: yield thee

To whom? to thee? What art thou?
Have not I
As big as thou? a heart as big?
I grant, are bigger; for I wear not
In my mouth. Say what thou art,
I could yield to thee!

Thou villain base,
Not by my clothes?
No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Thy grandfather: he made those
As it seems, make thee. [clothes,
Thou precious varlet,
Made them not.

Hence, then, and thank Those that gave them thee. Thou art some
To beat thee. [fool;
Thou injurious thief,
My name, and tremble.

What's thy name?
[name,
Cloten, thou villain, be thy Tremble at it: were it toad, or adder,
I'd move me sooner. [spider,
To thy further fear,
Thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
To the queen.

I'm sorry for't; not seeming
As thy birth.
Those that I reverence, those I fear,—
I laugh, not fear them. [the wise;
Die the death:
I have slain thee with my proper hand,
Those that even now fled hence,
The gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Remember Belarius and Arviragus,
To company's abroad. [him, sure,
None in the world: you did mistake
I cannot tell:—long is it since I saw
[favour Thou hast nothing blurr'd those lines of
Then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
I am ab[solute
In this place we left them:
My brother make good time with him,
May be he is so fell.

Being scarce made up,
Suffering terrors; for defect of judgment
The cause of fear. But see, thy brother.
This Cloten was a fool, an empty
person,—
I have no money in't: not Hercules
I have knock'd out his brains, for he had
I was doing this, the fool had borne [none:
I, as I do this.

What hast thou done?
Cloten's head,
I'll give thee, after his own report; [swore,
I'll call me traitor, mountaineer; and

With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!)
And set them on Lud's town. [they grow,
Bel. We are all undone.
Gai. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But that he swore to take our lives! The law
Protects not us: then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner, all himself,
For we do fear the law! What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse,—not frenzy, not
Absolute madness could so far have ray'd,
To bring him here alone: although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then, on good ground
If we do fear this body hath a tail [we fear,
More perilous than the head.

Art. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gai. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have
ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't!
Becomes thee well enough. [though valour
Art. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would
revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would
And put us to our answer. [seek us through,
Bel. Well, 'tis done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pry thee, to our
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay [rock;
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Art. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.
Bel. O thou goddess,

With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!)
And set them on Lud's town. [they grow,
Bel. We are all undone.
Gai. Why, worthy father, what have we to
lose,
But that he swore to take our lives! The law
Protects not us: then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner, all himself,
For we do fear the law! What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse,—not frenzy, not
Absolute madness could so far have ray'd,
To bring him here alone: although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he
hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then, on good ground
If we do fear this body hath a tail [we fear,
More perilous than the head.

Art. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gai. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have
ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't!
Becomes thee well enough. [though valour
Art. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would
revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would
And put us to our answer. [seek us through,
Bel. Well, 'tis done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pry thee, to our
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay [rock;
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Art. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.
Bel. O thou goddess,

With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!)
And set them on Lud's town. [they grow,
Bel. We are all undone.
Gai. Why, worthy father, what have we to
lose,
But that he swore to take our lives! The law
Protects not us: then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner, all himself,
For we do fear the law! What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse,—not frenzy, not
Absolute madness could so far have ray'd,
To bring him here alone: although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he
hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then, on good ground
If we do fear this body hath a tail [we fear,
More perilous than the head.

Art. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gai. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have
ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't!
Becomes thee well enough. [though valour
Art. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would
revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would
And put us to our answer. [seek us through,
Bel. Well, 'tis done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pry thee, to our
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay [rock;
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Art. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.
Bel. O thou goddess,

With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!)
And set them on Lud's town. [they grow,
Bel. We are all undone.
Gai. Why, worthy father, what have we to
lose,
But that he swore to take our lives! The law
Protects not us: then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner, all himself,
For we do fear the law! What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse,—not frenzy, not
Absolute madness could so far have ray'd,
To bring him here alone: although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he
hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then, on good ground
If we do fear this body hath a tail [we fear,
More perilous than the head.

Art. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gai. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have
ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't!
Becomes thee well enough. [though valour
Art. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would
revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would
And put us to our answer. [seek us through,
Bel. Well, 'tis done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pry thee, to our
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay [rock;
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys! They areas gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enshaf'd, as the rud'at wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence, even now.
Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

*Re-enter Arviragus, bearing Imogen, as dead,
in his arms.*

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for!

Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O, sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one-half so
well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crure

Might easiliest harbour in!—Thou bless'd
thing!

Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I,
Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy!—
How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek
Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?
Arv. O the floor;
His arms thus leagu'd: I thought he slept;
and put

My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness

Answer'd my steps too loud.
Gui. Why, he but shew'd

If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted;
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With faeries down
While summer lasts, and I live here, I'll I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not grow
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose,

nor
The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no,
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to clasp,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the cold

would,
With charitable bill (O bill, sorrow-shanted
Those rich-leaf'd hairs, that let their tresses
Without a monument!) bring thee all
Yes, and fur'd moss besides, when flowers
To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Pythias, have
And do not play in wench-like words with me,
Which is so serious. Let us bury him.
And not protract with admiration what Is now due debt.—To the grave.

Arv. Say, where shall'st thy Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. And let us, Polydore, though now our Have got the mannish cracks, sing him
ground,

As once our mother: use like note and Save that Euriphile must be false.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and woe
thee;

For notes of sorrow, out of time, are
Than priests and fates that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it
Bel. Great griefs, I see, will come for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's
And, though he came our enemy,
He was paid for that: though mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence (That angel of the world) will make the
Of place 'tween high and low. Our princely;

And though you took his life, as he
Yet bury him as a prince.
Pray you, fetch him.

Gui. Thersites' body is as good as Ajax.
When neither are alive. If you'll go
Arv.

We'll say our song the whilst.—
Arv.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay to the east:

My father hath a reason for't.
Arv.

Gui. Come on, then, and recover
Arv.

(Unless my sins abuse my divination)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here, Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometimes

It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll, then, instruct us of this body.—
Young one,

Inform us of thy fortunes: for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this, Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was
That, otherwise than noble nature did, [he, Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest

In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my
A very valiant Briton, and a good, [master,
That here by mountaineers lies slain:—alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander

From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than Thy master in bleeding; say his name, good friend. [He, and do

Imo. Richard du Champ.—[Aside.] If I do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very
name:

Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd: but, be sure,
No less below'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee: go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please
the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans

A grave: come, arm him.—Boy, he is
By thee to us; and he shall be inter'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful: wipe thine eyes.
Some falls are means the happier to some.

SCENE III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.
Enter Cymbeline, Lords, Pleurion, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how with her.—

A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger.
Heavens,

How deeply you at once do touch me! For The great part of my comfort, gone; my Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me: her son,
So needful for this present, it strikes me
The hope of comfort.—But for this, I
Who needs must know of her departure,
Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours;
I humbly set it at your will: but, my
mistress,

I nothing know where she remains, why Nor when she purposes return. Good my Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good my
The day that she was missing he was I dare be bound he's true, and shall
All parts of his subjection loyally.

For Cloten,—
There wants no diligence in seeking her;
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is trod
[To Pis.] We'll slip you for a season
Does yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your
The Roman legions, all from Gallia
Are landed on your coast: with a war
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate

Cym. Now for the counsel of a
I am amaz'd with matter. Good my
1 Lord. Good my

Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come now, I you're ready:

The want is, but to put those powers
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's
And meet the time as it seeks us;
What can from Italy annoy us?—A way
We grieve at chances here.—[Exeunt]

Pis. I heard no letter from my
I wrote him Imogen was slain;
Nor hear I from my mistress, who
To yield me often tidings: not that What is betid to Cloten; but that Perplex'd in all:—the heavens still Wherein I am false, I am bound be true:

present wars shall find I love my country,
 I'll note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
 I'll doubt, by time let them be clear'd;
 I'll bring in some bouts that are not clear'd.

[Exit.

IV.—Before the Cave of Belarius.
Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.
 The noise is round about us.

Let us from it.
 What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to action and adventure? [Look it

Nay, what hope
 we in hiding us? this way, the Romans for Britons slay us, or receive us for their use, and slay us after.

Sons,
 to the mountains; there secure us.
 Your party there's no going: newness of death (we being not known, not may drive us to a render we have liv'd; and so extort from's we have done, whose answer would be with torture.

This is, sir, a doubt,
 dying us.

It is not likely,
 they hear the Roman horses neigh,
 their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
 so they'd importantly as now, they will waste their time upon our note,
 from whence we are.

O, I am known
 in the army; many years, when I was then but young, you see, not my remembrance. And, besides, the I'd my service, nor your loves;
 in my exile the want of breeding,
 of this hard life; aye hopeless
 the courtesy your cradle promis'd, I still hot summer's tawlings, and thinking slaves of winter.

Than he so,
 Pray, sir, to the army:
 my brother are not known; yourself,
 of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
 question'd.

By this sun that shines, what thing is it that I never can die I scarce ever look'd on blood, of coward hares, hot goats, and

I and a horse, save one that had on his heel? I am ashamed upon the holy sun, to have of his bless'd beams, remaining a poor unknown.

By heavens, I'll go:

If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
 I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
 The hazard therefore due fall on me by
 The hands of Romans!

[Exit.

So say I: Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
 So slight a valuation, should reserve [boys!
 My crack'd one to more care. Have with you,
 If in your country wars you chance to die,
 That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
 Lead, lead.—[Aside.] The time seems long;
 their blood thinks scorn,
 Till it fly out, and show them princes born.

[Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yen, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd

Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,

If each of you should take this course, how many

Must murder wives much better than themselves,

For wrying but a little!—O Pisanio!

Every good servant does not all commands:
 No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had liv'd to put on this; so had you sav'd
 The noble Imogen to repent; and struck

Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance.
 But, alack,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
 love.

To have them fall no more; you some permit
 To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
 And make them dread it, to the doer's thrift.
 But Imogen is your own: do your best wills,
 And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough

That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
 I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
 heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose; I'll disrobe me
 Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself

As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die

For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life
 Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,

Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
 Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know

More valour in me, than my habits show,
 Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me!

To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
 The fashion, less without, and more within.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter, from one door, Lucius, Imogen, Iachimo, and the Roman Army; the British at another; Leonatus Posthumus, following like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Then enter again in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom

Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady, The princess of this country, and the air on't Revengingly enfeebles me; or could this carl, A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me In my profession?—Knighthoods and honours, As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn. [borne If that thy gentry, Britain, go before This lost, as he exceeds our lords, the odds Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.

[Exit.

The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken; then enter, to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;

The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but The villainy of our fears.

Gul., Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

Re-enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons; they rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt: then, enter Lucius, Imogen, and Iachimo.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;

For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such As war were hood-wink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes Let's re-inforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did: Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought; the king himself Of his wings destitute, the army broken, And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling

Merely through fear; that the strait pass was With dead men hurt behind, and cowards fly- To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier. An honest one, I warrant; who does't breed So long a breeding as his white beard. In doing this for his country:—adieu, lane,

He, with two striplings, [made more alive to] The country base, than to commit slaughter;

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer Than those for preservation and'd, or shaming

Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,

"Our Britain's hearts die flying, not your backs To darkness fleet, souls that fly back."

Stand!

Or we are Romans, and will give you the Like beats, which you show deadly, and save,

But to look back in frown: stand, stand, stand!

These three, Three thousand confident, in act as these

(For three performers are the tale, when The rest do nothing,) with this word,

stand!

Accommodated by the place, most of them With their own nobleness, (which could A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks

Part shame, part spirit renew'd; then turn'd coward

But by example (O, a sin in war, Damn'd in the first beginners!) you to

The way that they did, and to gain the Upon the pikes of the hunters; none

A stop if the chaser, a retire; none A rout, confusion thick: forthwith

Chickens, the way which they stay'd slaves,

The strides their victors made; and towards

(Like fragments in hard voyages) heaving The life o' the need; having found

door open Of the unguarded hearts, Heaven

Some slain before; some dying friends

O'er-borne if the former wave; for Are now each one the slaughter-monger

Those that would die or are ready to die The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was done A narrow lane, an old man, and made

Post. Nay, do not wonder at the things made

Rather to wonder at the things Than to work any. Will you fly

And vent it for a mockery? Here "Two boys, an old man twice a day

Preserv'd the Britons, was the Lord.

Lord. Nay, be not angry, who dares not stand his foe,

Post. For if he'll do, as he is made to I know he'll quickly fly my

You have put me into rhyme.

Farewell; you are angry.

[Exit.

O noble

going!—This is a lord! O noble field, and ask, what news, of me!

how many would have given their carcasses! took heel to too! I, in mine own woe

Death where I did hear him

he struck: being an ugly

hides him in fresh cups, soft or hath more ministers than we knives i' the war.—Well, I will now a favourer to the Briton,

I have resum'd again

in: fight I will no more, to the veriest hind that shall [is by the Romans; great the slaughter

[death: for me, my ransom's

comes to spend my breath:

here I'll keep, nor bear again,

by some means for Imogen.

British Captains, and Soldiers,

Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius

the old man and his sons were

There was a fourth man, in a silly

the affront with them.

So 'tis reported: who can be found.—Stand! who not now been drooping here, if

Lay hands on him; a dog!—

shall not return to tell have peck'd them here;—he brags

of note: bring him to the king.

Cymbeline, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen, you have

upon you;

you had pasture.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exit Gaolers.

Posthumus, attended: Belarius, Gui-

arrigus, Pisanio, and Roman Cap-

The Captains present Posthumus to

who delivers him over to a

after which, all go out.

Act IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Posthumus and two Gaolers.

[Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

You shall not now be stolen

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he
To be exil'd, and thrown [mock'd,
From Leonati's seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
Our parents, and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenuantius' fight,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise,
Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion;
Or we poor ghosts will cry, [help]
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderbolt. The ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing: hush! How dare you ghosts

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:

Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd:

No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours.

Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;

Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:

His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.

Our jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married.—Else, and

He shall be lord of lady Imogen, [fade!—
And happier much by his affliction made.

This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine:

And so, away: no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—

Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder; his breath

Was sulphurous to smell: the holy Stoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension
More sweet than our bless'd holds;
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys
As when his god is pleas'd. Thanks,

All. The marble pavement
enter'd

His radiant roof.—Away! and, to be Let us with care perform his great

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast grandeur, and begot

A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother, and two brothers: but (O Gone! they went hence so soon as they

born;

And so I am awake. Poor wretch,
On greatness' favour, dream as I have

Wake, and find nothing. But, alas, I
Many dream not to find, neither dream
And yet are steep'd in favours; so and That have this golden chance, and yet

why.

What fairies haunt this ground! A
Be not, as is our fangled world, a Nobler than that it covers: let thy

So follow, to be most unlike our
As good as promise.

[Reacts.] "When as a lion's to himself unknown, without seeking be embraced by a piece of cedar when from a stately cedar shall branches, which, being dead shall after revive, be jointed to the and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus his miseries, Britain be fortunate, in peace and plenty."

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff Tongue, and brain not: either

thing:

Or senseless speaking, or a speaking
As sense cannot untie. Be what it
The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Enter Gaoler.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready?

Post. Over-roasted, rather: I am Gaol. Hanging is the word;

ready for that, you are well cool'd.

Post. So, if I prove a good spectators, the dish pays the meat.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for the comfort is, you shall be taver payments, fear no more taver are often the sadness of part curing of mirth; you come in of meat, depart feeling with too

sorry that you have paid too much that you are paid too much: the

both empty,—the brain the too light the purse too light of this contradiction you shall (Call—) the charity of a penny cord!

 up thousands in a trice: you have no
 and-cressitor but it; of what's past,
 to come, the discharge:—your neck,
 you took, and counters; so the ac-follows.
 I am surrier to die, than thou art to Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not ache; but a man that were to sleep and a hangman to help him to he would change places with his for, look you, sir, you know not which shall go.

Yes, indeed do I, fellow.
 Your death has eyes in'a head, then;
 and seen him so pictur'd: you must be directed by some that take upon know, or take upon yourself, that I am sure you do not know; or jump enquiry on your own peril: and how I'll speed in your journey's end, I think never return to tell one.
 Tell these, fellow, there are none want direct them the way I am going, but will, and will not use them.
 What an infinite mock is this, that a
 I have the best use of eyes to see of blindness! I am sure, hanging's of winking.

Enter a Messenger.
 Kneel off his manacles;—bring your
 to the king.
 You bring't good news,—I am call'd
 I'll be hang'd, then.
 You shall be then fearer than a gaoler;
 for the dead.

[Exeunt Pothamus and Mess.
 Unless a man would marry a gallows, of young gibbets, I never saw one so on my conscience, there are and there be some of them too, that their wills; so should I, if I were and we were all of one mind, and good: O, there were desolation of and gallowses! I speak against my profit, but my wish hath a preferment
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Cymbeline's Tent.
 Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.
 Stand by my side, you whom the have made of my throne. Woo is my heart, that so richly fought,
 should gilded arms, whose naked [found:] before targets of proof, cannot be can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
 Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
 Such precious deeds in one that promis'd
 But beggary and poor looks. [nought]

Cym. No tidings of him!
 Pis. He hath been search'd among the
 But no trace of him. [dead and living,

Cym. To my grief, I am
 The heir of his reward: which I will add [To Bel., Gu., and Arv.]

To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
 By whom, I grant, she lives. 'Tis now the
 To ask of whence you are:—report it. [time]

Bel. Sir,
 In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
 Further to boast, were neither true nor Unless I add, we are honest. [modest,

Cym. Bow your knees.
 Arise, my knights of the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you
 With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.
 There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly

Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
 And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!
 To sour your happiness, I must report
 The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician
 Would this report become? But I consider,
 By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
 Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her
 life;

Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
 Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd,
 I will report, so please you: these her women
 Can trip me, if I err; who with wet cheeks
 Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prythee, say.
 Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only

Affected greatness got by you, not you:
 Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
 Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this;
 And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand
 With such integrity, she did confess [to love
 Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
 But that her sight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
 Who isn't can read a woman!—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
 Should by the minute feed on life, and lingering, [pos'd]

By inches waste you: in which time she pur-
 By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show: yes, and in time,

(When she had fitted you with her craft,) to work

Her son into the adoption of the crown :
But, failing of her end by his strange absence, Grew shameless-desperate ; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes ; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected ; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women ?

1 Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful ;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery ; nor my
heart,

Than though her like her seeming ; it had
To have mistrusted her : yet, O my daughter !
That it was folly in me thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all !
Enter Lucius, Imthimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded : Posthumus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Cains, now for tribute ; that The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss

Of many a bold one : whose kinsmen have
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter

Of you their captives, which ourself have
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war : the
Was yours by accident ; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool,
have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come : sufficeeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer ;
Augustus lives to think on't : and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat : my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd : never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like ; let his virtue join With my request, which I'll make bold your highness

Cannot deny ; he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman : save him,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him :
His favour is familiar to me.—Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own,—I know not why, nor
wherefore,

To say, live, boy : ne'er thank thy master ;
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Pitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it ;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no ; no ; no ; no ; no ; no ; no ;
There's other work in hand : I see a thing

Bitter to me as death : your life, good Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains
He leaves me, scorns me : briefly

Joys,
That place them on the truth of

Why stands he so perplex'd ?
Cym. What wouldst thou

I love thee more and more : I think
more

What's best to ask. Know'st him then on I speak ;

Wilt have him live ? Is he thy
Imo. He is a Roman : no more Than I to your highness ; who, being Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore cry'st
Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private

To give me hearing. Ay, with all my
Cym. attention

And lend my best attention. What
Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my I'll be thy master : walk with me ;

[Cymbeline and Imogen come Beh. Is not this boy reviv'd from death ?
One

Amn. Not more resembles : that sweet rosy
Who died, and was Fidele. What

Out. The same dead thing alive.
Bel. Peace, peace ! see further ; he not ; forbear ;

Creatures may be alike : wasn't he

He would have spoke to us. But we saw Gui. It is my

Bel. Be silent ; let's see further. It is my
Pis. [Aside.] Since she is living, let the time run

To good, or bad.
[Cymbeline and Imogen

Cym. Come, stand thou by Make thy demand aloud.—[To Imogen

step you forth ;
Give answer to this boy, and do it

Or, by our greatness, and the good
Which is our honour, utter to him

Winnow the truth from falsehood
to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside.] What's that ?
Cym. That diamond upon your

How came it yours ?
Imo. Thou'rt torture me to learn

Which is to be spoke, would torture
Cym.

Imo. I am glad to be acquainted
that

Which torments me to know
I got this ring : 'twas I that Whom thou didst banish ; and may grieve thee

As it doth me) a nobler sin than
'Twixt sky and ground.

Al! that belongs to this.
That paragon, thy daughter,— Whom my heart drops blood, and my Spirits to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

My daughter! what of her? Renew
My strength:
I rather thou shouldst live while nature
Will.

Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
Of the hour!) it was in Rome, (according to the hour!) 'twas at a feast, (O,
which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Which I hear'd to head!) the good
Posthumus,

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Can in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with similar proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,
(O cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,— Methinks I see him now,—

Post. [Coming forward.] Ay, so thou dost,
Italian fiend!—Ah me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, anything
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer! Thou king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I [amend,
That all the abhorred things o' the earth
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter;—villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't:—the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself,
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me; every villain Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and Be villainy less than 'twas!—O Imogen,
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.
Pis. O, gentlemen, help!

Mine, and your mistress!—O, my lord Posthumus! [help!—
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now.—Help,
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How comes these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!
Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to
To death with mortal joy. [strike me

Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O, get thee from my sight:
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow,
hence!

Breathe not where princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods!
I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: "If Pisa-
nio [confection

Have," said she, "given his mistress that

Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat."

Cym.

What's this, Cornelius?
Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease

The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel.

My boys,
There was our error.

Gui.

This is, sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady
from you?

Think that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again.

Post.

Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym.

How now, my flesh, my child?
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. [Kneeling.]

Your blessing, sir.

Bel. [To Gui. and Arv.]

Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for't.

Cym.

My tears that fall,
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo.

I am sorry for't, my lord.
Cym. O, she was naught; and 'long of her it was,

That we meet here so strangely: but her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis.

My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord
Upon my lady's missing, came to me [Cloten,
With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth,
and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feign'd letter of my master's
Then in my pocket; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate

My lady's honour: what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui.

Let me end the story:
I slew him there.

Cym.

Marry, the gods forfend!
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth, Deny't again.

Gui.

I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym.

He was a prince.

Gui.

A most uncivil one: the wrongs he did

Were nothing prince-like; for he did prove
me

With language that would make me spare
If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head!
And am right glad he is not standing
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym.

By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd.
Endure our law: thou art dead.

Imo.

I thought had been my lord.

Cym.

And take him from our presence.

Bel.

This man is better than the man he slays.
As well descended as thyself; and his
More of thee merited, than a hand of
Had ever scar for.—[To the Guards]

Arv.

They were not born for bondage.

Cym.

Wilt thou undo the worth thou art now
By tasting of our wrath?

Arv.

As good as we!

Cym.

And thou shalt die for't.

Bel.

But I will prove that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My son, I
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv.

And our good his.

Gui.

By leave:—thou hadst, great king,
Was call'd Belarius.

Cym.

A banish'd traitor.

Bel.

Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd
I know not how a traitor.

Cym.

The whole world shall not save him.

Bel.

First pay me for the nursing of the
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym.

Nursing of my
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy:
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;

Cym.

Then, spare not the old father.

Bel.

These two young gentlemen, that
father,

And think they are my sons, are none of mine
They are the issue of your loins, my son,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym.

Bel. So sure as you your father's Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you
Your pleasure was my mere offence

ishment

Itself, and all my treason: that I Was all the harm I did.

well and so they are) these twenty years
I train'd up: those arts they have, as I put into them; my breeding was, sir, as your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, was for the theft I wedded, stole these children

my punishment: I mov'd her to't;
I was ready'd the punishment before,
that which I did then: beaten for loyalty,
I sent me to treason: their dear loss,
of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd my end of standing them. But, gracious are your sons again; and I must lose of the sweetest companions in the world:

I see on their heads like dew I for they are only heaven with stars. [worthy

Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
Thou than this thou tell'st: I lost my children;
to they, I know not how to wish of worthier sons.

Be pleas'd a while.—
I call Polydore,
worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, younger princely son; he, sir, was lepp'd most curious mantle, wrought by the hand of queen mother, which, for more probation, with ease produce.

Guiderius had
a mark of wonder.
his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
a mark of wonder.

This is he;
his bath upon him still that natural stamp:
his nature's end in the donation,
his evidence now.

O, what, am I
to the birth of three? Ne'er mother delivered more. Blest pray you be, after this strange starting from your orbs,
may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
lost by this a kingdom.

No, my lord;
two worlds by't.—O my gentle
brothers,
he that met! O, never say hereafter,
I was but your sister; I you brothers,
you were so indeed.

Did you e'er meet?

And at first meeting lov'd;
so, until we thought he died.
By the queen's dream she swallow'd.

O rare instinct!
I hear all through! This scarce circumstantial branches, which should be rich in.—Where? how [tive?]

How came you to serve our Roman cap-

How parted with your brothers? how first met them? [These,

Why fled you from the court? and whither?
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;

And all the other by-dependencies, [place,
From chance to chance: but nor the time, nor Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen; [eye
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy: the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.

[To Bel.] Thou art my brother; so we'll hold these ever.

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve
To see this gracious season. [me,

Cym. All o'erjoy'd
Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly
fought,

He would have well become this place, and
The thankings of a king. [grac'd

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd; that I was he.

Speak, Iachimo: I had you down, and might Have made you finish.

Iach. [Kneeling.] I am down again:
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, be seech you,

Which I so often owe: but your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you: live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd;
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arr. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we, that you are. [of Rome.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord
Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, me-
Giant Jupiter, upon his eagle sprack'd, [thought Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmenus!

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] "When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty."

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.

[To Cym.] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mutier; which mutier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, [To Post.] unsought, were
With this most tender air. [clipp'd about Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee; and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin:—and, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising

To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen Whom heavens, (in justice, both on her and hers,)
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune

The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our privacy

eagle,
The Imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Land we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together: so through Led's town
march:

And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.
Set on there;—Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Alarum]

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King of Scotland.
 His Sons.
 Generals of the King's Army.
 Noblemen of Scotland.

Son to Banquo.
 Earl of Northumberland, General of the English Forces.

SCENE, — Scotland; in the end of the fourth Act, in England.

Young Siward, his Son.
 Seyton, an Officer attending Macbeth.
 Boy, Son to Macduff.
 An English Doctor.
 A Scotch Doctor.
 A Soldier. A Porter. An Old Man.
 Lady Macbeth.
 Lady Macduff.
 Gentlewoman attending on Lady Macbeth.
 Hecate, and three Witches.
 Lords, Gentlemen, Officers, Soldiers, Murderers, Attendants, and Messengers. The Ghost of Banquo, and other apparitions.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — An open Place.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three Witches.

Witch. When shall we three meet again,
 Under the lightning, or in rain?
 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
 When the battle's lost and won.
 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.
 Witch. Where the place?

Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
 Al. Taddock calls: — Anon!
 Al. A foul, and foul is fair:
 Through the fog and filthy air.

Upon the heath.

Enter King Duncan, Mal-

comore, Lennox, with Attendants,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

be told by his plight, of the revolt [report,

What bloody man is that? He can

Of Kernes and Gallowglasses is supplied;
 And Fortune, on his damnd quarry smiling,
 Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak:
 For brave Macbeth, (well he deserves that name,)

Disdaining Fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
 Which smok'd with bloody execution,
 Like valour's minion,
 Carv'd out his passage till he fac'd the slave;
 Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him, [chops,
 Till he unseam'd him from the naves to the
 And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
 Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break; [to come,

So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:

No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd, Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their
 heels,

But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage,
 With furbish'd arms, and new supplies of men,
 Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
 Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes;
 As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
 If I say sooth, I must report they were
 As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
 So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
 Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
 Or memorize another Golgotha,
 I cannot tell:

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both.—Go, get him surgeons. [Exit Soldier, attended.

Enter Rosse.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy thane of Rosse.
Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look, that seems to speak things
Rosse. God save the king! [strange.

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?
Rosse. From Fife, great king;
Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold.

Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;
Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us;—

Dun. Great happiness!

Rosse. That now
Sweno, the Norwey's king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disburs'd, at Saint Colme's Inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest:—go, pronounce his present death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Rosse. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?
2 Witch. Killing swine.
3 Witch. Sister, where thou? [lap,
1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her
And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd:—"Give me," quoth I:—
"Aroint thee, witch!" the rump-fed ronyon
cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the
But in a sieve I'll thither sail, [Tiger:
And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1 Witch. Thou art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.

1 Witch. I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I' the shipman's card.

I'll drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day

Hang upon his pent-house lid;

He shall live a man forbid:

Weary sev'n-nights, nine times nine,

Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.
Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me

1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,

Wreck'd as homeward he did come. [Dramatic sound.

3 Witch. A drum, a drum!

Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about:

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine!

Peace!—the charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not

Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres?

Macb. Are these,

So wither'd, and so wild in their attire,

That look not like th' inhabitants o' the earth,

And yet are on't?—Live you? or are ye no?

That man may question? You seem to me stand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips:—You should be waded

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can;—what are ye?

1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! [thane of Cawdor]

thane of Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! [thane of Cawdor]

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! [thane of Cawdor]

king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start and Things that do sound so fair?—I' the

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble

You greet with present grace, and good diction

Of noble having, and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal: to me you

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow, and which

not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor

Your favours, nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though be none:

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

1 Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, and Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers,

more:

By Sinel's death, I know, I am

But how of Cawdor? the thane o' the

A prosperous gentleman; and to be

Stands not within the prospect of

No more than to be Cawdor. Say,

You owe this strange intelligence,

The blasted heath you stop our way
Such prophetic greeting:—speak, I charge you.

[Witches vanish.]
The earth hath bubbles, as the water lakes,

And these are of them: whither are they vanish'd?

Up, into the air; and what seem'd corporal, melted

Away into the wind.—'Would they had

Were such things here as we do speak
To eat on of the insane root, [about?]

That takes the reason prisoner?
Your children shall be kings.

And thane of Cawdor too: went it
Not so?
[Who's here?]

To the self-same tune and words.
Enter Ross and Angus.

The king hath happily received, Macbeth, of his success: and when he reads

Of your personal venture in the rebels' fight,

Should be thine, or his: silenc'd with Silence in the rest o' the self-same day,

And shar'd of what thyself didst make,
As thick as tale,

And every one did bear
Them down before him.

We are sent
Toward thee into his sight, not pay thee.

And, for an earnest of a greater [Cawdor:]
What, can the devil speak true?

Who was the thane, lives yet;
Who's heavy judgment bears that life
To lose. Whether he was of Norway; or did line the rebel help or vantage, or that with in his country's wreck, I know

not:—

Glance, and thane of Cawdor:
Thanks for your

Do you not hope your children
Will be kings,

Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

Will be kings,
Those that gave the thane of Cawdor to
That, trusted home,

The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequence.—

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. [Aside.] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentle-

[Aside.] This supernatural soliciting
[men,
Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—if ill,

Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of

Cawdor:

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears

Are less than horrible imaginings: [Instinct,
My thought, whose murder yet is but fan-

Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother'd in surmise; and nothing is,
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,

Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments; cleave not to their
But with the aid of use. [mould,

Macb. [Aside.] Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest
day. [leisure,

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought [pains

With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your
Are register'd where every day I turn The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.— [time,

Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at more
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends. [Exeunt,

SCENE IV.—FORRES. A Room in the Palace.
Flourish. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donal-bain, Lenox, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are Those in commission yet return'd? [not

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die: who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons;
Implor'd your highness' pardon; and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face;
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.—

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Rosse, and Angus.

O worthless cousin,
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserv'd; [ment

That the proportion both of thanks and pay-
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children and servants: [everything

Which do but what they should, by doing
Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me infold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon [after,
Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name here-
The prince of Cumberland: which honour

Not, unaccompanied, invest him only; [must
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you. [for you;

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!
Macb. [Aside.] The prince of Cumberland!
that is a step,

On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires;
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand! yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

[Exit.
Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so
And in his commendations I am fed; [valiant;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth's
Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

Lady M. "They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came mine ever-king, who all-hail'd me, 'Thane of Cawdor' by which title, before, these weird sisters me, and referred me to the coming on of with, 'Hail, king that shalt be!' That thought good to deliver thee, my dearest of greatness, that thou mightest not fear duces of rejoicing, by being ignorant of greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy and farewell."

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shall be,
What thou art promis'd:—yet do I fear the nature;

It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way: thou wouldst
Art not without ambition; but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,

That thou wouldst holily; wouldst not
And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou'ldst great Glamis,
That which cries, "Thus thou must do,"

have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do
Than wishest should be undone."—Hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear;
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden crown,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter an Attendant.
What is your business?

Atten. The king comes here tonight.
Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say so.

Is not thy master with him? who were he Would have inform'd for preparation.

Atten. So please you, it is true: he is
is coming:
One of my fellows had the speed of him
Who, almost dead for breath, bad news
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. He brings great news.—[Exit Attendant.
The raven himself is hoarse
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you men
That tend on mortal thoughts, awake!
And fill me, from the crown to the sole of my foot,
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood;
Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace
The effect and it! Come to my chamber,
breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering
Wherever in your sightless substance
You wait on nature's mischief! Come,
night,
And pull thee in the dunest amulet of That my keen knife see not the wound of my Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
To cry, "Hold, hold!"

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
 Enter both, by the all-hail hereafter!
 Enter both, by the all-hail hereafter!
 Enter both, by the all-hail hereafter!

My dearest love,

And when goes hence?

Tomorrow, as he purposes,

O, never

that morrow see!

face, my thine, is as a book where men

read strange matters. To beguile the time, and, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,

the serpent under't. He that's coming provided for: and you shall put great business into my despatch; I shall to all our nights and days to come sovereign away and masterdom.

We will speak further,

Only look up clear;

your favour ever is to fear:

all the rest to me.

[Exit.]

VI.—Inverness. Before the Castle.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Don-

albano, Banquo, Lenox, Macduff, Rosse,

and Attendants.

This castle hath a pleasant seat; the

air

is sweetly recommends itself

to our gentle senses.

This guest of summer,

the dawning martlet, does approve,

our mansionry, that the heaven's breath is so perfumed here: no jutty, frieze,

nor eagle's beak, nor pendent eave,

nor ornament of masonry

but doth his pendent bed, and procreant

most breed and haunt, I have observed.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

See, see, our honour'd hostess!

How follows us sometime is our love. Herein I teach you shall bid God 'tild us for your pains,

that thank us for your trouble.

All our service,

point twice done, and then done

over and single business to contend with those honours deep and broad, wherefore our house: for those of old,

late dignities heap'd up to them,

yeat hermits.

Where's the thane of Cawdor?

him at the heels, and had a purpose to have parveyor: but he rides well; (him

his guest love, sharp as his spur, hath holp

To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
 We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,

 To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
 Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand;
 Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
 And shall continue our graces towards him.

By your leave, hostess. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Inverness. A Room in the Castle.

Hanbays and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then, enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well

it were done quickly: if the assassination
 Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,
 With his surcease, success; that but this blow

Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
 But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,

We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases,
 We still have judgment here; that we but teach

Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return

To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice

Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
 First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,

Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
 Who should against his murderer shut the door,

 Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan

Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
 So clear in his great office, that his virtues

Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongu'd, against
 The deep damnation of his taking-off;

And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
 Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd

Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
 Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,

That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no
 spur

To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself,
 And falls on the other—

Enter Lady Macbeth.

How now! what news!
Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has?
Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:

 He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought

 Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
 Which would be worn now in their newest

Not cast aside so soon. [Gloss,

Lady M. Was the hope drunk, Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept
since?

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem, Letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would,"
Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. Prythee, peace:
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't, then,
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would

Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor
place,

Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now

Does unmake you. I have given suck, and
know

How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless
gums,

And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as
you

Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail?

Lady M. We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,— Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey
Soundly invite him,—his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince,
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only: when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only;
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two

Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have don't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth
know

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Inverness. Court within the Castle.
Enter Banquo and Fleance, with a Servant bearing a torch.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?
Fle. The moon is down; I have not seen the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.
Fle. I take't, 'tis later.

Ban. Hold, take my sword:
bawdry in heaven,
Their candles are all out: take thee that
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers,
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword.

Who's there?

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a torch.
Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The
He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices:
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepared,
Our will became the servant to delight;
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. I dreamt last night of the three weird
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them.
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words to you.
If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind request,
Macb. If you shall cleave to my counsel,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. Good repose to you,
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance free.
I shall be counsel'd.

Macb. Good repose to you,
Ban. Thanks, sir; the like to you.
[Exeunt Banquo and Fleance.]

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed,
To-morrow.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppress'd brain?

I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that leads to
And such an instrument I was to use.

Mine eyes are made the tools of this; but [Exeunt.]

with all the rest: I see thee still;
thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,
not so before.—There's no such bloody business, which informs mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half world seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse their sleep; witchcraft celebrates Macbeth's offerings; and wither'd murder,

ord' by his sentinel, the wolf, [pace,
howl'd his watch, thus with his stealthy quain's ravishing strides, toward his like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set not my steps, which way they walk, for comes prate of my whereabouts,

the present horror from the time, now suits with it. Whiles I threat, he to the heat of deeds too cold breath

it is done; the bell invites me.
[A bell rings.]
Duncan; for it is a knell

summons thee to heaven or to hell.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same.
Enter Lady Macbeth.

M. That which hath made them drunk made me bold;
hath made them hath given me fire.

—Peace!
—That shriek'd, the fatal bellman, gives the stern'st good-night.—He is

it;
are open; and the surfeited grooms their charge with snores: I have and nature do contend about them,

they live, or die.
[Knocking.] Who's there? what, ho!

M. Alack, I am afraid they have not done. The attempt, and not the deed.—Hark!—I laid their daggers

ready;
not miss them.—Had he not resembled me?—I had done't.—My

Enter Macbeth.
I have done the deed.—Didst thou hear a noise?

M. I heard the owl scream, and the crickets cry.
When?

Now.
As I descended?

Mach. Hark!
Donalbain.
[Looking on his hands.] This is a very night.

Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry
night.

Mach. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried, "murder!" [hears them:]
That they did wake each other: I stood and
But they did say their prayers, and address'd
Again to sleep.

[them]
Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Mach. One cried "God bless us!" and,

"Amen," the other:

As they had seen me with these hangman's
Listening their fear, I could not say "Amen,"
When they did say, "God bless us!"

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Mach. But wherefore could not I pronounce

"Amen?"

I had most need of blessing, and "Amen"
Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Mach. Methought I heard a voice cry,

"Sleep no more!" [sleep,
Macbeth does murder sleep,"—the innocent

Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second

course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast,—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Mach. Still it cried, "Sleep no more!" to all the house:

[Knocking.]
"Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore

Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no

more!"

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,

You do unbend your noble strength, to think

So brainsickly of things. Go get some water,

And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—

Why did you bring these daggers from the

place?

They must lie there: go carry them; and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Mach. I'll go no more:

I am afraid to think what I have done;

Look on't again, I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

Give me the daggers: the sleeping, and the

dead,

Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood

That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,

I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;

For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking heard.]

Mach. Whence is that knocking?

How is't with me, when every noise appals me?

What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out

mine eyes!

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood

Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,

Making the green—one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame [hear a knocking] To wear a heart so white.—[Knocking.] At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber: A little water clears us of this deed: How easy is it then! Your constancy Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking.] Hark! more knocking: Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us, And show us to be watchers:—be not lost So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed,—'twere best not know myself. [Knocking.] Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Knocking heard. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub! Here's a farmer, that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty; come in time; have napkins enough about you; here you'll sweat for't.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock! Who's there, in the other devil's name!—'Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there!—'Faith, here's an English tailor come hither, for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock; never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter. [Opens the gate.]

Enter Macduff and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went That you do lie so late? [to bed,

Port. 'Faith, sir, we were carousing to the second cock: and drink, air, is a great provoker of three things. [clally provoke?]

Macd. What three things does drink espe-

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me: but I requited him for his lie; and I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Enter Macbeth.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he

Len. Good morrow, noble sir. Good morrow, noble sir.

Macb. Is the king stirring, worthy lenox?

Macb. He did command me to call you.

Macb. He did command me to call you.

Macb. I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I know this is a joyful time.

Macb. I know this is a joyful time.

Macb. But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call

For 'tis my limited service.

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint

Len. The night has been unruly: since

lay,

Our chimneys were blown down; and Lamentings heard i' the air; strange of death;

And prophesying, with accents terrible

Of dire combustion, and conflagration,

New hatch'd to the fearful time: the

bird

Clamour'd the livelong night: some say

Was feverous, and did shake. 'Twas a rough

Macb.

Len. My young remembrance cannot

A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! horror!

Cannot conceive, nor name thee! What's the Macb., Len.

Macd. Confusion now hath master piece!

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke

The Lord's anointed temple, and stole

The life o' the building!

Macb. What is't you say? the light

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and your sight

With a new Gorgon:—do not bid me

See, and then speak yourselves. Awake, and Ring the alarm-bell. Murder and Banquo and Donaldbain! Malchimo!

Shake off this downy sleep, death's

And look on death itself! Malchimo!

The great doom's image! Malchimo!

As from your graves rise up, and

spirits

To countenance this horror! Rise, and

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What's the business?

hollow trumpet calls to parley
 O gentle lady,
 not for you to hear what I can speak :
 repetition, in a woman's ear,
 murder as it fell.—

Enter Banquo.

O Banquo, Banquo,
 royal master's murder'd !
 Woe, alas !

Too cruel, anywhere.
 I pry'these, contradict thyself,
 it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lenox.
 Had I but died an hour before this bloody time ; for, from this instant, serious in mortality : [stant, toys ; renown and grace is dead ;

 life is drawn, and the mere lees doth vault to brag of.

Re-enter Malcolm and Donalbain.
 What is amiss ?

You are, and do not know't ;
 the head, the fountain of your

the very source of it is stopp'd.
 Your royal father's murder'd.

O, by whom ?
 I don't :
 as it seem'd, [blood ;
 their faces were all badg'd with their daggers, which, unwip'd, we [tracted ;
 pillows : they star'd, and were dislike was to be trusted with them.
 O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
 that I did them.

Wherefore did you so ?
 Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,
 neutral, in a moment. No man :

condition of my violent love
 the panser, reason. Here lay Duncan, after skin he'd with his golden blood ;

his wash'd slabs look'd like a breach in nature, [murderers, his wasteful entrance : there, the colours of their trade, their breach'd with gore : who could have made his love known ?

Help me hence, ho !
 [tongues,
 [And to Don.] Why do we hold our
 [And to Mal.] What should be late, hid in an anger-hole, and seize us ? Let's away : our yet brow'd,

Mal. [Aside to Don.] Nor our strong sorrow
 Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady :—
 [Lady Macbeth is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
 That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
 And question this most bloody piece of work,
 To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us :

In the great hand of God I stand ; and thence,
 Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
 Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
 And meet i' the hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.]

Mal. What will you do ? Let's not consort with them :

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
 Which the false man does easy. I'll to England. To Ireland, I ; our separated fortune

Shall keep us both the safer : where we are,
 There's daggers in men's smiles : the near in
 The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
 Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way
 Is to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse ;

And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
 But shift away : there's warrant in that theft
 Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Inverness. Without the Castle.

Enter Rosse and an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember
 well :

Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful, and things strange ; but this Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah, good father,

Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,

Threaten his bloody stage : by the clock, 'tis
 And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp :

Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
 That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
 When living light should kiss it ?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural,
 Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday

A falcon, towering in her pride of place, [last,
 Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at, and kill'd.

Rosse. And Duncan's horses, (a thing most strange and certain.)

Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung
 out,

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would Make war with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said, they eat each other.

Rosse. They did so,—to the amazement of mine eyes,

That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Macduff.—

Enter Macduff.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?
Rosse. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Rosse. Alas, the day!
What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd:
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst nature still:
Thrillless ambition, that wilt rav'n up
Thine own life's means!—Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd; and gone to
To be invested. [Scene

Rosse. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colme-kil;

The sacred store-house of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Rosse. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done
there; adieu!

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Rosse. Farewell, father. [with those Old M. God's benison go with you; and

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,

As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
Thou play'dst most foully for't: yet it was

It should not stand in thy posterity; [said,

But that myself should be the root and father

Of many kings. If there come truth from them,

(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine),

Why, by the verities on thee made good,

May they not be my oracles as well,

And set me up in hope? But, hush, no more.

Sennet sounded. Enter Macbeth, as King;

Lady Macbeth, as Queen; Lenox, Rosse,

Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten,

It had been as a gap in our great feast,

And all thing unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper,

And I'll request your presence. [sir,

Ban. Let your highness

Command upon me; to the which my duties

Are with a most indissoluble tie

For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desired

(Which still hath been both grave and perous)

In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow

Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the

"Twixt this and supper: go not my horse

better,

I must become a borrower of the night

For a dark hour, or twain. Fall not our

Macb.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear, our bloody courses

In England, and in Ireland; not content

Their cruel parricide, filling their hearths

With strange invention: but of this

tomorrow;

When, therewithal, we shall have

Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: to-morrow

Till you return at night. Good-night. [Exeunt

you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord: our thanks

Macb. I wish your horses swift, and foot,

And so I do commend you to their

Farewell.—

Let every man be master of his time

Till seven at night; to make society

The sweeter welcome, we will keep company

Till supper-time alone: while than

with you!

[Exeunt Lady Macbeth, Lords, Ladies, and

Sirrah, a word with you: attend these

Our pleasure?

Atten. They are, my lord.

Macb. Bring them before us.—

To be thus is nothing;

But to be safely thus—our fears in Stick deep; and in his royalty of Reigns that which would be fear'd:

he dares;

And, to that dauntless temper of

He hath a wisdom that doth guide

To act in safety. There is none

Whose being I do fear: and, under

My Genius is rebuk'd; as, it is said,

Mark Antony's was by Caesar.

When first they put the name of

me,

And bade them speak to him: to

They hail'd him father to a line of

Upon my head they plac'd a crown;

And put a barren sceptre in my

Thence to be wretch'd with an

No son of mine succeeding.

For Banquo's issue have I fil'd

For them the gracious Duncan has Put rancours in the vessel of my

Only for them; and mine eternal

Given to the common enemy of

To make them kings, the seed

Rather than so, come, fate, into champion me to the utterance!—Who's there?

Attendant, with two Murderers.

Go to the door, and stay there till we call.

It was not yesterday we spoke together?

Mac. It was, so please your highness.

Well, then, now you consider'd of my speeches? Know,

It was he, in the times past, which held under fortune; which you thought had the innocent self: this I made good to you with you, [the instruments]

you were borne in hand, how cross'd, that might, and all things else

thus did Banquo.

You made it known to us.

I did no; and went further, which point of second meeting. Do you find patience so predominant in your nature,

that you can let this go? Are you so gospel'd,

for this good man, and for his issue,

that heavy hand hath bow'd you to the ward yours for ever?

We are men, my liege.

We are men, my liege.

And the catalogue ye go for men,

Aminals, curs,

water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are of the name of dogs: the val'd file

qualifies the swift, the slow, the subtle;

house-keeper, the hunter, every one

bring to the gift which bounteous nature gave him clos'd; whereby he does receive addition, from the bill

of you them all alike; and so of men.

I will put that manhood, say it;

the worst rank of manhood, say it;

creation takes your enemy off;

you to the heart and love of us,

our health but sickly in his life,

in his death were perfect.

I am one, my liege,

no more, that I am reckless what to the world.

And I another,

tugg'd with fortune,

would set my life on any chance,

it, or be rid on't.

Both of you

was your enemy.

True, my lord.

and in such bloody

of his being thrusts

of life; and though I could

my heart's of life;

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

of life; and though I could

With barefac'd power sweep him from my sight,

And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not.

For certain friends that are both his and mine,

Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall

Whom I myself struck down: and thence it is,

That I to your assistance do make love;

Masking the business from the common eye

For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,

Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you.

Within this hour, at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves;

Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,

The moment on't; for't must be done to-

night,

And something from the palace; always

thought,

That I require a clearness: and with him,

(To leave no rubs nor botches in the work.)

Pleance his son, that keeps him company,

Whose absence is no less material to me

Than is his father's, must embrace the fate

Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:

I'll come to you anon.

2 Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within. [Exit Murderers.]

It is concluded. Banquo, thy soul's flight,

If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Forres. Another Room in the

Palace.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again tonight. [His leisure]

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,

Where our desire is got without content:

'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,

Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,

Of sorriest fancies your companions making;

Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died

[all remedy,

With them they think on? Things without

Should be without regard: what's done, is done. [Kill'd it:]

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not

She'll close, and be herself; whilst our poor

malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.

But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep

In the affliction of these terrible dreams,

That shake us nightly: better be with the dead,

Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to
Than on the torture of the mind to lie [peace,
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well; [poison,
Treason has done his worst; nor steel, nor Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial among your guests to-
night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and Unsafe the while, that we [longue:
Must lave our honours in these flattering streams;

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.
Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear
wife!

Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance, Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not etern.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are as-then be thou jocund: ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight; ere, to black Hecate's summons,

The shard-borne beetle, with his drowsy hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall
A deed of dreadful note. [be done

Lady M. What's to be done!

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed.—Come, sealing
night,

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And with thy bloody and invisible hand,
Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse;
Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse. [still;

Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee
Things, had begun, make strong themselves
by ill:

So, pr'ythee, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Forres. A Park, with a path leading to the Palace gate.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

3 Mur. Macbeth.

2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers

Our offices, and what we have to do,
To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of
day:

Now spurs the lated traveller space,

To gain the timely inn; and near approach
The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Mark! I hear horses.

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

2 Mur. Then, 'tis he; the

That are within the note of expectation.

Already are i' the court.

1 Mur. His horses go away.

3 Mur. Almost a mile; but he does march.

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate.

Make it their walk.

2 Mur. A light, a light!

3 Mur. Stand to't.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, Servant and a

torch.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down.

Ban. O, treachery!—Fly, good Fleance!

Thou may'st revenge.—O slave! [Dies. Fleance and Servant

3 Mur. Who did strike out the field?

1 Mur. Was't not the way?

3 Mur. There's but one down, the

2 Mur. We have lost best half of our

1 Mur. Well, let's away, and my

is done.

SCENE IV.—A Room of State in the Palace.

A banquet prepared. Enter Macbeth, and

Macbeth, Rosse, Lenox, Lords, and tendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees.

And last, the hearty welcome. [Drops

Lords. Thanks to your Macb. Ourself will mingle with

And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state; but, in

Our will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, not our friends;

For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter first Murderer, to the Macb. See, they encounter thee with hearts' thanks;

Both sides are even: here I'll sit, I'll

Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink up

The table round.—There's blood upon

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's, then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without

Is he despatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut;

for him.

Macb. Then art the best o' the

That did the like for Fleance: if thou

Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal

Fleance is 'scaped.

Macb. Then comes my else been perfect;

Whole as the marble, founded as the

As broad and general as the casing

When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Rosse. What sights, my lord?
Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him: at once, good night:—
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health Attend his majesty!

Lady M. A kind good night to all!
[Exeunt all except Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.]

Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood: [speak;]
Stones have been known to move, and trees to Augurs, and understood relations, have
By magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought forth

The secret'st man of blood.—What is the night?
Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff
At our great bidding? [denies his person]

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send:
There's not a one of them, but in his house
I keep a servant feed. I will to-morrow
(And betimes I will) to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know, [good,

By the worst means, the worst. For mine own
All causes shall give way: I am in blood
Stept in so far, that should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er;
Strange things I have in head, that will to
hand;

Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep. [self abuse]

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:—
We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter Hecate meeting the three Witches.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate? you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth,
In riddles, and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?

And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron

Meet me i' the morning; thither he Will come to know his destiny:
Your vessels and your spells provide,
Your charms and every thing beside,
I am for the air; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
Great business must be wrought ere
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound
I'll catch it ere it come to ground;
And that, distill'd by magic sleight,
Shall raise such artificial sprites,
As, by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear,
And, you all know, security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

[Song within, "Come away, away," &c.]

Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.
1 Witch. Come, let's make haste soon be back again.

SCENE VI.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Lenox and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but little
thoughts,

Which can interpret further: only,
Things have been strangely born;
cious Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth:—no more,
And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd Whom, you may say, if I please you,
kill'd,

For Fleance fled. Men must not walk
Who cannot want the thought, how
It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain

To kill their gracious father? damned be How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not
In pious rage, the two delinquents

That were the slaves of drink, and Was not that nobly done? Ay, and
For 'twould have angered any heart
To hear the men deny't. So that, I
He has borne all things well: and
That, had he Duncan's sons under

(As, an't please heaven, he shall should find

What 'twere to kill a father; so should But, peace!—for from broad words
he fail'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast,
Macduff lives in disgrace: sir, can
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The man I mean
From whom this tyrant holds the Lives in the English court; and is Of the most pious Edward with
That the malevolence of fortune

Takes from his high respect; that
Is gone to pray the holy king, open
To wake Northumberland and waken

Thunder. An Apparition of a bloody child rises.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—
Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn

The power of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.]

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder. What is this,

Thunder. An Apparition of a child crowned,
with a tree in his hand, rises.

That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to't.

App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.]

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest; bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodements!
good!

Rebellious head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.—Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, (if your art
Can tell so much,) shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me
know:—

Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise
1 Witch. Show! [Handboys.]

2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

Eight kings appear, and pass in order; the last with a glass in his hand: Banquo following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo; down! [hair,]
Thy crown does sear mine eyeballs:—and thy Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:—

A third is like the former.—Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—
Start, eyes!—

What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?—

Another yet?—A seventh?—I'll see no more:—
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry;
Horrible sight!—Now, I see, 'tis true;

For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon
And points at them for his.—What, is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so; but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sisters, cheer we up his spirits;
And show the best of our delights:
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antique round;
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish.

Macb. Where are they? Gone?— pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in! without there!

Enter Lenox.
What's your grace's business?

Len. Saw you the weird sisters?

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them!

hear
The galloping of horse: who was't that cry'd?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that cry'd, Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England?

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my Seize upon Fife; give to the edge of the sword

Unless the deed go with it: from this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now To crown my thoughts with acts, be that and done:

The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge of the sword

His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate That trace him in his line. No longer will

a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose
But no more sights!—Where are the

men?
Come, bring me where they are.

SCENE II.—Fife. A Room in Macduff's
Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Ross.

L. Macd. What has he done to my little fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, my lady.

L. Macd. His flight was madness: when our friends
Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear,
I leave his babes,

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his babes,
His mansion, and his titles in a place
From whence himself does fly?
He wants the natural touch; for the

The most diminutive of birds, will be
The most diminutive of birds, will be

young ones in her nest, against the owl.
In the fear, and nothing is the love;
This is the wisdom, where the flight
Is against all reason.

My dearest coz',
I school yourself: but, for your husband, wise, judicious, and best knows the season. I dare not speak much further;
I do not know the times, when we are traitors, nor what we fear, yet know not what we fear, and move. I take my leave of you:
I shall be long but I'll be here again:
at the worst will cease, or else climb upward

and they were before.—My pretty cousin,
I am so much a fool, should I stay
longer,
I would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
[Exit.]

Sirrah, your father's dead:
As birds do now! How will you live?
What, with worms and flies?
With what I get, I mean; and so do thou'dst never fear

the gin, nor lime,
nor net, nor snare,
I, mother! Poor birds are not set for.

Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou say, how will you do for a husband?
Why, I can buy me twenty at my market.

Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
I can ret, I faith,
enough for thee.

Was my father a traitor, mother?
Ay, that he was.
What is a traitor?

Why, one that swears and lies.
And be all traitors that do so?
Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Must they all be hanged, that do so?
Macd. Every one.

Who must hang them?
Macd. Why, the honest men.
There are liars and swearers are fools;
But there are honest men, and hang up them.

Now God help thee, poor monster! But how wilt thou do for a father?
If he were dead, you'd weep for him:

if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect.
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly;

If you will take a homely man's advice, [tones.
Be not found here; hence, with your little
To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;
To do worse to you were fell cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer. [Exit.]
L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm; but I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where, to do harm
Is often laudable; to do good, sometime Accounted dangerous folly; why then, alas!
Do I put up that woman's defence, [faces?]
To say I have done no harm? What are these Enter Murderers.

Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.

Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-eared villain.

Mur. What, you egg!
Young fry of treachery! [Stabbing him.]

Son. He has kill'd me, mother:
Run away, I pray you! [Dies.]

[Exit Lady Macduff, crying "Murder!" and pursued by the Murderers.]

SCENE III.—England. The King's Palace.
Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade,
Weep our sad bosoms empty. [and there]

Macd. Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword; and, like good men, [morn,

Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: each new New widows howl, new orphans cry; new sorrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out Like syllable of doleour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance. [tongues,

This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well; [but something
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young:
You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb
To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.
Mal. But Macbeth is

A good and virtuous nature may recoil,
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon;
That which you are, my thoughts cannot Angels are bright still, though the brightest
fall:

Though all things foul would wear the brows
Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes.
Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child (Those precious motives, those strong knots of Without leave-taking?—I pray you, (love)
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties:—you may be rightly Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs,

The title is affeard!—Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st,
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer
Of goodly thousands; but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before:
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state Esteem him as a lamb, being compared With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evil to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'rbear,
That did oppose my will: better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny: it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may

Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty
And yet seem cold, the time you may so waste wink.

We have willing daimers enough; these
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this, they even
In my most ill-compounded affection, each
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other's home:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge

Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. Sticks deeper; grows with more imperious
Than summer-seeming lust; and it has eat
The sword of our slain kings: yet do you Scotland hath fountains that fill up your
Of your mere own: all these are passions
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: the time
As justice, verity, temperance, honesty,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but I should
In the division of such several crimes,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power,
Pour the universal peace on mine enemies!
Uproar the universal peace, on mine enemies!
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland!
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern,
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome sons
again?

Since that the truest issue of thy throne,
By his own interdiction stands accus'd,
And does blasphemy his breed—
thy father

Was a most sainted king: the queen
Off'n'r upon her knees than on her feet, Died every day she lived. Fair is the
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself:
Have banish'd me from Scotland.

Macd. Thy hope ends here!
Mal. Macbeth, this child
Child of integrity, hath from my soul Wip'd the black scruples, accus'd my
thoughts

To thy good truth and honour,
By many of these trains hath sought to
Into his power; and modest wisdom
From over-credulous haste; but my poor
Deal between thee and me! for even so I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction: hence
The taints and blames I laid upon myself

Convey to my nature. I am yet to woman: never was forsworn;
I have covet'd what was mine own;
I have not spill'd my faith; would not betray to his fallow; and delight

than life: my first false speak-near myself: what I am truly, (ing and my poor country's, to command:
indeed, before thy here-approach,
with ten thousand warlike men,
at a point, were setting forth:
together; and the chance of goodwas warranted quarrel! Why are you Such welcome and unwelcome things to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.
Well, more anon.—Comes the king
with you?—
No, he is not here: there are a crew of wretched of art; but, at his touch,
both heaven given his hand,
heavenly amend.

I thank you, doctor.
[Exit Doctor.]
What's the disease he means?
This call'd the evil:
In this good king;
since my here-remain in Eng-

him do. How he solicits heaven,
I don't know: but strangely-visited
And clearest, pitiful to the eye,
A golden stamp about their necks,
with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken, his benediction. With this strange heavenly gift of prophecy;
his full of grace.

See, who comes here?
My countryman; but yet I know him
My ever-gentle cousin, welcome
[not.]
I know him now!—good God, betimes that makes us strangers.

Sir, amen.
[remove]
I would know it: I cannot know it, but our grave: where nothing, is once seen to smile;
and groans, and shrieks that mark'd; where violent sorrow

the dead man's knell
is call'd, for whom; and good
lives

the dead man's knell
is call'd, for whom; and good
lives

the dead man's knell
is call'd, for whom; and good
lives

the dead man's knell
is call'd, for whom; and good
lives

the dead man's knell
is call'd, for whom; and good
lives

the dead man's knell
is call'd, for whom; and good
lives

Expire before the flowers in their cups,
Dying ere they sicken.

Macd. O, relation
Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What's the newest grief?
Rosse. That of an hour's age doth hiss the Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife?

Rosse. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Rosse. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their
peace?

Rosse. No; they were well at peace, when Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech:
how goes it?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a
Of many worthy fellows that were out; [rumour
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women light,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither: gracious England hath

Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men;
An older, and a better soldier, none
That Christendom gives out.

Rosse. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words,
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breast?

Rosse. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe: though the main Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Rosse. Let not your ears despise my tongue
for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humph! I guess at it.

Rosse. Your castle is surpris'd: your wife and babes
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd dear,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven!
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your
brows;

Give sorrow words: the grief, that does not Whisper the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it Macd. My children too?

Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence!—
My wife kill'd too?

Rosse. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted:

Let's make us medicine of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty
Did you say, all?—O hell-kite!—All! [sings]
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop!

Mal. Dispute it like a man.
Macd. I shall do so;

But I must also feel it as a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven

look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Mac-

They were all struck for thee! naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls; heaven rest them

now! [let grief
Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword:
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine
eyes,

And braggart with my tongue!—But, gentle
Cut short all intermission; front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself;

Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;

Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer

you may;
The night is long that never finds the day.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gen. Since his majesty went into the field,
I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet
all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature! to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her
say?

Gen. That, sir, which I will not report after
her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gen. Neither to you, nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.—[Enter Lady Macbeth, with a lighted taper.] Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise;

and, upon my life, fast asleep. O, my life, stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?
Gen. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.
Gen. Ay, but their sense is shut. Look, look!

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, look!
she rubs her hands.

Gen. It is an accustomed action with her, seem thus washing her hands; I have her to continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's the spot.
Doct. Hark! she speaks: I will set you what comes from her, to satisfy my brance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!

One, two; why, then, 'tis time to light.
is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, afraid! What need we fear who know when none can call our power to

Yet who would have thought the old man have had so much blood in him!

Doct. Do you mark that?
Lady M. The thane of Fife had where is she now?—What, will these ne'er be clean!—No more o' that, my lord;

more o' that: you mar all with this

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known you should not.

Gen. She has spoke what she should am sure of that: Heaven knows what she

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten
this little hand.—Oh, oh, oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The lady sorely charged.

Gen. I would not have such a heart bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well, sir.
Gen. Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my power, yet I have known those who have had it their sleep, who have died holily in

Lady M. Wash your hands; I feel night-gown; look not so pale!—I feel again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come on's grave.

Doct. Even so.
Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's my at the gate: come, come, come, come, me your hand; what's done, cannot be

Doct. Will she go now to bed?
Gen. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad;
Do breed unnatural troubles: infected
To their deaf pillows will disclose secrets:

More needs she the divine, than God, God, forgive us all! Look, look!
Remove from her the means of all
And still keep eyes upon her
night:

and she has mated, and amaz'd my sight:
I had dare not speak.

Good night, good doctor.
[Exit.]

—The Country near Dunsinane.
Angus, Lenox, and Soldiers.

The English power is near, led on by Seward, and the good Macduff:

turn in them; for their dear causes
the lacerating, and the grim alarm,
the mortified man.

Will meet them; Near Birnam wood is certain, sir, he is not: I have a file country: there is Seward's son, through youths, that even now these first of manhood.

What does the tyrant?
he mad: others, that lesser hate fury: but, for certain, (him, his distemper'd cause

Now does he feel revolts upbraid his faith-breath;
move only in command,
now does he feel his title about him, like a giant's robe

Who, then, shall blame that is within him does condemn being there?

Well, march we on,
the medicine of the sickly weal;
pour we, in our country's purge,

Or so much as it needs,
the sovereign flower, and drown the march toward Birnam. [Exeunt.]

—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Bring me no more reports; let them and with fear. What's the boy of woman! The spirits that [thus,— Macbeth; no man that's born of [false thanes,

with the English epicures!

The mind I away by, and the heart I bear, Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.
The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd!

Where got'st thou that goose look! [Exit]
Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain!
Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go prick thy face, and over-red thy fear.

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch!
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-

face!
Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence.—Seyton!—I am sick at heart,

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—this push
Will cheer me ever, or dis-seat me now.

I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the ear, the yellow leaf;

And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,

Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honour,
breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny, and Seyton! [dare not.]

Enter Seyton.
Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?
Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh Give me my armour. [He looks.]

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.
Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine
How does your patient, doctor? [Armour.]

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd;

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain;

And, with some sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous
Which weighs upon the heart? [stuff.]

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none
of it.—

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff.—

Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from
me.—

Come, sir, despatch.—If thou couldst, doctor,
The water of my land, find her disease,

And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say,—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal pre-Makes us hear something. [Paration

Macb. Bring it after me.—
I will not be afraid of death and bane,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane.

[Exeunt all except Doctor.] Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane: a Wood in view.

Enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, old Siward and his Son, Macduff, Menteith, Caithness, Angus, Lenox, Rosse, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at That chambers will be safe. [Hand

Men. We doubt it nothing.

Stw. What wood is this before us?

Men. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough, [shadow
And bear't before him: thereby shall we
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Sin. We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope:
For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less have given him the revolt;
And none serve with him but constrained
things,

Whose hearts are absent too.

Macb. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Sin. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe.
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate;

But certain issue strokes must arbitrate:

Towards which, advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;

The cry is still, "They come;" our castle's
strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie,
Till famine and the ague eat them up:

Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours,

We might have met them drench'd,
beard,

And beat them backward home. [A cry within of women.]

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the
fears:

The time has been, my senses would
To hear a night-shriek; and my tell of Would at a dismal treatise rouse, and As life were in't: I have supp'd full horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous
Cannot once start me.—Wherefore
Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;

And all our yesterdays have lighted
To the way to dusty death. Out, out, candle!

Life's but a walking shadow; a poor
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; say,
quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,
I should report that which I say I saw;
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon
hill,

I look'd towards Birnam, and saw
The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar! [Striking him.]

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if
so;

Within this three mile may you see it
I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang Till famine cling thee: if thy speech
I care not if thou dost for me as much;
I pull in resolution; and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the
That lies like truth: "Fair and foul wood

Do come to Dunsinane;"—and now Comes toward Dunsinane.—Die,
If this which he avouches does appear;
There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying;
I 'gin to be a-weary of the sun,
And wish th' estate o' the world
undone.—

Ring the alarum bell!—Blow,
wreck!

At least we'll die with harness on our back.

Macb.—Dunsinane. A Plain before the Castle.

Macb.—Dunsinane. A Plain before
the Castle. Macb.—Dunsinane, Old Macduff, do, and their army, with near enough; your leafy screens

down.

Like those you are.—You, worthy

my cousin, your right-noble son, in battle: worthy Macduff, and we,
upon us what else remains to do,
to our order.

Fare you well.
and the tyrant's power to-night,
when, if we cannot fight,

to take all our trumpets speak; give all breath,

ominous harbingers of blood and [Exeunt. Alarums.]

Macb.—Another part of the Plain.
Macb.—Enter Macbeth.

They have tied me to a stake; I must fight the course. What's born of woman! Such a one

What is this name?
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pronounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

My name's Macbeth.
The devil himself could not pro-
nounce a title

No, nor more fearful.
Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
No; though thou call'st thyself a

The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.
[Exeunt. Alarums.]

Re-enter Macbeth.
Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die

On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the
Do better upon them. [gasbes]

Re-enter Macduff.

Macb. Turn, hell-hound, turn!
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back; my soul is too much

With blood of thine already. [chag'd]

Macb. I have no words,
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]

Macb. Thou lovest labour:
As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air

With thy keen sword impress, as make me
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; bleed:

I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macb. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd

Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me
For it hath cow'd my better part of man! [so,

And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense;

That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.—I'll not fight with Macb. Then yield thee, coward, [thee.

And live to be the show and gaze o' the time;

We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,

"Here may you see the tyrant."

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's

feet,
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.

Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,

Yet I will try the last: before my body
I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff;

And damn'd be he that first cries, "Hold,
enough!" [Exeunt, fighting.]

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, Old Siward, Rosse, Thanex, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd. [I see,

Siw. Some must go off: and yet, by these
So great a day as this is cheaply bought. [son.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble Rosse. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's

He only liv'd but till he was a man; [debt:
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd

In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead!

Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why then, God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer-death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more:
They say he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him!—Here comes newer
comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands

The usurper's curs'd head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;

Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,
Hail, king of Scotland!
All. Hail, king of Scotland!

Mal. We shall not spend a large expence
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever
In such an honour nam'd. What's more
Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent means Took off her life;—this, and what need
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So, thanks, to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.
[Flourish.]

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Marcellus, } Officers.
Bernardo, }
Francisco, a Soldier.
Reynaldo, Servant to Polonius.
A Captain. Ambassadors.
Ghost of Hamlet's Father.
Fortinbras, Prince of Norway.
Two Clowns, Grave-diggers.
Gertrude, Queen of Denmark and Mother to Hamlet.
Ophelia, Daughter to Polonius.
Lords, Ladies, Officers, Soldiers, Players, Sailors, Messengers, and Attendants.

SCENE,—Elsinore.

ACT I.

A Platform before the Castle.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,
And will not let belief take hold of him,
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us:
Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night;
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.
Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.
Ber. Sit down awhile;
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all, [pole,
When yon same star, that's westward from the
Had made his course to illume that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one,— [comes again
Mar. Peace! break thee off; look, where it
Enter Ghost.
Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead. [Horatio.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it,
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it,
Horatio. [and wonder.
Hor. Most like:—it harrows me with fear Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and war-like form,
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven, I charge
Mar. It is offended. [thee, speak!

Ber. See, it stalks away.

Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost.]

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble, and look pale:

Is not this something more than fantasy?

What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe, Without the sensible and true avouch Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on, When he the ambitious Norway combated; So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle, He smote the sledded Polacks on the ice. 'Tis strange!

Mar. Thus, twice before, and just at this dead hour,

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not;

But, in the gross and scope of my opinion, This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch

So nightly toils the subject of the land;

And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,

And foreign mart for implements of war; [task

Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore

Does not divide the Sunday from the week;

What might be toward, that this sweaty haste

Doth make the night joint labourer with the

Who is't that can inform me? [day:

Hor. That can I;

At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,

Whose image even but now appear'd to us,

Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,

Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant

Hamlet [him]

(For so this side of our known world esteem'd

Did slay this Fortinbras: who, by a seal'd

Well ratified by law and heraldry, [compact,

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands

Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror:

Against the which, a moiety competent

Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras,

Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same

And carriage of the article design'd, [eo-mart,

His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,

Of unimproved metal hot and full,

Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,

Shar'd up a list of landless resolute

For food and out, to some enterprise

That hath a stomach in't: which is no other

(As it doth well appear unto our state)

But to recover of us, by strong hand

And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands

So by his father lost: and this, I take it,

Is the main motive of our preparations,

The source of this our watch, and the

Of this post-haste and romage in the Ber. I think it be no other, but

Well may it sort, that this portentous

Comes armed through our watch;

king

That was, and is, the question of the

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the

In the most high and palmy state of

A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,

The graves stood tenantless, and the

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman

As, stars with trains of fire, and dews

Disasters in the sun; and the most

Upon whose influence Neptune's empire

Was sick almost to doomsday with

And even the like precursors of the

As harbingers preceding with the

And prologue to the omen coming

Have heaven and earth together

Unto our climatures and countries

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft, behold! lo, where it comes!

I'll cross it, though it blast me—[Exit

If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,

Speak to me:

If there be any good thing to be done,

That may to thee do ease, and grace,

Speak to me:

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,

Which, happily, foreknowing may

O, speak!

Or if thou hast upheard in the wood

Extorted treasure in the womb of earth

For which, they say, you spirits are

death,

Speak of it;—stay, and speak!

cellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber.

Hor.

Mar. 'Tis gone!

We do it wrong, being so majestical

To offer it the show of violence;

For it is, as the air, invulnerable;

And our vain blows maliciously

Ber. It was about it started,

Hor. And then it started,

Upon a fearful summons.

The cock, that in the trumpet

Doth with his lofty and shrill

Awake the god of day; and

Whether in sea or fire, in

Th' extravagant and erring

To his confine; and of the

This present object made

Mar. It faded on the crown

Some say, that ever

Wherein our Saviour's

This bird of dawn

And then, they say,

The nights are whole

strike,

But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor
In filial obligation, for some term [bound,
To do obsequious sorrow: but to persevere
In obstinate condolence, is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient;
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what we know must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
"This must be so." We pray you, throw to earth

This unprevailing woe; and think of us
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And, with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet:

I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you,
madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unford'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruit
again,

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.
[Exeunt all except Hamlet.]

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew; [melt,
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable [God!
Seems to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature

Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—nay, not so much,
not two:

So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not betwixt the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on
As if increase of appetite had grown [him,
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month,—

Let me not think on't,—Fidelity, [By
woman!—

A little month, or ere those shoes were
With which she follow'd my poor father's Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even O God! a beast, that wants discourse of Would have mourn'd longer,—methinks I see mine uncle,

My father's brother! but no more Than I to Hercules: within a month—
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteousness
Had left the flushing in her ruddy cheek,
She married!—O, most wicked speed,
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to good,
But break, my heart, for I must
tongue!

Enter Horatio, Marcellus, and [ Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll name with you:

And what make you from Wittenberg?
Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you.
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your student
Nor shall you do mine ear that name.

To make it trustful of your own Against yourself: I know you are not.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We'll teach you to drink deep ere you Hor. My lord, I came to see funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mention
I think it was to see my mother's

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the back'd meats

Did coldly furnish forth the banquet

Would I had met my dearest father
Ere I had ever seen that day.

My father,—methinks I see him
Hor. O, where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; the next time
Ham. He was a man, take heed, he was

I shall not look upon his like
Hor. My lord, I think I saw him

Ham. Saw who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father

Ham. Season your admiration
With an attend ear; tell me, I pray you,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me
Hor. Two nights together,

men,

and Bernardo, on their watch,
and fast and middle of the night, encounter'd. A figure like your father's exactly, cap-à-pé, [father, before them, and with solemn march and stately by them: thrice he walk'd cross'd and fear-surprised eyes, brunchcon's length; whilst they,
fully with the act of fear,
and speak not to him. This to me seem'd the third night kept the watch:
they had deliver'd, both in time,
the thing, each word made true and fulfill'd comes: I knew your father;
which are not more like.

But where was this?
My lord, upon the platform where you not speak to it?

My lord, I did;
made it none; yet once, methinks, like as it would speak:
the morning cock crew loud;
the sound it shrunk in haste away,
from our sight.

'Tis very strange,
do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis think it writ down in our duty know of it.

Indeed, sir, but this troubles
the watch to-night?
[me.
say you? We do, my lord.

Arta'd, my lord.
From top to toe?
Then, saw you not his face?
O yes, my lord: he wore his beaver up.
[What, look'd he frowningly?
A countenance more than in anger.

Pale, or red?
And fix'd his eyes upon you?
Most constantly.

I would I had been there!
I should have much amaz'd you.
Stay'd it long?

Very like,
while one with moderate haste might have said a hundred.

Longer, longer,
His heard was grizzled,—no?
It was, as I have seen it in his life,
I will watch to-night;
I will walk again.

Hor.

I warrant it will.
Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still,
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue:
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well:
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All.

Our duty to your honour.
Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: farewell.
[Exeunt Hor., Mar., and Ber.
My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: would the night were
come!
Till then sit still: my soul: foul deeds will rise, Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Polonius' House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd: fare-
And, sister, as the winds give benefit, [well!
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood; [favour,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?
Laer. Think it no more:
For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thews and bulk; but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now;
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will: but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unvalu'd persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body, Whereof he is the head: then, if he says he
loves you,

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs;
Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure
To his unmaster'd importunity. [open
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon;

Virtue herself 'scapes not calumnious strokes,
The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall th' effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rude.

Laer. O, fear me not.
I stay too long:—but here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.
A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave. [Shame!]
Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There,—my blessing
with you!

[Laying his hand on Laertes' head.]
And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no
tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade.

Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear't, that th' opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,

Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell: my blessing season this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my
lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants
Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought;
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you Have of your audience been most bounteous:

If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,) I must
You do not understand yourself so
As it behoves my daughter, and your What is between you? give me up the Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak
green girl,

Unsuited in such perilous circumstances.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call Oph. I do not know, my lord, what to think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think you
That you have ta'en those tenders for love,
Which are not sterling?

more dearly;
Or,—not to crack the wind of the poor
Wrangling it thus,—you'll tender me a Oph. My lord, he hath importuned me
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; but Oph. And hath given countenance to speech, my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of Pol. Ay, springs to catch women's
know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, Giving more light than heat,—are Even in their promise, as it is a fire that You must not take for fire. These are Be somewhat scatter'd of your senses;

Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For he Believe so much in him, that he will
And with a larger tether may he Than may be given you: in few words
Do not believe his vows; for they are brokers,—

Not of that dye which their invention
But mere implorators of unholy
Breathing like sanctified and pious
The better to beguile. This is the I would not, in plain terms, from
forth,

Have you so slander any moment
As to give words or talk with the Look to't, I charge you; come your Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

SCENE IV.—The Palace.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and others.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is a cold
Hor. It is a nipping and an angry day.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it is about the middle of the Mar. No, it is struck.

I heard it not: then it draws
the season,
the spirit held his wont to walk.
A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.
this man, my lord!
the king doth wake to-night, and his rouse,
and the swaggering up-spring
he drains his draughts of Rhenish
And trumpet thus bray out of his pledge.

Is it a custom?
Ay, marry, is't:—though I am native here,
and a summer born,—it is a custom ward in the breach than the observance. Led revel, east and west, [dance, and tax'd of other nations:
as drunkards, and with swinish behaviour; and, indeed, it takes achievments, though perform'd at the narrow of our attribute.
Advances in particular men,
and vicious mole of nature in them, birth, (wherein they are not guilty, cannot choose his origin,) growth of some complexion, down the pales and forts of the body, that too much o'er-leavens of plausible manners;—that these may, the stamp of one defect, and a literary, or fortune's star,— in a man may undergo,
the general censure take corruption of particular fault: the dram of ill
in the noble substance often dunt, and murther.

Enter Ghost.
Look, my lord! it comes.
Angels and ministers of grace, defend
us!—
of health, or goblin damn'd, from these airy forms from heaven, or blasts of hell,
wicked, or charitable,
in such a questionable shape,
I'll speak to thee: I'll call thee,
Royal Dane: O, answer me!
I am dead in ignorance; but tell me, if thou canst, the cause of these portents: why the sepulchre,
and the ponderous and marble jaws,
are open'd again! What may this mean, that the dead corse, again, in complete steel,
is thus the glimmers of the moon,

Making night hideous; and we fools of nature,
So horribly to shake our disposition,
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?

Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do? [The Ghost beckons Hamlet.

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then, will I follow.

Hor. Do not, my lord. [it.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin's fee;

And, for my soul, what can it do to that,

Being a thing immortal as itself?

It waves me forth again:—I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood,

my lord,

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,

That beetles o'er his base into the sea,

And there assume some other horrible form,

Which might deprive your sovereignty of
reason,

And draw you into madness? think of it:

The very place puts toys of desperation,

Without more motive, into every brain

That looks so many fathoms to the sea,

And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still.—Go on; I'll follow.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord. [thee.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,

And makes each petty artery in this body

As hard as the Nemean lion's nerve.

[Ghost beckons.

Still am I call'd:—unhand me, gentlemen;—

[Breaking from them.

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets

I say, away!—Go on; I'll follow thee. [me:—

[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him. [come!

Hor. Have after.—To what issue will this

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Hor. Heaven will direct it. [Denmark.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A more remote Part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and Hamlet.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak;

Ghost. Mark me. [I'll go no further.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,

When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames

Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

Ghost. Pity me not; but lend thy serious
To what I shall unfold. [hearing]

Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou

Ham. What? [shalt hear.

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;

Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,
And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature,
Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am
To tell the secrets of my prison-house, [forbid
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young
blood;

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their Thy knotted and combin'd locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand on end,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine:
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood.—List, list, O list!
If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O God!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural

Ham. Murder? [murder.

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know it, that I, with wings as swift

As meditation, or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;

And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethæa wharf, Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet,
hear;

'Tis given out, that, sleeping in mine orchard,
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denis by a forg'd process of my death [mark
Rav'dly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! my uncle!

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate
beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
[O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!] won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen:
O Hamlet, what a falling off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven;
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be.—Sleeping within mine orchard,
My custom always in the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursd hebenon in a vial,

And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leoprous distillment; whose effect Holds such an enmity with blood, that
That, quick as quicksilver, it cometh to
The natural gates and alleys of the body;
And, with a sudden vigour, it doth pos-
And curd, like eager droppings into blood;
The thin and wholesome blood; so did it
And a most instant tetter bark'd about Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once depri'd:
Cut off even in the blossoms of my age,
Unhous'd, disappointed, unanointed,
No reckoning made, but sent to my
With all my imperfections on my head;
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, hear it out.
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul
Against thy mother aght; leave her alone
And to those thorns that in her bosom
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well
once!

The glow-worm shows the matin's wake,
And gins to pale his unfeather'd tongue.
Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember!

Ham. O all you host of heaven!

What else!

And shall I couple hell!—O, hell!

And you, my sinews, grow not stiff;
But bear me stiffly up!—Remember!

Ay, thou poor ghost, while night
sent

In this distracted globe. Remember!

Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fondness,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures
That youth and observation do there
And thy commandment all alone
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter:

O most pernicious woman!

O villain, villain, smiling, damnd!

O villain, villain, smother'd in my
My tables, my tables—most
That one may smile, and smile, and
At least I'm sure it may be so!

So, uncle, there you are. Now
It is, "Adieu, adieu! Remember!"

I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord's not here.

Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!

Hor. [Within.] So be it!

Mar. [Within.] Hello, lo, lo, lo!

Hor. [Within.] Hello, lo, lo, lo!

Ham. Hello, ho, ho, ho, ho!

Enter Horatio and Mar.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What?

Ham. O, wonderful!

Good my lord, tell it.

No;

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth,
Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

But come;—

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,

How strange or odd so'er I bear myself,

As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on,—

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-
shake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,

As, "Well, well, we know;"—or, "We could,
an if we would;"

Or, "If we list to speak;"—or, "There be, an if they might,"—

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note

That you know aught of me:—this not to do,
So grace and mercy at your most need help Swear.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

[gentlemen,

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit.—So,

With all my love I do commend me to you:

And what so poor a man as Hamlet is

May do, to express his love and friendship to you, [together;

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.

The time is out of joint:—O cursed spite,

That ever I was born to set it right!

Nay, come, let's go together. — [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in Polonius' House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes,

Rey. I will, my lord. [Reynaldo.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make enquiry

Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look
you, sir,

Enquire me first what Daneskers are in Paris;

And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding,
By this encompassment and drift of question,

That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it;

Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge
of him:

As thus, "I know his father, and his friends,
And, in part, him;"—do you mark this, Rey.

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord. [Pol.

Pol. "And, in part, him; but," you may say, "not well;

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

Nor I, my lord.

But if't be he I mean, he's very wild;
Addicted so and so;—and there put on him
What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank

As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

As gaming, my lord?
Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
Drabbing;—you may go so far. [quarrelling,
Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency;
That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so quaintly,
That they may seem the taints of liberty;
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreckon'd blood,
Of general assault.

But, my good lord,—
Pol. Wherefore should you do this?
Rey. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the predominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence;
"Good sir," or so; or "friend," or "gentle-
man."

According to the phrase, or the addition,
Of man, and country.

Very good, my lord.
Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does—
What was I about to say? [Rey. I was about to say something:—where did I

Rey. At "closes in the consequence,"
Pol. At "friend or so," and "gentleman." [marry;
At "closes in the consequence,"—ay,
He closes with you thus:—"I know the gentleman; I saw him yesterday, or the other day, [man;
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and,
as you say,

There was he gaming; there o'ertook in's
There falling out at tennis;" or perchance,
"I saw him enter such a house of sale,"—
Videlicet, a brothel,—or so forth.—

See you now:
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth;
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out:
So, by my former lecture and advice,
Shall you my son.

You have me, have you
Rey. My lord, I have.
Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.
Rey. Good my lord!

Pol. Observe his inclination in your son.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Farewell!

Enter Ophelia.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?

Oph. Alas, my lord, I have been much
Pol. With what, in the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all
No hat upon his head; his stockings Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking
other;

And with a look so piteous to behold,

As if he had been loosed out of hell
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. Mad for thy love?

Pol. He took me by the wrist, and held me
hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;

And, with his other hand, thus o'er his eyes,

He falls to such perusal of my face,

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he

At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and
down,—

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

That it did seem to shatter all his bones;

And end his being; that done, he bow'd,

And with his head over his shoulder,

He seem'd to find his way without his feet;

For out o' doors he went without his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

Scene II.—A Room in the Castle.

King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guilden-stern, and Attendants.

Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern!

How much did long to see you,
And how much do I long to see you now.

Something have you heard
Of the transformation; so I call it,

That it was. What it should be,
I cannot tell; but thus hath

From the understanding of himself,
I entreat you both, [him,
To so young days brought up with

To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. Mad for thy love?

Pol. He took me by the wrist, and held me
hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;

And, with his other hand, thus o'er his eyes,

He falls to such perusal of my face,

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he

At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and
down,—

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

That it did seem to shatter all his bones;

And end his being; that done, he bow'd,

And with his head over his shoulder,

He seem'd to find his way without his feet;

For out o' doors he went without his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

And, to the last, bended his head,

As it hath us'd to do) that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;—My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius.

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main,
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand and Cornelius.

Welcome, my good friends!
Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway!

Pol. Most fair return of greetings, and Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;

But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: whereat grieved,—

That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys;

Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle, never more
To give th' assay of arms against your majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee;
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack;

With an entreaty, herein further shown,
[Giving a paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance,
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.

Meantime, we thank you for your well-took
labour:

Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home.

Re-enter Voltimand and Cornelius.

This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and
time.

Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,

I will be brief:—your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is't, but to be nothing else but mad!
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all. That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis pity; And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure; But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him, then: and now remains, That we find out the cause of this effect,— Or rather say, the cause of this defect; For this effect defective comes by cause: Thus it remains, and the remainder thus. Perpend.

I have a daughter, have while she is mine, Who, in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this: now, gather, and surmise. [Reads.] "To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia."

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase, "beautified" is a vile phrase; but you shall hear. Thus [Exit.]

[Reads.] "In her excellent white bosom, these,"

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her? Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

[Reads.] "Doubt thou the stars are fire; Doubt that the sun doth move; Doubt truth to be a liar, But never doubt I love."

"O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu."

"Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, HAMLET."

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown And more above, hath his solicitings, (me; As they fell out by time, by means and place, All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me? King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing, (As I perceived it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me,) what might you, Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think, If I had play'd the desk, or table-book; Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb; Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;— What might you think? no, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak: "Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy sphere; This must not be:" and then I precepts gave her,

That she should lock herself from his resort, Admit no messengers, receive no tokens. Which done, she took the fruits of my advice; And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,) Fell into a sadness; then into a fast; Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness; Thence to a lightness; and by this declension, Into the madness wherein now he raves, And all we wail for.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely. Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I will know that.)

That I have positively said, "I will know that." When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Pol. Take this from this, if it be so, [Pointing to his head and heart.] I will that I should know it. If circumstances lead me, though it were but within the centre.

King. How may we try it? Pol. You know, sometimes he will come here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed. Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter, and be not from his reason taken. Mark the encounter: if he love her, let me be no assistant for a state, But keep a farm, and carters.

King. Enter Hamlet, reading. Queen. But look, where early the wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, lest I'll board him presently. O, give him leave.

[Exit King.] How does my good lord Hamlet? Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord? Ham. Excellent well; you are a lady.

Pol. Not I, my lord. Ham. Then I would you were so.

Pol. Honest, my lord? Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as you goos, is to be one man jacked up to the thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord. Ham. For if the sun loved a dead dog, being a good kitchen maid, Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord. Ham. Let her not walk in your sun: conception is a blessing; but not as you may conceive:—friend, look not at my daughter;—you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Pol. Words, words, words. Ham. What is the matter, my lord? Pol. Between whom?

Ham. I mean, the matter that you are a harp on my daughter;—yet truly, he is far gone, far gone; and truly, I suffered much extremity for her, this. I'll speak to him again.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow. Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. Quil. We'll wait upon you. Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants: for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion. Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear, a half-penny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal justly with me: come, come; may, speak.

Quil. What should we say, my lord? Ham. Why anything,—but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord? Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no!

Ros. [Aside to Quil.] What say you? Ham. [Aside.] Nay, then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off.

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Quil. My lord, we were sent for. Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what Lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome,—his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not. [followed]

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an airy of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't! these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them,) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre them on to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules, and his load too.

Ham. It is not strange; for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats a piece, for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. [Flourish of trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands,—come: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, (which, I tell you, may prove fairly outward,) should more appear to them than to you. You are welcome, but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a hand-saw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern: you see there, is not yet out of his clouts.

Ros. Haply, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to the players; mark it.—You say so, indeed, a Monday morning; 'twas so, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell.

Pol. When Roscius was an actor in Rome.

Ham. The actors are come hither, to see.

Pol. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his own part;—

Pol. The best actors in the world, tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-comical, historical-pastoral, or what you will, indivisible, or poem unlimited, or what you will, nor Plautus too little, nor law of writ, and the liberty, these men.

Ham. O Jephthah, Judge of Levi!

Pol. What a treasure had he in his house!

Ham. Why?

Pol. "One fair daughter and no more,"

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, I will answer you as I am.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

Pol. As by lot, God knows.

Ham. And then, you know,

Pol. "It came to pass, as most like it did,"

Ham. The first row of the pious old men,

Pol. You more; for look, where the first comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all. You are glad to see these well-welcome friends.—O, my old friend, I have heard since I saw thee last, that thou hadst been in Denmark. Welcome, lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer heaven, than when you were the altitude of a chop-lane.

Ham. A piece of uncurrent gold, he not within the ring.—Masters, you are welcome. Well 'em to't like French!

Pol. At anything we see: we'll have a taste of it, come, give us a taste of your wit.

Ham. A passionate speech.

Pol. What speech, my lord?

Ham. He never speaks me a speech once, for the play, I remember, pleased me; 'twas a caviare to the general: I received it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Ham. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

Pol. I am glad to hear it, and others, whose

And like a neutral to his will nail venther,

Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,

A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,

The bold winds speechless, and the orb below

As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder

Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause,

Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work;

And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall

On Mars's armour, forged for proof alone,

With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword

Now falls on Priam.—

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods,

In general synod, take away her power;

Break all the spokes and felloes from her wheel,

And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven,

As low as to the fiends!"

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—Pr'ythee, say on:—he's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on;—come to Hecuba.

1 Play. "But who, O, who had seen the mobled queen?"

Ham. The mobled queen.

Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1 Play. "Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames"

"With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head,

"Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe,

"About her lank and all o'ertempered loins;

"A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;

"Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,

"Gainst fortune's state would treason have

"But if the gods themselves did see her then,

"When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport

"In minding with his sword her husband's limbs,

"The instant burst of clamour that she made

"(Unless things mortal move them not at all)

"Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven,

"And passion in the gods."

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour, and has tears in his eyes. Pr'ythee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time; after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodikins, man, much better: use every man after his desert, and who should scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.
Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow.—[Exit Polonius, with all the Players except the first.] Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the murder of Gonzago?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.
Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in't, could you not?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.
Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit 1 Player.]
[To Ros. and Guil.] My good friends, I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!
[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]
Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' you!—Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!
Is it not monstrous, that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit,
That, from her working, all his visage wann'd,
Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing!
For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? What would he do,

Had he the motive and the cue for passion,
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech;
Make mad the guilty, and appal the free,
Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed,
The very faculties of eyes and ears.
Yet I,

A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing; no, not for a king,
Upon whose property, and most dear life,
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward?
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face?
Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat,

As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
Ha!

Why, I should take it: for it cannot be,
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter; or, are this,
I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal: bloody, bawdy villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless
O, vengeance!

[villain!]
Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave,
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing, like a very drab, [words,
A scullion]

Fie upon't! foh! About, my brain!
[heard,]

That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul, that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
For murder, though it have no tongue,
Will speak

With most miraculous organ. I'll have Play something like the murder of my father
Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks;
I'll tent him to the quick; if he but stir,
I know my course. The spirit that I have
May be the devil; and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and
Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,
(As he is very potent with such spirits)
Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
More relative than this: the play; the play!
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance,

Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous insanity?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself
tracted;

But from what cause, he will by no means Guil. Nor do we find him forwardly sounded;

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof
When we would bring him on to our confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you
Most like a gentleman?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.
Guil. But with much forcing of his wit.

Ros. Niggard of question; but most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you see him
To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that We o'er-raught on the way, of that he
him;

And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it; they are about the court,
And, as I think, they have already
This night to play before him.

Pol. And he beseech'd me to entreat your
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and I will
To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further
And drive his purpose on to these

Ros. We shall, my lord.
[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

And the queen, too, and that presently.
Did the players make haste.

[Exit Polonius.]
You two help to hasten them.
Gull. We will, my lord.

[Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]
What, ho, Horatio!

Enter Horatio.
How, sweet lord, at your service.
Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As my conversation cop'd withal.

O, my dear lord,—
Nay, do not think I flatter:
That advancement may I hope from thee,
To revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
And clothe thee? Why should the Poor be flatter'd?—
The candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
Break the pregnant hinges of the knee,
While swift may follow fawning. Dost thou

Not know thy dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hast thou for herself: for thou hast
Is suffering all, that suffers nothing;
The world's a fool, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Doth go with equal thanks; and bless'd are Those whose bad and judgment are so well coordinated, that stoop she please. Give me that

Not passion's slave, and I will wear him
As my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
To do thee.—Something too much of this.—
To play to-night before the king;
I have told thee, of my father's death:
When thou shalt see that act a-foot,
With the very comment of thy soul
To mine uncle: if his occulted guilt
It self unkenneled in one speech,
My imaginations are as foul
As mine uncle's. Give him heedful note:
For my eyes will rivet to his face;
And we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.

Well, my lord:
I caught the whilst this play is playing,
And have detected him, I will pay the theft.

They are coming to the play; I must Creep in my place.

A flourish. Enter King,
Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz,
Guildenstern, and others.
How now our cousin Hamlet?

Excellent, I faith; of the chameleon's kind;
I eat the air, promise-crammed: you that have nothing with this answer,
These words are not mine.

No, nor mine now.—[To Polonius.]

My lord, you played once in the university,
you say?

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar: I was kill'd
i' the Capitol; Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the King.] O ho! do you mark

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap? [that!] [Lying down at Ophelia's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap!

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think, I meant country mat-

Oph. I think nothing, my lord. [Tears!]

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I? Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet! Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, "For, O, for,
O, the hobby-horse is forgot."

Trumpet sounds. The dumb show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly;
the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his hand upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts: she seems loth and unwilling awhile:
but in the end accepts his love. [Exit.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mitching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow; the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught: I'll mark the play.

Pro. "For us and for our tragedy,
Here sleeping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently."

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a play?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord. [ring]

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a King and a Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times had Phoebus' car gone round

Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;

And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,
About the world have times twelve thirties

been; [hands]
Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our Unite committal in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er, ere love be done!

But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer, and from your former state,

That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must:

For women's fear and love hold quantity;
In neither aught, nor in extremity. [know]

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you
And as my love is, so, my fear is so:

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows

there. [shortly too]

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and My operant powers their functions leave to do:

And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:

In second husband let me be accurst!
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move,
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:

A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now
you speak;

But what we do determine, oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory;

Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy:

Where joy most revels, grief doth most abound;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender ground.

This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange
That even our love should with our fortune change.

For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love:

The great man down, you mark his fall;
The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies;

And hitherto doth love on fortune tend;
For who not needs, shall never lack friends;

And who in want a hollow friend doth find,
Tis paid that he himself has paid no mind.

But, orderly to end where I began,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I began,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run,

That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:

So think thou wilt no second husband find;
And die thy thoughts, when thy first life doth

dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food,
Heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me, day and night;
To desperation turn my trust and hope;

An anchor's cheer in prison be my lot;
Each opposite that blunts the face of it

Meet what I would have well, and fit to do;
Both here and hence, pursue me like a god;

If, once a widow, ever I be wifed!

Ham. If she should break it now!

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn.

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleep rock]

P. Queen. And never come mischance between us, Ham.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much,
methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument, there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest;
jest; no offence in't the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, my lord, it is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your
pity. This play is the image of your

pity. This play is the image of your pity. This play is the image of your

Still better, and worse.

So you must take your husbands.

Remember; leave thy damnable faces,
and come: the croaking raven doth be revenge;

Thoughts black, hauds apt, drugs fit,
and time agreeing;

Season, else no creature seeing;
nature rank, of midnight weeds coloured;

Thou'lt have a ban thrice blasted, thrice infected, and some life usurp immediately.

[Ed,]
He poisons him i' the garden for his mate's Gonzago: the story is excellent; how the murderer gets the love of his wife.

What the king rises.

What frightened with false fire!

How fares my lord?

Give me some light: away.

[Exeunt all except Hamlet and Horatio.]

Why let the stricken deer go weep,
the hart ungalled play;

So must we watch, while some must sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must

sleep: so must we watch, while some must
sleep: so must we watch, while some must into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say—

Ros. Then, thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with

Ros. My lord, you once did love me. [us]

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but "while the grass grows,"
—the proverb is something musty.

Enter the Players, with recorders.

O, the recorders! let me see one. To withdraw with you—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toll?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold,
my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis an easy as lying: govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play

This was your husband. Look you now, what follows :

Here is your husband ; like a mildew'd ear, Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you
eyes ?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor ? Ha ! have you
eyes ?

You cannot call it love ; for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment : and what judgment [have,

Would step from this to this ? Sense, sure, you Else, could you not have motion : but, sure,
that sense

Is apoplex'd : for madness would not err ;
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was't

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind ?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope.

O shame ! where is thy blush ? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire : proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more.
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul ;
And there I see such black and grain'd spots,
As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making
Over the musty sty,— [love

Queen. O, speak to me no more ;
These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears ;
No more, sweet Hamlet !

Ham. A murderer, and a villain ;
A slave, that is not twentieth part the tithe
Of your precedent lord : a Vice of kings ;
A outpurse of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket !

Queen. No more !

Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards !—What would your gracious figure ?

Queen. Alas, he's mad !

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,

That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command ?
O, say !

Ghost. Do not forget : this visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look, amazement on thy mother sits ;

O, step between her and her fighting soul !
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest work !
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you,

Queen. Alas, how is't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse ?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly pour
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrescence,
Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle Upon the heat and flame of thy distracted Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you

Ham. On him, on him ! Look you, pale he glares !
His form and cause conjoid, pale Would make them capable,—Do not upon me,

Lest with this piteous action you concur
My stern effects : then, what I have to Will want true colour ; tears, perchance
blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak the ?

Ham. Do you see nothing ?

Queen. Nothing at all ; yet all, that I

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear ?

Queen. No, nothing but sound.

Ham. Why, look you there ! look you steals away !

My father, in his habit as he liv'd !

Look, where he goes, even now, at portal !

Queen. This is the very coinage of

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy !

My pulse, as yours, doth temperance

time,

And makes as healthful music : it is my

That I have utter'd : bring me to the

And I the matter will re-word ;

ness

Would gambol from. Mother, to Lay not that flattering unaction to

That not your trespass, but my

speaks :

It will but skin and film the ulcers that

Whilst rank corruption, mining all

Infects unseen. Confess yourself to the Repent what's past ; avoid what's to come

And do not spread the compost on the

To make them ranker. Forgive me

For in the fatness of these pursy times

Virtue itself of vice must pardon

Yea, curb and woo, for leave to do

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast slain

in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worst of

And live the purer with the other

Good night ; but go not to mine

Assume a virtue, if you have it not

That monster, custom, who all

Of habit's devil, is angel yet in this

That to the use of actions fair and good

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves:You must translate: 'tis fit we understand Where is your son? [then:]Queen. [To Ros. and Guil.] Bestow this place on us a little while.[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contendWhich is the mightier: in his lawless fit, Behind the arras hearing something stir,He whips his rapier out, and cries, "A rat, a
And, in his brainish apprehension, kills [rat]"

The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us, had we been there:His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providenceShould have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt, [love,This mad young man: but so much was our
We would not understand what was most fit;But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feedEven on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
Queen. To draw apart the body he hath

kill'd:

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.
King. O Gertrude, come away!The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence: and this vile deedWe must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse.—Ho, Guilden-stern!
*Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.*Friends both, go join you with some further Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain, [aid:And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him: [bodyGo seek him out: speak fair, and bring the into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest

friends;

And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander,Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,And hit the woundless air.—O, come away!
My soul is full of discord and dismay. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet.Ham. Safely stowed. [Exit]Ros., Guil. [Within.] Hamlet! lord Hamlet!Ham. What noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O! here they come.Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis*Ros.* Tell us where 'tis: that we may take

And bear it to the chapel. [Exit Ros., Guil.]

Ham. Do not believe it.Ros. Believe what?Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge!—what replication should be made by the son of a king?Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape doth nuts, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.Ros. I understand you not, my lord.Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a*Guil.* A thing, my lord! [Exit Ros., Guil.]Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exit Ros., Guil.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter King, attended.King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose!

Yet must not we put the strong law on him:

He's loved of the distracted multitude,

Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;

And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd, [Even]

But never the offence. To bear all smooth and

This sudden sending him away must seem

Deliberate pause: diseases, desperate grown,

By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Or not at all.

Enter Rosencrantz.How now! what hath befallen?Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my

We cannot get from him. [Exit Ros.]

King. But where is he?Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know*King.* Bring him before us. [Your pleasure.]Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?Ham. At supper.King. At supper! Where?Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots; we feed ourself the king, and your lean beggar, is but your fool's service; two dishes, but to one table; thus the end.King. Alas, alas!Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.King. What dost thou mean by that?Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a man may go a progress through the guts of a*King.* Where is Polonius?Ham. In heaven; send thither to see if your messenger find him not there, and if i' the other place yourself. But, look'd on, find him not within this month, you shall see him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.King. [To some Attendants.] Go, and*Ham.* He will stay till you come. [Exit Attendants.]King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine own safety,—

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve

For that which thou hast done,— thou hence

With fiery quickness: therefore provide thee

The bark is ready, and the wind at help;

The associates tend, and everything is left

For England.

Ham. For England?King. Ay, Hamlet.Ham. So is it, if thou knew'st our parents*Ham.* I see a cherub that sees them: come; for England! Farewell, dear mother.King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.Ham. My mother: father and mother, man and wife; man and wife is one so, my mother. Come, for England! Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;

Delay it not; I'll have him hence to-day! for everything is seal'd and

That else leans on the affair: pray you, haste.

Ham. And, England, if my love thou hold'st dear, (As my great power thereof may win)

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red After the Danish sword, and thy Pays homage to us,) then must not our sovereign process; which imports

By letters conjuring to that effect, The present death of Hamlet.

land;

For like the hectic in my blood he rages, And thou must cure me: till I know

Howe'er my hope, my joys were

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.
Enter Fortinbras and forces, marching.
 Fort. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish King;
 Tell him that, by his licence, Fortinbras (King;
 In the conveyance of a promis'd march
 Hath his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
 But his majesty would fight with us,
 And he'll express our duty in his eye;

Go, the costly on. [Exeunt For. and forces.]
 Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?
 For. They are of Norway, sir.

How purpos'd, sir,
 Against some part of Poland.

Who
 [Bras.] The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras, Gave it against the main of Poland, [sir,] To take some frontier.
 Fort. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
 To take a little patch of ground,
 That hath in it no profit but the name.

Will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
 Three times the worth it should be sold in fee.

Why, then, the Poleack never do
 Yield, 'tis already garrison'd. [Send it.] Fort. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand dukats,

 And debate the question of this straw:
 For the imposthume of much wealth and

power,
 Breaks, and shows no cause without. I humbly thank you, sir.

God be wi' you, sir.
 Will please you go, my lord?
 Ham. I will with you straight. Go a little

before.
 [Exeunt all except Hamlet.]
 Ham. All occasions do inform against me,
 And cry my dull revenge! What is a man,
 That chafes his sleep, and market of his time,
 That made us with such large discretion, before and after, gave us not [course,

 To think in us unwe'd, Now, whether it be
 A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part
 Of three parts toward, I do not know.

Ham. I live to say, "This thing's to do!"
 And will, and strength, and

Examples, gross as earth, exhort me:
 Yet here I am, of such mass and charge,
 That but my simple and tender prince;
 Whose mouth is the invisible event;
 Whose what is mortal and unsure,
 All that torture, death, and danger, dare,

Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,
 Is not to stir without great argument,
 But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, [then,
 When honour's at the stake. How stand I,
 That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
 Excitements of my reason and my blood,
 And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
 The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
 That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,
 Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot
 Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
 Which is not tomb enough, and continent,
 To hide the slain! O, from this time forth,
 My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!
 [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen and Horatio.

Queen. I will not speak with her.
 Hor. She is importunate; indeed, distract:
 Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?
 Hor. She speaks much of her father; says
 she hears [beats her heart;

There's tricks i' the world; and hems, and Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt, [nothing,

That carry but half sense: her speech is Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
 The hearers to collection; they aim at it,
 And botch the words up fit to their own

thoughts;
 Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures
 yield them, [thought,

Indeed, would make one think, there might be Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.
 'Twere good she were spoken with, for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.
 Queen. Let her come in.— [Exit Horatio.]
 To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
 Each toy seems prologue to some great unmiss;
 So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
 It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Queen. How now, Ophelia! [Denmark?]
 Oph. [Singing.]

How should I your true love know
 From another one?
 By his cockle hat and staff,
 And his sandal shoe. [song!]

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this?
 Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.
 [Singing.]

He is dead and gone, lady,
 He is dead and gone;
 At his head a grass-green turf,
 At his heels a stone.

O, ho!
 Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,— Oph. Pray you, mark
 [Singing.]

White his shroud as the mountain snow.

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. [Singing.]

Larded with sweet flowers;

Which bewept to the grave did go,

With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'ield you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you

[Singing.] [this:]

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,

All in the morning betime,

And I a maid at your window,

To be your Valentine.

Then up he rose, and down'd his clothes,

And dugg'd the chamber door;

Let in the maid, that out a maid

Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make

[Singing.] [an end on't:]

By Gis, and by Saint Charity,

Alack, and fie for shame!

Young men will do't, if they come to't;

By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to wed.

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,

An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long has she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think that they should lay him in the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good counsel.—Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit.]

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.]

O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs all from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude,

When sorrows come, they come not single But in battalions. First, her father slain: Next, your son gone; but he most violent author

Of his own just remove; the people muddied, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers, [but greenly,] For good Polonius' death; and we have done in hagger-mugger to inter him: poor Ophelia Divided from herself and her fair judgment, Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts:

Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France; Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father's death;

Wherein necessity, of matter beguiled, Will nothing stick our person to accuse. In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, Like to a murdering-piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.] Alack, what noise!

Queen.

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

What is the matter?

Gen.

Save yourself, my lord! The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers. The rabble call Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry, "Choose we; Laertes shall be king, Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds."

"Laertes shall be king, Laertes shall be king."

Queen. How cheerfully on the they cry!

O, this is counter, you false Danish

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.]

Enter Laertes, armed. Dances, Laertes

Laer. Where is the king?—[Noise within.]

Danes. No, let's come in. I pray you, give me

Laer. I pray you, give me

Danes. We will, we will

[They retire without noise.]

Laer. I thank you—keep the doors

Give me my father! Calmly, good Laertes

Queen. That drop of blood

Laer. That drop of blood claims me bastard;

Cries cuckold to my father; brands the Even here, between the chaste

Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause

That thy rebellion looks so plain?

Let him go, Gertrude: do not fear

There's such divinity doth hedge a king

That treason can but peep to what it can

Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes

Why thou art thus incensed—

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King.

Queen.

King. Let him demand his father

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the devil!

Conscience and grace, to the profound

I dare damnation: to this point I stand

That both the worlds I give to negligence

Let come what comes; only I'll be true

Most thoroughly for my father.

King.

Laer. My will, not all the

And, for my means, I'll husband them

They shall go far with little.

Good Laertes,
 I desire to know the certainty [revenge, of your dear father's death, is't writ in your face, sweetface, you will draw both friend and lover] [and foe,
 none but his enemies.
 Will you know them, then?
 To his good friends thus wide I'll open my arms;
 And, like the kind life-rendering pelican,
 feed them with my blood.

Why, now you speak
 like a good child, and a true gentleman.
 I am guiltless of your father's death,
 and as most sensibly in grief for it,
 I'll be as level to your judgment pierce,
 as any does to your eye.

[Within.] Let her come in.
 How now! what noise is that?
 Re-enter Ophelia. [salt,
 dry up my brains! tears seven times more on the sense and virtue of mine eye!
 O, how my soul turns the beam! O rose of May!
 I'll not be so mortal as an old man's wits are in love; and, where 'tis fine, I'll be some precious instance of itself
 to the thing it loves.

[Singing.]
 They bore him barefaced on the bier;
 They nonnony, nonny, hey nonny;
 And on his grave rain'd many a tear,— Hadst thou thy wits, and didst perceive not move thus. [suade revenge,
 You must sing, "Down a-down, and call him a-down-a." O how the wheel turns! It is the false steward, that stole my master's daughter.

This nothing's more than matter.
 There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray, love, remember: and there is a document in madness,—thoughts whose embassage fitted.

There's fennel for you, and columbine: there's rue for you; and here's some you may call it herb of grace o' Sun-daisy: there's a daisy:—I would give you violets, but they withered all when my father died:—they say he made a good end,—

For honey sweet Robin is all my joy,— Oph. Thought and affliction, passion, hell turn to favour, and to prettiness. [itself,
 [Singing.]
 And will he not come again?
 No, no, he is dead,
 Go to thy death-bed,
 He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,
 All flaxen was his poll:
 He is gone, he is gone,
 And we cast away moan.
 God ha' mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls! I pray God.—God be wi' you! [Exit.

Laer. Do you see this, O God! [grief,

King. Laertes, I must commune with your
 Or you deny me right. Go but apart, [will,
 Make choice of whom your wisest friends you
 And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and If by direct or by collateral hand [me:]

They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
 Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
 To you in satisfaction; but if not,
 Be you content to lend your patience to us,
 And we shall jointly labour with your soul
 To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so;
 His means of death, his obscure funeral,
 No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his
 No noble rite, nor formal ostentation, [bones, Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to
 That I must call't in question. [earth,

King. So you shall;
 And, where the offence is, let the great axe
 I pray you go with me. [fall.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Horatio and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me? [for you.

Serv. Sailors, sir: they say, they have letters

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant.

I do not know from what part of the world
 I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

1 Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let Him bless thee too.

1 Sail. He shall, sir, an't please Him.
 There's a letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England:
 if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know
 it is.

Hor. [Reads.] "Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him.
 Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase.
 Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour: in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

"He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET."

Come, I will give you way for these your letters;

And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend, Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, That he, which hath your noble father slain, Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears:—but tell me Why you proceeded not against these feats, So criminal and so capital in nature, As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things You mainly were stir'd up? [else,

King. O, for two special reasons; Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,

But yet to me they are strong. The queen, Lives almost by his looks; and for myself, (My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,) She's so conjunctive to my life and soul, That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, I could not but by her. The other motive, Why to a public count I might not go, Is the great love the general gender bear him; Who, dipping all his faults in their affection, Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone,

Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows, Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again, And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost; A sister driven into desperate terms; Whose worth, if praises may go back again, Stood challenger on mount of all the age For her perfections; but my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull, That we can let our beard be shook with danger,

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear I lov'd your father, and we love ourself; And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet: This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:

They were given me by Claudio, he received Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.— Leave us.

[Exit Messenger.]

[Reads.] "High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom: to-morrow shall I beg leave to see your eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my fall and more strange return."

What should this mean? Are all the come back,

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character:—

And, in a postscript here, he says,

Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But it warms the very sickness in my heart, That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,

"Thus diddest thou."

King. If it be so, Laertes,

As how should it be so? how otherwise?

Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord.

So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he return't,

As checking at his voyage, and that he

No more to undertake it, I will work

To an exploit, now ripe in my device,

Under the which he shall not choose to

And for his death no wind of blame

breathe;

But even his mother shall uncharge the

And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be

The rather, if you could devise it so

That I might be the organ.

King. It falls

King. You have been talk'd of since your brother

And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a

Wherein, they say, you shine: your

parts

Did not together pluck such even

As did that one; and that, in my

Of the unworldest siege.

Laer. What part is that?

King. A very riband in the cap of Yet needful too; for youth no less

The light and careless livery that is

Than settled age his sables and his

Importing health and graveness—

Here was a gentleman of Normandy

I've seen myself, and serv'd against

And they can well on horseback gallant

Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto

And to such wondrous doing brought

As he had been incorp'd and dross

With the brave beast: so far he

thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks

Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman?

King. Upon my life, Lamord.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord.

King.

I know him well; he is the brooch,
 Of all the nation. [Indeed,
 He made confession of you;
 And gave you such a masterly report,
 Of art and exercise in your defence,
 As he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
 If we could match you: the scrimers of their nation,
 Had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
 To oppose them. Sir, this report of his Hath so envenom'd with his envy,
 That he would nothing do, but wish and beg
 Out of this,—

What out of this, my lord?
 King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
 Or did you like the painting of a sorrow,
 A face without a heart?

Why ask you this?
 King. Not that I think you did not love your father;

But that I know love is begun by time;
 And that I see, in passages of proof,
 Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
 Three loves within the very flame of love
 Do kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it;
 Goodness, growing to a pluriety,
 Uses his own too-much: that we would do,
 "We would" changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many,
 As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
 And then this "should" is like a spendthrift's

But, to the quick o' this What would you under-

To cut his throat i' the church.
 No place, indeed, should murder
 Sanctuarize;

And should have no bounds. But, good

Laertes, keep close within your chamber. [Home:

 And put on those shall praise your excellence,
 A double varnish on the fame
 The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine,

together,

And wage on your heads: he, being remiss,
 Will not perceive the foils; so that, with ease,
 With a little shuffling, you may choose
 A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice,

I will do't:
 For that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.

With an action of a mountebank,
 That but dip a knife in it,
 Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,

Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death, [point

That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my
 With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,
 It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this:
 Weigh, what convenience, both of time and
 means,

May fit us to our shape: if this should fail,
 And that our drift look through our bad performance,

'Twere better not assay'd: therefore this project [hold,

Should have a back, or second, that might
 If this should blast in proof. Soft!—let me see:
 We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning:
 I ha't:

When in your motion you are hot and dry
 (As make your boats more violent to that end),
 And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd
 him

A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
 If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
 Our purpose may hold there.

Enter Queen.
 How now, sweet queen!

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow: your sister's drown'd,
 Laer. Drown'd! O, where? [Laertes.

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook, [stream;

That shows his hear leaves in the glassy
 There with fantastic garlands did she come
 Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
 But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them: [weeds

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet
 Clambering to hang, an envious slyver broke;
 When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
 Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,

And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;
 Which time, she chanted snatches of old tunes;
 As one incapable of her own distress,
 Or like a creature native and indu'd Unto that element: but long it could not be,
 Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
 Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
 To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then, she is drown'd!
 Queen. Drown'd, drown'd. [Ophelia,

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor
 And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
 It is our trick; nature her custom holds, Let shame say what it will; when these are
 gone,

The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord;
 I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
 But that this folly douts it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude.

How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again:
Therefore let's follow.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Churchyard.

Enter two Clowns, with spades, &c.

1 Clow. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clow. I tell thee, she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clow. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clow. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clow. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly.

2 Clow. Nay, but hear you, Goodman Delfer.

1 Clow. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that? but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clow. But is this law?

1 Clow. Ay, marry, is't; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clow. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clow. Why, there thou say'st; and the more pity, that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian.—Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers: they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clow. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clow. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clow. Why, he had none.

1 Clow. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clow. Go to.

1 Clow. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clow. The gallows-maker; for that frame
outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clow. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now, thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to these. To't again, come.

2 Clow. Who builds stronger than a mason,
a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clow. Ay, tell me that, and nay, say.

2 Clow. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clow. To't.

2 Clow. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio at a distance.

1 Clow. Oudgel thy brains no more about for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker: the houses that we makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee

Yaughan; fetch me a stoop of liquor.

[Exit 2 Clow.]

[He digs and sings.]

In youth, when I did love, did love,

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my dear,

O, methought, there was nothing so sweet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a perjury of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of time

playment hath the daintier sense,

1 Clow. [Sings.]

But age, with his stealing step,

Hath clau'd me in his clasp,

And hath shipped me in his bow,

As if I had never been such.

[Thence up a walk.]

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, could sing once: how the knave

the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, did the first murder! This might be the

of a politician, which this ass now one that would circumvent God, might

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could

"Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost good lord?" This might be my lord one, that praised my lord such-a-one,

when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so; and now my Worm's; chapless, and knock'd about the mazard with a sexton's spade: here revolution, an we had the trick to these bones cost no more the breathing play at loggats with them? mine

1 Clow. [Sings.]

A pick-axe, and a spade, a shovel,

For and a shroud to cover

O, a pit of clay for to be made,

For such a guest is made.

[Thence up a walk.]

Ham. There's another: why may it be the skull of a lawyer? Where lits now, his quilllets, his cases, and his tricks? why does he knave now to knock him about the dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his

of battery? Hum! This fellow a great buyer of land, with his statutes, recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine full of fine dirt? will his vouchers come him no more of his purchases, and his one too, than the length and breadth of valentines? The very conveyances the inheritor himself have no more, ha? Ham. Not a jot more, my lord. [Skins?] Hor. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins? Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which we call assurance in that. I will speak to you of grave's this, sir? Alas, sir. [Sings.]

O, a pit of clay for to be made
For each a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou thou dost lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is mine. Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't, and say as thou dost thou dost. Ham. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away from me to you. Ham. What man dost thou dig it for? Ham. For no man, sir. Ham. What woman, then? Ham. For none, neither. Ham. Who is to be buried in't? Ham. One that was a woman, sir; but, she's dead. Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must not give the card, or equivocation will undo us. Ham. By the card, Horatio, these three years I have note of it; the age is grown so picked, the tatter'd peasant comes so near the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker? Ham. Of all the days i' the year, I came to that day that our last king Hamlet over-

Ham. How long is that since? Ham. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: it was the very day that young Hamlet was born: he that is mad, and sent into England? Ham. Why, because he was mad: he shall have his wits there; or, if he do not, 'tis no more his wits there. Ham. Twill not be seen in him there; he will more than ever be mad as he. Ham. Very strangely, they say. Ham. Faith, e'en with losing his wits. Ham. Upon what ground? Ham. Why, here in Denmark: I have been

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. Faith if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corpses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,) he will last you some eight year or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull hath lain you i' the earth three and twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! 'a poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This? 1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see.—[Takes the skull.]—Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen! Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord? [Thinking.]

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth? Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah! [Puts down the skull.]

Hor. E'en so, my lord. [Skull.]

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: as thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperial Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
 Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall t' expel the winter's flaw!

But soft! but soft! aside!—here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c., in procession: the corpse of Ophelia, Laertes and mourners following; King, Queen, their trains, &c.
 The queen, the courtiers: who is that they follow?
 And with such malméd rites? This doth be-
 The corpse they follow did with desperate hand
 Fordo its own life: 'twas of some estate.
 Conch we a while, and mark.

[Retiring with Horatio.]

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,

A very noble youth; mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd

As we have warrant: her death was doubtful;
 And, but that great command o'ersways the order,

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd,
 Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on her:

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
 Her maiden strewments, and the bringing
 Of ball and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest. No more be done:
 We should profane the service of the dead,
 To sing a requiem, and such rest to her
 As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth;
 And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
 May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,
 A ministering angel shall my sister be,
 When thou hast howl'd.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweet to the sweet: farewell!

[Scattering flowers.]
 I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's
 wife;

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet
 And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe
 Fall ten times treble on that curs'd head,
 Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
 Depriv'd thee of! Hold off the earth awhile,
 Till I have caught her once more in mine arms;

[Leaping into the grave.]
 Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
 Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
 To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
 Of Moe Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of
 sorrow

Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them
 Like wander-wounded hearers? this is I, Hamlet the Dane.

[Leaping into the grave.]

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
 I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat;
 For though I am not splenetic and rash,

Yet have I in me something dangerous,
 Which let thy wisdom fear: hold off thy hand.
 King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen.

All. Gentlemen, — Good my lord, be Hor. Good my lord, be

[The Attendants part them, and lay out out of the grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son, what theme!

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand
 brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,
 Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for me?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.
 Ham. 'Swounds, show me wnat thou wilt!

Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't tear thyself?

Woo't drink up Esil? eat a crocodile?
 I'll do't. Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave?
 Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them
 Millions of acres on us; till our ground
 Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
 Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou
 I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness.

And thus a while the fit will work on him:
 Anon, as patient as the female dove,
 When that her golden tapers are all dross,
 His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir?

What is the reason that you use me thus?
 I lov'd you ever: but it is no matter;
 Let Hercules himself do what he may,
 The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray you, good Horatio, watch him,
 him.

[To Laertes.] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;

We'll put the matter to the present;
 Good Gertrude, set some watch over him;
 This grave shall have a living monument.

An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
 Till then, in patience our proceeding

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.
Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now we must see the other:

You do remember all the circumstances
 Hor. Remember it, my lord.

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a time
 That would not let me sleep: the business of the day
 Worse than the mutines in the bottom;
 And prais'd be rashness for it: let us know
 Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well;
 When our deep plots do pall: and that teach us,

...a divinity that shapes our ends,
...how them how we will.

Up from my cabin,
That is most certain.

...to find out them: had my desire;
...their packet; and, in fine, withdrew

...own room again: making so bold,
...forgetting manners, to unseal

...grand commission; where I found,
Horatio,—

...knavery!—an exact command,
...with many several sorts of reasons,

...Denmark's health, and England's
...such bugs and goblins in my life,

...the supervise, no leisure bated,
...to stay the grinding of the axe,

...should be struck off.
Here's the commission: read it at

...leisure.
...then hear me how I did proceed!

I beseech you,
...Being thus benetted round with

...could make a prologue to my brains,
...I had begun the play. I sat me down;

...a new commission; wrote it fair;
...old hold it, as our statists do,

...to write fair, and labour'd much
...forget that learning; but, sir, now

...ye woman's service: wilt thou know
...of what I wrote?

...An earnest conjuration from the king,
...England was his faithful tributary;

...between them like the palm might
...should still her wheaten garland

...hand a comma 'twixt their amities;
...many such like uses of great charge,—

...on the view and know of these contents,
...detachment further, more or less,

...should the bearers put to sudden death,
...driving-time allow'd.

Why, even in that was heaven
...How was this seal'd?

...my father's signet in my purse,
...that was the model of that Danish seal;

...the writ up in form of the other;
...gave't th' impression; plac'd it

...the changing never known. Now, the next
...light; and what to this was

...now'st already.
...So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go

Why, man, they did make love to
...by their own insinuation grow:

...dangerous, when the baser nature comes
...the pass and fell incensed points

...opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!
Ham. Does it not, think'st thee, stand me

now upon—
He that hath kill'd my king, and whor'd my

Popp'd in between the election and my hopes;
Thrown out his angle for my proper life,

And with such cozenage—is't not perfect conscience, [damn'd,

To quit him with this arm? and is't not to be
To let this canker of our nature come

In further evil? [England,
Hor. It must be shortly known to him from

What is the issue of the business there.
Ham. It will be shortly: the interim is mine;

And a man's life's no more than to say, one.
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself;
For, by the image of my cause, I see

The portraiture of his: I'll count his favours;
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me

Into a towering passion.
Hor. Peace! who comes here!

Enter Osrick.
Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for
'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Your bonnet to its right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.
Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry, and hot; or my complexion—

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, —as 'twere,—I cannot tell how.—But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir,

this is the matter,— Ham. I beseech you, remember—[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.

Osr. Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court,

Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society, and great showing; indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry; for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his disfigurement suffers no perdition in you:—though, I know, to divide him

inventorically, would dizzy the arithmetic of memory; and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir!

Ham. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes!

Ham. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir; in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need he's unfollowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses; against the which he has imputed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hills, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Osr. I knew you must be edified by the margin, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then.

But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this imputed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid, on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentlemen willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the scoldings of my mother.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir: after what manner your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours.—[Exit Osrick.]

Does well to commend it himself; there are tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the lead on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dog, he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more) of the same breed, that I know, the time of age dotes on) only got the taint of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a strong yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and wildest opinions; and do but blow them to their bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended to you by young Osrick, who brings me word, that you attend him in the hall: to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purpose; I follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness mine is ready; now, or whenever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time. The queen desires you to use no gentle entertainment to Laertes, lest he fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he is French, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wast wont to think, how ill all's here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, I will forestall their repair hither, and are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we duly accept of it: it is a special providence in the fall of man. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not now, it will be now; if it be not now, it will come: the readiness is all: since that we have aught of what he leaves, what's to betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lord, and Attendants, each with a foil.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and lay your hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Hamlet that of Hamlet.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have but forgot to give you mine.

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.

will gain nothing but my shame, and the scoldings of my mother.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir: after what manner your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours.—[Exit Osrick.]

Does well to commend it himself; there are tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the lead on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dog, he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more) of the same breed, that I know, the time of age dotes on) only got the taint of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a strong yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and wildest opinions; and do but blow them to their bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended to you by young Osrick, who brings me word, that you attend him in the hall: to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purpose; I follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness mine is ready; now, or whenever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time. The queen desires you to use no gentle entertainment to Laertes, lest he fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he is French, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wast wont to think, how ill all's here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, I will forestall their repair hither, and are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we duly accept of it: it is a special providence in the fall of man. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not now, it will be now; if it be not now, it will come: the readiness is all: since that we have aught of what he leaves, what's to betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lord, and Attendants, each with a foil.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and lay your hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Hamlet that of Hamlet.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have but forgot to give you mine.

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.

knows, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

Ham. I have heard, and you must needs have heard.

The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth.

Ham. Now the king drinks to Hamlet!—[Begin.]—Come, And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well;—again.

King. Stay; give me drink.—Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by a while.

Come.—[They play.] Another hit; what say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows: The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam!

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.

King. [Aside.] It is the poison'd cup; it is Hamlet. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Laer. [Aside.] And yet it is almost against my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes; you but I pray you, pass with your best violence; I am afeard you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.]

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.]

King. Part them; they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come, again. [The Queen falls.]

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!

Ham. They bleed on both sides. How is it, Osr?

Osr. How is it, Laertes? [My lord!]

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osrick;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!

The drink, the drink;—I am poison'd. [Dies.]

Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.]

Laer. It is here, Hamlet; Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good;

In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated, and envenom'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more:—the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point, envenom'd too!—
Then, venom, do thy work. [Stabs the King.]

Alf. Treason! treason! [Hurt.]

King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,

Drink off this potion:—is thy union here?
Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet;
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;
Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow
thee.

I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but nutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, Death,
Is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you—
But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it:
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven, I'll have it.

O good Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity a while,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in
To tell my story. [pain,]

[March afar off, and shot within.]
What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice:
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited.—The rest is silence. [Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart:—good night, sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!

[March within.]
Why does the drum come hither?

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it you would

If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc.
death,

What feast is toward in thine eternal diet,
That thou so many princes at a shot

So bloodily hast struck? [The sight is shown.]

I Amb. The sight is shown.
And our affairs from England come to this

The ears are senseless that should
hearing,

To tell him his commandment is follow'd
That Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern

Where should we have our thanks?
Hor. Not from you.

Had it the ability of life to thank you
He never gave commandment for the same.

But since, so jump upon this bloody stage,
You from the Pollack wars, and you

England,
Are here arriv'd, give order that these men

High on a stage be placed to the view,
And let me speak to the yet unknowing

How these things came about:—
hear

Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, casual deaths,

Of deaths put on by cunning, and for cause,
And in this upshot, purposes mistook,

Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune,
I have some rights of memory in this world

Which, now to claim, my vantage doth
me.

Hor. Of that I shall have some
speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will be
more:

But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild with it.

mischance
On plots and errors happen.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.

Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage,
For he was likely, had he been put on,

To have prov'd most royally:—
passage,

The soldiers' music, and the rites of war,
Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies: such a sight
Becomes the field, but here shows

Go, bid the soldiers shoot.
[A dead march. Exeunt.]

The dead bodies:—
ordnance is shot off.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Prince of Verona.	[Prince.] Sampson, } Servants to Capulet.
Young Nobleman, Kinsman to the	Gregory, }
Heads of two Houses at variance	Peter, another Servant to Capulet.
with each other.	Abram, Servant to Montague.
Man, Kinsman to Capulet.	An Apothecary. Three Musicians.
Man, Kinsman to Montague.	Chorus. Page to Mercutio; Page to Paris;
Man, Kinsman to the Prince, and Friend	an Officer.
to Montague.	Lady Montague, Wife to Montague.
Nephew to Montague, and Friend	Lady Capulet, Wife to Capulet.
to Montague.	Juliet, Daughter to Capulet.
Nephew to Lady Capulet.	Nurse to Juliet.
Laurence, a Franciscan.	Citizens of Verona; male and female Rela-
How many of the same order.	tions to both Houses; Maskers, Guards,
Man, Servant to Romeo.	Watchmen, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Verona: Once, (in the Fifth Act) at Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

Chorus.

Households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Doth cover up their parents' strife.
What but their death-bury their parents' love,
And their continuance of their parents' rage,
Which but their children's end, nought could Remove,
Doth move the two hours' traffic of our stage;
Which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Verona. A public Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, armed with swords and bucklers.
Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry
this.
Samp. No, for then we should be colliers.
Greg. Ay, while you live, we'll draw.
Samp. I strike quickly, being moved.
Greg. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Samp. A dog of the house of Montague moves

Gre. To move is to stir; and to be valiant is to stand: therefore, if thou art moved, thou run'st away.

Samp. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Samp. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:
—therefore, I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Samp. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids, I will cut off their heads. The heads of the maids? [heads.]

Samp. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel it.

Samp. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Samp. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back, and run!

Samp. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Samp. Let us take the law of our side; let them begin. [take it as they list.]

Gre. I will frown as I pass by; and let them

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Enter Abram and Balthasar.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. [Aside to Gre.] Is the law of our side,

Gre. [Aside to Sam.] No. [If I say ay]

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Gre. [Aside to Sam.] Say, better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Enter Benvolio.

Ben. Part, fools! put up your swords; you know not what you do.

[Beats down their swords.]

Enter Tybalt.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio; look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:

Have at thee, coward! [They fight.]

Enter several persons of both Houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs and partisans.

Citizens. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues! [Enter Capulet, in his gown; and Lady Capulet.]

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch! Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is and flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter Montague and Lady Montague.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet!—Hold me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—
Will they not hear? what ho! you men, you
hearts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
On pain of torture, from those bloody hands

Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved
Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet, and Montague,
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments
To wield old partisans, in hands as old,
Cank'rd with peace, to part your cankers.
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the law.
For this time, all the rest depart away!
You, Capulet, shall go along with us.
And, Montague, come you this after-noon.
To know our further pleasure in this
To old Free-town, our common
place.

Once more, on pain of death, all [Exeunt Prince and Attendants.]
Lady Capulet, Tybalt, Citizens,
Servants.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel Speak, nephew, were you by when it Began. Here were the servants of your sary,

And yours, close fighting ere I did
I drew to part them: in the instant
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword
Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head, and cut the air
Who, nothing hurt withal, heard the While we were interchanging
blows,

Came more and more, and fought
Till the prince came, who parted us.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo?—
to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this Brawl.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the Peer'd forth the golden window of the
A troubled mind drove me to walk
Where, underneath the grove of arched
That westward rooteth from the city
So early walking did I see your son Towards him I made; but he was
And stole into the covert of the church.
I, measuring his affections by my own,
That most are hawk'd when they are Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing
And gladly shunn'd who gladly lov'd.

Mon. Many a morning hath
seen,
With tears augmenting the fo'c
Adding to clouds more clouds with rain
But all so soon as the all-cheerful sun
Should in the furthest east begin
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed
Away from light steals home my heavy son
And private in his chamber locks
Shuts up his windows, locks down
And makes himself an artificial night.
Black and portentous must this Unless good counsel may the case

My noble uncle, do you know this
[him.]
I neither know it, nor can learn of
Have you importun'd him by any Both by myself, and many other

his own affections' counsellor,
[him.]—I will not say how true,—
[him.]—I will not say how true,—
[him.]—I will not say how true,—
[him.]—I will not say how true,—

the bad bit with an envious worm, spread his sweet leaves to the air,
out learn from whence his sorrows willingly give cure, as know.
where he comes; so please you,
his grievance, or be much denied.
would, thou wert so happy by thy

—Come, madam, let's away.
[Exeunt Montague and Lady.]
Enter Romeo.
morrow, cousin.

Is the day so young!
Ah me! and hours seem long.

What went hence so fast!
What sadness lengthens
Not having that, which, having, makes [them short.]

Out—
[of love]
But of her favour, where I am in love.
Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Alas, that love, whose view is muffled without eyes, see pathways to his will!
[O me! what fray was not, for I have heard it all,

to do with hate, but more with

O hawling love! O loving hate!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!

Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!

Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!

Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!

Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!
Of nothing first create!

Love is a smoke raised with the fumes of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears;
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.
Farewell, my coz. [Going.]

Ben. Soft! I will go along:
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not
here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.
Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?
Ben. Groan! why, no;

But sadly tell me who.
Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will;

Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man! And she's fair I love. [Exit.]

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss; she'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow; she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives un-harm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold;

O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste!

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:

She hath forsworn to love; and in that vow
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:

These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;

He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost;

Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair!

Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said
before:

My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made. [made.]

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accusom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number
more.

At my poor house look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven
light:

Such comfort as do lasty young men feel,
When well-appareld April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:
Such, amongst view of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning
none.

Come, go with me. [To the Serv.] Go, sirrah, trudge about

Through fair Verona; find those persons out, Whose names are written there, [Giving a paper.] and to them say,

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.
[Exit Capulet and Paris.]

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here! It is written, that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writting person hath here writ. I must to the learned;—in good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning;

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's
languish:

Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your brother's

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound mad madman is;

Shut up in prison, kept without my Whipp'd and tormented, and—Good

fellow,

Serv. God gi' good den.—I pray,

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my Serv. Perhaps you have heard a book; but, I pray, can you you see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letter

Serv. Ye say honestly; rest you

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read

"Signior Martino, and his daughters; County Anselmo, and his ous sisters; the lady widow of Signior Placentio, and his brother

Mercutio, and his brother

uncle, Capulet, his wife, and fair niece, Rosaline; Livio, Signior and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio, and Helena."

A fair assembly: [Gives back the

whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Serv. To supper; to our house

Rom. Whose house?

Rom. Indeed, I should have

before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you with my master is the great rich Capulet;

you be not of the house of Montague;

come and crush a cup of wine

merry!

Ben. At this same ancient feast

Supps the fair Rosaline, whom I love

With all the admired beauties of

Go thither; and, with unattainted

Compare her face with some that I

And I will make thee think my

Rom. When the devout religion

Maintains such falsehood, then fires;

And these,—who, often drawn

Transparent heretics, be

One fairer than my love! the all-

Ne'er saw her match, since first I

Ben. Tut, you saw her

Herself pois'd with herself in

But in that crystal scales, how

Your lady's love against some

That I will show you shining

And she shall seem above well

best.

Rom. I'll go along, no

But to rejoice in splendour of

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight. [stays.]

La. Cap. We follow thee. Juliet, the county Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Street

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for Or shall we on without apology? [four excuse,

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity: We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf, Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper; Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke After the prompter, for our entrance: But, let them measure us by what they will, We'll measure them a measure, and begone.

Rom. Give me a torch: I am not for this ambling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance. [shoes]

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing With nimble soles; I have a soul of lead, So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,

And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore empierced with his shaft, To soar with his light feathers; and so bound, I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe: Under love's burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden Too great oppression for a tender thing. [love;]

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough, Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn. [with love;]

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down. Give me a case to put my visage in:

A visor for a visor!—what care I, What curious eye doth quote deformities? Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner But every man betake him to his legs. [in.]

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons light of heart,

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels; For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase; I'll be a candle-holder, and look on; The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire Of this sir-reverence, love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer.

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps, Take our good meaning, for our judgment Five times in that, ere once in our lives

Rom. And we mean well, in going But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer.

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night

Mer.

Rom. Well, what was your dream?

Mer.

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do things true.

Mer. O then, I see, Queen Mab

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes In shape no bigger than an agate-stone

On the fore-finger of an alderman, Drawn with a team of little atomies

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep; Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers; The traces, of the smallest spider's web;

The collars, of the moonshine's water; Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash,

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated wren; Not half so big as a round little wren;

Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid; Her chariot is an empty hazel nut,

Made by the joiner squirrel, or old ape; Time out of mind the fairies' coach

And in this state she gallops night by night Through lovers' brains, and there she treads

Of love; O'er courtiers' knees, that dream of love

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight up to fees;

O'er ladies' lips, who straight up to the

Which off the hungry Mab with sweet

Because their breaths with sweet are:

Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's

And then dreams he of smelling of a

And sometimes comes she with a

Tickling a parson's nose as he

Then dreams he of another law

Sometimes she driveth o'er a soldier's

And then dreams he of cutting for

Of breaches, ambuscades, Spanish

Of healths five fathom deep; and then

Drums in his ear, at which he wakes;

And, being thus frighted, sweet

And sleeps again. This is that which

That plucks the naves of horses to the

And makes the elf-locks in foul sluttish

Which, once untangled, leads him to bodes:

This is the hag, when maids lie on

That presses them, and makes them

bear,

Making them women of good

This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace,

Thou talk'st of nothing.

True, I talk of dreams;

Nothing but vain fantasy;

As this substance as the air;

More inconstant than the wind, who woos

The frozen bosom of the north,

And being anger'd, puffs away from thence,

Leaving his face to the dew-dropping south.

This wind, you talk of, blows us from Ourselves;—

—I fear, and we shall come too late.

—I fear, too early: for my mind mis-gives,

And consequence, yet hanging in the stars,

Already begins his fearful date

For this night's revel; and expire the term

Of my short life, closed in my breast,

By this vile forfeit of untimely death:

But that hath the steorage of my course,

Myself I sell.—O, lusty gentlemen.

[Re-enter.]

Y.—A Hall in Capulet's House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

Where's Potpan, that he helps not away! he shift a trencher! he scrape

a plate!

When good manners shall lie all in two men's hands, and they unwashed

together!

Away with the joint-stools, remove the cupboard, look to the plate. Good meat me a piece of marchpane; and, lovet me, let the porter let in Susan and Nell. Antony! and Potpan!

Ay, boy; ready.

You are looked for, and called for,

and sought for in the great chamber.

—We cannot be here and there

at once.

Cheerly, boys: be brisk awhile,

and the longer liver take all.

[They retire behind.]

Capulet, &c., with the Guests and the Maskers.

Welcome, gentlemen! Ladies that have your toes

plac'd with corns, will have a bout with my mistresses! which of you all [you, deny to dance? she that makes corns!

[Now?]

—I have seen near you your mistress! I have seen the day, when you were a fair lady's ear, [gone;

—'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone, gentlemen! Come, musi-

—I give room! and foot it, girls.

[Music plays, and they dance.]

—You know, and turn the tables up, and the room has grown too small, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;

For you and I are past our dancing days:

How long is't now, since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio, [so much:

Come Pentecost as quickly as it will, [mask'd,

Some five and twenty years; and then we

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his son is elder,

His son is thirty. [sir.

Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady is that, which doth enrich

Of yonder knight? [the hand

Serv. I know not, sir. [bright]

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night

Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear:

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,

As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.

The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand. [hand.

And, touching hers, make blessed my rude

Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!

For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague. [slaves

Fetch me my rapier, boy. What, dares the

Come hither, cover'd with an antique face,

To leer and scorn at our solemnity?

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,

To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;

A villain that is hither come in spite,

To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo, is it?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain, Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone,

He bears him like a portly gentleman;

And, to say truth, Verona brags of him

To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:

I would not for the wealth of all this town,

Here in my house do him disparagement:

Therefore be patient, take no note of him,

It is my will; the which if thou respect,

Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,

An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest:

I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd.

What, Goodman boy! I say, he shall; go to;

Am I the master here, or you? Go to.

You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul,

You'll make a mutiny among my guests!

You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to;

You are a saucy boy; is't so, indeed? [what:

This trick may chance to scath you, I know

You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time.
Well said, my hearts!—You are a prince; go:
Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—For
shame!

I'll make you quiet.—What, cheerly, hearts!

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different
I will withdraw; but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall.

[Exit.]

Rom. [To Juliet.] If I profane with my unworthiest hand

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this:

My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender
kiss.

[Too much.]

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand
Which mannerly devotion shows in this;

For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do
touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers
too?

[prayer.]

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;

[despair.]

They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake,

[effect I take.]

Rom. Then move not, while my prayers
Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd.

[Kissing her.]

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips! O trespass sweetly
Give me my sin again.

[urg'd!]

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word
Rom. What is her mother?

[with you.]

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,
Her mother is the lady of the house,

And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:
I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;

I tell you, he that can say hold of her Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be
gone;

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.
Is it even so? Why then, I thank you all;

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night.
More torches here! Come on, then, let's to bed.

[To 2 Cap.] Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes
late:
I'll to my rest.

[Exeunt all except Juliet and Nurse.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yond' gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, is Petruchio.

Jul. What's he, that follows there, that Nurse, I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name:—if he be
My grave is like to be my wedding-bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague,
The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my hate!

Too early seen unknown, and known too
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?
A rhyme I learn'd even
Of one I dan'd withal.

[One calls within, "Juliet."]

Nurse. Come, let's away: the strangers are all hate!

Enter Chorus.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir;

That fair, for which love groan'd so long,
die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now
Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again.

Alike bewitch'd by the charm of love,
But to his foe suppos'd he must comply,

And she steal love's sweet bait from hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;

And she as much in love, her means must
To meet her new-belov'd anywhere.

But passion lends them power, time
Tempering extremities with extreme rage.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—An open place adjoining Garden.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart
here?

Turn back, dull earth, and find thy [He climbs the wall, and looks in]

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. And, on my life, hath stolen into Ben. He ran this way, and

Call, good Mercutio. Nay, I'll
[He follows.]

Rom. humours! madman! peace!

Appear thou in the likeness of a Speak but one rhyme, and I am gone!

Cry but "Ah me!" pronounce but dove;

Speak to my gossip Verna one fair
One nick-name for her purblind son

O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek !

Jul. Ah me !
Rom. She speaks :
O speak again, bright angel ! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air. [Romeo?]
Jul. O Romeo, Romeo ! wherefore art thou Deny thy father, and refuse thy name ;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this ?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy ;
Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.
What's Montague ? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name !
What's in a name ? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet ;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name ;
And for that name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word :
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd ;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,
So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am :
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee ;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jub. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound:

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague? [Like.
Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dis-Jul. How can'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb;
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rain. With love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls ;
For stony limits cannot hold love out :

And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore, thy kinsmen are no let to me. [thee.
Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder

Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords: look thou but
And I am proof against their enmity. [Sweet

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here. [their sight :
Edm. I have night's cloak to hide me from

And, but thou love me, let them find me here;

My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place? [enquire]

Rom. By Love, who first did prompt me to
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore, wash'd with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face;

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-
night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say—Ay;
And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;
And therefore thou may'st think my 'haviour
light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange. [fess]

I should have been more strange, I must confess. But that you over-heard'st, ere I was 'ware,
My true love's passion: therefore, pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I
swear,

That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;

Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,

And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in
I have no joy of this contract to-night: [thee]
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be,
Ere one can say, It lightens. Sweet, good
night!

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. [rest]

Good night, good night! as sweet repose and Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst quest it:

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have.
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within]
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu!
Anon, good nurse! Sweet Montague, to-morrow
Stay but a little, I will come again.

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am a Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet, alone.
Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

Jul. I come, anon.—But if thou
I do beseech thee,—

Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

Jul. By and by; I come, anon.—

To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul—

Jul. A thousand times good night!

Rom. A thousand times the wonted thy light.

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys
But love from love, toward school boys looks.

Re-enter Juliet, alone.
Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist! O, for a
To lure this tassel-gentle back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not so Else would I tear the cave where Echo
And make her airy tongue more sweet
With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls
name:

How silver-sweet sound lovers' names!
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear!

Jul. At what o'clock
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of
Jul. I will not fail: 'tis a sweet
I have forgot why I did call thee
Rom. Let me stand here till thou Jul. I shall forget, to have thee
there,
Remembering how I love thy company.

And I'll still stay, to have thee still
 In any other home but this, [forget,
 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone:
 I'll not go further than a wanton's bird;
 I'll let it hop a little from her hand,
 Come to her prisoner in his twisted gyves,
 With a silk thread plucks it back again,
 Jealous of his liberty.
 I would I were thy bird.

Sweet, so would I:
 Should I kill thee with much cherishing,
 Good night! parting is such sweet
 sorrow,

I shall say good night, till it be morrow.
 Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

[Exit above.]
 I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
 I'll go to my ghostly father's cell,
 And my dear hap to tell.

[Exit.]

ACT III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence, with a basket.

The grey-eyed morn smiles on the dawning night,
 And darkness like a drunkard reels
 From day's path and Titan's fiery wheels:
 Advance his burning eye,
 To cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
 O'er all this orbed cage of ours,
 Flow'rs, and precious-juiced herbs,

With that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
 In her womb children of divers kind
 On her natural bosom find;
 For many virtues excellent,
 Some, and yet all different,
 She is the powerful grace that lies
 In plants, stones, and their true qualities:

So vile that on the earth doth live,
 To the earth some special good doth give;
 To good, but, strain'd from that seed, turns vice, being misapplied;
 Or sometime's by action dignified.

Within the infant rind of this small flower
 Resides the power,
 Being small, with that part cheers
 all parts;

Man's life all senses with the heart.
 As well as herbs,—grace, and rule will;
 Where the weaker is predominant,
 Exceeds the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter Romeo.

Good morrow, father!

Benedicite!
 My tongue so sweet saluteth me!

Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
 So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
 Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
 And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
 But where unbruised youth, with unstuff'd
 brain,

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth
 reign:
 Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
 Thou art up-ris'n'd by some distemperature:
 Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
 Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.

[Rosaline.]
 Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with
 Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father! no;
 I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
 I have been feasting with mine enemy;
 Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
 That's by me wounded: both our remedies
 Within thy help and holy physic lies:
 I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
 My intercession likewise stands my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
 Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set
 On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
 As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
 And all combin'd, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage: when, and where, and how,
 We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,
 I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
 That thou consent to marry us to-day.

Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
 So soon forsaken? young men's love, then, lies
 Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
 Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
 How much salt water thrown away in waste,
 To season love, that of it doth not taste!

The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
 Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
 Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
 Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet;
 If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
 Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:
 And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence,
 then,

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
 men.
 Rom. Thou child'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil
 Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

[mine.]
 Fri. L. Not in a grave,
 To lay one in, another out to have. [love now,
 Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I

Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. L. O, she know well,
Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be:
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. L. Wisely, and slow: they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo Come he not home to-night? [He?]

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his
man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted
wench, that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life!

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master,
how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead!
stab'd with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft: and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you. O, he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist: a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause: ah,
the immortal passado! the punto reverso!
the hay!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antick, hisping, affecting fantasticoes, these new tuners of accents!
—"By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good whore!"—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies,
these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O their bons, their bons!

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring:
O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in:
Laura, to his lady, was at a kitchen-wench;

marry, she had a better love to be thy Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a slattern; and and Hero, hildings and harlots; and grey eye or so, but not to the purpose.
Romeo, bon jour! there's a French saluto your French slop. You gave us the counfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both.
counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my was great; and in such a case as mine, may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—Spoke as yours constrains a man to bow in the

Rom. Meaning—to court'ry.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then, is my pump well?

Mer. Well said: follow me this till thou hast worn out thy pump; then the single soul of it is worn, the remain, after the wearing, solely

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the chase, I have done; for thou hast wild-goose in one of thy wits, than

I have in my whole five: was I wild for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me thing, when thou wast not here for Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter

a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in

Mer. O, here's a wit of stretches from an inch narrow to an

Rom. I stretch it out for that which added to the goose, proves wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this groaning for love? now art thou art thou Romeo; now art thou by art as well as by nature: for love is like a great natural, that up and down to hide his

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have large.

Mer. O, thou art deceived: I made it short: for I was come to depth of my tale; and must occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

A sail, a sail, a sail!
Two, two: a shirt, and a smock.

My Ian, Peter.

God Peter, to hide her face; for her fair face.

God ye good morrow, gentlemen.
Is it good den?

Is no less, I tell you; for the bawdy
dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Out upon you, what a man are you.
Gentlewoman, that God hath

By my troth, it is well said;—for to mar, quotha?—Gentlemen, can any tell me where I may find the young

man?

I can tell you; but young Romeo older when you have found him, than when you sought him: I am the of that name, for fault of a worse.

You say well.

Is the worst well? very well with; wisely, wisely.

If you be he, sir, I desire some confession.

Will indite him to some supper.

A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!
What hast thou found?

No hare, sir, unless a hare, sir, in a pace, that is something stale and hoar

As an old hare hour,
And an old hare hour,

Is very good meat in Lent;
But a hare that is hoar,

Is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent."

Will you come to your father's? we'll thither.

I will follow you.

Farewell, ancient lady; farewell,
lady.

[Exit Nurse and Benvolio.]

Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, my merchant was this, that was so full of a gentleman, nurse, that loves to talk; and will stand to in a month.

An' a speak anything against me,
An' a were lustier than he that shall. Scurvy knave! I of his shirt-colls: I am none of his

And thou must stand by, too, scurvy knave to use me at his pleasure!

I have no man near you at his pleasure;
my weapon should quickly have been strait you; I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!
—Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bade me enquire you out; what she bid me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise
Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;

And there she shall, at friar Laurence's cell,
Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall. [Exit Nurse.] Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;

Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains;
Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now, God in heaven bless thee!—
Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,
Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee, my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O,—there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the proper man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varsal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter? [Exit Nurse.]

Rom. Ay, nurse: what of that? both with Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name; R is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter:—and she had the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. — [Exit
Romeo.] Peter!

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Peter, take my fan and go before.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Capulet's Garden.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return. [so.— Perchance, she cannot meet him:—that's not O, she is lame! love's heralds should be
thoughts,

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's
Driving back shadows over lowering hills:

Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill

Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours,—yet she is not come.

Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,

She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;

My words would bandy her to my sweet love,

And his to me:

But old folks, many feign as they were dead;

Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead,

O God, she comes!—

Enter Nurse and Peter.

O honey nurse! what news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O Lord!

why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;

If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news

By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave awhile:—

Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have

I had!

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste! can you not stay

Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me—that thou art out of breath?

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay

Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:

Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man:

Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's;

and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,— though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare; he is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench; serve God.—

What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, nor but all this did I know before

What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back! O! t'other side!—O, my back,

back!

Bestrew your heart for sending me about

To catch my death with jaunting up and down

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art

well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what news?

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest

gentleman,

And a courteous, and a kind, and a true

And, I warrant, a virtuous!—Where's your

mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—How oddly

Where should she be? How oddly ply'st!

"Your love says, like an honest gentleman"

Where is your mother?

Nurse. O, God's lady! what

Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow,

Is this the poultice for my aching bones?

Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil!—Come, what news?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to Romeo?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to find your cell,

There stays a husband to make you a wife.

Now comes the wanton blood up to your

cheeks,

They'll be in scarlet straight at any new

Hie you to church; I must another way

To fetch a ladder, by the which your love

Must climb a bird's nest soon when you're

I am the drudge, and toil in your del

But you shall hear the turlow

Go; I'll to dinner; he you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune!—hence I

farewell.

SCENE VI.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.

Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this act,

That after-hours with sorrow chide us not.

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what will,

It cannot counterveil the exchange of life

That one short minute gives me in her

Do thou but close our hands with holy

Then love-devouring death do what he will.

It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent

And in their triumph die; like fire that feeds

Which, as they kiss, consume; the more

Is leathern in his own deliciousness.

And in the taste confounds the appetite.

Therefore, love moderately; long

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter Juliet.

times the lady.—O, so light a foot may wear out the everlasting flint:

may bestride the gossamer

in the wanton summer air,

yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Good even to my ghostly confessor,

Romeo shall thank thee, daughter,

for us both.

As much to him, else are his thanks

too much.

Ab, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy be like mine, and that thy skill be

more than sweeten with thy breath

the unimag'd happiness, that both live in either by this dear encounter.

Conceit, more rich in matter than in

words,

of assistance, not of ornament:

we are but beggars that can count their

worth;

my true love is grown to such excess,

that sum up half my sum of wealth.

Ab, Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

for your leaves, you shall not stay alone,

but my church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's return; for the day is hot, the Capulets abroad, [fire]

if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;

for these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that, when they see the confines of a tavern, claps

up his sword upon the table, and says, "God

send me no need of thee!" and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, indeed, there is no need.

Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in the mood, as any in Italy; and as soon moved as a fool, and as soon moody to be moved.

And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other business on thy mind; but thou hast: thou wilt quarrel with a man for wearing a new cap?

Why, because thou hast hazel eyes?

Quarrel! Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head has been beaten as addis as an egg, for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun: didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribbons? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the ice-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The ice-simple! O simple!

Enter Tybalt and others.

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us?
Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that,
sir, if you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! What, dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddle-stick; here's that shall make you dance.

[men:]
'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of Either withdraw unto some private place,
And reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze:

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter Romeo.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man. [livery:]

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;
Your worship, in that sense, may call him—
man.

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford
No better term than this—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love
thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting:—villain am I none;
Therefore farewell: I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me, therefore turn, and draw.

Rom. I do protest, I never injured thee;
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as my own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
Alla stoccata carries it away. [Draws.]

Tybalt, you ratcatcher, will you walk!

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold

withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the night. Will you pluck your sword out of his pitcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. [Drawing.] I am for you.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage:

Tybalt, — Mercutio, — the prince expressly hath forbidden bandying in Verona streets:

Hold, Tybalt! — good Mercutio, —

[Exeunt Tybalt and his partisans,

Mer. I am hurt; —

A plague o' both the houses! — I am sped; — Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough. —

Where is my page? — Go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.]

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve; ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world; — a plague o' both your houses! — 'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! — Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint. — A plague o' both your houses! They have made worms' meat of me: I have it soundly too; — your houses!

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman: O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soften'd valour's steel!

[Re-enter Benvolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead!

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend:

This but begins the woe, others must end.

[Re-enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive in triumph! and Mercutio A way to heaven, respective lenity, [slain!]

And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now! —

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again,

That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul Is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company: Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou wretched boy, that dost so hurt Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine [They fight: Tybalt slain.]

Ben. Romeo, away, begone! The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain!

Stand not amaz'd: — the prince will doom thee If thou art taken: — hence, begone, away!

Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou say so? [Exit Romeo.]

[Enter Citizens, &c.

1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt. Up, sir, go with me.

1 Cit. I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; Montague, &c.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince! I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl.

There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my nephew, child! —

O prince! — O husband! — O, the blood Of my dear kinsman! — Prince, as thou art, For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.

O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this blood?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;

Romeo, that spoke him fair, bade him retire, Now nice the quarrel was, and urg'd with love.

Your high displeasure: — all this, uncle, With gentle breath, calm look, kneeled unto, bow'd, — Could not take truce with the unruly rage Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he kill'd me.

With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast, Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,

And, with a martial scorn, with one man's hand Cold death aside, and with the other hand It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity

Retorts it: — Romeo he cries aloud, "Hold, friends! friends, part!" and

His agile arm beats down their fatal blows, And 'twixt them rushes; underneath

an arm, An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the heart Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt himself

But by and by comes back to Romeo, Who had but newly entertained violence

And to't they go like lightning; for, as they Could draw to part them, was Romeo slain;

Act 2.

And as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly:
Is he the truth, or let Benvolio die.
He is a kinsman to the Montague;
Makes him false, he speaks not true:
Twenty of them fought in this black shroud;
All these twenty could but kill one life.
For justice, which thou, prince, must give,
Thou Tybalt, Romeo must not live.
Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Now the price of his dear blood doth owe!
Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's
friend;
He concludes but what the law should end,
Of Tybalt.

And for that offence,
Which doth interest in your hate's proceeding, Brawling, your rule brawls doth lie a blasting;
You shall all repent the loss of mine:
I'll be dead in pleading and excuses;
Nor prayers, shall purchase out shades,
Where none: let Romeo hence in haste,
When he's found, that hour is his last.
Hence this body, and attend our will:
But murders, pardoning those that kill.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet's House.
Enter Juliet.

Callop' apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Drawing my plumed mansion: such a waggoner
Shall whip you to the west,
Lest in cloudy night immediately Close-curtain, love-performing eyes may wink, and Romeo
To these arms, untalk'd of and unseen,
In his own beauties; or, if love be blind,
It will admit me to the holy shrine,
The silver-scented matron, all in black,
For a pair of stainless maidenhoods:
My unmann'd blood, bating in my
cheeks,
Thy black mantle; till strange love,
Acted simple modesty,
Come, Romeo,—come, then day
Will lie upon the wings of night
Gently: night; come, loving, blackbrewn'd night,
Be my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
I will make him out in little stars,
For all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,

But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: so tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,
And she brings news; and every tongue, that
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence.
[Enter Nurse, with cords.]

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? the cords
That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.
[Throws them down.]
Jul. Ah me! what news! why dost thou wring thy hands! [He's dead!]
Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead,
We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's Jul. Can heaven be so envious? [Dead!]
Nurse. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot:—O Romeo, Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it!—Romeo!
Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,
And that bare vowel, I, shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I.
If he be slain, say—I; or if not—No:
Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes,
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore blood;—I swoonded at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes! ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-lov'd cousin, and my dearer lord!—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?
Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed
Tybalt's blood?
Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day, it did!
Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave! [face]
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravelling lamb!
 Despis'd substance of divinity show!
 Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
 A damn'd saint, an honourable villain!
 O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,
 When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
 In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
 Was ever book containing such vile matter,
 So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
 In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,
 No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
 All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.
 Ah, where's my man? give me some acqua vita!—

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make Shame come to Romeo! [The old.

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,
 For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
 Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit:
 For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
 Sole monarch of the universal earth.
 O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband? [thy name,

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth
 When I, thy three-hours' wife, have mangled it?— [cousin?

But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my
 That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband?

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
 Your tributary drops belong to woe,
 Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.

My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain; [husband;

And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my
 All this is comfort; wherefore weep I, then?
 Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's
 death,

That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;
 But O, it presses to my memory,
 Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:

"Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;"
 That—"banished," that one word—"banished," [death]

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's
 Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
 Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,
 And needily will be rank'd with other griefs,—

Why follow'd not, when she said—"Tybalt's
 dead,

Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
 Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
 But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,

"Romeo is banished,"—to speak that word,
 Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
 All slain, all dead:—"Romeo is banished,"—

There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
 In that word's death; no words can that woe
 sound.—

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wallowing over Tybalt's
 corpse:

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.
Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears, mine shall be spent.

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banish'd Take up those cords:—poor ropes, you beguil'd,

Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd:
 He made you for a highway to my bed;
 But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.

Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed;

And death, not Romeo, take my maiden Nurse. Life to your chamber! I'll
 Romeo

To comfort you:—I wot well where he is.
 Hark ye, your Romeo will be here to-night:
 I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my knight,
 And bid him come to take his last farewell.

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come to thou fearful man:
 Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
 And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter Romeo.
Rom. Father, what news? what is prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my
 That I yet know not?

Fri. L. Too familiar
 Is my dear son with such sour company:
 I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than doomsday
 prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgment vouch'd
 Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful,
 death;

For exile hath more terror in his look,
 Much more than death: do not say so.

Fri. L. Hence from Verona are those
 Be patient, for the world is broad and Rom. There is no world without
 But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
 And world's exile is death:—then, banish'd
 Is death mis-term'd: calling death
 ment,

Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden
 And smil'st upon the stroke that Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude

ness!
 Thy fault our law calls death; but Taking thy part, hath rush'd in to And turn'd that black word
 ment:

This is dear mercy, and thou wouldest

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,
Is set afire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy
too:

The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy
friend,

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back:
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her:
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming.

[the night,
Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide,

[you, sir,
Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

[Exit.
Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

[stands all your state:
Fri. L. Go hence; good night; and here
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence!
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you, that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good
night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee:
Farewell!

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,

That we have had no time to move our
daughter:

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I;—well, we were born to die.—
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford me to woo.

Madam, good night: commend me to
daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind
To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a day tender

Of my child's love: I think she will be
In all respects by me; nay, more, I think

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed:
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love.

And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday
But, soft! What day is this?

Monday, sir.
Par. Well, Wednesday

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon:

O' Thursday let it be:—o' Thursday, tell
She shall be married to this noble earl.

Will you be ready? do you like this?—
We'll keep no great ado, a friend or two;

For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we hold him carelessly.

Being our kinsman, if we revel much,
Therefore we'll have some half a dozen guests.

And there an end. But what say you Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday
Cap. Well, get you gone:—o' Thursday

it, then.—
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,

Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day:
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber!

Afore me, it's so very late, that we May call it early by and by:—good night.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet
day:

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;

Nightly she sings on the yew-pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the heralding morn,

No nightingale: look, love, what eastern light
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east.

Night's candles are burnt out, and Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.

I must be gone and live, or stay and
die.

Jul. You light it is not daylight,
It is some meteor that the sun exiles.

To be to thee this night a torch-beacon,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.

Therefore stay yet,—thou need'st not gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

I'll say you grey is not the morning;
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's bow.

Nor that is not the lark, whose noise
The vaulty heaven so high above her doth

More care to stay, than will to go:
 death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.
 It is, my soul; let's talk, it is not day.
 It is, he hence, begone, away!
 The lark that sings so out of tune,
 Harsh discords, and displeasing

Chorus.
 The lark makes sweet division;
 Such not as, for she divideth us; [eyes;
 The lark and loathed toad change
 I would they had chang'd voices too!
 From their own that voice doth us affray,
 And their keen hearts are here to-day.
 More light and light it grows.
 More light and light!—more dark
 And dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.
 Nurse!
 Your lady mother's coming to your chamber;
 I broke; be wary, look about.

Then, window, let day in, and let life
 Out. [Exit.]
 Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll Descend.

Art thou gone so? my love! my lord!
 My friend!
 I have from thee every day in the hour,
 For this point I shall be much in years
 Behold my Romeo.

Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
 To convey my greetings, love, to thee.
 O, think'st thou we shall ever meet

I doubt it not: and all these woes
 Shall serve
 To discourse in our time to come.
 O God, I have an ill-divining soul:
 I see thee, now thou art below,
 Dead in the bottom of a tomb;

And trust me, love, in my eye so do
 You.
 Now drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!
 O fortune, fortune! all men call thee

Fickle.
 Thou art fickle, what dost thou with him?
 That down'd for faith! Be fickle, fortune;
 I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
 But break his back.

Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you
 mother?
 Who let's that calls? is it my lady

Not down so late, or up so early?
 Enter Lady Capulet.
 Why, how now, Juliet?

Madam, I am not well.
 Evermore weeping for your counsel's death!
 Will thou wash him from his grave with

And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live; [of love;
 Therefore, have done: some grief shows much But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.
 La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not
 Which you weep for. [the friend
 Jul. Feeling so the loss,
 I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
 As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?
 La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.
 Jul. Villain and he be many miles asunder.
 God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
 And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor mur-derer lives. [my hands:
 Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these Would none but I might venge my cousin's death! [thou not:

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,—

Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,—
 Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram,
 That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
 And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
 With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
 Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd:
 Madam, if you could find out but a man
 To bear a poison, I would temper it;

That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
 Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors
 To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to
 him,—

To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
 Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!
 La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
 Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy
 time:

What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
 La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;

One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
 Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
 That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.
 Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that? [day morn,

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thurs-
 The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
 The county Paris, at Saint Peter's church,
 Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
 I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
 Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo:
 I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,

I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris:—these are news indeed!

La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle
But for the sunset of my brother's son, [dew;
It rains downright.—

How now! a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body
Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,

Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;
Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with Without a sudden calm, will overset [them,—
Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife!
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife. [thanks?

How! will she none? doth she not give us
Is she not proud? doth she not count her
bless'd,

Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:

Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this?

Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you
not:—

And yet not proud:—mistress minion, you,
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no
prouds,

But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church, [next,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.

Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you
You tallow-face! [baggage!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!

I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thurs-
day,

Or never after look me in the face;
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;

My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us
bless'd,

That God had lent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,

And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!—
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom! hold
tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossip!

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O God ye good

Nurse. May not one speak!

Cap. Peace, you mumbling

Cap. Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl;

For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad!

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,

Alone, in company, still my care hath

To have her match'd: and having now

A gentleman of noble parentage,

Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly

Stuff'd (as they say) with honourable

Proportion'd as one's thought would

man,—

And then to have a wretched puling

A whining mammet, in her fortune

To answer—"I'll not wed,"—"I

love,"—"

"I am too young,"—"I pray you

me;"—

But, an you will not wed, I'll punish Graze where you will, you shall

with me.

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart,

An you be mine, I'll give you to my

An you be not, hang, beg, starve,

streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge

Nor what is mine shall never do the Trust to't, bethink you; I'll not be

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the

That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O, sweet my mother, call me not away!

Delay this marriage for a month,

Or, if you do not, make the bridal

In that dim monument where Tybalt

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not

word:

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with

Jul. O God!—O nurse, how shall prevented!

My husband is on earth, my faith

How shall that faith return again to me?

Unless that husband send it me

By leaving earth!—comfort me, nurse!

Alack, alack, that heaven should stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself!

What say'st thou? hast thou not a

Some comfort, nurse?

Nurse. Faith, here it is

Is banish'd; and all the world to

That he dares ne'er come back to me

Or, if he do, it needs must be by

Then, since the case so stands with

I think it best you married with

A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to 'scape from
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy. [it ;

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry
Paris,

From off the battlements of yonder tower ;
Or walk in thievish ways ; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are ; chain me with roaring
bears ;

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,

With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls ;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud ;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me
tremble ;

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. L. Hold, then ; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris ; Wednesday is to-morrow ;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber ;
Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off ;
When, presently, through all thy veins shall run

A cold and drowsy humour ; for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease :
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st ;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pale ashes ; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life ;
Each part, deprived of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like
death :

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
Then (as the manner of our country is) [dead :
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift ;
And hither shall he come ; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo hear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present
shame ;

If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me ! O, tell me not of fear !
Fri. L. Hold ; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve : I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength ! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father ! [Exit.

SCENE II.—Hall in Capulet's House.
Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are [Re-enter Juliet]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.
2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir ; for try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so ?
2 Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that lick his own fingers ; therefore he that lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good.
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Nurse. See, where she comes from with merry look.

Enter Juliet.
Cap. How now, my headstrong ! where you been gadding !

Jul. Where I have learn'd to know
Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests ; and am enjoin'd
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon.—pardon, I beseech you.

Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the county ; go tell him
I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's
cell ;

And gave him what becom'd love I could,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't ; this is stand up—

This is as't should be.—Let me see the Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him.

Now, afore God, this reverent holy
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow.

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday ; that time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her ;
[Exit Juliet and Nurse]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stay
And all things shall be well, I warrant you.

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her ;
I'll not to bed to-night ; let me about it.

I'll play the housewife for this once.
ho !—

They are all forth : well, I will wait
To county Paris, to prepare him up.

Against to-morrow : my heart is
light,

Since this same wayward girl is gone.

SCENE III.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Nurse. Ay, those attires are best:—but, gentle Juliet,

leave me to myself to-night;

I have need of many orisons

to have the heavens to smile upon my state,

well thou know'st, is cross and full of woe.

Enter Lady Capulet.

Lady Cap. What, are you busy, ho! need you my help?

Nurse. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

behoveful for our state to-morrow:

you, let me now be left alone,

and the nurse this night sit up with you;

no more, you have your hands full all,

to sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good night:

What, are you busy, ho! need you my help?

Nurse. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

behoveful for our state to-morrow:

you, let me now be left alone,

and the nurse this night sit up with you;

no more, you have your hands full all,

to sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good night:

What, are you busy, ho! need you my help?

Nurse. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

behoveful for our state to-morrow:

you, let me now be left alone,

and the nurse this night sit up with you;

no more, you have your hands full all,

to sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good night:

What, are you busy, ho! need you my help?

Nurse. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

behoveful for our state to-morrow:

you, let me now be left alone,

and the nurse this night sit up with you;

no more, you have your hands full all,

to sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good night:

What, are you busy, ho! need you my help?

Nurse. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

behoveful for our state to-morrow:

you, let me now be left alone,

and the nurse this night sit up with you;

Environed with all these hideous fears?
And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains!
O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point:—stay, Tybalt, stay!
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[Throws herself on the bed.]

SCENE IV.—Capulet's Hall.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:

Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go;
Get you to bed: 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Lady Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exit Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—
Now, fellow,

Enter Servants, with spits, logs, and baskets.

What's there?

1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]

Sirrah, fetch drier logs:

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.]

Cap. 'Mass, and well said; a merry whore-son, ha!

Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'tis

The county will be here with music straight;

[Music within.]

For so he said he would:—I hear him near.—

Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up;

I'll go and chat with Paris:—hie, make haste,

Make haste, the bridegroom he is come already:

Make haste, I say. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber; Juliet on the bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!

—fast, I warrant her, she:—

Why, lamb!—why, lady!—lie, you slug-a-bed!

—

Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—
why, bride!— [worths now;
What, not a word!—you take your penny-
Sleep for a week: for the next night, I warrant,
The county Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,
Marry and amen, how sound is she asleep!
I needs must wake her.—Madam, madam,
madam!—

Ay, let the county take you in your bed;
He'll fright you up, if faith.—Will it not be!
What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again!

I must needs wake you: lady! lady! lady!—
Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some agua viva, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only
life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—

Help, help!—call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame! bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead;
alack the day!

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead! she's dead! [cold;

Cap. Ha! let me see her:—out, alas! she's
Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Laurence, and Paris, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:—
O son, the night before thy wedding-day
Hath death lain with thy wife: there she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,
And leave him all; life, living, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this!

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful day!
Most lamentable day, most woful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wrangled,
slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life!—not life, but love, marry,
Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, marry,

kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why can't thou now
To murder, murder our solemnity!

O child! O child!—my soul, and my child!

Dead art thou!—alack, my child is dead!
And with my child my joys are buried!

Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! con-cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and your
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven

And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep

death;

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion;

For 'twas your heaven she should be crown'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is so crown'd!

Above the clouds, as high as heaven's top;
O, in this love, you love your child so well

That you run mad, seeing that she is well;
She's not well married that lives married!

But she's best married that dies married;
Dry up your tears, and stick your fingers

On this fair course; and, as the custom
In all her best array bear her to church:

For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's memento.

Cap. All things that we ordained funeral Turn from their office to black funeral;

Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change,
Our bridal flowers serve for the buried

And all things change them to the funeral.
Fri. L. Sir, go you in, and, with him

with him:—
And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare

To follow this fair corpse unto her grave;
The heavens do lower upon you, for Move them no more, by accident, I will. [Exeunt Capulet, Friar

Paris, and Nurse.

1 Mus. 'Faith, we may put up our and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, I put up, for, well you know, the case.

1 Mus. Ay, by my truth, the case is amended.

Enter Peter.
Pet. Musicians. O musicians!

That's ease! "O, an ye will have me Hear't ease!"
 Why "Hear't ease!"
 O musician, because my heart itself
 My heart is full of woe: "O, play me a dump, to comfort me."
 Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now.
 You will not, then?
 I will, then, give it you soundly.
 What will you give us?
 No money, on my faith; but the glee:
 Give you the minstrel.
 Then will I give you the serving-
 creature.
 Then will I lay the serving-creature's on your pate. I will carry no crotchets:
 I'll fa you; do you note me?
 Answer us, and fa us, you note us.
 Pray you, put up your dagger, and let your wit
 Then have at you with my wit! I will answer you with an iron wit, and put up my sword. Answer me like men:
 This gripping grief the heart doth wound,
 And dailie dumps the mind oppress,
 And sound, with her silver sound—
 "Silver sound!" why "music with her sound!" — What say you, Simon Cat-her. Mary, sir, because silver hath a [beck?
 I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.
 Pretty too! — What say you, James [Soundpost?
 Pith, I know not what to say.
 O I cry you mercy; you are the silver sound, because musicians have gold for sounding: —
 With music with her silver sound,
 With speedy help doth lend redress."
 [Exit.
 What a pestilent knave is this same!
 Hang him, Jack! — Come, we'll in for the mourners, and stay dinner.
 [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter Romeo.

It may trust the flattering truth of
 sleep,
 When's lord sits lightly in his throne;
 All this day an unaccustom'd spirit
 Above the ground with cheerful
 thoughts,
 My lady came and found me dead,
 (That gives a dead man leave to think),
 And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,

That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
 Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
 When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!
 Enter Balthasar.
 News from Verona! — How now, Balthasar!
 Hast thou not bring me letters from the friar?
 How doth my lady? Is my father well?
 How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
 For nothing can be ill, if she be well.
 Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be
 Her body sleeps in Capels' monument, [ill;
 And her immortal part with angels lives.
 I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
 And presently took post to tell it you:
 O, pardon me for bringing these ill news,
 Since you did leave it for my office, sir.
 Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars! — Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and
 paper,
 And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.
 Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience:
 Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
 Some misadventure.
 Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd:
 Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
 Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?
 Bal. No, my good lord.
 Rom. No matter: get thee gone,
 And hire those horses: I'll be with thee straight. [Exit Balthasar.
 Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
 Let's see for means: — O mischief, thou art swift
 To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
 I do remember an apothecary, —
 And hereabouts he dwells, — which late I noted
 In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
 Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
 Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
 And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
 An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
 Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves
 A beggarly account of empty boxes,
 Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds, Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
 Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
 Noting this penury, to myself I said,
 An if a man did need a poison now,
 Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
 Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
 O, this same thought did but fore-run my need;
 And this same needy man must sell it me.
 As I remember, this should be the house:
 Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.
 What, ho! apothecary!
 Enter Apothecary.
 Ap. Who calls so loud?
 Rom. Come hither, man. — I see that thou art poor;
 Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
 A dram of poison; such soon-speeding gear
 As will disperse itself through all the veins,
 That the life-weary taker may fall dead;

And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently, as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law

Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness,

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hang upon thy back,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law:

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, but not thy will.

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men's souls,

Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell: buy food, and get thyself in flesh.
Come, cordial, and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave; for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar John.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar Laurence.

Fri. L. This name should be the voice of friar John.

Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

Fri. J. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?

Fri. J. I could not send it,—here it is Nor get a messenger to bring it thee, [again,—
So fearful were they of infection.

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brother—
The letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.

[Exit.]

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake:
She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,

And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb.

SCENE III.—A Church-yard: In it a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter Paris, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy; here I stand aloof;

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond' yew-tree lay these all alone,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread,
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves;
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me
As signal that thou hear'st something; or, if thou Givest me those flowers, do as I bid thee.

Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone

Here in the church-yard; yet I will adventure.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bed I strew;

O woe, thy canopy is dust and stones;
Which with sweet water nightly I will wash;
Or, wanting that, with tears distilled by moonlight.
The obsequies that I for thee will use,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy grave and sing to thee.

The boy gives warning something will approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to night,
To cross my obsequies, and true love's rite,
What, with a torch!—muffle me, night!

Enter Romeo and Balthasar, with a mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the burning iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father;
Give me the light: upon thy life, I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or see'st, stand close about me,
And do not interrupt me in my course;
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is, partly, to behold my lady's face;
But, chiefly, to take thence a precious ring.

A precious ring, a ring that I must have
In dear employment: therefore hear me,
But, if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thy jointure out,
And strew this hungry church-yard with thy limbs:

The time and my intents are savage-fierce,
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring lion.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me thy love.

Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous: and farewell.

[Aside.] For all this same, I'll hide me about:

But, and his intents I doubt.

[Retires.]
Thou detestable maw, thou womb of the dearest morsel of the earth,

before thy rotten jaws to open,

how soon I'll cram thee with more food!

This is that banish'd haughty Montaguere's love's cousin,—with which posed, the fair creature died,—[grief,

there is come to do some villainous shame to these ladies: I will apprehend him.— [Advancing.]

He pursu'd farther than death?

Wilt thou go with me; for thou must die.

Must, indeed; and therefore came I to thee, youth, tempt not a desperate man;

and leave me: think upon these words, I beseech thee, youth,

and I will go to my head,

I love thee better than myself,

and I'll go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

to go to my head, and hereafter say—

Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,

And death's pale flag is not advanced there.

Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?

O, what more favour can I do to thee,

Than with that hand that cut thy youth in

To sunder his that was thine enemy? [twain,

Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,

Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe

That unsubstantial death is amorous;

And that the lean, abhorred monster keeps

Thee here in dark to be his paramour?

For fear of that, I still will stay with thee;

And never from this palace of dim night

Depart again: here, here will I remain

With worms that are thy chamber-mails; O,

Will I set up my everlasting rest;

And shake the yoke of insupportable stars

From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you

The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death!

Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on

The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!

Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies.]

Enter at the other end of the Church-yard Friar

Laurence, with a lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night [there?]

Have my old feet stumbled at graves!—Who's that? Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well. [my friend,

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good

What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light

To grubs and eyeless skulls! as I discern,

It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my

One that you love, [master,

Fri. L. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir.

My master knows not, but I am gone hence;

And fearfully did menace me with death,

If I did stay to look on his intents. [upon me:]

Fri. L. Stay then, I'll go alone.—Fear comes

O! much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,

I dreamt my master and another fought,

And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. [Approaching the tomb.] Romeo!—

Alack, alack; what blood is this, which stains

The stony entrance of this sepulchre?

What mean these masterless and gory swords,

To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enters the tomb.]

Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris too!

And steep'd in blood!—Ah, what an unkind
Is guilty of this lamentable chance!— [hour
The lady stirs. [Juliet wakes.

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am:—where is my Romeo?

[Noise within.

Fri. L. I hear some noise,—Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep:
A greater Power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents: come, come away:
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming:
Come, go, good Juliet.—[Noise again.] I dare
no longer stay.

Jul. Oo, get thee hence, for I will not away.

[Exit Fri. L.

What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
hand?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:
O churl! drink all, and leave no friendly drop
To help me after!—I will kiss thy lips:
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.

[Kisses him.

Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy; which way?

Jul. Yea, noise!—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger!

[Snatching Romeo's dagger.

This is thy sheath; [Stabs herself.] there rest,
and let me die.

[Falls on Romeo's body and dies.

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the church-yard;

Go, some of you; whoe'er you find, attach.

[Exeunt some of the Watch.

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried.
Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search:—

[Exeunt others of the Watch.

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Re-enter some of the Watch, with Balthasar.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the church-yard. [come hither.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince

Re-enter other of the Watch, with Friar Laurence.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps;

We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar
too,

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early
That calls our person from our morning rest?

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so early abroad?

La. Cap. The people in the street cry
Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all

With open outcry, toward our mansion.

Prince. What fear is this, which starts you from our ears?

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the dead
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead too,

Warm and new-hill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how foul murder comes.

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and stabb'd
With instruments upon them, fit to open

These dead men's tombs. [daughters

Cap. O heaven!—O wife, look to, look to,
This dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo, his

Is empty on the back of Montague;
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's womb.

La. Cap. O me! this night of death's
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art
up,

To see thy son and heir more early down;
Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead

night;

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath;
What further woe conspires against mine?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners

To press before thy father to a grave!

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage now,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,

And know their spring, their head, their descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death; meantime

And let mischance be slave to patience.
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do
Yet most suspected, as the time and place

Doth make against me, of this dismal night,
And here I stand, both to impeach and Myself condemned, and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short tale
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to Juliet;

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful
I married them; and their stolen marriage

Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet
You, to remove that sleep of death from

Betroth'd, and would have married

force,

Paris: then comes she to me;
 With wild looks, bid me devise some means
 To take her from this second marriage,
 And give I her, (so tutor'd by my art,)
 A sleeping potion; which so took effect
 As I intended, for it wrought on her
 The death: meantime I writ to Romeo,
 To take her from her borrow'd grave,
 At the time the potion's force should cease.
 But she, which bore my letter, friar John,
 Came by accident; and yesternight
 Delivered my letter back. Then, all alone,
 To take her from her kindred's vault;
 To keep her closely at my cell,
 Whence I could send to Romeo:
 But when I came, (some minute ere the time
 Of waking,) here untimely lay
 The pale Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
 And I entreated her come forth,
 To do this work of heaven with patience:
 But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
 And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
 (For I know) did violence on herself.
 And to the marriage
 I know: and, if aught in this Concerned by my fault, let my old life
 Pay the requital of severest law.
 [man.] We still have known thee for a holy Romeo's man? what can he say in
 Death;
 I brought my master news of Juliet's
 Death;
 In the same place, to this same monument.
 He early bid me give his father;
 And he bade me with death, going in the Vault,
 He departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it.
 Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did;

Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;

And, by and by, my master drew on him;

And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:

And here he writes, that he did buy a poison

Of a poor 'pothecary; and therewithal

Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet,

Where be these enemies!—Capulet!—Montague!—

See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,

That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!

And I, for winking at your discords too,

Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand:
 This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
 Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:

For I will raise her statue in pure gold;

That, while Verona by that name is known,

There shall no figure at such rate be set,

As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
 Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings:

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:
 Go hence, to have more talk of these sad

things;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
 For never was a story of more woe,

Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.]

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Duke of Venice.
 Brabantio, a Senator.
 Other Senators.
 Gratiano, Brother to Brabantio.
 Lodovico, Kinsman to Brabantio.
 Othello, a noble Moor; General in the Venetian Service.
 Cassio, his Lieutenant.
 Iago, his Ancient.
 Roderigo, a Venetian Gentleman.

Montano, Othello's predecessor in the Government of Cyprus.
 Clown, Servant to Othello.
 Desdemona, Daughter to Brabantio, and Wife to Othello.
 Emilia, Wife to Iago.
 Bianca, Mistress to Cassio.
 Officers, Gentlemen, Messengers, Sailors, Attendants, &c.

SCENE,—The first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-port in Cyprus.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Roderigo and Iago.

Rod. Tush! Never tell me; I take it much unkindly

That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse
 As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me;—
 If ever I did dream of such a matter,
 Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
 Off-capp'd to him:—and, by the faith of man,
 I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:
 But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
 Evades them, with a bombast circumstance
 Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;

And, in conclusion, [He,
 Nonsuits my mediators; for, "Certes," says
 "I have already chose my officer." And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
 One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
 A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
 That never set a squadron in the field,
 Nor the division of a battle knows [theorick,
 More than a spinster; unless the bookish
 Wherein the tog'd consuls can propose

As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice, [election:

Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the
 And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof;
 At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds, Christian and heathen,—must be be-lee'd and calm'd

By debitor-and-creditor, this counter-caster;

He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
 And I, (God bless the mark!) his Moorish ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have Iago. Why, there's no remedy; 'tis the of service,

Preferment goes by letter and affection,
 Not by the old gradation, where each Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be-
 yourself,

Whether I in any just terms am allow'd
 To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him
 Iago. O, sir, content you;

I follow him to serve my turn upon him;
 We cannot all be masters, nor all Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall not Many a duteous and knee-crooking Moor,
 That, doting on his own obsequious
 Wears out his time, much like his master's,
 For nought but provender; and when he cashier'd:

Whip me such honest knaves. Other Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,
 And, throwing but shows of service on their

lords,

Do well thrive by them, and, when they lined their coats,

Do themselves homage: these fellows
 And such a one I do profess myself to be.

It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
 Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago.

In following him, I follow but my Heaven is my judge, not I for love and
 But seeming so, for my peculiar end.

For when my outward action doth
 The native act and figure of my heart

In compliment extern, 'tis not long
 But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve

For daws to peck at: I am not what I seem.

What a full fortune does the thick lips Carry't thus!

Call up her father;
make after him, poison his delight,
in the streets; incense her
senses;

though he in a fertile climate dwell, him with flies; though that his joy be throw such changes of vexation on't, [joy, that he may lose some colour.

Is he in her father's house; I'll call [dire yell,
Do; with like timorous accent and by night and negligence, the fire in populous cities.

What, ho, Brabantio! [brantio, ho!
Awake! what, ho, Brabantio! singular Bra-bantio! thieves!

to your house, your daughter, and your [brantio, ho!
Brabantio, above, at a window.

What is the reason of this terrible the matter there? [summons]
Signior, is all your family within?

Are your doors lock'd?
Why, wherefore ask you this?
Zounds, sir, you are robb'd; for that is burst, you have lost half your now, very now, an old black ram your white ewe. Arise, arise;

the snorting citizens with the bell,
the devil will make a grandsire of you;

What, have you lost your wits?
Most reverend signior, do you know
Not I: what are you? [my voice]
My name is Roderigo.

The worse welcome!
charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors:

plainness thou hast heard me say, laughter is not for thee; and now, in
madness,

fall of supper and distemp'ring of malicious bravery, dost thou come to my quiet.

Sir, sir,—
But thou must needs be sure, what and my place have in them power to make this bitter to thee.

Patience, good sir.
What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;
is not a grange.

Most grave Brabantio,
I come to you.

And pure soul I come to you. Because, sir, you are one of those that we come to do you service, and you are ruffians, you'll have your daughter with a Barlary horse; you'll have a neigh to you: you'll have aphews for cousins, and gennets for germanns.

What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee,
Roderigo. [beseech you,

Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But, I if't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find, it is,) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported, with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—

If this be known to you, and your allowances,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But, if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe,
That, from the sense of all civility,

I thus would play and trifle with your reverence: [leave,—
Your daughter,—if you have not given her
I say again, hath made a gross revolt:

Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger,
Of here and everywhere. Straight satisfy
yourself:

If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strikes on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper!—call up all my people!—
This accident is not unlike my dream:
Belief of it oppresses me already.

Light, I say! light! [Exit above.
Iago. Farewell! for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall)
Against the Moor: for, I do know, the state,—
However this may gall him with some check,— Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars, (Which even now stand in act,) that, for their
souls,

Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,

Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.
[Exit.

Enter below, Brabantio, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despised time,
Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O, unhappy girl!
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father!

How didst thou know 'twas she?—O, she deceives me

Past thought!—What said she to you?—Get more tapers;

Raise all my kindred.—Are they married, think Rod. Truly, I think they are. [you?]

Bra. O heaven!—How got she out!—O, treason of the blood!

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds [charms,

By what you see them act.—Are there not By which the property of youth and maid-
hood

May be abus'd! Have you not read, Roderigo, Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, that you had had her!

Some one way, some another.—Do you know Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please

To get good guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;

I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho! And raise some special officers of night.—

Go, good Roderigo;—I'll deserve your pains. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Venice. Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants, with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,

Yet do I hold it very stuff of the conscience To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity

Sometimes to do me service: nine or ten times I had thought to have jerk'd him here under

Oth. 'Tis better as it is. [the ribs.]

Iago. Nay, but he prated, And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms

Against your honour, That, with the little godliness I have,

I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir, Are you fast married? for, be sure of this,

That the magnifico is much below'd; And hath, in his effect, a voice potential

As double as the duke's: he will divorce you; Or put upon you what restraint and grievance

The law (with all his might to enforce it on) Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite: My services, which I have done the signiory,

Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,—

Which, when I know that boasting is an honour, I shall promulgate,—I fetch my life and being

From men of royal siege; and my demerits May speak, unbonneted, to as proud a fortune

As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago, But that I love the gentle Desdemona,

I would not my unbowed free condition Put into circumscription and confine

For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder!

Enter Cassio, and certain Officers, with torches.

Iago. Those are the raised father, and you were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be gone.

My parts, my title, and my perfect shall manifest me rightly. [Is it?]

Iago. By Janus, I think so.

Oth. The servants of the duke and lieutenant.—

The goodness of the night upon you, What is the news!

Cas. The duke does greet you, And he requires your haste-post-haste

Even on the instant. What is the matter, [Oth.]

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I divine:

It is a business of some heat: the policy Have sent a dozen sequent messengers

This very night at one another's heels; And many of the consuls, rais'd and

Are at the duke's already: you have hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be The senate hath sent about three several

To search you out. 'Tis well I am found by

Oth. I will but spend a word here in the Ancient, what makes he

And go with you. Cas. Ancient, what makes he

Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a carrack:

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever. He's married.

Cas. I do not understand. Iago. He's married.

Cas. Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go!

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to meet you.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers, with torches and weapons.

Iago. It is Brabantio:—general, He comes to bad intent.

Oth. Holla! stand down!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him!

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, oh, I stow'd my daughter!

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted me! For I'll refer me to all things of sense

If she in chains of magic were not! Whether a maid so tender, fair, and young

So opposite to marriage, that she should

...silly curled darlings of our nation,
...to incur a general mock,
...her garriote to the sooty bosom
...a thing as thou, to fear, not to delight.
...the world; if 'tis not gross in sense,
...that practis'd on her with foul
...her delicate youth with drugs, or ...motion; I'll hav't disputed on;
...able, and palpable to thinking.
...we apprehend and do attach thee,
...of the world, a practiser
...upon him: if he do resist,
...at his peril.

Hold your hands,
...of my inclining, and the rest: [it
...me to fight, I should have known
...a prompler.—Where will you that I
...your charge?
...To prison; till fit time
...and course of direct session,
...to answer.

What if I do obey?
...the duke be therewith satisfied,
...angers are here about my side,
...present business of the state,
...me to him?

'Tis true, most worthy signior;
...in council, and your noble self,
...is sent for.

How! the duke in council!
...not an idle cause: the duke himself,
...of my brothers of the state,
...feel this wrong, as 'twere their own;
...such actions may have passage free,
...slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.
SCENE III.—A Council Chamber.
The Duke, and Senators, sitting at a table,
Officers attending.

There is no composition in these news,
...over them credit.

Indeed, they are disproportion'd;
...say, a hundred and seven galleys.
...And mine, a hundred and forty.

And mine, two hundred;
...though they jump not on a just account,
...in these cases, where the aim reports,
...with difference,) yet do they all confirm
...Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.
... Nay, it is possible enough to judg-
...not to secure me in the error, [ment:
...the main article I do approve

[Within.] What, ho! [what, ho!
...Enter a Sailor.
...a messenger from the galleys.

Now, the business!
...The Turkish preparation makes for
...I did report here to the state, [Rhodes;
...Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importance of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,

So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in:—if we make thought of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskillful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Off. Here is more news. [Rhodes.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course towards the isle of Rhodes,

Have there enjoined them with an after fleet.
1 Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, as you guess? [stem

Mess. Of thirty sail: and now they do re-Their backward course, leaving with frank appearance [Montano,

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.
Marcus Lucians, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste despatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Roderigo,
and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.—

[To Bra.] I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.
Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace,
pardon me;

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care

Take hold of me; for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Duke and Senators. Dead!

Bra. Ay, to me;
She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mounte-
For nature so preposterously to err,—[banks;

Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,—
Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul pro-
Hath thus beguiled your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter,
After your own sense; yea, though our proper Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.
Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.

Duke and Senators. We are very sorry for it.
Duke. [To Oth.] What, in your own part,
can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.
Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signors,

My very noble and approv'd good masters,—
That I have taken away this old man's
daughter,

It is most true; true, I have married her:
The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more. Kudo am I in my speech,

And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years'
pith,

Till now some nine moons wasted, they have Their dearest action in the tented field; [us'd
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious
patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs,
what charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,
I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion Blush'd at herself; and she,—in spite of nature,

Of years, of country, credit, everything,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgment maim'd, and most imperfect,
That will confess perfection so could err Against all rules of nature; and must be driven

To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be, I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the
blood,

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof,
Without more certain and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak:
Did you by indirect and forc'd courses

Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?

Or came it by request, and such fair persuasions?

Oth. As soul to soul affordeth! I do beseech you Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father.
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your wisdom
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.
Oth. Ancient, conduct thine; you shall see the place.

[Exeunt Iago and Attendants.]
And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ear I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.
Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me
Still question'd me the battles, sieges, dangers,
From year to year, the battles, sieges, dangers,
That I have pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyhood
To the very moment that he made me
Wherein I spake of most disastrous field,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth scapes I 'th' imminent danger
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery; of my redemption
Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle, Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak,—such was the
And of the Cannibals that each other
The Anthropophagi, and men whose Do grow beneath their shoulders. This Would Desdemona seriously incline;
But still the house affairs would draw her
thence;

Which ever as she could with haste
She'd come again, and with a joyful
Devour up my discourse; which I Took once a pliant hour; and found
means

To draw from her a prayer of exchange;
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something
But not intensively: I did consent,
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distress
That my youth suffer'd. My story
She gave me for my pains a world of She swore,—in faith, 'twas passing strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous piteous,
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet
That heaven had made her such a woman,
thank'd me;

And bade me, if I had a friend that I should but teach him how to love that would woo her. Upon this hint I set:

Of one for the dangers I had pass'd;
And of her that she did pity them.

Thus of the witchcraft I have said;
And thus of her, the bloody book of law
I think this tale would win my [daughter too.—
And thus mangled matter at the best:
And their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

I pray you, hear her speak.
And on my head if my bad blame
Fall.

Man! Come hither, gentle
Desdemona, in all this noble company,
And you owe obedience!

My noble father,
I am bound for life and education;
And education both do learn me
To respect you; you are the lord of duty;
And your daughter; but here's my dilemma:

Each duty as my mother show'd
Teaching me before her father,
And challenge that I may profess
To the Moor my lord.

And be with you!—I have done.—
Your grace, on to the state affairs;
And to adopt a child than get it.—
But thou hast already, with all my heart,
Kept from thee.—For your sake,

I will not teach me tyranny;
Let me speak like yourself; and lay
Myself in your power, may help these lovers
And the worst, which late on hopes destroyed.

A mischief that is past and gone,
I cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
My injury a mockery makes.
I smile, that smiles, steals something from myself; that spends a bootless grief,
Tears up, so long as we can smile.
The sentence well, that nothing bears
The comfort which from thence he

Both the sentence and the sorrow,
Must of poor patience borrow
To sugar, or to gall, [row,
on both sides, are equivocal:

But words are words; I never yet did hear,
That the bruise'd heart was pierc'd through the ear.

Beseech you, now to the affairs of state.
Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus:—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must, therefore, be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down; I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity
I find in hardness; and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.

Most humbly, therefore, bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reference of place and exhibition;
With such accommodation, and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.
Oth. Nor I.
Des. Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend your gracious ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?
Des. That I did love the Moor to live with
him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my lord;
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voices.
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat (the young affects
In me defunct) and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind;
And heaven defend your good souls, that you
think
I will your serious and great business scant,
For she is with me; no, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seal with wanton dulness
My speculative and offic'd instruments;
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,

And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: the affair cries,
And speed must answer it. [Haste]

1 Sen. You must away to-night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine if the morning here we'll meet again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall
To be sent after me. [Think]

Duke. Let it be so.
Good night to every one.—[To Bra.] And,
noble signior,

If virtue be delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well. [See]

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see: She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.]
Oth. My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:

I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters, and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.]

Rod. Iago.—
Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are gardens; to the which, our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme; supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many:
either to have it sterile with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our will;

the balance of our lives had not one scale reason to poise another of sensuality; the and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: but we reason, to cool our raging passions, our stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I tell you, that you call love, to be a snail, or a snail.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood;
a permission of the will. Come, be a drown thyself! drown cats and blind
I have professed me thy friend, and I me knit to thy deserving with cables of durable toughness; I could never better thee than now. Put money in thy purse;
low these wars; defeat thy favour;
usurped beard; I say, put money in thy It cannot be, that Desdemona should continue her love to the Moor; it was a thy purse, nor be his to her: it was a commencement, and thou shalt see an able requitation.—Put that money in purse.—These Moors are changeable;
will;—fill thy purse with money:—
that to him now is as hushion as cold;
be to him shortly as bitter as gall.
She must change for youth; when she is sated with his body, she will find the change her choice: she must have money, and therefore put money in thy purse. She needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate than drowning. Make all the money canst: if sanctimony and a superstition an erring barbarian and a superstitious tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; but make money. A por of drowning is is clean out of the way: seek thou rather hanged in compassing thy joy;
drowned and go without her.

Rod. Will thou be fast to my purpose, depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me:—
money:—I have told thee often, and I these again and again, I hate the Moor;
cause is hearted: thine hath no other
Let us be conjunctive in our revenge;
him: if thou canst cuckold him, I give thyself a pleasure, me a mark;
many events in the womb of time;
be delivered. Traverse; get money;
money. We will have more of this Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you
Iago. Go to; farewell.

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning; I'll sell you
Rod. I am chang'd; I'll sell you Iago. Go to; farewell: put money in your purse.—

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse.

Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were
With foul and violent tempest. [parted]

Mon. True heaven be he;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, he
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the main, and the aerial
An indistinct regard. [blue]

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrival.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks, you, the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor! O, let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a fourth Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

4 Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o'
Stand ranks of people, and they cry, "A sail!"

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor. [Guns heard.]

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of Our friends, at least. [courtesy:]

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall. [Exit.]

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation,
Does tire the ingener.—

Re-enter second Gentleman.

How now! who has put in?

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed: [winds]

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,— Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,—
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's Left in the conduct of the bold Iago; [captain,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,

A se'nnight's speed. Great love, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful
breath.

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O, behold,
*Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo,
and Attendants.*

The riches of the ship is come on shore;
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught.

But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship:—

[Within, "A sail, a sail!"

But, hark! a sail.

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the

This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.—

[Exit Gentleman.

Good ancient, you are welcome.—[To Emilia.]

welcome, mistress:—

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,

That I extend my manners: 'tis my breeding

That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

[Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,

You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much:

I find it still, when I have list to sleep:

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,

She puts her tongue a little in her heart,

And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures

out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your

Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,

Players in your housewifery, and housewives

in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:

You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't;

For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on; assay.—There's one gone to Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile

The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.

Come, how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my comes from my pate, as birdlime does from frize;

It plucks out brains and all; but my

And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise, fairness and wit,

The one's for use, the other's for the eye.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto

wit,

She'll find a white that shall her black

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that

For even her folly help'd her to avoid it.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes, you fools laugh! 't is the alchemists' dream able praise hast thou for her that is foolish?

Iago. There's none so fool, and thereunto,

But does foul pranks which fool and

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou worst best. But what praise couldst bestow on a deserving woman?

that, in the authority of her merit,

put on the vouch of very malice itself,

Iago. She that was ever true,

proud;

Had tongue at will, and yet was never Never lack'd gold, and yet was never

Fled from her wish, and yet was never may:

She that, being anger'd, her revenge

Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure

She that in wisdom never was so happy

To change the odd's head for the even's

She that could think, and never did

mind;

See suitors following, and not look

She was a wight,—if ever such

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and christen

Des. O most lame and impotent

—Do not learn of him, Emilia, though thy husband. How say you, not a most profane and liberal

Cas. He speaks home, making relish him more in the soldier's scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her to ay, well said, whisper: with a little this, will I ensnare as great a

Ay, smile upon her, do! I will thine own courtship. You say that indeed; if such tricks as these of your lieutenant, it had been had not kissed your three fingers

now again you are most apt to play

Very good; well kissed, and

'tis so, indeed. Yet again your lips! Would they were riveted

[To trumpet heard.] The Moor! I in truly so.

Let's meet him, and receive him.

Des. Whom he comes.

Enter Othello and Attendants.

My fair warrior!

My dear Othello!

It gives me wonder great as my constant here before me. O my soul's joy!

How ever tempest come such calms,

How will blow till they have waken'd

the labouring bark climb hills of seas,

And duck again as low as to be most happy; for, I fear, that her content so absolute,

her comfort like to this unknown fate.

The heavens forbid

that our loves and comforts should increase,

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

And to that, sweet powers!

and to give satiety a fresh appetite,—loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all of which the Moor is defective in: now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to leave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted,—as it is a most pregnant and unforsed position,—who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does! a knave very voluble;
no further conscionable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection! why, none; why, none; a subtle slippery knave; a funder-out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after: a pestilent complete knave;
and the women hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes; if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of her hand? didst thou not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but coarseness.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together.
Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion: pish!—But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice.
Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not—I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler, and, haply, may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl!

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter,
masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving, Speak, who began this! on thy love, I charge
thee.

Iago. I do not know:—friends all but now,
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom,
Divesting them for bed, and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitting men,)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be The gravity and stillness of your youth [civil;
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter,
That you unlance your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? I give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you,— While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night;
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule:
And passion, having my best judgment collid,
Assays to lead the way: if I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twin'd with me, both at a Shall lose me. What! in a town of war, [birth
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially assur'd, or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Then art no soldier.
Iago. Touch me not so near:
I had rather have this tongue cut from my month,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth

Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, I Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow, crying out to help;
And Cassio following him with shouting
sword.

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman,
Steps in to Cassio, and subverts his peace:
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour (as it so fell out)
The town might fall in fright; he, swift of Outran my purpose; and I return'd, to
For that I heard the clink and fall of
And Cassio high in oath; which did tell me
I ne'er might any more see him.

(For this was brief; I found them close at
At blow and thrust; even as again say
When you yourself did not remark
More of this matter can I not repeat;
But men are men; the best sometimes lose
Though Cassio did more than his share;
As men in rage strike those that were their friends;
Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, received
From him that fled some strange wound;
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. Thy honesty and love doth mince this Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I have But never more be officer of mine.

Enter Desdemona, attended.
Look, if my gentle love be not coming;
[To Cas.] I'll make these an army.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Des. Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

Oth. All's well now, sweetest;—
to bed.

and speak parrot! and squabble!
sweet! and discourse fustian with shadow!—O thou invisible spirit of Cassio, hast no name to be known by,
What was he that you followed with know not.

Iago. Is't possible?
I remember a mass of things, but distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing in their mouths, to steal away their that we should, with joy, plesance, and applause, transform ourselves into

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Why, but you are now well enough;
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?
I have thus recovered?

Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give, and honest,
Probal to thinking, and, indeed, the course
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy
The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit: she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And, then, for her To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,
His soul is so enfeather'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I, then, a
villain,

To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will the blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now: for while this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,
That she repeals him for her body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh them all.

Re-enter Rodrigo.
How now, Rodrigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a bound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well outgalled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!

What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time.

Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt, hast cashiered
Cassio;

Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe:
Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 'tis morning; [short,— Pleasure and action make the hours seem Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Rod.] Two things are to be done,—
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
I'll set her on:
Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife—ay, that's the way;
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here,—I will content your pains,— Something that's brief; and bid "good-morrow, general."

[Music.]

Enter Clown.
Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?

1 Mus. How, sir, how?

Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind instruments?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir. [Mutes.]

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tale.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away!

[Exit Musicians.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentleman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir: if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clown.]

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, To send in to your wife: my suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your converse and business may be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't.—[Exit Iago.]
I never knew A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry For your displeasure; but all will sure be well. The general and his wife are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies,

That he you hurt is of great famy in Cyprus And great affinity, and that in wisdom

He might not but refuse you; but he professes he loves you,

And needs no other suitor but his liking, To take the safest occasion by the front,

To bring you in again. Yet, I beseech you, Give me advantage of some brief discourse

With Desdemona alone. Pray you, come in. I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you.

Cas. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.
Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the post. And, by him, do my duty to the senate. That done, I will be walking on the walls. Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll see't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall see't.

Gen. We'll wait upon your lordship.

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I warrant All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do! I warrant, As if the case were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do I doubt, Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous Desdemona, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never anything but your true servant.

Des. I know't, I thank you.

my lord:

You have known him long; and he shall in strangeness stand no further Than in a politic distance.

Ay, but, lady,

Cas. That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and watery grounds, Or breed itself so out of circumstance, That, I being absent, and my place supplied, My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before I part, I give thee warrant of thy place: if I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article: my lord shall never I'll watch him tame, and talk him down into patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a table; I'll intermingle every thing he does With Cassio's suit: therefore be merry, Cassio.

Whom shall I rather die,
Than see my cause away.
[Enter Othello and Iago.]
Madam, here comes my lord.
Madam, I'll take my leave.
Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease,
And for mine own purpose,
Well, do your discretion.

[Exit Cassio.]
O! I like not that.

What dost thou say?
My lord: or if—I know not
[wife!]
Was not that Cassio parted from my Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it.
You would steal away so guilty-like,
And come.

I do believe 'twas he.
How now, my lord?
I was talking with a suitor here,
Who that languishes in your displeasure.
Who is't you mean?
[my lord,
Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good grace or power to move you,
I present reconciliation take;
If he be not one that truly loves you,
I'll be in ignorance, and not in cunning,
To call him back.

Went he hence now?
Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he left part of his grief with me,
And with him. Good love, call him back.
Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time. But shall't he shortly?
[time.
The sooner, sweet, for you.
To-morrow dinner, then?
No, not to-night.
I shall not dine at home;
I shall not dine at the citadel.
Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;
To-morrow noon, or night; on Wednesday morn, or night; but let it not be three days: in faith, he's penitent;
And yet his trespass, in our common reason,
Examples of their best,) is not almost a fault
To turn a private cheek. When shall he come?
Othello: I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me that I should deny,
And so hammering on. What! Michael
Cassio,
That came wooing with you; and so many a time, I have spoke of you dispraisingly,
And yet your part; to have so much to do
In him! Trust me, I could do much.— O! if I had thee, no more; let him come when he will; I deny thee nothing.

Why, this is not a boon;

For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just,

'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person: say, when I have a suit
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing!
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself. [lord.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona; I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come.—Be as your fancies teach Whate'er you be, I am obedient. [you;
[Exit, with Emilia.]

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd Know of your love?
[my lady,
Oth. He did, from first to last; why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed!
Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—discern'st thou
Is he not honest?
[ought in that?
Iago. Honest, my lord!
Oth. Honest? ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord!
Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something: [that,
I heard thee say but now,—thou lik'd'st not When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like?
And when I told thee he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou cri'd'st,
"Indeed!" [gether,
And didst contract and purse thy brow to—
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit; if thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think thou dost;
And,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty, [them breath,—
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st Therefore these stops of thine fright me the
more;

For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just,

They are close delations, working from the
That passion cannot rule. [heart,

Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or, those that be not, would they might seem
none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why, then, I think Cassio is an honest
man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of
The worst of words. [thoughts

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts! Why, say they are vile and false;

As where's that palace whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so
But some uncleanly apprehensions [pure,
Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago.

If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st
A stranger to thy thoughts. [his ear

Iago. I do beseech you,— Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
(As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses; and oft my jealousy Shapes faults that are not)—that your wisdom
From one that so imperfectly conceits, [yet,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble

Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear
my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; [thousands;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to
But he, that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;

Nor shall not, whil'st 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey'd monster, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss,

Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly Oth. O misery!

[loves]

Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich
enough;

But riches needless is as poor as
To him that ever fears he shall be poor;

Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe do
From jealousy!

Oth. Why, why is this?

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt
Is once to be resolv'd: exchange me for a fool
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises, Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make
jealous,

To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt:
For she had eyes, and chose me. No, I do not I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, I'll
And, on the proof, there is no more but Away at once with love, or jealousy!

Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of Look to your wife; observe her well
Cassio;

Were your eye thus,—not jealous, nor
I would not have your free and noble
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't.
I know our country disposition well:
In Venice they do let heaven see the males
They dare not show their husbands; their conscience

Is, not to leave undone, but keep unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marry
you;

And, when she seem'd to shake, and fall
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, so to speak,
She that, so young, could give out seeming,

To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,
He thought 'twas witchcraft:—but I am sure to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee.

Iago. I see, this hath a little
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I see you are not
I hope you will consider what is spoken Comes from my love:—but, I do see you mov'd:—

I am to pray you nor to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach.
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Should you do so, my lord,
My thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend:—

I see you are mov'd.

No, not much mov'd:—
Desdemona's honest.

Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

And, yet, how nature erring from it—[self,—

Ay, there's the point:—as,—to be old with you,—

To affect many proposed matches

Of our own climate, complexion, and degree,

As we, in all things nature tends,—

One may smile in such a will most rank,

Disproportion, thoughts unnatural.

Polonius me: I do not in position

Speak of her; though I may fear

Recalling to her better judgment,

And to match you with her country forms,

Apply repent.

Farewell, farewell.

More than dost perceive, let me know more;

My wife to observe: leave me, Iago.

Why, I take my leave. [Going.

Why did I marry!—This honest creature, doubtless, [unfolds.

And knows more, much more, than he Deserves. [Re-entering.] My lord, I would I might

Entreat your honour

Not to touch this thing no further; leave it to time:

Though 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,—

He fills it up with great ability,—

Which by that perceive him and his means:

If your lady strain his entertainment

With strong or vehement importunity;

It will be seen in that. In the mean time,

For my cause I have to fear I am,—

And hold her true, I do beseech your honour.

Fear not my government. [Exit.

Once more take my leave. [Exit.

What fellow's of exceeding honesty,

And knows all qualities with a learned spirit

Human dealings. If I do prove her haggard,

That her jesses were my dear heartstrings,

I'll whistle her off, and let her down the wind,

And play upon her fortune. Haply, for I am black,

And here not those soft parts of conversation

That chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd

In the vale of years,—yet that's not much,—

I am abus'd; and my relief

Is to loathe her. O curse of marriage,

That we can call these delicate creatures ours,

And not their appetites! I had rather be a

Even then this fork'd plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken.—

Re-enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Desdemona comes:

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!

I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!

Your dinner and the generous islanders,

By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame. [not well!

Des. Why is your speech so faint! are you

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching: 'twill away

again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour

It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little;

[Puts the handkerchief from him, and it drops.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exit Oth. and Des.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin:

This was her first remembrance from the Moor:

My wayward husband hath a hundred times

Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,—

For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it,—

That she reserves it evermore about her,

To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en

out,

And give't Iago: what he will do with it,

Heaven knows, not I;

I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for

you.

Iago. A thing for me!—it is a common

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all? What will you give

For that same handkerchief? [me now

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief!

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona:

That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her? [hence,

Emil. No, 'faith; she let it drop by negli-

And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.

Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest

To have me fetch it!

Iago. Why, what's that to you?

[Snatching it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,

Give't me again: poor lady, she'll run mad

When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on't; I have use for it.

Go, leave me.— [Exit Emilia.

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,

And let him find it. Trifles, light as air,

Are to the jealous confirmations strong

As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison :
Dangerous conceits are, in their natures,

poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste ;
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur. I did say so :— [dragons]

Look, where he comes ! Not poppy, nor man-
Enter Othello.

Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha ! ha ! false to me !

Iago. Why, how now, general ! no more of that. [the rack :—]

Oth. A vaunt ! begone ! thou hast set me on
I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord ?

Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust ?

I saw't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me ;
I slept the next night well, was free and merry ;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips ;
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O, now, for ever
Farewell the tranquil mind ! farewell content !
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue ! O, farewell !
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill
trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war !
And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counter-farewell ! Othello's occupation's gone ! [exit]

Iago. Is it possible, my lord ? [where]

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a
Be sure of it ; give me the ocular proof ;

[Seizing him by the throat.]

Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is't come to this ?

Oth. Make me to see't ; or, at the least, so prove it,

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on ; or woe upon thy life !

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
Never pray more ; abandon all remorse ;
On horror's head horrors accumulate ;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth
amaz'd ;

For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

Iago. O grace ! O heaven defend me !

Are you a man ? have you a soul, or sense !—

God be wi' you ; take mine office.—[Othello exits]

fool,

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice !
O monstrous world ! Take note, take note

O world,

To be direct and honest is not safe.
I thank you for this profit ; and, from hence I'll love no friend, since love breeds offence.

Oth. Nay, stay :—then shouldst be honest
Iago. I should be wise ; for honesty's a fool
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the way,

I think my wife be honest, and think she is
I think that thou art just, and think thou art

I'll have some proof ; her name, that was fresh

As Dian's visage, is now begrudg'd and
As mine own face. If there be clouds, or sun,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating steam,

I'll not endure it.—Would I were satisfied Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with
I do repent me that I put it to you.

You would be satisfied ! Would I, I would !

Oth. And may ; but how ! how ! how !

my lord ?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on Behold her tupp'd !

Oth. Death and damnation ! I have Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect.

then,

If ever mortal eyes do see them together,
More than their own ! What then ! how then !

What shall I say ! Where's satisfaction !
It is impossible you should see this.

Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,

If imputation, and strong circumstance,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason why I Iago. I do not like the office :

But, sith I'm enter'd in this cause so far,
Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love—

I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,

I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will murder their wives ;

One of this kind is Cassio ;

In sleep I heard him say, " Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves ;"

And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my
hand,

Cry, " O, sweet creature ! " and then he
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,

That grew upon my lips : then he doth
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and sigh'd,

then

Cried, " Cursed fate, that gives me access
Oth. O monstrous ! monstrous !

Nay, this was but his dream.

But this denoted a foregone conclusion:

And this may help to thicken other proofs, I'll tear her all to pieces!

Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing

done;—

Tell me but this,—

—sometimes seen a handkerchief,

I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.

I know not that: but such a handker-

—so wipe his beard with.

If it be that,—

—against her with the other proofs.

O, that the slave had forty thousand

lives!

—too poor, too weak for my revenge.

—I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago;

—may find love thus do I blow to heaven:

—black vengeance, from the hollow hell!

—O love, thy crown, and hearted

—tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy

—of aspics' tongues!

—Pray, be content.

O, blood, Iago, blood!

—may change.

—Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,

—his current and compulsive course

—the Propontick, and the Hellespont,

—so my bloody thoughts, with violent

—never look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,

—that a capable and wide revenge

—heaven.

—due reverence of a sacred vow, [Kneels.

—do not rise yet.—

[Kneels.

—you ever-burning lights above,

—that here Iago doth give up

—the execution of his wit, hands, heart,

—to obey shall be in me remorse. [mand,

—what bloody work soever.

[They rise.

I greet thy love,

—and with acceptance

—will upon the instant put thee to't;

—these three days let me hear thee say

—that Cassio's not alive.

—O, my friend is dead; 'tis done at your

—request;

—O, damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!

Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say he lies anywhere.

Des. Why, man?

Clo. He is a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to: where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can anything be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechise the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief,

Emil. I know not, madam. [Emilia]

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of cruzadoes: and, but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think the sun, where he Drew all such humours from him. [was born,

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio
Be call'd to him.—

Enter Othello.

How is't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady.—[Aside.] O, hardness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady. [sorrow.

Des. It yet hath felt no age, nor known no

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart:— [quires

Hot, hot, and moist: this hand of yours re-
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;

For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands;
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your

Oth. What promise, chuck! [promise.

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends
Lend me thy handkerchief. [me:

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not!

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it, [father

'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my

Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye [hunt

Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should

After new fancies: she, dying, gave it me;

And bid me, when my fate would have me

wive,

To give it her. I did so: and take heed on't;

Make it a darling like your precious eye;

To lose or give't away, were such perdition,

As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it:

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world

The sun to course two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work; [silk;

The worms were hallow'd that did breed the

And it was dy'd in mummy, which the skillful

Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then would to heaven that I had never

Oth. Ha! wherefore? [seen it!

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and raah!

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out o'

Des. Heaven bless us! [the way!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost: but what an if it were?

Oth. How!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir; but I will not now.

This is a trick, to put me from my suit:

Pray you, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my mind

Des. Come, come; [misgives.

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. A man that, all his time,

Hath founded his good fortunes on your love;

Shar'd dangers with you;

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away!

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief.

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man.

They are all but stomachs, and we all but

They eat as hungrily, and when they are

They belch us.—Look you,—Cassio, and

husband.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way;

do't:

And, lo, the happiness! go and baptize

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do

That by your virtuous means I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love,

Whom I, with all the office of my heart,

Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd

If my offence be of such mortal kind,

That nor my service past, nor present service

Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,

Can ransom me into his love again;

But to know so must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a lord's content,

And shut myself up in some other course,

To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio!

My advocacy is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord; nor should

Were he in favour, as in humour, altered.

So help me every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best,

And stood within the blank of his displeasure

For my free speech! You must avail

patient:

What I can do, I will; and more I will

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now

And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother;—and can he be angry

Something of moment, then: I will go

him:

There's matter in't, indeed, if he be

Des. I pray thee, do so.—[Exit Iago.]

thing, sure, of state,

Either from Venice, or some unhabit'd

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to Hath puddled his clear spirit;—and cases,

Men's natures wrangle with inferior

Though great ones are their objects.

For let our finger ache, and it imports

Our other healthful members ev'n to

Of pain: nay, we must think men are

—What do you mean by this
 Let the devil and his dam haunt you!
 You gave me by that same handker-take it. I must take out the work!— piece of work, that you should find it chamber, and not know who left it This is some mix's token, and I must at the work! There, give it your hobbywhere's ever you had it, I'll take out no
 [how now!
 [Aside.] By heaven that should be my
 well!
 An you'll come to supper to-night, say; an you will not, come when you out prepared for.
 After her, after her.
 Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street
 Will you sup there?
 Faith, I intend so.
 Well, I may chance to see you; for I very fair speak with you.
 By thee, come; will you?
 Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.
 [Advancing.] How shall I murder
 Did you perceive how he laughed at O, Iago!
 And did you see the handkerchief?
 Was that mine?
 Yours, by this hand: and to see how the foolish woman your wife! she him, and he hath given it his whore.
 I would have him nine years a kill-
 A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet
 May, you must forget that.
 Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be to-night; for she shall not live. No, it is turned to stone; I strike it, and my hand.—O, the world hath not a creature; she might lie by an em-side, and command him tasks,
 Nay, that's not your way.
 Hang her! I do but say what she delicate with her needle! An admir-of a bear! O, she will sing the savage invention! Of so high and plenteous She's the worse for all this.
 O, a thousand thousand times. And no gentle a condition!
 Ay, too gentle.
 Nay, that's certain:—but yet the pity
 if you are so fond over her iniquity, patent to offend; for, if it touch not
 I will chop her into messes:—cuckold
 O, 'tis foul in her.
 With mine officer!
 That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:
 —I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again:—this night, Iago.
 Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.
 Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases:
 very good.
 Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker: you shall hear more by midnight.
 Oth. Excellent good.—[A trumpet heard.]
 What trumpet is that same?
 Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico.
 Come from the duke: and see, your wife is
 with him.
 Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.
 Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!
 Oth. With all my heart, sir.
 Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet
 you. [Giving him a packet.
 Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
 [Opens the packet, and reads.
 Des. And what's the news, good cousin
 Lodovico?
 Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;
 Welcome to Cyprus.
 Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Iago. Lives, sir. [Cassio!
 Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and
 my lord
 An unkind breach: but you shall make all
 Oth. Are you sure of that? [well.
 Des. My lord!
 Oth. [Reading.] "This fail you not to do,
 as you will."
 Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.
 Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?
 Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much
 To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.
 Oth. Fire and brimstone!
 Des. My lord!
 Oth. Are you wise?
 Des. What, is he angry?
 Lod. May be, the letter mov'd him;
 For, as I think, they do command him home,
 Deputing Cassio in his government.
 Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.
 Oth. Indeed!
 Des. My lord!
 Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
 Des. How, sweet Othello?
 Oth. Devil!
 Des. I have not deserved this.
 Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
 Though I should swear I saw it: 'tis very much;
 Make her amends; she weeps.
 Oth. O devil, devil!
 If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
 Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.—
 Out of my sight!
 Des. I will not stay to offend you.
 [Going.

Look. Truly, an obedient lady:—
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress!

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Look. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—

Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.—

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!

I am commanded home.—Get you away;

I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,

And will return to Venice.—Hence, avaunt!

[Exit Desdemona.]

Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together:

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—[Exit.]

Look. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all-in-all sufficient? Is this the noble nature

Whom passion could not shake? whose solid

virtue

The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,

Could neither graze nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Look. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of brain?

Iago. He's that he is: I may not breathe

my censure.

What he might be,—if, what he might, he is

I would to heaven he were!

Look. What, strike his wife!

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet would

That stroke would prove the worst. [I knew

Is it his use?

Look. Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me to speak [serve him;

What I have seen and known. You shall ob-

And his own courses will denote him so,

That I may save my speech: do but go after,

And mark how he continues.

Look. I am sorry that I am deceived in him.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing, then?

Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and her

together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I

Each syllable that breath made up between

them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her glove, her handker-

Emil. Never, my lord. That's strange.

Oth. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,

Lay down my soul at stake if you think other.

Remove your thought; it doth abuse you.

If any wretch have put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There's no man happy; the purport of my tale

Is foul as slander.

Emil. Bid her come hither.

Oth. She says enough;—yet she's a simple lady.

That cannot say as much. This is a where,

A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets.

And yet she'll kneel and pray: I have seen her do't.

Re-enter Emilia with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your face.

Des. Look in my face.

Oth. [To Emilia.] What horrible fancy's this?

mistress;

Leave procreants alone, and shut the door!

Cough, or cry hem, if anybody come;

Your mystery, your mystery;—[Exit Desdemona.]

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your lordship

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; I am none.

And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself,

Least, being like one of heaven, thou

thyself

Should fear to seize thee: therefore do

Swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art

as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord?

Oth. O Desdemona!—away! away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!

Emil. Weep!

Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord?

If, haply, you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling home,

Lay not your blame on me; if you do love

Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had I not

To try me with affliction; had they not

All kinds of sores, and shames, and sorrows,

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips,

Given to captivity me and my innocent

I should have found in some pastime

A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me

And figure, for the time of scorn

His slow unmoving finger at!

where I have garner'd up my heart,

Must live, or bear no life,

From the which my current runs,

As a stream, for foul toads [there,

gender in!—Turn thy complexion

Thou young and rose-lipp'd cheru-

Look grim as hell!

My noble lord esteems me honest,

As summer flies are in the even with blowing. O thou weed,

That senseless aches at these, would thou

What ignorant sin have I com-

With this fair paper, this most goodly write where upon? What committed!

—O thou public commoner!

Thou makest very forges of my cheeks,

That speak thy deeds.—What committed!

Thou speakest the nose at it, and the moon

within, that kisses all it meets,

And the hollow mine of earth,

What committed!

By heaven, you do me wrong.

Are not you a strumpet?

No, as I am a Christian:

My other foul unlawful touch,

To be a strumpet, I am none.

What, not a whore?

No, as I shall be saved.

Heaven forgive us!

I cry you mercy, then;

Thou cunning whore of Venice,

Partner with Othello. [Re-enter Emilia.]

Have the office opposite to Saint Peter,

Done our course; there's money for your palat.

Alas, the key, and keep our counsel.

What does this gentleman convey, madam? how do you, my good madam, what's the matter with Whom?

Why, with my lord, madam.

He that is yours, sweet lady.

Have none; do not talk to me, Emilia;

weep; nor answer have I none.

But what should go by water. Prythee, to-

night

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—re-

And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change indeed!

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.

How have I been behav'd, that he might stick

The small'st opinion on my least misuse?

Re-enter Emilia, with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam?

How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes,

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks:

He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,

I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhord

her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon

As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore; a beggar, in his

Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the

day!

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble

Her father, and her country, and her friends,

To be call'd whore? would it not make one

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it.

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,

Some busy and insinuating rogue,

Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some

office,

Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd

Iago. Fie, there is no such man: it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon

Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

Emil. The Moor's abused by some most villainous

Some base notorious knave, some scurvy

follow:—

O heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold,

And put in every honest hand a whip,

To lash the rascals naked through the world,

Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.

Emil. O, be upon them! some such squires

That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago,
What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say where,—
It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you be content; 'tis but his humour:

The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—

Iago. 'Tis but so, I warrant.

[Trumpets heard.]

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

The messengers of Venice stay the meat.
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly Iago. What in the contrary? [with me.

Rod. Every day thou dall'st me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist: you have told me she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well; by this hand, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona; if she return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's nought in you and even, from this instant, do build on a better opinion than ever before. Give me hand, Roderigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, have dealt most directly in this affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without warrant of judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast in thee indeed, which I have greater cause to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose of rage, and valour,—this night show it; if the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? Is it within compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial consultation made from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? Why, then Othello, Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no, he goes into Mantua, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona; less his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determined as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean, removing of Cassio?

Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place,—knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay, if you dare do yourself a right, and a right.

He sups to-night with the king, and thither will I go to him; if you will of his honourable fortune.

If you will, his going thence, (which I will do) out between twelve and one, you may find him at your pleasure; I will be near to your attempt, and he shall fall.

Come, stand not amazed at it, but let's go with me; I will show you such a way to put it on him. It is now high noon, and the night grows to waste; about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble me no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to put it on him. It is now high noon, and the night grows to waste; about it.

Lod. Madam, good night; I leave you your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Will you walk, sir?—

My lord!

Go forthwith; dismiss your attendant that he did.

My lord.

Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants.
How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

He says he will return incontinent:
he commanded me to go to bed,

and to dismiss you.

Dismiss me!

It was his bidding; therefore, good night, and adieu:

I would you had never seen him!

So would not I: my love doth so appear him,

with his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns,— unpin me,—have grace and favour in I have laid those sheets you bade me

on the bed.
All's one.—Good father! how foolish are our minds!—

I have laid those sheets,

pr'ythee, shroud me.
Come, come, you talk.

My mother had a maid call'd Barbara;
she lov'd her; and he she lov'd prov'd mad,

and she had a song of
it, which was, but it express'd her fortune, and singing it: that song, to-night,

I have much to do,

to hang my head all at one side,
like poor Barbara.—Pr'ythee,

shall I go fetch your night-gown?
No, unpun me here.—

A very handsome man.
A very handsome man.

I know a lady in Venice would have surrender to Palestine for a touch of his hand.

[Sings.]

And will sighing by a yew-tree,
And a green willow;

And on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Willow, willow;

And when she runs by her, and murmur'd
Willow, willow;

And when she falls from her, and susten'd the Willow, willow;

And when she lies down, willow, willow;
And when she rises, willow, willow;

And when she is alone, willow, willow;
And when she is with him, willow, willow;

And when she is not next, willow, willow;
And when she is the wind,

Willow, willow;
[Knocks]

Des. [Singing.]

I call'd my love false love; but what said he Sing willow, willow, willow;

If I court more women, you'll couch with more
So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do

Doth that bode weeping? [Itch;]

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so.—O, these men,
these men!— [Emilia,—]

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me,
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all

Emil. Why, would not you? [The world!]

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;
I might do't as well i' the dark, [The world!]

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'tis a great
For a small vice. [Price]

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. In troth, I think I should; and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor a measure of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but, for the whole world,

—why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'
the world; and, having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many [play'd for].
To the vantage, as would store the world they
But I do think it is their husbands' faults, If wives do fall. Say, that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps;
Or else break out in peevish jealousies, [us,

Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike
Or scant our former having in despite;

Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace,

Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them: they see,

and smell, [sour,
And have their palates, both for sweet and
As husbands have. What is it that they do,

When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is; and doth affection breed it?

I think it doth. Is't frailty that thus errs?
It is so too:—and have not we affections,

Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have?
Then, let them use us well: else, let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us so.

Des. Good night, good night: heaven me such usage send,

Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend!

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home: Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll beat thy elbow: It makes us, or it mars us; think on that, And fix most firm thy resolution.

Roderigo. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand; be bold, and take thy stand. [Retires to a little distance.]

Roderigo. I have no great devotion to the deed; And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:—'Tis but a man gone—forth, my sword; he dies.

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost And he grows angry. Nay, whether he kill Cassio,

Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other, Every way makes my game: live Roderigo, He calls me to a restitution large Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him, As gifts to Desdemona;

It must not be: if Cassio do remain, He hath a daily beauty in his life, That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril:

No, he must die:—be't so; I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Roderigo. I know his gait, 'tis he.—Villain, thou diest!

[Rushing forth, and making a pass at Cassio.]

Cassio. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,

But that my coat is better than thou know'st: I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds Roderigo.]

Roderigo. O, I am slain!

[Iago rushes forth, cuts Cassio behind in the leg, and exits.]

Cassio. I am maim'd for ever.—Help, ho! murder! murder!

[Falls.]Enter Othello, at a distance.

Othello. The voice of Cassio:—Iago keeps his word.

Roderigo. O, villain that I am!

Cassio. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!

Othello. 'Tis he:—O brave Iago, honest and just, That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong!

Thou teachest me.—Minion, your dear lies dead,

And your unblest fate hies: strumpet, I come! Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;

Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.

[Exit.]Enter Lodovico and Gratiano, at a distance.

Cassio. What, ho! no watch! no passage! murder! murder!

Graz. 'Tis some mischance; the voice is very low.

Cassio. O, help!

Lodovico. Hark!

Roderigo. O wretched villain!

Lodovico. Two or three groans:—it is a lady's night:

These may be counterfeits; let's think more on't.

To come in to the cry, without more help.

Roderigo. Nobody comes! then shall I blow out light and weapons.

Lodovico. Hark!

Graz. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Re-enter Iago, with a light.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this?

Lodovico. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry of murder?

Roderigo. Here, here! for heaven's sake, take me up.

Cassio. Here, here! a chair, a chair, a chair!

Iago. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lodovico. The same indeed; a very valiant gentleman.

Iago. What are you here, that cry of murder?

Cassio. What are you here, that cry of murder?

Iago. O, I am spoil'd, undone!

Cassio. Iago! O, I am spoil'd, undone!

Iago. Give me some help.

Cassio. O me, lieutenant! what villain has done this to me?

Iago. I think that one of them is a villain.

Cassio. And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villain!

Cassio. What are you there? what are you there?

Iago. [To Lodovico and Gratiano.] What are you there? in, and give some help.

Roderigo. O, help me here.

Cassio. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave!

Roderigo. O, damn'd Iago!

Cassio. O, O, O!

Iago. Kill men! 'tis the dark!—Where are the bloody thieves?—

How silent is this town!—He! he! he! murder!

What may you be? are you of good name?

Lodovico. As you shall prove us, good or bad.

Iago. Signior Lodovico!

Lodovico. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy.

Graz. Cassio!

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cassio. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with a napkin.

Lodovico. What is the matter, Lodovico?

Iago. Who is't that cried?

Lodovico. O my dear Cassio!

Cassio. O Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!

Lodovico. Who they should be, that have thus abused me.

Cassio. No.

Graz. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Lodovico. I am sorry to find you thus.

Cassio. I am sorry to find you thus.

Iago. I am sorry to find you thus.

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd,
Thou gav'st to Cassio. [and gave thee]

Des. No, by my life and soul!
Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die. [bed.]

Oth. Yes, presently:
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath, [ception
Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong con-
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.
Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love; I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's
hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it, then;
I never gave it him:—send for him hither;
Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.
Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—used thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.
Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;
Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. [dead?

Des. O, my fear interprets!—what, is he
Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great
Had stomach for them all. [revenge

Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone!

Oth. Out, strumpet! weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not!

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-Oth. Nay, if you strive,— [night!

Des. But half an hour!

Oth. Being done,
There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer!

Oth. It is too late. [Smothers her.

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what,
ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this!—Not dead? not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain:

So, so. [lord!

Emil. [Within.] What, ho! my lord, my Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you! [dead.—

Oth. Yes:—'tis Emilia:—by and by.—She's
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;
The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving!

Still as the grave.—Shall she come in?—What's
good?

I think she stirs again:—no.—What's her
If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife

My wife! my wife! what wife!—I have no wife!
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!

Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon, and that the adfrighted

Should yawn at alteration. I do beseech you

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would
That I may speak with you, O, come in, come in

Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, come in Soft,—by and by:—let me the curtains draw

Where art thou? [Unlocks the door.]
What's the matter with these men?

Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murder
Oth. What, now?

Emil. But now, my lord,
Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more near the earth than usual

And makes men mad.
Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd

Call'd Roderigo. Roderigo kill'd!

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd! No, Cassio is not kill'd

Emil. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's done of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.
Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas, what cry is that?
Oth. That! what!

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak

Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak
Des. A guiltless death I die. O, who hath

Emil. This deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself. Forgive
Commend me to my kind lord: O heaven

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?
Emil. Alas, who

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was Emil. She said so: I must needs believe

truth.
Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burn

"Twas I that kill'd her. O, the more angry

Emil. And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art
Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false: O, she was heaven-sent

Oth. Cassio did top her; ask thy elate.

O, I were damn'd beneath all depths in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity. Thy husband!

Emil. My husband!

Oth. Thy husband.

That she was false to wedlock!
 Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been would make me such another world alive and perfect chrysolite, have sold her for it.
 My husband!
 Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
 man he is, and hates the slime of filthy deeds.

What needs this iteration, woman? I thy husband. [with love!
 O mistress, villainy hath made mocks
 I said she was false!
 He, woman;
 thy husband: dost understand the word!
 If he say so, may his pernicious soul
 find a grain a day! he lies to the heart:
 too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Do thy worst:
 of thine is no more worthy heaven,
 than wast worthy her.

Peace! you were best.
 Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,

 as to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!
 I have to do with dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
 for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
 I lost twenty lives.—Help! help, ho!

murder!
 They have kill'd my mistress! Murder!
 Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

What is the matter? How now,
 general!

O, are you come, Iago? you have done must lay their murders on your neck.

What is the matter?
 Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a

man:
 says thou told'st him that his wife was false!

 thou didst not, thou'rt not such a

villain:
 for my heart is full. I told him what I thought; and told

no more
 what he found himself was apt and true.

But did you ever tell him she was
 I did.

You told a lie; an odious, damned soul, a lie; a wicked lie:— [lie;
 false with Cassio!—Did you say with Cassio? [your tongue.

 I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak:

 O heavens! here lies murder'd in her bed,—

And your reports have set the murder
 on.

Nay, stare not, masters: it is true,
 'Tis a strange truth— [indeed.
 O monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy!
 I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't; O villainy!

I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for grief:—
 O villainy, villainy! [get you home.

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave
 to speak:

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.—
 Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Falling on the bed.
Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar;
 For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
 That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O, she was fond!— [Rising.

I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,

Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:

I know, this act shows terrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
 Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
 This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
 Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
 And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows
 That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
 A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:

And she did gratify his amorous works
 With that recognizance and pledge of love
 Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand:
 It was a handkerchief, an antique token
 My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out:—I hold my peace, sir? no;

I'll be in speaking liberal as the air:
 Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
 All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.

[Iago offers to stab his wife.
 Fie!

Gra. Your sword upon a woman!
Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of,

I found by fortune, and did give my husband;
 For often, with a solemn earnestness,
 More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,
 He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore!
Emil. She gave it Cassio! no, alas! I found
 And I did give't my husband. [ll,

Iago. Filth, thou liest!
Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentle-
 men.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a
 Do with so good a wife? [fool

[Iago slabs Emilia; runs out.

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,
But what serve for the thunder!—Precious
villain!

Gra. The woman falls; sure, he has kill'd
his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay: O, lay me by my mistress'
Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd. [side.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor:
Come, guard the door without; let him not
pass,

But kill him rather. I'll after that same vil-
For 'tis a damned slave. [lain,

[Exeunt Montano and Gratiano,

Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whipster gets my sword:
But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,

And die in music:—"Willow, willow, willow."

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel
Moor;

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true:
So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber;
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper:

O, here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak with Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee. [Ine,

Re-enter Gratiano,

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold, I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,
That, with this little arm and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your stop:—but, O vain
boast!

Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.
Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires. Where should Othello go?

Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-star'd
wretch!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at This look of thine will hurl my soul from
heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my Even like thy chastity.—O, curs'd slave!

Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of all hell!—
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead!

Enter Lodovico, Montano, Cassio, Roderigo,
a chair, and Officers, with Iago, Verona,

Lod. Where is this rash and most unhon-our'd man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello;— am.

Lod. Where is that viper?—bring the man
here.

Oth. I look down towards his cell:
That's a fable.—

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee!

Lod. Wrench his sword from him!

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not hurt.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I'd have
For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once a man,
Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,

What shall be said to thee? Why, nothing.

Oth. An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought did I in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confest of villainy:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you leave.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that bastard
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know you know:

From this time forth I never will speak
word.

Lod. What, not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your tongue.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what he means.

Which, as I think, you know not. His letter,

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo,
And here another: the one of them
The death of Cassio to be underlook'd
By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish, and most discontented!

Lod. Now, here's another discontented Found in his pocket too; and this, it Roderigo meant to have sent this villain
villain:

But that, belike, Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O, the pernicious
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief?

That was my wife's? I found it in my chamber.

Cas. I found it in my chamber,
And he himself confess'd, but even now,
That there he dropp'd it, for a special purpose
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool!
Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave me upon the watch; whereas, it was That I was cast; and even but now he long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him,

[with us :
Lod. You must forsake this room, and go your power and your command is taken off, Castro rules in Cyprus. For this slave, there be any cunning cruelty [long,
can torment him much, and hold him shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest, that the nature of your fault be known the Venetian state.—Come, bring him
away.
Oth. Soft you ; a word or two, before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know it ;—
more of that.—I pray you, in your letters, when you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
speak of me as I am ; nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice : then, must
you speak
me that lov'd, not wisely, but too well ;
one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
replev'd in the extreme ; of one, whose hand,
like the base Indian, threw a pearl away,
worse than all his tribe ; of one, whose sublim'd eyes,
thrust unused to the melting mood,
drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees

Their medicinal gum. Set you down this ;
And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself.]

Lod. O bloody period !

Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee :—no way but this,

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies.]

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon ;

For he was great of heart.

Lod. [To Iago.] O Spartan dog,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea !
Look on the tragic loading of this bed ;
This is thy work : the object poisons sight ;
Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord
governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain ;
The time, the place, the torture,—O, enforce it !
Myself will straight abroad ; and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

[Exeunt.]

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Saturninus, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor.

Bassianus, Brother to Saturninus; in love with Lavinia.

Titus Andronicus, A Roman Patrician General against the Goths.

Marcus Andronicus, Tribune of the People; and Brother to Titus.

Lucius, Quintus, } Sons to Titus Andronicus.

Martius, Mutius, } cus,

Young Lucius, a Boy, Son to Lucius.

Publius, Son to Marcus, the Tribune.

Sempronius, } Kinsmen of Titus.

Caius, }

Valentine, }

Æmilius, a noble Roman.

Alarbus, } Sons to Tamora.

Demetrius, }

Chiron, } beloved by Tamora.

Aaron, a Moor, Messenger, and Clown.

A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown.

Romans.

Goths and Romans.

Tamora, Queen of the Goths.

Lavinia, Daughter to Titus Andronicus.

A Nurse, and a black Child.

Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol.

The tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft. Enter, below, Saturninus and his followers, on one side, and Bassianus and his followers, on the other; with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers
If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son, [of my right,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep, then, this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility:
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus, aloft, with the crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends

Ambitiously for rule and empery,
Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand

A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,

For many good and great deserts to Rome;
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths,
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms,
Ten years are spent since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath returned Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant soul
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms,
Let us entreat,—by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you, and abate your
strength;

Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to suit
my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do assay
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
And her to whom my thoughts are humbly bent,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes, and the people's choice,
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.
[Exit the followers of Bassianus]

Friends, that have been thus forward
To my right,
To you all, and here dismiss you all;
To the love and favour of my country
Myself, my person, and the cause.
(Exit the followers of Saturninus.)
He is as just and gracious unto me,
The gates, and kind to thee.
And let me in.
And me, a poor competitor.
(Flourish.) Sat. and Bir. go up into the Capitol.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter a Captain and others.

Romans, make way: the good Andronicus, Rome's best champion, is in the battles that he fights, and with fortune is return'd to yoke, the enemies of Rome. (Enter Martius and others.) After them, two men bearing a coffin covered with black; then Lucius and Titus Andronicus; and then Tamora, with Alarbus, Chiron, Demetrius, Aaron, and other Goths, prisoners. Soldiers and people following. The bearers set down the coffin, and Titus Andronicus, victorious in thy mourning weeds, that hath discharg'd her freight, with precious lading to the bay, whose at first she weigh'd her anchorage, Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs, to bring his country with his tears, great joy for his return to Rome. Of five and twenty valiant sons, the number that king Priam had, that the poor remains, alive and dead, that I bring unto their latest home, I bury amongst their ancestors: my sword, my sword, and careless of thine own, I bury at thou thy sons, unburied yet, on the dreadful shore of Styx I lay them by their brethren.

(The tomb is opened.)
To sleep in peace, slain in your country's receptacle of my joys, [wars!
Of many sons of mine hast thou in store, that thou wilt never render to me more!
Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths, who may have his limbs, and on a pile his father's sacrifice his flesh,

Before this earthy prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that sur-
The eldest son of this distressed queen. [vives,

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror,

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me!
Sufficeeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O, if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them, then, in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me. [beheld

These are their brethren, whom your Goths
Alive and dead; and for their brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:

To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone. [straight]

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

(Exit Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.)

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chir. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous!

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,
The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of
With opportunity of sharp revenge. [Troy
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,
(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen.)

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

(Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with their swords bloody.)

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, [sky,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

(Trumpets sounded, and the coffins laid in the tomb.)

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps !
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no dammed grudges ; here are no storms,

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep :

Enter Lavinia.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons !

Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus long ;

My noble lord and father, live in fame !
Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brethren's obsequies ;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy,
Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome :
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud !

Tit. Kind Rome, that has thus lovingly reserv'd

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart !

Lavinia, live ; outlive thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise !

Enter Marcus Andronicus, Saturninus, Bassianus, and others.

Mar. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome !

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus. [ful wurs,

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from success-
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame !
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords :

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This palliant of white and spotless hue ;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons :
Be candidatus, then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits,
Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness ;
What should I don this robe, and trouble you ?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all ?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knights in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world :
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou

Tit. Patience, prince Saturninus. [tell]

Sat.

Patricians, draw your swords, and slay
them not

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor,
Andronicus, would thou wert slipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts !

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interpreter of good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee !

Tit. Content thee, prince ; I will not move
thee

The people's hearts, and wear them from their selves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die.
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be ; and thanks to me
Of noble minds, is honourable reward.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribune,
I ask your voices and your suffrages : [long]

Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus, Tribune. To gratify the good Andronicus,

And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept when he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you ; and this I
I make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine ; whose virtues will, I hope,

Reflect on Rome, as Titus's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonwealth.

Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say,—"Long live our emperor !"

Mar. With voices and applause of Rome, Patricians and plebeians, we create

Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor, [long]

And say,—"Long live our emperor [A loud flourish]

nine !"

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy love and
To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy demands,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness.

And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my bed.

And in the sacred Pantheon her espousal Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please
thee ?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord ; and is match

I hold me highly honour'd of your grace,
And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturninus

King and commander of our commonwealth
The wide world's emperor, do I present

My sword, my chariot, and my person
Presents well worthy Rome's inspired lord.

Receive them, then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my
How proud I am of thee and of thy name,
Rome shall record ; and, when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

[To TAMORA.] Now, madam, are you answer to an emperor ;
 But, for your honour and your state,
 you nobly, and your followers,
 a goodly lady, trust me ; of the husband would choose, were I to choose anew.— fair queen, that cloudy countenance :
 chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,
 I shall be thy usage every way.
 my word, and let not discontent
 all your hopes : madam, he comforts you greater than the queen of you are not displeased with this !
 Not I, my lord ; with true nobility
 these words in princely courtesy.
 Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go ;
 here we set our prisoners free ;
 our honours, lords, with trump and drum. [Flourish. Saturninus courts Tamora in dumb show.]
 Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing Lavinia.] Now, sir ! Are you in earnest, then,
 my lord ?
 Ay, noble Titus ; and resolv'd withal,
 to myself this reason and this right.
[peror's guard ?]
[peror's guard ?]
 justice is our Roman justice :
 And that he will, and shall, if Lucius Traitors, avaunt ! Where is the emperor's guard ?
 my lord, Lavinia is surpris'd !
 By whom ?
 By him that justly may be robb'd from all the world away.
[Exeunt Marcus and Bassianus, with Lavinia.]
 Brothers, help to convey her hence
 away ;
 with my sword I'll keep this door safe.
[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.] Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring my lord, you pass not here.
 What, villain boy !
 my way in Rome !
[Stabbing Mutius.]
 Help, Lucius, help !
[Dict.]
Re-enter Lucius.
 My lord, you are unjust ; and, more than so,
 Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of
 mine ;
 would never so dishonour me :
 restore Lavinia to the emperor.
 I'll lead, if you will ; but not to be his another's lawful promis'd love. *[wife,
 Exit.]*

Sat. No, Titus, no ; the emperor needs her Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock : [not,
 I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once ;
 These never, nor thy trait'rous haughty sons,
 Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
 Was none in Rome to make a stale,
 But Saturnine ! Full well, Andronicus, Agreed these deeds with that proud brag of
 thine,

That saidst, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous ! what reproachful words are these ! [ing piece]

Sat. But go thy ways : go, give that change-
 To him that flourish'd for her with his sword ;
 A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy :
 One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
 To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded
 heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths, [nymphs,

That, like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her
 Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of Rome,
 If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
 Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
 And will create thee empress of Rome.
 Speak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice ?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,
 Sith priest and holy water are so near,
 And tapers burn so bright, and everything
 In readiness for Hymeneus stand.
 I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
 Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
 I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of Heaven, to Rome I swear,
 If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths,
 She will a handmaid be to his desires,
 A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon.—Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor and his lovely bride,
 Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine,
 Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered :
 There shall we consummate our spousal rites ;

[Exeunt Saturninus and his followers ; Ta-mora, and her sons ; Aaron and Collis.]

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride :—
 Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
 Dishonour'd thus, and challeng'd of wrongs !
Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Mar. O Titus, see, O see what thou hast
 In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son. [done !]
Tit. No, foolish tribune, no ; no son of mine,—

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
 That hath dishonour'd all our family ;
 Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons !

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes ;
 Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away ! he rests not in this tomb :

And father and his traitorous sons,
I sued for my dear son's life;
And they know what 'tis to let a queen
Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus;
[Heart
in this good old man, and cheer the in tempest of thy angry frown.
Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath perish'd.]

I thank your majesty, and her, my lord;
These looks, these looks, infuse new life in me.
Thus, I am incorporate in Rome,
As now adopted happily.

Must advise the emperor for his good.
I'll all quarrels die, Andronicus;
It be mine honour, good my lord,
I have reconcil'd your friends and you.

prince Bassianus, I have pass'd and promise to the emperor,
I will be more mild and tractable:
not, lords; and you, Lavinia,
advise, all humbled on your knees,
I shall ask pardon of his majesty.

We do; and vow to heaven, and to his
highness,
That we did wax mildly as we might,
our sister's honour and our own.

But, that, on mine honour, here I do protest,
I say, and talk not; trouble us no more.
I say, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends;

And his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back;
Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's my lovely Tamora's entreats, [here,
I will omit these young men's heinous faults:

And, though you left me like a churl,
I am a friend; and sure as death I swore,
I will not set part a bachelor from the priest.

If the emperor's court can scant two brides,
I am my guest, Lavinia, and your friends:
To-morrow, an it please your majesty
I will hunt the panther and the hart with me, and hound we'll give your grace

bed. He it so, Titus, and gramercy too.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Before the Palace.

Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
And sits aloft,
And looks down on Fortune's crack and lightning flash:
Above pale envy's threatening reach,
The golden sun salutes the morn,
And, hailing, bids the ocean with his beams,

Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora:
Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.

Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy
thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph
long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds, and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.

To wait, said I! to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck, and his commonweal's.

Holla! what storm is this?
Enter Demetrius and Chiron, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd;
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chir. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all;
And so in this, to bear me down with braves.
'Tis not the difference of a year or two Makes me less gracious, or thee more for-

I am as able and as fit as thou, [tunate;
To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve.

And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.
Aur. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace. [advise'd,

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, un-gave you a dancing rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threaten your friends? [sheath,

Go to; have your lath glued within your Till you know better how to handle it. [have,
Chir. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave!
[They draw.

Aur. Why, how now, lords!
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly!

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold, [cerns;
The cause were known to them it most connor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.

For shame, put up.
Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withal Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat,

That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.
Chir. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd, Fool-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy
tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say!
Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This pretty babble will undo us all.
Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous
It is to put upon a prince's right?
What, is Lavinia, then, become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her loves such quarrels may be brouc'd,
Without contrivance, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware! an should the empress know [please.
This discord's ground, the music would not Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:

I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in How furious and impatient they be, [Rome
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her!—How?

Dem. Why ask'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

Dem. Then, why should he despair, that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What, hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain
Would serve your turns. [snatch or so

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too;
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.

Why, lark ye, lark ye, and are you such fools,
To square for this? Would it offend you, then,
That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:

'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love,
A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:

The forest walks are wide and spacious;
And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind for rage and rivalry;
Single you thither, then, this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by wile;
This way, or not at all, stand you behest;
Come, come, our empress, with her sacred
To villainy and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice.
That will not suffer you to square your aims
But to your wishes' height advances you;
The emperor's court is like the house of a
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears;
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, dead,
dull:

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and your turns;

There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven,
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smacks of uncowardice;
Dem. Sit fast and nefas, till I find the means To cool this heat, a charm to calm these
Per Stygia, per manes echo.

Per Stygia, per manes echo.

SCENE II.—A Forest near Rome.
Horns and cry of hounds heard. Enter Titus, Andronicus, with hunters, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely boy,
And rouse the prince, and rig a hunter's
That all the court may echo with the noise;
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the emperor's person carefully;
I have been troubled in my sleep this morn,
But dawning day new comfort hath brought me.

[A cry of hounds and horns heard.]
Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Titus, Demetrius, Chiron, and Attendants.

Many good morrows to your majesty;
Madam, to you as many and as good.

I promised your grace a hunter's pack;
Somewhat too early for new-married
Bassianus, how say you?

Lav. I say, my lord,
I have been broad awake two hours and more,
Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariot.

us have,
And to our sport.—[To Tamora.] Now shall you
Our Roman hunting.

Mar. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the wood,
And climb the highest promontory by the
And I have horse will follow Makes way, and run like swallows plain.

Dem. [Aside.] Chiron, we hunt not
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to Iasciuous Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect:
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show
my strength.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora,
For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know,
my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's
wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to First, thrash the corn, then after burn the
This minion stood upon her chastity, [straw]
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braves your mightiness:

And shall she carry this unto her grave!

Chi. An if she do, I would I were a eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice preserved honesty of yours. [face,—

Lav. O Tamora! thou burst a woman's Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a
word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory

To see her tears; but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam!

O, do not learn her wrath, she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble;

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:

[To Chiron.] Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.

Chi. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'Tis true, the raven doth not hatch a Yet have I heard,—O, could I find it now:—
The lion, moved with pity, did endure
To have his princely paws par'd all away:
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds furnish in their nests:

O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful.

Tam. I know not what it means: away with her!

Lav. O let me teach thee! by my father's sake,

That gave thee life, when will he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy dear ears.
Tam. Hadst thou in person us'd our father's Even for his sake am I pitiless.

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in
To save your brother from the scorpion's
But fierce Andronici would not relent:

Therefore, away with her, and use her as
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle woman
And with thine own hands kill me in this prison:
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd or long Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou, then? I found you let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and death
more,

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell
O, keep me from their worse than filth
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
Where never man's eye may behold me.

Do this, and be a charitable monster:
Tam. So should I rob my sweet son of his
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd too long,
too long.

Lav. No grace! no womanhood!
beastly creature!

The blot and enemy to our general name Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouths.
This is the hole where Aaron hid us [voice] [Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus
the pit: then exclaimeth Demetrius] Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see, that you her sure:

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer
Till all the Andronici be made away.

Now will I hence to seek my lovely boy
And let my epicureal sons this truth

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter Aaron, with Quintus and Marcius.
Aar. Come on, my lords, the better
before:

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My night is very dull, what bodes.

Mart. And mine, I promise you:—
Well could I leave our sport to sleep

Quin. What art thou fallen?

Whose mouth is cover'd with red briars,

Upon whose leaves are drops of
blood,

As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on leaves!

And place it seems to me. [fall!] brother, hast thou hurt thee with the brother, with the diabolical object eye with sight made heart lament.

[voice.] Now will I fetch the king to him here,

thence may give a likely guess,
were they that made away his
brother.

Why dost not comfort me, and help
out.

an hollow'd and blood-stained hole?
I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
I cannot stand or run my trembling joints;
I suspect more than my eye can see.

To prove thou hast a true-divining
heart,

look down into this den,
a fearful sight of blood and death.

Aaron is gone; and my compassion—peril mine eyes once to behold whereat it trembles at surmise:
how it is, for ne'er till now
I could, to fear I know not what.

Lo! Bassianus lies embrew'd here, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
dark, blood-drinking pit.

If it be dark, how dost thou know
his?

Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
a ring, that lightens all the hole,
like a taper in some monument,
upon the dead man's earthly cheeks,
the caged entrails of the pit:
by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

help me with thy fainting hand,— make thee faint, as me it hath,— as Coereus' misty month.

reach me thy hand, that I may help
the out:

strength to do thee so much good,
I hap'd into the swallowing womb
my pit, poor Bassianus' grave.

strength to pluck thee to the brink.
No! I no strength to climb without thy help.

The hand once more; I will not loose
thine art here aloft, or I below: [again,
I will not come to me: I come to thee.

Falls in.
Re-enter Aaron with Saturninus.

Along with me: I'll see what hole is that now is leap'd into it.

the hollow of the earth?

The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
in a most unlucky hour,
my brother Bassianus dead.

Just;
my brother dead! I know thou dost but

He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there. [alive;

Mart. We know not where you left him all
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, with Attendants; Titus Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.
Tam. Then, all too late I bring this fatal writ,

[Giving a letter.
The comploit of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] "And if we miss to meet him
handsomely,

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him;
Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder-tree,
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.

Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends."

O Tamora! was ever heard the like?

This is the pit, and this the elder-tree;

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

Sat. [To Titus.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs
of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;
There let them bide, until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,—
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent.—
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail;

For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou fellow me.

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers:

Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;
For, by my soul, were there worse end than
death,

That end upon them should be executed.

Tit. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough.
Tit. Come, Lucina, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exit severally.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, with Lavinia, ravished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak, [these]
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray the meaning so,
An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl. [thy hands.]

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.
Chi. An 'twere my ease, I should go hang myself. [the cord.]

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit [Exit Demetrius and Chiron.]
Enter Marcus, from hunting.

Mar. Who's this? my niece, that lies away so fast!

Cousin, a word: where is your husband?
If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!
Speak, gentle niece; what stern ungentle hands
Have lop'd and hew'd and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments, Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,

And might not gain so great a happiness,
As half thy love! Why dost not speak to me?
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling mountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy
tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?
O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him, to ease my mind!
Sorrow conceal'd, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;
A craftier Tereus, cousin, hast thou met,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.
O, had the monster seen those lily hands

Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,
And make the silken strings delight to

them,
He would not, then, have touch'd them.
Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony
Which that sweet tongue hath made,
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell
As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father's eyes
For such a sight will blind a father's eyes.
One hour's storm will drown the

meads;
What will whole months of tears the
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee.
O, could our mourning ease thy misery!

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers
Justice, with Martins and Quintus passing on to the place of execution, going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble
stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was
In dangerous wars, whilst you were
For all my blood in Rome's great shed;

For all the frosty nights that I have
And for these bitter tears, which now
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheek,
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as
For two and twenty sons I never Because they died in honour's lot,
For these, these, tribunes, in the
[He throws himself on the ground.]

[The Judges pass by him.]
My heart's in languor, and my Let my tears staunch the earth's dry
My sons' sweet blood will make it lush. [Exit Senators.]

O earth, I will befriend thee more Than that shall distil from these two Than youthful April shall with all
In summer's drought, I'll drop
In winter with warm tears I'll
And keep eternal spring-time on
So thou refuse to drink my dear

Enter Lucius, with his sword.
O reverend tribunes! O gentle Unbind my sons, reverse the doom
And let me say, that never wept
My tears are now prevailing o'er Luc. O noble father, you have The tribunes hear you not; we will
And you recount your sorrows to

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy plead.
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat

My gracious lord, no tribune hears you [hear.]
Why, 'tis no matter, man; if they did would not mark me; or if they did mark,
I would not pity me; yet pleas'd I must,
I tell my sorrows to the stones;
though they cannot answer my distress,
in some sort they're better than the tribunes.

That they will not intercept my tale:
I do weep, they humbly at my feet
my tears, and seem to weep with me;
they but attired in grave weeds,
could afford no tribune like to these,
in soft as wax, tribunes more hard
than stones:

Titus is silent, and offendeth not;
tribunes with their tongues doom men to
death.

Wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon
drawn?
[Rites.]
To rescue my two brothers from their which attempt the judges have pronounc'd a dreadful doom of banishment. [Thee.]
O happy man! they have befriended my noble Lucius, dost thou not perceive home is but a wilderness of tigers!

I must prey; and Rome affords no prey and mine: how happy art thou, then, these devourers to be banish'd!—
Kiss Marcus and Lavinia.

Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;
[Thee.]
I am so, thy noble heart to break:
Will it consume me? let me see it, then.

Why, Marcus, so she is.
Ah me, this object kills me!
[Thee.]
That hearted boy, arise, and look upon Lavinia, what accursed hand [her.] would thus handless in thy father's sight!

Foot bath added water to the sea,
a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
was at the height before thou can'st;
like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.

A sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;

they have nurs'd this woe in feeding life;
these prayer have they been held up,
they have serv'd me to effectual use:

all the service I require of them,
that the one will help to cut the other.
Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;
to do Rome service, are but vain.

Break, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd
[thoughts.]
O that delightful engine of her solaced them with such pleasing eloquence, forth that pretty hollow cage,
like a sweet melodious bird, it sung varied notes, enchanting every ear.

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done
this deed? [park.]

Mar. O, thus I found her straying in the Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my dear; and he that wounded
her

Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me
For now I stand as one upon a rock, [dead:]
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea; [wave:]
Who marks the waxing tide grow waves by Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;
And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have maddened me: what shall I do
Now I behold thy lovely body so?

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears;
Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead; and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her!
When I did name her brothers, then fresh
tears

stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband;

Perchance, because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful.

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.

No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;

Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;

Or make some sign how I may do thee ease:

Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,

Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd like meadows yet not

With miry slime leften them by a flood? [dry:]

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,

Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb
shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?

What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,

Plot some device of further misery,

To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief,

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Mar. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine ;
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark ! I understand her signs :

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she
That to her brother which I said to thee :
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O, what a sympathy of woe is this,
As far from help as Limbo is from bliss !

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word,—that, if thou love thy Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king : he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive ;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious emperor ! O gentle Aaron !
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise ?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor
My hand :

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off ?

Luc. Stay, father ! for that noble hand of thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent : my hand will serve the turn :
My youth can better spare my blood than you ;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers'
lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not de-
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle ?
O, none of both but are of high desert :
My hand hath been but idle ; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death ;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along.

For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go.

Tit. Sirs, strive no more : such wither'd herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy
son,

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you ; I will spare my

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. But I will use the axe.

[Exit Lucius and Marcus.]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron ; I'll deceive them
both :

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be hon-
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so : [Exit,

[Aside.] But I'll deceive you in another way,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour past.

[Exit of Titus.]

Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife : what shall I is despatch'd.

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand !
Tell him it was a hand that war'd him
From thousand dangers ; bid him bury it
More bath it merited, than let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price ;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.
Aar. I go, Andronicus : and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.

[Aside.] Their heads, I mean. O, how the villainy
Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it !
Let fools do good, and fair men call for good.
Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth,
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call !—[To Luc.] What, wilt thou kneel with me ?

Do, then, dear heart ; for heaven shall hear
our prayers ;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin
And stain the sun with fog, as sometimes
When they do hug him in their melting tears.

Mar. O brother, speak with possibility
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having bottom ?

Then, be my passions bottomless with grief.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy passion.

Tit. If there were reason for these tears,
Then into limits could I bind my woe ;
When heaven doth weep, doth not the sea overflow ?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea vent
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln
And wilt thou have a reason for this do ?

I am the sea ; hark, how her sighs do
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth ;
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs ;
Then must my earth with her continual Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd ;
For why ? my bowels cannot hold her tears ;
But like a drunkard must I vomit them out.
Then give me leave ; for losers will have To ease their stomachs with their tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a sword.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, I have brought thee
For that good hand thou sent'st at the emperor's
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons ;
And here's thy hand, in scorn to show thee
back ;

Thy griefs their sports, thy remembrance
That woe is me to think upon thy woe ;
More than remembrance of my father's fall.

Now let hot Aëna cool in Sicily,
 Let my heart an ever-burning hell!
 My sorrows are more than may be borne.
 With them that weep doth ease some

As I that this sight should make so deep a wound,
 Yet doth death should let life bear his name,
 Which hath no more interest but to breathe!

Alas, poor heart! that kiss is comfort-[Lavinia kisses him.]
 When will this fearful slumber have an end!

Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andronicus, and not slumber; see thy two sons' heads,
 Like Ireland, thy mangled daughter here;
 One pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,

Has a stony image, cold and numb.
 No more will I control thy griefs:
 Of thy silver hair, thy other hand [sight
 with thy teeth; and be this dismal

One up of our most wretched eyes:
 A time to storm; why art thou still?
 To the, ha, ha!
 Why dost thou laugh! it fits not with
 this hour.

Why, I have not another tear to shed;
 This sorrow is an enemy,
 Which would usurp upon my watery eyes,
 Which way shall I find Revenge's cave?

These two heads do seem to speak to me,
 Three me; I shall never come to bliss,
 All these mischiefs be return'd again,
 Let me see what task I have to do.

Let me see what task I have to do.
 Heavy people, circle me about,
 May turn me to each one of you,
 And enter into my soul to right your wrongs.

Let me see what task I have to do.
 Come, brother, take a head;
 In this hand the other will I bear.
 Thou shalt be employ'd in these things:

Let me see what task I have to do.
 My hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
 Boy, go get thee from my sight;
 Art an exile, and thou must not stay;

Let me see what task I have to do.
 To the Goths, and raise an army there:
 If you love me, as I think you do,
 Kiss and part, for we have much to do.

Let me see what task I have to do.
 [Re-enter Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.]
 Well, Andronicus, my noble father,
 Thou shalt not man that ever liv'd in Rome:
 I have his plagues dearer than his life:
 Lavinia, my noble sister;
 Now thou wert as thou 'fore hast been!
 Nor for Lucius nor Lavinia lives,
 But in oblivion and hateful griefs.
 Now live, he will requite your wrongs;
 And these proud Saturnine and his empress

Be at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
 Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
 To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Titus's House. A Banquet set out.

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and young
 Lucius, a boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look you eat no
 more

Than will preserve just so much strength in us
 As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
 Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wreath knot:

Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our
 hands,

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
 With folded arms. This poor right hand of
 Is left to tyrannize upon my breast; [Lavinia
 And when my heart, all mad with misery,
 Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
 Then thus I thump it down.

[To Lav.] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs! [Lavinia
 When thy poor heart beats with outrageous

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
 Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
 Or get some little knife between thy teeth,

And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
 That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
 May run into that sink, and, soaking in,
 Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
 What violent hands can she lay on her life!

Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of
 hands;

To bid Aeneas tell the tale twice o'er,
 How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable!

O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
 Lest we remember still that we have none.

Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk,
 As if we should forget we had no hands.

If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
 Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:

Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she
 I can interpret all her martyr'd signs; [Lavinia
 She says, she drinks no other drink but tears, Brew'd with her sorrow, mesh'd upon her

cheeks:

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
 In thy dumb action will I be as perfect

As begging hermits in their holy prayers.
 Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to

heaven,
 Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
 But I of these will wrest an alphabet. [Lucius
 And by still practice learn to know thy mean-

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep lamenta:

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

[Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord,— a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:

A deed of death, done on the innocent,

Becomes not Titus' brother: get thee gone;

I see, thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and a mother?

How would he hang his slender gilded wings,

And buzz lamenting doings in the air!

Poor harmless fly,

That with his pretty buzzing melody,

Came here to make us merry! and thou hast
kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me, sir, it was a black illfavour'd fly,

Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd

Tit. O, O, O, [him.

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,

For thou hast done a charitable deed.

Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;

Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor

Come hither purposely to poison me.

There's for thyself, and that's for Tainora.

Ah, sirrah!

Yet I think we are not brought so low,

But that between us we can kill a fly.

That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Mar. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought
on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away, Lavinia, go with me:

I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee

Sad stories, chanced in times of old.

Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,

And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before Titus' House.

Enter Titus and Marcus. Then enter young Lucius, running, with books under his arm, and Lavinia running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia

Follows me everywhere, I know not why:

Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes!

Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome,
did.

Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by this?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat of it
she meant:

See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of it!

Some whither would she have then go with

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee

Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator.

Mar. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her.

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft

Extremity of griefs would make men mad.

And I have read that Hecuba of Troy

Ran mad through sorrow: that made me

Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did

And would not, but in fury, fright my

Which made me down to throw my book

fly,

Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, my

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your lady.

Mar. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over the books which had let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what

Some book there is that she desires to

Which is it, girl, of these? Open them.

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd

Come, and take choice of all my library.

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the book

Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.

Why lifts she up her arms in sequence

Mar. I think she means that there was

than one

Confederate in the fact: ay, more than

Or else to heaven she heaves them for

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she

so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses.

My mother gave it me.

Mar. For love of her that Perhaps she cull'd it from among the

Tit. Soft! how busily she turns the Help her:

What would she find?—Lavinia, shall I

This is the tragic tale of Philomel,

And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape.

And rape, I fear, was root of thine

Mar. See, brother, see; note how she

the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd,

girl,

Bavish'd and wrong'd, as Philomel

Per'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy

See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we

(O, had we never, never hunted there) by that the poet here describes,

made for murders, and for rapes.
O, why should nature build so foul a
the gods delight in tragedies! [den, Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none
but friends,
that Roman land it was durst do the deed:
and not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
let the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?
Mar. Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down by me.
Lucius, I'llas, Jove, or Mercury,
I'll swear, that I may this treason find!
Mar. Look here; look here, Lavinia:
the bloody plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,
down after me.

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.

I have writ my name,
and the help of any hand at all;
and in that heart, that forc'd us to this shift!
Mar. Thou, good niece; and here display at last
that thou wilt have discover'd for revenge:
guide thy pen to print thy sorrows
plain;
and we may know the traitors, and the truth!
[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides
it with her stumps, and writes,
To, O, do you read, my lord, what she hath writ.]

Chiron—Demetrius. [Tamora
Mar. What, what!—the lustful sons of the murderers of this heinous, bloody deed!
O, Magni dominator polii,
Mar. O, calm thee, gentle lord, although I
know

there is enough written upon this earth,
to stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,
to arm the minds of infants to exclaims.
Mar. Kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel; kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's
hope;
and swear with me, as, with the woful seere,
and father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
that we will prosecute, by good advice,
our revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
or their blood, or die with this reproach.
Mar. 'Tis sure enough, as you knew how;
if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:

the dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,
and tells him whilst she playeth on her back,
when he sleeps will she do what she list.
Mar. A young huntsman, Marcus: let it alone;
I will go get a leaf of brass,
and with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind will blow these sands, like Sibyl's leaves,
abroad,
And where's your lesson, then?—Boy, what

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man, Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe.

For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft.

For his ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;
Lucius, I'll hit thee; and withal, my boy shall carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents, that I intend to send them both:
Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou
not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms,

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house:

Lucius and I'll go braye it at the court;

Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.

[Exeunt Titus, Lavinia, and Boy.

Mar. O heavens, can you hear a good man
groan,

And not relent, or not compassion him?

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,

That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,

Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;

But yet so just, that he will not revenge.

Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus!

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in the Palace.

Enter, from one side, Aaron, Demetrius, and Chiron; from the other, young Lucius, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons and verses writ upon them.

*Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;

He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I

I greet your honours from Andronicus. [sings, [Aside.] And pray the Roman gods, confound you both!

[news]

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what's the Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd,

that's the news,

For villains mark'd with rape. [To them.]

May it please you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me,

The goodliest weapons of his armoury,

To gratify your honourable youth,

The hope of Rome: for so he bade me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present

Your lordships, that whenever you have need,

You may be armed and appointed well:

And so I leave you both,—[Aside.] like bloody villains.

[Exeunt Boy and Attendants.

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see:—

[Reads.] "Integer viles, acclerisque purus,

Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu."

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it
I read it in the grammar long ago. [well:]

Aar. Ay, just; a verse in Horace; right, you have it.

[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt; [lines,

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.
But were our witty empress well a-foot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:
But let her rest in her unrest a while.

[To them.] And now, young lords, was't not a happy star

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good, before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a Basely insinuate, and send us gifts. [lord

Aar. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say
amen. [more.]

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the
For our beloved mother in her pains. [gods

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over. [Trumpets sound.

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a black-a-moor Child in her arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords: O, tell me, did Aaron the Moor? [you see

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at
all,

Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye, [grace!

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's dis-
She is deliver'd, lords,—she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she's brought to bed.

Aar. Well, God

Give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam; a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue:

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad

Amongst the fairest breeders of our climate:

The empress sends it thee, thy crump, the which
And bids thee christen it with thy daughter's point.

Aar. 'Zounds, ye whore! is black so loath-
Sweet blowse, you are a lecherous woman.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her lordship!
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a blood!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not live. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother will it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let an ass but I

Do execution on my flesh and blood:

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier.

point:

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall plough
the bowels up.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough
the bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and says,

Stay, murderous villains! will you kill
brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,

That shone so brightly when this boy was born,

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point.

That touches this my first-born son and heir!

I tell you, younglings, not Eneadaus,

With all his threatening band of Typhoeus' blood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,

Shall seize this prey out of his father's hand.

What, what, yea sanguine, shallow-hearted,

Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alabaster palaces,

Coal-black is better than another hue!

In that it accords to bear another hue!

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white.

Although she have them hourly in the sea.

Tell the empress from me, I am of age

To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble name
thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this
The vigour, and the picture of my youth.

This, before all the world, do I prefer.

This, maugre all the world, will I keep.

Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever lost.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this escape.

Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will
Chi. I blush to think upon this ignominy.

Aar. Why there's the privilege your
bears:

Fie, treacherous hue that will betray
The close enacts and counsels of the mind.

Here's a young lad fram'd of another hue.

Look, how the black alays smiles on
father,

As who should say, "Old lad, I am thy
father."

(Pointing to the Nurse.)
 needs bestow her funeral;
 near, and you are gallant do that you take no longer days, send the midwife presently to me.
 and the nurse well made away,
 let the ladies tattle what they please.
 — Aaron, I see, thou wilt not trust the air with secrets.
 — I am
 myself and hers are highly bound to thee.
 (Exeunt Dem. and Chi. bearing off the Nurse.

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with I'll dive into the burning lake below, [delays,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels,
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we,
No big-bon'd man, fram'd of the Cyclops' size;
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrang with wrongs, more than our backs
can bear:

And, sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven, and move the gods,
To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.
Come, to this gear.—You are a good archer,
Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.]

Ad Jovem, that's for you: here, ad Apollin
Ad Martem, that's for myself: [rem:—

Here, boy, to Pallas: here, to Mercury:
To Saturn, Calus, not to Saturnine;
You were as good to shoot against the wind.
To it, boy. Marcus, loose when I bid.
O' my word, I have written to effect;

There's not a god left unsolicited. [the court:
Mar. Kinamen, shoot all your shafts into
We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O,
well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.

Mar. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the
Your letter is with Jupiter by this. [moon:]

Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou
done!

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Mar. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,

The bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock,
That down fell both the ram's horns in the court,

And who should find them but the empress'
villain:

She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket and two pigeons.
News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is
come.

Sirrah, what tidings! have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. Ho, the gibbet-maker! he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven! alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid, I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plobs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration
the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more
But give your pigeons to the emperor:

By me thou shalt have justice at his hand.
Hold, hold; meanwhile, here's money for Give me pen and ink.

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a cation?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for And when you come to him, at the proach, you must kneel; then kiss his then deliver up your pigeons; and then for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir: say do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Can me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
For thou hast made it like a humble sup-
And when thou hast given it to the emperor,
Knock at my door and tell me what he say.

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go.
follow me.

SCENE IV.—Rome. Before the Palace.

Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Lords, and others: Saturninus

arrows in his hand that Titus shot

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs
Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the
Of legal justice, us'd in such contempt?

My lords, you know, as do the multitude (However these disturbers of our peace Buz in the people's ears,) there have pass'd,

But even with law, against the will

Of old Andronicus. And what an His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrongs?

His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness!
And now he writes to heaven for help.

See, here's to Jove, and this to Mars;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war.

Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets
What's this but libelling against the
And blazoning our injustice everywhere?

A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice

But if I live, his feign'd estates
Shall be no shelter to these outrageous

But he and his shall know, that justice
In Saturninus' health; whom, if he He'll so awake, as she in fury shall

Out off the proud conspirator's
Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely of my life, commander of my thoughts,

And bear the faults of Titus' age,
Who hath pierc'd him deep, and scarr'd
his heart;
And comfort his distressed plight,
To prosecute the meanest, or the best,
In those contempt. — [Aside.] Why, thus it shall become
to wit Tamora to gloze with all:
Thus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
And bleed out: if Aaron now be wise,
The anchor's in the port.
Enter Clown.

Good fellow! wouldst thou speak [Imperial]
Yes, smooth, an your mastership be Empress I am, but yonder sits the [you good den:
God, and saint Stephen, give brought you a letter, and a couple of poena here.

Saturninus reads the letter.
Go, take him away, and hang him
presently.

How much money must I have?
Hang'd! By'r lady, then I have brought a sack to a fair end.

[Exit, guarded.]
Dreadful and intolerable wrongs!
I curse this monstrous villainy!

From whence this same device proceeds.
To come to home! — as if his traitorous sons,
By law for murder of our brother,
By my means been butcher'd wrongfully.

Will the villain hither by the hair;
And now, nor honour, shall shape privilege;
I shall proud mock, I'll be thy slaughter-man;
Wretch, that holp'st to make me great.

Thyself should govern Rome and me.
Enter Amilius.

Arm, arm, my lord; — Rome never had more cause!

[power
Goths have gather'd head; and with a determined men, bent to the spoil,
Their march amain, under conduct
Of their son to old Andronicus;
In course of this revenge, to do
As ever Coriolanus did.

Is Lucius general of the Goths?
I have slain me; and I hang the head Of him with frost, or grass beat down with flourish.

How begin our sorrows to approach:
The common people love so much;
I have often heard them say,
I have walk'd like a private man,
In banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Why should you fear? Is not your city

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wing
He can at pleasure stint their melody:
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus [ous,
With words more sweet, and yet more danger-
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep;
Whence the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:

For I can smooth and fill his aged ear

With golden promises; that, were his heart

Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,

Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.

[To Amil.] Go thou before, be our ambassador:

Say that the emperor requests a parley

Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting,

Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Amilius, do this message honourably:

And if he stand on hostage for his safety,

Bid him demand what pledge will please him

best.

Amil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

[Exit Amilius.]

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,

And temper him with all the art I have,

To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike

Goths.

And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,

And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. — Plains near Rome.

Flourish. Enter Lucius, and an army of Goths, with drums and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful
friends,

I have received letters from great Rome,

Which signify what hate they bear their

emperor,

And how desirous of our sight they are.

Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles

witness,

Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs;

And, wherein Rome hath done you any seath,

Let him make treble satisfaction.

I, Goth, Brave slip, sprung from the great

Andronicus, [comfort;

Whose name was once our terror, now our

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds,

Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,

Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,

And find out murderers in their guilty caves ;
And when thy car is laden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel,
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long,
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea :
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me. [call'd?]

Tit. Are they thy ministers? what are they?

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called so,

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are!

And you, the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee;

And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy :
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge ;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius, his son ;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter Titus, below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee.

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woful house :
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too ;
How like the empress and her sons you are !
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor :
Could not all hell afford you such a devil !
For well I wot the empress never wags,
But in her company there is a Moor ;
And, would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil :
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do !

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome ;

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him ; he's a murderer.

Go thou with him ; and when it is thy hap

To find another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him ; he is a ravisher.

Go thou with them ; and in the emperor's court

There is a queen, attended by a Moor :
Well mayst thou know her by thy own portion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee.
I pray thee, do on them some violent deed.
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us, that we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son,

Who leads towards Rome a band of Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house,
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,

I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes ;

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry soul.

What says Andronicus to this device?
Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis and Titus.

Enter Marcus.
Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius,

Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths,
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him

Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths,
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they please,

Tell him the emperor, and the empress, shall Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.

This do thou for my love ; and so bid him
As he regards his aged father's life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return to thee.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder go
with me ;

Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius'.

Tam. [Aside to them.] What say you?
Will you abide with him?

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,
How I have govern'd our detraction.

Yield to his humour, smooth and easy,
And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, they will suppose me mad ;

And will o'er-reach them in their own craft,
A pair of curs'd bell-hounds, and the like.

Dem. [Aside to Tam.] Madam, I have pleasure ; leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus ; I have To lay a compass to betray thy son.

Tit. I know thou dost ; and, sweet, farewell.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we
farewell.

Tit. Tut, I have work enough to do
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valerius.

Enter Publius and others.
Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The empress' sons,
I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Publius, As! thou art too much
 Murder, Rape is the other's name;
 Therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
 And Valentine, lay hands on them;
 You heard me wish for such an hour,
 Now I had it; therefore bind them sure;
 Their mouths, if they begin to cry.
 [Enter Titus, Publius, &c., seize Chiron
 and Demetrius.] [sobs.
 Villains, forbear! we are the empress'
 And therefore do we what we are commanded. [word.
 Bind their mouths, let them not speak a word, nor look that you bind them And Andronicus, with Lavinia; she being a virgin, and he a knife.
 Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound. Their mouths, let them not speak to thee. Hear what fearful words I utter.
 Chiron and Demetrius!
 The spring whom you have stain'd
 With blood!
 My summer with your winter mix'd.
 Your husband; and, for that vile fault,
 Whose brothers were condemn'd to death,
 Went off, and made a merry jest;
 And sweet hands, her tongue, and that
 Which was her dear
 Or tongue, her spotless chastity,
 Traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
 Would you say, if I should let you speak?
 For shame you could not beg for grace.
 Wretch! how I mean to martyr you.
 And yet is left to cut your throats,
 That Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth Receive that receives your guilty blood.
 Now your mother means to feast with me,
 And herself Revenge, and thinks me mad;
 With your blood and it I'll make a paste;
 And paste a collar I will rear,
 And paste of your shameful heads;
 To the earth, swallow her own increase.
 To the feast that I have bid her to,
 And the banquet she shall surfeit on;
 Than Phoenice you and my daughter,
 Than Pygme I will be reveng'd:
 Prepare your throats. Lavinia, come,
 [He cuts their throats.
 The blood; and when that they are Dead,
 To grind their bones to powder small,
 And mix this hateful liquor temper it;
 And that paste let their vile heads be Laid.
 And be every one officious
 To this banquet; which I wish may prove
 More and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.

So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
 And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
 [Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Pavilion.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron, prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since it is my father's
 That I repair to Rome, I am content. [sobs.
 I Goth. And ours, with thine, befall what fortune will. [Moan.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous
 This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
 Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
 Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
 For testimony of her foul proceedings:
 And see the ambush of our friends be strong;
 I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
 And prompt me, that my tongue may utter
 forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unshallow'd
 slave!

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.

[Exeunt Goths with Aaron. Flourish
 heard.]

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Amilius, Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one? [sobs.]

Luc. What boots it thee, to call thyself a Man. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.

The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
 Hath ordain'd to an honourable end. [Rome:
 For peace, for love, for league, and good to Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will. [your places.
 [Haulboys sound. The company sit down at table.]

Enter Titus, dressed like a cook, Lavinia, veiled, young Lucius, and others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome,
 dread queen;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius;
 And welcome, all; although the cheer be poor,
 'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?
 Tit. Because I would be sure to have all
 well,

To entertain your highness, and your empress.
 Tam. We are beholden to you, good An-dronicus. [you were.]

Tit. And if your highness knew my heart,
 My lord the emperor, resolve me this:

Was it well done of rash Virginius,
 To slay his daughter with his own right hand,

Because she was enforced, stain'd, and debas'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus. [Rower'd.]

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched, to perform the like:
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

[Kills Lavinia.]

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind?

[made me blind.]

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have
I am as woful as Virginius was,
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage; and it now is done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and out away her tongue:
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this
wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie;

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp
point.

[Kills Tamora.]

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed!

[Kills Titus.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?

[deed!]

There's need for meed, death for a deadly [Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse. Marcus, Lucius, and their partisans, ascend the steps of Titus' house.]

[of Rome.]

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons
By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl

Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O, let me teach you how to knit again

This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body;

Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
And she, whom mighty kingdoms court'ay to,

Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,
Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,
[To Lucius.] Speak, Rome's dear friend: as erst our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,

The story of that baleful burning night [Troy.
When subtle Greeks surpris'd king Priam's

Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.

My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel;
Nor can I utter all our latter griefs.
But floods of tears will drown my oratory.
And break my very utterance, even 'till
When it should move you to attend
Lending your kind commiseration.
Here is a captain, let him tell the tale.
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear
speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known
That curst Chiron and Demetrius

Were they that murder'd our sister
brother;

And they it were that ravish'd our sister
For their full faults our brother headed;

Our father's tears despa'd, and head'd
Of that true hand that fought Rome's

And sent her enemies unto the grave.
Lastly, myself unkindly banish'd.

The gates shut on me, and turn'd weep'd
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;

Who drown'd their enmity in my tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me

friend:

I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you
That have preserv'd her welfare in my

And from her bosom took the enemy's Sheathing the steel in my adventure.

Alas, you know I am no vaunter;
My scars can witness, dumb although they be,

That my report is just and full of truth.
But, soft! methinks I do digress too far.

Citing my worthless praises: O, pardon me
For when no friends are by, men praise

selves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak.
child,—

[Pointing to the child in the arms of Attendant.]

Of this was Tamora deliver'd;
The issue of an irreligious Moor.

Chief architect and plotter of these evils,
The villain is alive in Titus' house.

Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true,
Now judge what cause had Titus' tears.

These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.

Now you have heard the truth, what shall Romans?

Have we done aught amiss? Show me
And, from the place where you behold

The poor remainder of Andronicus,
Will, hand in hand, all howling

And on the ragged stones beat their breasts,
And make a mutual closure of our Speak, Romans, speak; and if you

shall,

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will Amil. Come, come, thou reverend

Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy

Lucius, our emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry, it shall be kindness, and take leave of him.

(E. devent.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Antiochus, King of Antioch.
 Pericles, Prince of Tyre.
 Helicanus, } two Lords of Tyre.
 Escanes, }
 Simonides, King of Pentapolis.
 Cleon, Governor of Tharsus.
 Lysimachus, Governor of Mitylene.
 Cerimon, a Lord of Ephesus.
 Thaliard, a Lord of Antioch.
 Philemon, Servant to Cerimon.
 Leonine, Servant to Dionyza.
 Marshal,

A Pander.
 Boul, his Servant.
 Gower, as Chorus.
 The Daughter of Antiochus.
 Dionyza, Wife to Cleon.
 Thaisa, Daughter to Simonides.
 Marina, Daughter to Pericles and Thaisa.
 Lychorida, Nurse to Marina.
 Diana.
 A Bawd.
 Lords, Ladies, Knights, Gentlemen, &c.
 Pirates, Fishermen, and Messengers.

SCENE, — Dispersedly in various Countries.

ACT I.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

Enter Gower.

To sing a song that old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come;
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eyes, and holy-ales;
 And lords and ladies in their lives
 Have read it for restoratives:
 The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
 And that to hear an old man sing,
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.
 This Antioch, then, Antiochus the great
 Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat;
 The fairest in all Syria;
 I tell you what mine authors say:
 This king unto him took a pheere,
 Who died and left a female heir.
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke:
 Bad child; worse father! to entice his own
 To evil, should be done by none:
 By custom what they did begin,
 Was with long use account no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage pleasures play-fellow:

Which to prevent, he made a law,
 To keep her still, and men in awe,
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife
 His riddle told not, lost his life.
 So for her many a wight did die,
 As yon grim looks do testify.
 What now ensues, to the judgment of you,
 I give, my cause who best can justify.

SCENE I. — Antioch. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have large receiv'd
 The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus; and, with Embolden'd with the glory of her
 Think death no hazard in this enterprise.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, who bride,
 For the embraces even of Jove
 At whose conception, till Lucina Nature this dowry gave, to glad
 The senate-house of planets all the
 To knit in her their best perfection.
Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.
Per. See where she comes, appearing the spring,
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts
 Of every virtue gives renown to men;
 Her face the book of praises, which Nothing but curious pleasures, or Sorrow were ever ras'd, and let it Could never be her mild companion.
 Ye gods, that made me man, and
 That have inflam'd desire in my
 To taste the fruit of yon celestial Or die in the adventure, be my and servant to your will,

 such a boundless happiness !
 Prince Pericles, —
 that would be son to great Antiochus.
 Before then stands this fair Hesperides,
 a fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
 like dragons here alight thee hard :
 like heaven, anticeth thee to view
 — glory, which desert must gain ;
 reach, without desert, because thine eye
 to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
 famous princes, like thyself,
 report, adventurous by desire,
 with speechless tongues, and sempte pale,
 about roving, save yon field of stars,
 stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars ;
 dead chiefs advise thee to desist,
 on death's net, whom none resist.
 Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath mortality to know itself, [taught those fearful objects to prepare like to them, to what I must :
 remember'd should be like a mirror,
 us, life's but breath ; to trust it,
 my will, then : and, as sick men do,
 the world, see heaven, but feeling at earthly joys, as erst they did :
 with a happy peace to you,
 good men, as every prince should do ;
 to the earth from whence they
 [To the Daughter of Antiochus, completed fire of love to you.
 for the way of life or death,
 sharpest blow, Antiochus, [then ;
 seeking advice ; read the conclusion
 and not expounded, 'tis decreed, before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed, of all, 'say'd yet, mayst thou prove persons !
 say'd yet, I wish thee happiness !
 a bold champion, I assume the advice of any other thought [lists, and courage.
 [Reads the riddle.
 no tiger, yet I feed
 on flesh which did me breed :
 to husband, in which labour,
 that kindness in a father :
 father, son, and husband mild,
 her, wife, and yet his child ;
 they may be, and yet in two,
 will live, resolve it you,
 'twere the last : but, O you powers !
 heaven countless eyes to view men's and they not their sights perpetually,
 — which makes me pale to read [Takes the hand of the Princess.
 of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
 — this glorious casket stor'd with ill :
 I tell you, — now my thoughts revolt ;

For he's no man on whom perfection wait,
 That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate,
 You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings ;
 Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
 Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken ;
 But being play'd upon before your time,
 Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime.
 Good sooth, I care not for you.
Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy
 For that's an article within our law, [life,
 As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd :
 Either expound now, or receive your sentence.
Per. Great king,
 Few love to hear the sins they love to act :
 'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it,
 Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
 He's more secure to keep it shut than shown :
 For vice repeated, is like the wandering wind,
 Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself ;
 And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
 The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear ;
 To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is through'd
 By man's oppression ; and the poor worm doth die for't. [will ;
 Kings are earth's gods ; in vice their law's their
 And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill !
 It is enough you know ; and it is fit,
 What being more known grows worse, to smother it.
 All love the womb that their first being bred,
 Then give my tongue like leave to love my
 head.
Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head !
 he has found the meaning :
 But I will gloze with him. — [Aloud.] Young prince of Tyre,
 Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
 Your exposition misinterpreting,
 We might proceed to cancel of your days ;
 Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
 As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise :
 Forty days longer we do respite you ;
 It by which time our secret be undone,
 This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son :
 And until then your entertain shall be,
 As doth befit our honour, and your worth.
 [Exeunt all but Pericles.
Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin !
 When what is done is like a hypocrite,
 The which is good in nothing but in sight !
 If it be true that I interpret false,
 Then were it certain you were not so bad,
 As with foul incest to abuse your soul ;
 Where now you're both a father and a son,
 By your untimely clasps with your child,
 (Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father) ;
 And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
 By the defiling of her parent's bed ; [feed
 And both like serpents are, who though they
 On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.

Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light.

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke:
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame;
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you
clear,

By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.

Re-enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for the
To have his head. [which we mean
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world, Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner;
And therefore instantly this prince must die;
For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends us there?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard,
You're of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy:
And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold;
We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must
kill him:

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord,
'Tis done.

Ant. Enough.—

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is dead.

Ant. As thou
Wilt live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
From a well-experienc'd archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return
Unless thou say "Prince Pericles is dead."

Thal. My lord,
If I can get him within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure: so, farewell to your high-
ness.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu. [Exit Thal.

Till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre. The Palace.

Enter Pericles, Helicanus, and other Lords apart.

Per. Let none disturb us.—

Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest, as not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,
(The tomb where grief should sleep,) can breed me quiet? [shun them;
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes

And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch.
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me.
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirit,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind
That have their first conception by care,
Have after-nourishment and life by care.
And what was first but fear what might be done,

Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me:—the great Antiochus, (Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his Will think me speaking, though I speak silence;

Nor boots it me to say I honour him,
If he suspect I may dishonour him:
And what may make him blush in battle?
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with the ostent of war will look on us.
Amazement shall drive courage from the soul,
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do reach
And subjects punish'd that ne'er did
offence:

Which care of them, not pity of my self,
(Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and fend them.)

Makes both my body pine, and soul to fear,
And punish that before, that he would [Hel. and Lords

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your breast!

2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you turn to us,

Peaceful and comfortable.

Hel. Peace, peace, and give experience
They do abuse the king, that flatter him.
For flattery is the bellows blows up
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a To which that blast gives heat and glowing:

Whereas reproof, obedient, and in order
Fits kings, as they are men, does When signior South, here, does
peace,

He flatters you, makes war upon your Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if I [Kneeling.] I cannot be much lower than knees.

Per. All leave us else: but let o'er-look

What shipping and what landing's in
And then return to us.— Helicanus

Hast mov'd us: what seest thou in Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a deed
How durst thy tongue move about it?

Hel. How dare the plaus look from whence

They have their nourishment!

But since my landing I have understood Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels,

My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Cleon, Dionyza, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;

For who digs hills because they do aspire, Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

O my distressed lord, even such our griefs;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's
eyes,

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher

Cle. O Dionyza, [rise.]
Who wanteth food, and will not any he wants
Or can conceal his hunger, till he furnish? [it,
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,

Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder; [want,
That, if hear'n slumber, while their creatures
They may awake their helps to comfort them.

I'll, then, discourse our woes, felt several years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me with
Dio. I'll do my best, sir. [tears.

Cle. This Tharsus o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd
the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jettied, and adorn'd like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O, 'tis too true. [four change,
Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea,
and air,

Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abund-
As houses are fill'd for want of use, [ance,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates, who, not yet two summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers, who, to nuzzle up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now

To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping,
Here many sink, yet those which see them
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.

Is not this true?
Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness
Cle. O, let those cities, that of plenty
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.
Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our bouring shore,
A portly sail of ships make litherward.
Cle. I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes, but brings an ill
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with
To beat us down, the which are down already.
And make a conquest of unhappy me.
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the
Of their white flags display'd, they bring
peace,
And come to us as favourers, not as down-Cle. Thou speak'st like him's a nation repeat:
Who makes the fairest show means most
But bring they what they will, and what
What need we fear?
The ground's the lowest, and we are
there.

Go tell their general we attend him
To know for what he comes, and what
And what he craves.
Lord. I go, my lord.
Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on
If wars, we are unable to resist.
Enter Pericles, with Attendants.
Per. Lord governor, for so we hear Let not our ships and number of our
Be like a beacon fir'd, to amaze your
We have heard your miseries as far as
And seen the desolation of your streets.
Nor come we to add sorrow to your
But to relieve them of their heavy load.
And these our ships you happily may
Are, like the Trojan horse, war-stor'd
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow.
Are stor'd with corn to make your nobles
And give them life whom hunger starv'd
dead.

All. [Kneeling.] The gods of Greece
And we'll pray for you. Rise, I pray you.
Per. We do not look for reverence, but for pity.

...for our self, our ships, and
 ...which when any shall not gratify,
 ...with unthankfulness in thought,
 ...wires, our children, or ourselves,
 ...of heaven and men succeed their
 ...[seen,]
 ...[the which, I hope, shall ne'er be
 ...is welcome to our town and us.
 ...which welcome we'll accept; feast here
 ...stars that frown lend us a smile.
 ...[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Here have you seen a mighty king
 ...I wis, to incest bring;
 ...prince, and benign lord,
 ...will prove awful both in deed and word.
 ...then, as men should be,
 ...shall pass'd necessity.
 ...you those in troubles reign,
 ...a mountain gain.
 ...in conversation
 ...I give my benison)
 ...at Tharsus, where each man
 ...all is with he spoken can:
 ...remember what he does,
 ...his statue to make him glorious:
 ...ings to the contrary
 ...thought your eyes: what need speak I?
 ...Dumb Show.

*From one side, Pericles, talking with ...their trains with them. Enter,
 ...the other side, a Gentleman, with a
 ...in Pericles; who shows the letter to
 ...then gives the Messenger a reward,
 ...brought him. Exeunt Pericles, Cleon,
 ...generally.*

Good Helicane hath stay'd at home,
 ...to all honey like a drone,
 ...their labours; for though he strive
 ...hills bad, keep good alive;
 ...to fulfil his prince's desire,
 ...soul of all that haps in Tyre:
 ...Thallard came full bent with sin,
 ...not intent to murder him;
 ...in Tharsus was not best
 ...for him to make his rest.
 ...knowing so, put forth to seas,
 ...when men been, there's seldom ease;
 ...the wind begins to blow;
 ...such inquiet, and deeps below,
 ...house him safe, that the ship
 ...good prince, is wreck'd and split;
 ...from coast to coast is tost;
 ...perish of man, of self,
 ...might escape but himself;
 ...fortune, he'd with doing bad,
 ...him ashore, to give him glad:

And here he comes. What shall he next,
 Pardon old Gower,—this Tongs the text.
 [Exit.]

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter Pericles, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven! [man
 Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly
 Is but a substance that must yield to you;
 And I, as fits my nature, do obey you:
 Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks, [breath
 Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
 Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
 Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,
 To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
 And having thrown him from your watery grave,

Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilch!
 2 Fish. Ho, come, and bring away the nets!
 1 Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!
 3 Fish. What say you, master?
 1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wauion.
 3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men, that were cast away before us even now.

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls! it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounced and tumbled! they say, they are half fish, half flesh: a plague on them! they ne'er come, but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why, as men do a-land,—the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale:
 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful: such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton,
 I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man!

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. [Aside.] Simonides!

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. [Aside.] How from the funny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men :
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve, or men detect !— [Aloud.] Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest ! good fellow, what's that ?
if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar,
and nobody look after it.

Per. You may see, the sea hath cast me on your coast.

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea,
to cast thee in our way !

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,

In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball
For them to play upon, untreats you pity him ;
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg ? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then ?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure ;
for here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to
But what I am, want teaches me to think on ;
A man throng'd up with cold : my veins are chill,

And have no more of life, than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help ;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die, quoth-a ! Now, gods forbid it ! I have a gown here ; come, put it on ;
keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow ! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks ;
and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

1 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave ! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped,
then ?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all ; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, unstar, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit with third Fisherman.]

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour !

1 Fish. Hark you, sir ; do you know where Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you : this is called Pentapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call
him ?

1 Fish. Ay, sir ; and he deserves to be so called, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore ?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey, and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day ; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to just and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires,
I could wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for ;—his wife's son.

Re-enter second and third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help ! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law ; 'twill hardly come out. Ha ! hold on ;
'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a money
armour.

Per. An armour, friends ! I pray you, let Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all my craving
Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself !
And though it was mine own, part of my heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge, even as he left his will,
"Keep it, my Pericles ; it hath been a sword
'Twixt me and death ;"—and pointed to the brace ;—

"For that it sav'd me, keep it ; in like manner
The which the gods protect thee from I will defend thee."

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it,
Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though, calld, they gave't again :

I thank thee for't : my shipwreck now is
Since I have here my father's gift in'state.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir ?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this sword
For it was sometime target to a king ;

I know it by this mark. He lov'd me
And, for his sake, I wish the having of it.

And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's
court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman ;
And if that ever my low fortunes better
I'll pay your bounties ; till then, good friends, debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for this sword ?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borrow'd from it.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it ; and let me give thee good on't !

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend, we that made up this garment through rough seams of the water ; there are condolements, certain vails. I hope, you thrive, you'll remember from whence you came.

Per. Believe it, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel.
And, spite of all the rupture of the sea,
This jewel holds his building on my arm.

thy value will I mount myself on my career, whose delightful steps make the gazer joy to see him tread.
 My friend, I yet am unprovided of all these.
 We'll sure provide: thou shalt have all given to make thee a pair; and I'll then to the court myself.
 Then honour be but a goal to my will,
 which I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.

[Exeunt.]

[Enter—Pentapolis. A Platform leading to the Lute. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, &c.]

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Are the knights ready to begin the tilt? They are, my liege: [triumph!]
 your coming to present themselves.
 Return them, we are ready: and our

daughter,
 of whose birth these triumphs are,
 like beauty's child, whom nature gat to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.]

It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express

 commendations great, whose merit's less.
 'Tis fit it should be so: for princes are which heaven makes like to itself:

lose their glory if neglected,
 their renown, if not respected.

your honour, daughter, to explain
 of each knight in his device.

Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

A knight; he passes over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Who is the first that doth prefer him-
 [father;]

A knight of Sparta, my renowned the device he bears upon his shield

Luc tua vita mihi,
 He loves you well that holds his life of [The second Knight passes over.

Thaisa. A prince that presents himself!

A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
 the device he bears upon his shield

And crown you king of this day's happiness.
 Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by

merit. [yours:]
 Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
 In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,

To make some good, but others to exceed;
 And you're her labour'd scholar.—Come, queen

o' the feast, [place:]
 (For, daughter, so you are,) here take your

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.
 Knights. We are honour'd much by good

Simonides.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
 Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes over.

Thaisa. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried:
 The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd!
 Thaisa. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is

 A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
 The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral;
 From the dejected state wherein he is,

He hopes by you his fortune yet may flourish.
 1 Lord. He had need mean better, than his outward show

 Can any way speak in his just command;
 For, by his rusty outside, he appears

To have practis'd more the whipstock, than the lance. [comes]

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he
 To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour
 Until this day, to scour it in the dust. [rust]

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us
 The outward habit by the inward man. [scan]

But stay, the knights are coming: we'll with-
 Into the gallery. [draw]

[Exeunt. Great shouts, and all cry,
 "The mean knight!"]

SCENE III.—Pentapolis. A Hall of State; a Banquet prepared.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Marshal, Ladies, Lords, Attendants, and the Knights from tilting.

Sim. Knights,
 To say you're welcome were superfluous.

To place upon the volume of your deeds,
 As in a title-page, your worth in arms,

Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
 Since every worth in show commends itself.

Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
 You are princes, and my guests.

Thaisa. But you, my knight and guest;
 To whom this wreath of victory I give,

And crown you king of this day's happiness.
 Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by

merit. [yours:]
 Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
 In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,

To make some good, but others to exceed;
 And you're her labour'd scholar.—Come, queen

o' the feast, [place:]
 (For, daughter, so you are,) here take your

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.
 Knights. We are honour'd much by good

Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days: honour we love,

For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

Marshall. Sir, yond's your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen,

That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes, Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sir, sit.

Per. [Aside.] By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,

These cates resist me, she but thought upon.

Thai. [Aside.] By Juno, that is queen Of marriage, all the viands that I eat

Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat.

Sure, he's a gallant gentleman. [men;]

Sim. [Aside.] He's but a country gentleman. He has done no more than other knights have done;

He has broken a staff, or so; so, let it pass.

Thai. [Aside.] To me he seems like diamond to glass. [father's picture,

Per. [Aside.] Yon king's to me like to my Which tells me in that glory once he was;

Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,

And he the sun, for them to reverence;

None that beheld him, but, like lesser lights,

Did veil their crowns to his supremacy: [night,

Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the

The which bath fire in darkness, none in light:

Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;

For he's their parent, and he is their grave,

And gives them what he will, not what they

Sim. What, are you merry, knights? [crave.

1 Knight. Who can be other, in this royal presence! [brim,

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the

(As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips.)

We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while;

Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,

As if the entertainment in our court

Had not a show might countervail his worth.

Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it

To me, my father?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter:

Princes, in this, should live like gods above,

Who freely give to every one that comes

To honour them:

And princes, not doing so, are like to gnats,

Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.

Therefore, to make his entrance more sweet,

Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine

to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me

Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:

He may my proffer take for an offence,

Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he will not please me better.

Sim. And further tell him, we desire to know

Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.

Thai. The king my father, sir, has desired

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto

life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and know

Thai. And, further, he desires to know

you,

Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre (my name, Tyre)

My education been in arts and arms.

Who, looking for adventures in the world,

Was by the rough seas rest of ships and men

And, after shipwreck, driven upon the shore

Thai. He thanks your grace; name yours.

A gentleman of Tyre,

Who only by misfortune of the seas

Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune.

And will awake him from his melancholy.

Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles.

And waste the time which looks for other men.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd.

Will very well become a soldier's dance.

I will not have excuse, with saying, that

Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads;

Since they love men in arms, as well as we.

[The Knights dance.]

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well paid.

Come, sir;

Here is a lady that wants breathing too.

And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre

Are excellent in making ladies trip;

And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are

my lord.

Sim. O, that's as much, as you would

Of your fair courtesy.

[The Knights and Ladies dance.]

Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done

[To Pericles.] But you the best—

lights, to conduct

These knights unto their several lodgings.

We have given order to be next our own

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk

And that's the mark I know you love all

Therefore, each one betake him to his rest

To-morrow all for speeding do their best.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes; know this of me

Antiochus from incest liv'd not free

For which, the most high gods, not free

To withhold the vengeance that they

Due to this heinous capital offence,

Even in the height and pride of all his

He was seated, and his daughter with a heart of inestimable value, [him, from heaven came, and shrivell'd up her body, even to loathing: for they so much, that those eyes ador'd them ere their fall,
 and their hand should give them burial.
 'Twas very strange.
 And yet but just; for though his was great, his greatness was no heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.
 Enter three Lords.
 See, not a man, in private conference with respect with him but he.
 He shall no longer grieve without
 [it.
 And cur'd be he that will not second Follow me, then. Lord Helicane,
 With me! and welcome. Happy day,
 [the top,
 Know, that our griefs are risen to
 at length they overflow their banks.
 Your griefs! for what! wrong not the prince you love. [Helicane:
 Wrong not yourself, then, noble
 the prince do live, let us salute him, know what ground's made happy by his
 death.
 The world he live, we'll seek him out;
 he were he rest, we'll find him there;
 he would he lives to govern us,
 gives cause to mourn his funeral,
 us to our free election.
 Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our censure:
 knowing this kingdom is without a head,—
 all buildings left without a roof,
 to ruin,—your noble self, [reign, know at how to rule and how to submit unto,—our sovereign.
 Live, noble Helicane! [rages:
 For honour's cause, forbear your sull-
 your wish, I leap into the seas,
 a month longer, let me entreat you
 the absence of your king;
 which time exult'd, he not return,
 with aged patience bear your yoke.
 I cannot win you to this love,
 like nobles, like noble subjects,
 your search spend your adventurous
 you find, and win unto return, [worth;
 To wisdom he's a fool that will not our travels will endeavour it.
 Then you love us, we you, and we'll
 hands;
 thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Simonides, reading a letter: the Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides. [You know,
 Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let
 That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
 A married life.
 Her reason to herself is only known,
 Which yet from her by no means can I get.
 2 Knight. May we not get access to her,
 my lord? [strictly tied her Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so
 To her chamber, that it is impossible, [lively so
 One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's
 This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
 And on her virgin honour will not break it.
 3 Knight. Though loth to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt.
 Sim. So, [letter:
 They're well despatch'd; now to my daughter's
 She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger
 knight,
 Or never more to view nor day nor light.
 'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with
 mine;
 I like that well: nay, how absolute she's in't,
 Not minding whether I dislike or no!
 Well, I commend her choice;
 And will no longer have it be delay'd.
 Soft! here he comes; I must dissemble it.
 Enter Pericles.
 Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
 Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholden
 to you,
 For your sweet music this last night: I do Protest, my ears were never better fed
 With such delightful pleasing harmony.
 Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
 Not my desert.
 Sim. Sir, you are music's master.
 Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good
 Sim. Let me ask you one thing. [lord.
 What do you think of my daughter, sir?
 Per. As of a most virtuous princess.
 Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
 Per. As a fair day in summer, wondrous fair. [500;
 Sim. Sir, my daughter thinks very well of Ay, so well, that you must be her master,
 And she will be your scholar: therefore look to it.
 Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.
 Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing
 Per. [Aside.] What's here? [else.
 A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre!
 'Tis the king's subtilty, to have my life.
 [Aloud.] O, seek not to entrap me, gracious
 lord,
 A stranger and distressed gentleman,
 That never aim'd so high, to love your daughter,
 But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and A villain. [thou art

Per. By the gods, I have not;
Never did thought of mine levy offences;
Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love, or your dis-
Sim. Traitor, thou liest. [pleasure.

Per. Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat,—unless it be the
That calls me traitor, I return the lie. [king,—

Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No!
Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.
Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you.

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,
Whotakes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?
[Aside.] I am glad on't, with all my heart.

[To her.] I'll tame you; I'll bring you in sub-
Will you, not having my consent, [jection.
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger! [Aside.] who, for aught I
May be (nor can I think the contrary) [know,
As great in blood as I myself. [frame

[Aloud.] Therefore, hear you, mistress; either
Your will to mine,—and you, sir, hear you,
Kither be ral'd by me, or I will make you—
Man and wife:—nay, come, your hands
And lips must seal it too;

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy,
And for a further grief,—God give you joy!—
What, are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters
Sim. What, are you both agreed? [it.

Both. Yes, if I please your majesty. [you wed;
Sim. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see Them, with what haste you can, get you to bed.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Now sleep yslak'd hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat, with eyes of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
As the blither for their drouth.

Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded.—Be attent;
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly whee!
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

Enter, from one side, Pericles and Simonides with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter; he shows it to Simonides; the Lords kneel to Pericles. Then, enter Thaisa with child, and by choridai: Simonides shows his daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart with Pericles and their Attendants. Then, exeunt Simonides and the rest.

Gow. By many a dear and painful pang,
Of Pericles the careful search,
By the four opposing coignes,
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse, and sail, and high expense,
Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre (Fame answering the most strange enquiry)
To the court of king Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenor thus:
Antiochus and his daughter dead;
The men of Tyre on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none.
The mutiny he there hastes to suppress;
Says to them, if king Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yraved the regions round,
And every one with claps and sound
"Our heir apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?"

Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre;
His queen, with child, makes her dole
(Which who shall cross?) along to go.
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow: half the flood Hath their keel cut: but fortune's hand
Varies again; the grisly north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and, well-a-wee,
Does fall in travail with her fear.
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey;
Which might not what by and is told
In your imagination hold.
This stage the ship, upon whom death
The sea-lost Pericles appears to speak.

SCENE I.—On a Ship at Sea.

Enter Pericles.

Thou God of this great vast, rebuke these surges, [that hast
wash both heaven and hell; and thou,
the winds command, bind them in brass, and call'd them from the deep! O, still desp'ning, dreadful thunders; gently [Lychorida, sulphurous flashes!—O, how,
my queen!—Thou storm, venomously spit all thyself!—The seaman's whisper in the ears of death, [whistle
—Lychorida!—Lucius, O, patroness, and midwife gentle that cry by night, convey thy deity our dancing boat; makeswift the pangs queen's travails!—

Enter Lychorida, with an infant.
Here is a thing too young for such a
it had conceit, would die, as I [place, to do: take in your arms this piece dead queen.

How, how, Lychorida!
Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm,
all that is left living of your queen,
your daughter: for the sake of it,
and take comfort.

O you gods!
do you make us love your goodly gifts,
and match them straight away! We, here
follow,
not what we give, and therein may concur with you.

Patience, good sir,
for this charge.
Now, mild may be thy life!
more blust'rous birth had never babe:
and gentle thy conditions! for the rudest welcom'd to this world, what was prince's child. Happy what as chiding a nativity, [follows!
water, earth, and heaven can make, these from the womb: even at the first,

is more than can thy portage quit,
all thou canst find here.—Now, the good their best eyes upon it! [gods
Enter two Sailors.

What courage, sir? God save you!
Courage enough: I do not fear the done to me the worst. Yet for the love

the poor infant, this fresh new sea-farer,
it would be quiet.

Black the bolins there; thou wilt blow, and split thyself.

But sea-room,—an the brine and allow kiss the moon,—I care not.

Sir, your queen must overboard!

the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight. [queen!

Per. As you think meet.—Most wretched
Lyc. Here she lies, sir. [dear;

Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my
No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time

To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;

Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the belching whale

And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells.—O Lychorida,

Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Alexander

Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say

A priestly farewell to her; suddenly, woman.
[Exit Lychorida.

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitumed ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast
2 Sail. We are near Tharsus. [is this?

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, [reach it!
Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou

2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.
Per. O, make for Tharsus.

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrrus: there I'll leave it

At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mar-
I'll bring the body presently. [iner:
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter Cerimon, a Servant, and some persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men:
It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night
Till now I ne'er endur'd. [as this,

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you
return;

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature,
That can recover him.—[To Phil.] Give this to

And tell me how it works. [the apothecary, [Exit all except Cerimon.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow, sir,
2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,
Why do you stir so early?

1 Gent. Sir,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,

Shook, as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend,

And all to topple; pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so
Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well.
1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich fire about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

Tis most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches; careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have

Together with my practice made familiar
To me and to my aid, the blest infusions
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And can speak of the disturbances that nature
Works, and of her cures; which doth give me
A more content in course of true delight,
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death. [pours forth]

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus
Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd;
And not your knowledge, your personal pain,
but even

Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never—Enter two Servants, with a chest.

1 Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

1 Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest:

'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon't.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. What'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight:

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharged with gold,
'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitum'd!

Did the sea cast it up?

1 Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open;
Soft!—it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So,—up with O you most potent gods! what's here! a corpse!

1 Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasur'd

With full bags of spices! A passport too!—
[Unfolds a scroll.]

Apollo, perfect me in the characters!

[Reads.]

"Here I give to understand,
(If'er this coffin drive a land.)

1, King Pericles, have lost
This queen, worth all our mundane care;

Who finds her, give her burying;
She was the daughter of a king;

Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe! This chamber'd

night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to night For look, how fresh she looks! They were rough,

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet—
[Exit 2 Servants.]

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again

The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard of an Egyptian
That had nine hours lien dead;

Who was by good appliance recovered.
Re-enter 2 Servants, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloth—
The rough and woful music that we have Cause it to sound, beseech you.

The vial once more;—how thou stir'st, block!

The music there!—I pray you, give her
Gentlemen,

This queen will live: nature awakes; a woman Breathes out of her: she hath not been trans'd

Above five hours. See, how she gives Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens
Through you increase our wonder, and

Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! [Leads her up.]
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels,
Which Pericles hath lost,

Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water

Do appear, to make the world twice
live,

And make us weep to hear your tale,
creature,

Rare as you seem to be!

Thai. O dear Diana! What Where am I! Where's my lord? What is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle souls,
Lend me your hands; to the next chamber

Get linen: now this matter must be kept
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come,
And Esculapius guide us!

[Exit, carrying Thaisa.]

III.—Thaisa. A Room in Cleon's
House.

Pericles, Cleon, Dionysa, and Lychorida, with Marina.

Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be your mouth are expir'd, and Tyrus

from my heart all thankfulness! the gods
the rest upon you!

your shafts of fortune, though they hurt me mortally,

case full wanderingly on us.

O your sweet queen!

brought her hither,

mead mine eyes!

We cannot but obey
the son she lies in, yet the end

My gentle babe Marina (whom, born at sea, I have nam'd so) here your charity withal, and leave her of your care; beseeching you princely training, that she may as she is born.

Fear not, my lord, but think that fed my country with your

the people's prayers still fall upon your child be thought on. If neglec-make me vile, the common body,

reliev'd, would force me to my duty;

that my nature need a spur,
revenge it upon me and mine,

and of generation!

I believe you;

your vows. Till she be married, Diana, whom we honour, all shall this hair of mine remain,

I show it in't. So I take my leave.

make me blessed in your care up my child.

I have one myself,
not be more dear to my respect,

Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Will bring your grace e'en to the edge of the shore;

are won up to the mask'd Neptune, and winds of heaven.

I will embrace
Come, dearest madam.—O, no
tears:

your little mistress, on whose grace depend hereafter. Come, my lord.

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

IV.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's
House.

Enter Cerimon and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,

Lay with you in your coffer: which are
At your command. Know you the character!

Thai. It is my lord's.

That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember,
Even on my yearning time; but whether there

Deliver'd,—by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say. But since king Pericles,

My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,

And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you
Diana's temple is not distant far, [speaks]

Where you may bide until your date expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine

Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift

small. [Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare
For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carry winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.
Dionyza doth appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.]

SCENE I.—Tharsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter Dionyza and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't:

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing if the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy bosom, Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose. [creature,

Leon. I'll do't; but yet she is a goodly

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her.

Here she comes weeping for her only mistress'
Thou art resolv'd? [death.

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flowers: the yellows,
The purple violets, and marigolds, [blues,
Shall, as a carpet, hang upon thy grave,
While summer days do last. Ah me! poor maid,

Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirling me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! Why do you keep alone? [not

How chance my daughter is not with you? Do Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's
chang'd

With this unprofitable woe! Come,
Give me your flowers; ere the sea mar them.
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach.
Come,

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;

I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;

I love the king your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day

Expect him here: when he shall come, and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken

No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you,
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for old
I can go home alone.

Mar.

But yet I have no desire to it.
Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.
Walk half-an-hour, Leonine, at least Remember what I have said.

Leon.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, but while;

Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood.
What! I must have care of you.

Mar.

Is this wind westerly that blows? South-west
Leon. When I was born, the wind was north-west.
Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never
fear,
But cried "good seamen!" to the sailors,
His kindly hands, hauling ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endure'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon.

Mar. When I was born:
Never were waves nor wind more violent
And from the ladder-tackle washes of
A canvas-climber. "Ha!" says one, "say so,"
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stem to stern: the boatswain whistles,
The master calls, and tumbles their craft.

Leon.

Mar. Come, say your prayers.
What more can I say?

Mar.

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it: pray; but be not tedious.
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am
To do my work with haste.

Mar.

Leon. To satisfy my lady.
Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
Now, as I can remember, by my truth,
I never did her hurt in all my life:
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature: believe me, I
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly.
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her peace?
My life imply her any danger?

Leon.

Is not to reason of the dead, but do it.
Mar. You will not do't for all the world's hope.

Mar.

You are well-favour'd, and your looks
You have a gentle heart. I saw you you caught hurt in parting two that fought :

 and sooth, it show'd well in you : do so now ;
 why seeks my life ; come you between,
 and save poor me, the weaker.

I am sworn,

will despatch.
Enter Pirates, whilst Marina is struggling.
 Pirate. Hold, villain ! Leonine runs away.
 Pirate. A prize ! a prize !
 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come,
 I have her aboard suddenly.

Exit Pirates with Marina.

SCENE II.—The Same.
Enter Leonine.

These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes ;
 they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go :
 I have no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's thrown into the sea. But I'll see further ;
 they will but please themselves upon her aboard. If she remain, [her, they have ravish'd must by me be slain.

Exit.

SCENE III.—Mitylene. A Room in a
Brothel.
Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boul.

Boul. Search the market narrowly ; Mitylena is full of gallants. We lost too much this morn'g by being too wenchless.
 We were never so much out of our wits as we have but poor three, and they do no more than they can do : and they continual action are even as good as dead. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, and we pay for them. If there be not a dozen to be used in every trade, we shall not prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true : 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards,—as, I think, I have
 done.

Boul. Ay, to eleven ; and brought them again. But shall I search the market ?
 Bawd. What else, man ? The stuff we have is wholly sodden.

Boul. Thou say'st true ; they're too underdone, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little boy. Ay, she quickly pooped him ; she has him roast-meat for worms.—But I'll go search the market.

Bawd. Three or four thousand chequins will give over.

Boul. Why to give over, I pray you ! is it to get when we are old ?

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity ; nor the commodity wages not with the danger : therefore, if in our youths
 we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatchel. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods,
 will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we ! ay, and better too ;
 we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade ; it's no calling.—But here comes Boul.

Re-enter Boul, with Marina and the Pirates.

Boul. [To Mar.] Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin !

1 Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.

Boul. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see : if you like her, so ; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul, has she any qualities ?

Boul. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes : there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul ?

Boul. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in ; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

Exit Pander and Pirates.

Bawd. Boul, take you the marks of her,— the colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity ; and cry, "He that will give most, shall have her first." Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boul. Performance shall follow. Exit.

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow !

He should have struck, not spoke ; or that these pirates,

(Not enough barbarous,) had not o'erboard
 For to seek my mother ! [thrown me]

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one !

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part

Mar. I accuse them not. [in you.]

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault,

To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashion : you shall fare well ;
 you shall have the difference of all complexions. What, do you stop your ears ?

Mar. Are you a woman ?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman ?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Baud. Marry, whip them, goading: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Baud. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up.—Boul's returned.

Re-enter Boul.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boul. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Baud. And I pray thee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boul. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Baud. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boul. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers 't the hams?

Baud. Who, monsieur Veroles?

Boul. Ay: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Baud. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boul. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Baud. Pray you, come hither a while. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do, makes pity in your lovers: seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boul. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Baud. Thou say'st true, I faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boul. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— Baud. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boul. I may so.

Baud. Who should deny it?—Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boul. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Baud. Boul, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; thoufore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boul. I warrant you, mistress, thunders shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my going out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined.

Baud. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

as an enterprise of kindness,
 I'll leave it to your sole daughter.

Heavens forgive it! [hears,]
 And as for Pericles, [hears,]
 I should be say! We wept after her as you yet we mourn: her monument hath it, and her epitaph her golden characters express her praise to her, and care in us at some expense 'tis done.

Thou art like the harpy,
 that with thine eagle's face,
 and thine eagle's talons,
 You are like one, that superstitiously is near to the gods, that winter kills the

But I know you'll do as I advise. [Exit.
 Enter Gower, before the monument of Marina and Tharsus.

Thustime we waste, and longest leagues
 make short;

As in eagles; have, and wish but for't:
 (to take your imagination)

As you being pardon'd, we commit no crime in our language, in each several clime, our scenes seem to live. I do beseech

you
 Marina of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach the stages of our story. Pericles [you, again thwarting the wayward seas,

 landed on by many a lord and knight,
 his daughter, all his life's delight.

Pericles, whom Helicanns late found in time to great and high estate, to govern. Bear you it in mind,

Helicanns goes along behind. [brought sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have king to Tharsus, (think his pilot thought;
 with his storeage shall your thoughts grow

black his daughter home, who first is gone.
 shadows and shadows see them move a while;
 as far unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb Show.
 Enter from one side, Pericles with his train;
 Cleon and Dionysa from the other. Cleon shows Pericles the tomb of Marina;
 several Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion weeps. Exit the rest.

How belief may suffer by foul show!
 Pericles' passion stands for true old woe;
 Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, with shot through, and biggest tears or shower'd.

Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears to wash his face, nor cut his hairs:
 puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He hears trumpet, which his mortal vessel tears, yet he rides it out. Now, please you, wit
 what is for Marina writ

[mont.
 Reads the inscription on Marina's monu-

"The fairest, sweetest, and best, lies here,
 Who wither'd in her spring of years.
 She was of Tyros, the king's daughter,
 On whom foul death hath made this slaughter:
 Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
 Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the
 earth:

Therefore the earth, fearing to be d'erfland'd,
 Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd: Wherefore she does (and swears she'll never slint)

Make raging battery upon shores of flint."
 No visor does become black villainy,
 So well as soft and tender flattery.

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
 And bear his courses to be order'd
 By lady Fortune; while our scene must play
 His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,
 In her unholy service. Patience, then,
 And think you now are all in Mitylen. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like!

2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1 Gent. But to have divinity preached there!
 did you ever dream of such a thing!

2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses: shall we go hear the vestals sing?

1 Gent. I'll do anything now that is virtuous;
 but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.

[Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and unto a whole generation. We must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her flimmet, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll dishurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests. [ness for me]

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sick-Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox.—Here comes the lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter Lysimachus.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou would'st say. [well enough.]

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say,

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, pr'ythee?

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest. [Exit.]

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never plucked yet, I can assure you.—

Re-enter Boult with Marina.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you do.

Bawd. [To Marina, apart.] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet: you must take some pains to work her to your manage.—Come, we will leave his honour and her together.—Go thy ways.

[Re-enter Bawd, Pander, and Boult.]

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name it, but I shall Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession? Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier, too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sells seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgment good. That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came, Diseases have been sold dearer than physic.

O, that the gods

Would set me free from this unhallow'd place. Though they did change me to the meanest kind

That dies 't the purer air!

Lys. I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well; no dream'dst thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold

for thee:

Perséver in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The good gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughtful. That I came with no ill intent; for to me

The very doors and windows savour villainy. Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue.

I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.

Hold, here's more gold for thee. A curse upon him, die he like a thief,

That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost From me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter Boult.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one place for me.

Lys. Arsaunt, thou damned door-keeper! But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink, and overwhelm you. Away! [Exit.]

Boult. Now's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish which is not worth a breakfast in the chequer country under the cops, shall undo a household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead sold off, or the common hangman shall execute it.

Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the lord Lyonesse.

Bawd. O, abominable!

She makes our profession as it were the face of the gods.
 Mar. Hang her up for ever!
 The nobleman would have dealt with a nobleman, and she sent him away as a snow-ball; saying his prayers, too.
 Boul. Take her away; use her at thy crack the glass of her virginity, and the rest malleable.

An if she were a thornier piece of than she is, she shall be ploughed.
 Hark, hark, ye gods!

She conjures away with her!
 she had never come within my doors!
 Mar. Hang you!—she's born to undo us.
 you not go the way of women-kind?
 Come, mistress; come your ways with and says, my dish of chastity with rose-
 [Exit.]

Whither wilt thou have me? [me.]
 To take from you the jewel you hold

Pythee, tell me one thing first. [be!] Come now, your one thing.

What canst thou wish thine enemy to Why, I could wish him to be my or rather, my mistress.

Neither of these are so bad as thou art,
 they do better thee in their command.

at a place, for which the pained'st would not in reputation change:
 art the damn'd door-keeper to every other comes enquiring for his Tib; choleric fisting of each rogue thy ear thy food is such been beloh'd an by infected lungs.

 What would you have me do? go to would you? where a man may serve years for the loss of a leg, and have not enough in the end to buy him a wooden

Empty
 Do anything but this thou doest.
 spectacles, or common sewers, of filth;

of indure to the common hangman:
 of these ways are yet better than this;

What thou professest, a baboon, could he
 speak,
 own a name too dear.—O, that the could safely deliver me from this place!—

 here's gold for thee.

thy master would gain by me,
 claim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,

other virtues, which I'll keep from
 boast;

I will undertake all these to teach.
 does not but this populous city will
 and many scholars.

Mar. But can you teach all this you speak [of!] Prove that I cannot, take me home and prostitute me to the basest groom that frequent your house.

Doubt. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women.

Boul. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Ezeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel escapes, and chances

Into an honest house, our story says.

She sings like one immortal, and she dances

As goddess-like to her admir'd lays;

Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her neck

composes [Cherry,

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or

That even her art sisters the natural roses;

Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry:

That pupils lacks she none of noble race,

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain

She gives the curs'd bawd. Here we her place;

And to her father turn our thoughts again,

Where we left him, on the sea. We there him

lost:

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd

Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd

God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies, [whence

His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;

And to him in his barge with fervour lies.

In your supposing once more put your sight

Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark;

Where what is done in action, more, if might,

Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—On board Pericles' Ship, off Mity-

lene. A Pavillion on deck, with a curtain before it; Pericles within it, reclining on a couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge.

Tyr. Sail. [To Mit. Sail.] Where's the lord

Helicanus? he can resolve you.

O, here he is.—

Enter Helicanus.

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,

And in it is Lysimachus, the governor,

Who craves to come aboard. What is your

will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentle-

men.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

2 Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen,

There is some of worth would come aboard:
Greet him fairly.

[I pray,

Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.

*Enter, from thence, Lysimachus and Lords;
the Gentlemen, and the two Sailors.*

Tyr. Sail. Sir,

This is the man that can, in aught you would,
Resolve you.

[you

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.

Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,

Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,

I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie

Hel. Sir, [before,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;

A man, who for this three months hath not
To any one, nor taken sustenance,

But to prorogue his grief.

[spoken

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemper-

Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat;

But the main grief springs from the loss

Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him?

Hel. You may;

But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him.—[Pericles discovered.] This was a goodly person,

Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve
Hail, royal sir!

[you

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

I Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I Would win some words of him. [durst wager,

Lys. 'Tis well bethought,

She, questionless, with her sweet harmony,
And other choice attractions, would allure,

And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd:

She is all happy as the fair'st of all,

And, with her fellow-maids, is now upon

The leafy shelter that abuts against

The island's side.
[Whispers first Lord, who puts off in the barge.

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit,

[kindness

That bears recovery's name. But since your
We have stretched thus far, let us beseech you

further,

That for our gold we may provision have,

Wherein we are not destitute for want,

But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, sir, a courtesy,

Which, if we should deny, the most just gods
For every graft would send a caterpillar,
And so afflict our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you:

But see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, first Lord, with Marina, and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is Welcome, fair one!

The lady that I sent for. Wellcome, fair one!

Is't not a goodly presence? She's a gallant lady.

Hel. Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assur'd

Came of a gentle kind, and noble stock,
I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely

well.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in beauty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:

If that thy prosperous and artificial loss
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,

Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,

Provided

That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous!

[Marina stops

Lys. Mark'd be your music!

Mar. No, nor look'd on as

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear—

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a countess

speaks,

My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a trial
Might equal yours, if both were justly

Though wayward fortune did malign me

My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings

But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties

Bound me in servitude.—[Aside.] I will do it
But there is something glows upon my cheek
And whispers in mine ear, "Go not

Per. My fortunes—parentage—root parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that—What country
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any, sir,
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
 My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;
 stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
 silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
 and as richly; in pace another Juno;
 she staves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,
 more she gives them speech.—Where do you live?
Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the place I may discern the place.
 [deck] Where were you bred?
 How achy'd you these endowments, which I make more rich to owe!

Per. Should I tell my history, should seem like lies, disdain'd in the report:
 I'll die, speak; [ing.] cannot come from thee; for thou look'st as justice, and thou seem'st a palace in the crown'd truth to dwell in: I'll believe thee, make my senses credit thy relation points that seem impossible; for thou look'st as thou not say, when I did push thee back, speak when I perceiv'd thee,) that thou good descending?
 [can't] So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury, that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine, were open'd. Some such thing and said no more but what my thoughts warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story; I'll consider'd prove the thousandth part of thy endurance, thou art a man, and I have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look like patience, gazing on kings' graves, and smiling out of act. What were thy friends? Kind virgin? Thy name, my most account, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me.
Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O, I am mock'd, and thou by some incens'd god sent hither to make the world to laugh at me.
 [Where I'll cease.] Patience, good sir,

Nay, I'll be patient. A little know'st how thou dost startle me, to call thyself Marina.

The name given me by one that had some power, father, and a king.
 How! a king's daughter?

Mar. You said you would believe me; But, not to be a troubler of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood? Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy? Motion?—Well; speak on. Where were you And wherefore call'd Marina. [thorn?]

Mar. Call'd Marina, For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! what mother? Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king; Who died the minute I was born, As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O, stop there a little! [Aside.] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep

Did mock sad fools withal: this cannot be: My daughter's buried.—[Aloud.] Well;—where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story, And never interrupt you.

Mar. You'll scarce believe me; 'twere best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:—How came you in these parts? where were you bred? [leave me;]

Mar. The king, my father, did in Tharsus Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife, Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,

A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me; Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir, whither Will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be,

You think me an impostor: no, good faith; I am the daughter to king Pericles, In good king Pericles' bed.

Per. Ho, Helicanus! Hel. Calls my lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor, Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst, What this maid is, or what is like to be; That thus hath made me weep!

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene, Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell Her parentage; being demanded that, She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd sir; Give me a gash, put me to present pain; Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me, O'bear the shores of my mortality; [hither, And drown me with their sweetness. O, come Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget; Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus, And found at sea again!—O Helicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud

As thunder threatens us: this is Marina.—What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,

For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre; but tell me now
My drownd'd queen's name, as in the rest you said [doms,
Thou hast been godlike perfect, the heir of king-
And another life to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter,
than

To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art
my child.

Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus;
She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have
been,

By savage Cleon; she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge
She is thy very princess. Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my behold-
ing. [music!—

O heavens, bless my girl!—But, hark! what Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.—But, what

Hel. My lord, I hear none. [music!
Per. None!

The music of the spheres!—list, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him
way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. Music! My lord, I hear—
Per. Most heavenly music!

It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine eyes; let me rest. [He sleeps.

Lys. A pillow for his head.
So leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends,

If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.

[Exeunt all except Pericles.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Pericles on the deck asleep; Diana appearing to him in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; hie thee
thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice.
There, when my maiden priests are met to-
Before the people all, [gether,

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife;
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call,
And give them repetition to the life.

Or perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe;
Do it, and happy; by my silver bow
Awake, and tell thy dream. [Diana disappears.

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess
I will obey thee.—Helicanus!

Enter Helicanus, Lysimachus, and Marina.
Hel. Sir!

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to The inhospitable Cleon; but I am [Marina

For other service first: toward Ephesus
Turn our blown sails; ere long I'll tell thee why.

[To Lys.] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your
And give you gold for such provision [Marina

As our intents will need?
Lys. Sir, with all my heart; and when you
I have another suit. [come ashore,

Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems
You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arm.
Per. Come, my Marina. [Erewhile

Enter Gower, before the Temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sails are almost run;
More a little, and then dumb.

This, as my last boon, give me,
(For such kindness must relieve me.)

That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows

What minstrelsy, and pretty ditty,
The regent made in Mitylin,

To greet the king. So he arriv'd,
That he is promis'd to be wif'd

To fair Marina; but in no wise
Till he had done his sacrifice,

As Dian bade; whereto being bound,
The interim, pray you, all counten.

In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as they're will'd.

At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king, and all his company.

That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful boon. [Exit

SCENE III.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the altar, as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; Cerimon and other inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter Pericles, with his train; Lysimachus Helicanus, Marina, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the king of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed

At Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa.
At sea in childhood died she, but brought forth

A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess, Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus

Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years

He sought to murder; but her better star Brought her to Mitylene; 'gainst whose Riding, her fortunes brought the maid alone

us,

Where, by her own most clear remembrance
she

Made known herself my daughter.

Per. Voice and favour!
Thais. you are—O royal Pericles!

Per. What means the woman? [She faints.
Thais. Noble sir, she dies!
Per. You have told Diana's altar true,
 This is your wife.

Thais. Reverend appearer, no;
 I over her o'erboard with these very arms.
Per. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Thais. 'Tis most certain.
 Look to the lady;—O, she's but o'er-come one blustering morn this lady was [joy'd.
 upon this shore. I op'd the coffin;
 and there rich jewels; recover'd her, and in Diana's temple. [plac'd her

Per. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house.

Thais. I invite you.—Look, Thaisa is re-turn'd. O, let me look! [cover'd.

Per. To be none of mine, my sanctity will not bend to licentious ear, to see it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,
 you not Pericles? Like him you speak, and him you are: did you not name a tempest, and death? [peet,

Thais. The voice of dead Thaisa!
Per. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead, and immortal Dian! [drown'd.

Thais. Now I know you better.
 We with tears parted Pentapolis,
 and you, my father, gave you such a ring.

Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness

Thais. My past miseries sport: you shall do me the touching of her lips I may [well, and no more be seen. O, come, be buried around time within these arms.

Per. My heart
 has gone into my mother's bosom.

Thais. [Kneels to Thaisa.
 Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Per. You were at the sea, and call'd Marina, and you was yielded there.

Thais. Bless, and mine own!
Per. Hall, madam, and my queen!

Thais. I know you not,
 I know you not, when I did see you from Tyre,

Per. You remember an ancient substitute:
 I have nam'd him oft.

Thais. 'Twas Helicanus, then,
 still confirmation;

Per. Still confirmation; embrace him, dear Thaisa: this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found;
 How possibly preserv'd; and whom to thank,
 Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thais. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man, Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can
 From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,
 The gods can have no mortal officer
 More like a god than you. Will you deliver How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord.
 Beseech you, first go with me to my house;
 Where shall be shown you all was found with
 her;

How she came placed here in the temple;
 No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian, bless thee for thy vision! I
 Will offer night oblations to thee. Thaisa,
 This prince, the fair betrothed of your daughter,
 Shall marry her at Pentapolis.—And now, [ter,
 This ornament,

Makes me look dismal, will I clip to form;
 And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
 To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thais. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
 My father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there,
 my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
 Will in that kingdom spend our following days;
 Our son and daughter shall in Tyros reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,
 To hear the rest untold:—Sir, lead the way.

[Exeunt.
Enter Gower.

Gow. In Antiochus, and his daughter, you have heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward;
 In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen (Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen)

Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,
 Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.
 In Helicanus may you well descry

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
 In reverend Cerimon there well appears
 The worth that learn'd charity aye wears:

For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
 Had spread their curs'd deed, and honour'd
 name

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
 That him and his they in his palace burn;
 The gods for murder seem'd so content

To punish them, although not done, but meant,
 So on your patience evermore attending,
 New joy wait on you! Here our play hath ending.

POEMS.

VENUS AND ADONIS.

TO THE
RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY, MARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I KNOW not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your Lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention proved deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your Honour's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

1.
EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn:
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

2.
"Thrice fairer than myself," thus she began,
"The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

3.
"Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed,
A thousand honey-secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent
hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses;

4.
"And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather furnish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety,
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport."

5.
With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force,
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

6.
Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy:
She red and hot, as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

7.
The studded bridle on a ragged hough
Nimble she fastens; (O how quick is love!)
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove;
Backward she push'd him, as she would he thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

8.
So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips;
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips:
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
"If thou wilt chide, thy lip shall never open."

9.
He burns with bashful shame: she with her
tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheek;
Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith, she is immodest, blames her;
What follows more, she murders with a look.

10.
Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bones,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone;

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.

11.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey, Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

12.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

13.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

14.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

15.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

16.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

17.

And where she ends, she doth anew begin.
To content, but never to obey,
And he lies, and breatheth in her face;
And smells on the steam, as on a prey,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

18.

"Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and
dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest;
Scorning his churlish drum, and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

19.

"Thus he that overrul'd, I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain:
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength
obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight!

20.

"Touch but my lips with those fair lips of
thine,
(Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,)
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine:—
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy
head;
Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies:
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in
eyes?

21.

"Art thou asham'd to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink, so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

22.

"The tender spring upon thy tempting lip Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted;
Make use of time, let not advantage slip:
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime,
Rot and consume themselves in little time.

23.

"Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
I'll-nurture'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'er-worn, despised, rheumatic and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice, Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

24.

"Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow:
Mine eyes are grey, and bright, and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burn-
ing;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

25.

"Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

26.

"Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through From morn till night, even where I list to sport
me:

Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

27.

"Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.

Narcissus, so, himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

28.

"Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth
beauty;

Thou wast begot,—to get it is thy duty.

29.

"Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed?
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live, when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive."

30.

By this, the love-sick queen began to sweat;
For, where they lay, the shadow had forsook
them,
And Titan, 'tired in the midday heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

31.

And now Adonis with a lazy sprite,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His lowering brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours, when they blot the sky, Souring his cheeks, cries, "Fie, no more of
love!

The sun doth burn my face; I must remove."

32.

"Ah me," quoth Venus, "young, and so
unkind!
What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone!

I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun;
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hair;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

33.

"The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And lo, I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm;
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me:
And were I not immortal, life were done,
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

34.

"Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel, Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain re-lenteth?
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel What 'tis to love? how want of love tor-menteth?

O had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died
unkind.

35.

"What am I that thou shouldst contemn me?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor
kiss?
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twice."

36.

"Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image, dull and dead,
Statue, contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred;
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own desire."

37.

This said, impatience chokes her pleading
tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a passion
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her
wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause,
And now she weeps, and now she swears
speak,

And now her sobs do her intendments break."

38.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then she
hard,
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a dove,
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be
gone,

She locks her lily fingers, one in one.

39.

"Fondling," she saith, "since I have known thee here,
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,

to a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
 Where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
 These on my lips; and if those hills be dry,
 Run lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

40.
 Within this limit is relief enough,
 Bottom-grass, and high delightful plain,
 Rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
 To shelter thee from tempest and from rain;
 Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
 No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand lack."

41.
 Adonis smiles, as in disdain,
 To each cheek appears a pretty dimple;
 He made those hollows, if himself were slain,
 Might be buried in a tomb so simple;
 Knowing well, if there he came to lie,
 Why there Love liv'd, and there he could not die.

42.
 These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
 Whence their mouths to swallow Vennus' liking,
 Had before, how doth she now for wits!
 Striking!
 Your queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
 To give a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

43.
 Which way shall she turn? what shall she
 say!
 Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
 Time is spent, her object will away,
 From her twining arms doth urge releasing:
 "Fie!"—she cries—"some favour—some remorse!"—
 As he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

44.
 From forth a copse that neighbours by,
 A maddening jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
 A trampling courser doth espy,
 From forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud;
 The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a
 tree,
 Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

45.
 Suddenly he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
 And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
 The beating earth with his hard hoof he
 wounds,
 His hollow womb resounds like heaven's [thunder]
 The iron bit he crushes 'tween his teeth,
 Controlling what he was controlled with,

46.
 His prick'd; his braided hanging mane
 His compass'd crest now stand on end;
 He nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
 From a furnace, vapours doth he send;
 His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
 Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

47.
 Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
 With gentle majesty and modest pride;
 Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
 As who should say, Lo! thus my strength is
 And this I do to captivate the eye [tried]
 Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

48.
 What reckoneth he his rider's angry stir,
 His flattering Holla, or his Stand, I say!
 What cares he now for curb, or pricking spur!
 For rich caparisons, or trapping gay!
 He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
 Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

49.
 Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
 In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
 His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
 As if the dead the living should exceed;
 So did this horse excel a common one,
 In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

50.
 Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long, [wide]
 Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril
 High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong, [hide]
 Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender Look what a horse should have, he did not lack,
 Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

51.
 Sometimes he scuds far off, and there he stares;
 Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
 To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
 And wher' he run, or fly, they know not whether; [sings]
 For thro' his mane and tail the high wind Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

52.
 He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
 She answers him, as if she knew his mind;
 Being proud, as females are, to see him woo
 her, [kind]
 She puts on outward strangeness, seems un-spurns at his love, and scorns the heat he feels, [heels]
 Beating his kind embracements with her

53.
 Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
 He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
 Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
 He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.
 His love, perceiving how he is enrag'd,
 Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

54.
 His testy master goeth about to take him;
 When, lo, the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
 Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
 With her the horse, and left Adonis there:

As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them, (them.)
 Outstripping crows that strive to over-fly

55.

All swollen with chasing, down Adonis sits,
 Hanning his boisterous and unruly beast;
 And now the happy season once more fits,
 That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest;
 For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong,
 When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

56.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
 Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
 So of concealed sorrow may be said;
 Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
 But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
 The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

57.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
 Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
 And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
 Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind;
 Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
 For all askance he holds her in his eye.

58.

O, what a sight it was, wistly to view
 How she came stealing to the wayward boy!
 To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
 How white and red each other did destroy!
 But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
 It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

59.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
 And like a lowly lover down she kneels:
 With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
 Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
 His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's
 print,
 As apt as new-fallen snow takes any dint.

60.

O what a war of looks was then between them!
 Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing;
 His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them; [wooing;
 Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the
 And all this dumb play had his acts made plain [rain.
 With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did

61.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
 A lily prison'd in a gail of snow,
 Or ivory in an alabaster band;
 So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
 This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling, [bidding,
 Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-

62.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
 "O fairest mover on this mortal round,

Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
 My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my
 wound;
 For one sweet look thy help I would assure Though nothing but my body's bone would cure thee."

63.

"Give me my hand," saith he, "why dost thou feel it?" [should have it;
 "Give me my heart," saith she, "and thou
 O, give it me, lest thy hand heart do steel it;
 And being steel'd, soft sighs can never graven;
 Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
 Because Adonis' heart hath made mine
 hard."

64.

"For shame," he cries, "let go, and let me go;
 My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
 And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so;
 I pray you hence, and leave me here alone;
 For all my mind, my thought, my busy care
 Is how to get my palfrey from the mare."

65.

Thus she replies: "Thy palfrey, as he should Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire;
 Affection is a coal that must be coof'd;
 Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire:
 The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath
 none;
 Therefore no marvel though thy horse be 66.

"How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
 Servilely master'd with a leathern rein!
 But when he saw his love, his youth's fair foe,
 He held such petty bondage in disdain:
 Throwing the base thong from his bridle,
 crest,
 Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his loins."

67.

"Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
 Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
 But, when his glutton eye no full hath fed,
 His other agents aim at like delight!
 Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
 To touch the fire, the weather being cold?"

68.

"Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boys,
 And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
 To take advantage on presented joy;
 Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach
 thee:

69.

O learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
 And once made perfect, never lost again."

70.

"I know not love," quoth he, "nor will I
 know it,
 Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it;
 'Tis much to borrow, and I will not lend it;
 My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
 For I have heard it is a life in death,
 That laughs, and weeps, and all that breath."

70.

Wears a garment shapeless and unshap'd;
As the bud before one leaf put forth;
Young things be any jot diminish'd,
Whether in their prime, prove nothing
[young,
The col that's back'd and burden'd being
With his pride, and never waxeth strong.

71.

Hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
Leave this idle theme, this bootless chat;
Your siege from my unyielding heart;
Alarms it will not ope the gate:
[battery;
Where a heart is hard, they make no
[battery.]

72.

Canst thou talk?" quoth she, "hast
thou a tongue?
Shouldst thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
[mermaid's voice hath done me double
wrong;
My load before, now press'd with bear-[sounding,
Alarms discord, heavenly tune harsh
And deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

73.

No eyes, but ears, my ears would love toward beauty and invisible;
I deaf, thy outward parts would move part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor
see,
Should I be in love, by touching thee.

74.

That the sense of feeling were bereft me,
I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
Nothing but the very smell were left me,
Would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the still story of thy face exelling [breath perfume'd, that breedeth love by smelling.

75.

O, what banquet wert thou to the taste,
And person and feeder of the other four!
They not wish the feast might ever last,
[Suspicion double-lock the door;
And jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast."

76.

More the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
[red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
[to the seaman, tempest to the field,
[woe unto the birds,
[foul slaws to herdsmen and to herds.

77.

Presage advis'dly she marketh:
The wind is hush'd before it raineth,

Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth,
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words began.

78.

And at his look she flaily falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth:
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;

79.

All amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning Love did wittily prevent:
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

80.

Hewrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

81.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the world relieveth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye;

82.

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brows' repine;
But hers, which through the crystal tears
gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

83.

"O where am I?" quoth she; "in earth or
heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire!
What hour is this? or morn, or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy."

84.

"O thou didst kill me:—kill me once again:
Thy eyes shrowd tutor, that hard heart of thine, Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain, [mine;
That they have murder'd this poor heart of
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their
queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen."

114.
 "And when thou hast on foot the purblind
 hare, [bles,
 Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his trou-
 How he outruns the winds, and with what care
 He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles;
 The many mazes through the which he goes,
 Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

115.
 "Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
 To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
 And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
 To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;
 And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer:
 Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

116.
 "For there his smell with others being minggled, [doubt,
 The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled

With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
 Then do they spend their mouths; Echo replies,
 As if another chase were in the skies.

117.
 "By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
 Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
 To harken if his foes pursue him still:
 Anon their loud alarms he doth hear;
 And now his grief may be compar'd well
 To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

118.
 "Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled
 wretch
 Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
 Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
 Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur
 For misery is trodden on by many, [stay:
 And being low, never reliev'd by any.

119.
 "Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
 Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
 To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
 Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
 Applying this to that, and so to so;
 For love can comment upon every woe.

120.
 "Where did I leave?"—"No matter where,"
 quoth he;

"Leave me, and then the story aptly ends;
 The night is spent."—"Why, what of that?"
 quoth she.

"I am," quoth he, "expected of my friends;
 And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall."
 "In night," quoth she, "desire sees best of all.

121.
 "But if thou fall, O then imagine this,
 The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,

And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
 Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips

Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
 Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

122.
 "Now of this dark night I perceive the reason,
 Cynthia for shame obscures her silver sheen,
 Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
 For stealing moulds from heaven that were
 divine;

Wherein she fram'd thee, in high heaven's despite,
 To shame the sun by day, and her by night

123.
 "And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies
 To cross the curious workmanship of Nature,
 To mingle beauty with infirmities,
 And pure perfection with impure defeature;
 Making it subject to the tyranny
 Of mad mischances and much misery;

124.
 "As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
 Life-poisoning postilions, and frenzies weak,
 The marrow-eating sickness, whose attack
 Disorder breeds by heating of the blood;
 Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and dam'd
 despair,

Swear Nature's death for framing thee so fair 125.

 "And not the least of all these maladies
 But in one minute's sight brings beauty dead;
 Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities
 Whereat the impartial gazer late did stand;
 Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd, and dross
 As mountain snow melts with the midday sun 126.

 "Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
 Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving maids,
 That on the earth would breed a scarcity
 And barren dearth of daughters and of maids,
 Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
 Dries up his oil to lend the world his light 127.

 "What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
 Seeming to bury that posterity
 Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,

If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity
 If so, the world will hold thee Judas
 Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain

128.
 "So in thyself thyself art made away;
 A mischief worse than civil home-bred wars,
 Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves
 slay,
 Or butcher-sire, that reaves his son of his Foul cankerous rust the hidden frets,
 But gold that's put to use more gold begets

129.

"quoth Adon, "you will fall again
 your knee overhauled theme:
 I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
 all in vain you strive against the stream;
 by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul mine, {worse,
 Your treatise makes me like you worse and 130.

Love have lent you twenty thousand
 tongues,
 and every tongue more moving than your own,
 making like the wanton mermaid's songs,
 to mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
 I know, my heart stands armed in mine
 ear,
 And will not let a false sound enter there;

131.

Let the deceiving harmony should run
 the quiet closure of my breast;
 And then my little heart were quite undone,
 to my bedchamber to be hur'd of rest,
 I say, no; my heart longs not to groan,
 but soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

132.

And have you urg'd that I cannot reprove!
 my path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
 I do not love, but your device in love,
 my leads embraces unto every stranger.
 You do it for increase: O strange excuse,
 your reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!

133.

And not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
 and on earth usurp'd his name;
 whose simple semblance he hath fed with fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
 which the hot tyrant stains, and soon becomes pillars do the tender leaves. [groaves,

134.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
 but Love's effect is tempest after sun;
 when gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
 and winter comes ere summer half be done;
 Love sunsets not, Love like a glutton dies:
 Love is all truth, Love full of forged lies.

135.

I could tell, but more I dare not say;
 before, in sadness, now I will away:
 Love is full of shame, my heart of teen;
 Love's ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
 have turn themselves for having so offended."

136.

Love's breaketh from the sweet embrace his arms which bound him to her [space;
 Love through the dark laund runs upon her back deeply distress'd, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
 and glides he to the night from Venus' eye;

137.

Which after him she darts as one on shore
 Gazing upon a late embark'd friend,
 Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
 Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
 So did the merciless and pitchy night
 Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

138.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
 Or 'stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
 Their light blown out in some mistrustful
 wood;
 Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
 Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

139.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans, [troubled,
 That all the neighbour-caves, as seeming
 Make verbal repetition of her moans;
 Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
 "Ah me!" she cries, and twenty times,
 "woe, woe!"
 And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

140.

She, marking them, begins a wailing note,
 And sings extemp'rally a woful ditty:
 How love makes young men thrall, and old men dote;
 How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
 Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
 And still the choir of echoes answer so.

141.

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
 For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short: [light
 If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, do-
 In such like circumstance, with such like sport;
 Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
 End without audience, and are never done.

142.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
 But idle sounds, resembling parasites;
 Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every Soothing the humour of fantastic wits [scall,
 She says, "'Tis so:" they answer all, "'Tis
 so;"
 And would say after her, if she said, "No."

143.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
 From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
 And wakes the morning, from whose silver
 The sun ariseth in his majesty; [breast
 Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
 That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

144.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow,
 "O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
 From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
 The beautiful influence that makes him bright,

There lives a son, that suck'd an earthly mother, [other.]
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to 145.

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love:
She hearkens for his hounds, and for his horn;
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

146.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn, hid in some brake.

147.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreath'd up in fatal folds, just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:

Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spright confounds.

148.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curst, [first,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him

149.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcoms by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part;
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth
yield,
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

150.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy;
Till, cheering up her senses sore dismay'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid:
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no
more:— [boar;
And with that word she spied the hunted 151.

Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither: [further,
This way she runs, and now she will no
But back retires to rate the boar for murder.

152.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting: [ing
In hand with all things, nought at all effect-

153.

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary catiff for his master;
And there another licking of his wound, [her;
'Gainst venom'd gores the only sovereign plaster:
And here she meets another sadly howling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

154.

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise, Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him, [below,
Clapping their poud tails to the ground,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding at they go.

155.

Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz'd,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies:
So she at these sad signs draws up her
breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

156.

"Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lewy, Hateful divorce of love" (thus chides she Death), [doth thou mean
"Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm,
To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?"

157.

"If he be dead,—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it;
O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false dart Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's
heart.

158.

"Hast thou but bid beware, thou hast spoke,
And, hearing him, thy power had lost his power;
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke:
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower:
Love's golden arrow at him should have
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead."

159.

"Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?"

Thy hast then cast into eternal sleeping
Thy eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Where her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour."

160.

How overcome, as one full of despair,
She wail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd;
But through the floodgates breaks the silver
rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

161.

How her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Thy eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Like crystals, where they view'd each other's
sorrow,
How, that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
And like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet
again.

162.

How variable passions through her constant woe,
How striving who should best become her grief;
How entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
None is best: then join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

163.

How far off she hears some huntsman holla:
How a song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well:
How dire imagination she did follow
The sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And batters her it is Adonis' voice.

164.

How want her tears began to turn their tide,
How prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
How sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should
pass,
How wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

165.

How hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
How woe and woe are both of them extremes;
How despair and hope make thee ridiculous;
How one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
How likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

166.

How she unweaves the web that she hath
wrought;
How Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
How she adds honours to his hateful name;
How she cleaves him king of graves, and grave
for kings,
How imperious supreme of all mortal things.

35

167.

"No, no," quoth she, "sweet Death, I did but Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear, [jest;
Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
Then, gentle shadow (truth I must confess),
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease."

168.

"Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my
tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee
wrong;
I did but act, he's author of my slander: [yet,
Grief hath two tongues; and never woman Could rule them both, without ten women's wit."

169.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate;
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs; and stories
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

170.

"O Jove," quoth she, "how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind,
To wail his death who lives, and must not die,
Till mutual overthrow of mortals kind!
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again."

171.

"Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear,
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;
Trifles, unwitness'd with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves."
Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

172.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view, [drew:
Like stars asham'd of day, themselves with-173.

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backwards in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again;
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

174.

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplex'd in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

175.

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation
shakes, [found:
Which with cold terror doth men's minds con-
This mutiny each part doth so surprise,
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;

176.

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light Upon this wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank: whose wonted lily white With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd;
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or But stole his blood, and seem'd with him to bleed.

177.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth;
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head;
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow!
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

178.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly, [three;
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be;
His face seems twain, each several limb is For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

179.

"My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet," quoth she, "behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

180.

"Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou [lost!
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou
Of things long since, or anything ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;

But true sweet beauty liv'd and died with him.

181.

"Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you; and the wind doth kiss you:

But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

182.

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;

The wind would blow it off, and, being gone,
Play with his locks: then would Adonis weep;
And straight, in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

183.

"To see his face the lion walk'd along [him
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear
To recreate himself, when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame, and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

184.

"When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills;
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries, and ripe red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with 185.

"But this foul, grim, and urchin-snooled bear,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then I know [so
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him

186.

"'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain:
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there:
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the tusk in his soft groin.

187.

"Had I been tooth'd like him, I must conclude,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bleed
My youth with his,—the more am I accurs'd.
With this she falleth in the place she trod,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

188.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woful words she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies.

189.

Two glasses where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late exult'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
"Wonder of time," quoth she, "this is my spite,

That, you being dead, the day should yet be 190.

"Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend;
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end;

settled equally, but high or low; [was.
 All love's pleasure shall not match his 191.

shall be sickle, false, and full of fraud;
 and be blasted in a breathing while;
 bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd reveals that shall the truest sight beguile:
 the strongest body shall it make most weak,
 make the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

192.

shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
 making decrepit age to tread the measures;
 wearing ruffian shall it keep in quiet, down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
 shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
 make the young old, the old become a child.

193.

shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
 shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
 shall be merciful, and too severe,
 most deceiving when it seems most just;
 reverse it shall be where it shows most toward,
 for fear to valour, courage to the coward.

194.

shall be cause of war and dire events,
 and set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
 and servile to all discontents,
 to any combustion matter is to fire:
 in his prime death doth my love destroy,
 say that love best, their loves shall not enjoy."

195.

love, the boy that by her side lay kill'd was melted like a vapour from her sight;

And in his blood, that on the ground lay spill'd,
 A purple flower sprung up, check'd with white, [blood
 Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the
 Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

196.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to Comparing it to her Adonis' breath; [smell,
 And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
 Since he himself is reft from her by death:
 She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

197.

"Poor flower," quoth she, "this was thy father's guise,
 (Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,)
 For every little grief to wet his eyes:
 To grow unto himself was his desire,
 And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
 To wither in my breast as in his blood.

198.

"Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
 Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
 Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest, [night:
 My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and
 There shall not be one minute in an hour, Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower."

199.

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
 And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
 Their mistress, mounted, through the empty
 skies
 In her light chariot quickly is convey'd; Holding their course to Paphos, where their
 queen
 Means to immure herself, and not be seen.

LUCRECE.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

My love I dedicate to your Lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours;
 what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your Lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with happiness.

Your Lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

LUCRECE TARQUINIUS, (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus,) after he had caused his father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper, every one commended the virtue of his own wife; among whom, Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, the other ladies finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece's beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily despatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, and another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and the whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and, bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the tyranny of the king: wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation, the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

1.

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, looks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist.
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

2.

Haply that name of "chaste" unhappily set
This hateful edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

3.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him
In the possession of his beauteous mate; [sent Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

4.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
An, if possessed, as soon decay'd and done,
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun!
An expir'd date, cancell'd are well begun:
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

5.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;

What needeth, then, apology be made,
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thievish ears, because it is his own?

6.

Perchance his boast of Lucrece's sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king;
For by our ears our hearts oft taunted be!
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
His high-pitched thoughts, that meane man should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiour want.

7.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those:
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old!

8.

When at Collatium this false lord arriv'd,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue arriv'd
Which of them both should underprop her
fame:
When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush to When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that's er with silver white.

9.

But beauty, in that white intitled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that field:

virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
 virtue gave the golden age, to gild silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
 teaching them thus to use it in the fight,— when shame assail'd, the red should fence
 the white.

10.

heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
 beauty by beauty's red, and virtue's white:
 neither's colour was the other queen,
 moving from world's minority their right:
 their ambition makes them still to fight;
 the sovereignty of either being so great,
 that oft they interchange each other's seat.

11.

gent war of lilies and of roses,
 Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
 pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
 there, betwixt them both it should be
 kill'd,
 toward captive vanquish'd doth yield to those two armies, that would let him go,
 rather than triumph in so false a foe.

12.

she thinks he that her husband's shallow
 tongue
 the rugged prodigal that prais'd her so) that high task hath done her beauty wrong, that far exceeds his barren skill to show:
 therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe,
 Tarquin answers with surmise,
 the silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

13.

the earthly saint, ador'd by this devil,
 she suspecteth the false worshipper;
 she sustain'd thoughts do seldom dream on she never him'd no secret bushes fear: [evil;
 she securely gives good cheer and reverent welcome to her princely guest,
 whose inward ill no outward harm express'd;

14.

that he colour'd with his high estate,
 filling base sin in plaits of majesty;
 that nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
 which, having all, all could not satisfy;
 but, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store, that, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for
 more.

15.

she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
 could pick no meaning from their parling looks,
 nor read the subtle shining secreties set in the glassy margents of such books:
 she touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no
 hooks;
 nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
 more than his eyes were open'd to the light.

16.

stories to her ears her husband's fame,
 when in the fields of fruitful Italy;

And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
 Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
 With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
 Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express,
 And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

17.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
 He makes excuses for his being there:
 No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
 Doth yet in this fair welkin once appear;
 Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
 Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
 And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

18.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
 Intending weariness with heavy spright;
 For, after supper, long he questioned
 With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
 Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth
 fight;
 And every one to rest themselves betake,
 Save thieves and cares, and troubled minds that wake.

19.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
 The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
 Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
 Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:
 Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
 And when great treasure is the meed pro-
 pos'd, [suppos'd.
 Though death be adjunct, there's no death

20.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
 That what they have not, that which they possess,
 They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
 And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
 Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
 Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
 That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain.

21.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
 With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
 And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
 That one for all, or all for one we gage;
 As life for honour in fell battles' rage:
 Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth
 doth cost
 The death of all, and all together lost.

22.

So that, in venturing ill, we leave to be
 The things we are, for that which we expect;
 And this ambitious foul infirmity,
 In having much, torments us with defect
 Of that we have: so then we do neglect
 The thing we have; and, all for want of wit,
 Make something nothing, by augmenting it.

23.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust;
And for himself himself he must forsake:
Then where is truth if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?

24.

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had closed up mortal eyes:
No comfortable star did lend his light, fories;
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs: pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

25.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm;
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other fearfully
harm;
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

26.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly;
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:
"As from this cold flint I enforce'd this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire."

27.

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then looking scornfully, he doth despise
His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

28.

"Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it
not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine:
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

29.

"O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O insidious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then my disgrace is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face,

30.

"Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eyesore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no shame
To wish that I their father had not been.

31.

"What win I, if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy,
Who buys a minute's mirth to wait a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be stricken down!

32.

"If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame!

33.

"O what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a
deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail
Mine eyes forego their light, my false
bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But, coward-like, with trembling terror

34.

"Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush, so betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife:
As in revenge or quittance of such strife;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor 35.

"Shameful it is;—ay, if the fact be known!
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving!
I'll beg her love;—but she is not her own!
The worst is but denial, and reproving!
My will is strong, past reason's weak remotion,
Which in a moment doth confound and
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.

36.

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
And with good thoughts makes disputation Urging the worse sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed
That what is vile shows like a virtuous

37.

Quoth he, "She took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,

Receiv'some hard news from the warlike band,
 How her beloved Collatinus lies,
 How her fear did make her colour rise |
 And red as roses that on lawn we lay,
 Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

38.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
 Bore it to tremble with her royal fear !
 Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
 Till her husband's welfare she did hear ;
 Which smil'd with so sweet a cheer,
 That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
 Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

39.

Why hunt I, then, for colour or excuses |
 When colours are dumb when beauty pleadeth ;
 When witches have remorse in poor abuses ;
 And thieves not in the heart that shadows
 Drowneth :

Attention is my captain, and he leadeth ;
 And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
 The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd.

40.

Childish fear, avaunt ! debating, die !
 Not and reason, wait on wrinkled age !
 My heart shall never countermine mine eye :
 Calm and deep regard beseech the sage ;
 My parts youth, and bends these from the stage ;
 Where my pilot is, beauty my prize ; [lies !]
 When who fears sinking where such treasure

41.

Scorn'd grown by weeds, so heedful fear
 Almost chok'd by narsisted lust.
 My heart shall with open listening ear,
 Of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust ;
 Which, as servitors to the unjust,
 Cross him with their opposite persuasion,
 That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

42.

In his thought her heavenly image sits,
 And in the nefarious sent sits Collatine :
 His eye which looks on her confounds his wits ;
 His eye which him beholds, as more divine,
 Into a view so false will not incline ;
 Out with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
 Which, once corrupted, takes the worsen
 part ;

43.

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
 Which scatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
 Scatter'd up his lust, as minutes fill up hours :
 As for their captain, so their pride doth grow,
 Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
 My reprobate desire thus madly led,
 The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece's bed.

44.

As he looks between her chamber and his will,
 As he looks on by him enforc'd, retires his ward ;
 As they open, they all rate his ill,
 Which drives the creeping thief to some regard :
 The threshold grates the door to have him
 heard ;

Night-wand'ring weasels shriek to see him
 there ;
 They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

45.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
 Through little vents and crannies of the place
 The wind wars with his torch, to make him
 And blows the smoke of it into his face, [stay,
 Extinguishing his conduct in this case ;
 But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,

Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch :

46.

And being lighted, by the light he spies
 Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks :
 He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
 And gripping it, the needl his finger pricks ;
 As who should say, this glove to wanton tricks
 Is not inn'd ; return again in haste ; Thou see'st our mistress's ornaments are chaste.

47.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay [him ;
 He in the worst sense construes their denial :
 The doors, the wind, the glove that did delay
 He takes for accidental things of trial ; [him,
 Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
 Who with a lingering stay his course doth let,
 Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

48.

"So, so," quoth he, "these lets attend the time,
 Like little frosts that sometime threat the
 To add a more rejoicing to the prime, [spring,
 And give the uncap'd birds more cause to sing.
 Pain pays the income of each precious thing ;
 Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and sands, [sands."
 The merchant fears, ere rich at home he 49.

Now is he come unto the chamber door,
 That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
 Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
 Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.

So from himself impiety hath wrought,
 That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
 As if the heaven should countenance his sin.

50.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
 Having solicited the eternal power, [fair,
 That his foul thoughts might compass his fair
 And they would stand auspicious to the hour Even there he starts :—quoth he, "I must de-
 flower ;

The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact
 How can they, then, assist me in the act !

51.

"Then love and fortune be my gods, my guide !
 My will is back'd with resolution : [tried ;
 Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be
 The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution ;
 Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.

The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight."

52.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide:
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:

Thus treason works ere traitors be espied,
Who sees the lurking serpent, steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting. [thing,

53.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head:
By their high treason is his heart misled;

Which gives the watchword to his hand full soon,

To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

54.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,

That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed; [enclosed.

But blind they are, and keep themselves

55.

O, had they in that darksome prison died!
Then had they seen the period of their ill;
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
In his clear bed might have reposed still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

56.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss:
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entombed is:
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

57.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet! whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay, [light,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

58.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her
breath;

O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,

As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death and death in life.

59.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew
And him by oath they truly honoured.
These worlds in Targuin new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

60.

What could he see but mightily he not'd!
What did he note but strongly he desir'd!
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he fir'd.
With more than admiration he admir'd
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

61.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Targuin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified; [slept Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her
His eye, which late this mutiny restrain'd,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins;

62.

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage
fighting,
Obdurate vassals, fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears, nor mother's groans respecting,

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting;
Anon his beating heart, alarm striking,
Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking.

63.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commands the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity, [stand Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,

Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

64.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries;
She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up
eyes,

Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimur'd and cool'd.

65.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waken'd
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly vision
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking
What terror 'tis! but she, in worse case taking
From sleep disturb'd, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

66.

app'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
 To a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
 dares not look; yet, winking, there appears quick shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
 shadows are the weak brain's forgeries;
 Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights, [sighs]
 In darkness daunts them with more dreadful

67.

hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
 To ram, to batter such an ivory wall!
 To feel her heart (poor citizen!) distress'd,
 To send itself to death, rise up and fall,
 To hug her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
 This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity,
 To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.

68.

Yet, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
 To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
 To o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
 To mark the signs of this rash alarm to know,
 To see by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
 To see with vehement prayers urge still Under what colour he commits this ill.

69.

He replies: "The colour in thy face
 That even for anger makes the lily pale,
 And the red rose blush at her own disgrace)
 Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale:
 Under that colour am I come to scale
 Thy never-conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
 For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

70.

Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
 Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night,
 Where thou with patience must my will abide;
 I will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
 That I to conquer sought with all my might;
 But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
 By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

71.

What crosses my attempt will bring;
 I know what thorns the growing rose defends;
 I think the honey guarded with a sting:
 All this, beforehand, counsel comprehends;
 My will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends;
 Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
 And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

72.

What have debated, even in my soul, [breed;
 What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall Do nothing can affection's course control,
 Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
 I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
 Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
 Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy."

73.

Thus said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
 Which, like a falcon towering in the skies.

Coucheth the fowl below with his wing's shade,
 Whose crooked beak threatens if he mount he
 So under his insulting falchion lies [dies:
 Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

74.

[joy thee:

"Lucrece," quoth he, "this night I must en-
 If thou deny, then force must work my way,
 For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee:
 That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll
 slay,

To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
 And in thy dead arms do I mean to place
 him,
 Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace

75.

"So thy surviving husband shall remain
 The scornful mark of every open eye;
 Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
 Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
 And thou, the author of their obloquy,
 Shall have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
 And sung by children in succeeding times.

76.

"But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
 The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
 A little harm, done to a great good end,
 For lawful policy remains enacted.
 The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
 In a pure compound; being so applied,
 His venom in effect is purified.

77.

[sake,

"Then, for thy husband and thy children's Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
 The shame that from them no device can take,
 The blemish that will never be forgot;
 Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot:
 For marks descried in men's nativity
 Are nature's faults, not their own infamy."

78.

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye
 He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause;
 While she, the picture of pure piety,
 Like a white hind under the grype's sharp claws,
 Pleads in a wilderness, where are no laws,
 To the rough beast that knows no gentle
 Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite, bright,

79.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threaten
 In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
 From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get, [biding,
 Which blows these pitchy vapours from their Hindering their present fall by this dividing;

So his unhallow'd haste her words delays,
 And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

80.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
 While in his holdfast foot the weak mouse
 panteth:

Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart
granteth

No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining.

81.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.

She puts the period often from his place,
And 'midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

82.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's
oath,

By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

83.

Quoth she, "Reward not hospitality [tended;
With such black payment as thou hast pre-
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim, before thy shoot be ended:
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

84.

"My husband is thy friend,—for his sake spare
me;
Thyself art mighty,—for thine own sake leave
Myself a weakling,—do not, then, ensnare me;
Thou look'st not like deceit,—do not deceive
me.
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be mov'd with my tears, my sighs, my groans.

85.

"All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolv'd, to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

86.

"In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee:
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely
name.
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a
king;
For kings like gods should govern everything.

87.

"How will thy shame be seed'd in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a
O be remember'd, no outrageous thing [thing!
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

88.

"This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear:
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love;
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do [learn!

89.

"And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall
Must be in thee read lectures of such shame!
Wilt thou be glass, wherein it shall discern Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-lived laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

90.

"Hast thou command? by him that gave it
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may
say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the [thee!

91.

"Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they discern
This guilt would seem death-worthy in (a)
brother.
O, how are they wrapp'd in with infamy,
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes!

92.

"To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal
Not to seducing lust, thy rash relief;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal:
Let him return, and flatterer thoughts retire!
His true respect will 'prison false desires,
And wipe the dim mist from thy doating eyes,
That thou shalt see thy state, and pity
mine."

93.

"Have done," quoth he: "my uncontented Turns not, but swells the higher by this look
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires
And with the wind in greater fury beat about
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh haste
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste."

94.
"Thou art," quoth she, "a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo, there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
To seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
All these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hears'd,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispers'd.

95.
"So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave;
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide:
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

96.
"So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state"— [hear thee:
No more," quoth he; "by heaven, I will not Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate, [thee;
And of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear
That done, despitefully I mean to hear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom."

97.
"He said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
He folds up in blind concealing night,
The most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries; [troll'd
Till with her own white fleece her voice con-founds her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

98.
"He wears the nightly linen that she wears,
He hears her piteous clamours in her head;
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

99.
"But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again:
This forced league doth force a further strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
This hot desire converts to cold disdain:
Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
And Lust, the thief, far poorer that before.

100.
"Look, as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Thirst for tender smell or speedy flight,
Like slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight;
So selfish-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

101.
"O, deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.

102.
"And then with lank and lean discolour'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case:
The flesh being proud, desire doth fight with
grace,
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

103.
"So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chas'd;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,—
That through the length of times he stands
disgrac'd:
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defac'd;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

104.
"She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall
To living death, and pain perpetual:
Which in her prescience she controll'd still,
But her foresight could not forestall their will.

105.
"Even in this thought through the dark night
he stealth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will, despite of cure, remain;
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burden of a guilty mind.

106.
"He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence;
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there:
He scowls, and hates himself for his offence;
She, desperate, with her nails her flesh doth
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear; [fear;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd leath'd delight.

107.
"He thence departs a heavy convertite;
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light;
She prays she never may behold the day;
"For day," quoth she, "night's scapes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloak offences with a cunning brow."

108.

"They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold ;

And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold ;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel."

109.

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind,
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find

Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief, thus breathes she forth her
Against the unseen secrecy of night : [spite 110.

"O comfort-killing night, image of hell !
Dim register and notary of shame !
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell !
Vast sin-concealing chaos ! nurse of blame !
Blind muffled bawd ! dark harbour for de-
fame !

Grim cave of death ! whispering conspirator,
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher !

111.

"O hateful, vaporous, and foggy night !
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time ;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Kuit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

112.

"With rotten damps ravish the morning air ;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make
The life of purity, the supreme fair, [sick
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick ;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smother'd
light

May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

113.

"Were Tarquin night, (as he is but night's child,)
The silver-shining queen he would disdain ;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through night's black bosom should not peep
again :
So should I have copartners in my pain ;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

114.

"Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms, and hang their heads with
mine,
To mask their brows, and hide their infamy ;
But I alone alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,

Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with
groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

115.

"O night, thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous day behold that line
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak Immediately lies martyr'd with disgrace !
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are
made,
May likewise be sepulcher'd in thy shade !

116.

"Make me not object to the tell-tale day !
The light will show character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow :
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

117.

"The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name !
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame ;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my doleful
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wrong'd me, I Collatine.

118.

"Let my good name, that senseless reputation
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted ;
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted,
That is as clear from this attain of mine,
As I, ere this, was pure to Collatine.

119.

"O unseen shame ! invisible disgrace !
O unfelt sore ! crest-wounding, private scar !
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatine's face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot-alar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas, how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows !

120.

"If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft.
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee

121.

"Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wreck,—
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him ;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him ;
Besides, of weariness he did complain blow,
And talk'd of virtue :—O unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil !

Why should the worm intrude the maiden
bad?
The hatch'd cuckoo hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or leads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or truant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that coffers up his gold plagued with cramps, and gout, and painful fits;
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
Not like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits:
Having no other pleasure of his gain,
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

So then he hath it, when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their curst-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish'd for turn to loathed
sours,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unuly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious
flowers;
The sadder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
And what virtue breeds, iniquity devours:
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Who kills his life, or else his quality.

Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
Thou that exult'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Thou plott'st the sin, thou point'st the season:
Thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason; [him,
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy
him,
Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd:
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth:
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal, and displacest land:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false chief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste;
Thy violent vanities can never last.

How comes it, then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee!

When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's
friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end? [chain'd!
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd!
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out
for thee;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds:
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps!
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds:
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's
rages, [pages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their

When truth and virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
He gratis comes; and thou art well appay'd
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by
thee.

Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation;
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift,
Guilty of incest, that abomination;
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's
snare;
Thou nursest all, and murderest all that are:
O, hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time!
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose,
Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,

To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers ;

133.

"To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books, and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel ;

137.

[daughter,
'To show the beldam daughters of her
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild,
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguil'd ;
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful
crops, [drops,
And waste huge stones with little water-138.

"Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends !
One poor retiring minute in an age [friends,
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends :
O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour
come back, [wrack !
I could prevent this storm, and shun thy 139.

"Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his
Devise extremes beyond extremity, [flight :
To make him curse this cursed criminal night :
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright ;
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

140.

"Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans ;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances,
To make him moan ; let pity not his moans :
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones ; [ness,
And let mild women to him lose their mild-
Wildner to him than tigers in their wildness.

141.

"Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave :
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

142.

"Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort ;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport ;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wait the abusing of his time.

143.

"O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad, Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st at this ill !

At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill !
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill :

For who so base would such an office have
As slanderous death's - man to so base a slave !

144.

"The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate :
The mightier man, the mightier in the thing,
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate ;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state,
The moon being clouded presently is mis'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

145.

"The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away ;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay. [stay !
The state upon his silver down will stay. [glorious Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious Gnats are innated wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

146.

"Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools !
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators !
Busy yourselves in skill-contenting schools !
Debate where leisure serves with dull debates,
To trembling clients be you mediators :
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

147.

"In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night !
In vain I cavil with my infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despise :
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good,
Is to let forth my foul defiled blood.

148.

"Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree !
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame ;
For if I die, my honour lives in thee ;
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame.
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afraid to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.

149.

This sad, from her betumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death ;
But this no slaughter-house no tool in parteth,
To make more vent for passage of her breath ;
Which, thronging through her lips, so vainly
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes
Or that which from discharged cannon issues

150.

In vain, "quothe she, "I live, and seek in vain
A happy mean to end a hapless life,
Which by Tarquin's falshion to be slain,
For the selfsame purpose seek a knife:
When I fear'd, I was a loyal wife:
Am I now:—O no, that cannot be:
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

151.

That is gone for which I sought to live,
Therefore now I need not fear to die,
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A change of fame to slander's livery:
My life to living infamy:
For helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To turn the guiltless casket where it lay!

152.

Well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not
Be nam'd taste of violated troth; [know
I will not wrong thy true affection so,
To make thee with an infring'd oath;
Thy bastard graft shall never come to growth;
He shall not boast, who did thy stock pollute,
That thou art dotting father of his fruit.

153.

How shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Though with his companions at thy state:
How shall he know thy interest was not bought
With gold, but stolen from forth thy gate.
I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

154.

I will not poison thee with my attaint
To tell my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
I will not ground of sin I will not paint,
The truth of this false night's abuses:
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like
A mountain-spring that feels a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure Tale."

155.

Thy lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow-sad gait descended
To lonely hell; when, lo, the blushing morrow
Made light to all fair eyes that light will Narrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

156.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits
weeping:
To whom she sobbing speaks: "O eye of eyes,
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave
thy peeping: [sleeping:
Back with thy tickling beams eyes that are Blind not my forehead with thy piercing light, [night:
For day hath nought to do what's done by 157.

Thus cavs she with everything she sees;
True grief is fond and testy as a child, [agrees:
Who wayward once, his mood with nought
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractised swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

158.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews;
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometime her grief is dumb, and hath no
words;
Sometime 'tis mad, and too much talk affords.

159.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy,
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd,
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

160.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food:
To see the salve doth make the wound ache
more; [good:
Great grief grieves most at that would do it
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks
o'erflows;
Grief dallied with, nor law nor limit knows.

161.

[entomb
"You mocking birds," quothe she, "your tunes
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
(My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woful hostess brooks not merry guests:)
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears:
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

162.

"Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair:
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear;
For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

163.

[part,
"And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine eye;
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as fets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heartstrings to true languish-
ment.

164.
 "And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
 As shaming any eye should thee behold,
 Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
 That knows nor parching heat nor freezing cold,
 We will find out; and there we will unfold
 To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds: [minds.]
 Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle

165.
 As the poor frighted deer, that stands at gaze,
 Wildly determining which way to fly,
 Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
 That cannot tread the way out readily;
 So with herself is she in mutiny,
 To live or die which of the twain were better,
 When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor.

166.
 "To kill myself," quoth she, "alack, what were it,
 But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
 They that lose half with greater patience bear it, [fusion.]
 Than they whose whole is swallow'd in con-
 That mother tries a merciless conclusion,
 Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
 Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.

167.
 "My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
 When the one pure, the other made divine?
 Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
 When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
 Ah me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
 His leaves will wither, and his sap decay;
 So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

168.
 "Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
 Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
 Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
 Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
 Then let it not be call'd impiety,
 If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
 Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

169.
 "Yet die I will not, till my Collatine
 Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
 That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
 Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
 My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
 Which by him tainted, shall for him be spent,
 And as his due writ in my testament.

170.
 "Mine honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
 That wounds my body so dishonour'd.
 'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
 The one will live, the other being dead:
 So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
 For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
 My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

171.
 "Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
 What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
 My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
 By whose example thou reveng'd may'st be.
 How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me:
 Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe
 And, for my sake, serve thou false Tarquin so 172.

 "This brief abridgment of my will I make:
 My soul and body to the skies and ground;
 My resolution, husband, do thou take; [wouldst]
 Mine honour be the knife's that makes my
 My shame be his that did my fame confound,
 And all my fame that lives disburied
 To those that live, and think no shame of me.

173.
 "Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will:
 How was I overseen that thou shalt see it?
 My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
 My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it. [is to]
 Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say, "So be Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee: [the]
 Thou dead, both die, and both shall victor

174.
 This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
 And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes, [maid]
 With untun'd tongue she hoarsely call'd her Whose swift obedience to her mistress liv'd
 For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feather flies.
 Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid recur'd
 As winter meads when sun doth melt them snow.

175.
 Her mistress she doth give demure good-
 morrow,
 With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
 And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
 (For why, her face wore sorrow a livery?)
 But durst not ask of her anxiously Why her two suns were cloud-capp'd and Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

176.
 But as the earth doth weep, the sun being hid,
 Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
 Even so the maid with swelling drops [gave out]
 Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
 Of those fair suns, set in her mistress' sky,
 Who, in a salt-way, docean quench their light
 Which makes the maid weep like the dew
 night.

177.
 A pretty while these pretty creatures stand
 Like ivory conduits corn cisterns filling:
 One justly weeps; the other takes in tears
 No cause, but company, of her drops spilling:
 Their gentle sex to weep are often willing;

Whispering themselves to guess at others'
[their hearts.
And then they drown their eyes, or break
178.

For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinda form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
They call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil,
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

179.
Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign
plain,
Lies open all the little worms that creep;
Even, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Concealing evils that obscurely sleep:
Though crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold
stern looks, [books,
These women's faces are their own faults'

180.
No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
Nor chide rough winter that the flower hath
kill'd:
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
More worthy blame. O, let it not be hild
For women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd With men's abuses; those proud lords, to blame, [shame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their 181.

No precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Kill'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
That her death, to do her husband wrong:
Danger to resistance had belong,
That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead!

182.
For this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
"My girl," quoth she, "on what occasion break
Thou tears from thee that down thy cheeks are raining!
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:
If tears could help, mine own would do me
good.

183.
"Tell me, girl, when went"—(and there
she stay'd
After a deep groan) "Tarquin from hence?"
"Adam, ere I was up," replied the maid,
"I've more to blame my sluggard negligence:
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense;
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

184.
But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
I would request to know your heaviness."

"O peace!" quoth Lucrece; "if it should be
The repetition cannot make it less: [told,
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

185.
"Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen,—
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say?—One of my husband's Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear [men
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear:
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ."

186.
Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill:
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with
will;
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door,
Through her inventions, which shall go before,

187.
At last she thus begins: "Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,
Health to thy person! next vouchsafe to afford
(If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see)
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So, I commend me from our house in grief:
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief."

188.
Here folds she up the tenor of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

189.
Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her; [the fashion
When sighs, and groans, and tears may grace
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter [better.
With words, till action might become them

190.
To see sad sights moves more than hear them
For then the eye interprets to the ear [told;
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a part of woe doth bear:
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow
fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

191.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
 "At Ardea to my lord with more than haste."
 The post attends, and she delivers it,
 Charging the sour-fac'd groom to his as fast
 As lagging fowls before the northern blast.
 Speed more than speed but dull and slow
 she deems:
 Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

192.

The homely villain court'sies to her low;
 And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
 Receives the scroll, without or yea or no,
 And forth with bashful innocence doth lie.
 But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
 Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
 For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her
 shame;

193.

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
 Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
 Such harmless creatures have a true respect
 To talk in deeds, while others saucily
 Promise more speed, but do it leisurely;
 Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

194.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
 That two red fires in both their faces blas'd;
 She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
 And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd;
 Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd:
 The more she saw the blood his cheeks
 replenish, [blemish,
 The more she thought he spied in her some 195.

But long she thinks till he return again,
 And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
 The weary time she cannot entertain,
 For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
 So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
 That she her plaints a little while doth stay, Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

196.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
 Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
 Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
 For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
 Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
 Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
 As heaven (it seem'd) to kiss the turrets
 bow'd.

197.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
 In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life:
 Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
 Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
 The red blood reek'd, to show the painter's
 strife:

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
 Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

198.

There might you see the labouring pioneer Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
 And from the towers of Troy there would
 The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust,
 Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
 Such sweet observance in this work was had,
 That one might see those far-off eyes look
 sad.

199.

In great commanders grace and majesty
 You might behold triumphing in their faces;
 In youth, quick bearing and dexterity;
 And here and there the painter interlaced Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;
 Which heartless peasants did so well represent, That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

200.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art
 Of physiognomy might one behold!
 The face of either cipher'd either's heart:
 Their face their manners most expressly told
 In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
 But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent, Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

201.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor
 stand,
 As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight;
 Making such sober action with his hand,
 That it beguill'd attention, charm'd the sight:
 In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
 Wag'd up and down, and from his lips did
 fly
 Thin winding breath, which pur'd up to the 202.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
 Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice,
 All jointly listening, but with several graces,
 As if some mermaid did their ears entice:
 Some high, some low,—the painter was so nice;
 The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
 To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

203.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
 His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's
 ear;
 Here one, being throng'd, bears back, all bold;
 Another, smother'd, seems to pelt and swear;
 And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
 As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
 It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

204.

so much imaginary work was there ;
deceitful, so compact, so kind,
for Achilles' image stood his spear,
in an armed hand ; himself, behind,
left unseen, save to the eye of mind :
a hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
needed for the whole to be imagin'd.

205.

from the walls of strong-besieg'd Troy, their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
many Trojan mothers, sharing joy their youthful sons bright weapons wield ;
to their hope they such odd action yield, that through their light joy seem'd to appear [fear-
like bright things stain'd] a kind of heavy 206.

from the strand of Dardan, where they
fought,
reeby banks, the red blood ran,
waves to imitate the battle sought swelling ridges : and their ranks began to break upon the galled shore, and then retire again, till, meeting greater ranks, they join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

207.

well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
had a face where all distress is stell'd.
any one sees where cares have carv'd some,
some where all distress and dolour dwell'd,
the despairing Hecuba beheld, singing on Priam's wounds with her old eyes, [lies,
which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot 208.

the painter had anatomiz'd [reign ;
ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were dis-guis'd :
what she was no semblance did remain :
blue blood chang'd to black in every vein, Waiting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

209.

this and shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldame's woes,
who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes :
The painter was no god to lend her those ;
and therefore Lucrece swears he did her
wrong,
To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.

210.

"Poor instrument," quoth she, "without a sound,
To tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue ;

And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong ;
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so
long ;
And with my knife scratch out the angry
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

211.

"Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur [bear ;
This load of wrath, that burning Troy doth Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here ;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter,
die.

212.

"Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many mo !
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so ;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe ;
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general ?

213.

"Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus
awounds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds :
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire, Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire."

214.

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes :
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes :
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell :
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow ;
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

215.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament :
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent :
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content : [goes,
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

216.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe ;
Cheeks, neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

217.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,

And therein so unscone'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

218.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
For perjurd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew; [glory
Whose words, like wild-fire, burnt the shining
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fix'd places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

219.

This picture she advis'dly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd;
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gaz'd; and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

220.

"It cannot be," quoth she, "that so much guile,"— [look;
(She would have said,) "can lurk in such a But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while, [not" took;
And from her tongue "can lurk" from "can-
"It cannot be," she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, "It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

221.

"For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
(As if with grief or travail he had fainted,)
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet deil'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin: so my Troy did perish.

222.

"Look, look, how listening Priam wets his
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

223.

"Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools, and make them bold:

So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter, [water."
That he finds means to burn his Troy with 224.

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.

She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
"Fool, fool!" quoth she, "his wounds will not be sore."

225.

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complain-
ing. [morrow,
She looks for night, and then she longs for
And both she thinks too long with her remaining: [tain;
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp num-
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom aches;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps,

226.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her
thought,
That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd,
To think their dolor others have endur'd.

227.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company;
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

228.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazed in her sad face he stares; [saw Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly care,
He hath no power to ask her how she fares;
Both stood, like old acquaintance in a trance, [chance
Met far from home, wondering each other's 229.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: "What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befallen, that thou dost tremble stand?" [saw
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.

230.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe;
At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words

231.

How this pale swan in her watery nest
The and dirge of her certain ending:
"For words," quoth she, "shall sit the trees
As best,
No excuse can give the fault amending:
More woe than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too
Long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

232.

How be this all the task it hath to say:—
My husband, in the interest of thy bed
Longer came, and on that pillow lay
Than thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
What wrong else may be imagined
Of foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Luorece is not free.

233.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
When shining falchion in my chamber came
To slay me, with a flaming light,
I cry'd aloud, "Awake, thou Roman dame,
To entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

234.

For some hard-favour'd groom of thine,
Quoth he,
Thou yoke thy liking to my will, [thee,
Thou murder straight, and then I'll slaughter
The groom I found you where you did fulfill
The shameful act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
To my fame, and thy perpetual infamy."

235.

With this, I did begin to start and cry;
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Saying, unless I took all patiently,
I would not live to speak another word;
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
The adulterate death of Luorece and her groom.

236.

When my enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
My rightful plea might plead for justice there:
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes;
And when the judge is robb'd, the prisoner
dies.

237.

To teach me how to make mine own excuse!
At the least, this refuge let me find,— Through my gross blood be stain'd with this alone,
Uncorrupted and spotless is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yieldings, but still pure
In her poison'd closet yet endure."

238.

Lo, here, the helpless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up with
woe,
With sad-set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so:
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up
again.

239.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast;
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief
draw.

240.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
"Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe, too sensible, thy passion maketh
More feeling painful: let it, then, suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

241.

[so,
"And for my sake, when I might charm thee
For she that was thy Luorece,—now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me [lend me
From what is past: the help that thou shalt Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

242.

"But ere I name him, you, fair lords," quoth
she,
[Speaking to those that came with Collatine,]
"Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine:
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms."

243.

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd.
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. "O, speak," quoth
she, [me!]

244.

"How may this forced stain be wiped from
"What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance!
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declin'd honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again;
And why not I from this compelled stain!"

245.

With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears:
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, cur'd in it with tears.

"No, no," quoth she, "no dame, hereafter living,

By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving."

246.

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: "He, he,"
she says,

But more than "he" her poor tongue could not Till after many accents and delays, [speak;
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this: "He, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to
me."

247.

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheath'd;

That blow did ball it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breath'd
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd.
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds
doth fly

Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

248.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw;
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;

249.

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.

Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tar-quin stain'd.

250.

About the mourning and congeal'd face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows:
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrefied.

251.

"Daughter, dear daughter," old Lucretius cries, [depriv'd.
"That life was mine which thou hast here
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd!
Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd.
If children predecease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours."

252.

"Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age now born,
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a barebon'd death by time outworn:
O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was!"

253.

"O time, cease thou thy course, and last no
longer,

If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the strongest,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive!
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again, and live!
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!"

254.

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece's bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath,
And live to be revenged on her death.

255.

The deep veration of his inward soul
Hath served a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips doth pour Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,

That no man could distinguish what he said.

256.

Yet sometime "Tarquin" was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he fear'd,
This windy tempest, till it blew up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more;
At last it ruins, and busy winds give o'er;
Then son and father weep with equal ardor,
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

257.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay;
The father says, "She's mine," "O, mine
she is."

Replies her husband: "do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine."

258.

"O," quoth Lucretius, "I did give that life,
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd;
"Wee, wee," quoth Collatine, "she was my
wife,
I lov'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd."
"My daughter" and "My wife" with clamorous fill'd
The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece's name, Answer'd their cries, "My daughter" and
"My wife."

How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's
use,
If thou couldst answer—"This fair child of Shall sum my count, and make my old ex-Proving his beauty by succession thine!"—
This were to be new-mads when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

3.

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest,
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest, Thou dost beguile the world, unless some
mother.

For where is she so fair, whose unear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime;
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

4.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, us'd, lives thy executor to be.

5.

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there; Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite
gone,

Beauty o'ersnow'd, and bareness everywhere;
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was;

But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet, [lives sweet.
Leese but their show, their substance still

6.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd;
Make sweet some phial; treasure thou some
place
With beauty's treasure ere it be self-kill'd.

That use is not forbidden nary,
Which happens those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thou,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times richer'd thee;
Then what could death do, if thou should'st
depart,

Leaving the living in posterity!
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be Death's conquest, and make worms thine heir.

7.

Lo, in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having clim'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
But when from high-moost pitch, with weary ear,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, fore-duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way:
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

8.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,

Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confound'st
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst join:
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;

Resembling sire and child and happy mothers,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, [sums one, [singing
Sings this to thee, "Thou single wilt prove 9.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wall thee, like a makeless wife;
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep By children's eyes, her husband's shape in
mind.

Look, what an unthrif in the world doth spend,
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys him!
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unused, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits,
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

10.

Thine I deny that thou bear'st love to any,
For thyself art so unprovident,
If thou wilt, thou art below'd of many,
That thou none lov'st is most evident;
Thou art so possess'd with murderous hate,
That thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Against that beauteous roof to ruinate,
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O change thy thought, that I may change my
mind!
Thou shalt be fairer lodg'd than gentle love!
Thy presence is, gracious and kind,
To thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

11.

As thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
Of thine, from that which thou departest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest, [convertest.
Thou mayst call thine, when thou from youth
Lives wisdom, beauty, and increase;
But about this, folly, age, and cold decay;
If thou were minded so, the times should cease,
And three-score years would make the world
away, [store,
Where whom Nature hath not made for Age, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish:
Where, when she best endow'd, she gave the move; [cherish:
Thou art her bounty's gift thou shouldst in bounty
Share; 'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby Thou shouldst print more, nor let that copy
die.

12.

I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
Where lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Whence summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Where on the bier with white and bristly beard,
Thy beauty do I question make,
How thou among the wastes of time must go, While sweets and beauties do themselves for-
sake,
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence, [thence,
Save toaved, to leave him when he takes thee

13.

That you were yourself! but, love, you are No longer yours, than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give.
But should that beauty which you hold in lease
No determination: then you were Not yourself again, after yourself's decease, [bear.
When your sweet issue your sweet form should Take as fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold,

Against the stormy gusts of winter's day,
And barren rage of death's eternal cold I know
O! none but unthrifths:—dear my love, you
You had a father; let your son say so.

14.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art,
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert:
Or else of thee this I prognosticate,—[date.
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and 15.

When I consider everything that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge state presenteth nought but
shows,
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheer'd and check'd ever by the selfsame sky;
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And, all in war with Time, for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

16.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way,
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay [rhyme!
With means more blessed than my barren
Now stand you on the top of happy hours;
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear you living
flowers,
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself, keeps yourself still;
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

17.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, Heaven knows, it is but as a tomb [parts.
Which hides your life, and shows not half your
If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, "This poet lies,
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces."

So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than
tongue;

And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
And stretch'd metre of an antique song;

But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice,—in it, and in my rhyme.

18.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of
May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometimes declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd;

But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade,

When in eternal lines to time thou growest:
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

19.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet
brood;

Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world, and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime;
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow,
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men. [wrong,

Yet, do thy worst, old Time; despite thy
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

20.

A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false women's fashion; [rolling,

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth.

And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of then defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.

But since she prick'd thee out for woman's pleasure, [treasure,

Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their 21.

So is it not with me as with that Muse,
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse;

Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a couplement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems, [rare

With April's firstborn flowers, and all things
That heaven's air in this huge roundness hears:
O, let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:

Let them say more that like of hearsay well;
I will not praise, that purpose not to sell.

22.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee,
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me;
How can I, then, be older than thou art?
O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.

Presume not on thy heart when mine is laid;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

23.

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own
heart;
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's
night,

O, let my books be, then, the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast;
Who plead for love, and look for recompense
More than that tongue that more hath express'd.

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ,
To hear with eyes belongs to love's not wit.

24.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis hold,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his work,
To find where your true image pictured lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine
eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes
done;

Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine
Are windows to my breast, where-through
sun

Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their
view:
They draw but what they see, know not the
heart.

25.

Of those who are in favour with their stars,
 Public honour and proud titles boast,
 I, whom fortune of such triumph bare,
 Would for joy in that I honour most.
 My princely favourites their fair leaves spread,
 As the marigold at the sun's eye;
 As themselves their pride lies buried,
 At a frown they in their glory die.
 A painful warrior famoused for fight,
 With a thousand victories once foil'd,
 From the book of honour raz'd quite,
 And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
 Then happy I, that love and am lov'd,
 Where I may not remove, nor be remov'd.

26.

Of my love, to whom my vassalage
 My heart hath my duty strongly knit,
 I send this written embassy,
 To show my duty, not to show my wit.
 My duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
 May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it;
 But that I hope some good conceit of thine
 Thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
 And whatsoever star that guides my moving,
 On me graciously with fair aspect,
 Doth shine apparel on my tatter'd loving,
 Shall make me worthy of thy sweet respect:
 Then may I dare to boast how I do love
 Thee;
 And then, not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

27.

Every with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 To dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;
 But then begins a journey in my head,
 Which work my mind, when body's work's extir'd, and my thoughts (from far where I abide)
 Find me a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
 And thus my soul's imaginary sight
 Turns thy shadow to my sightless view,
 Like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Black night beauteous, and her old face new.
 Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my thoughts, for thee and for myself no quiet find.

28.

How can I, then, return in happy plight,
 When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
 And night by night, and night by day, oppress'd?
 And each, though enemies to either's reign,
 In consent shake hands to torture me;
 One by the other, the other to complain
 Of the day, still further off from thee.
 Tell the day, to please him, thou art bright,
 And dost him grace when clouds do blot the
 heaven:
 So tell the swart-complexion'd night;
 When sparkling stars twine not, thou gild'st
 the even.

But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
 And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

29.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
 I all alone beweep my outcast state,
 And trouble deaf Heaven with my bootless
 cries,
 And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
 Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
 Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
 Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
 With what I most enjoy contented least;
 Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
 Haply I think on thee,—and then my state
 (Like to the lark at break of day arising [gate;
 From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven's For thy sweet love remember'd, such wealth brings, [things.
 That then I scorn to change my state with 30.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
 I summon up remembrance of things past,
 I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
 And with old woes now wail my dear time's waste:
 Then can I drown an eye unus'd to flow,
 For precious friends hid in death's dateless night, [woe,
 And weep afresh love's long-since cancell'd
 And moan the expense of many a vanish'd
 night.

31.

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
 Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
 And there reigns love, and all love's loving
 parts,
 And all those friends which I thought buried.
 How many a holy and obsequious tear
 Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
 As interest of the dead, which now appear
 But things remov'd, that hidden in thee lie!
 Thou art the grave where buried love doth
 live,
 Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
 Who all their parts of me to thee did give,
 That due of many now is thine alone:
 Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
 And thou (all they) hast all the all of me.

32.

If thou survive my well-contented day,
 When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
 And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
 These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,—

Compare them with the bettering of the time;
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
Exceeded by the height of happier men.
O, then vouchsafe me but this loving thought,— “Had my friend’s muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Thine for their style I’ll read, his for his love.”

33.

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
Rising with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
With all triumphant splendour on my brow;
But, out! alack! he was but one hour mine,
The regent cloud hath mask’d him from me
now.

Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
Suns of the world may stain, when heaven’s sun staineth.

34.

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o’ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
’Tis not enough that through the cloud thou
break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak,
That heals the wound, and cures not the dis-
grace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief:
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss;
The offender’s sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence’s cross.
Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
And they are rich, and ransom all ill deeds.

35.

No more be griev’d at that which thou hast
done:
Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorising thy trespass with compare,
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are:
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
(Thy adverse party is thy advocate,)
And ’gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
Such civil war is in my love and hate,
That I an accessory needs must be
To that sweet thief, which sourly robs from 36.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blots that do with me remain,
Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love’s sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love’s day:
I may not evermore acknowledge thee, (light
I may not evermore acknowledge thee, light
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame;
Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name;
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

37.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune’s dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis’d,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance show;
That I in thy abundance am enrich’d,
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have: thou ten times happier be’st

38.

How can my Muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour’st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who’s so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more
worth
Than those old nine, which rhymers invent;
And be that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.
If my slight Muse do please these careless days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

39.

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me!
What can mine own praise to mine own
And what is’t but mine own, when I praise
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one:
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee, which thou dost deserve;
O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love, (Which time and thoughts so sweetly do deceive.)
And that thou teachest how to make
By praising him here, who doth hence 40.

all my loves, my love, yea, take them all;
Hast thou then more than thou hadst
before?

[call;

Love, my love, that thou mayst true love show was thine, before thou hadst this
more.

For my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee, for my love thou ushest;
As yet he blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By failing what thyself thyself refusest.
O, if thou steal thee all my poverty;
Yet, love knows, it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury.

Compassionate grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Will me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

41.

How pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometimes absent from thy heart,
That beauty and thy years full well befits,
Which all temptation follows where thou art.

Thou art, and therefore to be won,
As precious thou art, therefore to be assail'd;
When a woman woos, what woman's son
So early leave her till she have prevail'd?
But yet thou mightst my seat forbear,
To chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there,
Where thou art forc'd to break a two-fold
truth.

By thy beauty tempting her to thee,
By thy beauty being false to me.

42.

When hast thou, it is not all my grief,
Yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly;
She hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
In love that touches me more nearly.
Sweet offender, thus I will excuse ye:
You do love her, because thou know'st I love her;

For my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Calling my friend for my sake to approve her;
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain, [loss;
And each other, and I lose both twain,
And yet both for my sake lay on me this cross:
Sweet flattery!—then she loves but me alone.

43.

How most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
And when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright, are bright in dark directed;
Then, whose shadow shadows doth make Bright, [show
How would thy shadow's form form happy
Show to mine eyes with thy much clearer light,
Than to mine eyes thy shade shines so!
I would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,

When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on nightless eyes doth
stay!

All days are nights to see, till I see thee,
And nights, bright days, when dreams do show thee me.

44.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay,
No matter then, although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and
land,

As soon as think the place where he would be.
But ah, thought kills me, that I am not thought, [gone,

To leap large lengths of miles when thou art
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe:

45.

The other two, slight air and purging fire
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melan-
Until life's composition be recur'd [choly;
By those sweet messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:

This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

46.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war
How to divide the conquest of thy sight; [bar,
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost
lie,—

[A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impannelled

A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determin'd [part:
The clear eye's moiety, and the dear heart's
As thus,—mine eye's due is thine outward part, [heart.

And my heart's right thine inward love of 47.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other;
When that mine eye is furnish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;

Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me; [move,
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst
And I am still with them, and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

48.

How careful was I when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay [trust!
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thou have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou
Within the gentle closure of my breast, [art,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and
part;

And even thence thou wilt be stolen, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

49.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
Whenas thy love hath cast his utmost sun,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects; [pass,
Against that time when thou shalt strangely
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity,—
Against that time do I ensconce me here,
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:

To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,

Since, why to love, I can allege no cause.

50.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek,—my weary travel's end,—
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
"Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend!"

The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee:
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide;
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;

For that same groan doth put this in my
mind,

My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

61.

'Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me
Till I return, of posting is no need. [thence?

O, what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow!
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,

In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, of perfect love being made,
Shall neigh (no dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade,
Since from thee going he went wilful slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

52.

So am I as the rich, whose blessed boy
Can bring him to his sweet up-lock'd treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since, seldom coming, in the long year not,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
So is the time that keeps you, as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special-bleat,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope
Being had, to triumph, being lock'd, to hope.

53.

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you feed?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lead,
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new;
Speak of the spring, and foison of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know,
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant
heart.

54.

O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem,
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we if down,
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye,
As the perfum'd tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds unclose;
But, for their virtue only is their show, [blow
They live unwood'd, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made;

And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, by verse distill'd you truth.

55.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme, shall shine more bright in these con-

[time.
washed stone, besmeared with sluttish wasteful war shall statues overturn,
his root out the work of masonry, his sword nor war's quick fire shall record of your memory. [burn death and all-oblivious enmity pace forth; your praise shall still the eyes of all posterity [find room, near this world out to the ending doom.
till the judgment that yourself arise,
live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

56.

renew thy force; be it not said,
should blunter be than appetite,
not today by feeding is allay'd, sharpen'd in his former might:
be thou; although to-day thou fill every eye, even till they wink with now see again, and do not kill [fulness, of love with a perpetual dullness.
interim like the ocean be [new parts the shore, where two contracted daily to the banks, that, when they see of love, more best may be the view;
till it winter, which, being full of care,
summer's welcome thrice more wish'd,
more rare.

57.

your slave, what should I do but tend the hours and times of your desire?
precious time at all to spend,
to do, till you require.
I chide the world-without-end hour, my sovereign: watch the clock for the bitterness of absence sour, [you,
you have bid your servant once adieu;
I question with my jealous thought you may be, or your affairs suppose,
sad slave, stay and think of nought, where you are, how happy you make a fool is love, that in your will, [those, though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

58.

and forbid, that made me first your slave, [pleasure, and in thought control your times of your hand the account of hours to crave, your vassal, bound to stay your leisure]
I suffer, being at your beck,
person'd absence of your liberty;
to patience, time to sufferance, bids each wailing you of injury. [check,
where you list, your charter is so strong,
yourself may privilege your time
to pardon of self-doing crime.
to wait, though waiting so be hell;
to blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

59.

be nothing new, but that which is
as before, how are our brains begull'd,

Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child!
O, that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mine at first in character was done!
That I might see what the old world could say
To this compos'd wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or wher better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

60.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled
So do our minutes hasten to their end; [shore,
Each changing place with that which goes
before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crook'd eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time, that gave, doth now his gift con-
found.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
And yet, to times in hope my verse shall
stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

61.

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night;
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken, While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry;
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenor of thy jealousy?
O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great;
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

62.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed
Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thee (myself) that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

Some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
 Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst

71.

[owe.

Anger mourn for me when I am dead,
 You shall hear the surly sullen bell
 Warning to the world that I am fled [dwell;
 This vile world, with vilest worms to
 If you read this line, remember not
 That I writ it; for I love you so,
 That your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
 Thinking on me then should make you woe.
 If I say you look upon this verse,
 I perhaps compounded am with clay,
 Not so much as my poor name rehearse;
 But your love even with my life decay;
 Let the wise world should look into your
 Mean,
 And mock you with me after I am gone.

72.

Let the world should task you to recite
 That merit liv'd in me, that you should love
 My death,—dear love, forget me quite,
 You in me can nothing worthy prove;
 You would devise some virtuous lie,
 To hang more praise upon deceased I
 No safeguard truth would willingly impart:
 Your true love may seem false in this,
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,
 My name be buried where my body is,
 And I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing

73.

[worth.

At time of year thou mayst in me behold
 Those yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the Cold, [sang.
 And ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds
 Then meet the twilight of such day
 After sunset fadeth in the west;
 By and by black night doth take away,
 Thy second self, that seals up all in rest.
 Thou seest the glowing of such fire,
 But on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 At the death-bed whereon it must expire,
 Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by.
 This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love
 More strong, [long.
 To love that well which thou must leave ere 74.

Be contented: when that fell arrest
 Without all bail shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line some interest,
 Which thou memorial still with me shall stay.
 When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee:
 To earth can have but earth, which is his due;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
 And thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead;
 And thou shalt conquer of a wretch's knife,
 To base of thee to be remembered.

30

The worth of that, is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.

75.

So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
 Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
 And for the peace of you I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
 Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
 Doubting the fleching age will steal his treasure:
 Now counting best to be with you alone, [sure:
 Then better'd that the world may see my plea:
 Sometimes all full with feasting on your sight,
 And by and by clean starved for a look;
 Possessing or pursuing no delight,
 Save what is had or must from you be took.
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
 Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

76.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
 So far from variation or quick change?
 Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
 To new-found methods and to compounds strange?

Why write I still all one, ever the same,
 And keep invention in a noted weed,
 That every word doth almost tell my name,
 Showing their birth, and where they did pro-
 O, know, sweet love, I always write of you, [ceed!
 And you and love are still my argument;
 So all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent:
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

77.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
 Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
 Of mouth'd graves will give thee memory;
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity.
 Look, what thy memory cannot contain,
 Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt
 Those children nursed, deliver'd from thy brain,
 To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
 These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
 Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

78.

So oft have I involv'd thee for my Muse,
 And found such fair assistance in my verse,
 As every alien pen hath got my use,
 And under thee their poesy disperse.
 Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to
 And heavy ignorance aloft to fly, [sing,
 Have added feathers to the learned's wing,
 And given grace a double majesty.
 Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
 Whose influence is thine, and born of thee:
 In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
 And arts with thy sweet graces grac'd be;
 But thou art all my art, and dost advance
 As high as learning my rude ignorance.

79.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick Muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

80.

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building, and of goodly pride:
Then, if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this,—my love was my decay.

81.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten;
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entomb'd in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues to be, your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen)
Where breath most breathes,—even in the mouths of men.

82.

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse,
And therefore mayst without attaint o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And therefore art enforce'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou, truly fair, wert truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words by thy true-telling friend:
And their gross painting might be better us'd Where cheeks need blood,—in thee it is abus'd.

83.

I never saw that you did painting need,
And therefore to your fair no painting set;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt:
And therefore have I slept in your report,
That you yourself, being extant, well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth
This silence for my sin you did impute, (since
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty, being mute,
When others would give life, and bring a tomb.)
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

84.

Who is it that says most? which can say more
Than this rich praise,—that you alone are you?
In whose confine impur'd is the store
Which should example where your equal grow.
Lean penury within that pen doth dwell,
That to his subject lends not some small glory;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired everywhere.
You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

85.

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
While comments of your praise, richly com-
Reserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the muses mild.
I think good thoughts, while others write good
words,
And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry "Amen"
To every hymn that able spirit affords,
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.
Hearing you prais'd, I say, "Tis so, 'tis true,"
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you Though words come hindmost, holds his rank
before.

Then others for the breath of words mo-
spect;—
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

86.

Was it the proud full sail of his great vessel,
Bound for the prize of all-too-precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain in-volve, Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compass, by night,
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
He, nor that affable familiar ghost,
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,

Victors of my silence cannot boast;
I am not sick of any fear from thence;
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

87.

How well I thou art too dear for my possessing,
To like enough thou know'st thy estimate;
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.

How low do I hold thee but by thy granting?
For that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.

Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
To me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;
And so thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
From me comes again, on better judgment making.

Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter.

88.

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Against thy side against myself I'll fight, [sworn
To prove thee virtuous, though thou art for-

With mine own weakness being best acquainted; my part I can set down a story [squand,
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted;
For thou, in losing me, shalt win much glory:

And I by this will be a gainer too;
For sending all my loving thoughts on thee,
To injure that to myself I do,
Losing thee vantage, double-vantage me.

Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

89.

Why that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Against thy lameness, and I straight will halt;
Against thy reasons making no defence.

Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange;

Be absent from thy walk; and in my tongue
Thy sweet-beloved name no more shall dwell,
And simply of our old acquaintance tell.
For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,

For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

90.

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss: [row,
Ah, do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sor-

Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,

When other petty griefs have done their spite,
And in the last night of my life I do
Lie on my back, with no one else to fight.

But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem
Woe,

Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

91.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's
force;
Some in their garments, though new-fangled
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horses;

And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest;
But these particulars are not my measure;
All these I better in one general best.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And, having thee, of all men's pride I boast;

Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
All this away, and me most wretched make.

92.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assur'd mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.

Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:

Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
O, what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die!

But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not:

93.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:

For there can live no hatred in mine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles;

But heaven in thy creation did decree [strange;
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings
be,

Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

94.

They that have power to hurt, and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;

They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.

The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die;
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity: [deeds;
For sweetest things turn sourest by their Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

95. [shame,

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

96.

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and
less:

Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated, and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

97.

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen!
What old December's bareness everywhere!
And yet this time remov'd was summer's time;
The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow'd womb after their lord's decease:
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans, and unfather'd fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer,
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

98.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in everything, [him.
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
Could make me any summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:

Nor did I wonder at the filices white,
Nor praise the deep vermillion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you,—you pattern of all those.
Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play:

99.

The forward violet thus did I chide:—
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
If not from my love's breath? The purple pride,
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells,
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dy'd.
The lily I condemned for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair;
The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair;
A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath;
But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth,
A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see,
But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

100.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so
long

To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects
light?

Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent;
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem,
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, restive Muse, my love's sweet face survey
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised everywhere.

Give my love fame faster than Time wastes
life;
So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked [little, crooked]

101.

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse, wilt thou not haply say,
"Truth needs no colour, with his colour'd bay;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd?"
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuse not silence so; for't lies in thee,
To make him much outlive a gilded tomb,
And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.

Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee how To make him seem long hence as he shows
now.

102.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in
I love not less, though less the show appear;
That love is merchandiz'd, whose rich accom-
ing
The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere

When love was new, and then but in the spring,
When I was wont to greet it with my lays;
Philonel in summer's front doth sing,
And stops her pipe in growth of riper days:
That the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush the
night,
That wild music burthens every bough,
And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
[tongue,
Therefore, like her, I sometimes hold my
tongue,
Because I would not dull you with my song.

103.

Ah, what poverty my Muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument, all bare, is of more worth,
Than when it hath my added praise beside!
I name me not, if I no more can write!
You are in your glass, and there appears a face
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Shaming my lines, and doing me disgrace.
Were it not sinful, then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
To write no other than my verses tend,
Of your graces and your gifts to tell:
And more, much more, than in my verse can be said.
[In it.
Your own glass shows you, when you look on it.

104.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
As you were when first your eye I eyed,
Which seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
[pride,
Have from the forests shook three summers'
prime,
And yet the beauties of your face
In process of the seasons have I seen, [turn'd
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
And yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd;
But your sweet hue, which methinks still doth
stand,
[dead.
Nath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred,— [dead.
Kne you were born, was beauty's summer

105.

Let not my love be called idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
"Fair, kind, and true," is all my argument,
"Fair, kind, and true," is all my argument,
And in this change is my invention spent,
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
[alone,
"Fair, kind, and true," have often liv'd
Which three, till now, never kept seat in one.

106.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
In praise of ladies dead, and lovely knights;
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

107.

Nor mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now with the drops of this most balmy time
My love looks fresh, and death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes;
And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

108.

What's in the brain, that ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers
divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same;
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page;
Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show
it dead.

109.

O, never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify I
As easy might I from myself depart,
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love; if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again,
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

110.

Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view,
Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is Made old offences of affections new; [most dear,
Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Alike and strangely: but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, save what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.

Then give me welcome, next my heaven the best, [breast,
Even to thy pure and most most loving 111.

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide Than public means, which public manners breeds. [brand;
Thence comes it that my name receives a
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:
Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd;
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eyself 'gainst my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye,
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

112.

Your love and pity doth th' impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'ergreen my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive To know my shames and praises from your
tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive, [wrong,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or
In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

113.

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch:
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the red'st or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour, or deformed'st creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature.
Incapable of more, replete with you, [fare:
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

114.

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with
you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery!
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O, 'tis the first; 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is
'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

115.

Those lines that I before have writ, do lie;
Even those that said I could not love you dearer:
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer,
But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decays of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering,
Alas, why, fearing of Time's tyranny, [blame;
Might I not then say, "Now I love you best,"
When I was certain o'er uncertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow!

116.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests, and is never shaken!
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and Within his bending sickle's compass come:
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error, and upon me prov'd,
I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

117.

Accuse me thus:—that I have scan'd all
Wherein I should your great deserts enjoy;
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown youths
And given to time your own dear-purchased
right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me furthest from your sight.

both my wilfulness and errors down,
 on just proof surmise accumulate;
 'Tis within this level of your frown,
 I shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
 My appeal says I did strive to prove
 The constancy and virtue of your love.

118.

to make our appetites more keen,
 our eager compounds we our palate urge;
 To prevent our maladies unseen,
 I am so taken to shun sickness when we purge:
 And so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
 Better sauces did I frame my feeding;
 Sick of welfare, found a kind of meanness
 In diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
 My policy in love, to anticipate
 That were not, grew to faults assur'd,
 And brought to medicine a healthful state,
 But rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd;
 And thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
 And poison him that so fell sick of you.

119.

What potions have I drunk of Syren tears,
 I from limbeck fowl as hell within,
 Drawing tears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
 Ere I was waken'd when I saw myself to win!
 Wretched errors hath my heart committed,
 Which it hath thought itself so blessed never!
 How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
 To this distraction of this madding fever!
 I profit of ill! now I find true
 That better is by evil still made better;
 And would love, when it is built anew,
 Fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
 And I return rebuk'd to my content,
 And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

120.

That you were once unkind befriends me now,
 And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
 Comfort must I under my transgression bow,
 While my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
 For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
 As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time;
 And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
 To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
 O, that our night of woe might have remember'd
 My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
 And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
 The humble gauge which wounded bosoms fit:
 But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
 Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom
 me.

121.

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
 When not to be, receives reproach of being;
 And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd
 And by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
 For why should others' false adulterate eyes
 Give salutation to my sportive blood?

Or on my frailties why are frailer spies, [good]
 Which in their wills count bad what I think
 No,—I am that I am; and they that level
 At my abuses, reckon up their own:
 I may be straight, though they themselves be hovel; [shown];
 By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be Unless this general evil they maintain,—
 All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

122.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
 Full character'd with lasting memory,
 Which shall above that idle rank remain,
 Beyond all date, even to eternity:
 Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
 Have faculty by nature to subsist;
 Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
 Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
 That poor retention could not so much hold,
 Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
 Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
 To trust those tables that receive thee more:
 To keep an adjunct to remember thee,
 Were to import forgetfulness in me.

123.

No, Time, then shalt not boast that I do change:
 Thy pyramids built up with never might
 To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
 They are but dressings of a former sight.
 Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
 What thou dost foist upon us that is old;
 And rather make them born to our desire,
 Than think that we before have heard them told.
 Thy registers and thee I both defy, [told]
 Not wondering at the present nor the past;
 For thy records and what we see do lie,
 Made more or less by thy continual haste:
 This I do vow, and this shall ever be,
 I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

124.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
 It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
 As subject to Time's love, or to Time's hate,
 Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers
 No, it was builded far from accident; [gather'd]
 It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
 Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
 Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls;
 It fears not policy, that heretic,
 Which works on leases of short-number'd hours,
 But all alone stands hugely politic, [showers]
 That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with
 To this I witness call the fools of time, [crime]
 Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for 125.

Were't aught to me I bore the canopy,
 With my extern the outward honouring,
 Or laid great praises for eternity,
 Which prove more short than waste or ruining!
 Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour Lose all, and more by paying too much rent,
 For compound sweet foregoing simple savour
 Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent!

No; let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.

Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul,
When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control.

126.

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle, hour;
Who hast by waning grown, and therein
show'st

Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st;
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack [back,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

127.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy hour,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' eyes are raven black;
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such, who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slandering creation with a false esteem:

Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says, beauty should look no.

128.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently away'st

The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, [reap,
Whilst my poor lips which should that harvest
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living
lips.

Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

129.

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action: and till action, lust
Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner, but despis'd straight;
Past reason hunted; and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
On purpose laid to make the taker mad:

Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe;
Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.

All this the world well known; yet none knows well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell!

130.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress' necks.
I love to hear her speak,—yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go,— [ground,
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

131.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art, [cruel;
As those whose beauties proudly make them
For well thou know'st to my dear doating heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love
groan:

To say they err, I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness hear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

132.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black, and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even,
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face!
O, let it, then, as well besem thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee
And suit thy pity like in every part. [grace,
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

133.

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must hold
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd;
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice three-fold thus to be cross'd!

Placed my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart hall;
Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

134.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will;
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still;
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous, and he is kind;
He learn'd but, surety-like, to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that putt'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend, came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

135.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

136.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will;
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove,
Among a number one is reckon'd none:
Then in the number let me pass unfold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still, [Will,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is 137.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is, take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?

Why should my heart think that a several plot,
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?

Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now trans-

138.

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearn'd in the world's false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore says not I that I am old?
O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

139.

O, call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy
tongue;
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside:
What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can 'hide?
Let me excuse thee: ah, my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been my enemies;
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

140.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;—
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians
know;—
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be,
That I may not be so, nor thou believ'd, Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

141.

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who, in despite of view, is pleas'd to dote;

Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
Nor tender feeling; to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits nor my five senses can Blaspheme one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to
be:

Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin, awakes me pain.

142.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments,
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.

If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example mayst thou be denied!

143.

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away, Sets down her babe, and makes all quick
despatch

In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent:
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind:
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will,
If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

144.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still;
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Templeth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooling his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell:
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

145.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
Breath'd forth the sound that said, "I hate,"
To me that languish'd for her sake:
But when she saw my woful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue, that ever sweet
Was us'd in giving gentle doom;
And taught it thus anew to greet:
"I hate," she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
From heaven to hell is flown away:
"I hate," from hate away she threw,
And sav'd my life, saying—"not you."

146.

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Fool'd by those rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within, and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large coost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
And, Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

147.

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve,
Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's,
At random from the truth vainly express'd:
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

148.

O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
How can it? O, how can Love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.
O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

149.

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I, against myself, with thee purtake
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake!

Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
 Whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
 Nay, if thou lovest on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?
 What merit do I in myself respect,
 That is so proud thy service to despise,
 When all my best doth worship thy defect,
 Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
 But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind; [blind.]
 Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am 150.

from what power hast thou this powerful
 night,
 With insufficiency my heart to sway?
 To make me give the lie to my true sight, [day?
 And swear that brightness doth not grace the face hast thou this becoming of things ill,
 That in the very refuse of thy deeds
 There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
 That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
 Who taught thee how to make me love thee
 more,
 The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
 O, though I love what others do abhor,
 With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
 If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
 More worthy I to be lov'd of thee.

151.

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
 Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love?
 O gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
 Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove;
 For, thou betraying me, I do betray
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason:
 My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no further reason;
 But, rising at thy name, doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
 No want of conscience hold it that I call
 My love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

152.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn, [ing;
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swear-

In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing,
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
 When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost:
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kind-
 ness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
 And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
 Or made them swear against the thing they see;
 For I have sworn thee fair,—more perjur'd I,
 To swear, against the truth, so foul a lie!

153.

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep:
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
 And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired,
 The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
 I, sick withal, the help of bath desir'd,
 And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
 But found no cure: the bath for my help lies Where Cupid got new fire,—my mistress'
 eyes.

154.

The little Love-god, lying once asleep,
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand, Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep,
 Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd;
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was sleeping, by a virgin hand disarm'd.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy
 For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall, Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

1.

From off a hill whose concave womb reworded
 A plaintive story from a sistering vale,
 My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
 And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale:
 How long espied a fickle maid full pale,
 Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain, Mourning her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

2.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
 Which fortified her visage from the sun,
 Whereon the thought might think sometime fit
 The carcase of a beauty spent and done; [saw
 Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
 Nor youth all quit; but, spite of Heaven's fell rage, [age.]
 Some beauty peep'd through lattice of scard

3.
 Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
 Which on it had conceited characters,
 Laundering the silken figures in the brine
 That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
 And often reading what contents it bears;
 As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe,
 In clamours of all size, both high and low.

4.
 Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,
 As they did battery to the spheres intend;
 Sometime, diverted, their poor balls are tied
 To th' orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
 To every place at once, and, nowhere fix'd,
 The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

5.
 Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plat,
 Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
 For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat,
 Hanging her pale and pin'd cheek beside;
 Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
 And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
 Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

6.
 A thousand favours from a maund she drew,
 Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
 Which one by one she in a river threw,
 Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
 Like usury, applying wet to wet,
 Or monarch's hands, that let not bounty fall
 Where want cries, "Some," but where excess begs all.

7.
 Of folded schedules had she many a one, [blood;
 Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
 Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
 Found yet more letters sadly penn'd in blood,
 With sleided silk feat and affectedly
 Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

8.
 These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
 And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear;
 Cried, "O false blood, thou register of lies,
 What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
 Ink would have seem'd more black and damned
 here!"

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
 Big discontent so breaking their contents.

9.
 A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
 Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
 Of court, of city, and had let go by
 The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
 Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
 And, privileg'd by age, desires to know
 In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

10.
 So slides he down upon his grain'd hat,
 And comely-distant sits he by her side;

When he again desires her, being sat,
 Her grievance with his hearing to divide;
 If that from him there may be aught applied
 Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
 'Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

11.
 "Father," she says, "though in me you behold
 A youthful suit (it was to gain my grace)
 Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
 That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
 Love look'd a dwelling, and made him her
 place;
 And when in his fair parts she did abide,
 She was new lodg'd, and newly deified.

12.
 "But, woe is me! too early I attended
 A youthful suit (it was to gain my grace)
 Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
 That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
 Love look'd a dwelling, and made him her
 place;
 And when in his fair parts she did abide,
 She was new lodg'd, and newly deified.

13.
 "His browny locks did hang in crooked curls;
 And every light occasion of the wind
 Upon his lips their silken parcels hurle.
 What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find;
 Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind;
 For on his visage was in little drawn,
 What largeness thinks in Paradise was seen.

14.
 "Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
 His phoenix down began but to appear,
 Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin, Whose bare out-brugg'd the web it seem'd to
 wear:

Yet show'd his visage by that cost most dear;
 And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
 If best were as it was, or best without.

15.
 "His qualities were beauteous as his form,
 For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof free;
 Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
 As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
 When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they
 His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth [see
 Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

16.
 "Well could he ride, and often men would say,
 'That horse his mettle from his rider takes':
 Proud of subjection, noble by the way,
 What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!"

And controversy hence a question takes,
 Whether the horse by him became his deed,
 Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

17.
 "But quickly on this side the verdict went:
 His real habitude gave life and grace
 To appertainings and to ornament,
 Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
 All ails, themselves made fairer by their place,

for additions; yet their purpos'd trim would not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

18.

On the tip of his subduing tongue
 A kind of arguments and question deep,
 A replication prompt, and reason strong,
 For his advantage still did wake and sleep;
 To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,
 He had the dialect and different skill,
 Fetching all passions in his craft of will:

19.

That he did in the general bosom reign
 Young, of old: and sexes both enchanted,
 To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
 Personal duty, following where he haunted:
 Elements bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted;
 And dialogu'd for him, what he would say,
 And their own wills, and made their wills
 obey.

20.

Many there were that did his picture get,
 To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
 And fools that in the imagination set
 The goodly objects which abroad they find
 In lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd; [them,
 And labouring in more pleasures to bestow
 Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe
 them.

21.

So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
 Yet suppos'd them mistress of his heart,
 And woful self, that did in freedom stand,
 And was my own fee-simple, (not in part,)
 That with his art in youth, and youth in art,
 He drew my affections in his charmed power,
 And drest the stalk, and gave him all my flower.

22.

Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
 Demand of him, nor, being desired, yielded;
 Holding myself in honour so forbid,
 With safest distance I mine honour shielded:
 Experience for me many bulwarks builded
 Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the
 Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil. [foil

23.

But, ah, who ever shunn'd by precedent
 The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
 Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
 To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
 Counsel may stop a while what will not stay;
 For when we rage, advice is often seen
 By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

24.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
 That we must curb it upon others' proof:
 To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
 For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
 Appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
 No one a palate hath that needs will taste,
 Though reason weep, and cry, 'It is thy last.'

25.

"For further I could say, 'This man's untrue,'
 And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
 Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
 Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
 Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
 Thought characters and words merely but art,
 And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

26.

"And long upon these terms I held my city,
 Till thus he 'gan besiege me: 'Gentle maid,
 Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
 And be not of my holy vows afraid:
 That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
 For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
 Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow.

27.

"All my offences that abroad you see
 Are errors of the blood, none of the mind:
 Love made them not: with acture they may Where neither party is nor true nor kind: [be,
 They sought their shame that so their shame
 did find;
 And so much less of shame in me remains,
 By how much of me their reproach contains.

28.

"Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
 Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd,
 Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
 Or any of my pleasures ever charm'd: [charm'd;
 Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
 And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

29.

"Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
 Of pal'd pearls, and rubies red as blood;
 Figuring that they their passions likewise lent
 Of grief and blushes, aptly understood [me
 In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood;
 Effects of terror and dear modesty,
 Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

30.

"And, lo, behold these talents of their hair,
 With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,
 I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
 (Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,)
 With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
 And deep-brain'd sonnets that did amplify
 Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

31.

"The diamond,—why, 'twas beautiful and Whereto his invis'd properties did tend;
 The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
 The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend
 With objects manifold: each several stone,
 With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some mean.

32.

"Lo, all these trophies of affections hot,
 Of pensiv'd and subdu'd desires the tender,

Nature hath charg'd me that I heard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and end;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you empatron me.

83.

"O, then, advance of yours that phraseless hand, [praise;
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of
Take all these smiles to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did Whut me your minister, for you obey, [raise;
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

84.

"Lo, this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

85.

"But, O my sweet, what labour is't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives,—

Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves!
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scape by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

86.

"O, pardon me, in that my boast is true:
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly:
Religious love put out Religion's eye;
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procur'd.

87.

"How mighty, then, you are, O, hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being
Must for your victory us all congest, [strong,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

88.

"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplin'd and dieted in grace,
Believ'd her eyes when they to assual begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place;
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

89.

"When thou impresses, what are precepts
Of stale example! When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame;

And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The woes of all forces, shocks, and fears.

90.

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend, [prize;
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they
And, supplicant, their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath,
That shall prefer and undertake my troth."

91.

"This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount,
With brinish current, downward flow'd space;
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses,
That flame through water which their hue encloses,

92.

"O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear!
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear!
What breast so cold that is not warmed here!
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath.

93.

"For, lo, his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv'd my reason into tears!
There my white stole of chastity I daff'd,
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

94.

"In him a plentitude of subtle matter,
Applied to caustics, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

95.

"That not a heart which in his level came
Could 'scape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;
And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would main:
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,
He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity.

96.

"Thus merely with the garment of a Grace
The naked and conceal'd fiend he cover'd;
That th' unexperienc'd gave the tempter place,
Which, like a cherubin, above them hover'd.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd!

Ah me ! I fell ; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake, 47.
"O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd,

O, that forc'd thunder from his heart did fly,
O, that sad breath his spungy lungs bestow'd,
O, that all borrow'd motion, seeming ow'd,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid !"

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

1.

SWEET Cythera, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,—
Such looks as none could look but beauty's
She told him stories to delight his ear ; [queen.
She show'd him favours to allure his eye ;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and Touches so soft still conquer chastity. [there :
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer :
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and
toward :

She told the youngling how god Mars did try
And as he fell to her, so she fell to him. [her,
"Even thus," quoth she, "the warlike god
embrac'd me,"
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms ;
"Even thus," quoth she, "the warlike god
unlac'd me,"
As if the boy should use like loving charms ;
"Even thus," quoth she, "he seiz'd on my lips,
And with her lips on his did not the seizure :
And as she fetch'd breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her
Ah, that I had my lady at this bay, [pleasure.
To kiss and clip me till I run away !

5.

He rose and ran away ; ah, fool too forward !
2.
Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for
When Cythera, all in love forlorn, [shade,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made,
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen :
Hot was the day ; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green
brim :

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argu-
Persuade my heart to this false perjury ! [ment,
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore ; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee ;
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love ;
Thy grace being gained cures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is ;
Then thou, fair sun, that on this earth dost
Exhale this vapour vow ; in thee it is : [shine,
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.

If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise !

6.

The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him.
He, spying her, bound'd in, whereas he stood : [blood !"
"O Jove," quoth she, "why was not I a

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fields ;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty ;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle ;
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty ;
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none faster to deface her.
Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd, [ting !
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swear-
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd,
Dreading my love, the less thereof still fearing !
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love, [Line lost.]
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild ;
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill ;
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds ;
She, silly queen, with more than love's good will, [grounds ;
Forbade the boy he should not pass those
"Oace," quoth she, "did I see a fair sweet youth

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth ;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out-
burneth ; [framing ;
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether ?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

7.

Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth ! [score.
See, in my thigh," quoth she, "here was the
She showed hers : he saw more wounds than
And blushing fled, and left her all alone, [one,

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her,
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him :

Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me,
Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such,
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd,
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.

One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

8.

[vaded,
Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon
Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack, too timely shaded!
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!

Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall
should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why thou left'st me nothing in thy will:
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why I craved nothing of thee still:

O yes, dear friend, I pardon craves of thee,—
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

9.

Crabbed age and youth
Cannot live together:
Youth is full of pleasure,
Age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn,
Age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave,
Age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport,
Age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold,
Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee;
Youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee:—
O, sweet shepherd, hie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

10.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
A shining glass, that vadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As fading gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty, blemish'd once, for ever's lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

11.

[share:
Good night, good rest. Ah, neither be my
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To desert on the doubts of my decay.
"Farewell," quoth she, "and come again to-morrow."
[sorrow.

Fare well I could not, for I sup'd with Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether;
"T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
"T may be, again to make me wander thither:
"Wander," a word for shadows like myself.
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pail.

12.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch; the morning
Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest. [rise
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,

While Philomela sits and sings, I stand mark,
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;
For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished
sight;

Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with
sorrow;

For why, she sigh'd, and bade me come to-
Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;

Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day; good day, of night
now borrow;

Short, night, to-night, and length thyself tomorrow.

13.

It was a lord's daughter, the fairest one of three,
That liked of her master as well as well might Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that Her fancy fell a-turning. [eye could see

Long was the combat doubtful, that love with love did fight,

To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant
To put in practice either, alas, it was a spite

Unto the silly damsel!
But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain,

That nothing could be used, to turn them both
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded

Alas, she could not help it! [with disdain.
Thus art, with arms contending, was victor of
the day,

Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid
Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the
For now my song is ended, [lady gay;

14.

My books feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:

Love is dying,
Faith's denying,
Heart's denying,
Cause of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is plac'd without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss;
O frowning Fortune, curs'd, fickle dame!
For now I see,
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.
In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall;
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,—
O cruel speeding!—
Frighted with gall.
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal;
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all;
But seems afraid.
With sighs so deep
Procures to weep,
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground, [light!
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not Forth; they die;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:
Poor Corydon
Must live alone;
Other help for him I see that there is none.

15.

Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst smite,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy partial might:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young, nor yet unwed.
And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
(A cripple soon can find a halt:)

But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will calm ere night;
And then too late she will repent,
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,—
"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith you had not had it then."

And to her will frame all thy ways;
Spare not to spend,—and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble, true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Press never thou to choose anew:
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

Think women still to strive with men,
To sin, and never for to saint:
There is no heaven, by holy then,
When time with age shall them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But, soft!—enough,—too much I fear,
Lest that my mistress hear my song;
She'll not stick to round me i' th' ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

16.

As it fell upon a day,
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring;
Everything did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity:
"Fie, fie, fie," now would she cry;
"Teru, Teru!" by and by;

That to hear her so complain,
 Scarce I could from tears refrain;
 For her griefs, so lively shewn,
 Made me think upon mine own.
 Ah, thought I, thou mourn'st in vain!
 None takes pity on thy pain:
 Senseless trees, they cannot hear thee;
 Ruthless beasts, they will not cheer thee.
 King Pandion, he is dead;
 All thy friends are lapp'd in lead;
 All thy fellow-birds do sing,
 Careless of thy sorrowing.
 Even so, poor bird, like thee,
 None alive will pity me.
 Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd,
 Thou and I were both beguil'd.
 Every one that flatters thee
 Is no friend in misery.
 Words are easy, like the wind;
 Faithful friends are hard to find:
 Every man will be thy friend,
 Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;

But if store of crowns be scant,
 No man will supply thy want.
 If that one be prodigal,
 Bountiful they will him call,
 And with such-like flattering,
 "Pity but he wera a king."
 If he be addict to vice,
 Quickly him they will entice;
 If to women he be bent,
 They have him at commandment;
 But if Fortune once do frown,
 Then farewell his great renown;
 They that fawn'd on him before,
 Use his company no more.
 He that is thy friend indeed,
 He will help thee in thy need:
 If thou sorrow, he will weep;
 If thou wake, he cannot sleep;
 Thus, of every grief in heart,
 He with thee doth bear a part.
 These are certain signs to know
 Faithful friend from flattering foe.

THE PHOENIX AND TURTLE.

(From the additional poems to CHAKSTON'S Love's Martyr, or Rosalin's Complaint, 1601.)

LET the bird of loudest lay
 On the sole Arabian tree,
 Herald sad and trumpet be,
 To whose sound chaste wings obey.
 But thou, shrieking harbinger,
 Foul pre-cursor of the fiend,
 Augur of the fever's end,
 To this troop come thou not near.
 From this session interdict
 Every fowl of tyrant wing,
 Save the eagle, feather'd king;
 Keep the obsequy so strict.
 Let the priest in surplice white,
 That defunctive music can,
 Be the death-divining swan,
 Lest the requiem lack his right.
 And thou, treble-dated crow,
 That thy sable gender mak'st
 With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
 'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.
 Here the anthem doth commence:—
 Love and constancy is dead;
 Phoenix and the turtle fled
 In a mutual flame from hence,
 So they lov'd, as love in twain
 Had the essence but in one;
 Two distinct, division none:
 Number there in love was slain.
 Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
 Distance, and no space was seen
 'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
 But in them it were a wonder.
 So between them love did shine,
 That the turtle saw his right

Flaming in the phoenix' sight;
 Either was the other's mine.
 Property was thus appall'd,
 That the self was not the same;
 Single nature's double name
 Neither two nor one was call'd.
 Reason, in itself confounded,
 Saw division grow together,
 To themselves yet either-neither,
 Simple were so well compounded;
 That it cried, How true a twain
 Seemeth this concordant one!
 Love hath reason, reason none,
 If what parts can so remain.
 Whereupon it made this threne
 To the phoenix and the dove,
 Co-supremes and stars of love,
 As chorus to their tragic scene.

THERNOS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
 Grace in all simplicity,
 Here enclos'd in cinders lie.
 Death is now the phoenix' nest;
 And the turtle's loyal breast
 To eternity doth rest, Leaving no posterity:—
 'Twas not their infirmity,
 It was married chastity.
 Truth may seem, but cannot be;
 Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
 Truth and beauty buried be.
 To this urn let those repair
 That are either true or fair;
 For these dead birds sigh a prayer.

GLOSSARY.

Subjects, the lowest people.
able, to qualify or uphold.
Absolute, highly accomplished.
Abused, deceived. [perfect].
Abz, to pay dear for.
Abysm, abyss.
Accite, to call or summon.
Acknow, to acknowledge.
Aconatum, wolf's bane.
Action, direction by mute signs, charge or accusation.
Action, action.
Address, to make ready.
Addressed, or address, ready.
Advertisement, admonition.
Advise, to consider, recollect.
Advised, not precipitant, cool.
Affect, to love. [cautious].
Affected, confirmed.
Affid, betrothed.
Affined, joined by affinity.
Affray, to alight.
Affront, to face or confront.
Affs, to betroth in marriage.
Aglet-baby, a diminutive being the size of the tag of a lace.
Agnice, acknowledge, confess.
Alder-lieft, beloved above all things, from leve (dear), alder (of all).
Almain, a German. [the dice].
Ames-ace, the lowest chance of Amort, sunk and dispirited.
An, as, if.
Anchor, anchor.
Ancient, an insign or standard bearer. [bal].
Anthropophagium, a cannibal.
Antick, the fool of the old.
Antres, caves and dens. [farces].
Apple John, species of apple that will keep for two years.
Appointment, preparation.
Apprehension, opinion. [stand].
Apprehensive, quick to understand.
Approbation, entry on probation.
Approof, proof, approbation.
Approved, felt, experienced, convicted by proof.
Argal, a corruption of ergo, therefore.
Argier, Algiers.
Argosies, ships of burthen.

Argument, subject.
Arm-gaunt, to make thin by use of armour.
Arant, avant, begone.
Art, practice as distinguished from theory. [cles].
Articulate, to enter into articulation, exhibited in art. [cles].
Asperion, sprinkling.
Assinego, an ass driver, a fool.
Assured, affianced. [ish fellow].
Astringer, a falconer.
Atomies, minute particles discernible in a ray of sunshine in a dark room.
Atone, to reconcile, set at one.
Atasked, taken to task, corrected.
Attent, attentive.
Audacious, spirited, animated.
Audrey, a corruption of Etheldreda.
Augurs, auguries or prognostications.
Aukward, adverse. [tifications].
Authentic, an epithet applied to the learned.
Avaunt, contemptuous dismissal.
Averring, confirming. [sion].
Avies, salutation.
Aweful, reverend, worshipful.
Awless, not producing awe.
Aye, for ever.

Baccare, give place; but of doubtful meaning.
Bale, misery, calamity.
Balked, bathed or piled up.
Ballona, a cudgel.
Ban, a curse. [tiff].
Bandog, a village dog, or mas-banning, cursing.
Bar, barrier.
Barbe, a kind of veil.
Barful, full of impediments.
Barm, yeast.
Barn, a child.
Barnacle, a kind of shell-fish.
Base, dishonoured.
Base, a rustic game, called prison base.
Bases, a kind of loose breeches worn by knights on horseback.

Basilisks, a species of cannon.
Basta, enough.
Bastard, raisin wine.
Bat, a club or staff.
Bate, strife, contention.
Bate, to flutter as a hawk.
Battel, an instrument with which washerwomen beat Batten, to grow fat. [clothes].
Bawin, brushwood.
Bawcock, a jolly cock.
Bay, the space between the main beams of a roof.
Bay-curtal, a bay docked horse.
Beadsman, one who prays for another.
Beard, to oppose in a hostile manner, to set at defiance.
Bearing-cloth, a mantle used at christenings.
Beal, in falconry, to flutter.
Beaver, helmet in general.
Beck, a salutation made with the head.
Beetle, to hang over the base, being, abode. [a mallet].
Belongings, endowments.
Be-mete, be-measure. [mired].
Be-mailed, be-draggled, be-bending, unequal to the weight.
Bent, the utmost degree of any passion. [able].
Benumbed, inflexible, immovable.
Benvenuto, welcome. [dance].
Bergomask, a kind of rustic
Beshrew, ill befall.
Bestraught, distraught or distracted. [to permit or suffer].
Beteem, to give, to pour out.
Betray, betray.
Bewoman, a term of reproach.
Biggin, a kind of cap.
Bilberry, the whortleberry.
Bilbo, a Spanish swordblade.
Bilboes, a species of fetters used for sailors.
Bill, a weapon carried by watchmen, articles of accusation.
Bin, is.
Bird-bolt, a species of arrow.
Bisson, blind.
Blank, the white mark at which an arrow is shot.

- Blast*, burst. [sign of contempt.
Blasted, or blast, an expres-clear, to deceive.
Blench, to start off.
Blent, bleaded, mixed.
Blind-worm, the slow-worm.
Blood-hollered, dandied with
 blood.
Blown, puffed or swollen.
Blows, swells.
Blunt, stupid, insensible.
Bourl, to accost, to address.
Bob, to trick, to make a fool of.
Bodged, botched, make bungling work.
Boikin, a small dagger.
Boitier, a box to hold a snave.
Bollet, sifted, refined.
Hollered, bedaubed.
Bolting-hutch, the receptacle
 in which the meal is bolted.
Bombard, or bumbard, a barrel.
Bombast, the stuffing of clothes.
Boat, profit, advantage, something over and above.
Bore, demeaned.
Bore, the calibre of a gun, the capacity of the barrel.
Bores, stabs or wounds.
Bosky, woody. [a horse.
Bots, worms in the stomach of Bottled-spider, a bloated spider.
Bourn, boundary.
Bow, yoke. [state of defence.
Brace, armour for the arm,
Brack, a species a hound.
Brack, to salt.
Braid, crafty, strange.
Brake, a thicket, furze-bush.
Brands, part of the antrion.
Brave, to make fine or splendid.
Bravel, a kind of dance.
Breast, voice, surface.
Breath, breathing, voice.
Breathed, injured by constant practice.
Breathing, complimentary.
Breeched, sheathed.
Breadbate, a breeder of strife,
 the bounds of good behaviour
 overpassed. [or enumeration.
Brief, a short account, letter,
Brize, the gad, or horse-fly.
Bronched, spitted, transfixd.
Brock, a badger.
Broken, toothless.
Broker, a matchmaker, a pro-
Brown, height. [cress or pimp.
Brownist, the name of a sect.
Bruit, noise, report.
Bristled, reported with clam-
Brush, detrition, decay. [sur.
Buckle, to bend, to yield to pressure.
- Bugs*, bugbears, terrors.
Bulk, the body. [a skylark.
Bunting, a bird outwardly like Burgonet, a kind of helmet.
Bush, the sign of a public-
 house.
Busky, woody. See Bosky.
Butt-shaft, an arrow to shoot
 at butts with. [command.
Buzom, obedient, under good
By, according to, by means of.
Byrlakin, by our ladykin or little lady.
- Caddis*, a narrow worsted gal-
Caddises, worsted lace. [loom.
Cade, a barrel.
Cadent, falling.
Cage, a prison.
Cain-coloured, yellow. Cain was always painted of that colour in old times—hence yellow for jealousy.
Caiff, a prisoner, a slave, a scoundrel. [phesy.
Calculate, to foretell or pro-
Caliver, a species of musket.
Callet, a lewd woman.
Calm, quail. [wine.
Canary, a sprightly dance.
Candle-waisters, those who sit up all night to drink.
Canker, the dog-rose.
Cantick, candlestick.
Cantel, or candle, a corner or piece of anything.
Cantons, cantos.
Canvas, to sift.
Canvas-climber, a sailor who climbs to adjust the sails.
Cap, the top, the principal.
Cap, to salute by taking off
 the cap.
Capable, perceptible, intelligent, ample, capacious.
Capitulate, to make head.
Capricious, lascivious. [ent.
Captious, capacious or recipi-Carack, a Spanish ship of great bulk.
Carbonadoed, scarred.
Card, perhaps a sea-chart.
Carevez, the motion of a horse:
 (met.) the bounds of good behaviour overpassed.
Carikanet, necklace or chain.
Carl, clown or husbandman.
Carlot, peasant.
Carper, a critic.
Carpet-consideration, on a carpet, a festivity.
Carriage, import.
Carried, conducted or man-
Carry, to prevail over. [aged.
- Cart*, a chariot.
Case, to strip naked.
Casques, helmets. [coat.
Cassock, a horseman's great-Cast, to empty as a pond, to dismiss or reject.
Cast, cast up, reckoned. [term.
Castilian, an opprobrious
Castilano vulgo, a cast term
Cataian, a liar. [of contempt.
Calling, a small lute-string made of catgut.
Cautelous, insidious, cautious.
Cavalerones, airy, gay fellows.
Caviare, a delicacy made of the roes of sturgeon—"too
 good."
Cease, de cease, die, to stop.
Conserve, judgment, opinion.
Centuries, companies of an hundred men each.
Ceremonious, superstitious.
Certes, certainty, in truth.
Cess, measure.
Chace, a term at tennis.
Chair, throne. [gun.
Chamber, a species of great Chamberers, men of intrigue.
Champaign, an open country.
Chance, fortune.
Changingel, a child changed.
Channell, a kennel.
Character, description, handwriting. [strongly.
Character, to write, to insin-Characterly, the matter with which letters are made.
Chares, task-work.
Charge, to put to expense.
Charge, commission, employment.
Charge-house, the free-school.
Chariest, most cautious.
Chariness, caution.
Charitable, dear, endearing.
Charles's-wann, the constellation called the Bear.
Charneco, a sort of sweet wine.
Chaudron, entrails.
Cheater, escheator, an officer in the exchequer, a gamester.
Check, command, control.
Check, to object to, to rebuke.
Checks, probably for ethics.
Cheer, countenance.
Cherry-pit, pitching cherrystones into a little hole.
Cheveril, soft or kid leather.
Cheue, to ruminate, consider.
Chevet, a mangle.
Chide, to respond, to echo, to scold, to be clamorous.
Chiding, sound.
Chiding, noisy.

- Chapine*, a high shoe or clog worn in Venice.
Chough, a bird of the daw kind.
Christom, the white cloth put on a new-baptized child.
Crystals, eyes. [dearment.
Chuck, chicken, a term of endearment.
Chuff, rich, avaricious.
Cuque pace, a kind of dance.
Circumstance, detail of an argument, a circumlocution.
Cital, recital.
Cite, to incite, to show, to utter.
Cittern, a guitar. [prove.
Civil, grave or solemn.
Civil, human creature, anything human.
Black-dish, a beggar's dish.
Clave, to flatter.
Clear-story, a species of windows in a church, clerestory.
Clerkly, like a scholar.
Clap, a key in music.
Cling, to shrink or shrivel up.
Clinguant, glittering, shining.
Clip, to embrace, to infold.
Clout, the white mark at which archers take aim. [families.
Clown, a licensed jester in a street quarrel.
Clubs, a popular cry on a street quarrel.
Clutch, grasped.
Coach-fellow, one who draws with a confederate. [ing.
Coasting, conciliatory, inviting.
Cobloaf, a crusty, uneven loaf.
Cock, cock-boat.
Cockle, a weed.
Cockled, shelled like a cockle.
Cock-shut-time, twilight.
Codling, anciently an immature apple. [pie.
Coffin, the cavity of a raised dog, to falsify, to lie, to defraud.
Cognizance, the badge or token. [ken.
Coin, bustle, stir.
Cold, naked. [ation.
Collect, to assemble by observation.
Collection, corollary, consequence. [coal.
Collied, black, smutted with soot.
Collier, formerly a term of reproach for imposition.
Colour, pretence.
Colourable, specious.
Colours, appearances, deceptions.
Coll, to fool, to trick.
Co-mart, a joint bargain.
Cominate, betrothed.
Combine, to blind. [ment.
Combined, bound by agreement.
Commended, committed.
Commission, authority, power.
Commodity, interest, profit.
Commodity, a comedy.
Compact, made up of.
Companion, fellow.
Company, companion.
Comparative, a dealer in comparisons.
Compare, comparison.
Compassed, round.
Compassionate, plaintive.
Competitors, confederates or associates.
Complements, accomplishments.
Complexion, humour. [ments.
Comply, to compliment.
Compose, to come to a composition.
Composition, contract or bargain, consistency, concordancy.
Composure, composition, composure.
Comptible, submissive. [post.
Con, to study. [thought.
Conceit, fanciful conception.
Concent, connected harmony in general. [solution.
Conclusion, determination, resolution.
Conclusions, experiments.
Concupy, concupiscence.
Condition, temper, character, qualities, vocations, or inclinations.
Condolence, sorrow.
Conduct, conductor.
Coney-catch, a deceitful, cheated.
Coney-catcher, a cheat, or sharper.
Confession, profession.
Confound, to destroy, to expend, to consume.
Confounded, worn or wasted.
Conject, conjecture.
Conjecture, suspicion.
Consigned, sealed.
Consist, to stand upon.
Consort, to keep company with.
Constancy, consistency, stability. [fluctuation.
Constantly, certainly, without intermission.
Contemptible, contemptuous.
Continent, the thing which contains.
Continents, banks of rivers.
Continuous, uninterrupted.
Contraction, marriage contract.
Contrarious, different. [tract.
Contrive, to spend and wear out.
Control, to confute. [out.
Consent, to serve or agree.
Convened, cited, summoned.
Conversation, familiar intercourse, conduct, behaviour.
Converse, interchange.
Conversion, change of condition.
Convertible, convert. [tion.
Convey, to perform sleight of hand, to manage artfully.
Conveyance, theft, fraud.
Convicted, overpowered, baffled.
Convulse, to overpower, subdue, convict.
Convulse, to feast.
Cope, to encounter, to engage.
Cope, covering.
Copped, rising to a cop or head.
Cory, theme.
Coragio, courage.
Corley, dry, withered, husky.
Corollary, surplus.
Corrigible, corrected.
Costard, the head.
Costermonger, a dealer in costers or costards, which were a kind of apple.
Cote, to overtake. [regarded.
Coted, quoted, observed, or observed.
Cotswale, Cotswold in Gloucestershire.
Count, to make account, to reckon upon. [nobleman.
Count, Confect, a spacious countenance, false appearance, hypocrisy. [trait.
Counterfeit, a likeness, a portrait.
Counterpoints, counterpoints.
County, count, earl.
Covered, hollow. [a large tub.
Cowl-staff, a staff for carrying a cowl.
Coy, to soothe or stroke. [ingly.
Coyed, condescended unwillingly.
Coystril, a coward cook, a mean or drunken fellow.
Crier, a tailor or butcher.
Crab, a wild apple.
Crack, dissolution.
Crack, a boy or child, a boy.
Cranks, windings. [child.
Cranks, chants.
Crave, a small trading vessel.
Craven, a degenerate, dispirited cock.
Craven, mean, cowardly, to make cowardly. [up.
Create, compounded or made.
Credent, probable, also credulous.
Cressets, a light set on a cresset, increasing. [beacon.
Crest, the top, the height.
Crestless, those who have no right to arms.
Crisp, curling, winding, curled.
Critic, cynic. [bent, hollow.
Critical, censorious.
Crone, an old worn-out woman.
Crosses, money stamped with a cross, to exult over. [a cross.

Crow-keeper, a scare-crow.
Crown, to conclude.
Crowned, dignified, adorned.
Crownet, last purpose.
Crush, to drink.
Cry, a troop or pack.
Cuisse, armour for the thighs.
Cullion, a despicable fellow.
Cunning, sagacity, knowledge.
Curb, to bend or buckle.
Curiosity, finical delicacy, scrupulousness or captiousness.
Curious, scrupulous.
Curled, ostentatiously dressed.
Currents, occurrences.
Curst, petulant, crabbed, shrewdly, vehemently, un-Curstness, ill-humour. [cry.
Curtail, a dog which mutes the game.
Curtal, a docked horse.
Curtle-ix, or cullace, a broadsword. [custard or pie.
Custard-coffin, the crust of a Customer, a common woman.
Out, a horse.
Cuttle, a knife used by sharpeners.
Cyprus, a transparent stuff.

Daff or doll, to do off, to put Daily, to play or trifle. [aside.
Damn, condemn.
Dank, wet, rotten.
Dankers, natives of Denmark.
Darling, in the dark.
Darraig, to arrange, put in Daub, to disguise. [order.
Daubery, falsehood and im-
Day-bed, a couch. [position.
Day-woman, dairy-maid.
Dear, best, important, dire.
Deary, direful, lonely, solitary.
Death-tokens, spots appearing on those infected by the Deboshed, debauched. [plague.
Deck, to cover, a pack of cards.
Declined, the fallen.
Deem, opinion, surmise.
Defeat, to free, to disembarass.
Defeatures, change of features for the worse.
Defence, art of fencing.
Defend, to forbid. [droitness.
Defly, dexterously, with a-
Defy, to refuse, to disdain.
Degrees, steps.
Delay, to let slip.
Demerits, merits.
Denise, to grant.
Denay, denial. [Franch sou.
Denier, the twelfth part of a Denotements, indications or discoveries.
Denude, strip or divest.

Depart, part.
Departing, separation.
Depend, to be in service.
Deprive, to disinherit. [roots.
Deracinate, to force up by the Derogate, degraded, blotted.
Descant, a term in music, or to harangue about.
Desert, merit.
Design, to mark out.
Despatched, bereft.
Desperate, bold, adventurous.
Detected, suspected or charged.
Determined, sometimes for ended.
Dibble, an instrument used by gardeners.
Dich, dit or do it.
Dickon, familiarly for Richard.
Die, gaining.
Diet, to oblige to fast.
Diffused, extravagant, irregu-Digression, transgression. [lar.
Dildo, the burden of a song.
Disable, to undervalue.
Disappointed, unprepared.
Discandy, to melt sweets, dis-
Disclose, to hatch. [solve.
Discontenting, discontented.
Discourse, reason.
Disdain, disdainful. [lent.
Disease, uneasiness, discom-Dislimns, unpaints, obliterates.
Dismes, tenths.
Disperse, to sprinkle [sponge-
Dispose, discharge as a Dispose, to make terms, to settle matters.
Disposition, frame.
Disputable, disputations.
Dispute, to talk over.
Dissemble, to gloss over.
Dissembling, putting dissimilar things together.
Distaste, to corrupt, to change to a worse state.
Disenchantment, perturbation.
Disempered, ruffled, out of humour. [separate bottles.
Dissections, detachments.
Distraught, distracted.
Diverted, turned out of the course or nature.
Division, the pauses or parts of musical composition.
Doctrina, skill.
Dole, lot, allowance. [France.
Dolphin, the daughter of Don, to do on, to put on.
Done, expended, consumed.
Dotant, dotard.
Double, full of duplicity.
Dout, to do out, extinguish.
Dovle, a feather.

Down-gyved, hanging down like the cinetars which confine the fetters round the Draught, the jakes. [arches.
Drazen, embowelled, axon-
Drew, assembled. [fated.
Dribbling, a term of contempt.
Drive, to fly with impetuosity.
Droffery, a show performed by Drugs, drudges. [puppets.
Drumble, to act lazily and stupidly. [him to me.
Ducane, duc ad me, bring Dudgeon, the handle of a dagger. [grace.
Dur, to endure, to dock, to Dull, melancholy, gentle, soothing. [sensible.
Dull, to render callous, in-Bullard, a person stupidly unconcerned.
Drump, a mournful elegy.
Dup, to do up, to lift up.

Eager, sour, sharp, harsh.
Easings, lambs just dropt
Ear, to plough.
Ear-kissing, whispering.
Eazy, slight, inconsiderable.
Echo, to eke out. [madness.
Ectasy, alienation of mind.
Edward shovel-boards, Edward ing shovel-board.
Effects, affects, or affections.
Eftest, defeat, rendient.
Eld, old time, or persons.
Eloquent, initiation, previous Elf, a fairy. [practical.
Emballed, distinguished by the ball, the emblem of royalty. [view.
Embarr, expose, display to Embossed, inclosed, swelled.
Empers, dominion, sovereign command. [tious contention.
Emulation, rivalry, envy, fac-Engrave, to hide. [sion.
Enfeoff, to invest with power.
Engross, to fatten, to paragon.
Engrossments, accumulations.
Enkindle, to stimulate.
Ennue, to coop up.
Enscence, to protect as with a Enscanned, greasy. [port.
Enshield, shielded.
Entertain, to retain in service.
Entertainment, the pay of an army, admission to office.
Entreatments, the objects of entreaty.
Ephesian, a cant term for a Ercheile, just now. [toper.
Escoted, paid.

- Eel*, a river.
Eperance, the motto of the Esquels, spies. [Perey family.
Essential, existent, real.
Estimate, price.
Estimation, conjecture.
Eterne, eternal.
Even, to act up to.
Excrescent, the beard.
Excrescents, the hair, nails,
 feathers of birds, &c. [use.
Escoute, to employ, to put to Execution, employment or exercise.
Executioners, executioners.
Exempt, excluded.
Exerciss, exhortation, lecture,
 or confession.
Eschale, hale or lug out.
Exhibition, allowance.
Exigent, end.
Exorcist, a person who can lay
Expect, expectation. [spirits.
Expedient, expeditious.
Expiate, tully completed.
Expostulate, to inquire or dis-posture, exposure. [ous.
Express, to reveal.
Expulsed, expelled.
Exuvial, contemptible, a-
Exult, to seize. [ominable.
Exult, in law, violence in Extern, outward. [general.
Extripped, rooted out.
Extracting, that which draws away from everything but its own object.
Extravagant, wandering.
Eyases, nestling hawks.
Eyes musket, the smallest hawk, used for a small child.
Eye, a small shade of colour.
Eylands, glances, looks. See Eyne, eyes. [Ocellada.
Face, to carry a foolish appearance.
Faced, turned up with facings.
Facinorous, wicked.
Fact, guilt.
Factions, active.
Faculties, medicinal virtues,
 office, exercise of power.
Fadge, to suit or fit.
Fading, the burthen of a song.
Fain, fond. [ness.
Fair, beauty, complexion, fair-Fair-betrothed, fairly contracted, honourably affianced.
Faitors, traitors, rascals.
Fall, an ebb.
False, to make false.
Falsing, falsifying.
Familiar, a demon.
Fancy, love. [power of love.
Fancy-free, exempt from the Fang, to seize or gripe.
Fanged, possessed of fangs.
Fantastical, creatures of fancy.
Fap, drunk.
Far, extensively.
Farced, stuffed.
Fashions, furbans or farcy.
Fate, determined, fixed.
Fat, dull. [by fate.
Fate, an action predetermined Favour, countenance, features.
Feat, ready, dexterous.
Feat, an exploit.
Feath, formed, made neat.
Feature, beauty in general,
 cast and make of the face.
Federary, a confederate.
Feeder, an eater, a servant.
Fee-grief, a peculiar sorrow.
Feere or phere, a companion,
Feet, footing. [a husband.
Fell, skin.
Fell-feats, savage practices.
Fellow, companion. [fence.
Fence, the art of, or skill in, de-Feddary, an accomplice, a con-Fester, to corrupt. [fuderate.
Festively, hastily.
Festive terms, splendid phra-
Set, fetched. [aeology.
Fico, a fig.
Fielded, in the field of battle.
Fierce, proud, hasty, venge-Fig, to insult. [ment, rapid.
Fights, clothes hung round a ship to conceal the men from Filed, defiled. [the enemy.
Filed, gone at equal pace with.
Fills, the shafts.
Filths, common sewers.
Finch-egg, a term of reproach for gandy drom.
Fine, the conclusion.
Fine, full of finesse, artful.
Fine, for final.
Virago, for Virago.
Fire-drake, will-o'-the-wisp, or a fire-work.
Fire-new, brand-new, new from Firk, to chastise. [the forge.
Fir, a division of a song.
Fitchew, a polecat.
Fitty, exactly.
Fives, a distemper in horses.
Flap-dragon, a small inflammable substance, which topers swallow in a glass of Flap-jacks, pan-cakes. [wine.
Flaw, sudden violent gust of Played, stripped. [wind.
Flecked, spotted, dappled.
Fleet, to float. [streaked.
Fleeting, inconstant.
Fleshment, first act of military service. [chaps of a hound.
Flewed, having the fews or Flickering, fluttering like the motion of a flame.
Flight, a sort of shooting.
Flote, wave.
Flourish, ornament.
Flush, mature, ripe.
Foeman, an enemy in war.
Foin, to thrust in fencing.
Foison, plenty.
Folly, depravity of mind.
Fond, foolish, or prized by folly.
Fonder, more weak or foolish.
Fond-done, foolishly done.
Fools' minix, baubles with the head of a fool.
Forbid, under interdiction.
Force, power.
Force, to enforce, to urge.
Force, to stuff.
Forced, false.
Fordid, destroyed.
Fordo, to undo, to destroy.
Foredone, overcome.
Foreign, employed in foreign embassies.
Forepast, already had. [lotter.
Fore-slew, to be dilatory, to Foretell, to prevent by anticipation. [den.
Forfended, prohibited, forbid-
Forgetive, inventive, imagin-Forked, horned. [ative.
Formal, not out of form.
Former, foremost. [regular.
Forspent, wasted, exhausted.
Forspoke, contradicted, spoken against.
Forthecoming, in custody.
Forwearing, worn out.
Foul, homely, not fair.
Fox, a cant word for a sword.
Foxship, mean, cunning.
Frampold, peevish, fretful, of Frank, a sty. [cross.
Franklin, a freeholder or yeo-
 man.
Fret, the stop of a musical instrument, which regulates the vibration of the string.
Friend, a lover, a term applicable to both sexes, a par-
Friend, friendship. [amour.
Friend, to befriend.
Frippery, a shop where old clothes were sold.
Frize, a cloth made in Wales.
From, in opposition to.
Fronted, opposed.
Frontier, forehead.
Frontlet, a forehead cloth.

Frush, to break or bruise.
Frustrate, frustrated.
Fulfilling, filling till there be no room for more.
Fulham, a cant term for false.
Full, complete. [dice].
Fumier, fumitory.
Furnished, dressed. [cant term].
Fustilian, from fustly, a

Gaberdine, a loose felt cloak.
Gad, a pointed instrument.
Gone upon the gait means done on the spur of the moment.

Gain-giving, misciving.
Galliard, an ancient dance.
Galliasse, a species of galleys.
Gallow, to scare or frighten.
Gallowglasses, heavy-armed.
Gailymanufry, a medley. [foot].
Garbois, commotion, stir.
Gariah, gaudy, showy.
Garner, to treasure up.
Gasted, frightened.
Gauds, baubles, toys.
Gaze, attention.

Gear, a general word for Geck, a fool. [things or matters].
General, generality.
General, commendious.
Generation, children.
Generosity, high birth.
Generous, most noble.
Gentility, urbanity.
Gentle, noble, high-minded, belonging to gentry.

Gentry, complaisance.
German, alcin.
Germin, seeds begun to sprout.
Gest, a stage or journey.

Gib, a name for a cat.
Giglot, a wanton wench. [or 2s].
Gilder, a coin valued at 1s. 6d.
Gilt, gilding, golden money.
Gimmel, a ring or engine.

Ging, a gang. [emotion].
Gird, a sarcasm or gibe.
Gleek, to joke or scoff, to beguile. [upon].

Glose, to expound, to comment.
Glut, to englut or swallow up.

Gnarled, knotted.
Good-deed, indeed, in very deed.

Good-den, good evening.
Good-fer, gougere, morbus gallicus. [turn].

Good-life, of a moral or jovial.
Gorbellied, fat and corpulent.

Goss, whins.
Gourds, a species of dice.
Gouts, drops.

Grace, acceptableness, favour.
Grace, to bless, to make happy.

Gracious, graceful, lovely.
Grained, furrowed, like the grain of wood, dyed in grain or indented. [thanks].

Grantercy, grand mercy, great.
Grange, the farm-house of a monastery; a lone house.

Gratuity, gratuity.
Gratulate, gratifying, accept-
Grave, to entomb. [able].

Graves, or greaves, armour for.
Greasily, grossly. [the legs].

Green, stripes, not fully formed.
Greenly, awkwardly, unskill-Greets, pleases. [fully].

Grievances, sorrows, sorrowful.
Gries, a step. [affections].

Grossly, palpably.
Groundlings, the frequenters of the pit in the playhouse, who used to stand or sit on the ground.

Growing, accruing.
Guarded, ornamented.

Guards, badges of dignity.
Guardon, reward.

Guerdonist, rewarded.
Guiled, treacherous.

Gules, red, a term in heraldry.
Gulf, the swallow, the throat.

Gun-stones, cannon-balls.
Gurnet, a fish.

Gust, taste, rashness.
Gyve, to catch, to shackle.
Gyves, shackles.

Hack, to become cheap and vulgar.

Haggard, a species of hawk.
Haggard, wild. [of judgment].

Halidom, sentence at the day.
Hand-saw, corrupted from harnshaw.

Hardiment, bravery, stoutness.
Harlock, wild mustard.

Harlot, a cheat.
Harp, to touch on a passion.

Harrois, to conquer, to subdue.

Harry, to use roughly, to haught, haughty. [harass].

Haughty, high, elevated.
Havut, company.

Having, estate or fortune, promotion, allowance of ex-Haviour, behaviour. [pense].

Hav, a term in the fencing-school.

Head, the source, the fountain.
Head, body of forces.

Heat, heated.
Heat, violence of resentment.

Heavy, slow.
Hebenon, henbane.

Hefted, heaved.
Hefts, heavings. [pylon].

Hell, an obscure dangeon in a Helmed, steered through.

Hence, henceforward.
Henchman, a page of honour.

Hent, seized or taken possession of.

Hereby, as it may happen.
Hermits, headmen.

Hest, behest, command.
High-fantastical, fantastical
 to the height. [utmost].

High-repentant, repented to the Hight, called. [follow].

Hiding, a paltry cowardly
Hue, the old poss. case.

Hut, to agree.
Hob-nob, let it happen or not.

Hoist, hoisted.
Hold, taking, bear handling.

Holy, faithful.
Home, completely, in full ex-
Honest, chaste. [tent].

Honestly, liberality.
Honey-stalks, clover-flowers.

Honour, acquired reputation.
Hoodman-blind, blindman's
Hoop, a measure. [buff].

Hose, to ham-string.
Hull, to drive to and fro upon the water, without sails or rudder. [noise].

Humorous, changeable, humid.
Hungry, sterile, unprolific.

Hunt-counter, base tyke.
Hunt's-up, the name of a tune,
 a morning song.

Hurly, noise.
Hurling, to push violently.

Ice-brooke, tempered by being placed into an icy brook.

I jacks, in faith.
Ignomy, ignominy.

Ill-inhabited, ill-dodged.
Ill-nurtured, ill-educated.

Images, children, representatives. [power of imagination].

Imaginary, produced by the Imbare, to lay open or display to view. [ness].

Immanity, barbarity, savage.
Immediacy, close connection.

Impair, unsuitable. [partial].
Impartial, sometimes used for Impaired, waged & staked.

Impeach, to bring into question.
Impeachment, reproach or imputation, hindrance.

Imperious, imperial.
Imperverant, perseverant.

Impetico, to impeticoat or frapocket.

- Importance, importunity.*
Importance, the thing imported.
Importing, implying, denoting.
Impose, injunction, command.
Impositions, commands.
Impout, to supply.
Impress, to compel to serve.
Impress, a device or motto.
Impugn, to oppose, to controvert. [colour.
Incarmedine, to stain of a red Incensed, incited, suggested.
Inclining, compliant.
Inclip, to embrace.
Include, to shut up, to conclude, enclosed. [clude.
Incumb, or kony, fine, delicate.
Incorrect, ill-regulated.
Indent, to bargain and article.
Index, something preparatory.
Indifferent, sometimes for different, impartial.
Indite, to convict.
Induction, entrance, beginning, preparations. [tion.
Indurance, delay, procrastination, extent or power.
Engaged, sometimes for unen-gaged.
Ingen, an ingenious person.
Ingrat, rooted, settled.
Inhabitable, not habitable.
Inherit, to possess.
Inhibit, to forbid.
Inhooped, enclosed, confined.
Inkhorn-mate, a book-mate.
Inkle, a kind of tape, crewel,
or worsted.
Inland, civilized, not rustic.
Insance, to fortify.
Insculped, engraven.
Inseparate, inseparable.
Instances, motives.
Insuit, solicitation.
Intend, to pretend.
Intending, regarding.
Intendant, intention or disposition. [ing.
Intenable, incapable of remaining, eagerness of desire.
Intention, with full attention.
Interested, interested.
Interrogatories, interrogatories.
Intrenchant, that which cannot be cut.
Intrinsic, intrinsic.
Invention, imagination.
Inwardness, intimacy, confidence, to make uneasy. [dence.
Iron-clad, in armour.
Irregular, lawless, licentious.
Issues, consequences, conclusions. [tion.
Iteration, citation, or recita-
- Jack, a term of contempt.*
Jack-a-lent, a puppet thrown at in Lent.
Jack-guardant, a jack in office,
Jaded, treated with contempt,
worthless.
Jar, the noise made by the pendulum of a clock.
Jaunting, jaunting.
Jesses, straps of leather by which the hawk is held on the fist.
Jest, to play a part in a mask.
Jet, to strut.
Journal, daily.
Jonial, belonging to Jove.
Jump, to agree with, to put into agitation.
Jump, hazard, to venture at.
Jump, just.
Justicer, justice, judge.
Jut, to encroach.
Jutty, to project.
Juvenal, a youth.
- Kam, crooked.*
Keckey, hemlock.
Keck, a solid lump or mass.
Keel, to cool.
Keisar, Caesar. [soldiers.
Kernes, light-armed Irish foot
key-cold, as cold as iron. [wife.
Kicksey-wicksey, a pet name for Kiln-hole, a place into which coals are put under a stove.
Kind, nature, species.
Kindless, unnatural.
Kindly, naturally.
Kindly, kindred.
Kinged, ruled by.
Kinsman, near relative.
Kirtle, part of a woman's dress.
Knave, servant.
Knife, a sword or dagger.
Knots, figures planted in box.
Know, to acknowledge.
Know of, to consider.
- Labras, hips.* [town.
Laced mutton, a woman of the Lackey, moving like a lackey
Lag, the lag-end. [or page.
Lances, lance-men.
Land-damn, to banish.
Lands, landing-places.
Lapsed, time suffered to slip.
Large, licentious.
Lass-lorn, forsaken of his mis-
Latch, to lay hold of. [tress.
Latched, or latched, licked over.
Late, lately.
Lated, belated, benighted.
Latten, thin as a lath.
Laund, lawn.
- Lavollas, a kind of dances.*
Lay, a wager.
Leaguer, the camp.
Leasing, lying. [apple.
Leather-coats, a species of Leave, to part with, to give Leech, a physician. [away.
Leer, feature, complexion.
Leet, court-leet, or court of the manor.
Legerity, lightness, nimbleness.
Leges, alleges.
Lenger, resident.
Leman, lover, mistress.
Lenton, short and spare.
Leuway, moral or conclusion
Let, to hinder. [of a poem.
Let be, to desist.
Leud, ignorant, idle, wicked.
Leudly, wickedly.
Libberty, or libbary, a leopard.
Liberal, licentious or gross in language.
Liberty, libertinism.
Licence, an appearance of licentiousness.
Lie, to reside, to be imprisoned.
Lieft, dearest.
Lieger, an ambassador at a Lifter, a thief. [foreign court.
Light o' love, a dance tune.
Lightly, commonly, in ordinary Lightness, levity. [course.
Like, to compare.
Likelihood, similitude. [virtue.
Likeness, specious or seeming Liking, condition of body.
Limbeck, a vessel used in distilling.
Limbo narium, in confinement
Line, bird-line. [or prison.
Line, to cement, to put line
in sack.
Lined, entangled or caught, as with bird-line.
Limit, appointed time.
Limited, appointed, regular,
orderly.
Limits, estimates, calculations.
Lined, delineated.
Link, a torch of pitch.
Linstock, the staff to which the match is fixed when ordnance is fired.
List, the bound or limit.
Lither, flexible, yielding.
Little, miniature.
Livelihood, appearance of life.
Livery, a law phrase belonging to the feudal tenures.
Living, estate, property.
Living, speaking, manifest,
Loach, a small fish. [actual.
Lob, looby, a term of contempt.

Lockram, some kind of cheap
Lode-star, the pole-star. [linen.
Lodged, laid by the wind.
Loose, to laugh.
Loggats, a game played with pins of wood.
Longing, longed for.
Longly, longingly. [the wind.
Loof, to bring a vessel close to Lorn, or town, a base fellow.
Lop, the branches.
Lot, a prize.
Lottery, allotment.
Lover, a mistress.
Lovied, treated with contempt.
Lovts, clowns.
Lozel, a dishonest fellow.
Lunes, innacy, frenzy.
Lurch, to purloin, to deprive.
Lure, a thing stuffed to tempt
 the hawk.
Lush, rank, a dark full colour.
Lustick, lusty, cheerful, plea-
Lusty, saucy. [sant.
Luxurious, lascivious.
Luxuriously, wantonly.
Luxury, lust.
Lym, a blood-hound.

Mace, a sceptre.
Magnifico, a chief man or grandee at Venice.
Magot-pie, magpie.
Mailed, wrapped up, covered.
Makest, dost.
Malick, a wicked art. [wench.
Malkin, a scullion, a coarse Mall, Mrs., alias Mary Frith, or Moll Cutpurse.
Mallecho, mischief.
Malt-worms, tipplers.
Mammering, hesitating.
Mammets, puppets.
Mammoth, to cut in pieces.
Man, to tame a hawk. [tion.
Manage, conduct, administra-Mandrake, a root supposed to have the shape of a man.
Mankind, masculine.
Marches, the borders, limits,
 or confines. [meat.
Marchpane, a species of sweet-
Martlemas, the latter spring.
Match, an appointment, a com-mate, to confound. [pact.
Mated, amazed, dismayed.
Meacocks, a dastardly creature.
Mealed, sprinkled or mingled.
Mean, the tenor in music.
Mean, the middle.
Means, interest, pains.
Measure, the reach.
Measure, a stately solemn Measure, means. [dance.

Measles, lepers.
Medal, portrait.
Medicine, a she-physician.
Meed, reward.
Meed, merit, desert, excellence.
Meet, a match.
Meiny, people, domestics.
Mell, to meddle with.
Memory, memorial.
Mephistophilus, the name of a spirit or familiar.
Mercatante, a merchant.
Mere, exact, entire, absolute.
Mered, mere.
Messes, degrees about court.
Metal, temper.
Metaphysical, supernatural.
Mete-yard, measuring-yard.
Meased, confined. [thief.
Micher, a truant, a lurking Miching, playing truant, skulking about.
Mien, countenance.
Mince, to walk with affected
 delicacy.
Mindling, calling to remembrance, reminding.
Mineral, a mine.
Minnow, a small river fish, a term of contempt.
Minstrelsy, office of minstrel.
Misconceived, misconceivers.
Miscreate, ill-begotten, illegitimate.
Mindoubt, to suspect.
Misery, avarice.
Misprised, mistaken.
Misprising, despising, or undervaluing.
Missives, messengers.
Mistaken, misrepresented.
Mistemperd, angry.
Misthink, to think ill.
Mistress, the jack in bowling.
Mobbed, or mabled, veiled,
 muffled up. [things.
Mode, the form or state of Model, image, representative, copy. [pretty.
Modern, trite, common, meanly
Modesty, moderation.
Module, model, pattern.
Moe, or move, to make months.
Moiety, a portion. [softening.
Mollification, pacification.
Mome, a dull stupid blockhead.
Momentary, momentary.
Mood, anger, resentment.
Moody, melancholy. [manner.
Moon-calf, an inanimateshapeless mass.
Moonish, variable.
Mope, to appear stupid.
Moral, secret meaning.

Morisco, Moor or Moorish, or morris.
Morris-pike, Moorish pike.
Mortal-sloring, that which stares fatally.
Mortified, ascetic, religious.
Moss, greatest.
Motion, a kind of puppet-show.
Motion, divinitary agitation.
Motion, desire.
Motions, indignation.
Motive, assistant or mover, that which contributes to Mould, earth. [motion.
Mouse, to mummock, to tear to Mouse-hunt, a vessel. [pieces.
Moy, a piece of money or a measure of corn.
Much, an expression of disdain.
Much, strange, wonderful.
Much-water, drain of a dung
 hill.
Muffler, a kind of dress for the lower part of the face.
Mulsters, muleteers. [ed.
Mulled, softened and dispirited.
Multipled, multitudinous.
Multiplying, multiplied.
Multitudinous, full of multitudes. [from animals.
Mummy, the liquor procured
 Mundane, worldly.
Mure, a wall.
Murky, dark.
Murrain, a plague in cattle.
Muse, to admire, to wonder.
Muss, a scramble.
Mutine, to rise in mutiny.
Mutines, mutineers.

Napkin, handkerchief.
Napless, threadbare.
Nature, natural parent.
Nay-word, a watch-word or Neat, finical. [by-word.
Neb, or nib, the mouth.
Need, needle.
Neif, list. [lineal descendant.
Nephew, a grandson or any Nether-stocks, stockings.
Neut, the aft.
Nest, nearest.
Nice, silly, trifling.
Nick, reckoning or count.
Nick, to set a mark of folly on.
Nighted, made dark as night.
Night-rule, frolic of the night.
Nill, shall not.
Nine men's morris, a game.
Nobility, distinction, eminence.
Nobless, nobleness.
Noddy, fool, a game at cards.
Noice, on purpose, for the turn.

- Nock-shotten*, that which shoots into capes.
Noontide-nick, noontide point on the dial. [clown].
Northern-man, vir borealis, a North-pole, round-headed, cropt.
Nurle, to nurdle a fondling.
Novum, game at dice.
Nowl, a head.
Nurture, education.
Nuthood, a catchpole.
Obligations, bonds.
Obsequious, serious, as at funeral obsequies, careful of.
Observing, religiously attentive.
Obstacle, obstinate, [business].
Occupation, men occupied in.
Occurents, incidents.
Of, a circle, [eye]. See Eyeliads.
Ofliad, a coat or glance of the eye-dyed, dyed too much.
Over-parted, having too considerable a part.
Over-raught, over-reached.
Over-vested, wrested beyond of, through. [the truth].
Of, frequent, more than.
Old age, ages past. [enough].
Oneyers, accountants, bankers.
Operant, active. [character].
Opinion, obstinacy, conceit.
Opposite, adverse, hostile, ad-
Opposition, combat. [versary].
Or, before. [on the ground].
Or, rings made by the fairies.
Order, measures.
Ordinance, rank.
Orgulous, proud, disdainful.
Ory, refuse.
Osgrey, a kind of eagle.
Osten, show, ostentation.
Ostentation, show, appearance.
Ounce, a small tiger, or tiger.
Ouph, fairy, goblin. [cat].
Ousel-cock, the cock blackbird.
Out, begone.
Out, full, complete.
Outlook, to face down.
Outrived, defeated, a term at the game of glock. [affairs].
Outward, not in the secret of.
Overblow, to drive away, to keep off.
Overture, opening or discovery.
Owe, to own, possess, govern.
Ox-lip, the greater cowslip.
Pack, to make a bargain.
Pack, combined, an accom-Plice, [hand contrivances].
Packings, plottings, under-Paddock, toad.
Pageant, a dumb show.
Paid, punished.
Pain, penalty.
Pains, labour, toil.
Pajock, in the north of England pajock is used for peacock.
Palabras, words. [a crown].
Pale, to empale, encircle with.
Pall, to wrap, to invest.
Palled, vapid.
Palmers, holy pilgrims.
Palmy, victorious.
Palter, to juggle or shuffle.
Paper, to write down, or appoint by writing.
Paper, written securities.
Parcel, reckon up.
Parcel-gift, gift only on certain parts.
Parish-top, a large top formerly kept in every village to be whipped for exercise.
Paritor, an apparitor, an officer of the bishop's court.
Parle, parley.
Parlous, peridious.
Parlous, keen, shrewd.
Part, to depart.
Partake, to participate.
Parted, shared.
Parted, endowed with parts.
Participate, participant, par-
Partisan, a pike. [icipating].
Parts, party.
Pash, a head.
Pash, to strike with violence.
Pashed, bruised, crushed.
Pass, to decide, to assure or convey. [common bounds].
Pass, to exceed, to go beyond.
Passed, excelling, past all expression or bounds.
Passes, what has passed.
Passing, eminent, egregious.
Passion, suffering, [sensations].
Passionate, a prey to mournful.
Passioning, being in a passion.
Passy-measure, a dance.
Pastry, the room where pastry was made.
Patch, a fool, from his wearing a parti-coloured coat.
Path, to walk.
Pathetical, deeply affected.
Patient, to make patient, to compose.
Patines, round bread plates.
Paucus, few.
Pavin, a dance.
Pay, to beat, to hit.
Peat, little pet.
Pedascule, a pedant.
Peer, to come out, to appear.
Peevish, foolish.
Peize, to balance, to keep in suspense, to weigh down.
Pelting, paltry, petty, inconsiderable.
Pennons, small flags.
Perch, a measure of five yards and a half.
Perturable, lasting.
Perdy, par dien, a French oath.
Perfect, certain, well informed.
Perfections, liver, brain, and heart.
Periapt, charms sewed up and worn about the neck.
Perjure, a perjured person.
Person, the old word for parish, the "person" of a parish. "Garrard was person of Honle Lane." Holinshead.
Perspectives, telescopes, glasses.
Pervert, to avert.
Pew-fellow, a companion.
Phere. See Feere.
Phere, to tease or beat, to comb or curry.
Pia mater, the membrane covering the substance of Pick, to pitch. [the brain].
Picked, nicely dressed, foppish.
Pickers, the hands.
Picking, insignificant. [site].
Pick-thank, an officious para-Piece, a word of contempt for Piel'd, shaven. [a woman].
Pight, pitched, fixed.
Pilcher, a pilche, the scabbard.
Pilled, pillaged. [eye].
Pin and web, disorders of the Pinnace, a small ship of burden.
Pioned, dug, cultivated.
Pix, a small chest in which the consecrated host was kept.
Placket, a petticoat.
Plague, to punish.
Plain song, the chant, in plano
Plainly, openly. [cantu].
Plaited, complicated, involved.
Planchet, made of planks.
Plants, the feet.
Platforms, plans, schemes.
Plausive, gracious, pleasing, popular.
Pleached, folded in each other.
Plot, piece or portion.
Point, a metal hook fastened to the hose or breeches.
Point, the utmost height.
Point-de-vie, exactly.
Points, tags to the laces.
Poise, weight or moment.
Polled, lured, cleared.
Pomander, a ball made of perfumes.
Pomewater, a species of apple.

Poor-john, hake dried and Popinjay, a parrot. [salted.
Popularity, plebeian inter-
Port, external pump. [course,
Port, a gate.
Portable, bearable.
Portance, carriage, behaviour.
Possess, to inform, to make to understand.
Possessed, acquainted with,
 fully informed.
Possessed, afflicted with mad-
Polch, to push violently. [mess.
Potents, potentates. [perfume.
Pounce-box, a small box for Power, force, an army.
Practice, unlawful or insidious stratagem.
Practisants, confederates in stratagems. [able arts.
Practise, to employ unwarrant-Prank, to adorn, to dress ostentatiously, to plume.
Precedent, original draft.
Precept, a justice's warrant.
Precession, a great pretender to sanctity. [vance.
Prefer, to recommend, to ad-
Pregnancy, readiness.
Pregnant, ready, plain, evident, apposite. [mankind.
Pregnant enemy, the enemy of Prejudice, sent before the time.
Prenominate, already named.
Pre-ordinance, ordinance, already established.
Presence, the presence-chamber, a public room.
Presence, dignity of mien,
Prest, ready. [form, figure.
Pretence, design, intention.
Pretend, to intend, design.
Pretended, purposed or in-present to anticipate. [tended.
Prick, the point on the dial.
Pricks, prickles, skewers.
Prig, to flitch.
Prime, youth.
Prime, prompt. [important.
Primer, more urgent, more
Primer, a game at cards.
Principals, rafters of a building.
Princox, a cockcomb, or spoiled
Probal, probable. [child.
Process, summons.
Procure, to bring. [ous.
Prodigious, portentous, omin-Proface, much good may it do
 you. [coming.
Profession, and end purpose of Progress, a royal journey of state.
Project, to shape or form.

Prompture, suggestion, temptation. [prompt.
Prone, sometimes humble, or Proof, confirmed state of manhood.
Propagate, to advance or im-
Propagation, getting. [prove.
Proper, well-looking, handsome.
Proper-false, proper or fair,
 and false or deceitful.
Propertied, taken possession of.
Properties, incidental necessaries to a theatre.
Property, due performance.
Property, a thing quite at disposal.
Propose, to image, to imagine.
Proposing, conversing. [state.
Propriety, regular, and proper
Prologue, to lengthen or pro-
Provand, provender. [long.
Provincial, Provencal, from Provence. [province.
Provincial, belonging to one's Provost, sheriff or gaoler.
Prune, to plume.
Pugging, thievish.
Puke, a colour between russet
Pun, to pound. [and black.
Purchase, stolen goods.
Purchased, acquired by unjust methods.
Purlien, border, enclosure.
Persuivants, heralds.
Putter-in, one who instigates.
Putter-out, one who places out money at interest.
Putting-on, spur, incitement.
Puttock, a degenerate species of hawk.
Put to know, compelled to acknowledge.
Quail, to faint, to sink.
Quaint, fantastical.
Quaint-gazes, a game running the figure of eight. [tion.
Quaked, thrown into trepida-Qualify, to lessen, moderate.
Quality, confederates. [of life.
Quality, profession, condition Quarrel, a quarreller, the cause of a quarrel. [killed.
Quarry, the game after it is Quart d'ecu, fourth part of a French crown. [station.
Quarter, the allotted posts.
Quat, a pimple. [unsettled.
Queasy, squeamish, delicate.
Quell, to murder, to destroy.
Quern, a hand-mill.
Quest, inquest or jury, search, expedition.

Question, conversation.
Questrist, one who goes in search of another.
Quests, reports.
Quick, lively, spritely, living.
Quicken, to animate.
Quiddits, subtleties.
Quillets, law chicanery.
Quintain, a post set up for various exercises.
Quips, reproaches and scoffs.
Quire, to play in concert.
Quil, quitted.
Quil, to requite or answer.
Quittance, return of obliges.
Quiver, nimble, active. [tious.
Quote, to observe or regard.
Rabato, an ornament for the neck.
Rabbit-sucker, a weasel.
Race, original disposition, inborn qualities, a snatch or Rack, wreck. [flavour.
Rack, to exaggerate.
Rack, to harass by exactions.
Rack, the fleeting away of the highest clouds.
Racking, in rapid motion.
Rag, an opprobrious epithet.
Ragged, rugged.
Rake, to cover.
Rampallion, a ramping low
Rank, rate or pace. [creature.
Rank, grown up to a great height and strength.
Rapt, rapturously affected.
Rapture, a fit.
Rarely, curiously, happily.
Rascal, applied to lean deer.
Rash, heady, thoughtless,
 quick, violent.
Rash remonstrance, premature
Rated, chided. [discovery.
Reached, reached.
Ravin, to devour eagerly.
Ravin, ravenous.
Ravined, glatted with prey.
Raw, ignorant, unripe, unskil-
 ful.
Rawly, young and helpless.
Rayed, bewrayed.
Razed, slashed, raised.
Rear-mouse, a bat.
Reason, discourse.
Reason, to talk, to argue for.
Rebeck, an old musical instru-
Receipt, receptacle. [ment.
Receiving, ready apprehension.
Recheate, a sound by which the dogs are called back.
Reck, to care for, to mind, to attend to. [flagrant.
Recorder, a kind of flute or

- Secure*, to recover.
Sed-lattice, the sign of an ale-house.
Sed-plague, erysipelas. [house.
Seduce, to bring back.
Seedy, discoloured by smoke,
 smoky, greasy.
Seftell, to refuse.
Sefer, to reserve to.
Seeward, look. [rily.
Seignment, government, authority, exchange of salutation.
Seignior, recompense, return. [connected.
Seignior, nearly related, or remembered, remembering.
Seignior, admonition.
Seignior, pity, tenderness of heart. [ness.
Seignior, removal or remote.
Seignior, remote, requested.
Seignior, to describe.
Seignior, a confession, an accuse, to renounce. [count.
Seignior, to renounce.
Seignior, to recall.
Seignior, reporters.
Seignior, confusion.
Seignior, to resist.
Seignior, boasting of.
Seignior, to be firmly persuaded,
 resolve, to dissolve. [satisfied.
Seignior, consideration, caution.
Seignior, respectable, respectful, formal.
Seignior, cool, considerate.
Seignior, respectfully.
Seignior, handed down.
Seignior, to reverberate.
Seignior, revolters.
Seignior, to enclose.
Seignior, to destroy.
Seignior, split.
Seignior, wanton.
Seignior, just, even.
Seignior, drawn in a right
 line, a circle. [cause.
Seignior, environed, encircled.
Seignior, come to the height.
Seignior, the bank or shore.
Seignior, equal rank.
Seignior, partners.
Seignior, to burst, to fire.
Seignior, vagrants.
Seignior, rummage.
Seignior, a despicable person.
Seignior, the cross.
Seignior, to squat down.
Seignior, roguery.
Seignior, abusive language.
Seignior, a provincial name for ox.
Seignior, rough, unceremonious.
Seignior, whispered.
Seignior, a country dance.
- Round*, whispering.
Roundure, circle.
Rouse, a draught of jollity.
Royal, due to a king.
Royalty, nobleness, supreme excellence.
Royish, mangy, or scabby.
Ruddock, the redbreast.
Ruff, the folding of the tops of boots.
Ruffle, to riot, to create disruffling, rustling. [turbance.
Ruin, displeasure producing ruin, pity, compassion. [ruin.
Sacring-bell, bell announcing the approach of the host.
Sadly, seriously.
Sadness, seriousness.
Saggy, or swaggy, to sink down.
Sallet, a helmet, a salad.
Saltiers, satyrs.
Sanded, of a sandy colour.
Satisfy, rest with satisfaction.
Savage, sylvan, uncultivated.
Savage, wildness. [wild.
Saw, not a proverb, but the whole tenor of any discourse.
Say, all.
Say, a sample, a taste or relish.
Scarf, the gallery part of the theatre. [poor, filthy.
Scald, a word of contempt.
Scale, to disperse, to put to scale, over-reached. [flight.
Scaling, weighing.
Scall, an old word of reproach.
Scamble, to scramble.
Scamell, a limpet.
Scan, to examine nicely.
Scant, to be deficient in, to contract. [tion.
Scantling, measure, proportion of wit, sallies, irregularities.
Scarfed, decorated with flags.
Scath, destruction, harm.
Scath, to do an injury. [tive.
Scathful, mischievous, destructive, the head, or a petty fortification.
Scotched, cut slightly.
Scotmen, fencers.
Scorp, a writing, a list.
Scorvles, scabby fellows.
Sculls, great numbers of fishes
 swimming together.
Scutched, whipt, carted.
Seal, to strengthen or commend, lard. [plete.
Seam, lard.
Seamell, the sea-mew.
Sear, to stigmatize, to close.
See Sore. [impres-Season, to temper, to mix, to
- Seasoned*, established or settled
Seat, throne. [by time.
Seet, a cutting in gardening.
Seel, to sew up.
Seeling, blinding.
Seeming, specious, hypocritical.
Seeming, seemingly.
Seem, versed, practised.
Seld, seldom.
Semblably, in resemblance,
Seniory, seniority. [allike.
Sennet, a flourish on cornets.
Sense, reason, natural affection, feeling, sensual passion.
Sensible, having sensation.
Septentrion, the north.
Sequestration, separation.
Sere, or sear, dry.
Serppo, a kind of letter.
Serve, to fulfill.
Serve, to accompany.
Sessa, be quiet.
Set, seated.
Sotobos, a species of devil. [ated
Several, separated, appropri-Sever, an officer who placed the dishes on the table.
Shame, to disgrace.
Shame, modesty.
Shard-burne, borne by shards
 or scaly wings.
Shards, the wings of a beetle.
Shards, broken pots or tiles.
Sharked, picked up as a shark collects his prey. [lustre.
Sheen, shining, splendour,
Sheer, pellucid, transparent.
Shent, scolded, rebuked,
 ashamed, disgraced.
Shent, to reprove harshly.
Sheriff's-post, a large post set up at the door of that officer for affixing proclamations.
Shive, a slice. [(&c.
Shot, a shooter. [dog.
Shoughs, shocks, a species of Shouldered, rudely thrust into.
Shovel-board, a game.
Shrewd, having the qualities
Shrift, confession. [of a shrew.
Shrive, to confess, to call to confession.
Shut-up, to conclude.
Side-sleeves, long sleeves.
Siege, stool, seat, rank.
Sight, the perforated part of a sightless, unsightly. [helmet.
Sign, to show, to denote.
Silly, simple or rustic.
Silly, sooth, plain, simple truth.
Sincere, honest.
Sinew, strength.
Single, weak, debile, small,
 void of duplicity or guile.

- Sink-a-pace*, cinque-pace, a dance.
- Sir-reverence*, a corruption of Sith, since. [save-reverence.]
- Sithence*, thence.
- Sizes*, allowances of victuals.
- Skins-mates*, loose companions.
- Skinker*, a tapster. [Jonn.]
- Skirr*, to scour, to ride hastily.
- Slack*, to neglect.
- Slave*, to treat as a slave.
- Sleave*, the unravelled knotty part of the silk. [sledge.]
- Sledged*, riding in a sled or sledge, subtle practices.
- Slips*, a contrivance of leather, to start two dogs at the same time.
- Sliver*, to cut a piece or slice.
- Slops*, loose breeches, or trousers.
- Slough*, the skin which the serpent annually throws off.
- Slubber*, to do anything carelessly, imperfectly, to obscure.
- Smirched*, soiled or obscured.
- Sneap*, to check or rebuke, a sneaping, nipping. [rebutte.]
- Snack-up*, a cant phrase, "go hang yourself."
- Snuff*, hasty anger.
- Snuffs*, dislikes.
- Spot*, spot, turpitude, reproach.
- Solely*, alone.
- Sollicit*, courtship.
- Sollicit*, to excite.
- Soliciting*, information.
- Solidares*, an unknown coin.
- Sometimes*, formerly.
- Sooth*, truth.
- Sooth*, sweetness.
- Sorel*, a deer during his third year.
- Sorriest*, worthless, vile, [year.]
- Sorry*, sorrowful or dismal.
- Sort*, a company, a pack, ranks and degrees of men.
- Sort*, to happen, to agree.
- Sort*, the lot.
- Sort and suit*, figure and rank.
- Sot*, a fool.
- Soul-fearing*, soul-appalling.
- Sound*, to declare or publish.
- Sound*, soundly.
- Sound*, to pull by the ears.
- Souter*, perhaps the name of a Spanned, measured. [bound.]
- Specialty*, particular rights.
- Sped*, the fate decided.
- Speed*, event. [bars, &c.]
- Sperr*, to shut up, defend by Spleen, humour, caprice, spirit, resentment. [ous speed.]
- Spleen*, violent hurry, tumult.
- Spleens*, inclination to spiteful Spot, stain or disgrace. [mirth.]
- Spotted*, wicked.
- Sprag*, or spacket, apt to learn.
- Spread*, to stand separately.
- Sprighted*, haunted.
- Sprightly*, ghostly.
- Sprights*, spirits. [to horses.]
- Springhall*, a disease incident Springing, blooming in the spring of life.
- Spurs*, the longest and largest roots of trees.
- Square*, to quarrel.
- Square*, regular, equitable, just, suitable.
- Square*, compass, comprehension, or complement.
- Squarer*, a quarrelsome fellow.
- Squash*, an immature peacock.
- Squiny*, to look askint.
- Squire*, a square or rule. [tion.]
- Sluggers*, delirious perturbation.
- Stale*, a bait or decoy to catch Stale, a pretence. [birds.]
- Stale*, to allure.
- Stand*, to withstand, to resist.
- Standing bowls*, bowls elevated on feet. [hawk.]
- Stannylat*, the common stone-slar, a scar of that appearance.
- Stark*, stiff.
- Starkly*, stiffly.
- Starred*, destined.
- State*, a chair with a canopy State, standing. [over it.]
- State*, official state, dignity.
- States*, persons of high rank.
- Station*, the act of standing.
- Statist*, statesman.
- Staves*, the wood of the lances.
- Slay*, a hinderer, a supporter.
- Stead*, to assist or help.
- Sticking-place*, the stop in a machine. [aidemen.]
- Sticklers*, arbitrators, judges.
- Stigmatical*, marked or stigmatized.
- Stigmatick*, one on whom nature has set a mark of deformity.
- Still*, constant or continual.
- Stint*, to stop, to retard.
- Stith*, an anvil. [a rapier.]
- Stocata*, a thrust or stab with Stock, a term in fencing.
- Stock*, stocking.
- Stomach*, passion, pride, stubborn resolution, constancy, resolution.
- Stoop*, a measure somewhat more than half a gallon.
- Sloup*, a kind of flagon.
- Stover*, a kind of thatch.
- Strachy*, probably some kind of domestic office.
- Straight*, immediately.
- Strain*, descent, lineage.
- Strain*, difficulty, doubt.
- Strait*, narrow, avaricious.
- Straited*, put to difficulties.
- Strange*, odd, alien, becoming a stranger, a stranger.
- Strangely*, wonderfully.
- Strangeness*, shyness, distant.
- Stranger*, an alien. [behaviour.]
- Strangle*, to suppress.
- Stratagem*, great or dreadful [event.]
- Strict*, hard.
- Strive*, to contend.
- Stuck*, a thrust in fencing.
- Stuff*, baggage.
- Stuff*, substance or essence.
- Submerged*, whelmed under water.
- Subscribe*, to agree to, to yield, to surrender.
- Subscription*, obedience.
- Subtily*, deception.
- Subtle*, smooth, level.
- Success*, succession.
- Successive*, belonging to the succession.
- Successively*, by order of success. [cession.]
- Sudden*, violent.
- Sufficiency*, abilities.
- Suggest*, to tempt, to prompt, to instigate.
- Suggestion*, hint.
- Suggestions*, temptations. [tempt.]
- Suited*, dressed.
- Sullen*, obstinately troublesome.
- Summer-swelling*, that which swells or expands in summer.
- Summoners*, summoning officers.
- Sumpter*, a horse that carries necessities on a journey.
- Superfluous*, over-clothed.
- Superstitious*, serving with superstitious attention.
- Supposed*, counterfeited, imagined. [surly.]
- Sure*, safe, out of danger.
- Sur-reined*, over-worked, ridden.
- Suspire*, to breathe. [follow.]
- Swaggerer*, a roaring, fighting Swart, or swarth, black or dark brown.
- Swashing*, noisy, bullying.
- Swath*, the grass a mower cuts down by one stroke of his scythe. [child.]
- Swath*, the dress of a new-born Sway, the whole weight, momentum.
- Swetting*, a species of apple.

- Stoof*, ready.
Stange-bucklers, rakes, rioters.
Sweep, the descent of a bird of prey.
Unwounded, fainted.
Table, a tablet, the palm of the hand extended.
Table, a picture. [randoms].
Tables, table-books for memorabilia.
Tabourine, a small drum. [pace].
Tag, the lowest of the population.
Taint, to throw a slur upon.
Take-up, to contradict, to call to an account.
Take-up, to levy.
Tall, stout, bold, courageous.
Tallow-knee, the fat of an ox.
Tame, ineffectual. [for cow].
Tamest, flat, spiritless. [yellow].
Tame-snake, a contemptible.
Tarte, to stimulate, to excite, provoke.
Tartar, Tartarus, the fabled place of future punishment.
Task, to keep busied with acropies.
Tassel-gentle, i.e., tercel gentle, a species of hawk.
Tandry, a kind of necklaces worn by country girls.
Tazation, censure or satire.
Ten, sorrow, grief.
Temper, to mould like wax.
Temper, temperament, constitution.
Temperance, temperature.
Tempered, rendered pliable.
Tend, to attend upon, to wait for. [tion].
Tender, to regard with affection.
Tendering, watching with tenderness.
Tent, to take up residence.
Termagant, the supposed god of the Saracens.
Termagant, furious.
Testern, gratified with a tester, or sixpence.
Tetchy, touchy, peevish, fretful.
Tharborough, thirdborough, a peace officer.
Theoric, theory.
Thieves, muscular strength.
Thick, in quick succession.
Thick-pleached, thickly interwoven.
Thill, the shafts of a cart.
Thought, melancholy. [ging].
Thrausical, boastful, brag.
Thread, to pass through.
Three-man-beetle, an implement used for driving piles.
Three-pile, rich velvet.
Thrift, a state of prosperity.
Throes, emits as in parturition.
Thrum, the extremity of a weaver's warp.
Thrumm'd, made of coarse woollen cloth.
Tib, a wanton.
Tickle, ticklish.
Tickle-brain, a strong liquor.
Tight, handy, adroit.
Tightly, cleverly, adroitly.
Tilly-valley, an interjection of [contempt].
Till, tillage.
Timeless, untimely.
Tinct, tincture.
Tire, headdress. [con].
Tire, to fasten, to fix the talons.
Tire, to be idly employed on.
Tired, adorned with ribands.
Tod, to yield or produce a tod, or twenty-eight pounds.
Tokened, spotted as in the plague.
Toll, to enter on the toll-book.
Tolling, taking toll. [girl].
Tomboy, a masculine, forward.
Topless, that which has nothing above it, supreme.
Topple, to tumble. [feeling].
Touch, sensation, sense, or.
Touch, exploit or stroke.
Touch, a spice or particles.
Touch, touchstone.
Touched, tried.
Touche, features.
Toward, in a state of readiness.
Toys, rumours, idle reports, fancies, freaks of imagination.
Toze, to pull or pluck. [tion].
Trace, to follow.
Trade, a custom, an established habit.
Tradition, traditional practices.
Traditional, adherent to old customs. [age of the game].
Trail, the scent left by the past.
Tranect, a ferry.
Translate, to transfer, to explain.
Trash, a hunting plume, to.
Travel, to stroll. [correct].
Traverse, a term in military.
Traversed, across. [exercise].
Tray-trip, kind of game at draughts.
Treachers, treacherous persons.
Trenchal, cut, curved. [sons].
Trick, trick of the times.
Trick, peculiarity of voice, face, &c.
Trick, unsared, painted, in.
Tricking, dress. [heraldry].
Tricky, clever, adroit. [farina].
Trigon, Arics, Leo, and Sagittarius.
Triumph, masques, revels.
Trojan, cant word for a thief.
Troll, to sing trippingly.
Trol-my-dames, a game.
Trowsers, trousers.
Trow, to believe.
Truth, honesty.
Tucket, or tucket, sonorous, a flourish.
Turlygood, or turlypin, a gipsy.
Turn, to become accented.
Turquoise, a precious stone.
Twangling, an expression of contempt.
Twigg, wickered.
Twilled, adorned with twill-pants, i.e., cuplike water-flowers.
Tyed, limited, circumscribed.
Type, distinguishing mark, show, or emblem. [district].
Tything, division of a place, a.
Umber, a dusky yellow-coloured earth.
Unbered, discoloured.
Unaccustomed, unseasonal, indecent. [unction].
Unanled, without extreme.
Unavoided, unavoidable.
Unbarbed, uncovered, beard.
Unbated, not blunted. [less].
Unbolt, to open, explain.
Unbolted, coarse.
Unbonneted, without an addition from dignities.
Unbookish, ignorant.
Unbreathed, unexercised, unpractised. [fox-hunting].
Uncease, to dig out, a term in.
Uncharged, unattacked.
Unclew, to draw out, to exhaust. [adorned].
Uncoined, real, unrelined, unconfirmed, unpractised in the ways of the world.
Under generation, the antipodes.
Undergo, to be subject to.
Under-shinker, a tapster, an under-drawer.
Undertaker, one who takes upon himself the quarrel of another. [obey].
Underwrite, to subscribe, to.
Under-ought, under-worked, undetermined.
Undeserving, undeserved.
Unsub, scarcely, not easily.
Unexpressive, inexpressible.
Unhappy, unlucky.
Unhatched, not gut or silvered over. [cares].
Unhoused, free from domestic

- Unhousel'd*, not having received the sacrament.
Union, a species of pearl.
Unkind, contrary to kind or nature.
Unmastered, licentious.
Unnoed, that which has no owner.
Unproper, common.
Unqualitied, unmanned, disarmed of his faculties.
Unquestionable, unwilling to be conversed with.
Unready, undressed.
Unrespective, inattentive to consequences.
Unstated, untried.
Unstinting, always opening, never at rest.
Unsmirched, clean, not defiled.
Unsquar'd, unadapted to their subject.
Unstanch'd, incontinent.
Untraced, singular, not in common use.
Untrimmed, undressed.
Unvalued, invaluable.
Up-spring, upstart.
Urchins, hedgehogs.
Usance, usury.
Use, to make a practice of.
Use, interest.
Used, behaved.
Utis, a merry festival.
Utter, to vend by retail.
Utterance, the extremity of defiance.
Vade, to fade.
Vail, to condescend to look, to let down, to bow, to sink.
Vailing, lowering.
Vain, vanity.
Valance, fringed with a beard.
Validity, value.
Vanbrace, armour for the arm.
Varlet, a servant or footman to a warrior.
Vase, waste, dreary. [before.
Vaunt, the avant, what went Vaward, the fore part.
Velure, velvet.
Venew, a bout, a term in fencing.
Vent, rumour, matter for discourse.
Ventages, the holes of a flute.
Venys, hits in fencing.
Verbal, verbose, full of talk.
Very, immediate. [tion.
Via, a cant phrase of exultation, the fool of the old mode.
Vice, to advise. [ralities.
Vice, grasp.
Virginalling, playing on the virginal, a spinnet.
Virtue, the most efficacious part, valour.
Virtuous, salutiferous.
Virtuous, belonging to good breeding.
Vixen, or fixen, a female fox.
Vizaments, advisements.
Votarist, supplicant.
Vouchsafed, vouchsafing.
Voz, tone or voice.
Vulgar, common.
Vulgarly, publicly.
Waft, to beckon.
Wage, to fight, to combat, to prescribe to.
Waist, the middle.
Wannion, vengeance. [ceased.
Wappened, decayed or dis-
Ward, guardianship.
Warden, a species of pears.
Warder, guard, sentinel.
Warn, to summon.
Wassels, meetings of rustic mirth.
Water-rug, a kind of dog.
Water-work, water-colours.
Waxen, increase.
Wealth, weal or prosperity.
Ween, to think, to imagine.
Weet, to know.
Welkin, the colour of the sky, blue. [excellence.
Well-found, of acknowledged Wend, to go.
Whelked, varied with protuberances.
Wh'er, whether. [berances.
Where, whereas.
Whiffler, an officer who walks first in processions.
Whiles, until.
Whipstok, a carter's whip.
Whirring, hurrying away.
Whist, silence.
White-death, the chlorosis.
Whiting-time, bleaching time.
Whitsters, the bleachers of linen.
Whittle, a species of knife.
Whooping, measure or reckoning.
Wilderness, wildness.
Will, wilfulness.
Wimple, a hood or veil.
Winking-gates, gates hastily closed in time of danger.
Wis, to know.
Wish, to recommend.
Wit, to know.
Wits, senses.
Witty, judicious, cunning.
Woman-tired, hen-pecked.
Wondered, able to perform wonders.
Wood, crazy, frantic.
Woolward, clothed in wool as pilgrims and penitentiaries.
World, to go to the, to be married.
Worth, wealth or fortune, the value, full quota or proportion.
Worts, cabbage.
Wot, to know.
Wrest, an instrument for tuning the harp.
Wrested, obtained by violence.
Writhled, wrinkled.
Wrought, worked, agitated.
Wrung, pressed, strained.
Wrying, deviating.
Yare, ready.
Yarely, readily, nimbly.
Yearns, grieves or vexes.
Yeasty, or yeasty, foaming or frothy.
Yeild, to inform of, condescend to.
Yeild, to reward.
Yellowness, jealousy.
Yeoman, a bailiff's follower.
Zany, a buffoon, a Merry Andrew.
Zed, a term of contempt.

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

Υ ΚΑΙ ΕΠΙΣΤΗΜΩΝ

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας