

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

GRVER-00337

ΔΗΜΟΣΙΑ ΒΙΒΛΙΟΘΗΚΗ

700 ΒΕΡΟΙΑΣ

Αριθ. εισ 1662/58

Δωρεά: Υπουργείου

ΟΥΡΕΣΙΟ
Πολιτισμού και Επιστημών

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

THE WORKS OF
WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE

.
.
.
.

THE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE

With Life, Glossary, etc., Prepared from the Texts of the First Folio, the Quartos and compared with recent Commentators by the Editor of the "Chandos" Classics

The "Victorian" Edition

LONDON

1906

FREDERICK WARNE AND CO
AND NEW YORK

Δημόσια Κεντρική Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

THE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

With Life, Glossary, and Preface from the Text of the First Folio, the Quartos and compared with recent Commentaries
by the Editor of the "Classics" Series

THE "NATIONAL" EDITION

LONDON
FREDERICK WARNE AND CO.
AND NEW YORK

PREFACE.

In preparing the text of this Edition of Shakspeare, reference has been made to the First Folio, the Quartos, the notes of the Variorum Edition, and the best following ones. The closer the text can be kept to the earliest authorities, the nearer we must necessarily be to the true work of Shakspeare; for, as Dr. Johnson has wisely observed, "Though much credit is not due to the fidelity, nor any to the judgment of the first publishers, yet they who had the copy before their eyes were more likely to read it right than we who read it only by imagination." Therefore the text of the earliest Editions has been as faithfully as possible reproduced in the following volume.

It is true that the First Folio is disfigured by defective printing, errors, and slight omissions, but it is the sole authority for many of the finest plays. In it "The Tempest," "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "Winter's Tale," "Measure for Measure," "Coriolanus," "Julius Cæsar," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Macbeth," and "Cymbeline" were first printed, and of these it is the sole authoritative text.

The Quartos of the other plays contain many lines, several long passages, and in one instance a whole scene, which are not to be found in the Folio version of them. The text and arrangement of the metre in the Quartos are, also, occasionally to be preferred.

Emendations when absolutely required have been made by comparison of various copies, those being adopted that appear most in harmony with the original.

The arrangement of the plays is the same as that of the First Folio, as far as the end of the Histories, after that they have been differently arranged; the Greek and Roman tragedies being placed together, the romantic dramas following, and the two doubtful plays of "Titus Andronicus" and "Pericles" closing the series.

The text of the two poems, the "Venus and Adonis" and "Lucrece," has been prepared from the early Edition of each—1593 and 1594—collated with the subsequent Editions.

▼

The Sonnets follow the text of the Quarto (1609) with a few necessary emendations, for some of which the reader is indebted to Malone and Dyce. The arrangement or sequence of the sonnets is also that of the Quarto.

Of "The Passionate Pilgrim," only those poems have been retained which are ascribed with reason to Shakspeare; the sonnets in it taken from the play are, also, omitted as mere repetitions.

The expressions and phrases of Shakspeare have become so blended and imbedded as it were in our language, that they will probably never become obsolete; but some of the words used by him are, or are used in a different sense from that which belongs to them in the present day: a Glossary has, therefore, been carefully prepared, and will be found at the end of the volume.

With it we close the pages of wit, wisdom, and matchless poetry of the greatest dramatist and poet in the world, proud of the knowledge that Shakspeare belongs to England, and is the best exponent of her character and genius.

THE EDITOR OF THE "CHANDOS" CLASSIC.

ΠΕΡΙ ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗΣ

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
MEMOIR OF SHAKSPEARE,	ix
SHAKSPEARE'S WILL,	xiv

THE COMEDIES.

THE TEMPEST,	1
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA,	23
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR,	45
MEASURE FOR MEASURE,	72
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS,	99
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING,	117
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST,	143
MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM,	170
THE MERCHANT OF VENICE,	191
AS YOU LIKE IT,	217
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW,	243
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL,	270
TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL,	299
THE WINTER'S TALE,	324

THE HISTORIES.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING JOHN,	355
THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING RICHARD II.,	381
THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.,	409
THE SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.,	438
THE LIFE OF KING HENRY V.,	470
THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI.,	501
THE SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.,	529
THE THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.,	561
THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING RICHARD III.,	593
THE LIFE OF KING HENRY VIII.,	630

THE TRAGEDIES, ETC.

	PAGE
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA,	662
TIMON OF ATHENS,	696
THE TRAGEDY OF CORIOLANUS,	720
THE LIFE AND DEATH OF JULIUS CÆSAR,	756
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA,	781
KING LEAR,	815
CYMBELINE, KING OF BRITAIN,	849
THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH,	885
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK,	909
ROMEO AND JULIET,	947
OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE,	978
TITUS ANDRONICUS,	1012
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE,	1038

THE POEMS.

VENUS AND ADONIS,	1062
LUCRECE,	1075
SONNETS,	1095
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT,	1115
THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM,	1119
THE PHOENIX AND TURTLE,	1122

GLOSSARY,	1123
---------------------	------

MEMOIR OF SHAKSPEARE.

A LIFE of peace and prosperity furnishes but little matter for a chronicle. Such, doubtless, with but a brief interval, was that of England's greatest poet, for the record of it is brief and jejune in the extreme; only to be traced in registers and occasional notices. Unhappily for us, Shakspeare did not find, amongst the manifold characters which surrounded him, a Boswell, to note down the witty utterances with which his contemporaries were charmed; we have no authentic anecdotes of the "myriad-minded man," as Coleridge terms him, only imperfect and apocryphal traditions. But everything that is known of him is of value in the eyes of Englishmen; we subjoin, therefore, a short notice of his life, from the few records that remain.

William Shakspeare was born at Stratford-on-Avon, on St. George's Day, April 23, 1564. He was the eldest son of John Shakspeare and his wife, Mary Arden.

His family were "gentle" upon both sides. His paternal ancestor is believed to have fought at Bosworth Field on the side of Richmond, for he received from Henry VII., in reward for "valiant and faithful" services, tenements and lands in Warwickshire, on which his descendants dwelt till the birth of him who was destined to immortalize their name. Shakspeare's mother was the daughter and heiress of Robert Arden, of Wylmote, (or Wellingeote,) in Warwickshire, a gentleman of ancient and honourable family, deriving its name probably from the forest land on which its possessions stood.

The year of Shakspeare's birth was marked by the outbreak of the plague in Stratford; but the spotted curse passed harmlessly by the cradle of the glorious infant; whilst his then well-to-do father contributed of his means to the relief of the poor who had suffered by its ravages. The boyhood of Shakspeare, till he was ten years old, was spent, probably, in a manner well adapted to foster his genius. On his mother's heritage of Asbyes—in his father's nearer meadows—the young poet must have revelled in the greenwood shades, and amid the daisied meads, of which he afterwards painted such sweet sylvan pictures. The forest of Arden, the sheep-shearing of Perdita, the fairy-haunted woods, &c., were doubtless memories of his boyhood.

From about the time Shakspeare completed his eleventh year, the prosperity of his family waned; the shadow of evil days gathered over the hitherto prosperous yeoman. In 1578, John Shakspeare was unable to pay poor-rates; and —happy and considerate must the age have been!—he “was left untaxed.” During these eleven years his gifted eldest son was receiving his early education at the free grammar school of Stratford; the masters being at that time Walter Roche, Thomas Hunt, and Thomas Jenkins. Of the where or how that education was completed we have no record. That his days of youthful study ended early, we may, however, conjecture, as he married at the age of eighteen Anne Hathaway, the daughter of Richard Hathaway, of Shottery, a substantial yeoman. The bride was eight years older than her husband. Before Shakspeare was twenty-one, he was the father of three children, a daughter,—Susanna, the darling of his after life,—and a twin son and daughter, Hamnet (or Hamlet) and Judith.

It is probable that this rapid increase of family and his father's decaying circumstances, led to the resolve of the poet to seek a fortune in London. He had in the great city—which was an El Dorado to the imaginations of country folks in those days—a relative and townsman named Thomas Green, a celebrated comedian, who, in company with the actors Burbage, Slye, Hemynge, and Tooley, had very recently performed at Stratford—i.e. in 1584. Without giving much credence to the traditionary scandal of Shakspeare stealing deer from Sir Thomas Lucy's grounds at Charlecote, we may believe he had by some wild boyish freak given annoyance to the “Justice,” and thus added another motive to those which already disposed him to leave his fair Warwickshire home. Doubtless but little inducement was, however, required to lure him into the world of famous men whose renown then filled the length and breadth of the land; and whose grand memories surround his own, lighting the age of Elizabeth with a galaxy of statesmen and heroes. He himself early declared that—

“Home-keeping youth have ever homely wils.”

And with his consciousness of mental power, he would naturally seek the widest field for its exercise.

He went to London in 1586, and, as it is supposed, became an actor and adapter of plays for the Blackfriars' Theatre. In 1589 he was able to purchase a share in it, and from that time his fame and good fortune grew rapidly. His dramas became known and appreciated, and in the following year he was honoured by the generous praise of Spenser, in the “Tears of the Muses.”

In 1593 appeared his first poem, “Venus and Adonis,” written probably during the suspension of theatrical performances in London, caused by the plague of 1592. It was published by himself; the printer being a Stratford man (probably an old acquaintance) named Richard Field. That it was successful we cannot doubt, as the next year his “Tarquin and Lucrece” issued from the same press. Another poetical laurel was bestowed on him by Spenser; and common tradition ascribes to this period a gift made to him by Lord Southampton (the friend of Essex), of a thousand pounds, in order that he might complete a meditated purchase.

The full tide of prosperity, which he had indeed “taken at the flood,” now bore the great dramatist of all ages swiftly on its waters. The Queen—whose grand character he could so well appreciate—smiled on him, and deigned to direct and call forth his genius; while England's most chivalrous nobles were his friends. "Probably," says Lord Lytton, in his delightful "Caxtoniana," "his (Shakspeare's) personal intimacies assisted to the perfection of his delineations of the manners and mind of the being we call gentleman—of a Bassanio, a Gratiano, a Benedick, an Orlando, a Mercutio, &c., not to speak of the incomparable art with which he retains to Falstaff, in despite of all the fat knight's rogueries, the character of the wit who has equality with princes."

The date at which Shakspeare's first drama appeared is uncertain. That he was a renowned dramatist in 1591, Spenser's praise of him, published in that year, proves. Rowe was not able to discover any character in which he was remembered, as an actor, except that of the Ghost in "Hamlet;" nevertheless, the instructions to the players in that tragedy show how great was his knowledge of the histrionic art, and how perfect the taste which would have guided his own performance—probably too good for such rude spectators as those who assembled at the Globe, and who had hitherto been used to tragedies in King Cambyzes' vein—all rant, murders, and horrors. In 1596 a great sorrow fell upon the poet; his only son Hamnet died, at the age of eleven years;—a bitter grief must it have been to one whose tenderness and warmth of affection appear from the concurrent testimony of his age to have been equal to his genius. Shakspeare was a good son, as well as a genial and generous friend. His parents shared his prosperity. He helped them with his influence and his purse; redeemed his mother's mortgaged property in "Green Arden," and—purchasing a large and pleasant dwelling in his native place—brought his parents home to dwell there.

He did not yet, however, retire from the stage. He had a house in Southwark, which was his London home; his visits to Stratford were periods of rest and recreation, probably also of quiet literary labour. He continued purchasing property near his country home; manifesting prudence and common sense in affairs of the world; and a sound discretion in all things.

It is supposed that Shakspeare quitted the stage finally in 1604, as his name does not appear on the list of players after the production of Ben Jonson's "Sejanus," in 1603. He had made a comfortable fortune, estimated by Gildon (in his Letters and Essays) at 300*l.* a year, equal to rather more than a thousand a year at the present day, and had then only attained the age of forty years.

And now, happy in cherishing the age of his parents, in seeing his daughter Susanna a happy wife and mother, and in entertaining his friends, Shakspeare passed twelve years of well-earned repose; the darling alike of Nature and of Fortune.

He cultivated his land, planted the famous mulberry tree, and at this time published his exquisite Sonnets, which had, probably, been written in his youth. Such, at least, was the opinion of Coleridge, who says:—"These extraordinary sonnets form, in fact, a poem of fourteen lines each; and, like the passion which inspired them, the sonnets are always the same, with a variety of expression, —continuous, if you regard the lover's soul,—distinct, if you listen to them, as he heaves them sigh after sigh. These sonnets, like the 'Venus and Adonis,' and the 'Rape of Lucrece,' are characterized by boundless fertility and laboured condensation of thought, with perfection of sweetness in rhythm and metre. These are the essentials in the budding of a great poet. Afterwards habit and consciousness of power teach more ease." He returned occasionally, however, to London, and was never forgotten by the noble friends his genius had secured. Lord Southampton—great from his personal qualities—styles him in a letter "my especial friend." Queen Elizabeth had honoured him with personal notice and favour; James I. "was pleased with his own hand to write an amicable letter to Master Shakspeare;" and the testimony of his fellow-actors,—of his rivals,—and of the poets of the age, all tell how worthy Shakspeare was of love as well as of renown.

He who was "for all Time" did not fail, as we have seen, of winning the golden opinions of his own; and at the distance of nearly three hundred years from that grand period of our national story, we can still find no better words to eulogize him than his own:—

" His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world—This was a man!"

There is a tradition that Shakspeare's death was hastened by the hospitable entertainment he bestowed on Ben Jonson and Drayton, who visited him shortly before his last illness; but it seems probable that he had been ill for some short time previously, as in the January of the year in which he "rested from his labours" his will was prepared; it was signed by him in the March preceding his death. He expired on his birth-day, April 23rd, 1616, aged 52, having secured, during his comparatively short life, an eternity of fame.

"He was," says Aubrey, who lived only twenty-six years after his death, "a handsome, well-shaped man, verie good company, and of a verie ready, pleasant, and smooth wit."

Shakspeare was buried with his ancestors on the north side of the chancel in the great Church of Stratford, and a monument was erected to his memory bearing the following Latin distich:—

" Judicio Pylum, genio Boetium, arte Maronem, Terra tegit, populus mæret, Olympus habet."

On the gravestone in the pavement is the well-known inscription which appears (in conjunction with certain modern notions of making a show of all belonging to the poet) to have been a prophetic injunction,—

" Good friend, for Jesus' sake forbear
To dig the dust inclosed here;
Blest be the man that spares these stones,
And curst be he that moves my bones."

In the year 1741 another monument was erected to his memory in Westminster Abbey (near the south door in Poets' Corner), under the direction of Pope, Lord Burlington, Dr. Mead, and Mr. Martyn. It was the work of Scheemaker after a design of Kent's.

The actors at each of the London theatres gave a benefit to help defray the expenses of it, (which were paid by the public,) and the Dean and Chapter of Westminster gave the ground.

"Anne Hathaway" survived her husband eight years. His favourite daughter, Susanna, married a physician, Dr. Hall, and left an only child, Elizabeth, who was married first to Mr. Nashe, and afterwards to Sir John Barnard, of Abingdon, Northamptonshire; she died childless. His younger daughter, Judith, married a Mr. Quiney, and had three children, all of whom died before they had reached the age of twenty. Consequently, with Lady Barnard expired the last descendant of Shakspeare.

To his country has descended the rich inheritance of his fame; we should rather say, to the world; for wherever the tongue of England shall hereafter be spoken, the works of him who enriched and preserved it will descend, a fount of wisdom, wit, and poetry, of teaching and of pleasure, for all ages.

No writer ever so perfectly represented the entire genius of his country; hence probably he is so especially the idol of the people; so completely identified with their modes of thought and feeling. He is an authority in all circumstances and events of life; and they are fond of believing that things old and new, from the discoveries of his own day to those of the present, were dreamed of in the "philosophy" of Shakspeare. The national pride in its great dramatist is well expressed in the sonorous and not inelegant compliment of Dr. Johnson:—

"When Learning's triumph o'er his barb'rous foes
First rear'd the stage, immortal Shakspeare rose;
Each change of many-colour'd life he drew,
Exhausted worlds, and then imagin'd new:
Existence saw him spurn her bounded reign,
And panting Time toil'd after him in vain."

SHAKSPEARE'S WILL,

FROM THE ORIGINAL IN THE OFFICE OF THE PREROGATIVE COURT OF CANTERBURY.

*Vicesimo quinto die Martii, Anno Regni Domini nostri Jacobi, nunc Regis Angliæ, &c.,
decimo quarto, et Scelice quadregesimo nono. Anno Domini 1616.*

IN the name of God, Amen. I, William Shakspeare, of Stratford-upon-Avon in the county of Warwick, Gent., in perfect health and memory, (God be praised,) do make and ordain this my last will and testament, in manner and form following;—that is to say:

First, I commend my soul into the hands of God my Creator, hoping, and assuredly believing, through the only merits of Jesus Christ my Saviour, to be made partaker of life everlasting; and my body to the earth, whereof it is made.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my daughter Judith one hundred and fifty pounds of lawful English money, to be paid unto her in manner and form following; that is to say, one hundred pounds in discharge of her marriage portion, within one year of my decease, with consideration after the rate of two shillings in the pound for so long time as the same shall be unpaid to her after my decease; and the fifty pounds residue thereof, upon her surrendering of, or giving of such sufficient security as the overseers of this my will shall like of, to surrender or grant all her estate and right that shall descend or come unto her after my decease, or that she now hath of, in, or to, one copyhold tenement, with the appurtenances, lying and being in Stratford-upon-Avon aforesaid, in the said county of Warwick, being parcel or holden of the manor of Rowington, unto my daughter Susannah Hall, and her heirs for ever.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my said daughter Judith one hundred and fifty pounds more, if she, or any issue of her body, be living at the end of three years next ensuing the day of the date of this my will, during which time my executors to pay her consideration from my decease according to the rate aforesaid: and, if she die within the said term, without issue of her body, then my will is, and I do give and bequeath one hundred pounds thereof to my niece, Elizabeth Hall; and the fifty pounds to be set forth by my executors during the life of my sister, Joan Hart, and the use and profit thereof coming, shall be paid to my said sister Joan, and after her decease the said fifty pounds shall remain amongst the children of my said sister, equally to be divided amongst them; but if my said daughter Judith be living at the end of the said three years, or any issue of her body, then my will is, and so I devise and bequeath the said hundred and fifty pounds to be set out by my executors and overseers for the best benefit of her and her issue, and the stock not to be paid unto her so long as she shall be married and covert baron; but my will is, that she shall have the consideration yearly paid unto her during her life; and after her decease the said stock and consideration to be paid to her children, if she have any, and if not, to her executors or assigns, she living the said term after my decease; provided that if such husband as she shall at the end of the said three years be married unto, or at any [time] after, do sufficiently assure unto her, and the issue of her body, lands answerable to the portion by this my will given unto her, and to be adjudged so by my executors and overseers, then my will is, that the said hundred and fifty pounds shall be paid to such husband as shall make such assurance, to his own use.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my said sister Joan twenty pounds, and all my wearing apparel, to be paid and delivered within one year after my decease; and I do will and devise unto her the house, with the appurtenances, in Stratford, wherein she dwelleth, for her natural life, under the yearly rent of twelve pence.

Item, I give and bequeath unto her three sons, William Hart, — Hart, and Michael Hart, five pounds a-piece, to be paid within one year after my decease.

Item, I give and bequeath unto the said Elizabeth Hall, all my plate that I now have (except my broad silver and gilt bowl), at the date of this my will.

Item, I give and bequeath unto the poor of Stratford, aforesaid, ten pounds; to Mr. Thomas Combe, my sword; to Thomas Russell, Esq., five pounds; and to Francis Collins, of the borough of Warwick, in the county of Warwick, Gent., thirteen pounds six shillings and eightpence, to be paid within one year after my decease.

Item, I give and bequeath to Hamlet [Hamnet] Sadler twenty-six shillings eightpence, to buy him a ring; to William Reynolds, Gent., twenty-six shillings eightpence, to buy him a ring; to my godson William Walker, twenty shillings in gold; to Anthony Nash, Gent., twenty-six shillings eightpence; and to Mr. John Nash, twenty-six shillings eightpence; and to my fellows, John Hemyng, Richard Burbage, and Henry Cundell, twenty-six shillings eightpence a-piece, to buy them rings.

Item, I give, will, bequeath, and devise unto my daughter Susanna Hall, for the better enabling her to perform this my will, and towards the performance thereof, all that capital messuage or tenement, with the appurtenances, in Stratford aforesaid, called the New Place, wherein I now dwell, and two messuages or tenements with the appurtenances, situate, lying, and being in Henley Street, within the borough of Stratford aforesaid; and all my barns, stables, orchards, gardens, lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatsoever, situate, lying, and being, or to be had, received, perceived, or taken within the towns, hamlets, villages, fields, and grounds of Stratford-upon-Avon, Old Stratford, Bishopton, and Welcome, or in any of them, in the said county of Warwick; and also all that messuage or tenement, with the appurtenances, wherein one John Robinson dwelleth, situate, lying, and being in the Blackfriars in London, near the Wardrobe; and all other my lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatsoever; to have and to hold all and singular the said premises, with their appurtenances, unto the said Susanna Hall, for and during the term of her natural life; and, after her decease, to the first son of her body lawfully issuing; and to the heirs males of the body of the said first son lawfully issuing; and for default of such issue, to the second son of her body lawfully issuing, and to the heirs males of the body of the said second son lawfully issuing; and for default of such heirs, to the third son of the body of the said Susanna lawfully issuing; and to the heirs males of the body of the said third son lawfully issuing; and for default of such issue, the same to be and remain to the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh sons of her body, lawfully issuing one after another, and to the heirs males of the bodies of the said fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh sons lawfully issuing, in such manner as it is before limited to be, and remain to the first, second, and third sons of her body, and to their heirs males; and for default of such issue, the said premises to be and remain to my said niece Hall, and the heirs males of her body lawfully issuing; and for default of such issue, to my daughter Judith, and the heirs males of her body lawfully issuing; and for default of such issue, to the right heirs of me the said William Shakspeare for ever.

Item, I give unto my wife my second-best bed, with the furniture.

Item, I give and bequeath to my said daughter Judith, my broad silver-gilt bowl. All the rest of my goods, chattels, leases, plates, jewels, and household stuff whatsoever, after my debts and legacies paid, and my funeral expenses discharged, I give, devise, and bequeath to my son-in-law, John Hall, Gent., and my daughter Susanna, his wife, whom I ordain and make executors of this my last will and testament. And I do entreat and appoint the said Thomas Russell, Esq., and Francis Collins, Gent., to be overseers hereof. And do revoke all former wills, and publish this to be my last will and testament. In witness whereof, I have hereunto put my hand, the day and year first above written.

By me,
WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

Witness to the publishing hereof.

FRA. COLLINS,
JULIUS SHAW,
JOHN ROBINSON,
HAMNET SADLER,
ROBERT WHATTICOTT.

Probatum fuit testamentum Suprascriptum apud London, Coram Magistro William Byrde, Legum Doctore, &c., vicesimo secundo die mensis Junii, Anno Domini 1616; juramento Johannis Hall, unius ex cui, &c., de bene, &c., jurat, reservata potestate, &c. Susannæ Hall, alt. ex., &c., eam cum venerit, &c., petitur, &c.

THE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

THE TEMPEST.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Alonso, King of Naples.
 Sebastian, his brother.
 Prospero, the rightful Duke of Milan.
 Antonio, his brother, the usurping Duke of Milan.
 Ferdinand, son to the King of Naples.
 Gonzalo, an honest old Counsellor.
 Adrian, } Lords.
 Francisco, }
 Caliban, a savage and deformed Slave.
 Trinculo, a Jester.

Stephano, a drunken Butler.
 Master of a Ship, Boatswain, and Mariners.
 Miranda, daughter to Prospero.
 Ariel, an airy Spirit.
 Iris, Ceres, } Spirits.
 Juno, Nymphs, Reapers, }

Other Spirits attending on Prospero.

SCENE.—The Sea, with a Ship; afterwards an uninhabited Island.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—On a Ship at Sea.—A Storm with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain!

Boats. Here, master: what cheer?

Master. Good, speak to the mariners: fall to't yarely, or we run ourselves aground; bestir, bestir.

Enter Mariners.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare: take in the topsail; tend to the master's whistle.—Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, boatswain?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour: keep your cabins: you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence: trouble us not.

Gon. Good; yet remember whom thou hast

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor: if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more;

use your authority: if you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts!—Out of our way, I say. [Exit.]

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable. [Exit.]

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the topmast! yare; lower, lower! bring her to try with main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.—

Re-enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.
 Yet again! what do you hear! Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! you whoreson, insolent noisemaker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him from drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nut-shell, and as leaky as an unstanched wench.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold. Set her two courses; off to sea again; lay her off.

Enter Mariners, wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

Boats. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The king and prince at prayers! let For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I am out of patience.

Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.—

This wide-chopp'd rascal, — would, thou mightst lie drowning, The washing of ten tides!

Gon. He'll be hang'd yet, Though every drop of water swear against it, And gape at wid'at to glut him.

[A confused noise within.]—"Mercy on us!"—"We split, we split!"—"Farewell, my wife and children!"—"Farewell, brother!"

—"We split, we split, we split!"—"Ant. Let's all sink with the king."

Seb. Let's take leave of him.

Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, anything. The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death.

SCENE II.—The Island: before the Cell of Prospero.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them. The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch, But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd

With those that I saw suffer! a brave vessel, Who had, no doubt, some noble creatures in her, Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart! Poor souls! they perish'd.

Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er

It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and The fraughting souls within her.

Pro. Be collected: No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart, There's no harm done.

Mira. O, woe the day!

Pro. No harm. I have done nothing but in care of thee, (Of thee, my dear one; thee, my daughter!)

who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing Of whence I am; nor that I am more better Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,

And thy no greater father. Mira. More to Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pro. 'Tis time I should inform thee further. Lend thy hand, And pluck my magic garment from me.—So—[Lays down his robe.] Lie there, my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort.

The dreadful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd

The very virtue of compassion in thee, I have with such provision in mine art

So safely order'd, that there is no soul— No, not so much perdition as an hair,

Betid to any creature in the vessel Which thou hear'd'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;

For thou must now know further.

Mira. You have often Begun to tell me what I am; but stopp'd,

And left me to a bootless inquisition, Concluding, "Stay, not yet."

Pro. The hour's now come; The very minute bids thee ope thine ear:

Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember A time before we came unto this cell?

I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast Out three years old.

Mira. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pro. By what? by any other house, or pere Of anything the image tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. 'Tis far off; And rather like a dream, than an assurance That my remembrance warrants. Had I not

Four or five women once, that tended me?

Pro. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. But how is it,

That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou in the dark backward and abysm of time?

If thou remember'st aught, ere thou cam'st here, How thou cam'st here, thou may'st.

Mira. But that I do not.

Pro. Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since, Thy father was the duke of Milan, and

A prince of power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my father?

Pro. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father Was duke of Milan; and his only heir A princess,—no worse issued.

Mira. O the heavens! What fond play had we, that we came from Or blessed was't we did?

Pro. Both, both, my girl: By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heav'd But blessedly help hither.

Mira. O! my heart bleeds To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to, Which is from my remembrance. Please you further. [Antonio.]

Pro. My brother, and thy uncle, call'd I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should

Be so perfidious!—he whom, next thyself, Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put

The manage of my state; as, at that time, Through all the signories it was the first,

And Prospero the prime duke; being so re-in dignity; and, for the liberal arts, (puted

Without a parallel: those being all my study.

The government I cast upon my brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported.

And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me?

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.
Pro. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
How to deny them; who to advance, and who
To trash for overtopping; new created The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd them.

Or else new form'd them: having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts 't' th' state
To what tune pleas'd his ear; that now he was

The Ivy, which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck'd my verdure out on 't.—Thou attend'st not.

Mira. O good sir, I do.

Pro. I pray thee, mark me.
I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness, and the bettering of my mind
With that, which, but by being so retir'd, O'erpriz'd all popular rate, in my false brother
Awak'd an evil nature; and my trust,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood, in its contrary as great
As my trust was; which had, indeed, no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He being thus lorded,

Not only with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might else exact,—like one,
Who having, into truth, by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie,—he did believe
He was indeed the duke; out o' the substitution,

And executing the outward face of royalty,
With all prerogative:—Hence his ambition,
Dost thou hear? [growing.]

Mira. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.
Pro. To have no screen between this part he play'd

And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan. Me, poor man!—my library Was dukedom large enough: of temporal royalties

He thinks me now incapable; confederates
(So dry he was for away) with the king of Naples

To give him annual tribute, do him homage;
Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend
The dukedom, yet unbowed, (alas, poor Milan!)
To most ignoble stooping.

Mira. O the heavens!
Pro. Mark his condition, and the event;
then tell me

If this might be a brother. Mira. I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother:
Good wombs have borne bad sons.

Pro. Now the condition.
This king of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit;
Which was, that he, in lieu o' the premises,—

Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,—
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother: whereon,
A treacherous army lov'd, one midnight
Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open [ness,
The gates of Milan; and, i' the dead of dark-
The ministers for the purpose hurried thence Me, and thy crying self.

Mira. Alack, for pity!
I, not rememb'ring how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again: it is a hint,
That wrings mine eyes to 't.

Pro. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business [story
Which now's upon us; without the which, this Were most impertinent.

Mira. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?

Pro. Well demanded, wench:
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not,—

So dear the love my people bore me,—nor set A mark so bloody on the business; but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
Bore us some leagues to sea; where they pre-
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd, [par'd
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively had quit it: there they hoist us,
To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh
To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wrong.

Mira. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you! Pro. O! a cherubin
Thou wast, that did preserve me! Thou didst
Infuse with a fortitude from heaven, smile,
When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt,

Under my burden groan'd; which rais'd in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ashore?
Pro. By Providence divine.

Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, (who being then appointed Master of this design,) did give us; with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessities, Which since have steeded much; so, of his gentleness,

Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
From my own library, with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

Mira. Would I might
But ever see that man! Pro. Now I arise:—
[Puts on his robe again.]

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princesses can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for't! And now,
I pray you, sir,—
(For still 'tis beating in my mind), your reason
For raising this sea-storm?

Pro. Know thus far forth.—
By accident most strange, bountiful fortune,
Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies;
Brought to this shore; and by my prescience
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star; whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes Will ever after droop.—Here cease more questions;

Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way;—I know thou canst not choose.—
Come away, servant, come! I'm ready now:
Approach, my Ariel; come!

Enter Ariel. [I come
Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail!
To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride [task
On the curl'd clouds; to thy strong bidding,
Ariel, and all his quality.

Pro. Hast thou, spirit, Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade
thee?

Ari. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship; now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flann'd amazement; sometimes I'd divide,
And burn in many places; on the topmast,
The yards, and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly, [precursors

Then meet, and join: Jove's lightnings, the O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary [cracks
And sight-outrunning were not; the fire, and Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune [tremble

Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves
Yea, his dread trident shake.

Pro. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason? Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation. All, but mariners, Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel, [unand,

Then all a-fire with me: the king's son, Ferdi-
With hair up-starting (then like reeds, not hair,)
Was the first man that leap'd; cried, "Hell is
And all the devils are here." [empty,

Pro. Why, that's my spirit!
But was not this high shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.
Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd;
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and, as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle.
The king's son have I landed by himself;
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs,
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,

His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the king's ship
The mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o' the fleet.

Ari. Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once

Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vev'd Bermoothes, there she
The mariners all under hatches stow'd; [hid Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,

I have left asleep: and for the rest o' the fleet,
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean fote,
Bound sadly home for Naples;

Supposing that they saw the king's ship
wreck'd, [charge

And his great person perish. Pro. Ariel, thy Exactly is perform'd: but there's more work!
What is the time o' the day?

Ari. Past the mid season.

Pro. At least two glasses: the time 'twixt six and now

Must by us both be spent most precious.

Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,

Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is as yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now! moody!

What is't thou canst demand?

Ari. My liberty.

Pro. Before the time be out? no more!

Ari. I pr'ythee

Remember, I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge or grumblings: thou didst
To bate me a full year. [promise

Pro. Dost thou forget

From what a torment I did free thee?

Ari. No.

Pro. Thou dost; and think'st it much to
Of the salt deep,— [trend the ooze

To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
To do me business in the veins o' the earth,
When it is bak'd with frost. Ari. I do not, sir.

Pro. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot [envy,

The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age and
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.

Pro. Thou hast. Where was she born?

Ari. Sir, in Argier. Pro. O, was she so? I must, [been,

Once in a month, recount what thou hast
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch, Sycorax,

For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier, [did,

Thou know'st, was banish'd: for one thing she
They would not take her life. Is not this true?

Ari. Ay, sir. [with child,

Pro. This blue-eyed hag was hither brought

And here was left by the sailors. Thou, my slave, [want:

As thou report'st thyself, was then her servant. And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate To act her earthy and abhor'd commands, Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee, By help of her more potent ministers, And in her most unmitigable rage, Into a cloven pine; within which rift Imprison'd, thou didst painfully remain A dozen years; within which space she died, And left thee there; where thou didst vent thy groans [Island

As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this (Save for the son that she did litter here, A freckled whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with A human shape. Ari. Yes; Caliban her son.

Pro. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban, Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st

What torment I did find thee in; thy groans Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts

Of ever-angry bears: it was a torment To lay upon the damn'd, which Syccorax Could not again undo: it was mine art, When I arriv'd and heard thee, that made The pine, and let thee out. [gape

Ari. I thank thee, master. Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till [oak, Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Pardon, master: I will be correspondent to command, And do my spiriting gently.

Pro. Do so; and after two days I will discharge thee.

Ari. That's my noble master! What shall I do? say what! what shall I do?

Pro. Go make thyself like a nymph o' the sea: be subject

To no sight but thine and mine; invisible To every eyeball else. Go, take this shape, And hither come in't: go, hence with diligence. [Exit Ariel.

Mira. [Waking.] Awake, dear heart, awake! thou hast slept Awake! [well;

Mira. [Waking.] The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me. Pro. Shake it off. Come We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never [on; Yields us kind answer.

Mira. 'Tis a villain, sir, I do not love to look on. Pro. But, as 'tis, We cannot miss him; he does make our fire, Fetch in our wood; and serves in offices That profit us.—What ho! slave! Caliban! Thou earth, thou! speak.

Cal. [Within.] There's wood enough within. [ness for thee;

Pro. Come forth, I say; there's other business, thou tortoise! when?

Re-enter Ariel, like a water-nymph. Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel, Hark in thine ear.

Ari. My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.

Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil Upon thy wicked dam, come forth! [himself

Enter Caliban. [brush'd

Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother With raven's feather from unwholesome fen, Drop on you both! a south-west blow on ye, And blister you all o'er! [have cramps,

Pro. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up; [work,

Urchins Shall, for that vast of night that they may All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd

As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more Than bees that made them. [stinging

Cal. I must eat my dinner. This island's mine, by Syccorax my mother,

Which thou tak'st from me. When thou camest first, [wouldst give me

Thou strok'st me, and mad'st much of me; Water with berries in't; and teach me how

To name the bigger light, and how the less, That burn by day and night: and then I lov'd thee,

And show'd thee all the qualities o' the isle, The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place, and fertile:

Curs'd be I that did so!—All the charms Of Syccorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you!

For I am all the subjects that you have, Which first was mine own king; and here you sty me

In this hard rock, while you do keep from me The rest o' the island.

Pro. Thou most lying slave, Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I have us'd thee, [these Filth as thou art, with human care; and lodg'd In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate

The honour of my child.

Cal. O ho, O ho!—would't had been done! Thou didst prevent me; I had peopled else

This isle with Calibans.

Pro. Abhorred slave, Which any print of goodness wilt not take, Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee,

Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour [savage,

One thing or other: when thou didst not, Know thine own meaning, but would'st gabble like

A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes With words that made them known: but thy vile race, [good natures

Though thou didst learn, had that in't which Could not abide to be with; therefore wast

Deserv'dly confin'd into this rock, [thou

Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison.

Cal. You taught me language; and my profit on't [you,

Is, I know how to curse: the red plague rid For learning me your language!

Pro. Hag-seed, hence

Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou'rt beat, [malice]
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou,
If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly [cramps]
What I command, I'll rack thee with old
Fill all thy bones with aches; make thee roar,
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee!—
[Aside.] I must obey: his art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pro. So, slave; hence! [Exit Caliban.]
Re-enter Ariel invisible, playing and singing:
Ferdinand following him.

ARIEL'S SONG.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Court'sied when you have, and kiss'd
(The wild waves whist.)
Foot it featly here and there;
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.

Hark, hark!
Burden. Bowgh, wough. [Dispersedly.]
The watch-dogs bark:
Burden. Bowgh, wough. [Dispersedly.]
Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer,
Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

Fer. Where should this music be? I th' air, or th' earth!

It sounds no more;—and sure, it waits upon
Some god o' th' island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the king my father's wreck,
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury, and my passion,
With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather:—but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

Ariel sings.
Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes;
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:
Hark! now I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.

[Burden: ding-dong.]
Fer. The ditty does remember my drown'd father.

This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes:—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye ad-
And say, what thou seest yond'. [vanca,
Mira. What is't? a spirit?

Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form:—but 'tis a spirit.

Pro. No, wench; it eats and sleeps, and hath such senses [seest,

As we have, such; this gallant, which thou
Was in the wreck; and, but he's something stain'd [call him

With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st

A goodly person: he hath lost his fellows,
And strays about to find them.

Mira. I might call him
A thing divine; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

Pro. [Aside.] It goes on, I see,
As my soul prompts it.—Spirit, fine spirit!
Within two days for this. [I'll free thee

Fer. Most sure, the goddess On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe, my prayer

May know if you remain upon this island;
And that you will some good instruction give,
How I may bear me here: my prime request
Which I do last pronounce, is—O you wonder!
—If you be maid, or no? Mira. No wonder,
But certainly a maid. [sir,

Fer. My language! heavens!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pro. How! the best!
What wert thou, if the king of Naples heard
thee?

Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear
me;

And, that he does, I weep: myself am Naples;
Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld
The king, my father, wreck'd.

Mira. Alack, for mercy!
Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords: the duke
And his brave son, being twain. [of Milan,

Pro. [Aside.] The duke of Milan,
And his more braver daughter, could control
thee,

If now 'twere fit to do't:—At the first sight [Aside.

They have chang'd eyes:—delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this!—[To Fer.] A word,
good sir;

I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word. [This

Mira. Why speaks my father so ungently?
Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first
That e'er I sigh'd for: pity move my father

To be inclin'd my way! Fer. O! if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make
The queen of Naples. [you

Pro. Soft, sir: one word more—[Aside.] They are both in either's powers: but this swift business

I must uneasy make, lest too light winning Makes the prize light.—[To Fer.] One word
more: I charge thee,

That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thy-
Upon this island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mira. There's nothing ill can dwell in such
If the ill spirit have so fair a house, [a temple:]
Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Pro. [To Fer.] Follow me.—[To Mira.]

Speak not Fer.

I'll manacle
Sea-water;

The fresh-l
husl

Wherein t
I will rear

Mine enen
[He a

Mira.

Make not He's gentl

My foot m
Who mak

con
Is so posse

For I can
And make

Mira.

Pro. H

Mira.

I'll be his

Shall ma

An advoc

Thou thi

us

Having

To the n

And the

Mira.

Are ther

To see a

Pro. I

Thy ner

And ha'

My spir

My fat

The wr

t

To who

Might

Behold

Let lib

Have I

Pro.

Thou

[To An

Mir

My fa

Than

Which

Pro

As me

All p

Ar

Pro

S

Ent

t you for him; he's a traitor.—[To r.] Come; cle thy neck and feet together: shalt thou drink; thy food shall be brook muscles, wither'd roots, and asks the scorn cradled. Follow. Fer. No; dost such entertainment, till my has more power.

draws, and is charmed from moving.

O dear father! t too rash a trial of him, for [say, tle, and not fearful. Pro. What! I my tutor!—Put thy sword up, traitor; dost a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience sess'd with guilt: come from thy ward, in here disarm thee with this stick, ke thy weapon drop.

Beseech you, father! Hence! hang not on my garments.

Sir, have pity: is surety. Pro. Silence! one word more take me chide thee, if not hate thee, oarts for an impostor? hush! [What! link'st at there are no more such shapes as he, [wench! seen but him and Caliban: Foolish most of men this is a Caliban, ey to him are angels.

My affections en most humble; I have no ambition a goodlier man.

[To Fer.] Come on; obey: erves are in their infancy again, [are: ave no vigour in them. Fer. So they irits, as in a dream, are all bound up, ther's loss, the weakness which I feel, wreck of all my friends, or this man's threats, om I am subdued, are but light to me, I but through my prison once a day d this maid: all corners else o' th' earth berty make use of; space enough I in such a prison.

[Aside.] It works.—[To Fer.] Come on.—

[Follow me.— hast done well, fine Ariel!—[To Fer.] riel.] Hark, what thou else shalt do me.

Be of comfort; ther's of a better nature, sir, he appears by speech: this is unwonted, h now came from him.

Thou shalt be as free ountain winds; but then, exactly do ints of my command.

To the syllable. [To Fer.] Come, follow. Speak not for him. — [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another Part of the Island.

Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gen. Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have [So have we all] of joy; for our escape [cause is much beyond our loss. Our hint of woe is common: every day, some sailor's wife, The masters of some merchant, and the merchant, [miracle, Have just our theme of woe; but for the I mean our preservation, few in millions Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weigh Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Pr'ythee, peace.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.

Seb. Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit; by and by it will strike.

Gen. Sir,—

Seb. One:—tell. [offer'd,

Gen. When every grief is entertain'd that's Comes to the entertainer—

Seb. A dollar.

Gen. Dolour comes to him, indeed: you have spoken truer than you purposed.

Seb. You have taken it wiser than I meant

Gen. Therefore, my lord,— [you should,

Ant. Eie, what a spendthrift is he of his Alon. I pr'ythee, spare. [tongue!

Gen. Well, I have done; but yet—

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?

Seb. The old cock.

Ant. The cockrel.

Seb. Done. The wager.

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match. [cert,—

Adr. Though this island seems to be de-

Seb. Ha, ha, ha!

Ant. So you're paid. [sible,—

Adr. Uninhabitable, and almost imacce-

Seb. Yet—

Adr. Yet—

Ant. He could not miss it.

Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate weach.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly delivered. [sweetly,

Adr. The air breathes upon us here most

Seb. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.

Ant. Or as 'twere perfumed by a fen.

Gen. Here is everything advantageous to

Ant. True; save means to live. [life,

Seb. Of that there's none, or little.

Gen. How lush and lusty the grass looks!

how green!

Ant. The ground, indeed, is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of green in't.

Ant. He misses not much. [totally,

Seb. No; he doth but mistake the truth

Gen. But the rarity of it is, (which is indeed almost beyond credit,)—

Seb. As many vouch'd rarities are.

Gen. That our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold notwithstanding ing their freshness and glosses; being rather new dyed, than stain'd with salt water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say, he lies? [port.]

Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his reason. Methinks, our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Adr. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.

Gon. Not since widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow! a pox o' that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said, widower Aneas too? good lord, how you take it!

Adr. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that: she was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.

Adr. Carthage?

Gon. I assure you, Carthage. [sharp.]

Ant. His word is more than the miraculous

Seb. He hath raised the wall, and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.

Ant. And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.

Gon. Ay!

Ant. Why, in good time.

Gon. [To Alon.] Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.

Ant. And the rarest that e'er came there.

Seb. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Ant. O, widow Dido; ay, widow Dido.

Gon. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?

Alon. You cram these words into mine ears, against

The stomach of my sense. Would I had married my daughter there! for, coming thence, My son is lost; and, in my rate, she too,

Who is so far from Italy remov'd, I ne'er again shall see her. O thou, mine heir

Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee?

Fran. Sir, he may live:

I saw him beat the surges under him, And ride upon their backs; he trod the water,

Whose enmity he flung aside, and breast'd The surge most swollen that met him; his bold

head

'Bove the contentions waves he kept, and oar'd Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke

To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn head bow'd,

As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt, He came alive to land.

Alon. No, no, he's gone. [great loss]

Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this. That would not bless our Europe with you

But rather lose her to an African; [daughter] Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye

Who hath cause to wet the grief on 't.

Alon. Pr'ythee, peace

Seb. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd otherwise

By all of us, and the fair soul herself Weigh'd between loathness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam should bow. We have lost your son,

I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have More widows in them of this business' making,

Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's

Your own. Alon. So is the dearest of the

Gon. My lord Sebastian, [noise] The truth you speak doth lack some gentle

And time to speak it in; you rub the sore, When you should bring the plaster.

Seb. Very well.

Ant. And most chirurgically.

Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good sir, When you are cloudy. Seb. Foul weather!

Ant. Very foul.

Gon. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,

Ant. He'd sow't with nettle-seed.

Seb. Or docks, or mallows.

Gon. And were the king on 't, what would I do?

Seb. 'Scape being drunk, for want of wine.

Gon. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries

Execute all things; for no kind of traffic Would I admit; no name of magistrate;

Letters should not be known; riches, poverty, And use of service, none; contract, succession,

Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none; No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;

No occupation; all men idle, all; And women too, but innocent and pure;

No sovereignty,—

Seb. Yet he would be king on 't.

Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common nature should produce,

Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony, Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,

Would I not have; but nature should bring forth,

Of its own kind, all foison, all abundance, To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his subjects?

Ant. None, man; all idle; whores and knaves.

Gon. I would with such perfection govern, To excel the golden age. [sit]

Seb. 'Save his majesty!
Ant. Long live Gonzalo!
Gon. And,—do you mark me, sir?
Alon. Pr'ythee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to me.
Gon. I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs, that they always use to laugh at nothing.
Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.
Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you; so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.
Ant. What a blow was there given!
Seb. An it had not fallen flat-long.
Gon. You are gentlemen of brave mettle: you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.
Enter Ariel, invisible, playing solemn music.
Seb. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.
Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.
Gon. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?
Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.
[All sleep but Alon., Seb., and Ant.]
Alon. What, all so soon asleep! I wish mine eyes would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts: they are inclin'd to do so. [I find]
Seb. Please you, sir, Do not omit the heavy offer of it: It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth, it is a comforter. Ant. We two, my lord, Will guard your person, while you take your And watch your safety. [rest]
Alon. Thank you: wondrous heavy. [Alonso sleeps. Exit Ariel.]
Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!
Ant. It is the quality o' the climate. Why
Seb. Doth it not, then, our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.
Ant. Nor I: my spirits are nimble. They fell together all, as by consent; They dropp'd as by a thunder-stroke. What might, [more:] Worthy Sebastian?—O! what might!—No And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face, What thou should'st be. 'Th' occasion speaks thee; and My strong imagination sees a crown Dropping upon thy head.
Seb. What, art thou waking?
Ant. Do you not hear me speak?
Seb. I do; and surely, It is a sleepy language, and thou speak'st Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say? This is a strange repose, to be asleep With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, And yet so fast asleep. [moving]

Ant. Noble Sebastian, Thou let'st thy fortune sleep,—die, rather; Whiles thou art waking. [wink'st]
Seb. Thou dost snore distinctly; There's meaning in thy mores. [you]
Ant. I am more serious than my custom; Must be so too, if heed me; which to do, Trebles thee o'er.
Seb. Well; I am standing water.
Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.
Seb. Do so: to ebb, Hereditary sloth instructs me. Ant. O, If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish, Whiles thus you mock it! how, in stripping it, You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed, Most often do so near the bottom run, [on:] By their own fear, or sloth. Seb. Pr'ythee, say The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed, Which throes thee much to yield.
Ant. Thus, sir: Although this lord of weak remembrance, this Who shall be of as little memory, When he is earth'd, hath here almost persuaded [For he's a spirit of persuation, only Professes to persuade], the king his son's alive, 'Tis as impossible that he's undrown'd, As he that sleeps here, swims.
Seb. I have no hope That he's undrown'd.
Ant. O, out of that no hope, What great hope have you! no hope, that way, is Another way so high a hope, that even Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond, But doubts discovery there. Will you grant That Ferdinand is drown'd? [with me]
Seb. He's gone.
Ant. Then, tell me, Who's the next heir of Naples? Seb. Claribel. Ant. She that is queen of Tunis; she that dwells [from Naples] Ten leagues beyond man's life; she that Can have no note, unless the sun were post, (The man i' the moon's too slow,) till new-born chins Be rough and razorable; she that, from whom We were all sea-swallow'd, though some cast And by that destiny to perform an act, [again:] Whereof what's past is prologue; what to In yours and my discharge. [come]
Seb. What stuff is this!—How say you? 'Tis true, my brother's daughter's queen of Tunis;
So is she heir of Naples; 'twixt which regions There is some space.
Ant. A space whose every cubit Seems to cry out, How shall that Claribel Measure us back to Naples?—Keep in Tunis, And let Sebastian wake!—Say, this were death [no worse] That now hath seiz'd them; why, they were

Than now they are. There be, that can rule Naples

As well as he that sleeps; lords, that can
As amply, and unnecessarily, [prate]
As this Gonzalo; I myself could make A chough of as deep chat. O, that you bore
The mind that I do! what a sleep were this
For your advancement! Do you understand

Seb. Methinks, I do. [me?]
Ant. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune?

Seb. I remember,
You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True:
And look how well my garments sit upon me;
Much better than before; my brother's servants

Were then my fellows; now they are my men.

Seb. But, for your conscience,— [kibe]

Ant. Ay, sir; where lies that? if it were a 'Twould put me to my slipper; but I feel not
This deity in my bosom: twenty consciences, That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they, [brother]

And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your
No better than the earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he's like, that's dead; [of it]

Whom I, with this obedient steel, three inches

Can lay to bed for ever; whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put
This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion, as a cat laps milk;
They'll tell the clock to any business that
We say belies the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent: as thou got'st Milan, I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke

Shall free thee from the tribute which thou
And I the king shall love thee. [pay'st,
Ant. Draw together,

And when I rear my hand, do you the like,
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O, but one word. [They converse apart.
Music. Re-enter Ariel, invisible.

Ari. My master through his art foresees
the danger [forth,

That you, his friend, are in; and sends me
(For else his project dies) to keep thee living.

[Sings in Gonzalo's ear.
While you here do snoring lie,
Open-eyed conspiracy
His time doth take:
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber, and beware:
Awake! Awake!

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good angels, preserve the king!

[They wake.
Alon. Why, how now! ho, awake! Why are you drawn?

Wherefore this ghastly looking!

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose, [loud]
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellow

Like bulls, or rather lions; did 't not wake
It struck mine ear most terribly. [you]

Alon. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's
ear;

To make an earthquake! sure it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming, [me]

And that a strange one too, which did awake
I shak'd you, sir, and cry'd; as mine eyes

open'd,
I saw their weapons drawn:—there was a noise, That's verily, 'Tis best we stand upon our guard, [weapons]

Or that we quit this place: let's draw our swords. Lead off this ground, and let's make

For my poor son. [farther search]
Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts!

For he is, sure, 't the island. [Alon. Lead away. [Exit with the others.]

Ari. Prospero, my lord, shall know what I have done:

So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exit.
SCENE II.—Another Part of the Island.

Enter Caliban, with a burden of wood.
A noise of Thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him

By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they'll not pinch, [mire]

Fright me with urchin shows, pitch me 't the Nor lead me, like a fire-brand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em; but

For every trifle are they set upon me:
Sometime like apes, that moe and chatter at me,
And after, bite me; then like hedge-hogs, which

Lie tumbling in my bare-foot way, and mount
Their prickles at my foot-fall: sometime crows
All wound with adders, who with cloven

tongues
Do hiss me into madness.—
Enter Trinculo.

Lo! now! lo!

Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
For bringing wood in slowly: I'll fall flat;
Perchance, he will not mind me.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing 't the wind: yond' same black cloud, yond' huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor.

If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond' same cloud cannot choose but fall by paddles.—What have we here? a man or a fish? Dead or alive! A fish: he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of not of the newest Pouch-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now, (as once I was,) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man; any strange beast there makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legg'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt.

[Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again:
my best way is to creep under his gaberdine;
there is no other shelter hereabout: misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano, singing; a bottle in his hand.
Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea,
Here shall I die ashore.—

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral: well, here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

The master, the weather, the boatswain, and I,
The gunner, and his mate,
Lord Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate;
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, Go hang!

She lov'd not the saviour of her nor of pitch,
Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch;

Then, to sea, boys, and let her go hang.
This is a scurvy tune too: but here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

Cal. Do not torment me: O!

Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon us with savages, and men of Inde? Ha! I have not 'scaped drowning, to be afraid now of your four legs;
for it hath been said, As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground; and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at's nostrils.

Cal. The spirit torments me: O!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague, Where the devil should he learn our language! I will give him some relief, if it be but for that;
if I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Cal. Do not torment me, pray thee: I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now, and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle:
if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Then dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: now Prospero works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways: open your mouth;
here is that which will give language to you,
cat; open your mouth: this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps
again.

Trin. I should know that voice: it should be—but he is drowned, and these are devils.
O! defend me!

Ste. Four legs, and two voices; a most delicate monster! His forward voice, now, is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is, to utter foul speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his agony. Come, Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano!

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy!
mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephano!—if thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me; for I am Trinculo:
—be not afraid,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth.
I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed! How cam'st thou to be the stage of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke. But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned:
Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine for fear of the storm: And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano! two Neapolitans 'scaped!

Ste. Pr'ythee, do not turn me about: my stomach is not constant.

Cal. [Aside.] These be fine things, an if they be not sprites.

That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor:
I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou 'scape? How cam'st thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou cam'st hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved overboard, by this bottle! which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast ashore.

Cal. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy true subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here: swear, then, how thou escap'dst.

Trin. Swam ashore, man, like a duck: I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano! hast any more of this?

Ste. The whole butt, man: my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid.
How now, moon-calf? how does this agree?

Cal. Hast thou not dropp'd from heaven?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man in the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee; my mistress showed me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that; kiss the book; I will furnish it anon with new contents; swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster.—I afraid of him?—a very weak monster.—The man i' the moon? a most poor credulous monster!—Well drawn, monster, in good sooth, [island;]

Cal. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the I will kiss thy foot: I pr'ythee, be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster: when his god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Cal. I'll kiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on then; down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss.

Trin.—But that the poor monster's in drink: an abominable monster!

Cal. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries;

I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough. A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!

I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster! to make a wonder of a poor drunkard.

Cal. I pr'ythee, let me bring thee where crabs grow;

And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts;

Show thee a jay's-nest, and instruct thee how To snare the nimble marmozet; I'll bring thee To clust'ring filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee

[with me] Young scamels from the rock. Wilt thou go?

Ste. I pr'ythee now, lead the way, without any more talking.—Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here.—Here; bear my bottle.—Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

Cal. Farewell, master; farewell, farewell. [Sings drunkenly.]

Trin. A howling monster, a drunken monster.

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish; Nor fetch in firing

At requir'ing, Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish;

'Ban, 'Ban, Ca—Caliban, Has a new master—Get a new man.

Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom! hey-day, freedom!

Ste. O brave monster! lead the way. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour

Delight in them sets off: some kinds of labours are nobly undergone; and most poor matters point to rich ends. This my mean task Would be as heavy to me, as odious; but The mistress, which I serve, quickens what dead, And makes my labours pleasures: O! she is Ten times more gentle than her father crabbed, And he's composed of harshness. I must not Somethousands of these logs, and pile them up

Upon a sore injunction: my sweet mistress Weeps when she sees me work, and says such baseness Had never like executor. I forget:

But these sweet thoughts do even refresh me. Most busy lest, when I do it. [labours]

Enter Miranda; and Prospero at a distance. My Mira. Alas! now, pray you, Work not so hard: I would the lightning had

Burnt up those logs that you are enjoind to pile! [burns]

Pray, set it down, and rest you: when the 'Twill weep for having wearied you. [father]

Is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself: He's wafe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear mistress, The sun will set, before I shall discharge

What I must strive to do.

Mira. If you'll sit down, I'll bear your logs the while. Pray, give me Of it

I'll carry it to the pile. [that On t]

Fer. No, precious creature, I had rather crack my sinews, break my back

Than you should such dishonour undergo, While I sit lazy by.

Mira. It would become me As well as it does you: and I should do it

With much more ease; for my good will is And yours it is against.

Pro. [Aside.] Poor worm! thou art infected. This visitation shows it.

Mira. You look wearily.

Fer. No, noble mistress; 'tis fresh morning with me.

When you are by at night. I do beseech you, Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers,—

What is your name?

Mira. Miranda.—O my father, I have broke your heart to say so.

Fer. Admir'd Miranda, Indeed, the top of admiration; worth

What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady I have ey'd with best regard; and many a time

The harmony of their tongues hath into bond age Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues

I lik'd several women; never any so full soul, but some defect in her; quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd, put it to the foil; but you, O you! effect, and so peerless, are created every creature's best.

ra. I do not know of my sex; no woman's face remember, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen that I may call men, than you, good friend, my dear father: how features are abroad, skill-less of; but, by my modesty, jewel in my dower,) I would not wish companion in the world but you; can imagination form a shape, does yourself, to like of. But I prattle nothing too wildly, and my father's precepts rein do forget.

er. I am, in my condition, since, Miranda; I do think, a king; could, not so!) and would no more endure wooden slavery, than to suffer flesh-ly blow my mouth.—Hear my soul very instant that I saw you, did [speak:—heart fly to your service; there resides, make me slave to it; and for your sake, I this patient leg-man.

fira. O heaven! O earth! hear witness to this sound,

I crown what I profess with kind event, speak true; if hollowly, invert; at best is boded me, to mischief! I, round all limit of what else 't the world, love, prize, honour you. Mira. I am a weep at what I am glad of. [fool,

ro. [Aside.] Fair encounter two most rare affections! Heavens rain that which breeds between them! [grace

er. Wherefore weep you? Mira. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer at I desire to give; and much less take at I shall die to want. But this is trifling; and all the more it seeks to hide itself, bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!

and prompt me, plain and holy innocence! in your wife, if you will marry me;

not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow you may deny me; but I'll be your servant, whether you will or no.

er. My mistress, dearest, and I thus humble ever. Mira.

er. Ay, with a heart as willing bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand. Mira. And mine, with my heart in't: and half-an-hour hence, [now farewell,

er. A thousand thousand! [Recount er. and Mira.

ro. So glad of this as they, I cannot be, no are surpris'd with all; but my rejoicing

At nothing can be more. I'll to my book; For yet, ere supper-time, must I perform Much business appertaining. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Island.
Enter Caliban, with a bottle, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me:—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em.—Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster! the folly of this island! They say, there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee; thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me; I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light.—Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no standard.

Ste. We'll not run, monsieur monster.

Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs; and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou heest a good moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe. I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster: I am in case to justify a constable: Why, thou deboshed fish thou, was there ever a man a coward, that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!

Cal. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I prythee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: if you prove a mutineer, the next tree—The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity. [pleas'd

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be To hearken once again the suit I made thee?

Ste. Marry, will I; kneel, and repeat it: I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant, a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of this land.

Ari. Thou liest.

Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou; I would my valiant master would destroy thee: I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more once ache: here's a maze trod, in-[patience] rth-rights, and meanders] by your ut rest me.

Old lord, I cannot blame thee, myself attach'd with weariness,
ling of my spirits: sit down, and rest.
I will put off my hope, and keep it for my flatterer: he is drown'd, us we stray to find; and the sea
cks

ate search on land. Well, let him go.
[side to Seb.] I am right glad that so out of hope.

or one repulse, forego the purpose
resolv'd to effect.

[side to Ant.] The next advantage
ake thoroughly.

[side to Seb.] Let it be to-night;
they are oppress'd with travel, they nor cannot, use such vigilance, they are fresh. [more.]

[side to Ant.] I say, to-night: no und strange music; and Prospero invisible. Enter several strange bringing in a banquet: they dance
it with gentle actions of salutation;
[singing the King, &c., to eat, they [friends, hark!

What harmony is this! my good Marvellous sweet music!

Give us kind keepers, heavens! What are these?

Living drollery. Now I will believe are are unicorns; that in Arabia one tree, the phoenix' throne; one hour reigning there. [phoenix

I'll believe both;
it does else want credit, come to me,

be sworn 'tis true: travellers ne'er did fools at home condemn them. [lie,

If in Naples report this now, would they believe old say, I saw such islanders, [me?

rtes, these are people of the island,]

ough they are of monstrous shape,
et, note,

anners are more gentle, kind, than of man generation you shall find ay, almost any.

[side.] Honest lord,

ast said well; for some of you there se than devils. [present,

I cannot too much muse,
napes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing gh they want the use of tongue) a kind

llent dumb discourse.
[side.] Praise in departing.

They vanish'd strangely.

No matter, since ave left their viands behind; for we ave stomachs.—

please you taste of what is here!

Alon. Not I. [we were boys, Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear. When Who would believe that there were mountaineers [hanging at them

Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had Wallets of flesh! or that there were such men Whose heads stood in their breasts! which now we find,

Each putter-out of five for one, will bring us
Good warrant of.

Alon. I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last; no matter, since I feel
The best is past.—Brother, my lord the duke Stand to, and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Ariel like a happy; claps his wings upon the table; and,
with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.

Ant. You are three men of sin, whom destiny

[That hath to instrument this lower world,
And what is in't,) the never-surfeited sea
Hath caused to belch up; and on this island
Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men [mad;

Being most unfit to live, I have made you [Seeing Alon., Seb., &c., draw their swords.

And even with such like valour, men hang and drown [fellows

Their proper selves. You fools! I and my
Are ministers of fate: the elements

Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs

Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish

One dowle that's in my plume; my fellow-ministers

Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt, Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,

And will not be uplifted. But, remember,

(For that's my business to you,) that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero;

Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it,
Him, and his innocent child: for which foul

deed
The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incens'd the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures,

Against your peace. Thee, of thy son, Alonso,
They have bereft; and do pronounce, by me,

Lingering perdition (worse than any death
Can be at once) shall step by step attend

You, and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from (Which here in this most desolate isle, else falls Upon your heads) is nothing, but heart's

And a clear life ensuing. [sorrow,
He vanishes in thunder: then, to soft music,

enter the Shapes again, and dance with mocks and moves, and carry out the table.

Pro. [side.] Bravely the figure of this happy hast thou [sing;

Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devour-
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated,

In what thou hadst to say : so with good life
And observation strange, my meener ministers Their several kinds have done. My high charms work,

And these, mine enemies, are all knit up
In their distractions : they now are in my power ;

And in these fits I leave them, while I visit Young Ferdinand, (whom they suppose is drown'd.)

And his and my loved darling. [Exit above.
Gon. P' the name of something holy, sir,
In this strange stare ? [why stand you
Alon. O, it is monstrous ! monstrous !

Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it ;
The winds did sing it to me ; and the thunder,
That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounced
The name of Prosper : it did bass my trespass.
Therefore my son i' the ooze is bedded ; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,

And with him there lie mudded. [Exit.
Seb. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er.

Ant. I'll be thy second.
[Recount Seb. and Ant.

Gon. All three of them are desperate ; their great guilt,

Like poison given to work a great time after,
Now gins to bite the spirits.—I do beseech you,
That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this ecstasy
May now provoke them to.

Adr. Follow, I pray you. [Recount.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends ; for I
Have given you here a thread of mine own life,
Or that for which I live ; whom once again
I tender to thy hand : all thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test : here, afore
Heaven,

I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand !
Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise,
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it,
Against an oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition

Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter : but If thou dost break her virgin knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow ; but barren hate,
Sour-ey'd disdain, and discord, shall bestrew
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly,

That you shall hate it both : therefore,
As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Fer. For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love as 'tis now, the merriest
The most opportune place, the strong'st action

Our worse genius can, shall never melt
Aline honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that day's celebration ;
When I shall think, or Phœbus' steeds
Or night kept chain'd below.

Pro. Fairly spoken.
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own.
What, Ariel ! my industrious servant, Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master ?
I am.

Pro. Thou and thy meener fellows your Did worthily perform ; and I must use you
In such another trick. Go, bring the rabble O'er whom I give thee power, here, to this place :

Incite them to quick motion ; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art : it is my promise,
And they expect it from me. Ari. Present.

Pro. Ay, with a twick.
Ari. Before you can say, "Come," and "Go,"
And breathe twice ; and I must use you
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow.

Do you love me, master ? I do ?
Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not Till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well, I conceive.
Pro. Look, thou be true ; do not give liance

Too much the reins ; the strongest oaths
To the fire i' the blood : be more abstemious
Or else, good night, your vow !

Fer. I warrant you,
The white-cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my liver. Pro. Well,
Now come, my Ariel ! bring a corollary,
Rather than want a spirit : appear, a pertly.—

No tongue ; all eyes ; be silent. [Soft music.
A Masque. Enter Iris.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy less

Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease Thy turf mountains, where live nibbling she
And that meads, thatch'd with stover, them keep ;

Thy banks with pioned and twilled brims,
Which spongy April at thy best bestrides,
To make cold nymphs chaste crowns ; and broom groves,

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves
Being lass-lorn ; thy pole-clipt vineyard ;
And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard Where thou thyself dost air : the queen
the sky,

Whose watery arch and messenger am I,
Bids thee leave these ; and with her sovereign
grace,

Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport ; her peacocks fly again :
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.
Cer. Hall, many-coloured messenger, that Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter ; [ne'er
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers ;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd down, Rich scarf to my proud earth ; why bath thy
queen

Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd
Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the bless'd lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly haw,
If Venus, or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the queen ! since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company
I have forewarn'd.

Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid ; I met her deity [son
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos, and her Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done

Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-rite shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted ; but in vain :
Mars's hot minion is return'd again ;
Her washp-head son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with
And be a boy right out.

Cer. Highest queen of state,
Great Juno comes ; I know her by her gait.
Enter Juno.

Jun. How does my bounteous sister ! Go with me, [be,
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous
And honour'd in their issue.

song.
Jun. Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Howe'er joys be still upon you !
Juno sings her blessing on you.
Cer. Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barns and garners never empty ;
Vines, with clust'ring bunches growing ;
Plants, with goodly burden bowing ;
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
In the very end of harvest !
Scarcity and want shall shun you ;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Fer. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly : May I be hold
To think these spirits ?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines called to enact
My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever :

So rare a wonder'd father, and a wife,
Make this place Paradise.

[Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.

Pro. Sweet now, silence !
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously ;
There's something else to do : hush, and be
Or else our spell is marr'd.

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Nalada, of the winding brooks,
With your self'd crowns, and ever-harmless
Leave your crisp channels, and on this green
land

Answer your summons : Juno does command.
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love, be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.
You sun-burn'd sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry :
Make holiday : your eye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

*Enter certain Reapers, properly habited : they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance ;
towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks ; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.*

Pro. I had forgot that foul con-
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates,
Against my life : the minute of their plot
Is almost come.—[To the Spirits.] Well done ;—avoid,—no more.

Fer. This is strange : your father's in some
That works him strongly—Mira. Never till this day,
Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.

Pro. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
As if you were dismay'd : be cheerful, sir :
Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air :

And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex'd :
Bear with my weakness ; my old brain is
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity. [troubled.
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell,
And there repose : a turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.

Fer. We wish your peace. [Exit.
Pro. Come with a thought !—[To them.] I —Ariel, come ! [thank you.

Enter Ariel.
Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure ? Pro. Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander ; when I presented Ceres,

I thought to have told thee of it; but I fear'd lest I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking;

So full of valour that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet; yet always bending Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor;
At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears,

Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt music: so I charm'd their ears,
That, on-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Tooth'd briars, sharp furzes, pricking goss, and thorns,

Which enter'd their frail shines: at last I left
I the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to the chins, that the foul Overstunk their feet.

Pro. This was well done, my bird;
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:

The trumpety in my house, go, bring it hither,
For stale to catch these thieves.

Ari. I go, I go. [Exit.]

Pro. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost;
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
Even to roaring.

Re-enter Ariel, laden with glittering apparel, &c.

Come, hang them on this line.
Prospero and Ariel remain unseen. Enter

Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not

Hear a foot fall: we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine.—Do you hear, monster?
If I should take a displeasure against you,
look you,—

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good, my lord, give me thy favour still;
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hoodwink this mischance; therefore speak softly;

All's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting:
yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

Cal. Pr'ythee, my king, be quiet. Seest thou
here,

This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and

Do that good mischief, which may make island

Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand: I do begin to bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O word!

Stephano! look, what a wardrobe here is
this!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool; it is but trash.

Trin. O, ho, monster; we know what longs to a frippery.—O king Stephano!

Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo; by hand, I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it.

Cal. The drowy drow this fool! what you mean,

To doat thus on such luggage! Let's also
And do the murder first: if he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with
Make us strange stuff.

Ste. Be you quiet, monster.—Mistress Il-is not this my jerkin! Now is the jack under the line: now, jerkin, you are like lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do: we steal by line and lev-and't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest; here's garment for't: wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country: "Steal by it and level," is an excellent pass of pate; then another garment for't.

Trin. Monster, come, put some line up-your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none out: we shall lo-
our time,

And all be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers: help bear this away, where my hoghead of wine or I'll turn you out of my kingdom; go carry this.

Trin. And this.

Ste. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter three Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt the about; Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pro. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver!

Pro. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there
hark, hark!

[Cal., Ste., and Trin. are driven on Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints

With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews
With aged cramps; and more pinch-spotted make them,

Than pard, or cat o' mountain.

Ari. Hark! they roar!

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly. At the Lie at my mercy all mine enemies: [Thunder]

Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the air of freedom: for a little,
Follow, and do me service.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before the cell of Prospero.

Enter Prospero in his magic robes; and Ariel.

Pro. Now does my project gather to a head:
My charms crack not; my spirits obey; and
time

Goes upright with his carriage. How's the Ari. On the sixth hour; at which time, my [lord,

You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so.

When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my How fares the king and 's followers?

Ari. Confind together

In the same fashion as you gave in charge;
Just as you left them: all prisoners, sir,

In the fine-grove which weather-fends your cell;

They cannot budge, till your release. The
His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted;

And the remainder mourning over them,
Brimful of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly Him that you term'd, sir, "The good old lord Gonzalo:"

His tears run down his beard, like winter's From eaves of eaves; your charm so strongly works them,

That if you now behold them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pro. Doest thou think so, spirit?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pro. And mine shall.

Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feel-
Of their afflictions, and shall not myself, (ing
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply, Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art?

Though with their high wrongs I am struck
Yet, with my nobler reason, 'gainst my fury
Do I take part: the rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance: they being peni-
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further. Go, release them, Ariel.
My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir. [Exit.]

Pro. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves;

And ye, that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him,
When he comes back; you demy-puppets, that
By moonshine do the green-sour ringlets make, Whereof the ewe not bites; and you, whose pastime

Is to make midnight-mushrooms; that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid (Weak masters though ye be) I have bedimm'd
The noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,

And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault
Set roaring war: to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak

With his own bolt: the strong-bas'd promontory

Have I made shake; and by the spurs
The pine and cedar: graves, at my command,
Have wak'd their sleepers; open'd, and let them
forth

By my so potent art. But this rough magic
I here abjure; and, when I have requir'd
Some heavenly music, (which even now I do,)

To work mine end upon their senses, that
This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it in the fathoms in the earth,

And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,
I'll drown my book.

[Solemn music.]

Re-enter Ariel: after him, Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco: they all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed: which Prospero
observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There
For you are spell-stopp'd.—

[stand,

Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even sociable to the show of thine,
Fall fellowly drops.—The charm dissolves
apace;

And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason.—O good Gonzalo,
My true preserver, and a loyal air

To him thou follow'st, I will pay thy graces
Home, both in word and deed.—Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act;—
Thou'rt pinch'd for't now, Sebastian.—Flash and blood,

You brother mine, that entertain's ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian,

(Whose inward pinches therefore are most Would here have kill'd your king; I do forgive thee,

[standing

Unnatural though thou art!—Their under-Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores, That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them

That yet looks on me, or would know me.—
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell.—
[Exit Ariel.]

I will dis-case me, and myself present,
As I was sometime Milan.—Quickly, spirit;
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariel re-enters, singing, and helps to attire Prospero.

Ari. Where the bee sucks, there suck I:
In a cornfield's bell I lie;
There I couch when owls do cry;
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer, merrily:

*Merrily, merrily, shall I live now,
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.*

Pro. Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall
But yet thou shalt have freedom:—so, so, so,—
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art:
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches; the master, and the boatswain,

Being awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I pray thee,

Ari. I drink the air before me, and return
Or e'er your pulse twice beat. [Exit.]

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement.

Inhabit here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!

Pro. Behold, sir king,
The wronged duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body;
And to thee and thy company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alon. Who's that beest he, or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse Beats, as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw
thee,

The affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me: this must crave
(As if this be at all) a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign; and do entreat Thou pardon me my wrongs.—But how should Be living, and be here! [Prospero]

Pro. First, noble friend, Let me embrace thine age; whose honour cannot

Be measur'd, or could'd. Gon. Whether Or be not, I'll not swear. [This be,

Pro. You do yet taste
Some subtilties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain:—Welcome, my friends
all:—

[Aside to Seb. and Ant.] But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,

I here could pluck his highness' frown upon
And justify you traitors: at this time [you,
I will tell no tales.

Seb. [Aside.] The devil speaks in him.

Pro. No.—
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy ranker fault; all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.

Alon. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation:

How thou hast met us here, who three hours
since [lost,

Were wreck'd upon this shore; where I have (How sharp the point of this remembrance is!)
My dear son Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe for't, sir.

Alon. Irreparable is the loss; and patience

Says it is past her cure.
Pro. I rather think,

You have not sought her help; of whose
grace,

For the like loss I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.

Alon. You the like loss!
Pro. As great to me, as late; and, suppo-

able [weak]
To make the dear loss, have I means
Than you may call to comfort you; for I

Have lost my daughter. Alon. A daughter!
O heavens! that they were living both.

Naples, [I w]
The king and queen there! that they w

Myself were muddled in that oozy bed
Where my son lies. When did you lose yo daughter! [hor]

Pro. In this last tempest. I perceive, the

At this encounter do so much admire,
That they devour their reason, and scarce thi

Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
Are natural breath: but, howso'er you ha

Been justled from your senses, know for c

That I am Prospero, and that very duke [tal]
Which was thrust forth of Milan; who me

strangely [was lande]
Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd

To be the lord on't. No more yet of this;
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,

Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;

This cell's my court: here have I few at tendants,

And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in
My dukedom since you have given me again,

I will requite you with as good a thing;
At least, bring forth a wonder, to content yo

As much as me my dukedom.

The entrance of the Cell opens, and discover Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false.

For. No, my dearest love,
I would not for the world. [should wrangle]

Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you
And I would call it fair play.

Alon. If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son

Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle!

For. Though the seas threaten they are
I have cur'd them without cause. [merciful]

Alon. Now, all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about!

Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

Mira. O, wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new

That has such people in't! [world,

Pro. 'Tis new to thee.

Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play! [hourat]

Your old'st acquaintance cannot be three

Is she the goddess that has sever'd us,
And brought us thus together!

Fer. Sir, she's mortal;

But, by immortal providence, she's mine;
I chose her, when I could not ask my father

For his advice, nor thought I had one. She Is daughter to this famous duke of Milan,

Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before; of whom I have

Recov'd a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me. Alon. I am

But O! how oddly will it sound, that I [hers:]
Must ask my child forgiveness.

Pro. There, sir, stop.
Let us not burden our remembrance with

A heaviness that's gone. I have inly wept,

Gon. Or should have spoke ere this. Look down,
you gods,

And on this couple drop a blessed crown;
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way,

Which brought us thither!

Alon. I say, Amen, Gonzalo!

Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue

Should become kings of Naples! O, rejoice
Beyond a common joy; and set it down

With gold on lasting pillars: in one voyage
Did Charbel her husband find at Tunis;

And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife
Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom

In a poor idle; and all of us, ourselves.

When no man was his own. [hands:]

Alon. [To Fer. and Mir.] Give me your Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart

That doth not wish you joy!

Gon. Be it so: Amen!

Re-enter Ariel, with the Minister and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir! look, sir! here are more of us.

I prophesied, if a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown.—Now, blasphemy,

That swear'st grace o'erboard, not an oath on shore! [news:]

Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the Boats. The best news is, that we have safely found

Our king, and company: the next, our ship,—
Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split,—

Is tight, and yars, and bravely rigg'd, as when We first put out to sea.

Ari. [Aside to Pro.] Sir, all this service
Have I done since I went.

Pro. [Aside to Ari.] My tricky spirit!

Alon. These are not natural events; they strengthen [you hither:]

From strange to stranger.—Say, how came Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
And (how we know not) all clapp'd under

Where, but even now, with strange and several noises [chains,

Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling
And more diversity of sounds, all horrible;

We were awak'd; straightway, at liberty:
Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld

Our royal, good, and gallant ship; our master
Capering to eye her: on a trice, so please

you,

Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither.

Ari. [Aside to Pro.] Was't well done!

Pro. [Aside to Ari.] Bravely, my diligence.
Thou shalt be free.

Alon. This is as strange a maze as e'er men
trod;

And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct of: I some oracle [piece,

Must rectify our knowledge. Pro. Sir, my
Do not infect your mind with beating on

The strangeness of this business: at pick'd
leisure,

Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable) of every

These happen'd accidents: till when, be cheerful. [Come hither, spirit:]

And think of each thing well.—[Aside to Ari.]
Set Caliban and his companions free;

Untie the spell. [Exit Ariel.] How fares
my gracious sir!

There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd bits, that you remember not.

Re-enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their stolen apparel.

Seb. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself, for all is but fortune.—Coragio! bully-monster, Coragio!

Trin. If these be true spies which I went in my head, here's a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits, in-How fine my master is! I am afraid [dead]

He will charitise me. Seb. Ha! ha!

What things are these, my lord Antonio!
Will money buy them!

Ant. Very like; one of them is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable.

Pro. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,

Then say, if they be true. This mis-shapen knave,—

His mother was a witch; and one so strong That could control the moon, make dews and ebbs,

And deal in her command, without her power.

These three have robb'd me; and this demi-devil

(For he's a bastard one) had plotted with them
To take my life: two of these fellows you

Must know, and own; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.

Alon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler!

Seb. He is drunk now: where had he wine!

THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Duke of Milan, father to Silvia.

Valentine, } the Two Gentlemen.

Proteus, }

Antonio, father to Proteus.

Thurio, a foolish rival to Valentine.

Eglamour, agent for Silvia, in her escape.

Speed, a clownish servant to Valentine.

Launce, the like to Proteus.

Panthino, servant to Antonio.
Host, where Julia lodges in Milan.
Out-lawed with Valentine.Julia, beloved of Proteus.
Silvia, beloved of Valentine.
Lucetta, waiting-woman to Julia.
Servants, musicians.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Verona; sometimes in Milan, and on the frontiers of Mantua.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open place in Verona.

Enter Valentine and Proteus.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus:

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.

Wert not, affection chains thy tender days

To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,

I rather would entreat thy company

To see the wonders of the world abroad,

Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home,

Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.

But, since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive

therein,

Even as I would, when I to love begin.

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine,

adieu!

Think on thy Proteus, when thou haply seest

Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel:

Wish me partaker in thy happiness,

When thou dost meet good hap; and in thy

If ever danger do environ thee, [danger]

Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,

For I will be thy head's-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a love-book pray for my success. [thee]

Pro. Upon some book I love, I'll pray for

Val. That's on some shallow story of deep

love,

How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;

For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in

love,

And yet you never swam the Hellespont.

Pro. Over the boots! nay, give me not the boots.

Val. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.

Pro. What?

Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans; [moment's mirth]

Coy looks, with heart-sore sighs; one fading

With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights:

If haply won, perhaps, a hapless gain;

If lost, why then a grievous labour won:

However, but a folly bought with wit,

Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'll prove.

Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at: I am not Love.

Val. Love is your master, for he masters

And he that is so yoked by a fool, [you]

Methinks should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, As in the sweetest bud

The eating canker dwells, so eating love

Inhabits in the finest wits of all. [bud]

Val. And writers say, As the most forward

Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,

Even so by love the young and tender wit

Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud,

Losing his verdure even in the prime,

And all the fair effects of future hopes.

But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee,

That art a votary to fond desire?

Once more adieu! my father at the road

Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.

Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.

To Milan let me hear from thee by letters,

Of thy success in love, and what news else

Betideth here in absence of thy friend;

And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!

Val. As much to you at home! and so, farewell. [Exit.]

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love:

He leaves his friends to dignify them more;

I leave myself, my friends, and all for love.

Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;

Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,

Alon. And Trinculo is seeling ripe: where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded them!—
How cam'st thou in this pickle?Trin. I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones: I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Seb. Why, how now, Stephano?

Ste. O! touch me not: I am not Stephano,

but a cramp.

Pro. You'd be king of the isle, sirrah?

Ste. I should have been a sore one, then.

Alon. This is a strange thing as e'er I look'd on. [Pointing to Caliban.]

Pro. He is as disproportion'd in his manners,

As in his shape.—Go, sirrah, to my cell;

Take with you your companions: as you look

To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Cal. Ay, that I will; and I'll be wise hereafter,

And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass

Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,

And worship this dull fool!

Pro. Go to; away!

Alon. Hence, and bestow your luggage

where you found it.

Seb. Or stole it, rather.

[Exit Cal., Ste., and Trin.]

Pro. Sir, I invite your highness, and your train,

To my poor cell: where you shall take your rest

For this one night; which (part of it) I'll waste

With such discourse, as, I not doubt, shall Go quick away: the story of my life, [make it]

And the particular accidents gone by,

Since I came to this isle: and in the morn

I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,

Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-beloved solemniz'd;
And thence retire me to my Milan, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alon.

To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely. Pro. I'll deliver

And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales

And sail so expeditious, that shall catch

Your royal fleet far off.—[Aside to Ari.]

Ariel;—chick,—

That is thy charge: then to the elements

Be free, and fare thou well!—Please you draw near. [Exit.]

EPILOGUE. Spoken by Prospero.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,

And what strength I have's mine own;

Which is most faint: now, 'tis true,

I must be here confin'd by you,

Or sent to Naples. Let me not,

Since I have my dukedom got,

And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell

In this bare island, by your spell;

But release me from my bands,

With the help of your good hands,

Gentle breath of yours my sails

Must fill, or else my project fails,

Which was to please. Now I want

Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;

And my ending is despair,

Unless I be reliev'd by prayer;

Which pierces so, that it assaults

Mercy itself, and frees all faults.

As you from crimes would pardon'd be,

Let your indulgence set me free.

War with good counsel, set the world at naught; [thought.]
Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with

Enter Speed.

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you! Saw you my master?

Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark

Speed. Twenty to one, then, he is shipp'd already.

And I have play'd the sheep, in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray, An if the shepherd be awhile away.

Speed. You conclude, that my master is a shepherd, then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I do.

Speed. Why then, my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.

Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall go hard but I'll prove it by Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore, I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd; the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof will make me cry

Pro. But, dost thou hear? gavest thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir; I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour!

Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharged, you were best stick her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray; 'twere best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake: I mean the pound, a Speed. From a pound to a pin! fold it over and over,

'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to

Pro. But what said she? [Speed nods.] Did she nod?

Speed. I.

Pro. Nod, if why, that's nodd.

Speed. You mistook, sir; I say she did nod; and you ask me, if she did nod; and I say I.

Pro. And that set together, is—nodd.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive, I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very order having nothing but the word "nodd" for pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your

Pro. Come, come; open the matter in Speed. Open your purse, that the Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains.

Speed. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly

Pro. Why, couldst thou perceive so Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at

Pro. What! said she nothing

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Speed. No, not so much as—"take this

Pro. To testify your bounty, I the

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus,—of many good I think

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason;

Jul. I think him so, because I think him so.

Luc. And wouldst thou have me cast my

Jul. love on him?

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast

Jul. Why, he, of all the rest, hath never

Luc. mov'd me.

Jul. Yet he, of all the rest, I think, best

Luc. His little speaking shows his love but

Jul. small.

Luc. Fire that is closest kept, burns most of

Jul. They do not love, that do not show

Luc. their love.

Jul. O, they love least, that let men know

Luc. I would I knew his mind.

Jul. Peruse this paper, madam.

Luc. "To Julia."—Say from whom?

Jul. That the contents will show.

Luc. Say, say, who gave it thee?

Jul. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think,

Luc. from Proteus.

Jul. He would have given it you; but I, being in the

Luc. Did in your name receive it; pardon the fault,

Jul. I pray.

Luc. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!

Jul. Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?

Luc. To whisper and conspire against my youth?

Jul. Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,

Luc. And you an officer fit for the place.

Jul. There, take the paper; see it be return'd;

Luc. Or else return no more into my sight.

Jul. To plead for love deserves more

Luc. Will you be gone?

Jul. That you may ruminate.

Luc. And yet, I would I had o'erlook'd the

Jul. letter.

Luc. It were a shame to call her back again,

Jul. And pray her to a fault for which I chid her.

Luc. What fool is she, that knows I am a maid,

Jul. And would not force the letter to my view!

Luc. Since maids, in modesty, say "No," to that

Jul. Which they would have the profligate construe,

Luc. "Ay."

Jul. His, ha, how wayward is this foolish love,

Luc. That like a testy babe will scratch the nurse,

Jul. And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod!

Luc. How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,

Jul. When willingly I would have had her here!

Luc. How angrily I taught my brow to frown,

Jul. When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile!

Luc. My penance is, to call Lucetta back,

Jul. And ask remission for my folly past,—

Luc. What ho! Lucetta!

Jul. Re-enter Lucetta.

Luc. What would your ladyship?

Jul. Is it near dinner-time?

Luc. I would it were;

Jul. That you might kill your stomach on your

Luc. meat,

Jul. And not upon your maid.

Jul. What is't that you took up so glori-

Luc. giously?

Jul. Nothing.

Luc. Why didst thou stoop, then?

Jul. To take a paper up

Luc. That I let fall.

Jul. And is that paper nothing?

Luc. Nothing concerning me.

Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.

Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,

Jul. Unless it have a false interpreter.

Luc. Some love of yours has writ to you in

Jul. rhyme.

Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a

Jul. tune:

Luc. Give me a note: your ladyship can set.

Jul. As little by such toys as may be pos-

Luc. sible:

Jul. Best sing it to the tune of "Light o' Love."

Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Jul. Heavy! belike it hath some burden,

Luc. then!

Jul. Ay; and melodious were it, would you

Luc. And why not you?

Jul. I cannot reach so high.

Luc. Let's see your song. [Taking the

Jul. letter.] How now, minion!

Luc. Keep tune there still, so you will sing

Jul. it out:

Luc. And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.

Jul. You do not!

Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp.

Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.

Luc. Nay, now you are too flat.

Jul. And mar the concord with too harsh a discord:

Luc. There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.

Jul. The mean is drown'd with your unruly

Luc. base.

Jul. Indeed, I bid the base for Proteus.

Luc. This babble shall not henceforth

Jul. trouble me.

[Here is a roll with protestation!—

[Tears the letter.

Go, get you gone, and let the papers lie:

You would be fingering them, to anger me.

Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleas'd

To be so anger'd with another letter. [Exit.

Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!

O hateful hands, to tear such loving words!

Injurious wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,

And kill the bees, that yield it, with your stings!

I'll kiss each several paper for amends.

Look, here is writ—"Kind Julia."—Unkind

As in revenge of thy ingratitude, [Julia]

I throw thy name against the bruising stones,

Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.

And, here is writ—"Love-wounded Proteus:"

Poor wounded name! my bosom, as a bed,

Shall lodge thee, till thy wound be thoroughly

heal'd:

And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.

But twice or thrice was "Proteus" written down—

Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter in the letter,
Except mine own name; that some whirlwind
Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging rock, [hear
And throw in thence into the raging sea!
Lo! here in one line is his name twice writ,—
"Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus,
To the sweet Julia;"—that I'll tear away;
And yet I will not, with so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names:
Thus will I fold them one upon another:
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Re-enter Lucetta.

Luc. Madam,
Dinner is ready, and your father stays.

Jul. Well, let us go.

Luc. What, shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?

Jul. If you respect them, best to take them down.

Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down;

Yet here they shall not lie for catching cold.

Jul. I see you have a month's mind to them.

Luc. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;

I see things too, although you judge I wink.

Jul. Come, come; will't please you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Verona. A Room in Antonio's House.

Enter Antonio and Panthino.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that,

Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?

Pant. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.

Ant. Why, what of him?

Pant. He wonder'd that your lordship would suffer him to spend his youth at home;

While other men, of slender reputation, put forth their sons to seek preferment out;

Some to the wars, to try their fortune there;

Some to discover islands far away;

Some to the studious universities.

For any, or for all these exercises, He said that Proteus your son was meet;

And did request me to importune you To let him spend his time no more at home,

Which would be great impeachment to his age, In having known no travel in his youth.

Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that.

Wherein this month I have been hammering, I have consider'd well his loss of time,

And how he cannot be a perfect man, Not being tried and tutor'd in the world:

Experience is by industry achiev'd, And perfected by the swift course of time.

Then, tell me, whither were I best to send him?

Pant. I think your lordship is not ignorant How his companion, youthful Valentine, Attends the emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well. [Sent him thither.]

Pant. 'Twere good, I think, your lordship There shall be practise tilts and tournaments;

Hear sweet discourse, converse with nobles, And be in eye of every exercise.

Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advised.

And, that thou may'st perceive how well I'll The execution of it shall make known;

Even with the speediest expedition I will despatch him to the emperor's court.

Pant. To-morrow, may it please you, Alphonse,

With other gentlemen of good esteem, Are journeying to salute the emperor,

And to commend their service to his will.

Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus go:

And, in good time:—now will we break up.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;

Here is her oath for love, her honour's paw, O, that our fathers would applaud our love!

To seal our happiness with their consents! O heavenly Julia!

Ant. How now! what letter are you read there?

Pro. May't please your lordship, 'tis word or two

Of commendations sent from Valentine, Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the letter; let me see what news.

Pro. There is no news, my lord; but how happily he lives, how well belov'd,

And daily graced by the emperor; Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to wish?

Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will, And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with wish.

Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed; For what I will, I will, and there an end.

I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time With Valentines in the emperor's court:

What maintenance he from his friends receiveth, Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.

To-morrow be in readiness to go: Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided: Please you, deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look, what thou want'st shall be after thee:

No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go. Come on, Panthino: you shall be employ'd To hasten on this expedition.

[Exeunt Antonio and Panthino.]

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire, for fear of burning, And drench'd me in the sea, where I four'd to show my father Julia's letter, that he should take exceptions to my love;

and, with the vantage of mine own excuse, hath he excepted most against my love.

How this spring of love resembleth The uncertain glory of an April day;

Which now shows all the beauty of the sun, And by and by a cloud takes all away!

Re-enter Panthino.

Pant. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you; he is in haste; therefore, I pray you, go.

Pro. Why, this it is: my heart accords thereto;

and yet a thousand times it answers, No. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's Palace. Enter Valentine and Speed.

Speed. Sir, your glove.

Val. Not mine; my gloves are on.

Speed. Why then this may be yours, for this but one. [Mine.]

Val. Ha! Let me see: ay, give it me, it's sweet ornament that decks a thing divine!

Speed. [Culling.] Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!

Val. How now, sirrah!

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.

Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her?

Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook.

Val. Well, you'll still be too forward.

Speed. And yet I was last childen for being slow.

Val. Go to, sir. Tell me, do you know Madam Silvia?

Speed. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Speed. Marry, by those special marks: first, you have learned, like Sir Proteus, to wreath your arms, like a discontent; to relish a love-song, like a robin-red-breast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears obbing; to speak pining, like a beggar at Allowmas. You were wont, when you laugh'd, to crow like a cock; when you walk'd, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money; and now you are metamorphos'd with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me?

Speed. They are all perceived without ye.

Val. Without me! they cannot.

Speed. Without you! I say, that's certain, for, without you were so simple, none else would; but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in a crystal, that not an eye that sees you, but is a physician to comment on your malady. [Silvia.]

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady?

Speed. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper? [Mean.]

Val. Hast thou observed that? even she I speed. Why, sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet knowest her not?

Speed. Is she not hard-favoured, sir?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well-favoured.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Speed. That she is not so fair, as [of you] well-favoured.

Val. I mean, that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never saw her since she was deformed.

Val. How long hath she been deformed?

Speed. Ever since you loved her.

Val. I have loved her ever since I saw her; and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because love is blind. O, that you had mine eyes; or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have, when you chid at Sir Proteus for going ungartered!

Val. What should I see then?

Speed. Your own present folly, and her passing deformity: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Believe, boy, then, you are in love; for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed; I thank you, you swung me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set; so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you? Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them. —Peace! here she comes.

Enter Silvia.

Speed. [Aside.] O excellent motion! O exceeding puppet! now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-mornings.

Speed. [Aside.] O, 'give ya good even! here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. [Aside.] He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoin'd me, I have writ your Unto the secret nameless friend of yours; Which I was much unwilling to proceed in, But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant; 'tis very clerkly done.

Val. Now, trust me, madam, it came hardly For, being ignorant to whom it goes, [off; I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains? [write]

Val. No, madam; so it stead you, I will Please you command, a thousand times as And yet,— [much]

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel: [not]

And yet I will not name it;—and yet I care And yet take this again;—and yet I thank you, Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. [Aside.] And yet you will; and yet another yet.

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it? [write]

Sil. Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly But since unwillingly, take them again: Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay, you writ them, sir, at my request;

But I will none of them; they are for you: I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another.

Sil. And, when it's writ, for my sake read it over:

And, if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam! what then?

Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour:

And so, good-morrow, servant. [Exit]

Speed. O jest unseem, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple!

[her savior] My master sues to her; and she hath taught He being her pupil, to become her tutor.

O excellent device! was there ever heard a better,

That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter!

Val. How now, sir! what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was rhyming: 'tis you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokesman from madam

Val. To whom? [Silvia]

Speed. To yourself. Why, she woees you by

Val. What figure! [a figure]

Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me!

Speed. What need she, when she hath you write to yourself? Why, do you not receive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you, indeed, sir, did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter

Val. That's the letter I writ to her

Speed. And that letter hath she delivered and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you, 'tis as "For often have you writ to her; and she

Or else for want of idle time, could not

Or fearing else some messenger that might mind discover,

Herself hath taught her love himself to unto her lover."

All this I speak in print, for in print I

it.—

Why muse you, sir! 'tis dinner-time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir; though chameleon Love can feed on the air,

one that is nourished by my victuals, would fain have meat. O, be not like mistress; be moved, be moved. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Verona. A Room in Julia's

House. Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia,

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return

Jul. If you turn not, you will return sooner.

Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake

[Gives him a ring] master is shipped, and thou art to post after

Pro. Why, then, we'll make exchange; with ours. What's the matter? Why weepest take you this. [Gives her another] thou, man! Away, as! you'll lose the tide,

if you tarry any longer.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constant

And when that hour o'erslips me in the day

Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,

The next ensuing hour some foul mischief

Torment me for my love's forgetfulness!

My father stays my coming; answer not.

The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of tears!

That tide will stay me longer than I should

Julia, farewell! [Exit Julia.] What, gone out a word!

Ay, so true love should do: it cannot spare

For truth hath better deeds than words

grace it.

Enter Panthino.

Pant. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.

Pro. Go; I come, I come!

Alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dead

[Exit]

SCENE III.—Verona. A Street.

Enter Launce, leading a dog.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have one weeping: all the kind of the Launces ave this very fault. I have received my proortion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the Imperial's court. I think Crab, my dog, be the saddest-natured dog that liveth my mother weeping, my father

howling, my sister crying, our maid howling,

our cat wending her hands, and all our house

a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear: he is a stone, a pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting: why, my grandam,

having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind

at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shoe is my father's;—no, this left shoe is my father's;—no, no, this left shoe

is my mother's;—nay, that cannot be so, neither:

—yes, it is so; it is so; it hath the worse sole.

This shoe, with the hole in, is my mother, and this my father. A vengeance on't! there his: now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan, our maid: I am the dog;—no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog;—O, the dog is me, and I am myself: ay,

so so. Now come I to my father; "Father,

your blessing!" now should not the shoe speak word for weeping: now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on. Now come I to my mother;—O, that she could speak now!

like a wood woman; well, I kiss her;—why there 'tis, here's my mother's breath up and down. Now come I to my sister; mark the mean she makes. Now, the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter Panthino.

Pant. Launce, away, away, aboard! thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with ours. What's the matter? Why weepest thou, man! Away, as! you'll lose the tide,

if you tarry any longer.

Launce. It is no matter if the tide were lost;

for it is the unkindest tide that ever any man lost.

Pant. What's the unkindest tide?

Launce. Why, he that's tied here; Crab, my dog.

Pant. Tut, man, I mean thou'll lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost

thou stop my mouth?

[longer]

Launce. For fear thou should'st lose thy father. Where should I lose my tongue?

Pant. In thy tale. Pant. In thy tail!

Launce. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tide!

Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pant. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call thee.

Launce. Sir, call me what thou dar'st.

Pant. Will thou go?

Launce. Well, I will go. [Re-enter]

SCENE IV.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's

Palace.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.

Sil. Servant— Val. Mistress!

Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed. Not of you.

Val. Of my mistress, then.

Speed. 'Twere good you knock'd him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thur. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Happily, I do.

Thur. So do counterfeit.

Val. So do you.

Thur. What seem I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thur. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thur. And how quote you my folly?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Thur. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thur. How!

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio! do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, madam: he is a kind of chameleon.

Thur. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.

Val. You have said, sir.

Thur. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.

Val. I know it well, sir: you always and ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the Sil. Who is that, servant?

[Giver]

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thur. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir: you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare

words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more; here comes my father.

Enter the Duke.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset.—

Sil. Valentine, your father's in good health:

What say you to a letter from your friends

Of much good news!

Val. My lord, I will be thankful To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?

Val. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentle To be of worth, and worthy estimation. [Duke] And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

Val. Ay, my good lord; a son, that well The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Val. I know him as myself; for from our infancy [together:] We have convers'd, and spent our hours to-

And though myself have been an idle truant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time

To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection, Yet hath Sir Proteus, for that's his name,

Made use and fair advantage of his days: His years but young, but his experience old;

His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe; And, in a word, (for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow,) He is complete in feature and in mind,

With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but if he make this good,

He is as worthy for an empress' love, As meet to be an emperor's counsellor.

Well, sir, this gentleman is come to me With commendation from great potentates;

And here he means to spend his time a while: I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you.

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.

Duke. Welcome him, then, according to his Silvia, I speak to you; and you, Sir Thurio:—

For Valentine, I need not cite him to it: I'll send him hither to you presently. [Exit.]

Val. This is the gentleman, I told your ladyship,

Had come along with me, but that his mistress Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchis'd Upon some other pawn for fealty. [To them.]

Val. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still. [To being blind.]

Sil. Nay, then, he should be blind; and, How could he see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes.

Thur. They say, that love hath not an eye at Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself:

Upon a homely object love can wink.

Sil. Have done, have done: here comes the gentleman.

Enter Proteus.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beseech you, Confirm his welcome with some special favour.

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither.

If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from,

Val. Mistress, it is: sweet lady, welcome him

To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too meek a servant

To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability—

Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his mistress.

Servant, you are welcome to a worthless

Pro. I'll die on him that says so, but I

Sil. That you are welcome!

Pro. That you are worthy

Enter an Attendant.

Att. Madam, my lord your father will speak with you.

Sil. I wait upon his pleasure. [Exit.]

Pro. Come, Sir Thurio,

Go with me.—Once more, new servant, I'll leave you to confer of home affairs;

When you have done, we look to hear of you.

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.

Exit Silvia and Thurio.

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whom you came?

Pro. Your friends are well, and have

Val. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your lady? and how your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to

I know, you joy not in a love-discourse.

Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is all now:

I have done penances for contemning love;

Whose high imperious thoughts have pun- With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,

With nightly tears, and daily heart- sor- For, in revenge of my contempt of love,

Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled And made them watchers of mine own heart sorrow.

O, gentle Proteus! love's a mighty lord,

And hath so humbled me, as, I confess,

There is no woe to his correction,

Nor to his service, no such joy on earth!

Now, no discourse, except it be of love;

Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep

Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough: I read your fortune in your

Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?

Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.

Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter

Val. O, flatter me; for love delights in praise.

Pro. When I was sick you gave me

And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Then speak the truth by her: if not Yet let her be a principality,

[divine, Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.]

Pro. Except my mistress.

Val. Sweet, except not any; Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her, too: She shall be dignified with this high honour,—

To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,

And, of so great a favour growing proud, Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,

And make rough winter everlasting.

Pro. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this?

Val. Pardon me, Proteus; all I can, is, no To her, whose worth makes other worthies

nothing.

Pro. Then, let her alone.

Val. Not for the world: why, man, she is mine own;

And I as rich in having such a jewel, As twenty seas, if all their sands were pearl,

The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold. Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,

Because thou see'st me dote upon my love. My foolish rival, that her father likes

Only for his possessions are so huge, Is gone with her along; and I must after,

For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Val. Ay, and we are betroth'd:

Nay, more, our marriage hour, With all the cunning manner of our flight,

Determin'd of; how I must climb her window, The ladder made of cord, and all the means

Plotted, and 'greed on for my happiness. Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,

In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.

Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth: I must unto the road, to disembark

Some necessities that I needs must use;

And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will.

[Exit Valentine and Speed.]

Even as one heat another heat expels,

Or as one nail by strength drives out another, So the remembrance of my former love

Is by a newer object quite forgotten. Is it mine eye, or Valentine's praise,

Her true perfection, or my false transgression, That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus?

She's fair; and so is Julia that I love,— That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd;

Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire, Bears no impression of the thing it was.

Methinks, my zeal to Valentine is cold, And that I love him not as I was wont:

O, but I love his lady too too much; And that's the reason I love him so little.

How shall I dote on her with more advice, That thus without advice begin to love her!

'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld, And that hath dazzled my reason's light; But when I look on her personations, There is no reason but I shall be blind. If I can check my erring love, I will; If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Milan. A Street.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.

Launce. Forewarn not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always —that a man is never undone, till he be hang'd; nor never welcome to a place, till some certain shot be paid, and the hostess say, "Welcome."

Speed. Come on, you madcap, I'll to the alehouse with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce. Marry, thus; when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou sayest?

Launce. Ay, and what I do too: look thee; I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand under and under-stand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Launce. Ask my dog; if he say ay, it will; if he say no, it will; if he shake his tail and any nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is, then, that it will.

Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how sayest thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Then how?

Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whorehouse ass, thou mis- taken man!

Launce. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become hot lover.

Launce. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt, go with me to the alehouse; if not, thou art a Hebrew,

a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.
Speech. Why?

Launce. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the ale with a Christian. Wilt thou go?

Speech. At thy service.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn;
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn;
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn;
And even that power, which gave me first my Provokes me to this threefold perjury: [oath, Love bade me swear, and Love bids me for-swear.

O sweet-suggesting Love, if thou hast sinn'd,
Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it! At first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun.
Unheeded vows may headlily be broken;
And he wants wit, that wants resolved will
To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better.
Fie, fie, unrevolving tongue! to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast prefer'd
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love, where I should love,
Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose;
If I keep them, I needs must lose myself;
If I lose them, thus find I, by their loss,—
For Valentine, myself; for Julia, Silvia.
I to myself am dearer than a friend,
For love is still most precious in itself;
And Silvia (witness heaven, that made her Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiop. [fair!]
I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembering that my love to her is dead;
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
I cannot now prove constant to myself,
Without some treachery used to Valentine.
This night he meaneth, with a corded ladder,
To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window;
Myself in counsel, his competitor.
Now, presently, I'll give her father notice
Of their disguising, and pretended flight;
Who, all enraged, will banish Valentine;
For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter;
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross,
By some sly trick, blind Thurio's dull proceeding. [swift,
Love, lend me wings to make my purpose
As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift!

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Verona. A Room in Julia's House. Enter Julia and Lucetta.
Jul. Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist
me:
And, even in kind love, I do conjure thee,—
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts

Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,—
To lesson me; and tell me some good means
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.

Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long
Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps;
Much less shall she, that hath Love's wings
fly;

And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.
Luc. Better forbear till Proteus make his turn. [soul's foot]

Jul. O, know'st thou not, his looks are Pity the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the holy touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with water
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.

Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's fire,
But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Jul. The more thou damnest it up, it more it burns.

The current that with gentle murmur glides
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently do rage;

But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamell'd
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge [stone]
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean.

Then let me go, and hinder not my course;
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love.
And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil,
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevail
The loose encounters of lascivious men.
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may beseech some well-reputed page.

Luc. Why then, your ladyship must cut your hair. [string]
Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silks
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots;
To be fantastic may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I mend your breeches?
Jul. That fits as well as—"tell me, good
my lord,

What compass will you wear your farthingale?
Why, even what fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.

Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece, madam.
Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill
favour'd. [worth a pin]

Luc. A round hose, madam, now's not Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.
Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have

What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly.

But tell me, wench, how will the world repute
For undertaking so unstead a journey? [me]
I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.

Luc. If you think so, then stay at home,
Jul. Nay, that I will not. [and go not.
Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.
If Proteus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd when you are
gone:

I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.
Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear:
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances as infinite of love,
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.
Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect!

But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;
His heart as far from fraud, as heaven from earth. [come to him!]

Jul. Pray heaven, he prove so, when you Luc. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong.

To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Only deserve my love by loving him;
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose.
My goods, my lands, my reputation:
Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence.
Come; answer not, but to it presently:
I am impatient of my tarriance. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Milan. In the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Thurio, and Proteus.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, a while;
We have some secrets to confer about.

[Exit Thurio.
Now tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me? [discover]

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would
The law of friendship bids me to conceal:
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am,
My duty pricks me on to utter that, [me]
Which else no worldly good should draw from Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter;
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stolen away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.

Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather choose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would press you
down,

Being unprepared, to your timeless grave.
Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care;

Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Happily, when they have judg'd me fast asleep;
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her company, and my court;
But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,
And so, unworthily disgrace the man,
(A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd,)
I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.
And, that thou may'st perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a corded ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly,
That my discovery be not aimed at;
For, love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never
That I had any light from thee of this. [know Pro. Adieu, my lord; Sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.]

Enter Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger

That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.
Duke. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenor of them doth but signify
My health, and happy being at your court.
Duke. Nay, then no matter: stay with me
a while;

I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret.

'Tis not unknown to thee that I have sought To match my friend, Sir Thurio, to my daughter.
Val. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match [man]
Were rich and honourable; besides, the gentle-
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeching such a wife as your fair daughter.
Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me: she is peevish, sullen, forward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty;

Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her child-like
I now am full resolv'd to take a wife, [duty,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then, let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your grace have me to do in this?

Duke. There is a lady, sir, in Milan, here,
Whom I affect; but she is nice, and coy,
And nought esteems my aged eloquence:
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,
(For long ago I have forgot to court;
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd.)
How, and which way, I may bestow myself,
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words:

Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More than quick words, do move a woman's mind.

Duke. But she did scorn a present that I
Val. A woman sometimes scorns what best contents her:

Send her another; never give her o'er;
For scorn at first, makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to begot more love in you:
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone;
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say;
For, "Get you gone," she doth not mean,
"Away!"

Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels.
That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duke. But she I mean is promis'd by her friends

Unto a youthful gentleman of worth;
And kept severely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why then, I would resort to her by night.

Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock'd, and keys
That no man hath recourse to her by night.

Val. What lets, but one may enter at her window?

Duke. Her chamber is aloft, far from the
And built so shelving, that one cannot climb it Without apparent hazard of his life. [conceals

Val. Why then, a ladder quaintly made of
To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it. [blood,

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for Love is a child.

That longs for everything that he can come to.

Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you a ladder.

Duke. But hark thee; I will go to her
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?

Val. It will be light, my lord, that you go
Under a cloak as long as of any length.

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve.

Val. Ay, my good lord.

Duke. Then, let me see thy cloak
I'll get me one of such another length.

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the purpose, my lord.

Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear it?
I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.

[Puts open Valentine's cloak]
What letter is this same? What's here?

Silvia? And here an engine fit for my proceeding:
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once.

"My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly;
And slaves they are to me, that send to O, could their master come and go as lightly Himself would lodge, where senseless are lying!"

My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom
While I, their king, that thither them portune, [bless'd be
Do curse the grace that with such grace
Because myself do want my servants' service
I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their should be."

What's here?

"Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee."
'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose.

Why, Phaeton, (for thou art Merops' son),
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car,
And with thy daring folly burn the world?

Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine?
Go, base intruder! overweening slave! [thou Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates,
And think my patience, more than thy desert,
Is privilege for thy departure hence:

Thank me for this, more than for all thy favours

Which, all too much, I have bestow'd on thee.
But if thou linger in my territories
Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,
By Heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter or thyself.

Be gone! I will not hear thy vain excuse;
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed forth hence.

Val. And why not death, rather than living torment?

To die, is to be banish'd from myself;
And Silvia is myself; banish'd from her,
Is self from self; a deadly banishment!

What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?

Unless it be, to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.

Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in this nightingale;

Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon:

She in my easiness; and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence

Foster'd, flourish'd, cherish'd, kept alive,
I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom;

Tarry I here, I but attend on death;
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter Proteus and Launce.
Pro. Run, boy; run, run, and seek him out.

Launce. So-ho! so-ho!

Pro. What akest thou?

Launce. How we go to find; there's not a hair on's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine? Val. No.

Pro. Who then? his spirit?

Val. Nothing. [strike?]
Launce. Can nothing speak a master, shall I?

Pro. Who wouldst thou strike?

Launce. Nothing. Pro. Villain, forbear.

Launce. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you,— [time, a word,

Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear.—Friend Valen-

Val. My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good news.

So much of bad already hath possess'd them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, untunable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Hath she forsworn me! [Silvia!—

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn
What is your news? [me!—

Launce. Sir, there's a proclamation that you are banished.

Pro. That thou art banished. O, that's the news!

From hence, from Silvia, and from me, thy Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already,
And now excess of it will make me surfeit.

Doth Silvia know that I am banished?

Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom

(Which, unrevok'd, stands in effectual force)
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears:

Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;
With them, upon her knees, her humble self;
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,

As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,

Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;
But Valentine, if he be taken, must die.

Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of bidding there.

Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st

Have some malignant power upon my life:
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,
As ending anthem of my endless dole.

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,

And study help for that which thou lament'st.

Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;

Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.
Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts.

Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.

The time now serves not to expostulate;
Come, I'll convey thee through the city gate;
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.

As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou see'st my boy, [gate.

Bid him make haste, and meet me at the north

Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valentines.

Val. O my dear Silvia! Hapless Valentine!

[Exeunt Valentine and Proteus.

Launce. I am but a fool, look you; and yet
I have the wit to think, my master is a kind of a knave; but that's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now, that knows me to be in love; yet I am in love; but a team of horses shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman,
I will not tell myself; and yet 'tis a milk-maid; yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had gooseys; yet 'tis a maid; for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel,—which is much in a bare Christian. [Pulling out a paper.]
Here is the cat-log of her condition. [Reads.]
"Imprimis, She can fetch and carry." Why, a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore, is she better than a jade. "Item, She can milk;" look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now, Signior Launce! what news with your mastership? [at sea.

Launce. With my master's ship? why, it is Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word. What news, then, in your paper?

Launce. The blackest news that ever thou Speed. Why, man, how black! [hearest.

Launce. Why, as black as ink.

Speed. Let me read them.

Launce. Fie on thee, jolt-head! thou canst Speed. Thou liest; I can. [not read.

Launce. I will try then. Tell me this: who begot thee?

Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.

Launce. O, illiterate fooler! it was the son of thy grandmother. This proves, that thou canst not read.

Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.

Launce. There; and Saint Nicholas be thy

Speed. "Imprimis, She can milk." [Speed]

Launce. Ay, that she can.

Speed. "Item, She brews good ale."

Launce. And thereof comes the proverb,— Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.

Speed. "Item, She can sew." [so]

Launce. That's as much as to say, Can she Speed. "Item, She can knit."

Launce. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?

Speed. "Item, She can wash and scour."

Launce. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scoured.

Speed. "Item, She can spin."

Launce. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed. "Item, She hath many nameless virtues."

Launce. That's as much as to say, hastyard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.

Speed. "Here follow her vices."

Launce. Close at the heels of her virtues.

Speed. "Item, She is not to be kissed fasting, in respect of her breath."

Launce. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.

Speed. "Item, She hath a sweet mouth."

Launce. That makes amends for her sour breath.

Speed. "Item, She doth talk in her sleep."

Launce. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.

Speed. "Item, She is slow in words."

Launce. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with't, and place it for her chief virtue.

Speed. "Item, She is proud."

Launce. Out with that too; it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed. "Item, She hath no teeth."

Launce. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.

Speed. "Item, She is curst." [to bite]

Launce. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth.

Speed. "Item, She will often praise her liquor."

Launce. If her liquor be good, she shall: If she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed. "Item, She is too liberal."

Launce. Of her tongue she cannot, for that's writ down she is slow of; of her purse she shall not, for that I'll keep shut: now, of another thing she may, and that cannot help. Well, proceed.

Speed. "Item, She hath more hair than wits, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults."

Launce. Stop there; I'll have her: she wits mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that article. Rehearse that once more. [wit]

Speed. "Item, She hath more hair than wits."

Launce. More hair than wit,—it may be; I prove it: the cover of the salt hides the wits, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit, is more than the wit, the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed. "And more faults than hairs."

Launce. That's monstrous: O, that they were out!

Speed. "And more wealth than faults."

Launce. Why, that word makes the fault gracious. Well, I'll have her; and if it be match, as nothing is impossible,—

Speed. What then?

Launce. Why, then will I tell thee,—that I master stays for thee at the north gate.

Speed. For me!

Launce. For thee! ay; who art thou? I hath stayed for a better man than thee.

Speed. And must I go to him?

Launce. Thou must run to him, for thou hast stayed so long, that going will scarce serve to turn.

Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner I part of your love-letters. [Exit]

Launce. Now will he be swing'd for reading

my letter: an unmannerly slave, that thrust himself into secrets!—I'll after, I'll rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's

Palace. Enter Duke and Thurio.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you,

Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Thurio. Since his exile she hath deeply lov'd most,

Forsworn my company, and rail'd at me,

That I am desperate of obtaining her. [figure]

Duke. This weak impress of love is as

Trenched in ice, which with an hour's heat

Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form.

A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,

And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.—

Enter Proteus.

How now, Sir Proteus! Is your countryman

According to our proclamation, gone?

Pro. Gone, my good lord. [loud]

Duke. My daughter takes his going grie

Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grie

Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks no

Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee, [figure]

(For thou hast shown some sign of good desert)

Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your

grace

Let me not

Duke. T

effect

The match

Pro. I d

Duke. A

How she

Pro. Sh

here

Duke. A

What migh

The love o

Pro. Th

With label

Three thin

Duke. A

in h

Pro. Ay

Therefore,

By one wh

Duke. T

him

Pro. Ay

'Tis an ill

Especially

Duke. T

var

Your slan

Therefore

Being out

Pro. Y

do

By aught

She shall

But say,

It follow

Thurio. T

fro

Lost it all

You mu

Which n

As you i

Duke. T

tl

Because

You are

And can

Upon ti

Where

For she

And, R

3

Where

To hate

Pro.

But yo

You m

By wai

Should

Duke.

Pro.

You s

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

2 Out. What, were you banish'd thence?

Val. I was.

2 Out. For what offence? [Release:]

Val. For that which now torments me to I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent; But yet I slew him manfully, in fight, Without false vantage or base treachery. [Go.]

1 Out. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done But were you banish'd for so small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a

2 Out. Have you the tongue? [Doom.]

Val. My youthful travel therein made me Or else I often had been miserable. [Happy.]

3 Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,

This fellow were a king for our wild faction!

1 Out. We'll have him:—sirs, a word.

Speed. Master, be one of them;

It is an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, villain! [Take to:]

2 Out. Tell us this: have you anything to

Val. Nothing, but my fortune. [Gentlemen,

3 Out. Know then, that some of us are Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth

Thrust from the company of awful men:

Myself was from Verona banish'd

For practising to steal away a lady,

An heir, and near allied unto the duke,

2 Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,

Who, in my mood, I stabb'd unto the heart.

1 Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.

But to the purpose; for we cite our faults,

That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives;

And, partly, seeing you are beautify'd

With goodly shape; and by your own report

A linguist, and a man of such perfection,

As we do in our quality much want,—

2 Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd

man,

Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you.

Are you content to be our general?

To make a virtue of necessity,

And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

3 Out. What say'st thou? wilt thou be of our consort?

Say ay, and be the captain of us all:

We'll do thee homage, and be ruled by thee,

Love thee as our commander and our king.

1 Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou dost.

2 Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.

Val. I take your offer, and will live with you;

Provided that you do no outrages

On silly women, or poor passengers.

3 Out. No; we detest such vile, base practices.

Come, go with us; we'll bring thee to our cave,

And show thee all the treasure we have got;

Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Milan. The Court of the Palace. Enter Proteus.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valen-

And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.

Under the colour of commanding him,

I have access my own love to prefer:

But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,

To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.

When I protest true loyalty to her,

She twits me with my falsehood to my friend.

When to her beauty I commend my vows,

She bids me think how I have been forsworn.

In breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd

And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips,

The least whereof would quell a lover's hope.

Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,

The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.

But here comes Thurio: now must we to window,

And give some evening music to her ear.

Enter Thurio and Musicians.

Thu. How now, Sir Proteus! are you orebefore us?

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for, you know that love

Will creep in service where it cannot go.

Thu. Ay; but I hope, sir, that you do not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be heard

Thu. Whom? Silvia?

Pro. Ay, Silvia,—for your sake.

Thu. I thank you for your own.—No

gentlemen,

Let's tune, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter, at a distance, Host, and Julia in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest; methinks

you're allycholly: I pray you, why is it?

Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.

Host. Come, we'll have you merry; I bring you where you shall hear music, and the gentleman that you asked for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host. Ay, that you shall.

Jul. That will be music. [Music plays.]

Host. Hark, hark!

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay; but peace! let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she?

That all our swains commend her:

Holy, fair, and wise is she;

The heaven such grace did lend her,

That she might admired be.

Is she kind, as she is fair?

For beauty lives with kindness;

Love doth to her eyes repair,

To help him of his blindness;

And, being help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excellent;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling;
To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now! are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? the music likes you not.

Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me

Host. Why, my pretty youth? [Not.]

Jul. He plays false, father.

Host. How? out of tune on the strings?

Jul. Not so; but yet so false, that he grieves

my very heart-strings.

Host. You have a quick ear.

Jul. Ay; I would I were deaf! it makes me have a slow heart.

Host. I perceive you delight not in music.

Jul. Not a whit,—when it jars so.

Host. Hark, what fine change is in the music!

Jul. Ay, that change is the spite.

Host. You would have them always play

but one thing? [Thing.]

Jul. I would always have one play but one

But, Host, doth this Sir Proteus, that we talk

Often resort unto this gentlewoman? [On.]

Host. I will tell you what Launce, his man, told me,—he lov'd her out of all nick.

Jul. Where is Launce?

Host. Gone to seek his dog; which, tomorrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

Jul. Peace! stand aside: the company parts. [Plead.]

Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you; I will so

That you shall say my cunning drift excels.

Thu. Where meet we?

Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.

Thu. Farewell.

[Exeunt Thurio and Musicians.]

Enter Silvia above, at her window.

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen.

Who is that that spake? [Truth.]

Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's

You would quickly learn to know him by his

Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it. [Voice.]

Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your serv-

Sil. What is your will? [Ant.]

Pro. That I may compass yours. [This,—]

Sil. You have your wish: my will is even

That presently you bid me home to bed.

Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!

Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceited,

To be seduced by thy flattery,

That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?

Return, return, and make thy love amends.

For me,—by this pale queen of night I swear,

I am so far from granting thy request,

That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;

And by and by intend to chide myself,

Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a

But she is dead. [Lady:]

Jul. [Aside.] 'Twere false, if I should

For, I am sure, she is not buried. [Speak it:]

Sil. Say, that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend,

Survives, to whom thyself art witness

I am betroth'd; and art thou not wam'd?

To wrong him with thy importunity?

Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so, suppose, am I; for in his grave,

Assure thyself my love is buried. [Earth.]

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the Sil. Go to thy lady's grave, and call hers

thence;

Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.

Jul. [Aside.] He heard not that.

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,

Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,

The picture that is hanging in your chamber;

To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep;

For, since the substance of your perfect soul

Is else devoted, I am but a shadow,

And to your shadow will I make true love.

Jul. [Aside.] If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, deceive it.

Sil. I am very loth to be your idol, air;

But, since your falsehood shall become you

well

To worship shadows, and adore false shapes,

Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it:

And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have o'er night,

That wait for execution in the morn,

[Exeunt Proteus, and Silvia, above.]

Jul. Host, will you go?

Host. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.

Jul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house. Trust me, I think 'tis almost day. [Night.]

Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest

That e'er I watched, and the most heaviest.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter Eglamour.

Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia

Entreated me to call, and know her mind:

There's some great matter she'd employ me

Madam, madam! [In—]

Enter Silvia above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant, and your friend;

One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good-morning.

Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.

According to your ladyship's impose,

I am thus early come, to know what service

It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,—

Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,—

Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd.

Thou art not ignorant what dear good will I bear unto the banish'd Valentine;
Nor how my father would enforce me marry Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhor'd. Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say, No grief did ever come so near thy heart, As when thy lady and thy true love died, Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity. Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine, To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode; And, for the ways are dangerous to pass, I do desire thy worthy company, Upon whose faith and honour I repose. Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour, But think upon my grief,—a lady's grief,— And on the justice of my flying hence, To keep me from a most unholy match, Which heaven and fortune still reward with I do desire thee, even from a heart. [Plagues. As full of sorrow as the sea of sands, To bear me company, and go with me; If not, to hide what I have said to thee, That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances; Which since I know thee virtuously are plac'd, I give consent to go along with you; Reeking as little what betideth me, As much I wish all good befortune you, When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.
Egl. Where shall I meet you?
Sil. At friar Patrick's cell, Where I intend holy confession. [morrow, Egl. I will not fail your ladyship. Good Gentle lady.

Al. Good-morrow, kind Sir Eglamour. [Exeunt Eglamour, and Silvia, above.

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter Launce with his dog.

Launce. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely, Thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him as a present to mistress Silvia from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her trencher, and steals her capon's leg. O, 'tis a foul thing, when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hanged for't: sure as I live, he had suffer'd for't: you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs under the duke's table: he had not been there (bless the mark) a pleasing while, but all the chamber smelt him. "Out with the dog!" says one; "What cur is that?" says another; "Whip him out," says the duke. "Hang him up," says the duke. I, having acquainted with the smell before, knew Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips dogs: "Friend," quoth I, "you mean to whip the dog?" "Ay, marry, do I," quoth he. "You do him the more wrong," quoth I; "I did the thing you wot of." He makes more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for him? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffer'd for't: thou thinkest not of this. —Nay, I remember the trick you served when I took my leave of Madam Silvia: not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I. When didst thou see me leave up my leg, make water against a gentleman's face, gale? Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee, And will employ thee in some service presently.
Jul. In what you please: I will do what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt. —[To Launce. How now, you whorson peasant! Where have you been these two days loitering?
Launce. Marry, sir, I carried mistress Silvia's dog you bade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little Jew?
Launce. Marry, she says, your dog was cur; and tells you, curish thanks is enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?
Launce. No, indeed, did she not: here I brought him back again.

Pro. What! didst thou offer her this dog?
Launce. Ay, sir: the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman boys in the market place; and then I offered her mine own, which is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get thee hence, and find my Or so'er return again into my sight. [Exit Launce. Away, I say! Stay'st thou to vex me here? A slave that still an end turns me to shame.

[Exit Launce. Sebastian, I have entertained thee, Partly, that I have need of such a youth, That can with some discretion do my business; For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish lout; But chiefly for thy face and thy behaviour, Which (if my augury deceive me not) Witness good bringing up, fortune, and true. Therefore, know thou, for this I entertain thee. Go presently, and take this ring with thee. Deliver it to Madam Silvia: She lov'd me well deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems, you lov'd not her, to leave her dead, belike?

Pro. Not so: I think, she liv'd.
Jul. Alas!

Pro. Why dost thou cry, alas!

Jul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?

Jul. Because, methinks, that she lov'd you.

As you do love your lady Silvia.

She dreams on him, that has forgot her love;

You dote on her, that cares not for your love.

This pity, love should be so contrary;

And thinking on it makes me cry, alas!

Pro. Well, give her that ring; and there- withal.

This letter:—that's her chamber.—Till my claim the promise for her heavenly picture.

Your message done, his home unto my chamber.

Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary.

[Exit. [Julia. How many women would do such a message!

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs.

Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him,

That with his very heart despoileth me?

Because he loves her, he despoileth me;

Because I love him, I must pity him.

This ring I gave him when he parted from me,

To bind him to remember my good will;

And now am I (unhappy messenger!) To plead for that which I would not obtain;

To carry that which I would have refus'd;

To praise his faith which I would have dis- praise'd.

I am my master's true confirmed love,

But cannot be true servant to my master,

Unless I prove false traitor to myself.

Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly,

As heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

Enter Silvia, attended.

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean.

To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.

What would you with her, if that I be she?

Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my master, Sir Proteus, madam.

Sil. O,—he sends you for a picture?

Jul. Ay, madam.

Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there,—

[A picture brought. To give your master this: tell him from me,

One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,

Would better fit his chamber, than this shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.—

Pardon me, madam; I have unadvis'd

Deliver'd you a paper that I should not:

This is the letter to your ladyship.

Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.

Jul. It may not be; good madam, pardon

Sil. There, hold.

I will not look upon your master's lines;

I know, they are stuff'd with protestations, And full of new-found oaths, which he will An easily as I do tear his paper.

Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.

Sil. The more shame for him that he sends

For, I have heard him say, a thousand times,

His Julia gave it him at his departure.

Though his false finger have profan'd the ring,

Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

Jul. She thanks you.

Sil. What say'st thou?

Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender

Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her

Sil. Dost thou know her?

Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself.

To think upon her woes, I do protest,

That I have wept a hundred several times.

Sil. Belike, she thinks, that Proteus hath forsook her.

Jul. I think she doth; and that's her cause of sorrow.

Sil. Is she not passing fair?

Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than

When she did think my master lov'd her well,

She, in my judgment, was as fair as you;

But since she did neglect her looking-glass,

And threw her sun-expelling mask away,

The air hath starv'd the roses in her cheeks,

And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her face,

That now she is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Jul. About my stature: for, at Pentecost,

When all our pigeons of delight were play'd,

Our youth got me to play the woman's part,

And I was trimm'd in Madam Julia's gown;

Which served me as fit, by all men's judgments,

As if the garment had been made for me:

Therefore, I know she is about my height.

And at that time I made her weep a good;

For I did play a lamentable part!

Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passioning

For Theseus' perjury, and unjust flight;

Which I so lively acted with my tears,

That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,

Wept bitterly; and would I might be dead,

If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!

Sil. She is beholder to thee, gentle youth.—

Alas, poor lady! desolate and left!

I weep myself, to think upon thy words.

Here, youth; there is my purse: I give thee

this [To Silvia. For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou farewell.

Jul. And she shall thank you for't, if e'er

you know her.— [Exit Silvia with Attendants.

A virtuous gentlewoman, mild and beautiful.

I hope my master's suit will be but cold,

Since she respects my mistress' love so much.

Alas, how love can trifle with itself!

Here in her picture: let me see; I think,

If I had such a tire, this face of mine

Were full as lovely as is this of hers;

And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with myself too much.
Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.
Her eyes are gray as glass; and so are mine:
Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.
What should it be, that he respects in her,
But I can make respect in myself,
If this fond love were not a blinded god?
Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up;
For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form!
Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd;
And, were there sense in his idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,
That us'd me so; or else, by Jove I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Milan. An Abbey.

Enter Eglamour.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky;
And now it is about the very hour,
That Silvia at Friar Patrick's cell should meet
She will not fail: for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time;
So much they spur their expedition.
See, where she comes!—[Enter Silvia.] Lady,
a happy evening!

Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour,
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall:
I fear I am attended by some spies. [off]
Egl. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues
If we recover that, we are sure enough.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Milan. The Duke's Palace.

Enter Thurio, Proteus, and Julia.

Thur. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?

Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thur. What, that my leg is too long?

Pro. No; that it is too little. [rounder.]

Thur. I'll wear a boot to make it somewhat Jul. [Aside.] But love will not be spur'd to what it loathes.

Thur. What says she to my face?

Pro. She says it is a fair one.

Thur. Nay then, the wanton lies; my face is black.

Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying
Black men are pearls in beautiful ladies' eyes.

Jul. [Aside.] 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;

For I had rather wink than look on them.

Thur. How likes she my discourse?

Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.

Thur. But well, when I discourse of love.
Jul. [Aside.] But better, indeed, when hold your peace.

Thur. What says she to my valour?

Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. [Aside.] She needs not, when knows it cowardice.

Thur. What says she to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deriv'd.

Jul. [Aside.] True; from a gentleman.

Thur. Considers she my possessions?

Pro. O, ay; and pities them.

Thur. Wherefore?

Jul. [Aside.] That such an ass should

Pro. That they are out by lease.

Jul. Here comes the duke.

Enter Duke.

Duke. How now, Sir Proteus! how Thurio!

Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late?

Pro. Not I. Pro. Nor I.

Duke. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Neither.

Duke. Why, then,
She's fled unto that peasant Valentine;
And Eglamour is in her company.

'Tis true; for Friar Laurence met them
As he in penance wander'd through the forest;
Him he knew well; and guess'd that it was
But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it:
Besides, she did not intend confession
At Patrick's cell this even; and there she These likelihoods confirm her flight
hence:

Therefore, I pray you, stand not to dispute
But mount you presently; and meet with Upon the rising of the mountain-foot,
That leads towards Mantua, whither they Despatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me.

Thur. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl:
That flies her fortune when it follows her.
I'll after; more to be reveng'd on Eglamour
Than for the love of reckless Silvia.

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia
love
Than hate of Eglamour, that goes with her

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross
love,
Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love.

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

[Exit.]

at Moyses, and Valerius, follow him.

So thou with her to the west end of the wood;
There is our captain. We'll follow him that's
The thickest is beset; he cannot scape. [Exit]
Excellent all except the First Outlaw and Silvia.

1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave.

2 Out. Not; he bears an honourable mind, and will not use a woman lawlessly.

Sil. O Valentine! this I endure for thee.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Valentine.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man!
These shadowy, desert, unfrequented woods,
better brook than flourishing peopled towns.

Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
and to the nightingale's complaining notes
tune my distressed, and record my woes.

Thou, that dost inhabit in my breast,
leave not the mansion so long tenantless,
lest, growing ruinous, the building fall,
and leave no memory of what it was!

Repair me with thy presence, Silvia!
Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!

[Noise heard.]

What halloing, and what stir, is this to-day?
These are my mates, that make their wills
their law,

have some unhappy passenger in chase.
They love me well; yet I have much to do to keep them from uncivil outrages.— Withdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here?

[Retires.]

Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you, [doth,]
Though you respect not aught your servant to hazard life, and rescue you from him that would have forc'd your honour and your
love:

Touchsafe me, for my mood, but one fair look;
smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
and less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.

Val. [Aside.] How like a dream is this I see and hear!

Pro. O, miserable, unhappy that I am!
Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came;

but by my coming I have made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.

Jul. [Aside.] And me, when he approacheth to your presence.

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion, would have been a breakfast to the beast,
rather than have false Proteus rescue me.

O heaven be judge, how I love Valentine, whose life's as tender to me as my soul;
and full as much (for more there cannot be)
do detest false perjur'd Proteus!

Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,

Would I not undergo for one calm look!
O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love, where they're be-lov'd!

Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's lov'd.

Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love.
For whose dear sake thou didst then read thy faith

Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths Descended into perjury, to love me.

Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou'dst
two, [none]

And that's far worse than none: better have
Than plural faith, which is too much by one.
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!

Pro. In love
Who respects friend?

Sil. All men but Proteus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words

Can no way change you to a milder form,
I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end,
And love you 'gainst the nature of love,—force

Sil. O heaven! [you]
Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.

Val. [Coming forward.] Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch;

Thou friend of an ill-faithful!

Pro. Valentine! [faith or love;
Val. Thou common friend, that's without (For such is a friend now) treacherous man!

Thou hast beguild my hopes: nought but mine eye

Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say,
I have one friend alive: thou wouldst dis-prove me. [hand]

Who should be trusted, when one's own right is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake.

The private wound is deepest. O time most curst! [worst]

'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the Pro. My shame and guilt confound me.—
Forgive me, Valentine. If hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender't here; I do as truly suffer,
As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then, I am paid;
And once again I do receive thee honest.—
Who by repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd.

By penitence th' Eternal's wrath appears'd:—
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.

Jul. O me unhappy! [Faints.]

Pro. Look to the boy.

Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now!
what's the matter? look up; speak.

Jul. O good sir, my master charg'd me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia; which, out of my neglect, was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?

Jul. Here 'tis; this is it. [Gives a ring.]

Pro. How! let me see!—why, this is the ring I gave to Julia.

Jul. O, cry you mercy, sir; I have mistook: This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

[Shows another ring.]

Pro. But how cam'st thou by this ring? At my depart I gave this unto Julia.

Jul. And Julia herself did give it me; And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How! Julia!

Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy And entertain'd them deeply in her heart: How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root! O Proteus! let this habit make thee blush: Be thou asham'd, that I have took upon me Such an immodest raiment,—if shame live In a disguise of love.

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds, Women to change their shapes, than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds! 'tis true, O heaven! were man

But constant, he were perfect: that one error Fills him with faults; makes him run through all sins:

Inconstancy falls off, ere it begins.

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy

More fresh in Julia's, with a constant eye!

Val. Come, come, a hand from either.

Let me be blest to make this happy close:

"Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Jul. And I mine.

Enter Outlaws, with Duke and Thurio.

Out. A prize! a prize! a prize! [the duke.—

Val. Forbear, forbear, I say! it is my lord Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd, Banished Valentine. Duke. Sir Valentine!

Thur. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.

Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death.

Come not within the measure of my wrath: Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,

Milano shall not hold thee. Here she stands:

Take but possession of her with a touch;—

I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.

Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her: I hold him but a fool, that will endanger

His body for a girl that loves him not: I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and base thou,

To make such means for her as thou hast! And leave her on such slight conditions.

Now, by the honour of my ancestry, I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,

And think thee worthy of an empress' love. Know then, I here forget all former griefs:

Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again. Plead a new state in thy unrivall'd merit.

To which I thus subscribe.—Sir Valentine, Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv'd;

Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserved. Val. I thank your grace; the gift hath me happy.

I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake, To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke. I grant it, for thine own, what thou wilt.

Val. These banish'd men, that I have withal,

Are men endu'd with worthy qualities: Forgive them what they have committed,

And let them be recall'd from their exile! They are reformed, civil, full of good,

And fit for great employment, worthy love. Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon and thee: Dispose of them, as thou know'st their desert.

Come; let us go: we will include all jars With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnities.

Val. And as we walk along, I dare be With our discourse to make your grace smile.

What think you of this page, my lord? Duke. I think the boy hath grace in he blushes.

Val. I warrant you, my lord,—more than boy.

Duke. What mean you by that saying? Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we along.

That you will wonder what hath fortun'd Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance, but to

The story of your loves discovered: That done, our day of marriage shall be

One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.

Mr John Falstaff.

Shallow, a Country Justice,

Slender, cousin to Shallow.

William Page, a Boy, son to Page.

Sir Hugh Evans, a Welsh Parson.

Dr. Caius, a French Physician.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Two Gentlemen dwelling at Windsor.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

Host of the Garter Inn.

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Bardolph, Pistol, Nym, followers of Falstaff.

Robin, page to Falstaff.

Simple, servant to Slender.

Rugby, servant to Dr. Caius.

Mistress Ford.

Mistress Page.

Anne Page, her daughter, in love with Fenton.

Mistress Quickly, servant to Dr. Caius.

Servants to Page, Ford, &c.

SCENE.—Windsor; and the neighbourhood.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Windsor. Before Page's House.

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, and

Sir Hugh Evans.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it: if he were twenty Sir John Falstuffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, Esquire.

Slen. In the county of Gloster, justice of peace and coroner.

Shal. Ay, cousin Slender, and cust-alorum.

Slen. Ay, and ratolorum too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself armigero,—in any bill, warrant, quittance or obligation, armigero.

Shal. Ay, that I do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slen. All his successors, gone before him, have don't; and all his ancestors that come after him, may; they may give the dozen white laces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Eva. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies—love.

Shal. The lucc is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slen. I may quarter, coz?

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Eva. It is marring, indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Pro. Yes, py'r lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but that is all one. If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparage-ments unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you.

Shal. The council shall hear it: it is a riot.

Eva. It is not meet the council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot: the council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Eva. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my brain, which, peradventure, prings good discretions with it: there is Anne Page, which is daughter to master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small, like a woman.

Eva. It is that fery person for all the 'orld, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, and silver, is her grandsire, upon his death's-bed, (Got deliver to a joyful resurrections!) give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old. It were a goot motion, if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between master Abraham and Mrs. Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Eva. Ay, and her father is make her a petter

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has good gifts.

Eva. Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is good gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest master Page, is Falstaff there?

Eva. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar, as I do despise one that is false; or as I despise one that is not true. The knight, Sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door for master Page. [Knocks.] What, ho! Got pleas your house here!

Page. [Within.] Who's there?
Eva. Here is Got's pleasing, and your friend, and justice Shallow; and here young master Slender, that peradventures, shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Enter Page.

Page. I am glad to see your worships well. I thank you for my venison, master Shallow.
Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you; much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill kill'd.—How doth good mistress Page?—and I thank you always with my heart, la; with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.
Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.
Page. I am glad to see you, good master Slender.

Slender. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say, he was outrun on Cotswall.

Page. It could not be judged, sir.
Slender. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not:—'tis your fault, 'tis your fault:—'Tis a good dog.

Page. A cur, sir.
Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; can there be more said? he is good, and fair.

—Is Sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wronged me, master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed; is not that so, master Page? He hath wronged me; indeed, he hath:—at a word, he hath:—believe me:—Robert Shallow, Esquire, saith, he is wronged.

Page. Here comes Sir John.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol.

Fal. Now, master Shallow, —you'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kissed your keeper's daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered.

Fal. I will answer it straight:—I have done all this.—That is now answered.

Shal. The council shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you, if it were known in counsel: you'll be laughed at.

Eva. Præca verba, Sir John; good words.

Fal. Good words! good cabbage.—Slender, I broke your head; what matter have you against me?

Slender. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your coney-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol: they carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

Bard. You Banbury cheese!

Slender. Ay, it is no matter.

Pistol. How now, Mephostophilus!

Slender. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say! pauca, pauca; that's my humour.

Slender. Where's Simple, my man?—tell, cousin?

Eva. Peace, I pray you. Now let us stand; there is three umpires in this:—as I understand; that is—master Page, master Page; and there is myself, myself; and the three party is, lastly, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three, to hear it, and end between them.

Eva. Very good: I will make a prior of my note-book; and we will afterwards upon the cause, with as great discreteness.

Fal. Pistol, —

Pistol. He hears with ears.

Eva. The devil and his tam! what pluck this, "He hears with ears!" Why, affections.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick master Slender's purse?

Slender. Ay, by these gloves, did he; would I might never come in mine own chamber again else,—of seven groats in sixpences, and two Edward shovels-board cost me two shilling and two pence apiece.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Eva. No; it is false, if it is a pick-pocket.

Pistol. Ha, thou mountain foreigner! John and master mine.

I combat challenge of this latten bilboe: Word of denial in thy labras here;

Word of denial: froth and scum, thou lie!

Slender. By these gloves, then, 'twas he.

Nym. Be advised, sir, and pass humours. I will say, "marry trap," with if you run the nuthook's humour on me: is the very note of it.

Slender. By this hat, then, he in the re had it; for though I cannot remember what when you made me drunk, yet I am altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say gentleman had drunk himself out of his sentences.

Eva. It is his "five senses;" he, who ignorance is!

Bard. And being sap, sir, was, as the cashier'd; and so conclusions pass'd careles.

Slender. Ay, you spake in Latin then too: 'tis no matter: I'll ne'er be drunk with live again, but in honest, civil, godly company for this triek; if I be drunk, I'll be with those that have the fear of God, and with drunken knaves.

Eva. So Got 'udge me, that is a virtue.

Fal. You hear all these matters of gentlemen; you hear it.

Enter Anna Page, with Wine; Mistress Ford and Mistress Page.

Page. Nay, daughter, carry the wine in; we'll drink within.

Slender. O heaven! this is mistress Anne Page.

Page. How now, mistress Ford?

Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met; by your leave, good mistress.

Kissing her.

Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome.—We have a hot venison pasty to dinner; I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

Account all but Shallow, Slender, and Evans.

Page. I had rather than forty shillings, I had my book of Songs and Sonnets here.

Enter Simple.

Page. Now, Simple! Where have you been? must wait on myself, must I? You have not a book of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not send it to Alice Shortcake upon Allhallowmas eve, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come, come, come, come; we stay for you. A word with you, coz; marry, this, coz: there is, as 'twere a tender, a kind of under, made after off by Sir Hugh here; do you understand me?

Slender. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable: it be so, I shall do that that is the reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slender. So I do, sir.

Shal. Give ear to his motions, master Slender: I will description the matter to you, you be capacity of it.

Slender. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says: I pray you pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

Eva. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Eva. Marry, is it; the very point of it; to Mistress Anne Page.

Slender. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the woman? Let command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold, that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

Slender. I hope, sir, I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

Eva. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies, you must speak possitableness, if you can carry her our desires towards her.

Shal. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slender. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz: what I do, is to pleasure you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slender. I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt; but if you say, "Marry her," I will marry her: that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

Eva. It is a very discretion answer; save, the fault is in the word "dissolutely;" the word is, according to our meaning, "resolutely."—His meaning is good.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slender. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la.

Shal. Here comes fair mistress Anne.—[Re-enter Anna Page.] Would I were young for your sake, mistress Anne.

Anna. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worships' company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair mistress Anne.

Eva. Od's pleased will! I will not be absence at the grace.

[Account Shallow and Sir H. Evans.]

Anna. Will't please your worship to come in, sir?

Slender. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anna. The dinner attends you, sir.

Slender. I am not a-hungry, I thank you forsooth.—Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon my cousin Shallow. [Exit Simple.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholden to his friend for a man.—I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead; but what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anna. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit, till you come.

Slender. Faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anna. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slender. I had rather walk here, I thank you. I bruised my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence,—three venises for a dish of stewed prunes;—and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since.—Why do your dogs bark so? I be there bears 't the town!

Anna. I think there are, sir, I heard them talked of.

Slender. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England.—You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anna. Ay, indeed, sir.

Slender. That's meat and drink to me, now: I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the chain; but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shriek'd at it, that it pass'd: but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter Page.

Page. Come, gentle master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slender. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pye, you shall not choose, sir: come, come.

Slender. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Page. Come on, sir.

Slender. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Slender. Truly, I will not go first; truly, in; I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, sir.

Slender. I'll rather be unmannerly, than troublesome. You do yourself wrong, indeed, in.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Evans. Go your ways, and ask of Dr. Caius' house, which is the way: and there dwells one mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Simple. Well, sir.

Evans. Nay, it is better yet.—Give her this letter; for it is a woman that altogether acquaintance with mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to mistress Anne Page. I pray you, be gone. I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come.

[Exit Evans.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, and Robin.

Falstaff. Mine host of the Garter,—

Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Falstaff. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.

Falstaff. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Caesar, Keisar, and Pheazar. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Falstaff. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow.—Let me see thee froth and lime: I am at a word; follow.

Falstaff. Bardolph, follow him. A tapster is a good trade: an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered serving-man, a fresh tapster. Go; adieu.

Bardolph. It is a life that I have desired: I will.

Pistol. O base Hungarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. He was gotten in drink: is not the humour concealed?

Falstaff. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-box: his thefts were too open; his fleching was like an unskillful singer,—he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is to steal like my pinnace to these golden shores.—

[Exit Robin.]

Pistol. "Convey," the wise it call.

Falstaff. A fico for the phrase!

Falstaff. Well, sir, I am almost out at Pistol. Why, then, let kibes ensue.

Falstaff. There is no remedy; I must catch; I must shift.

Pistol. Young ravens must have food.

Falstaff. Which of you know Ford of this Pistol. I ken this wight: he is of such good.

Falstaff. My honest lads, I will tell you am about.

Pistol. Two yards, and more.

Falstaff. No quips now, Pistol: indeed,

in the waist two yards about; but I am about no waste; I am about thrift.

Pistol. I do mean to make love to Ford's wife:

entertainment in her; she discourses

carves, she gives the leer of invitation;

construes the notion of her familiar style

the hardest voice of her behaviour;

Englished rightly, is, "I am Sir John staff's."

Pistol. He hath studied her well, and lured her well,—out of honesty into

Nym. The anchor is deep: will that I pass!

Falstaff. Now, the report goes, she has rule of her husband's purse; he hath a of angels.

Pistol. As many devils entertain; and her, boy," say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: it

me the angels.

Falstaff. I have writ me here a letter to and here another to Page's wife, who gave me good eyes too, examined my with most judicious cell-lids: something beam of her view gilded my foot, some

my portly belly.

Pistol. Then did the sun on dunghill

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Falstaff. O, she did so course o'er my

with such a greedy intention, that the

of her eye did seem to scorch me up

burning-glass! Here's another letter to

she bears the purse too; she is a

Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be to them both, and they shall be excheq-

me; they shall be my East and West

and I will trade to them both. Go thou this letter to mistress Page; and

this to mistress Ford. We will thrive,

will thrive.

Pistol. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy

And by my side wear steel! then, I

take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour:

take the humour-letter. I will keep

behaviour of reputation.

Falstaff. [To Robin.] Hold, sirrah, bear

these letters tightly:

like my pinnace to these golden shores.—

[Exit Robin.]

hence! avaunt! vanish like hailstones, go;

odge, plod away o' the hoof; seek shelter,

pack!

detail will learn the humour of this age,

much thrift, you rogues; myself, and skirled

page.

Pistol. Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd and fullum holds,

ad high and low beguile the rich and poor.

ster I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack,

oe Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations in my head, which humours of revenge.

Pistol. Will thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin, and her stars!

Pistol. With wit, or steel?

Nym. With both the humours, I:

will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pistol. And I to Ford shall eke unfold,

How Juliett, varlet vile,

His dove will prove, his gold will hold,

And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool; I will cessa Page to deal with poison; I will nessa him with yellowness, for the revolt of len is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pistol. Thou art the Mars of malcontent: I cond thee; troop on.

[Exit Nym.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Dr. Caius's House.

Enter Mistress Quickly and Simple.

Quick. What, John Rugby! [Enter Rugby.]

pay thee, go to the easement, and see if you in see my master, master Doctor Caius,

ming: if he do, I'll faith, and find anybody

the house, here will be an old abusing of ed's patience, and the king's English.

Rug. I'll go watch.

Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for't ton at night, in faith, at the latter end of a ka-coal fire. [Exit Rugby.]

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Falstaff. O, she did so course o'er my

with such a greedy intention, that the

of her eye did seem to scorch me up

burning-glass! Here's another letter to

she bears the purse too; she is a

Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be

to them both, and they shall be excheq-

me; they shall be my East and West

and I will trade to them both. Go

thou this letter to mistress Page; and

this to mistress Ford. We will thrive,

will thrive.

Pistol. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy

And by my side wear steel! then, I

take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour:

take the humour-letter. I will keep

behaviour of reputation.

Falstaff. [To Robin.] Hold, sirrah, bear

these letters tightly:

ber him; does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gait?

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell master parson Evans, I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Re-enter Rugby.

Rug. Out, alas, here comes my master.

Quick. We shall all be silent.—Run in here, good young man; go into this closet: he will not stay long. [Shuts Simple in the closet.]

What, John Rugby! John, what John, I say!

Go, John, go inquire for my master; I doubt,

he be not well, that he comes not home.

[Exit Rugby.] [Sings.] "And down, down,

adown-a," &c.

Enter Doctor Caius.

Caius. Vat is you sing? I do not like dose toys. Pray you, go and fetch me in my closet

un better vat; a box, a green-a box: do intend vat I speak? a green-a box.

Quick. Ay, forsooth; I'll fetch it you.

[Aside.] I am glad he went not in himself:

if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad.

Caius. Fe, fe, fe, fe, ma foi, il fait fort chard. Je m'en vais a la cour,—la grande

Quick. Is it this, sir?

Caius. Oui; mettez le au mon pochet;

donnez-le, quickly.—Vat is dat knave Rugby?

Quick. What, John Rugby? John!

Re-enter Rugby.

Rug. Here, sir.

Caius. You are John Rugby, and you are

Jack Rugby: come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rug. 'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

Caius. By my trot, I tarry too long.—Od's me! Qu'ai-je oublié? dere is some simples in my closet, dat I vill not for de varld I shall leave behind.

Quick. [Aside.] Ah me! he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Caius. O diable! diable! vat is in my closet!—Villainy! larron! [Pulling Simple out.] Rugby, my rapier!

Quick. Good master, be content.

Caius. Verfore shall I be content-a?

Quick. The young man is an honest man.

Caius. Vat shall de honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quick. I beseech you, be not so phlegmatic.

Hear the truth of it: he came of an errand to me from parson Hugh.

Caius. Veil.

Sim. Ay, forsooth; to desire her to—

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

Caius. Peace-a your tongue!—Speak-a your

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to mistress

Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, la; but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Caius. Sir Hugh send-a you!—Rugby, bailles me some paper.—Tarry you a little-a while.

Quick. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been thoroughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy.—But, notwithstanding, man, I'll do your master what good I can; and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself.

Sir. 'Tis a great charge to come under one body's hand.

Quick. Are you avis'd o' that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late;—but notwithstanding,—to tell you in your ear,—I would have no words of it,—my master himself is in love with mistress Anne Page; but notwithstanding that, I know Anne's mind; that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You Jack-nape, give-a dis letter to Sir Hugh; by gar, it is a challenge: I vill cut his trout in de park; and I vill teach a scurvy Jack-a-nape priest to muddle or make,—You may be gone; it is not good you tarry here:—by gar, I vill cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to throw at his dog.

[Exit Simple.]

Quick. Alas! he speaks but for his friend.
Caius. It is no matter-a for dat:—do not you tell-a me, dat I shall have Anne Page for myself!—By gar, I vill kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine host of de Jarretiere to measure our weapon.—By gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well. We must give folks leave to prate: what, the good-fer.

Caius. Rugby, come to the court vit me.—By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door.—Follow my heels, Rugby.

Quick. You shall have An fool's-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do; nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there? ho!
Quick. Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

Enter Fenton.

Fent. How now, good woman! how dost thou?

Quick. The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fent. What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, think you? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quick. Troth, sir, all is in his hands; but notwithstanding, master Fenton, sworn on a book, she loves you.—By your worship a wart above your eye!

Fent. Yes, marry have I; what of it?
Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale. Faith, it is such another Nan;—but, I an honest maid as ever broke bread with me to show to the contrary.
Fent. Faith, but you do, in my mind.
Quick. Well, I do then; yet, I say, would show you to the contrary. O, mistress, give me some counsel.

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day. There's money for thee; let me have the money in my behalf: if thou seest her husband, commend me.

Quick. Will I? Faith, that we will honour! will tell your worship more of the way next time we have confidence; and of woocers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste.
Quick. Farewell to your worship.
Fent. Truly, an honest gentleman Anne loves him not; for I know his mind as well as another does.—Out with what have I forgot?

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before Page's House.

Enter Mistress Page, with a Letter.

Mrs. Page. What I have I 'scaped letters in the holyday time of my beauty am I now a subject for them? Let me see.

"Ask me no reason why I love you, though love use reason for his precious; admits him not for his counsellor, not young, no more am I; go to them, sympathy: you are merry, so am I; then, there's more sympathy: you love and so do I; would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, mistress Page, the least, if the love of a soldier can suffer that I love thee. I will not say, Pity me, not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, Love By me,

*Thine own true knight,
By day or night,
Or any kind of light,
With all his might*

For thee to fight.

John Falstaff! What a Herod of Jewry is this!—O wicked world!—one that is well-nigh worth pieces with age, to show himself a gallant! What an unweighed behaviour this Flemish drunkard picked—with the name—out of my conversation, that he in this manner assay me! Why, he hath been thrice in my company!—What should I say to him?—I was then frugal of my case 1.

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

51

heaven forgive me!—Why, I'll exhibit a bill to the parliament for the putting down of men. How shall I be revenged on him? for re-venge I will be, as sure as his guls are made puddings.

Enter Mistress Ford.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was long to your house.

Mrs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that: I am to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page. Faith, but you do, in my mind.

Mrs. Ford. Well, I do then; yet, I say, would show you to the contrary. O, mistress, give me some counsel.

Mrs. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mrs. Ford. O woman! if it were not for trifling respect, I could come to such honour!

Mrs. Page. Hang the tride, woman! take honour. What is it?—dispense with trifles; what is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page. What!—thou heat.—Sir Alice wouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn daylight;—here, and, read;—perceive how I might be knighted.

I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's ring; and yet he would not swear, praised women's modesty, and gave such orderly and all-belated reproof to all uncomeliness.

at I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words; but they have no more adhere and keep place together than a hundredth psalm to the tune of "Green leaves."

What tempest, I trow, threw this hale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to enter him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.—Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's a twin brother of thy letter: but let thine in-ter first; for, I protest, mine never shall.

I warrant, he hath a thousand of these letters, writ in blank space for different names,—sure, sure,—and these are of the second edition.

He will print them, out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would print us two.

I had rather be a giantess, and under Mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles, ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Boarding, call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I: if he come under my hatches, I'll never let him again. Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine-baited delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page. Why, look, where he comes; and my good man too: he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page. Let's consult together against this greasy knight. Come hither.

[They retire.]

Enter Ford, Pistol, Page, and Nym.

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pistol. Hope is a curtail dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pistol. He woe both high and low, both rich and poor.

Both young and old, one with another, Ford: He loves the gally-mawry; Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife!

Pistol. With liver burning hot; prevent, or go like Sir Acteon he, with Ringwood at thy O, odious is the name!

Ford. What name, sir?

Pistol. The horn, I say. Farewell: Take heed; have open eye: for thieves do foot by night!

[Birds do sing.—]
Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo-Away, sir corporal Nym!

Ford. Believe it, Page; he speaks sense.

Ford. [Aside.] I will be patient: I will find out this.

Nym. [To Page.] And this is true; I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours: I should have borne the humoured letter to her, but I have a sword, and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife; there's the short and the long. My name is corporal Nym; I speak, and I avouch 'tis true: my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife.—Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese; and there's the humour of it. Adieu.

Page. [Aside.] "The humour of it," quoth 'b! here's a fellow frights humour out of his Ford. I will seek out Falstaff.

[Exit.]

Page. I never heard such a drawling, affecting rogar.
Ford. If I do find it;—well.
Page. I will not believe such a Catinian, through the priest o' the town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow:—well.
Page. How now, Meg! [Hark you.]
Mrs. Page. Whither go you, George?—
Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank! why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy! I am not melancholy.—Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford. Faith, then hast some crochets in thy head now,—Will you go, mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Have with you.—You'll come to dinner, George?—[Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Look, who comes yonder! she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

Mrs. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her: she'll fit it.

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne!
Quick. Ay, forsooth; and, I pray, how does good mistress Anne?

Mrs. Page. Go in with us, and see; we have an hour's talk with you. [Exit Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.]

Page. How now, master Ford!
Ford. You heard what this knave told me, did you not?

Page. Yes; and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?

Page. Hang 'em, slaves! I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men; very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry, were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that.—Does he lie at the Garter?

Page. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife; but I would be loth to turn them together. A man may be too confident: I would have nothing lie on my head: I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Look, where my ranting host of the Garter comes. There is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily. [Enter Host.] How now, mine host!

Host. How now, bully-rogue! thou'rt a gentleman.—Cavalero-justice, I say!

Enter Shallow.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and twenty, good master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavalero-justice! bully-rogue.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, and, hang no more about me; I am no gibbet, the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host of the Garter, your manner of Pickhatch, go.—You'll not

Host. What sayest thou, my bully-rogue?—You stand [They go.] your honour!—Why, thou unconfinable

Shal. [To Page.] Will you go with mine host?—I, I, I myself hold it! My merry host hath had the use of mine honour precise. I, I, I myself

ing of their weapons; and, I think, sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the pointed them contrary places; for, bold hand, and hiding mine honour in my

I hear the parson is no jester. Hark, I easily, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to you what our sport shall be. [They go.]—And yet you, rogue, will ensconce your

Host. Hast thou no suit against my son, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-

my guest-cavalier?

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give the shelter of your honour! You will potter of burnt sack to give me rest? do it, you!

him, and tell him my name is Brook!

Host. My hand, bully: thou shalt not do it, you!

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give the shelter of your honour! You will shall be Brook. It is a merry knight.

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Page. I have heard, the Frenchman's good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir! I could have told you quick. I'll be sworn; as my mother was,

In these times you stand on distance first hour I was born.

passes, stoicades, and I know not what I do believe the swearer. What with is the heart, master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a

I have seen the time, with my long sword or two?

would have made you four tall fellows! Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we quick. There is one mistress Ford, sir:—I

Page. Have with you.—I had rather, come a little nearer this ways.—I my-

them scold than fight.

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, yet in worship, come a little nearer this ways, not put off my opinion so easily: she's a little nearer this ways.—I pray

his company at Page's house; and when people, mine own people, made there, I know not. Well, I will quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, farther into't; and I have a disguise to make them his servants!

Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose of labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour bestowed.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Pistol.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster.

Which I with sword will open.—

I will retort the sum in equipage.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been cozened

sir, you should lay my countenance to

I have grated upon my good friends for reprieves for you and your coach-fellow,

or else you had looked through the grate

a gemini of baboons. I am damned for wearing to gentlemen, my friends, and good soldiers, and tall fellows: and Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her

Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not bully-rogue!

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason; thinkest you, I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a between Sir Hugh, the Welsh priest, and, hang no more about me; I am no gibbet, you:—go.—A short knife and a throng:—

your manner of Pickhatch, go.—You'll not let me a letter for me, you rogue!—You stand

[They go.] your honour!—Why, thou unconfinable

ness, it is as much as I can do, to keep the of mine honour precise. I, I, I myself

ing of their weapons; and, I think, sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the

pointed them contrary places; for, bold hand, and hiding mine honour in my

I hear the parson is no jester. Hark, I easily, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to you what our sport shall be. [They go.]—And yet you, rogue, will ensconce your

Host. Hast thou no suit against my son, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-

my guest-cavalier?

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give the shelter of your honour! You will potter of burnt sack to give me rest? do it, you!

him, and tell him my name is Brook!

Host. My hand, bully: thou shalt not do it, you!

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give the shelter of your honour! You will

shall be Brook. It is a merry knight.

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Page. I have heard, the Frenchman's good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir! I could have told you quick. I'll be sworn; as my mother was,

In these times you stand on distance first hour I was born.

passes, stoicades, and I know not what I do believe the swearer. What with

is the heart, master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a

I have seen the time, with my long sword or two?

would have made you four tall fellows! Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll

like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we quick. There is one mistress Ford, sir:—I

Page. Have with you.—I had rather, come a little nearer this ways.—I my-

them scold than fight.

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, yet in worship, come a little nearer this ways,

not put off my opinion so easily: she's a little nearer this ways.—I pray

his company at Page's house; and when people, mine own people,

made there, I know not. Well, I will quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, farther into't; and I have a disguise to make them his servants!

Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose of labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour bestowed.

could never get an eye-wink of her,—I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I duty all angels, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way of honesty:—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proud of them all; and yet there has been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify, that her husband will be absent from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot of:—master Ford, her husband, will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; he's a very jealousy man; she leads a very frampold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven.—Woman, commend me to her; I will not fall her.

Quick. Why, you say well. But I have another messenger to your worship. Mistress

Page hath her hearty commendations to you, too:—and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fatuous as a civil modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss your morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, who'er be the other:—and she bade me tell your worship, that her husband is seldom from home; but, she hopes, there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man: surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee: setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife, and Page's wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

Quick. That were a jest, indeed!—they have not so little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, indeed!—But mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves; her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and, truly, master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does: do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will: and, truly, she deserves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so, then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both;

and, in any case, have a nayword, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand anything; for 'tis not good that children should know any wicked

we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, master Page.

Page. 'Tis true, master Shallow.
Shal. It will be found so, master Page.—Master Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace; you have showed yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman. You must go with me, master doctor.

Host. Pardon, guest-justice.—A word, mon-Caius. Mock-water! vat is dat?

Host. Mock-water, in our English tongue, is valour, bully.

Caius. By gar, den, I have as much mock-water as de Englishman.—Sourvy jack-dog priest! by gar, me vill cut his ears.

Host. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.
Caius. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.
Caius. By gar, me do look he shall clapper-de-claw me; for, by gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to't, or let Caius. Me tank you for dat. [Hitts wag.

Host. And moreover, bully.—But first, master guest, and master Page, and eke cavalero Slender, [aside to them,] go you through the town to Frogmore.

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there: see what humour he is in; and I will bring the doctor about by the fields. Will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

Page, Shal., and Slender. Adieu, good master doctor. [Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.]

Caius. By gar, me vill kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-an-die to Anna Page.

Host. Let him die; sheathe thy impatience; throw cold water on thy cholera: go about the fields with me through Frogmore: I will bring thee where mistress Anna Page is, at a farmhouse a-feasting; and thou shalt woo her. Cry I aim, said I well?

Caius. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure a you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which I will be thy adversary toward Anna Page. Said I well?

Caius. By gar, 'tis good; well said.

Host. Let us wag, then.
Caius. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Field near Frogmore.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Evans. I pray you now, good master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physic?

Sim. Marry, sir, the pittle-ward, de ward, every way; old Windsor every way but the town way.

Evans. I most feehemently desire you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, sir.

Evans. Bless my soul! how full of am, and trampling of mind!—I shall if he have deceived me.—How melancoly am I—I will knog his urinals about his costard, when I have got opportunity the 'ork:—bless my soul!

To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our beds of rue,
And a thousand fragrant posies.

To shallow—
Mercy on me! I have a great disposition to cry.

Melodious birds sing madrigals:—
When as I sat in Babylon,
And a thousand vagrant posies.

To shallow—
[Coming forward.] Yonder coming this way, Sir Hugh.

Evans. He's welcome.—
To shallow rivers, to whose falls

Heaven prosper the right!—what well he!

Sim. No weapons, sir. There comes master, master Shallow, and another man, from Frogmore, over the stile.

Evans. Pray you, give me my gown; keep it in your arms. [Leads in.]

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Shal. How now, master parson!

Page. How now, good Sir Hugh. Keep a g from the dice, and a good student in book, and it is wonderful.

Slender. Ah, sweet Anne Page!

Page. Save you, good Sir Hugh!

Evans. Bless you from His mercy sake!

Shal. What, the sword and the you study them both, master parson?

Page. And youthful still, in your and hose, this raw rheumatic day?

Evans. There is reasons and causes for Page. We are come to you to do office, master parson.

Evans. Very well: what is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, belike having received wrong by person, is at most odds with his own and patience that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years and ward; I never heard a man of his gravity, and learning, so wide of his

Evans. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; master Caius, the renowned French physician.

Evans. God's will, and his passion of my I had as lief you would tell me of a Page. Why?

Evans. He has no more knowledge in

Scene 2.

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

boocrates and Galen,—and he is a knave besides; a cowardly knave, as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

Slender. O, sweet Anne Page!

Shal. It appears so, by his weapons.—Keep them asunder!—here comes doctor Caius.

Enter Host, Caius, and Rugby.

Page. Nay, good master parson, keep in your weapon.

Shal. So do you, good master doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question: let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Caius. I pray you, let-a me speak a word at your ear: verelore vill you not meet-a me?

Evans. Pray you, use your patience: in good time.

Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape.

Evans. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stocks to other men's humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends:—I will knog your urinals about your knave's cogcombs for missing your meetings and appointments.

Caius. Hable!—Jack Rugby,—mine host de Jarretiere,—have I not stay for him to kill him? I have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Evans. As I am a Christian soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed: I'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Gallia and Guallia: French and Welsh; soul-curer and body-curer!

Caius. Ay, dat is very good; excellent.

Host. Peace, I say! I hear mine host of the Garter. Am I polite? am I subtle? am I a knave?

Shal. Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions, and the motions. Shall I lose my parson, my priest, my Sir Hugh?

Evans. Give me the proverbs and the noverbs.

Shal. Give me thy hand, terrestrial! so?—give me thy hand, celestial! so.—Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you in wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your kins are whole, and let burst sack be the case.—Come, lay their swords to pawn.—Follow me, lad of peace; follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad host!—Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Slender. O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt Shallow, Slender, Page, and Host.]

Caius. Ha, do I perceive dat I have you taken-a de sot of us, ha, ha!

Evans. This is well; he has made us his laughing-stock.—I desire you, that we may be friends; and let us knog our brains together in revenge on this same scall, scurvey, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart. He promise bring me vere is Anne Page: by gar, he receive me too.

Evans. Well, I will smite his noddles.—Pray you, follow. [Exeunt.]

Page, Shal., and Slender. Well met, master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot. I have good cheer at home; and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Slender. And so must I, sir: we have appointed

SCENE II.—A Street in Windsor.

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant: you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader. Whether had you rather, lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Robin. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O, you are a flattering boy: now I see you'll be a courtier.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Well met, mistress Page. Whither go you?

Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife: is Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company. I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weathercock?

Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of.—What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Robin. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on's name.—There is such a league between my good man and he!—Is your wife at home, indeed?

Ford. Indeed, she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir: I am sick, till I see her. [Exeunt Mrs. Page and Robin.]

Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty miles, as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score.

He pieces-out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion, and advantage: and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her:—a man may hear this shower sing in the wind:—and Falstaff's boy with her!—Good plots!—they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so-seeming Mrs. Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful

Acton; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim. [Clock strikes.]

The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search: there I shall find Falstaff. I shall be rather praised for this, than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Sir Hugh Evans, Caius, and Rugby.

Page, Shal., &c. Well met, master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot. I have good cheer at home; and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Slender. And so must I, sir: we have appointed to dine with Mrs. Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a watch between Anna Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer. [Page.]

Slender. I hope I have your good-will, father Page. You have, master Slender; I stand wholly for you—but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Calus. Ay, by gar; and do maul is love-a-me: my maul-a. Quickly tell me so much.

Host. What say you to young master Pention? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May: he will carry't, he will carry't; 'tis in his buttons; he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no having: he kept company with the wild Prince and Poins; he is of too high a region; he knows too much. No, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster.—Master Doctor, you shall go;—so shall you, master Page; and you, Sir Hugh. Shal. Well, fare you well: we shall have the freer wooing at master Page's.

[Exeunt Shallow and Slender. Calus. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon. Host. Farewell, my hearts: I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him. Ford. [Aside.] I think, I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance.—Will you go, gentlemen?

All. Have with you, to see this monster. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Mistress Ford and Mistress Page.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! what, Robert!

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly:—Is the back-basket—

Mrs. Ford. I warrant.—What, Robin, I

Enter Servants with a large basket.

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge: we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, John, and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-house; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and, without any pause or staggering, take this basket on your shoulders; that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over they lack no direction.—Be gone, and when you are called.

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

Enter Robin.

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyes—what news with you?

Rob. My master, Sir John, is come your back-door, mistress Ford, and of your company.

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, has been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'll be sworn. My master not of your being here; and bath there to put me into everlasting liberty, if I

Mrs. Page. Thou'rt a good boy; this of thine shall be a tailor to thee, and make thee a new doublet and hose—

Mrs. Ford. Do so.—Go tell thy man am alone.—Mistress Page, remember me.

Mrs. Page. I warrant thee; if I do not, it, hiss me.

Mrs. Ford. Go to, then: we'll use wholesome humility, this gross water; we'll teach him to know turtles.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. "Have I caught my heavenly!"

Mrs. Ford. Oh, sweet Sir John!

Mrs. Page. Oh, sweet Sir John!

Mrs. Ford. I cannot cog, I

Mrs. Page. Now shall I

Mrs. Ford. I would thy husband were dead

Mrs. Page. I should be a pitiful

Mrs. Ford. I your lady, Sir John!

Fal. Let the court of France show

Mrs. Ford. I see how thine eye would

Mrs. Page. thou hast the right

Mrs. Ford. the tire-vallant, or any time of Venice

Mrs. Page. a plain kerchief, Sir John

Fal. Thou art a traitor to say

Mrs. Ford. I wouldst make an absolute courtier;

Mrs. Page. a firm fixture of thy foot would give an

Mrs. Ford. in a semi-circled

Fal. I see what thou wert, if Fortune

Mrs. Page. I have not which pleases me

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me

Mrs. Page. I know not which pleases me

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me

Mrs. Page. I know not which pleases me

man's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple time; I cannot; but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir. I fear you love mistress Page.

Fal. Thou might'st as well say, I love to talk by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln.

Mrs. Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. [Within.] Mistress Ford! Mistress Ford!

Mrs. Ford. Here's mistress Page at the door, weating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me: I will ensconce to behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very stilling woman.—[Falstaff hides himself.]

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

Mrs. Page. O mistress Ford! what have you done? You're shamed, you are over-

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good mis-

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, mistress Ford!

Mrs. Ford. I have an honest man to your husband, to Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?—Out

Mrs. Page. You're shamed, you are over-

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither,

Mrs. Ford. With all the officers of Windsor, to

Mrs. Page. I have an honest man to your husband, to

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion?—Out

Mrs. Ford. You're shamed, you are over-

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither,

Mrs. Ford. With all the officers of Windsor, to

Mrs. Page. I have an honest man to your husband, to

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion?—Out

Mrs. Ford. You're shamed, you are over-

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither,

Mrs. Ford. With all the officers of Windsor, to

Mrs. Page. I have an honest man to your husband, to

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion?—Out

Mrs. Ford. You're shamed, you are over-

ing: or, it is whitening-time, send him by your two men to Datchet-mead.

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there. What shall I do?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't, O, let me see't! I'll in, I'll in—follow your friend's counsel:—I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What, Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, help me away: let me creep in here. I'll never—

[He gets into the basket; they cover him with fool linen.

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your monster, boy.—Call your men, mistress Ford.—You

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John!

Re-enter Servants. Go take up those clothes

would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think, my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that; and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carter, mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We will do it: let him be sent for to-morrow eight o'clock, to have wounds.

Re-enter Ford, Page, Calun, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be, the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. [Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. You use me well, master Ford.

Ford. Ay, I do so. [Your thoughts.]

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than Ford. Amen!

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there be any body in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgment!

Caius. By gar, nor I too: dera is no bodier.

Page. Fie, fie, master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not have your distemper in this kind for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, master Page: I suffer.

Eva. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a woman as I will desire among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well; I promised you a dinner.—Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you, pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you, why I have done this.—Come, wife;—come, mistress Page. I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast: after, we'll a birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?

Ford. Anything.

Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Caius. If dere be one or two, I shall make a Ford. Pray you go, master Page. [do turn.]

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Eva. A lousy knave, to have his giben, and his mockeries!

SCENE IV.—A Room in Page's House.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy father's. Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet.

Ann. Alas! how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be the doer.

Ann. He doth object, I am too great of birth.

Fent. And that my state being gall'd with it, I seek to heal it only by his wealth.

Ann. Besides these, other bars he lays before.

Fent. My riots past, my wild societies; and tells me, 'tis a thing impossible.

Ann. I should love thee, but as a property.

Fent. May be, he tells you true.

Ann. No, heaven so speed me in my suit.

Fent. Albeit, I will confess, thy father's wealth was the first motive that I would thee.

Ann. Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more.

Fent. Then stamps in gold, or sums in sealed.

Ann. And 'tis the very riches of thyself.

Fent. That now I aim at.

Ann. Gentle master Fent.

Fent. Yet seek my father's love; still seek it.

Ann. If opportunity and humblest suit cannot attain it, why then.—Hark you!

Fent. [They converse.]

Enter Shallow, Slender, and Mrs. Quickly.

Shal. Break their talk, mistress Quickly; my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slender. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't.

Shal. Be not dismayed.

Slender. No, she shall not dismay me!

Shal. Not for that,—but that I am afraid.

Slender. Quick! hark ye: master Slender speak a word with you.

Ann. I come to him.—[Aside.]

Shal. My father's choice.

Slender. O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults!

Shal. Looks handsome in three hundred pound year!

Slender. And how does good master Fent?

Shal. Pray you, a word with you.

Slender. She's coming; to her coz.

Shal. Thou hadst a father!

Slender. I had a father, mistress Anne.

Shal. Anne can tell you good jests of him—

Slender. you, uncle, tell mistress Anne the jest.

Ann. Now, master Slender,—

Slender. Now, good mistress Anne,—

Ann. What is your will?

Slender. My will! O, d's heartings, that's a pretty

Ann. Just, indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

Slender. I mean, master Slender, what would

Ann. Truly, for mine own part, I would Slender. Little or nothing with you. Your father, and

Ann. my uncle, have made motions: if it be my

Slender. luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole!

Ann. They can tell you how things go, better than I

Slender. can: you may ask your father; here he comes.

Enter Page and Mistress Page.

Page. Now, master Slender;—love him,

Slender. daughter Anne.—

Page. Why, how now! what does master Fenton here?

Slender. You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house:

Page. I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Slender. Nay, master Page, be not impatient.

Page. Mrs. Page. Good master Fenton, come not Slender. to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Slender. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good master Fenton.—

Slender. Come, master Shallow;—come, son Slender;

Page. in.—

Slender. Knowing my mind, you wrong me, master

Page. [Re-enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.]

Slender. Quick. Speak to mistress Page.

Page. Fent. Good mistress Page, for that I love

Slender. your daughter

Page. in such a righteous fashion as I do, [ners,

Slender. Perforce, against all cheeks, rebukes, and man-

Page. I must advance the colours of my love,

Slender. And not retire: let me have your good-will.

Page. Anna. Good mother, do not marry me to Slender. your fool. [better husband.]

Page. Mrs. Page. I mean it not; I seek you a Slender. Quick. That's my master, master doctor.

Page. Anna. Alas! I had rather be set quick!

had her; or, in sooth, I would master Fenton had her: I will do what I can for them all three; for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word; but specially for master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it! [Exit.]

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,—

Bard. Here, sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in't. [Exit Bard.] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offal, and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out, and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues slighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a bitch's blind puppies, fifteen of the litter: and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking; if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should drown. I had been drowned, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow; a death that I abhor; for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been when I had been swelled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Re-enter Bardolph, with the Wine.

Bard. Here's mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snow-balls for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman.

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy:—give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Take away these chalices. Go brew me a pottle of sack finely.

Bard. With eggs, sir!

Fal. Simples of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage.—[Exit Bardolph.]—How now!

Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough; I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.

Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistake their erection.

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.

Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a birding: she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amends, I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her: tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.
Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, sayest thou?

Quick. Eight and nine, sir.
Fal. Well, be gone; I will not miss her.
Quick. Peace be with you, sir.
Fal. I marvel I hear not of master Brook: he sent me word to stay within. I like his money well.—O! here he comes.

Enter Ford.
Ford. Bless you, sir.
Fal. Now, master Brook,—you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife!

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.
Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you: I was at her house the hour she appointed me.
Ford. And sped you, sir?
Fal. Very ill-favourably, master Brook.
Ford. How so, sir? did she change her determination?

Fal. No, master Brook; but the peaking cornuto her husband, master Brook, dwelling in a continual harum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What! while you were there?
Fal. While I was there.
Ford. And did he search for you, and could
Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and in her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket?
Fal. By the Lord, a buck-basket!—rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, greasy napkins; that, master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?
Fal. Nay, you shall hear, master Brook, what I have suffered, to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door, who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket. I quaked for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well; on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, master Brook: I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fight, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether; next, to be compassed, like a bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, to point, heel to head; and then to be squeezed in, like a strong distillation, with all clothes that fretted in their own grease; of that,—a man of my kidney,—think of that as an subject to heat, as butter; of continual dissolution and thaw; a miracle, to 'scape suffocation. And the height of this bath, when I was more than stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, thrown into the Thames, and cooled, as hot in that surge, like a horse-shoe; and that,—hissing hot,—think of that, master Brook!

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry for your sake you have suffered all this; suit, then, is desperate; you'll undertake no more?

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into the Thames, as I have been into Thames, ere I leave her thus. Her husband is this gone a birding: I have received from his other embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.
Fal. Is it? I will then address me to appointment. Come to me at your convenience, and you shall know how I spend the conclusion shall be crowned with enjoying her; adieu. You shall have master Brook; master Brook, you shall have old Ford.

Ford. H'm,—Is this a vision? I dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake, master Ford! there's a hole in your best coat, master Ford. This 'tis married! this 'tis to have linen, and baskets!—Well, I will proclaim myself I am; I will now take the lecher; he is house: he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a halberd, nor into a pepper-box: but, the devil that guides him should aid him, search impossible places. Though what I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would shall not make me tame; if I have him make me mad, let the proverb go with me, be horn mad.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Quickly, and Will.
Mrs. Page. Is he at master Ford's? do you think thou?

Quick. Sure, he is by this, or will be so; but truly, he is very courageous about his throwing into the water. Master Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by, but bring my young man here to school, where his master comes; 'tis a playing see.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.
Now now, Sir Hugh! no school to-day!
Eva. No; master Slender is got the boys to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!
Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says, you are profits nothing in the world at his school; I pray you, ask him some questions in his accident.

Eva. Come hither, William; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.
Mrs. Page. William, how many numbers is in your book?

Will. Two.
Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more, because they say, old's nouns.
Eva. Peace your babbings.—What is fair, Will, Pulcher.

Quick. Pole-cats! there are fairer things than pole-cats, sure.
Eva. You are a very simplicity 'oman; I pray you peace.—What is lapis, William?

Will. A stone.
Eva. And what is a stone, William?
Will. A pebble.
Eva. No, it is lapis: I pray you remember Will, lapis.

Eva. That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?
Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, haec, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo, hic, haec, hoc:—pray you, mark; genitivo, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.
Eva. I pray you, have your remembrance, Will; accusativo, hinc, hanc, huc.
Quick. Hang hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prabbles, 'oman.—What is the fociative case, William?
Will. O,—vocativo, O.
Eva. Remember, William; fociative is, carer.
Quick. And that's a good root.

Eva. 'Oman, forbear.
Mrs. Page. Peace!
Eva. What is your genitive case plural, Will. Genitive case?
Will. Ay.

Will. Genitivo,—horum, harum, eorum.
Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! lie on her!—Never name her, child, if she be a hog. For shame, 'oman!

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words.—He teaches him to hick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves: and to call horum!—lie upon you!

Eva. 'Oman, art thou lunatic? hast thou understandings for thy cases, and the numbers, and the genders? Thou art as foolish as Christian creatures as I would desire.
Mrs. Page. Pr'ythee, hold thy peace.

Eva. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.
Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is qui, quae, quod: if you forget your quis, your quae, and your quod, you must be preaches. Go your ways, and play; go. [Thought he was.]

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I.
Eva. He is a good sprag memory. Farewell, mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy.—Come, we stay too long. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Ford's House.
Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Ford.
Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my suffrance. I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, Mrs. Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accompaniment, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a birding, sweet Sir John.
Mrs. Page. [Within.] What ho, gossip Ford! what ho!
Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, Sir John. [Exit Falstaff.]

Enter Mrs. Page.
Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart! who's at home besides yourself? [People.]

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own.
Mrs. Page. Indeed? [Speak louder.]
Mrs. Ford. No, certainly.—[Aside to her.]
Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have Mrs. Ford, Why?

[nobody here.]
Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old limes again: he so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, 'Peer out, Peer out!' that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now. I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him?
Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here; and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport to make another experiment of his suspicion. But I am glad the knight is not here: now he shall see his own folly.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, mistress Page?
Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end: he will be here anon. [Here.]

Mrs. Ford. I am undone!—the knight is
Mrs. Page. Why then, you are utterly shamed, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you! Away with him, away with him! better shame, than murder.
Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? how rivers, and has been grievously pouted as an old woman: methinks there should be terrors in him, that he should not come; methinks his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Davina but how you'll use him when he comes,
And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter,

Sometimes a keeper here in Windsor forest,
Doth all the winter time, at still midnight,
Walk round about an oak, with great ragged horns;

And there he blasts the trees, and takes the And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain

In a most hideous and dreadful manner.
You have heard of such a spirit; and well you know

The superstitious idle-headed old
Rec'd, and did deliver to our age,
This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many, that do fear

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak.
But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;
That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us,
Disguis'd like Herne, with huge horns on his head.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll
And in this shape: when you have brought him thither,
What shall be done with him? what is your

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus:

Nan Page my daughter, and my little son,
And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress

Like urchins, ouphes, and fairies, green and white,

With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands. Upon a sudden,

As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once
With some diffused song: upon their sight,

We two in great amazement will fly:
Then, let them all encircle him about,
And, fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight;

And ask him, why, that hour of fairy revel,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread
In shape profane.

Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound,
And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being known,
We'll all present ourselves, dis-born the spirit,
And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must Be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne'er do't.

Eva. I will teach the children their behaviours;
I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my tabor.

Ford. That will be excellent.
[Exit]

Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the all the fairies.

Finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That silk will I go buy—and in that time

Shall master Slender steal my Nan
And marry her at Eton.—[To them] to Falstaff straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in He'll tell me all his purpose. Sure, he

Mrs. Page. Fear not you that.
And tricking for our fairies.

Eva. Let us about it; it is a adulter sures, and very honest knavery.

[Exit Page, Ford, and Mrs. Page. Go, mistress Ford, Send quickly to Sir John, to know his

I'll to the doctor: he hath my good
And none but he, to marry with Nan

That Slender, though well lauded, he
And him my husband best of all affections

The doctor is well money'd, and his Potent at court: he, none but he, shall

her,
Though twenty thousand worthier
crave her.

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.
[Enter Host and Simple.]

Host. What wouldst thou have, what, thick-skinn? speak, breathe,

brief, short, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak
John Falstaff from master Slender,

Host. There's his chamber, his house castle, his standing-bed, and his trunk painted about with the story of the fresh and new. Go, knock and call speaking like an Anthropophaginan knock, I say.

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat gone up into his chamber: I'll be so stay, sir, till she come down; I come with her, indeed.

Host. Ha! a fat woman! the knight be robbed: I'll call.—Bully knight!

John! speak from thy lungs military;
there! it is thine host, thine Ephesian!

Fal. [Above.] How now, mine host!
Host. Here's a Bohemian Tartar coming down of thy fat woman. Let second, bully, let her descend; my are honourable: fie! privacy! fie!

[Enter Falstaff.]

Fal. There was, mine host, an woman even now with me; but she's

Sim. Pray you, sir, wasn't not she woman of Bredford?

Fal. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell would you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, master Slender her, seeing her go through the streets, to w, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled of a chain, had the chain or no.

Fal. I speak with the old woman about it.
Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Fal. Marry, she says that the very name of that beguiled master Slender of his cozened him of it.

Sim. I would I could have spoken with the man herself; I had other things to have seen with her, too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.
Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.
Host. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about dressing Anne Page; to know, if it were my husband's fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis his fortune.

Sim. What, sir? [woman told me so.
Fal. To have her,—or no. Go; say the

Sim. May I be bold to say so, sir?
Fal. Ay, sir; like who more bold?

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make master glad with these tidings. [Exit.

Host. Thou art clerdy, thou art clerdy,
John. Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned in my life; and I paid nothing for it ther, but was paid for my learning.

[Enter Bardolph.]
Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage, more snags!

Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varletto.

Bard. Run away, with the cozeners: for so as I came beyond Eton, they threw me from behind one of them, in a sledge of ice; and set spurs and away, like three man devils, those Doctor Faustus.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke,

fresh and new. Go, knock and call most men.

[Enter Sir Hugh Evans.
Eva. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?
Eva. Have a care of your entertainments:

there is three cousin Germans, that has
and all the hosts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I and you for good will, look you: you are wise,

and full of gibes and clowning-stops, and 'tis convenient you should be cozened. Fare

you well. [Exit.
[Enter Dr. Caius.

Host. Here is mine host do Ferretiere!
Dr. Caius. I cannot tell what is that; but it is tellme, that you make grand preparation for a wedding, by my trot, there is no duke

in court is know to come. I tell you for adieu. [Exit.

[Enter Dr. Caius.
Dr. Caius. I cannot tell what is that; but it is tellme, that you make grand preparation for a wedding, by my trot, there is no duke

in court is know to come. I tell you for adieu. [Exit.

[Enter Dr. Caius.
Dr. Caius. I cannot tell what is that; but it is tellme, that you make grand preparation for a wedding, by my trot, there is no duke

Host. Hue and cry, villain! go.—Assist me, knight.—I am undone!—Fly, run, hue and cry, villain!—I am undone!

[Exit Host and Bardolph.]

Fal. I would all the world might be cozened; for I have been cozened, and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and endgalled, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop,

and liquor fishermen's boots with me: I warrant,
they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I forswore myself at primero. Well, if my mind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.

[Enter Mistress Quickly.
Now, whence come you?

Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.
Fal. The devil take one party, and his dam

the other! and so they shall be both bestowed.
I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villainous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? Yes,
I warrant; speciously one of them: mistress

Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue,
that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tallest thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Bredford; but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knave constable had set me 't the stocks, 't the common stocks, for a witch.

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber; you shall hear how things go; and,

I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Garter Inn.
[Enter Fenton and Host.]

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me; my mind is heavy: I will give over all.

Fent. Yet hear me speak. Assist me in my purpose.

And, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee
A hundred pound in gold more than your loss.

Host. I will hear you, master Fenton; and I will, at the least, keep your counsel. [You

Fent. From time to time I have acquainted with the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page;

Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection
(So far forth as herself might be her chooser)

Even to my wish. I have a letter from her
Of such contents as you will wonder at;

The mirth whereof so larded with my matter,
That neither, singly, can be manifested, [staff

Without the show of both;—wherein fat Fal-

Hath a great scene: the image of the jest
[Pointing to the Letter.]
I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host:

To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and Must my sweet Nan present the fairy queen;
The purpose why, is here: [Pointing to Letter.] in which disguise,

While other jests are something rank on foot,
Her father hath commended her to slip Away with Slender, and with him at Eton
Immediately to marry: she hath consented.
Now, sir,

Her mother, even strong against that match,
And firm for Dr. Caius, hath appointed
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds,
And at the deanery, where a priest attends,
Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot
She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath prest:
Made promise to the doctor:—Now, thus it
Her father means she shall be all in white;
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her go,
She shall go with him: her mother hath intended,

The better to denote her to the doctor,
[For they must all be mask'd and vizarded.]
That, quaint in green, she shall be loose en-rob'd.

With ribands pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive, father or mother?

Ford. Both, my good host, to go along with
And here it rests,—that you'll procure the vicar
To stay for me at church 'twixt twelve and one,
And, in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device: I'll to the Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

Ford. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompense.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Quickly.

Fal. Prythee, no more prattling;—go:— I'll hold. This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go. They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.—Away.

Quick. I'll provide you a chain; and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head and mince.

[Exit Mrs. Quickly.]

Enter Ford.

How now, master Brook? Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the park about midnight,

oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yet?
as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, master Brook, see, like a poor old man: but I her, master Brook, like a poor
That same knave Ford, her husband, finest-mad devil of jealousy in the Brook, that ever governed frenzy:— you:—he beat me grievously, in the a woman; for in the shape of a Brook, I fear not Gollath with a beam; because I know also, life is a am in haste; go along with me: I'll all, master Brook. Since I pluck played truant, and whipped top, I what it was to be beaten, till lately me: I'll tell you strange things of Ford; on whom to-night I will be and I will deliver his wife into your Follow:—Strange things in hand Brook:—follow.

SCENE II.—Windsor Park.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Page. Come, come; we'll couch it ditch, till we see the light of our fair member, son Slender, my daughter.

Slender. Ay, forsooth; I have spoke and we have a way-word, how to another. I come to her in white,
"Mum;" she cries "Budget;" and we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but who either your "mum," or her "bud-white will decipher her well enough:
struck ten o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light will become it well. Heaven pro-sport! No man means evil but the we shall know him by his horns. Let follow me.

SCENE III.—The Street in Windsor.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Dr.
Caius.

Mrs. Page. Master Doctor, my day in green! when you see your time, take the hand, away with her to the de-despatch it quickly. Go before into the we two must go together.

Caius. I know yet I have to do.
Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir.

My husband will not rejoice so much abuse of Falstaff, as he will chide doctor's marrying my daughter: but matter; better a little chiding, than deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now, troop of fairies! and the Welsh devil.

Mrs. Page. They are all couched hard by Herne's oak, with obscure which, at the very instant of Falstaff meeting, they will at once display to the

[him.]

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed, he will be asked; if he be amazed, he will every way amazed.

Mrs. Ford. We'll betray him finely.
Mrs. Page. Against such lewdsters, and their lechery,

we that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on: to the oak,
he oak!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Windsor Park.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, disguised as a Satyr, with Anna Page and others as Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib, trib, come; and remember your parts. Be bold, I pray you; aw me into the pit; and when I give the signals, do as I bid you: come, come;
trib.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Falstaff disguised as Herne, with a Buck's Head on.

Fal. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; minute draws on. Now, the hot-blooded madst me!—remember, Jove, thou wast
all for thy Europa; love set on thy horns:

a powerful love! that, in some respects,
does a beast a man; in some other, a man a beast.—You were also, Jupiter, a swan for love of Leda:—O omnipotent love! how the god drew to the complexion of a she!

A fault done first in the form of a she:—O Jove, a beastly fault! and then her fault in the resemblance of a fowl:
she!—Jove, a foul fault.—When gods hot backs, what shall poor men do? For I am here a Windsor stag; and the fattest, thick, I the forest. Send me a coal rut-time, or who can blame me to piss my tallow?

Who comes here? my doe?
Enter Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page.
Mrs. Ford. Sir John! art thou there, my my male deer?

Mrs. Ford. My doe with the black seat!—Let the rain potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of green sleeves; hail kissing-comfits, and aw aringoes; let there come a tempest of vocation, I will shelter me here.

[Embracing her.]

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page is come with me, sober.

Fal. Divide me like a bribed buck, each a hinderer: I will keep my sides to myself, my hinderers for the follow of this walk, and my hinderers I bequeath your husbands. Am I a man, but? Speak I like Herne the hunter?—Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience; he makes restitution. As I am a true rit, welcome!

[Noise within.]

Mrs. Page. Alas! what noise!

Mrs. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Fal. What should this be?

Mrs. Ford. Away, away! [They run off.]

Fal. I think the devil will not have me damned, lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, as a Satyr; Mrs.
Quickly, Anna Page, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, as fairies, with wicker tapers on their heads.

Quick. Fairies, black, gray, green, and white,
You moonshine revellers, mad shades of night,
You orphan-boys of fixed destiny,
Attend your office and your quality.—
Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy o-yes.

Pish. Elves, list your names; silence, you airy toys!

Crickat, to Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap,
Where fires thou find'st unquench'd and hearth-smoke swept,

There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry;
Our radiant queen hates sluts, and sluttish.

Fal. They are fairies: he that speaks to them, shall die!

I'll wink and cough: no man their works must know.

Evans. Where's Bede?—Go you, and where you find a maid,

That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers
Raise up the organs of her fantasy,

Sleep she as sound as careless infancy: [sins,
But those that sleep, and think not on their Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders,

Quick. About, about! [sides, and shins.
Search Windsor castle, elves, within and out:
Strew good luck, ophaps, on every sacred room;

That it may stand till the perpetual doom,
In state as wholesome as in state 'tis fit;

Worthy the owner, and the owner it.
The several chairs of order look you scour
With juice of balm and every precious flower;

Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,
With loyal blazon, ever more be blest!

And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing,
Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring;

Th' expressure that it bears, green let it be,
More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;

And, Honi soit qui mal y pense, write,
In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and
white;

Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery, Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee:—

Fairies use flowers for their character.
Away! disperse! But, till 'tis one o'clock,
Our dance of custom round about the oak
Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Evans. Pray you, lock hand in hand; your selves in order set;

And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
To guide our measure round about the tree.—
But, stay! I smell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy, lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!
Pist. Vile worm, thou wast o'erlook'd, even in thy birth.

Quick. With trial-fire touch me his finger. If he be chaste, the flame will back descend, And turn him to no pain; but if he start, It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial, come.

Eva. Come, will this wood take fire?

[They burn him with their tapers.]

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

[desire!—]

Quick. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in about him, fairies; sing a scornful rhyme: And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time,

SONG.

*Fie on sinful fantasy!
 Fie on lust and luxury!
 Lust is but a bloody fire,
 Kindled with unchaste desire,
 Fed in heart; whose flames aspire,
 As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
 Pinch him, fairies, mutually;
 Pinch him for his villainy;
 Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him
 about,
 Till candles, and star-light, and moonshine be out.*

During this song, the fairies pinch Falstaff. Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; Blenzer, another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and Fenton comes, and steals away Anne Page. A noise of hunting is made within. The fairies run away. Falstaff pulls off his buck's head and rises.

Enter Page, Ford, Mrs. Page, and Mrs. Ford. They lay hold on Falstaff.

Page. Nay, do not fly: I think we have watch'd you now;
[turn!]
 Will none but Herne the hunter serve your Mrs. Page. I pray you come; hold up the jest no higher.—
[wives!]

Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor
 See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes

Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now sir, who's a cuckold now?—
 Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, master Brook; and, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his back-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill-luck;
 we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again; but I will always count
 you my deer.
[an ass.]

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies! I have been or four times in the thought, they were fairies: and yet the guilleness of the sudden surprise of my powers, the grossness of the foppery into a room, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme, and that they were fairies. See now, how be made a Jack-a-lent, when I was a employment!

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve God.
Ford. Well said, fairly Hugh.

Eva. And leave your jealousies to when I took a boy for a girl. If I had Ford. I will never mistrust my own married to him, for all he was in woman's till thou art able to woo her in good earnest, I would not have had him.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the page. Why, this is your own folly. Did dried it, that it wants matter to put I tell you how you should know my gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I lighter by her garments?
 a Welsh goat too? shall I have a cocken. I went to her in white, and cried, frize! 'Tis time I were choked with plum, and she cried "Budget," as Anne of toasted cheese.

Eva. Scese is not good to give me, but a post-master's boy.

Fal. Scese and putter! have I lived in the page. Good George, be not angry: I at the taunt of one that makes fitter of your purpose; turned my daughter lish! This is enough to be the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you though we would have thrust virtue hearts by the head and shoulders, given ourselves without scruple to ever the devil could have made you light?

Ford. What, a hedge-pudding!

Mrs. Page. A pulled man? [able]

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of

Ford. And one that is as sland

Page. And as poor as Job!

Ford. And as wicked as his wife!

Eva. And given to fornications, taverns, and sack, and wine, and me and to drinkings, and swearings and pribbles and prabbles!

Fal. Well, I am your theme; you start of me; I am dejected; I am an answer the Welsh flannel; ignorance
 a plummet o'er me: use me as you

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you sor, to one master Brook, that cozened of money, to whom you shou been a pander: over and above that suffered, I think, to repay that money
 a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: I eat a posset to-night at my house;
 will desire thee to laugh at my wife,
 laughs at thee: tell her, master Slender married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. [Aside.] Doctors don't if Anne Page be my daughter, she is doctor Caius' wife.

Enter Slender.

Slender. Whoo, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son, how now! how now, son,
 you despatched!

Slender. Despatched!—I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know out; would I were

Page. Of what, son! [changed, in, else!]

Slender. I came yonder at Eton to marry mis-

Page. Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly

Slender. If it had not been for the church, I would

Page. swung him, or he should have swung

Slender. If I did not think it had been Anne

Page. I would I might never stir!—and 'tis a

Slender. master's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the Slender. your desires, and fairies will not pling.

Page. What need you tell me that? I think

Slender. when I took a boy for a girl. If I had

Page. married to him, for all he was in woman's

Slender. I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did

Slender. dried it, that it wants matter to put I tell you how you should know my

Page. gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I lighter by her garments?

Slender. a Welsh goat too? shall I have a cocken. I went to her in white, and cried,

Page. frize! 'Tis time I were choked with plum, and she cried "Budget," as Anne

Slender. of toasted cheese.

Eva. Scese is not good to give me, but a post-master's boy.

Fal. Scese and putter! have I lived in the page. Good George, be not angry: I

Page. at the taunt of one that makes fitter of your purpose; turned my daughter

Slender. lish! This is enough to be the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you though we would have thrust virtue

Ford. hearts by the head and shoulders, given ourselves without scruple to

Page. ever the devil could have made you light?

Ford. What, a hedge-pudding!

Mrs. Page. A pulled man? [able]

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of

Ford. And one that is as sland

Page. And as poor as Job!

Ford. And as wicked as his wife!

Eva. And given to fornications, taverns, and sack, and wine, and me

Page. and to drinkings, and swearings and

Slender. pribbles and prabbles!

Fal. Well, I am your theme; you

Page. start of me; I am dejected; I am an

Slender. answer the Welsh flannel; ignorance

Page. a plummet o'er me: use me as you

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you

Page. sor, to one master Brook, that

Slender. cozened of money, to whom you shou

Page. been a pander: over and above that

Slender. suffered, I think, to repay that money

Page. a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: I

Slender. eat a posset to-night at my house;

Page. will desire thee to laugh at my wife,

Slender. laughs at thee: tell her, master Slender

Page. married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. [Aside.] Doctors don't

Slender. if Anne Page be my daughter, she is

Page. doctor Caius' wife.

Enter Slender.

Slender. Whoo, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son, how now! how now, son,

Slender. you despatched!

Slender. Despatched!—I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know out; would I were

Page. Of what, son! [changed, in, else!]

Slender. I came yonder at Eton to marry mis-

Page. Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly

Slender. If it had not been for the church, I would

Page. swung him, or he should have swung

Slender. If I did not think it had been Anne

Page. I would I might never stir!—and 'tis a

Slender. master's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the

Slender. your desires, and fairies will not pling.

Page. What need you tell me that? I think

Slender. when I took a boy for a girl. If I had

Page. married to him, for all he was in woman's

Slender. I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did

Slender. dried it, that it wants matter to put I tell you how you should know my

Page. gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I lighter by her garments?

Slender. a Welsh goat too? shall I have a cocken. I went to her in white, and cried,

Page. frize! 'Tis time I were choked with plum, and she cried "Budget," as Anne

Slender. of toasted cheese.

Eva. Scese is not good to give me, but a post-master's boy.

Fal. Scese and putter! have I lived in the page. Good George, be not angry: I

Page. at the taunt of one that makes fitter of your purpose; turned my daughter

Slender. lish! This is enough to be the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you though we would have thrust virtue

Ford. hearts by the head and shoulders, given ourselves without scruple to

Page. ever the devil could have made you light?

Ford. What, a hedge-pudding!

Mrs. Page. A pulled man? [able]

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of

Ford. And one that is as sland

Page. And as poor as Job!

Ford. And as wicked as his wife!

Eva. And given to fornications, taverns, and sack, and wine, and me

Page. and to drinkings, and swearings and

Slender. pribbles and prabbles!

Fal. Well, I am your theme; you

Page. start of me; I am dejected; I am an

Slender. answer the Welsh flannel; ignorance

Page. a plummet o'er me: use me as you

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you

Page. sor, to one master Brook, that

Slender. cozened of money, to whom you shou

Page. been a pander: over and above that

Slender. suffered, I think, to repay that money

Page. a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: I

Slender. eat a posset to-night at my house;

Page. will desire thee to laugh at my wife,

Slender. laughs at thee: tell her, master Slender

Page. married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. [Aside.] Doctors don't

Slender. if Anne Page be my daughter, she is

Page. doctor Caius' wife.

Enter Slender.

Slender. Whoo, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son, how now! how now, son,

Slender. you despatched!

Slender. Despatched!—I'll make the best in

Page. Gloucestershire know out; would I were Slender. Of what, son! [changed, in, else!]

Slender. I came yonder at Eton to marry mis-

Page. Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly

Slender. If it had not been for the church, I would

Page. swung him, or he should have swung

Slender. If I did not think it had been Anne

Page. I would I might never stir!—and 'tis a

Slender. master's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the

Slender. your desires, and fairies will not pling.

Page. What need you tell me that? I think

Slender. when I took a boy for a girl. If I had

Page. married to him, for all he was in woman's

Slender. I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did

Slender. dried it, that it wants matter to put I tell you how you should know my

Page. gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I lighter by her garments?

Slender. a Welsh goat too? shall I have a cocken. I went to her in white, and cried,

Page. frize! 'Tis time I were choked with plum, and she cried "Budget," as Anne

Slender. of toasted cheese.

Eva. Scese is not good to give me, but a post-master's boy.

Fal. Scese and putter! have I lived in the page. Good George, be not angry: I

Page. at the taunt of one that makes fitter of your purpose; turned my daughter

Slender. lish! This is enough to be the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you though we would have thrust virtue

Ford. hearts by the head and shoulders, given ourselves without scruple to

Page. ever the devil could have made you light?

Ford. What, a hedge-pudding!

Mrs. Page. A pulled man? [able]

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of

Ford. And one that is as sland

Page. And as poor as Job!

Ford. And as wicked as his wife!

Eva. And given to fornications, taverns, and sack, and wine, and me

Page. and to drinkings, and swearings and

Slender. pribbles and prabbles!

Fal. Well, I am your theme; you

Page. start of me; I am dejected; I am an

Slender. answer the Welsh flannel; ignorance

Page. a plummet o'er me: use me as you

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you

Page. sor, to one master Brook, that

Slender. cozened of money, to whom you shou

Page. been a pander: over and above that

Slender. suffered, I think, to repay that money

Page. a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: I

Slender. eat a posset to-night at my house;

Page. will desire thee to laugh at my wife,

Slender. laughs at thee: tell her, master Slender

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Vincentio, Duke of Vienna.
 Angelo, Lord Deputy in the Duke's absence.
 Escalus, an ancient Lord, joined with Angelo in the deputation.
 Claudio, a young Gentleman.
 Lucio, a Fantastic.
 Two other like Gentlemen.
 Varrius, a Gentleman attending on the Duke.
 Provost.
 Thomas, } two Friars.
 Peter, }
 A Justice.

Elbow, a simple Constable.
 Froth, a foolish Gentleman.
 Clown; a Servant to Mistress Overdone.
 Abhorson, an Executioner.
 Barnardine, a dissolute Prisoner.
 Isabella, sister to Claudio.
 Mariana, betrothed to Angelo.
 Juliet, beloved of Claudio.
 Francisca, a Nun.
 Mistress Overdone, a Bawd.
 Lords, Officers, Citizens, Boy, and SCENE, — Vienna.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords, and Attendants.Duke. Escalus,— Escal. My lord?Duke. Of government the properties to unfold,

Would seem in me t'affect speech and dis-

Since I am put to know that your own science

Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice

My strength can give you: then no more remains, [able;

But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is

And let them work. The nature of our people,

Our city's institutions, and the terms

For common justice, you're as pregnant in

As art and practice hath enriched any

That we remember. There is our commission,

From which we would not have you warp.—

Call hither,

I say, bid come before us Angelo.—

[Exit an Attendant.

What figure of us think you he will bear?

For, you must know, we have with special soul

Elected him our absence to supply;

Lent him our terror, drest him with our love;

And given his deputation all the organs

Of our own power. What think you of it?

Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth

To undergo such ample grace and honour,

It is lord Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes.Enter Angelo.Ang. Always obedient to your grace's will,

I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo,

There is a kind of character in thy life,

That, to th' observer, doth thy history

Fully unfold. Thyself and thy beloved

Are not thine own so proper, as to war

Thyself upon thy virtues, them on thee

Heaven doth with us, as we with torches

Not light them for themselves; for if our

Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike

As if we had them not. Spirits are made touch'd,

But to fine issues; nor nature never

The smallest scruple of her excellency

But, like a thrifty goddess, she detour

Herself the glory of a creditor.—

Both thanks and use. But I do b

To one that can my part in him advert

Hold, therefore, Angelo:

[Tendering his commission

In our remove, be thou at full yourself;

Mortality and mercy in Vienna

Live in thy tongue and heart. Old E

Though first in question, is thy second

Take thy commission.

Ang. Now, good m

Let there be some more test made of my

Before so noble and so great a figure

Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion

We have with a heaven'd and prepared

Proceeded to you; therefore take your

Our haste from hence is of so quick con

That it prefers itself, and leaves unque

Matters of needful value. We shall w

you,

As time and our concernings shall imp

How it goes with us; and do look to k

What doth befall you here. So, fare yo

To the hopeful execution do I leave yo

Of your commissions.

Yet, give leave, my lord,
we may bring you something on the way.
My haste may not admit it;
need you, on mine honour, have to do any scruple: your scope is as mine own, enforce or qualify the laws your soul seems good. Give me your rively away. I love the people, [hand:
do not like to stage me to their eyes:
ugh it do well, I do not relish well loud applause and aves vehement;
do I think the man of safe discretion,
does affect it. Once more, fare you well.
ng. The heavens give safety to your purposes! [happiness!
Lead forth, and bring you back in
uke. I thank you. Fare you well. [Exit.
I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave have free speech with you; and it concerns look into the bottom of my place: [me power I have, but of what strength and nature
n not yet instructed. [together,
ing. 'Tis so with me. Let us withdraw we may soon our satisfaction have aching that point.

I'll wait upon your honour.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Lucio. If the duke, with the other dukes, be not to composition with the king of Hungary, why then, all the dukes fall upon the king.

1 Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, but not
2 Gent. Amen. [the king of Hungary's]

Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

2 Gent. "Thou shalt not steal!"

Lucio. Ay, that he razed.

1 Gent. Why, 'twas a commandment to obey the captain and all the rest from our functions: they put forth to steal.

There's not a soldier of us all, that, in the unforgiving before meat, doth relish the petion well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee; for I think thou never eat where grace was said.

2 Gent. No! a dozen times at least.

1 Gent. What, in metre? [grace.

Lucio. In any proportion, or in any lan-
1 Gent. I think, or in any religion.

Lucio. Ay; why not? Grace is grace, de-state of all controversy: as, for example,— ou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all
grace.

1 Gent. Well, there want but a pair of shears Lucio. I grant; as there may between the the and the velvet: thou art the list.

1 Gent. And thou the velvet: thou art good velvet; thou art a three-piled piece, I warrant
so. I had as lief be a list of an English kersey, as be piled, as thou art piled, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Lucio. I think thou dost; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee. [have I not?

1 Gent. I think I have done myself wrong,

2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast, whether thou art intsted, or free.

Lucio. Behold, behold, where madam Mitigation comes! I have purchased as many diseases under her roof, as come to—

2 Gent. To what, I pray? Lucio. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand dollars a year.

1 Gent. Ay, and more.

Lucio. A French crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error: I am sound.

Lucio. Nay, not, as one would say, healthy;
but so sound as things that are hollow: thy bones are hollow; impiety has made a feast of thee.

Enter Mistress Overdone.

1 Gent. How now! Which of your hips has the most profound sciatica?

Mrs. Ov. Well, well; there's one yonder arrested and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

2 Gent. Who's that, I pray thee? [Claudio.

Mrs. Ov. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, signior

1 Gent. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

Mrs. Ov. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within these three days his head is to be chopped off.

Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so. Art thou sure of this?

Mrs. Ov. I am too sure of it; and it is for getting madam Julietta with child.

Lucio. Believe me, this may be; he promised to meet me two hours since, and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose. [proclamation.

1 Gent. But most of all, agreeing with the Lucio. Away! let's go learn the truth of it.

[Exit Lucio and Gentlemen.

Mrs. Ov. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk.

Enter Clown.

How now! what's the news with you?

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Mrs. Ov. Well; what has he done?

Clo. A woman.

Mrs. Ov. But what's his offence?

Clo. Groping for trout in a peculiar river.

Mrs. Ov. What, is there a maid with child by him?

Clo. No; but there's a woman with maid by him. You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

In hand, and hope of action: but we do learn,
By those that know the very nerves of state,
His givings out were of an infinite distance
From his true-meant design. Upon his place,
And with full line of his authority,
Governs Lord Angelo; a man whose blood
Is very snow-broth; one who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense,
But doth rebate and blunt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast.
He (to give fear to use and liberty,
Which have, for long, run by the hideous law,
As nice by lions) hath pick'd out an act,
Under whose heavy sense your brother's life
Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it;
And follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example. All hope is gone,
Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer
To soften Angelo: and that's my pith
Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.

Isab. Doth he so seek his life?

Lucio. He's censur'd him Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath
A warrant for his execution.

Isab. Alas! what poor ability's in me
To do him good!

Lucio. Assay the power you have.

Isab. My power! alas, I doubt,—

Lucio. Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt. Go to Lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when maidens sue,
Men give like gods; but when they weep and
All their petitions are as freely theirs [kneel,
As they themselves would owe them.

Isab. I'll see what I can do.

Lucio. But speedily.

Isab. I will about it straight;
No longer staying but to give the mother
Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you:
Commend me to my brother: soon at night
I'll send him certain word of my success.

Lucio. I take my leave of you.

Isab. Good sir, adieu. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo, Escalus, a Justice, Provost, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ang. We must not make a scare-crow of the law,

Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch, and not their terror.

Escal. Ay, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little,
Than fall, and bruise to death. Alas! this gentleman,

Whom I would save, had a most noble father.
Let but your honour know,
(Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue,)
That, in the working of your own affections,

Had time coher'd with place, or I wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of your Could have attain'd th' effect of purpose,

Whether you had not, some time
Err'd in this point which now you
And pull'd the law upon you.

Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted,
Another thing to fall. I not deny,
The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May in the sworn twelve have a thief Guiltier than him they try. What made to justice,

That justice seizes: what know the
That thieves do pass on thieves?
pregnant,

The jewel that we find, we stoop and Because we see it; but what we do
We tread upon, and never think of it.

You may not so extenuate his offence
For I have had such faults; but rather
When I, that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine own judgment pattern out And nothing come in partial. Sir, he Escal. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the Prov. Here, if it like your honouring

Ang. See that he
Be executed by nine to-morrow morning;
Bring him his confessor, let him be
For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.

Escal. Well, heaven forgive him!
give us all!

Some rise by sin, and some by virtue
Some run from brakes of vice, and none;

And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clown, Officer, &c.

Elb. Come, bring them away. I good people in a common-weal, that thing but use their abuses in common;

I know no law: bring them away.

Ang. How now, sir! What's your and what's the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I poor duke's constable, and my name

I do lean upon justice, sir; and do here before your good honour two benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors! Well; what be are they? are they not malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I well what they are: but precise vill are, that I am sure of; and void of sanation in the world that good ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well: here
Ang. Go to: what quality are Elbow is your name? why dost speak, Elbow?

Cl. He cannot, sir; he's out at Ang. What are you, sir?

e, sir! a tapster, sir; parcel-bowed;
 serves a bad woman; whose house, sir,
 they say, plucked down in the suburbs;
 she professes a hot-house, which, I
 a very ill house too.

How know you that?

ly wife, sir, whom I detest before and your honour,—

How! thy wife! [honest woman,— y, sir; whom, I thank heaven, is an Dost thou detest her therefore?

say, sir, I will detest myself also, and she, that this house, if it be not a curse, it is a pity of her life, for it is a house.

How dost thou know that, consular, sir, by my wife; who, if she a woman cardinally given, might an accused in fornication, adultery, uncleanliness there.

By the woman's means I

“Ay, sir, by mistress Overdone’s means he spit in his face, so she dashed him.

But, if it please your honour, this is no

Prove it before these varlets here, thou ble man; prove it.

[To Angelo.] Do you hear how I Sir, she came in, great with child, and (saying your honour's reverence) for prunes, sir;—we had but two in the which at that very distant time stood ere, in a fruit dish, a dish of some age;—your honours have seen and they are not China dishes, but ver-dishes.—

— Go to, go to: no matter for the dish. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are in the right;—but to the point. As mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with a great belly'd, and longing, and for prunes; and having but two in the house, I said, master Froth here, this evening having eaten the rest, as I said, and, for paying for them very honestly,—for I know, master Froth, I could not give my conscience again.—

No, indeed,

Very well;—you being then, if you liked, numbered, cracking the stones of the four corners.—

h. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Why, very well;—I telling you then, remembered, that such a one, and one, were past cure of the thing you unless they kept very good diet, as All this is true.

Why, very well then.

What was done to her.

Sir, your honour cannot come to the

16. No, sir, nor I mean it not. [S

Cla. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave. And, I beseech you, look into master Froth here, sir; a man of four-score pound a year; whose father died at Hallowmas:—was't not at Hallowmas, master Froth. All-hallownd eve. [Froth—]

Clo. Why, very well; I hope here be truths. He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir;—'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit. Have you not?

Froth. I have no; because it is an open room, and good for winter. [trials]

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia.

When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave,
And leave you to the hearing of the cause:
Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Now, sir, come on; what was done to Elbow's wife, once more? Over once.

Elb. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me. [her

Clo. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentle man's face.—Good master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose.—Doll

Escal. Ay, sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.
Escal. Well, I do so. [face
Clo. Doth your honour see any harm in his Escal. Why no.

Clo. I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him. Good, then:

his face be the worst thing about him, how could master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escal. He's in the right,—Constable, what say you to it?

E/b. First, an it like you, the house is respected house; next, this is a respected fe

low; and his mistress is a respected woman.
 Clo. By this hand, sir, his wife is a mo-respected person than any of us all.

varlet. The time is yet to come that she will be ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Q. Clo, Sir, she was respected with him, before if he married with her.

Elb. Marry, I thank your good worship for it. What let your worship's pleasure I shall do with this wicked calf?

Escal. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou knowest what they are.

Elb. Marry, I thank your worship for it.—Thou seest, thou wicked varlet now, what's come upon thee; thou art to continue now, thou varlet; thou art to continue.

Escal. Where were you born, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, sir.

Escal. Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

Froth. Yes, an't please you, sir. [Of, sir?]

Escal. So.—[To Clown.] What trade are you?

Clo. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Escal. Your mistress' name?

Clo. Mistress Overdone.

Escal. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir; Overdone by the last.

Escal. Nine!—Come hither to me, master Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters: they will draw you, master Froth, and you will hang them. Get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship. For mine own part, I never come into any room in a taphouse, but I am drawn in.

Escal. Well, no more of it, master Froth: farewell. [Exit Froth.]—Come you hither to me, master tapster. What's your name, master tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Clo. Bum, sir.

Escal. Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you; so that, in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster. Are you not? come, tell me true: it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

Clo. If the law would allow it, sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Does your worship mean to geld and spay all the youth of the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to't then. If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escal. There are pretty orders beginning, I can tell you: it is but hanging and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads: if this law hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it after three years a bay:

if you live to see this come to pass.

Pompey told you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey. I requital of your prophecy, bawd, advise you, let me not find you before upon any complaint whatsoever; dwelling where you do: if I do, shall beat you to your tent, and your bed.

Clo. I thank your worship for it. I shall be done, sir, with the groaning very near her hour.

Escal. I thank your worship for it. I shall be done, sir, with the groaning very near her hour.

Clo. I thank your worship for it. I shall be done, sir, with the groaning very near her hour.

Escal. Come hither to me, master comes hither, master constable.

Elb. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by your ready office, you had continued in it.

Elb. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas, it hath been great you! They do you wrong to put upon't. Are there not men in it sufficient to serve it?

Elb. Faith, sir, few of any way matters; as they are chosen, they choose me for them; I do it for some money, and go through with all.

Escal. Look you bring me in the some six or seven, the most sufficient.

Elb. To your worship's house, sir.

Escal. To my house. Fare you.

What's o'clock, think you?

Just. Eleven, sir.

Escal. I pray you home to dinner.

Just. I humbly thank you.

Escal. It grieves me for the But there is no remedy.

Just. Lord Angelo is severe.

Escal. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

SCENE II.—Another Room in Angelo's Palace.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

Serv. He's hearing of a cause, my lord.

Prov. Pray you, do. [Exit Servant.]

His pleasure; may be he will relent too cold; if you should need a pin, I say.

Must he needs die?

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter?

Is it your will Claudio shall die?

Ang. Did I not tell thee, yet? hadst thou almost thou ask again?

Just. Lest I might be too rash; after execution, judgment hath sent o'er his doom.

Ang. Go to; let that be mine: you your office, or give up your place, you shall well be spared.

Just. I crave your honour's pardon.—I shall be done, sir, with the groaning very near her hour.

Ang. Dispose of her: that with speed.

Just. Here is the sister of the man comes access to you.

Ang. Hath he a sister?

Just. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous one, to be shortly of a sisterhood.

Ang. Well, let her be admitted.

Just. On the fornicatress be remov'd: or have needful, but not lavish, means; shall be order for it.

Enter Isabella and Lucio.

Isa. Save your honour! [Offering to retire.] Stay a little while.—[To Isa.] You're welcome: what's your will?

Luc. I am a woeful suitor to your honour, but your honour hear me.

Isa. Well; what's your suit?

Luc. There is a vice, that most I do abhor, which I must not plead, but that I must; which I must not plead, but that I am a twit will and will not.

Isa. I have a brother is condemn'd to die: I beseech you, let it be his fault, not my brother's.

Luc. [Aside.] Heaven give thee moving graces!

Isa. Condemn the fault, and not the actor's mercy.

Luc. Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no Come, sir.

Ang. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks on Pardon is still the nurse of second thoughts.

Isa. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him, [mercy.]

And neither heaven, nor man, grieve at the Ang. I will not do't.

Isa. But can you if you would? Ang. Look; what I will not, that I cannot do.

Isa. But might you do't, and do the If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse As mine is to him?

Ang. He's sentenc'd; 'tis too late. Isa. [Aside to Isa.] You are too cold. Isa. Too late! why, no; I, that do speak a word,

May call it back again. Well, believe this, No ceremony that to great ones 'longs, Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword, The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe, Become them with one half so good a grace As mercy does. If he had been as you, and you as he,

You would have slept like him; but he, like you, Would not have been so stern.

Ang. Pray you, be gone. Isa. I would to heaven I had your patience, And you were Isabel! should it then be thus? No; I would tell what 'twere to be a judge, And what a prisoner. [There's the vein.]

Lucio. [Aside to Isa.] Ay, touch him: Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law, And you but waste your words.

Isa. Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once; And he that might the vantage best have took, Found out the remedy. How would you be, If he, which is the top of judgment, should But judge you as you are? O! think on that; And mercy then will breathe within your lips, Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, fair maid; It is the law, not I, condemns your brother: Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son, It should be thus with him: he must die to-morrow. [Him, spare him!—]

Isa. To-morrow! O, that's sudden! Spare him; he's not prepar'd for death. Even for our kitchens [Heaven]

We kill the fowl of season: shall we serve With less respect than we do minister To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, bethink you.

Who is it that hath died for this offence? There's many have committed it.

Lucio. [Aside to Isa.] Ay, well said. Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:

Those many had not dared to do that evil, If the first, that did th' edict infringe, Had answer'd for his deed; now 'tis awake; Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet,

Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils (Either new, or by remissness new-conceiv'd, And so in progress to be hatch'd and born,) will

Are now to have no successive degrees,
But, ere they live, to end.

Isab. Yet show some pity.
Ang. I show it most of all when I show justice:

For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a dismiss'd offence would after gall;
And do him right, that, answering one foul wrong,

Lives not to act another. Be satisfied:
Your brother dies to-morrow: be content.

Isab. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,

And he that suffers. O! it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] That's well said.

Isab. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet;
For every petting, petty officer,
Would use his heaven for thunder,—
Nothing but thunder. Merciful heaven!
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt

Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle: but man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,—
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,

Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] O, to him, to him,
wench! he will relent:

His coming: I perceive't.
Prov. [Aside.] Pray heaven, she win him!

Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with Great men may jest with saints; 'tis wit in
But, in the less, foul profanation.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Thou'rt in the right, girl: more o' that.

Isab. That in the captain's but a choleric
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Art advis'd o' that?
more o'nt.

Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon Isab. Because authority, though it err like Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself, [others,
That skins the vice o' the top. Go to your bosom;

Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth
That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.

Ang. She speaks, and 'tis
Such sense that my sense breeds with it. Fare

Isab. Gentle my lord, turn back, [you well,
Ang. I will bethink me: come again to-morrow.

Isab. Hark how I'll bribe you: good my
Ang. How! bribe me!

Isab. Ay, with such gifts that share with you.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] You had else.

Isab. Not with fond shekels of Or stones, whose rates are either
As fancy values them; but with That shall be up at heaven, and Ere sun-rise,—prayers from
From fasting maids, whose minds
To nothing temporal.

Ang. Well; come to me Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Go to away!

Isab. Heaven keep your honour
Ang. [Aside.]

For I am that way going to tempt
Where prayers cross.

Isab. At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?

Ang. At any time
Isab. Save your honour!

[Exit Isabella, Lucio, and Ang. From thee; even from thy What's this, what's this! Is this mine!

The tempter or the tempted, who Not she; nor doth she tempt: but
That lying by the violet in the sun,

Do, as the carrion does, not as the sun,
Corrupt with virtuous season. Can That modesty may more betray our Than woman's lightness? Have ground enough,

Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary
And pitch our evils there? O, fie,
What dost thou, or what art thou?

Dost thou desire her foully for thy
That make her good? O, let her Thieves for their robbery have

When judges steal themselves. What love her,

That I desire to hear her speak
And feast upon her eyes? What
O cunning enemy, that, to catch a

With saints dost bait thy hook!
gerous

Is that temptation, that doth good To sin in loving virtue. Never strumpet,

With all her double vigour, art thou

Once stir my temper; but this vice Subdues me quite:—ever, till now,

When men were fond, I smil'd, and how.

SCENE III.—A Room in a Enter Duke, disguised as a Friar.

Provost.

Duke. Hail to you, provost, so are.

Prov. I am the provost. What Duke. Bound by my charity, and

I come to visit the afflicted spirits

in the prison. Do me the common right let me see them, and to make me know nature of their crimes, that I may minister them accordingly.

Prov. I would do more than that, if more le, here comes one,—a gentlewoman of

mine,
so, falling in the flaws of her own youth,

blister'd her report: she is with child;
he that got it, sentenc'd—a young man

Ere sun-rise,—prayers from
From fasting maids, whose minds
die for this.

Enter Juliet.
Juliet. When must he die?

Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.—
[Juliet] I have provided for you: stay a you shall be conducted. [wide, Juliet. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?

I do; and bear the shame most Juliet. I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience,

try your penitence, if it be sound,
hollowly put on.

Juliet. I'll gladly learn.
Prov. Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Juliet. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.

Prov. So then, it seems, your most offence mutually committed?

Juliet. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.

Prov. I do confess it, and repeat it, father.
Juliet. 'Tis meet so, daughter: but lest you do repent, [shame,— that the sin hath brought you to this which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not

heaven,

wing, we would not spare heav'n, as we
as we stand in fear,—

Juliet. I do repent me, as it is an evil, take the shame with joy.

Prov. There rest,
partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,

And feast upon her eyes? What I am going with instruction to him.

go with you! Benedicite! [Exit.
Juliet. Must die to-morrow! O injurious

law,
respite me a life, whose very comfort

is a dying horror!
Prov. 'Tis pity of him. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.
Enter Angelo.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I think and pray

several subjects. Heaven hath my empty lora on Isabel: heaven in my mouth,

I did but only chew his name;
in my heart the strong and swelling evil

my conception. The state, wherein I studied,

4

is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown sear'd and tedious; yea, my gravity,
Wherein—let no man hear me—I take pride,
Could I, with boot, change for an idle plume,
Which the air beats for vain. O place! O form!

How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wisest souls
To thy false seeming! Blood, thou art blood!
Let's write good angel on the devil's horn,
'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.
How now! who's there?

Serv. One Isabel, a sister,
Desires access to you.

Ang. Teach her the way. [Exit Servant.
O heavens!

Why does my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making both it unable for itself,

And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitness?

[swoons;
So play the foolish throngs with one that Come all to help him, and so stop the air

By which he should revive: and even so
The general, subject to a well-wish'd king,

Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness

[Jove
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught
Must needs appear offence.

Enter Isabella.
How now, fair maid!

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure.
Ang. That you might know it, would much better please me, [cannot live,

Than to demand what 'tis. Your brother

Isab. Even so,—Heaven keep your honour!
[Relining.

Ang. Yet may he live a while; and, it may
As long as you, or I: yet he must die. [be,

Isab. Under your sentence!
Ang. Yea.

[reproach, Isab. When, I beseech you! that in his longer or shorter, he may be so fitted,

That his soul sicken not. [good Ang. Ha! Fie, these filthy veils! It were as

To pardon him, that hath from nature stolen
A man already made, as to remit [image

Their saucy sweetness, that do coin heaven's
In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easy

Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put metal in restrained means,

To make a false one. [earth.
Isab. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in

Ang. Say you so? then I shall pose you quickly.

Which had you rather,—that the most just law
Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem

him,
Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness

As she that he hath stain'd?
Isab. Sir, believe this,

I had rather give my body than my soul.
Ang. I talk not of your soul. Our compell'd

Stand more for number than for account. [sins

Isab. How say you?
Ang. Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak

Against the thing I say. Answer to this:—
 I, now the voice of the recorded law,
 Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life:
 Might there not be a charity in sin,
 To save this brother's life?

Isab. Please you to do't,
 I'll take it as a peril to my soul,
 It is no sin at all, but charity.

Ang. Pleas'd you to do't, at peril of your
 Were equal poise of sin and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sin, Heaven let me bear it! you granting of my
 suit,

If that be sin, I'll make it my morn-prayer
 To have it added to the faults of mine,
 And nothing of your answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me.
 Your sense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,

Or seem so, craftily; and that's not good.
Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing
 good,

But graciously to know I am no better.
Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright.

When it doth tax itself; as these black masks
 Proclaim and ensnail beauty ten times louder
 Than beauty could, display'd.—But mark me;
 To be received plain, I'll speak more gross:
 Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.
Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears,
 Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.
Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,
 (as I subscribe not that, nor any other,
 But in the loss of question,) that you, his sister,
 Finding yourself desir'd of such a person,
 Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,

Could fetch your brother from the manacles
 Of the all-binding law; and that there were
 No earthly mean to save him, but that either
 You must lay down the treasures of your body
 To this suppos'd, or else to let him suffer;
 What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother, as
 That is, were I under the terms of death, Till impression of keen whips I'd wear as
 And strip myself to death, as to a bad rubric,
 That, longing, I've been sick for, ere I'd yield
 My body up to shame.

Ang. Then must
 Your brother die.

Isab. And 'twere the cheaper way:
 Rather it were a brother died at once,
 Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
 Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you, then, as cruel as the
 That you have slander'd so?

Isab. Ignomy in ransom, and free pardon,
 Are of two houses: lawful mercy is Nothing akin to foul redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make
 And rather prov'd the sliding of your
 A merriment, than a vice.

Isab. O, pardon me, my lord; if it
 To have what we would have, we what we mean!

I something do excuse the thing I do
 For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all frail.
Isab. Else let my lord
 If not a feodary, but only he,

Owe, and succeed thy weakness.
Ang. Nay, women are stronger

Isab. Ay, as the glasses where themselves;
 Which are as easy broke as they make Women!—Help heaven! men think mar

In profling by them. Nay, call me
 For we are soft as our complexion,
 And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think
 And from this testimony of your own (Blame, I suppose, we are made stronger

Than faults may shake our frames;
 I do arrest your words. Be that you
 That is, a woman; if you be more, you
 If you be one, (as you are well express'd
 By all external warrants,) show it me
 By putting on the destin'd livery.

Isab. I have no tongue but one's
 lord,
 Let me entreat you speak the
Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you.

Isab. My brother did love Juliet;
 That he shall die for't.

Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you Isab. I know, your virtue hath a
 Which seems a little fouler than it
 To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine
 My words express my purpose.

Isab. Ha! little honour to be murther'd
 And most pernicious purpose!— seeming!

I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for't!
 Sign me a present pardon for my brother
 Or with an outstretch'd throat I'll tell Aload what man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee?
 My unsold name, the austereness of My vouch against you, and my place?
 Will so your accusation outweigh
 That you shall stifle in your own report,
 And smell of calumny. I have begun
 And now I give my sensual race the Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite.
 Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes,
 That banish what they see for; red brother

By yielding up thy body to my will;
 Or else he must not only die the death

thy unkindness shall his death draw out lingering sufferance. Answer me to-morrow, by the affection that now guides me most,
 prove a tyrant to him. As for you, what you can, my horse o'erweighs your true.

Isab. To whom should I complain? Did I tell this,
 so would believe me? O perilous months!
 I bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
 her of condemnation or approval;
 ding the law make court'ay to their will;
 doing both right and wrong to th' appetite,
 follow as it draws. I'll to my brother:
 though he hath fallen by prompture of the
 blood,

hath he in him such a mind of honour,
 as, had he twenty heads to tender down
 twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up, two his sister should her body sleep
 such abhor'd pollution.

Isab. Live chaste, and, brother, die:
 n, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die:
 than our brother is our chastity.
 tell him yet of Angelo's request,
 fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest.

[Exit.]

Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
 And death unloads thee. Friend hast thou
 none;

For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire,
 The mere effusion of thy proper loins,
 Do curse the gout, serpigo, and the rheum,
 For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth nor age;

But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep,
 Dreaming on both; for all thy blessed youth
 Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms
 Of palsied old: and when thou art old and rich,

Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor
 To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this
 That bears the name of life? Yet in this life Lie hid more thousand deaths: yet death we
 That makes these odds all even.

[Exit.] I humbly thank you.
 To me to live, I find I seek to die;
 And, seeking death, find life: let it come on.

[Enter Isabella.] Isab. What ho! Peace here; grace and good company!

Prov. Who's there? come in: the wish deserves a welcome.

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.
Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.
Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Prov. And very welcome.—Look, signior;
Duke. Provost, a word with you.
Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring me to hear them speak, where
 I may be conceal'd.

[Exit Duke and Provost.]
Claud. Now, sister, what's the comfort?
Isab. Why

As all comforts are; most good, most good Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, [indeed;
 intends you for his swift ambassador,
 Where you shall be an everlasting leiger:
 Therefore, your best appointment make with
 To-morrow you set on.

Claud. Is there no remedy?
Isab. None, but such remedy, as, to save a
 To cleave a heart in twain.

Claud. But is there any?
Isab. Yes, brother, you may live:
 There is a devilish mercy in the judge,
 If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
 But suffer you till death.

Claud. Perpetual duration?
Isab. Ay, just; perpetual duration,—a restraint,

Though all the world's vastidity you had,
 To a determin'd scope.

Claud. But in what nature?
Isab. In such a one as (you consenting to't)
 Would bark your honour from that trunk you
 And leave you naked.

Claud. Let me know the point.
Isab. O! I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake,
 Lest thou a feverous life shouldst entertain,

And six or seven winters more respect,
Than a perpetual honour. Darest thou die?
The sense of death is most in apprehension;
And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies.

Claudio. Why give you me this shame?
Think you I can a resolution fetch
From flowery tenderness. If I must die,
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in my arms. [Father's grave]

Isab. There spake my brother: there my Did utter forth a voice! Yes, thou must die:
Thou art too noble to conserve a life [deputy—
In base appliances. This outward-sainted
Whose settled visage and deliberate word
Nips youth in the head, and follies doth enmesh
As falcon doth the fowl—is yet a devil;
His fifth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.

Claudio. The princely Angelo?
Isab. O, 'tis the cunning liver of hell,
The damned'st body to invest and cover
In princely guards! Dost thou think,
If I would yield him my virginity, [Claudio,— Thou mightst be freed.

Claudio. O heavens! It cannot be.
Isab. Yes, he would give't thee, from this rank offence,
So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhor to name,
Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Claudio. Thou shalt not do't.
Isab. O! were it but my life,
I'd throw it down for your deliverance
As frankly as a pin.

Claudio. Thanks, dear Isabel.
Isab. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-morrow.

Claudio. Yes.—Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the law by the nose,
When he would force it?—Sure, it is no sin;
Or of the deadly seven, it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least? [wise,
Claudio. If it were damnable, he being so Why would he for the momentary trick
Be perjurably fin'd?—O Isabel!

Isab. What says my brother?
Claudio. Death is a fearful thing.
Isab. And shamed life a hateful. [where;
Claudio. Ay, but to die, and go we know not
To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbed ice;
To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world; or to be worse than worst
Of those that lawless and uncertain thoughts
Imagine howling!—'tis too horrible!
The weariest and most loathed worldly life
That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment

Can lay on nature, is a paradise
To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alas, alas!
Claudio. Sweet sister,
What sin you do to save a brother's life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so far
That it becomes a virtue.

Isab. O you would be unlawfully born.
O faithless coward! O dishonest wretch!
Wilt thou be made a man out of my womb,
Is't not a kind of incest to take life
From thine own sister's shame? What should Heaven shield, my mother play'd the whore
For such a warped slip of wilderness?
Ne'er issu'd from his blood. Take my Die, perish! might but my bending Relieve thee from thy fate, it should I'll pray a thousand prayers for thee,
No word to save thee.

Claudio. Nay, hear me, Isabel.
Isab. Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade.
Mercy to thee would prove itself a sin.
'Tis best that thou diest quickly.

Claudio. O, hear me!
Re-enter Duke.
Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young Isab. What is your will?
Duke. Might you dispense with your I would by and by have some you: the satisfaction I would require wise your own benefit.

Isab. I have no superfluous words;
stay must be stolen out of other affairs will attend you a while.

Duke. [Aside to Claudio.] How overheard what hath passed between your sister. Angelo had never the corrupt her; only he hath made an her virtue, to practise his judgment disposition of natures: she, having of honour in her, hath made him that denial which he is most glad to receive confessor to Angelo, and I know true; therefore prepare yourself.
Do not satisfy your resolution with are fallible: to-morrow you must your knees, and make ready.

Claudio. Let me ask my sister part so out of love with life, that I will Duke. Hold you there: farewell.

Re-enter Provost.
Provost, a word with you.

Prov. What's your will, father?
Duke. That now you are come, you gone. Leave me a while with the mind promises with my habit no touch her by my company.

Prov. In good time.
Duke. The hand that hath made hath made you good: the goodness cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief ness: but grace, being the soul of

tion, shall keep the body of it ever fair.
assault that Angelo hath made to you,
and hath conveyed to my understanding;
but that frailty hath examples for his fall:
I should wonder at Angelo. How would
I do to content this substitute, and to save

Isab. I am now going to resolve him; I had my brother die by the law, than my son be unlawfully born. But O, how much the good duke deceived in Angelo! If ever return, and I can speak to him, I will open lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss; yet, the matter now stands, he will avoid your sation;—"he made trial of you only."
before, fasten your ear on my advising:
this love I have in doing good, a remedy counts itself. I do make myself believe, you may most uprightly do a poor lady a merited benefit; redeem your sister from the angry law; do no stain to your own gracious person; and much please absent duke, if peradventure he shall ever have hearing of this business.

Isab. Let me hear you speak further; I am spirit to do anything that appears not in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never feigns. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, sister of Frederick, the great soldier who married at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good she went with her name.

Duke. She should this Angelo have married;
alliance to her by oath, and the nuptial pointed: between which time of the con-sation, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that washed vessel the dowry of his sister. But how heavily this befall to the poor gentleman: there she lost a noble and renowned father, in his love toward her ever most kind natural; with him, the portion and snow fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, combine husband, this well-seeming elo.

Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her? Left her in her tears, and dried not of them with his comfort; swallowed his whole, pretending, in her, discoveries of honour: in few, bestow'd her on her own satisfaction, which she yet wears for his sake;
he, a marble to her tears, is washed with her, but remains not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death to take poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man
—But how out of this can she avail?

Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily make; and the cure of it not only saves your sister, but keeps you from dishonour in Isab. Show me how, good father, [doing it.

Duke. This fore-named maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection: his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point; only refer yourself to this advantage,—first, that your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience: this being granted in course, now follows all. We shall advise this wronged maid to stand up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense: and here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy sealed.

The maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this, as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends
the deceit for reproof. What think you of it?
Isab. The image of it gives me content already; and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up.
Haste you speedily to Angelo: if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to St.
Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana. At that place call upon me; and despatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort. Fare you well, good father. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Street before the Prison.
Enter Duke as a Friar; to him Elbow, and Officers, with Clown.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell man and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke. O heavens! what stuff is here?
Elb. 'Twas never merry world, since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worse allowed by order of law a farred gown to keep him warm; and furred with fox and lamb skins too, to signify, that craft, being richer than innocence, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way, sir.—Bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, sir?

Elb. Marry, sir, he hath offended the law;
and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir;
for we have found upon him, sir, a strange pickle-lock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fie, sirrah! a bawd, a wicked bawd!
The evil that thou callest to be done,
That is thy means to live. Do thou but think
What 'tis to cram a maw, or clothe a back,
From such a filthy vice: say to thyself,—
From their abominable and beastly touches

I drink, I eat, array myself, and live.
Canst thou believe thy living is a life,
So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.
Clo. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir;
but yet, sir, I would prove—

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin,
Thou wilt prove him.—Take him to prison, officer:
Correction and instruction must both work,
Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the deputy, sir; he has given him warning. The deputy cannot abide a whore-master; if he be a whore-monger, and comes before him, he were as good go a rattle on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would
From our faults, as faults from seeming, free!
Elb. His neck will come to your waist,—a cord, sir.

Clo. I spy comfort; I cry, Bail. Here's a gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey! What,
at the wheels of Caesar! Art thou led in triumph! What—is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it clutched? What reply? ha! What say'st thou to this tune, matter, and method?
Is't not drowned i' the last rain, ha! What sayest thou to't? In the world as it was, man?
Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words?
or how? The trick of it!

Duke. Still thus, and thus! still worse!

Lucio. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still, ha?

Clo. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub.

Lucio. Why, 'tis good; it is the right of it;
it must be so: ever your fresh whore, and your powdered bawd: an unhungged consequence; it must be so. Art going to prison, Pompey?

Clo. Yes, faith, sir.
Lucio. Why, 'tis not amiss, Pompey. Farewell. Go, say I sent thee thither. For debt, Pompey! or how!

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Lucio. Well, then, imprison him. If imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right: bawd is he, doubtless, and of antiquity, too; bawd-born.—Farewell, good Pompey:
commend me to the prison, Pompey. You will turn good husband, now, Pompey; you will keep the house.

Clo. I hope, sir, your good worship will be.

Lucio. No, indeed will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why, your nattle is the more.
Adieu, trusty Pompey.—Bless you, friar.

Duke. And you.

Lucio. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey,
Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Clo. You will not bail me, then, sir!

Lucio. Then, Pompey! nor news abroad, friar! What news!
Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Lucio. Go,—to kennel, Pompey!
[Exeunt Elbow, and Officers.]

What news, friar, of the duke?

Duke. I know none. Can you?

Lucio. Some say, he is with the Russa; other some, he is in Rome.

Duke. I know not where; but I would know where he is.

Lucio. It was a mad fantastical to steal from the state, and usurp he was never born to. Lord Angelo well in his absence; he puts transgression

Duke. He does well in't.

Lucio. A little more lenity to lead do no harm in him; something more that way, friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the great kludged; it is well allied; but possible to extirp it quite, friar, till drinking be put down. They say, was not made by man and woman,
downright way of creation: is it true?

Duke. How should he be made, Lucio. Some report, a sea-maid him; some, that he was begot be-stock-fishes. But it is certain, the makes water, his urine is congealed

Duke. I know to be true; and he is a generative; that's infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant, sir.

Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing in him, for the rebellion of a cold away the life of a man! Would the is absent have done this? Ere he haunted a man for the getting a hun-tards, he would have paid for the thousand: he had some feeling of he knew the service, and that insti-to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent detected for women; he was not in-Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived.

Duke. 'Tis not possible.

Lucio. Who? not the duke? yes, your gar of fifty; and his use was, to put in her clack-dish: the duke had him; he would be drunk too; that is form you.

Duke. You do him wrong, surely.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his fellow was the duke; and, I believe,
the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I prythee, might he Lucio. No,—pardon;—'tis a secret looked within the teeth and the lips;
I can let you understand,—the great
the subject held the duke to be wise.

Duke. Wise! why, no question but Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant weighing fellow.

uke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or siding: the very stream of his life, and the ness he hath helmed, must, upon a war-need, give him a better proclamation.
him be but festinated in his own being-forth, and he shall appear to the envious, tolar, a statesman, and a soldier. There-you speak unskillfully; or, if your know-be more, it is much darkened in your eye.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

uke. Love talks with better knowledge, knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.

uke. I can hardly believe that, since you do not what you speak. But, if ever the return, (as our prayers are he may,) let desire you to make your answer before —if it be honest you have spoke, you have age to maintain it: I am bound to call you; and, I pray you, your name?

Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio; well known to the duke.

uke. He shall know you better, sir, if I live to report you.

Lucio. I fear you not.

uke. O, you hope the duke will return no or you imagine me too unwhimsical an office. But, indeed, I can do you little : you'll forswear this again.

Lucio. I'll be hanged first: thou art deceived
o, friar. But no more of this. Canst thou if Claudio die to-morrow, or no?

uke. Why should he die, sir?

Lucio. Why, for filling a bottle with a tunand again: this ungentle agent will undo the province with continency; sparrows not build in his house-caves, because they are cheerful. The duke yet would have darkness darkly answered; he would never bring to light: would he were returned! Marry, Claudio is condemned for untrussing.

uke. Well, good friar; I prythee, pray for me.
Fridays. He's now past it; yet, and I to thee, he would mouth with a beggar,
th he smelt brown bread and garlic: say
I said so, Farewell.

Lucio. No might nor greatness in mortality ensures 'scape: back-wounding calumny whitest virtue strikes. What king so strong,

he the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, and Officers with Mrs. Overdone.

uke. Go; away with her to prison!

Mrs. O. Good my lord, be good to me;
honour is accounted a merciful man;
my lord.

uke. Double and treble admonition, forfeit in the same kind! This would mercy swear, and play the tyrant.

Prov. A bawd of eleven years' continuance,
may it please your honour.

Mrs. O. My lord, this is one Lucio's information against me. Mistress Kate Keep-down was with child by him in the duke's time; he promised her marriage: his child is a year and a quarter old, come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it myself; and see how he goes about to abuse me!

Escal. That fellow is a fellow of much license:—let him be called before us.—Away with her to prison!—Go to; no more words.

[Exeunt Officers with Mrs. Overdone.]

Prov. my brother Angelo will not be altered, Claudio must die to-morrow: let him be firmished with divines, and have all charitable preparation; if my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

Prov. So please you, this fear hath been with him, and advised him for the entertainment of death.

Escal. Good even, good father.

Duke. Bless and goodness on you!

Escal. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this country, though my chance is now

To use it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious order, late come from the See,
In special business from his Holiness.

Escal. What news abroad i' the world?

Duke. None, but there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it: novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking: there is scarce truth enough alive to make societies secure; but security enough to make fellowships accursed:—much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world. This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news.

I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke?

Escal. One that, above all other strifes, contended especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?

Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at anything which professed to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But leave we him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared. I am made to understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice; yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life; which I, by my good leisure, have discredited to him, and now is he resolved to die.

Escal. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have laboured for the poor gentleman to the extremest shore of my modesty; but my brother justice have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him, he is indeed—justice.

Duke. If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Escal. I am going to visit the prisoner. Fare you well. Duke. Peace be with you!

[Exeunt Escalus and Provost.]

He, who the sword of heaven will bear,
Should be as holy as severe;
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and virtue go;
More nor less to others paying,
Than by self-offences weighing.
Shame to him, whose cruel striking Kills for faults of his own liking!
Twice treble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice, and let his grow!
O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side!
How may likeness, made in crimes,
Making practice on the times,
To draw with idle spiders' strings
Most ponderous and substantial things!
Craft against vice I must apply,
With Angelo to-night shall lie
His old betrothed, but despis'd;
So disguise shall, by the disguis'd,
Pay with falsehood false exacting,
And perform an old contracting.

[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the moated Grange.
Mariana discovered sitting; a Boy singing.

SONG.

*Take, O, take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn:
But my kisses bring again,
Bring again;
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain,
Seal'd in vain.*

Mari. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away:
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.—
[Exit Boy.]

Enter Duke.

I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish
You had not found me here so musical;
Let me excuse me, and believe me so,—
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Duke. 'Tis good; though music oft hath such a charm
To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.—

I pray you, tell me, hath anybody inquired for me here to-day? much upon this promised here to meet.

Mari. You have not been inquired have sat here all day.

Duke. I do constantly believe time is come, even now. I shall forbearance a little; may be, I will you anon, for some advantage to you.

Mari. I am always bound to you.
Enter Isabella.

Duke. Very well met, and welcome.
What is the news from this good day?

Isab. He hath a garden circum-brick,

Whose western side is with a vineyard
And to that vineyard is a ploughed
That makes his opening with this
This other doth command a little Which from the vineyard to the
There have I made my promise on Middle of the night to call upon him
Duke. But shall you on your knowledge this way!

Isab. I have taken a due and wary
With whispering and most guilty
In action all of precept, he did show
The way twice o'er.

Duke. Are there no other Between you 'greed, concerning
ance?

Isab. No, none, but only a request
And that I have possess'd him my
Can be but brief: for I have made
I have a servant comes with me alone.
That stays upon me; whose persuasion,
I come about my brother.

Duke. 'Tis well. Do you call, sir?
I have not yet made known to Mariana.
A word of this.—What ho! within!

Re-enter Mariana.

I pray you, be acquainted with this
She comes to do you good.

Isab. I do desire Duke. Do you persuade yourself respect you?

Mari. Good friar, I know you do Duke. Take, then, this your com-
the hand,

Who hath a story ready for your ear,
I shall attend your leisure: but must
The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Will't please you [Exeunt Mariana and Duke.]

Duke. O place and greatness! I false eyes

Are stuck upon thee. Volumes of Run with these false and most contriv'd
Upon thy doings! thousand 'scape-
Make thee the father of their idle
And rack thee in their fancies!

Re-enter Mariana and Isabella.
Welcome! How

Isab. She'll take the enterprise
If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent,
my entreaty too.

Isab. Little have you to say,
on you depart from him, but, soft and low,
inquire now my brother,

Mari. Fear me not.

Duke. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at your husband on a pre-contract: full.
Join you thus together, 'tis no sin,
that the justice of your title to him
a flourish the deceit. Come, let us go:
corn's to reap, for yet our title's to sow.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Provost and Clown.

Prov. Come hither, sirrah. Can you cut man's head?

Clow. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can;
if he be a married man, he is his wife's and I can never cut off a woman's head.

Prov. Come, sir, leave me your statches, yield me a direct answer. To-morrow are to die Claudio and Barnardine.

Clow. In our prison a common executioner, in his office lacks a helper: if you will on you to assist him, it shall redeem you your gyves; if not, you shall have your time of imprisonment, and your deliver-with an unpittied whipping, for you have a notorious bawd.

Prov. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, out of mind; but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to resome instruction from my fellow-partner.

Clow. What ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson, there?

Enter Abhorson.

Prov. Do you call, sir?

Abhorson. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you in your execution. If you think it compound with him by the year, and let hide here with you; if not, use him for resent, and disdain him; he cannot plead mitigation with you; he hath been a bawd.

Prov. A bawd, sir! Fie upon him! he discredit our mystery.

Clow. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; a will turn the scale.

Prov. Pray, sir, by your good favour,—for a good favour you have, but that have a hanging look,—do you call, sir, occupation a mystery?

Clow. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Prov. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members occupation, using painting, do prove should be in hanging, if I should be
I cannot imagine.

Clow. Sir, it is a mystery.

Prov. Every true man's apparel fits your
If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough;

so, every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clow. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find, your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd,—he doth often ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow, four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade; follow.

Clow. I do desire to learn, sir; and, I hope,
if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me rare; for, truly, sir,
for your kindness I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio:
[Exeunt Clown and Abhorson.]

Enter Claudio.

Th' one has my pity; not a jot the other,
Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death: [row]

'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-mor-
Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?

Clow. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guilt-
When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones:
He will not wake.

Prov. Who can do good on him?

Well, go, prepare yourself. [Knocking within.]

But hark, what noise?—
Heaven give your spirits comfort!—[Exit

Claudio.] By and by!—
I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve,
For the most gentle Claudio.—

Enter Duke.

Duke. Welcome, father.

The best and wholesomest spirits of the night [of late]

Envelop you, good provost! Who call'd here?

Prov. None, since the curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabel?

Prov. No. They will, then, ere't be long.

Duke. What comfort is for Claudio?

Prov. There's some in hope.

Duke. It is a bitter deputy.

Prov. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd Even with the stroke and line of his great justice:

He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself, which he spurs on his power
To qualify in others: were he meal'd with that
Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous;
But this being so, he's just.—[Knocking within.]

Now are they come. [Exit Provost.]

This is a gentle provost: seldom, when
The steeld gaoler is the friend of men.—
[Knocking.]

How now! What noise! That spirit's possessed with haste,
That wounds th' insisting postern with these strokes.

He enters Provost, speaking to one at the door.

Prov. There he must stay until the officer Arden to let him in: he is call'd up.

Duke. Have you no countermend for him? he must die to-morrow! [Claudio yet.]

Prov. None, sir, none.

Duke. As near the dawning, provost, as it is, you shall hear more ere morning.

Prov. Happily, you something know; yet, I believe, there comes

No countermend; no such example have we: Besides, upon the very siege of justice, Lord Angelo hath to this public ear Profess'd the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

This is his lordship's man.

Duke. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mes. [Giving a paper.] My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this farther charge,—that you serve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstances. Good-morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.

Prov. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.]

Duke. [Aside.] This is his pardon, purchased by such sin

For which the pardoner himself is in. Hence hath offence his quick celerity.

When it is borne on high authority:

When vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended,

That for the fault's love is the offender

Now, sir, what news? [Friended.—

Prov. I told you: Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwonted putting on; methinks

strangely, for he hath not used it before.

Duke. Pray you, let's hear.

Prov. [Reads.]

"Whosoever you may hear to the contrary,

let Claudio be executed by four of the clock;

and, in the afternoon, Barnardine. For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duly performed; with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fast not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril."

What say you to this, sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine who is to be executed this afternoon?

Prov. A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred: one that is a prisoner nine years old.

Duke. How came it that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty, or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Prov. His friends still wrought reprieves for him: and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubted proof.

Duke. Is it now apparent? [Himself.]

Prov. Most manifest, and not denied by Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? How seems he to be touched?

Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken less, reckless, and fearless of what sent, or to come; insensible of pain, desperately mortal. Duke. He was Prov. He will hear none: he has had the liberty of the prison; and to escape hence, he would not: he times a day, if not many days since.

We have very oft awaked him, as him to execution, and showed him warrant for it: it hath not moved

Duke. More of him anon. There in your brow, provost, honesty and if I read it not truly, my ancient me; but, in the boldness of my own lay myself in hazard. Claudio, you have warrant to execute, is forfeit to the law than Angelo who tenced him. To make you understand a manifested effect, I pray but to spite; for the which you are to do present and a dangerous courtesy.

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Prov. Alack! how may I do it?

hour limited, and an express com-penalty, to deliver his head in to Angelo! I may make my case as cross this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine order you, if my instructions may be

Let this Barnardine be this morning and his head borne to Angelo.

Prov. Angelo hath seen them both discover the favour.

Duke. O, death's a great disguise may add to it. Shave the head, beard; and say it was the desire of

to be so bared before his death.

the course is common. If anything you upon this, more than thanks

fortune, by the saint whom I pray plead against it with my life.

Prov. Pardon me, good father against my oath.

Duke. Were you sworn to this?

Prov. To him, and to his substitute.

Duke. You will think you have offence, if the duke avouch the just dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in Duke. Not a resemblance, but a

Yet since I see you fearful, that coat, integrity, nor persuasion, can attempt you, I will go farther than to pluck all fears out of you. I here is the hand and seal of the know the character, I doubt not signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the

the duke: you shall anon over-see pleasure; where you shall find, in two days he will be here. This

Angelo knows not; for he this very day wrote letters of strange tenor; perchance, of Angelo's death; perchance, entering into a monastery; but, by chance, nothing of it is writ. Look, the unfolding star calls the shepherd. Put not yourself into moment how these things should be; all quitties are but easy when they are known.
Your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head! I will give him a present shroud, and bid him to a better place. Yet you are loose; but this shall absolutely resolve you.
Away; it is almost clear dawn. [Exeunt.]

Enter III.—Another Room in the Prison.

Enter Claudio.

I am as well acquainted here, as I was our house of profession: one would think me mistress Overdone's own house; for there be many of her old customers. First, a young master Rask; he's in for a company of brown paper and old ginger, nine-and seventeen pounds; of which he made marble ready money; marry, then ginger not much in request, for the old women all dead. Then is there here one master Pots, at the suit of master Threeplume for some four suits of peach-colour'd which now pines him a beggar. Then we young Dizzy, and young master vow, and master Copper-spur, and master Ladbury, the rapier and dagger-man, and Drop-hair that kill'd lusty Padding, and Forlright, the filiter, and brave master the great traveller, and wild Halfcan stabbed Pots, and, I think, forty more;
but down in our trade, and are now for old's sake.

Enter Abhorson.

Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Master Barnardine! you must rise and begeth master Barnardine.

What he! Barnardine!

Prov. [Within.] A pox o' your throats!

What noise there? What are you?

Your friend, sir; the hangman. You are so good, sir, to rise and be put to death. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away!

Prov. Tell him he must awake, and that

Pray, master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Go in to him, and fetch him out.

He is coming, sir, he is coming; I hear him rattle.

Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Very ready, sir.

Enter Barnardine.

How now, Abhorson! what's the

with you?

Truly, sir, I would desire you to do your prayers; for, look you, the axe comes.

Barnardine. You rogue, I have been drinking all night; I am not fitt'd for't.

Claudio. O, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hang'd betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Abhorson. Look you, sir; here comes your ghostly father: do we just now, think you?

Enter Duke, disguised as before.

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Barnardine. Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must; and therefore, I look forward on the journey you shall go.

Barnardine. I swear I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you,—

Barnardine. Not a word: if you have anything to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day.

Duke. Unto to live, or die. O, gravel
heart!

After him, fellows: bring him to the block.

[Exeunt Abhorson and Claudio.]

Enter Provost.

Prov. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner? [Death;]

Duke. A creature unprepared, unmeet for
And, to transport him in the mind he is,
Were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father,
There died this morning of a cruel fever

One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate,
A man of Claudio's years; his beard and head
Just of his colour. What if we do omit

This reprobate till he were well inclin'd;
And satisfy the deputy with the visage

Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio? [Vides!]

Duke. O, 'tis an accident that heaven pro-despatch it presently: the hour draws on

Preh'd by Angelo; see this be done,
And sent according to command, whilst I

Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Prov. This shall be done, good father, presently.

But Barnardine must die this afternoon:
And how shall we continue Claudio?

To save me from the danger that might come,
If he were known alive? [Holds;]

Duke. Let this be done;—put them in secret
Both Barnardine and Claudio; are twice

The sun hath made his journal greeting to
The under generation, you shall find

Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependant.

Duke. Quick, despatch, and send the head to Angelo. [Exit Provost.]

Now will I write letters to Angelo,—
The provost, he shall bear them,— whose contents

Shall witness to him I am near at home,
And that, by great injunctions, I am bound
To enter publicly: him I'll desire
To meet me at the consecrated fount,
A league below the city; and from thence,
By cold gradation, and weak-balance'd form,
We shall proceed with Angelo.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Here is the head; I'll carry it myself.
Duke. Convenient is it. Make a swift return;

For I would commune with you of such things,
That want no ear but yours.

Prov. I'll make all speed. [Exit.]

Isab. [Within.] Peace, ho, be here!

Duke. The tongue of Isabel. She's come to know

If yet her brother's pardon be come hither:
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heav'nly comforts of despair,
When it is least expected.

Enter Isabel.

Isab. Ho, by your leave,

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter. [Enter.]

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon?
Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabel, from
the world:

His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isab. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other:
Show your wisdom, daughter, in your close patience. [Eyes.]

Isab. O, I will to him, and pluck out his Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isab. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Isabel!
Injurious world! Most damned Angelo!

Duke. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a jot:

Forbear it therefore; give your cause to heaven.
Mark what I say, which you shall find
By every syllable a faithful verity:

The duke comes home to-morrow;—nay, dry
your eyes:

One of our convent, and his confessor,
Gives me this instance: already he hath carried Notice to Escalus and Angelo;

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates,
There to give up their power. If you can,
pace your wisdom

In that good path that I would wish it go;
And you shall have your bosom on this wretch,
Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart,
And general honour.

Isab. I am directed by you.

Duke. This letter, then, to friar Peter give;
'Tis that he sent me of the duke's return:

Say, by this token, I desire his company
At Mariana's house to-night. Her cause, and
yours,

I'll perfect him withal: and he shall bring you
Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo

Accuse him home and home. For, if I
I am combined by a sacred vow,
And shall be absent. Wend you with Command these frothing waters to
With a light heart: trust not my
If I pervert your course.—Who's that?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Friar, where is the provost?
Duke. Not far.

Lucio. O pretty Isabella, I am heart to see thine eyes so red: thou patient. I am fain to dine and sup and bran; I dare not for my belly; one fruitful meal would
But they say, the duke will be here
By my troth, Isabel, I loved thy the old fantastical duke of dark been at home, he had lived.

Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous holden to your reports; but the lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not well as I do: he's a better woman thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you'll answer this Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry: I'll go along
I can tell thee pretty tales of the Duke. You have told me too much already, sir, if they be true: if not were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?
Lucio. Yes, marry, did I: but I foreswear it; they would else have to the rotten medlar.

Duke. Sir, your company is honest. Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I'll go with lane's end: if bawdy talk offend have very little of it. Nay, friar, of butt; I shall stick.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Angelo's Palace.

Enter Angelo and Escalus.

Escalus. Every letter he hath writ vouched other.

Ang. In most uneven and distrustful
ner. His actions show much like a pray heaven his wisdom be not tam'd why meet him at the gates, and authorities there?

Escalus. I do not know.
Ang. And why should we proceed hour before his entering, that redress of injustice, they should petitions in the street?

Escalus. He shows his reason for have a despatch of complaints, and us from devices hereafter, which have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let claim'd:

SCENE V.—Fields without the Town.

Enter Duke, in his own habit, and Friar Peter.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me.
[Giving letters.]

provost knows our purpose, and our plot.
hold you ever to our special drift, ugh sometimes you do blench from this to that, [Pause.]

I tell him where I stay: give the like notice
Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus,
I bid them bring the trumpets to the gate;
send me Flavius first.

Peter. It shall be speeded well. [Exit.]

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste:

we, we will walk. There's other of our friends

greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly, I am loth:
ould say the truth; but to accuse him so,
is your part: yet I'm advis'd to do it;
says, to veil full purpose.

Mariana. Besides, he tells me, that if peradventure

peak against me on the adverse side, ould not think it strange; for 'tis a physic is bitter to sweet end.

Isab. I would, friar Peter—
O, peace! the friar is come.

Enter Friar Peter.

F. Peter. Come; I have found you out a stand most fit, [Duke.]

Where you may have such vantage on the He shall not pass you. Twice have the trumpets sounded;

The generous and gravest citizens
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is entering: therefore hence, away. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A public Place near the City Gate.

Mariana, veiled, Isabella, and Friar Peter, at a distance. Enter from one side, Duke, Varrius, Lords; from the other, Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Provost, Officers, and Citizens.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met:—
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see
you. [Royal grace!]

Ang. and Escal. Happy return be to your Duke. Many and hearty thankings to you both.

We have made inquiry of you; and we hear
Such goodness of your justice, that our soul
Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks,
Forerunning more requital.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.
Duke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it.

To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves, with characters of brass,
A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And rasure of oblivion. Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim Favours that keep within.—Come, Escalus;
You must walk by us on our other hand;—
And good supporters are you.

Friar Peter and Isabella come forward.

F. Peter. Now is your time: speak loud and kneel before him. [Regard!]

Isab. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your Upon a wrong'd, I'd fain have said, a maid!
O worthy prince, dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me in my true complaint,
And given me justice, justice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs; in what I by whom? Be brief;

Here is lord Angelo shall give you justice:
Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O worthy duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the devil:
Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak,
Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redress from you: hear me, O, hear me, here! [Firm:]

Ang. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not
She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of justice,—

These poor informal women are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member,
That sets them on. Let me have way, my lord,
To find this practice out.

Duke. Ay, with my heart;
And punish them unto your height of pleasure.

Thou foolish friar; and thou pernicious woman,
Compact with her that's gone, think'st thou thy oath,

Though they would swear down each particular
saint,
Were testimonies against his worth and credit,
That's seal'd in approbation!—You, lord
Escalus,

Sit with my cousin; lend him your kind pains
To find out this abuse, whence 'tis derived.—
There is another friar that set them on;
Let him be sent for.

[For he, indeed,
F. Peter. Would he were here, my lord!
Hath set the women on to this complaint.
Your provost knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go do it instantly.—[Exit Provost.
And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as seems you best,
In any chastisement: I for a while
Will leave you; but stir not you, till you have Determined upon these slanderers.

[well
Escal. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly.—
[Exit Duke.
Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

Lucio. Quoniam non facit monachum:
honest in nothing, but in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.

Escal. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him:
we shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Escal. [To an Attendant.] Call that same Isabel here once again: I would speak with her. [Exit Attendant.] Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I'll handle her.

Lucio. Not better than he, by her own re-Escal. Say you!

Lucio. Marry, sir, I think, if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess: perchance, publicly she'll be ashamed.

Escal. I will go darkly to work with her.

Lucio. That's the way; for women are light at midnight.

Re-enter Officers with Isabella, Duke, as a friar, and Provost.

Escal. [To Isab.] Come on, mistress: here's a gentleman denies all that you have said.

Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of; here, with the provost.

Escal. In very good time:—speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum.

Escal. Come, sir, did you set these women on to slander lord Angelo? they fessed you did.

Duke. How I know you where you were!

Duke. Respect to your great place
the devil

Be sometime honour'd for his Where is this duke? 'tis he should Look you speak justly.

Escal. The duke's in us; and we Come you to seek the lamb here of Good night to your redress. Is there

Then is your cause gone too.

Thus to retort your manifest approach,
And put your trial in the villain's

Which here you come to accuse.

Lucio. 'Tis in the rascal; this is in Escal. Why, thou unreverend hallow'd friar!

Is't not enough, thou hast suborn'd
To accuse this worthy man, but, in

And in the witness of his proper ear,
To call him villain! and then to

To the duke himself, to tax him justice!

Take him hence; to the rack will I Joint by joint, but we will know his

What! unjust!

Duke. Be not so hot; the duke
Dare no more stretch this finger of

Dare rack his own: his subject and
Nor here provincial. My business

Made me a looker-on here in Vienna
Where I have seen corruption boil and

Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for
But faults so countenanc'd, that

statutes
Stand like the forfeits in a barber's

As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state!
Ang. What can you vouch against

signior Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell us
Lucio. 'Tis he, my lord.

goodman bald-pate: do you know
Duke. I remember you, sir, by

of your voice: I met you at the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O, did you so? And do
member what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward,

then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change your
me, are you make that my report: you

spoke so of him; and much more, no
Lucio. O thou damnable fellow!

I pluck thee by the nose, for thy Duke. I protest, I love the duke

myself.

Ang. Hark how the villain was now, after his treasonable abuses.

Such a fellow is not to be talk'd Away with him to prison!—Where provost!—Away with him to prison!

its enough on him: let him speak no

—Away with those gillots too, and with or confederate companion!

[The Provost lays hands on the Duke.
Stay, sir; stop awhile.

What! resists he! Help him, Lucio.

Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir;
Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal!

Must be hooded, must you! show your visage, with a por to you; show your alting face, and be hanged an hour!

not off!

[Off the friar's hood, and discovers the Duke.

[a duke.—
Thou art the first knave that's made provost, let me bail these gentle three.— [Lucio. Speak not away, sir; for the trial and you ave a word anon.—Lay hold on him.

—This may prove worse than hanging.
[To Escalus.] What you have spoke,

pardon; sit you down:—
I borrow place of him.—[To Angelo.]

To the duke himself, to tax him
[Well you or worst, or wit, or impudence,

Take him hence; to the rack will I Joint by joint, but we will know his

What! unjust!

Duke. Be not so hot; the duke
Dare no more stretch this finger of

Dare rack his own: his subject and
Nor here provincial. My business

Made me a looker-on here in Vienna
Where I have seen corruption boil and

Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for
But faults so countenanc'd, that

statutes
Stand like the forfeits in a barber's

As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state!
Ang. What can you vouch against

signior Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell us
Lucio. 'Tis he, my lord.

goodman bald-pate: do you know
Duke. I remember you, sir, by

of your voice: I met you at the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O, did you so? And do
member what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was
a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward,

then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change your
me, are you make that my report: you

spoke so of him; and much more, no
Lucio. O thou damnable fellow!

I pluck thee by the nose, for thy Duke. I protest, I love the duke

myself.

Ang. Hark how the villain was
now, after his treasonable abuses.

Labouring to save his life, and would not rather

Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power,
Than let him so be lost. O most kind maid,

It was the swift celerity of his death,
Which I did think with slower foot came on,

That brain'd my purpose: but, peace be with
him!

That life is better life, past fearing death,
Than that which lives to fear. Make it your

So happy is your brother. [comfort,
Isab. I do, my lord.

Re-enter Angelo, Mariana, Friar Peter, and Provost.

Duke. For this new-married man approaching here,

Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well-defended honour, you must pardon

For Mariana's sake: but, as he adjudg'd your (Being criminal, in double violation (brother,

Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,)

The very mercy of the law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,

"An Angelo for Claudio, death for death!"
Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure; [Measure.

Like doth quit like, and Measure still for

Then, Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested;
Which, though thou wouldst deny, denies

these vantage;

We do condemn thee to the very block
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with

Away with him. [like haste.—
Mari. O, my most gracious lord,

I hope you will not mock me with a husband.
Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband:

Consenting to the safeguard of your honour,

I thought your marriage fit; else imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life,

And choke your good to come. For his possessions,

Although by confiscation they are ours,
We do instate and widow you withal,

To buy you a better husband.

Mari. O, my dear lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him: we are definitive.
Mari. [Kneeling.] Gentle my liege,—

Duke. You do but lose your labour.—
Away with him to death!—[To Lucio.] Now,

sir, to you. [take my part:
Mari. O, my good lord!—Sweet Isabel,

Lead me your knees, and, all my life to come,
I'll lend you all my life to do you service. [her;

Duke. Against all sense you do importune
Should she kneel down in mercy of this fact,

Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mari. Isabel,
Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me: [all.

Hold up your hands, say nothing,—I'll speak
They say best men are moulded out of faults;

And, for the most, become much more the better.

For being a little bad: so may my husband, O, Isabel! will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. [Kneeling.] Most bounteous sir, Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd, As if my brother liv'd. I partly think, A due sincerity govern'd his deeds, Till he did look on me: since it is so, Let him not die. My brother had but justice, In that he did the thing for which he died: For Angelo

His act did not o'ertake his bad intent; And must be buried but as an intent That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no intents but merely thoughts. [Subjects;]

Mari. Merely, my lord.

Duke. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I say.

I have bethought me of another fault.—Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded At an unusual hour?

Prov. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Prov. No, my good lord; it was by private

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your Give up your keys. [Office;]

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord: I thought it was a fault, but knew it not; Yet did repent me, after more advice: For testimony whereof, one in the prison, That should by private order else have died, I have reserv'd alive.

Duke. What's he?

Prov. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio.—

Go, fetch him hither; let me look upon him. [Exit Provost.]

Escal. I am sorry, one so learned and so wise As you, lord Angelo, have still appear'd, Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood, And lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

Ang. I am sorry that such sorrow I procure: And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart, That I crave death more willingly than mercy; 'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Re-enter Provost, with Barnardine, Claudio, muffled, and Juliet.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Prov. This, my lord.

Duke. There was a friar told me of this man,—

Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul, That apprehends no further than this world, And squar'st thy life according. Thou'rt condemn'd:

But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all; And pray thee, take this mercy to provide For better times to come.—Friar, advise him: I leave him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's that?

Prov. This is another prisoner. That should have died when Claudio head; As like almost to Claudio as him

Duke. [To Isabella.] If he be brother, for his sake

Is he pardon'd; and, for your love, Give me your hand, and say you will. He is my brother too;—but hither. By this, lord Angelo perceives his. Methinks I see a quick'ning in his. Well, Angelo, your evil quits you. Look that you love your wife; worth yours.—

I find an apt remission in myself. And yet here's one in place. [To Lucio.] You, sirrah, that know a fool, a coward,

One all of luxury, an ass, a madman, Wherein have I so deserv'd of you, That you extol me thus?

Lucio. Faith, my lord, I spoke according to the trick. If you will not, it, you may; but I had rather it, you I might be whipped.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang. Proclaim it, provost, round about. If any woman's wrong'd by this, let her. (As I have heard him swear, himself, Whom he begot with child,.) let her. And he shall marry her: the night. Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, marry me to a whore! Your highness even now, I made you a duke: good do not recompense me in making me

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt have her.

Thy slanders I forgive; and therefore Remit thy other forfeits.—Take him. And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, ing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Slandering a prince deserves. She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, to the store.—

Joy to you, Mariana!—love her, as I have confess'd her, and I know her. Thanks, good friend Escalus, for goodness;

There's more behind that is more good. Thanks, provost, for thy care and

We shall employ thee in a worthier. Forgive him, Angelo, that brought

The head of Ragozine for Claudio's. The offence pardons itself.—Dear

I have a motion much imports you. Wherefore if you'll a willing ear incline, What's mine is yours, and what is mine.—

So, bring us to our palace; where

What's yet behind, that's meet you know.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

of Ephesus.
Merchant of Syracuse. of Ephesus, } Twin Brothers, sons of Syracuse, } to Ageon and } Emilia. of Ephesus, } Twin Brothers, attend-
of Syracuse, } ants on the two Anti- } pholuses.
Merchant. Angelo, a Goldsmith.
 Merchant, friend to Antipholus of Syracuse.
 Pinch, a Schoolmaster and a Conjuror.
 Emilia, Wife to Ageon, an Abbess at Ephesus.
 Adriana, Wife to Antipholus of Ephesus.
 Luciana, her Sister.
 Luce, servant to Adriana.
 A Courtesan.
 Goaler, Officers, and other Attendants.
SCENE, — Ephesus.

ACT I.

—A Hall in the Duke's Palace.

Ageon, Goaler, Officers, and other Attendants.

Proceed, Sollans, to procure my fall,
doom of death and woes and all.
Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more.
Artful, to infringe our laws:

And discord which of late [Duke] in the rancorous outrage of your arts, our well-dealing countrymen,— ing gilders to redeem their lives, and his rigorous statutes with their
eds,

And pity from our threat'ning looks.

the mortal and intestine jars

aditious countrymen and us,

solemn synods been decreed,

the Syracusans and ourselves:

no traffic to our adverse towns:

ie, if any, born at Ephesus,

at Syracusan marts and fairs;

any Syracusan born

the bay of Ephesus, he dies,

and confiscate to the duke's dispose,

thousand marks be levied,

the penalty and to ransom him.

tance, valued at the highest rate,

mount unto a hundred marks:

ie, by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Yet this my comfort,—when your

ords are done,

end likewise with the evening sun.

Well, Syracusan, say, in brief, the use

ou departedst from thy native home,

what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.

A heavier task could not have been pos'd,

to speak my griefs unspeakable:

Yet, that the world may witness that my end

Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,

I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.

In Syracuse was I born; and wed

Unto a woman, happy but for me,

And by me too, had not our hap been bad.

With her I liv'd in joy: our wealth increas'd

By prosperous voyages I often made

To Epidamnium; till my factor's death,

And the great care of goods at random left,

Drew me from kind embracements of my spouse: [Duke]

From home my absence was not six months

Before herself (almost at fainting under

The pleasing punishment that women bear)

Had made provision for her following me,

And soon and safe arrived where I was.

There had she not been long, but she became

A joyful mother of two goodly sons; [Duke]

And, which was strange, the one so like the

As could not be distinguish'd but by names.

That very hour, and in the self-same inn,

A poor mean woman was delivered

Of such a burden, male twins, both alike.

Those,—for their parents were exceeding poor,—

I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.

My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,

Made daily motions for our home return;

Unwilling I agreed. Alas, too soon,

We came aboard;

A league from Epidamnium had we sail'd,

Before the always wind-obeying deep

Gave any tragic instance of our harm:

But longer did we not retain much hope;

For what obscured light the heavens did grant,

Did but convey unto our fearful minds

A doubtful warrant of immediate death;

Which, though myself would gladly have em-

brace'd,

Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,

Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
For'd me to seek delays for them and me,
And this it was,—for other means was none.
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us;
My wife, more careful for the latter-born,
Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,
Such as sea-faring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,
Fasten'd ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth as we thought.
At length, the sun, gazing upon the earth,
Dispers'd those vapours that offended us;
And, by the benefit of his wish'd light,
The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered
Two ships from far making main to us;
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:
But ere they came,—O, let me say no more!
Gather the sequel by that went before.

Duke. Nay, forward, old man; do not break off so;

For we may pity, though not pardon thee.

Age. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily term'd them merciless to us!
For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,

We were encounter'd by a mighty rock;
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst;
So that, in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul! seeming as burdened
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind;
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length, another ship had seiz'd on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave healthful welcome to their shipwreck'd
guests;

And would have left the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail,
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.

Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss;
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell and stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest for,

Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them, and thee, till now.

Age. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest
At eighteen years became inquisitive [care,
After his brother; and unportant'd me,
That his attendant (for his case was like,
Rapt of his brother, but retain'd his name),
Might bear him company in the quest of him;

Whom whilst I labour'd of a love
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.
Five summers have I spent in farthest
Roaming clean through the boundless Ocean, coasting homeward, came to me
Hopeless to find, yet loth to leave
Or that, or any place that harbours
But here must end the story of my
And happy were I in my timely Could all my travels warrant me that

Duke. Hopeless Ageon, whom have mark'd

To bear the extremity of dire mischance

Now, trust me, were it not against Against my crown, my oath, my duty,
Which princes, would they, may not My soul should sue as advocate for

But though thou art adjudged to be
And passed sentence may not be
But to our honour's great disparage
Yet will I favour thee in what I can

Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee
To seek thy life by beneficial help

Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the
And live; if no, then thou art damn'd

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

Ageon. I will, my lord.

Ageon. Hopeless, and helpless, do
But to procrastinate his lifeless end

and afterward consort you till bed-time:
My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself.

Ant. S. I commend you to your own content.

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own
content,

commends me to the thing I cannot get.

In the world am like a drop of water,
That in the ocean seeks another drop;

Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself:

I, to find a mother, and a brother,
Quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

How comes the almanack of my true date.—
[too late:] How chance thou art return'd so soon!

Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach'd clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell,

my mistress made it one upon my cheek:
The meat is so hot, because the meat is cold;

The meat is cold, because you come not home;
You come not home, because you have no stomach;

I have no stomach, having broke your fast;
We, that know what 'tis to fast and pray,

penitent for your default to-day.

Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir: tell me this,
I pray,

where have you left the money that I gave you yesterday last

Dro. E. O,—sir, since, that I had o' Wednesday last

pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper:—
saddler had it, sir; I kept it not.

Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now:
being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust

great a charge from thine own custody!

Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner:

my mistress come to you in post;
return, I shall be post indeed,

she will score your fault upon my pate.
thinks your maw, like mine, should be your clock,

I strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these jests are out of season;

serve them till a merrier hour than this.
There is the gold I gave in charge to thee!

Dro. E. To me, sir? why, you gave no gold
to me.

Ant. S. Come on, sir knave; have done your foolishness,

tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.
Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart.

come to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner:
my mistress and her sister stay for you.

Ant. S. Now, as I am a Christian, answer
me,

In what safe place you have bestow'd my money;

Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours,
That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd;

Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me? [my pate;

Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders;

But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those again,

Perchance you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks! what mistress, slave, hast thou?

Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress
at the Phoenix;

She that doth fast till you come home to dinner,
And prays that you will kiss her home to dinner.

Ant. S. What, wilt thou doubt me thus unto
my face,

Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave.

Dro. E. What mean you, sir? for God's sake, hold your hands!

Nay, as you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.
[Exit.

Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or other

The villain is over-raught of all my money.
They say this town is full of cozenage;

As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,
Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind,

Soul-killing witches that deform the body,
Disguis'd cheaters, prating mountebanks,

And many such like liberties of sin:
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.

I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave:
I greatly fear my money is not safe. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Antipholus's House.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Neither my husband, nor the slave
return'd,

That in such haste I sent to seek his master!
Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luc. Perhaps some merchant hath invited him, [dinner.

And from the mart he's somewhere gone to Good sister, let us dine, and never fret;

A man is master of his liberty:
Time is their master; and, when they see time,

They'll go or come: if so, be patient, sister.

Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more? [door.

Luc. Because their business still lies out o' Adr. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luc. O, know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled
so. [woe.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with There's nothing, situate under heaven's eye,

But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls,
Are their natures' subjects, and at their controls:
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas,
Indu'd with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords:
Then, let your will attend on their accords.

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.

Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage.
Adr. But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway?

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.
Adr. How, if your husband start some other where?

Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.
Adr. Patience unmov'd, no marvel though she pause;

They can be meek, that have no other cause.
A wretched soul, bruiz'd with adversity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burden'd with like weight of pain,
As much, or more, we should ourselves complain:

So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve
With urging helpless patience wouldst relieve
But, if thou live to see like right bereft, [me;
This fool-begg'd patience in thee will be left.
Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try.
Here comes your man; now is your husband nigh.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.
Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand?

Dro. E. Nay, he's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him?
Know'st thou his mind?

Dro. E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear: beshrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.

Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feel his meaning?

Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withal so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.

Adr. But say, I pray thee, is he coming home?
It seems, he hath great care to please his wife.

Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is
Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain! [horn-mad.

Dro. E. I mean not cuckold-mad;
But, sure, he is stark mad.

When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold:

"'Tis dinner-time," quoth I; "My gold,"
quoth he:

"Your meat doth burn," quoth I; "My gold,"
quoth he:

"Will you come home?" quoth I: "My gold,"
quoth he:

"Where is the thousand marks I gave thee," quoth I: "Is it burn'd?" quoth he:

"The pig," quoth I: "Is it burn'd?" quoth he:
quoth he:

"My mistress, sir," quoth I: "Hang up thy

I know not thy mistress; out on her!

Luc. Quoth who?

Dro. E. Quoth my master:
"I know," quoth he, "no house,

So that my errand, due unto my wife,
I thank him, I bear home upon my back.

For, in conclusion, he did beat me
And go back again, thou shalt know him home.

Dro. E. Go back again, and be
For God's sake, send some other man.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will be across.

Dro. E. And he will bless that Between you, I shall have a holy day.

Adr. Hence, prating peasant!
master home.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you?
That like a football you do spurn me?

You spurn me hence, and he will hither:

If I last in this service, you must leather.

Luc. Fie, how impatience leaveth face!

Adr. His company must do
What ruins are in me that can be cured.

Hath homely age th' alluring beauty
From my poor cheek? then, he hath

Are my discourses dull? barren my
If voluble and sharp discourse be

Unkindness blunts it more than
Do their gay vestments his affection

That's not my fault,—he's master of
What ruins are in me that can be cured.

By him not ruin'd? then is he the
Of my defacements. My decay'd face

A sunny look of his would soon
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the

And feeds from home: poor I am Luc. Self-harming jealousy!

hence.

Adr. Unfeeling fools can with
I know his eye doth homage other

Or else, what lets it but he would Sister, you know he promis'd me a

Would that alone, alone he would
So he would keep fair quarter with

I see, the jewel best enamell'd
Will lose his beauty; and though

That others touch, yet often touch
Wear gold: and no man that hath

By falsehood and corruption doth
Since that my beauty cannot please

I'll weep what's left away, and weep
Luc. How many fond fools jealousy!

SCENE II.—A public Place.
Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold I gave to Dromio
Safe at the Centaur: and the hooded

Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me
By computation and mine host's re-not speak with Dromio since at first him from the mart.—See, here he comes.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.
now, sir! Is your merry humour alter'd?

I love strokes, so jest with me again.
I know no Centaur? You receiv'd no gold?

My mistress sent to have me home to dinner:
I was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad,

thus so madly thou didst answer me?
S. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word? [an hour since.

S. Even now, even here, not half an hour since. I did not see you since you sent me

hence.

to the Centaur with the gold you gave
S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt.

I did at me of a mistress, and a dinner;

which I hope thou felt'st I was displeas'd.
S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein:

means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me. S. Yea, dost thou jest, and dost me in the teeth?

and that. [Beating him.
S. Hold, sir, for God's sake! now your jest is earnest:

what bargain do you give it me?

S. Because do I familiarly sometimes call you for my fool, and chat with you,

your madness will jest upon my love,
I make a common of my serious hours.

The sun shines let foolish gulls make sport,

when he hides his beams.
I will jest with me, know my aspect,

and when your demeanour to my looks,
I'll beat this method in your sconce.

S. Scence, call you it? so you would battering, I had rather have it a head:

use these blows long, I must get a for my head, and incoherence it too; or shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, why am I beaten?

S. Dost thou not know?
S. Nothing, sir, but that I am beaten.

S. Shall I tell you why?
S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for they

why hath a wherefore;
S. Why, drest,—for flouting me; and wherefore,—for urging it the second

time.

S. Was there ever any man thus in the why and the wherefore is neither nor, I thank you. [Rhyme nor reason?

S. Thank me, sir! for what?

S. Marry, sir, for this something that I've me for nothing.

S. I'll make you amend next, to give thing for something. But say, sir, is it time? [that I have.

S. No, sir: I think the meat wants in good time, sir; what's that?

Dro. S. Basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.

Dro. S. It is so, sir, I pray you eat none of it.

Ant. S. Your reason?
Dro. S. Last it make you choleric, and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time; there's a time for all things.

Dro. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Ant. S. By what rule, sir?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.

Ant. S. Let's hear it.

Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts; and what he hath scantied

men in hair, he hath given them in wit.
Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dro. S. Not a man of those, but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers, without wit.

Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost:

yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.
Ant. S. For what reason?

Dro. S. For two; and sound ones too.
Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

Dro. S. Sure ones, then.
Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing falsing.

Dro. S. Certain ones, then.
Ant. S. Name them.

Dro. S. The one, to save the money that he spends in trimming; the other, that at dinner

they should not drop in his porridge.
Ant. S. You would all this time have proved there is no time for all things.

Dro. S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.

Ant. S. But your reason was not substantial, why there is no time to recover.

Dro. S. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald, and therefore, to the world's end, will have bald followers.

Ant. S. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion.
But soft! who waxes us yonder?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.
Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange, and frown:

Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects;

I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou unurg'd wouldst

That never words were music to thine ear,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,

That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,

Unless I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd
to thee.

How comes it now, my husband, O! how
That thou art thus estranged from thyself?

Thyself I call it, being strange to me,
That, undividable, incorporate,

Am better than thy dear self's better part.

Ah, do not tear away thyself from me!

For know, my love, as easy mayest thou full

A drop of water in the breaking gulf,

And take unmingled thence that drop again,

Without addition or diminishing,

As take from me thyself, and not me too.

How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,

Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious,

And that this body, consecrate to thee,

By ruffian lust should be contaminate!

Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,

And hurl the name of husband in my face,

And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot-brow,

And from my false hand cut the wedding-ring

And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?

I know thou canst; and therefore, see thou do

I am possess'd with an adulterate-blot; [It.

My blood is mingled with the crime of lust:

For if we two be one, and thou play false,

I do digest the poison of thy flesh,

Being strumpeted by thy contagion. [bed;

Keep, then, fair league and truce with thy true

I live unstain'd, thou endishonoured.

Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you not:

In Ephesus I am but two hours old,

As strange unto your town as to your talk;

Who, every word by all my wit being scann'd,

Want wit in all one word to understand.

Luc. Fie, brother! how the world is chang'd

with you!

When were you wont to use my sister thus?

She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. S. By Dromio? Dro. S. By me?

Adr. By thee; and this thou didst return from him,—

That he did buffet thee, and, in his blows,

Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. S. Did you converse, sir, with this gentlewoman?

What is the course and drift of your compact?

Dro. S. I, sir! I never saw her till this time.

Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very words

Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

Dro. S. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. S. How can she thus, then, call us by Unless it be by inspiration? [our names,

Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravity

To counterfeit thus grossly with your slave,

Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!

Be it my wrong you are from me exempt,

But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.

Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:

Thou art an elm, my husband,—I a vine,

Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,

Makes me with thy strength to

If aught possess thee from me,

Uscurping ivy, briar, or idle moss,

Who, all for want of pruning,

Infect thy sap, and live on thy

Ant. S. To me she speaks!

for her theme:

What, was I married to her in

Or sleep I now, and think I

What error drives our eyes and

Until I know this sure uncertainty

I'll entertain the offer'd fallacy

Luc. Dromio, go bid the serv

Dro. S. O, for my heads! I sinner.

This is the fairy land: O spite

We talk with goblins, owls, and

If we obey them not, this will

They'll suck our breath, or pinch

blue.

Luc. Why pratest thou to Dromio, thou drone, thou snail,

so!

Dro. S. I am transform'd, m

Ant. S. I think thou art, in am I.

Dro. S. Nay, master, both

Ant. S. Thou hast thine own

Dro. S.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to ass.

Dro. S. 'Tis true; she rides

'Tis so, I am an ass; else it

But I should know her, as well

me.

Adr. Come, come; no longer

To put the finger in the eye and

Whilst man and master laugh

Come, sir, to dinner.—Dromio,

Husband, I'll dine above with

And shrieve you of a thousand

Sirrah, if any ask you for your

Say he dines forth, and let no

Come, sister.—Dromio, play the Ant. S. [Aside.] Am I in or in hell?

Sleeping or waking? mad or well

Known unto these, and to myself

I'll say as they say, and perseve

And in this mist at all adventur

Dro. S. Master, shall I be

Adr. Ay; and let none enter your pate.

Luc. Come, come, Antipholus

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Street.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus,

Ephesus, Angelo, and Bal

Ant. B. Good signior Angelo

excuse us all;

wish, when I keep not hours;
er'd with you at your shop
king of her earcanet,
orrow you will bring it home.
lain, that would face me down
the mart, and that I beat him, aim with a thousand marks in

I deny my wife and house.—
rd, thou, what didst thou mean [what I know;
what you will, sir, but I know at me at the mart, I have your
o show: [gave were ink, re parchment, and the blows you dwriting would tell you what I think thou art an ass. [think.

Marry, so it doth appear
I suffer, and the blows I bear.
ck, being kick'd; and, being at ass, [of an ass,
keep from my heels, and beware
ou are sad, signior Balthazar:
God, our cheer
my good-will, and your good me here. [your welcome dear, old your dainties cheap, sir, and O, signior Balthazar, either at flesh
h, [dainty dish,
ll of welcome makes scarce one d meat, sir, is common; that every d affords.

And welcome more common; for a nothing but words.
all cheer and great welcome makes ry feast.

Ay, to a niggardly host, and more ing guest.

h my cates be mean, take them in l part; [better heart.
er may you have, but not with my door is lock'd.—Go bid them is in. [Dian, Ginn!
Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gil-[Within.] Mome, malt-horse,
m, coxcomb, idiot, patch!
thee from the door, or sit down at hatch.

soujere for wenches, that thou call'st
such store, [the door.
is one too many! Go, get thee from What patch is made our porter?
master stays in the street.

Let him walk from whence he came,
he catch cold on's feet. [the door.
Who talks within there? ho! op'n Right, sir; I'll tell you when, an'
I'll tell me wherefore.

Wherefore? for my dinner; I have din'd to-day.
Nor to-day here you must not, come in when you may.

What art thou that keep'st me out
u the house I owe!

Dro. S. [Within.] The porter for this time,
sir; and my name is Dromio.

Dro. E. O villain! thou hast stolen both mine office and my name; [blame.
The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle
If thou hadst been Dromio to-day in my place, Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an ass.

Luce. [Within.] What a coil is there!
Dromio, who are those at the gate?

Dro. E. Let my master in, Luce.

Luce. Faith, no; he comes too late;
And so tell your master.

Dro. E. O Lord! I must laugh:—
Have at you with a proverb;—Shall I set in my staff?

Luce. Have at you with another: that's —When? can you tell?

Dro. S. [Within.] If thy name be called Luce,
—Luce, thou hast answer'd him well.

Ant. E. Do you hear, you minion! you'll let us in, I hope!

Luce. [Within.] I thought to have ask'd you.

Dro. S. [Within.] And you said no.

Dro. E. So, come, help!—well struck!
there was blow for blow.

Ant. E. Thon baggage, let me in.

Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?

Dro. E. Master, knock the door hard.

Luce. Let him knock till it ache.

Ant. E. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.

Luce. What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?

Adr. [Within.] Who is that at the door that keeps all this noise?

Dro. S. [Within.] By my troth your town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. E. Are you there, wife? you might have come before. [from the door.

Adr. Your wife, sir knave! go, get you

Dro. E. If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore.

Ang. Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome:
we would fain have either.

Bal. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master;
bid them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.

Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold: [bought and sold.

It would make a man mad as a buck to be so Ant. E. Go fetch me something: I'll break ope the gate. [break your knave's pate.

Dro. S. Break any breaking here, and I'll

Dro. E. A man may break a word with you,
sir; and words are but wind:

Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind. [out upon thee, hind!

Dro. S. It seems thou want'st breaking:

Dro. B. Here's too much "out upon thee!"
I pray thee, let me in.

Dro. S. Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin. [a crow.]

Ant. B. Well, I'll break in:—go borrow me Dro. S. A crow without feather,—master, mean you so? [out a feather:]

For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather. If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together. [iron crow.]

Ant. B. Go, get thee gone; fetch me an
Bal. Have patience, sir; O, let it not be so!

Herein you war against your reputation,
And draw within the compass of suspect

The unviolated honour of your wife. [wisdom,
Once this,—Your long experience of her

Her sober virtue, years, and modesty,
Plead on her part some causes to you unknown;

And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse
Why at this time the doors are made against

Be rul'd by me: depart in patience, [you.
And let us to the Tiger all to dinner,

And about evening come yourself alone
To know the reason of this strange restraint.

If by strong hand you offer to break in,
Now in the stirring passage of the day,

A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that supposed by the common rout,

Against your yet unguessed estimation,
That may with foul intrusion enter in,

And dwell upon your grave when you are dead:
For slander lives upon succession,

For ever housed, where it gets possession.
Ant. B. You have prevail'd: I will depart

in quiet,
And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry.

I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Pretty and witty; wild, and yet, too, gentle:

There will we dine. This woman that I mean,
My wife—but, I protest, without desert—

Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal:
To her will we to dinner.—Get you home,

And fetch the chain; by this, I know, 'tis made:
Bring it, I pray you, to the Porcupine;

For there's the house: that chain will I bestow
—Be it for nothing but to spite my wife—

Upon mine hostess there; good sir, make haste.
Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,

I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me.
Ang. I'll meet you at that place some hour

hence.
Ant. B. Do so. This jest shall cost me some expense. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Luciana and Antipholus of Syracuse.
Luc. And may it be that you have quite forgot

A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus,

Even in the spring of love, thy love-spring rot?
Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous?

If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then, for her wealth's sake, use her with more kindness.

Or, if you like elsewhere, do Muffle your false love with blindness:

Let not my sister read it in your

Be not thy tongue thy own Look sweet, speak fair, become

Apparell'd vice like virtue's look;
Bear a fair presence, though be tainted:

Teach sin the carriage of a

Be secret-false: what need she What simple thief brags of

'Tis double wrong to trust
And let her read it in thy

Shame hath a bastard issue, Ill deeds are doubled with

Alas, poor women! make us
Being compact of credit, that Though others have the sleeve;

We in your motion turn, and Then, gentle brother, get you

Comfort my sister, cheer her
'Tis holy sport to be a little

When the sweet breath of Ant. S. Sweet mistress,— is else, I know not,

Nor by what wonder you do

Less in your knowledge and show not

Than our earth's wonder; Teach me, dear creature, how to speak;

Lay open to my earthly

Smother'd in errors, fables, shadows,
The folded meaning of your

Against my soul's pure truth
To make it wander in a

Are you a god? would you create Transform me, then, and to

But if that I am I, then well
Your weeping sister is no

Nor to her bed no homage do
Far more, far more, to you

O, train me not, sweet
note,

To drown me in thy sister's Sing, siren, for thyself, and Spread o'er the silver waves

And as a bed I'll take them,

And, in that glorious supple
He gains by death, that bath

die:
Let love, being light, be drown'd

Luc. What! are you mad, or son so?

Ant. S. Not mad, but made Luc. It is a fault that springs

eye.
Ant. S. For gazing on your

Luc. Gaze where you should clear your sight.

Ant. S. As good to wink
look on night.

Why call you me love? call my sister
S. Thy sister's sister. [a.]

That's my sister. No;

self, mine own self's better part,
My clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart, my fortune, and my sweet hope's earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.

All this my sister is, or else should be.
S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I am thine.

If I love, and with thee lead my life;

not no husband yet, nor I no wife.
thy hand.

O, soft, sir! hold you still:
my sister, to get her good-will.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse, hastily.
S. Why, how now, Dromio! where hast thou so fast?

S. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromo? I your man? am I myself?

S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, art thyself. [and besides myself.

I am as you, I am a woman's man,

S. What woman's man? and how believe?

S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am a woman; one that claims me, one

as me, one that will have me.
S. What claim lays she to thee?

S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would not horse; and she would have me as not that, I being a beast, she would

; but that she, being a very beastly

lays claim to me.
What is she?

A very reverent body: ay, such a man may not speak of, without he reverence." I have but lean luck in th, and yet is she a wondrous fat

How dost thou mean,—a fat
S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and I know not what use to to, but to make a lamp of her, and her by her own light. I warrant, and the tallow in them, will burn a while; if she lives till doomsday,

a week longer than the whole world.

What complexion is she of?
Swart, like my shoe, but her face like so clean kept: for why, she a man may go over shoes in the

That's a fault that water will mend.
No, sir, 'tis in grain; Noah's flood

do it.
What's her name?

Nell, sir; but her name and three-that is, an ell and three quarters,— measure her from hip to hip.

Then she bears some breadth!

Dro. S. No longer from head to foot, than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe;

I could find out countries in her.
Ant. S. In what part of her body stands

Ireland? [It out by the bogs.
Dro. S. Marry, sir, in her buttocks: I found

Ant. S. Where Scotland?
Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness; hard in the palm of the hand.

Ant. S. Where France?

Dro. S. In her forehead; armed and reverted, making war against her hair.

Ant. S. Where England?
Dro. S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them; but I guess, it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.

Ant. S. Where Spain? [Not in her breath.

Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it Ant. S. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. S. O, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain, who sent whole armadas of caracks to be ballast at her nose. [lands?

Ant. S. Where stood Belgium, the Nether-

Dro. S. O, sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; call'd me Dromio; swore I was assured to her; told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that

I, amazed, ran from her as a witch:
And, I think if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel,

She had transform'd me to a curtail dog, and made me turn i' the wheel. [road:

Ant. S. Go lie thee presently, post to the

And if the wind blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this town to-night:

If any bark put forth, come to the mart,
Where I will walk till thou return to me.

If every one knows us, and we know none,
'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life,

So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.]

Ant. S. There's none but witches do inhabit
here;

And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence.
She that doth call me husband, even my soul

Doth for a wife abhor; but her fair sister,
Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace,

Of such enchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me traitor to myself:

But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angelo.
Ang. Master Antipholus,—

Ant. S. Ay, that's my name. [chain.
Ang. I know it well, sir. Lo, here is the

I thought to have ta'en you at the Porcupine:
The chain unfinish'd made me stay thus long.

Ant. S. What is your will that I shall do with this? [made it for you.]
Ang. What please yourself, sir: I have
Ant. S. Made it for me, sir! I bespoken it not. [you have.]
Ang. Not once, not twice, but twenty times
 Go home with it, and please your wife withal;
 And soon at supper-time I'll visit you,
 And then receive my money for the chain.

Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now,
 For fear you ne'er see chain nor money more.
Ang. You are a merry man, sir: fare you well.

Ant. S. What I should think of this, I cannot tell:
 But this I think, there's no man is so vain,
 That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain.
 I see, a man here needs not live by shifts,
 When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.
 I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay:
 If any ship put out, then straight away. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Merchant, Angelo, and an Officer.

Mer. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,
 And since I have not much importun'd you;
 Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
 To Persia, and want gilders for my voyage:
 Therefore, make present satisfaction,
 Or I'll attach you by this officer.

Ang. Even just the sum that I do owe to
 Is growing to me by Antipholus; [you,
 And, in the instant that I met with you,
 He had of me a chain: at five o'clock
 I shall receive the money for the same.
 Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house,
 I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.
Off. That labour may you save: see where he comes.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus and Dromio of Ephesus.

Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou
 And buy a rope's end: that I will bestow
 Among my wife and her confederates,
 For locking me out of my doors by day.
 But soft, I see the goldsmith. Get thee gone;
 Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year; I buy a rope. [Exit.]

Ant. E. A man is well help up that trusts
 to you;
 I promised your presence and the chain;
 But neither chain nor goldsmith came to me.
 Belike, you thought our love would last too long, [not.]
 If it were chain'd together, and therefore came Ang. Saving your merry humour, here's the note

How much your chain weighs carat,
 The fineness of the gold, and chain
 Which doth amount to three gold
 Than I stand debted to this gold
 I pray you, see him presently
 For he is bound to sea, and stay Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with money;
 Besides, I have some business
 Good signior, take the stranger
 And with you take the chain,
 Disburse the sum on the receipt Perchance I will be there as soon
Ang. Then, you will bring the yourself?
Ant. E. No; bear 't with you Ang. Well, sir, I will. Have about you!
Ant. E. An' if I have not,
 Or else you may return without Ang. Nay, come, I pray you the chain:
 Both wind and tide stay for this
 And I, to blame, have held him Ant. E. Good lord! you use to excuse

Your breach of promise to the
 I should have chid you for not
 But, like a shrew, you first beg Mer. The hour steals on; I despatch.
Ang. You hear how he importuneth Ant. E. Why, give it to my your money.
Ang. Come, come, you know Either send the chain, or send token.

Ant. E. Fie! now you run the Come, where's the chain! I pray see it.
Mer. My business cannot Good sir, say whether you'll answer
 If not, I'll leave him to the officer.
Ant. E. I answer you! what swer you!

Ang. The money that you owe Ant. E. I owe you none till chain.
Ang. You know I gave it you Ant. E. You gave me none:
 much to say so.
Ang. You wrong me more,
 Consider how it stands upon my
Mer. Well, officer, arrest him Off. I do;—and charge you name to obey me.

Ang. This touches me in reputation
 Either consent to pay this sum
 Or I attach you by this officer.
Ant. E. Consent to pay the Arrest me, foolish fellow, if
Ang. Here is thy fee; arrest
 I would not spare my brother's should scorn me so apparently.

 I do arrest you, sir: you hear the suit.
E. I do obey thee till I give thee bail.
 real, you shall buy this sport as dear,
 he metal in your shop will answer.
 Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus, notorious shame, I doubt it not.
Enter Dromio of Syracuse.
S. Master, there is a bark of Epidam-

nia
 says but till her owner comes aboard, on, sir, she bears away. Our freight-cargo, sir,
 convey'd aboard; and I have bought the balsamum, and aqua-vitæ.
 is in her trim: the merry wind [all air from land: they stay for naught at their owner, master, and yourself.
 How now! a madman! Why,
 you peevish shoop,
 of Epidamnium stays for me!
 A ship you sent me to, to hire waft-
 go. [for a rope;
 Thou drunken slave, I sent thee
 I these to what purpose, and what end.
 You sent me for a rope's end as me to the bay, sir, for a bark [soon;
 I will debate this matter at more
 leisure,
 with your ears to list me with more heed.
 ana, villain, hie thee straight:
 this key, and tell her, in the desk
 cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry,
 a purse of ducats; let her send it:
 I am arrested in the street,
 I shall bail me: hie thee, slave, begone,
 or, to prison till it come.
Merchant, Angelo, Officer, and Ant. E.

Exit.
*To Adriana! that is where we din'd, Demeasdel did claim me for her hus-
 and:*

so big, I hope, for me to compass,
 I must, although against my will,
 out must their masters' minds fulfil.

Exit.
 II.—A Room in the House of Anti-pholus of Ephesus.
Enter Adriana and Luciana.
 Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
 thou perceivest underly in his eye
 did plead in earnest, yes or no?
 in or red, or pale, or sad, or merrily?
 observation mad'st thou, in this case,
 art's meteors tilting in his face?
 first he denied you had in him no set.

Ant. E. This touches me in reputation
 Either consent to pay this sum
 Or I attach you by this officer.
Ant. E. Consent to pay the Arrest me, foolish fellow, if
Ang. Here is thy fee; arrest
 I would not spare my brother's

And true he swore, though yet for-when pleaded I for you.
 And what said he?

Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me. [thy love!
Adr. With what persuasion did he tempt
Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might move.

First, he did praise my beauty; then my speech.
Adr. Didst speak him fair?

Luc. Have patience, I beseech.
Adr. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still;
 My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.

He is deformed, crooked, old, and sere,
 ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapeless everywhere;
 Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind;
 Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.

Luc. Who would be jealous, then, of such
 No evil lost to wail'd when it is gone. [a one!
Adr. Ah, but I think him better than I say,
 And yet would herein others' eyes were worse.

Far from her nest the lapwing cries away:
 My heart prays for him, though my tongue
 do curse.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.
Dro. S. Huro, go; the desk, the purse!
 sweet, now, make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?
Dro. S. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well? [than hell.]

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar Italo, worse
 A devil in an everlasting garment hath him;
 One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;
 A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough;
 A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff;
 A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands [lands;
 The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow
 A bound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot well; [souls to hell.]

One that, before the judgment, carries poor
Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter; he is 'rested on the case. [whose suit.]

Adr. What, is he arrested? tell me at Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested well; [that can I tell.]

But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him,
 Will you send him, mistress, redemption,—the money in his desk?

Adr. Go fetch it, sister.—[Exit Luciana.]
 This I wonder at:

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt.
 Tell me, was he arrested on a band? [thing.]

Dro. S. Not on a band, but on a stronger
 A chain, a chain: do you not hear it ring?

Adr. What, the chain?

Dro. S. No, no, the bell. 'Tis time that I were gone; [strikes one.]

It was two ere I left him, and now the clock Adr. The hours come back! that did I never hear.

Dro. S. O yes; if any hour meet a sergeant,
 'a turns back for very fear.

Adr. As if Time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!

Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth, to season. [say, Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men That Time comes stealing on by night and day? If Time be in debt and theft, and a sergeant in the way, [day? Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a Re-enter Luciana.

Adr. Go, Dromio; there's the money, bear it straight;
And bring thy master home immediately.—
Come, sister: I am press'd down with conceit,— Conceit, my comfort and my injury.

SCENE III.—A public Place.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me,
As if I were their well-acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me; some invite me;
Some offer me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me commodities to buy:
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop, [me,
And shew'd me silks, that he had bought for
And therewithal took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me
What, have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd? [dost thou mean?]

Ant. S. What gold is that? What Adam?
Dro. S. Not that Adam that kept the paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calf's skin that was killed for the prodigal: he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your

Ant. S. I understand thee not. [liberty.

Dro. S. No! why, 'tis a plain case: he that want, like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a fob, and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durand; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace than a morris-pike.

Ant. S. What, thou meanest an officer?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band;
he that brings any man to answer it, that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, "God give you good rest!"

Ant. S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery.
Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we
be gone?

Dro. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since, that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hindered by the sergeant, to tarry for the holy Delay. Here are the angels that you sent for, to deliver you.

Ant. S. The fellow is distracted here we wander in illusion.
Some blessed power deliver us!

Enter a Courtesan.

Cour. Well met, well met,
I see, sir, you have found the
is that the chain you promised

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge me not!

Dro. S. Master, is this mistress
Ant. S. It is the devil.

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse, she's dam; and here she comes in light wench: and thereof

wenches say, "God damn much as to say, "God damn wench." It is written, they are angels of light: light is an angel fire will burn; ergo, light

will burn; ergo, light
Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you Will you go with me? we'll

here.
Dro. S. Master, if you do meat; so bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?
Dro. S. Marry, he must have that must eat with the devil.

Ant. S. Avoid thee, fiend! me of supping!

Thou art, as you are all, a snake;
I conjure thee to leave me, and dinner.

Cour. Give me the ring of mine
Or, for my diamond, the chain

And I'll be gone, sir, and not Dro. S. Some devils ask but one's nail,

A rush, a hair, a drop of blood,
A nut, a cherry-stone;

But she, more covetous, would Master, be wise! an' if you give The devil will shake her chain with it.

Cour. I pray you, sir, my
I hope you do not mean to cheat

Ant. S. A vaunt, thou witch!
let us go. [mistress.

Dro. S. "Fly pride," say [Exeunt Ant. S. and Dromio.]

Cour. Now, out of doubt,
Else would he never so demand
A ring he hath of mine worth
And for the same he promised
Both one and other he denied
The reason that I gather he is Besides this present instance
Is a mad tale he told to-day
Of his own doors being shut trance.

Belike, his wife, acquainted
On purpose shut the doors
My way is now, to his home
And tell his wife, that, being into my house, and took perforce away. This course I fittest choose;

My duce is too much to lose. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Street.
Antipholus of Ephesus and an Officer.

Ant. Fear me not, man; I will not break away;
these are I leave thee, so much money,
ant thee, as I am 'rested for,
is in a wayward mood to-day,
it not lightly trust the messenger:
should be attach'd in Ephesus,
'twill sound harshly in her ears.
comes my man; I think he brings the
money.

Dromio of Ephesus with a rope's end.
sir! have you that I sent you for?
Here's that, I warrant you, will pay you all.

But where's the money? [rope.
Why, sir, I gave the money for the Five hundred ducats, villain, for a [the rate.

I'll serve you, sir, five hundred
To what end did I bid thee his see home? [end am I return'd.

To a rope's end, sir; and to that
And to that end, sir, I will welcome [Beating him.

Good sir, be patient.
Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I generally.

Good now, hold thy tongue.
Nay, rather persuade him to hold
Then whoremong, senseless villain!

I would I were senseless, sir, that not feel your blows.

Thou art sensible in nothing but as is an ass.

I am an ass indeed; you may by my long ears. I have served him hour of my nativity to this instant, nothing at his hands for my service

When I am cold, he heats me
ing; when I am warm, he cools me ing: I am waked with it when I slept with it when I sit; driven out of it when I go from home; welcomed it when I return: nay, I hear it on then he hath lam'd me, I shall beg am door to door.

Come, go along; my wife is com-Luciana, the Courtesan, and Pinch, &c.

Mistress, respect him, respect or rather, to prophesy like the bawards the rope's end."

Will thou still talk? [Beats him.

How say you now? Is not your hus-and mad?

Is his civility confirms no less.—

Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer;
Confound him in his true sense again,
And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas, how fury and how sharp he looks!

Cour. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy!
Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear.

Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, housed within this man,

To yield possession to my holy prayers,
And to thy state of darkness like thee straight:
I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven!

Ant. E. Peace, doting wizard, peace! I am not mad.

Adr. O, that thou wert not, poor distressed Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your enchantments?

Did this companion with the saffron face
Revel and feast it at my house to-day,
Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house?

Adr. O husband, God doth know, you din'd
at home;

Where would you had remain'd until this time,
Free from these slanders and this open shame!

Ant. E. Din'd at home!—Thou villain, what say'st thou?

Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine
at home.

Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out?

Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me
there?

Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revild you Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?

Dro. E. Certes, she did; the kitchen-vestal Ant. E. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. E. In verity, you did;—my bones bear
That since have felt the vigour of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to soothe him in these contraries?

Pinch. It is no shame: the fellow finds his
And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.

Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas, I sent you money to redeem you,
By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.

Dro. E. Money by me! heart and goodwill you might;

But surely, master, not a rag of money.
Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?

Adr. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.
Luc. And I am witness with her that she did.

Dro. E. God and the rope-maker bear me
That I was sent for nothing but a rope!

Pinch. Mistress, both man and master is possess'd:

I know it by their pale and deadly looks:

They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.

Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?

Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.

Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Dissembling villain! thou speak'st false in both.

Ant. E. Dissembling harlot! thou art false And art confederate with a damned pack.

To make a loathsome object scorn of me: But with these nails I'll pluck out those false eyes.

That would behold in me this shameful sport.

Adr. O bind him, bind him! let him not come near me.

Pinch. More company! the fiend is strong

Enter Assistants.

Luc. Ah me, poor man, how pale and wan he looks!

[Pinch and Assistants bind Ant. E. and Dro. E.

Ant. E. What, will you murder me! Thou gaoler, thou,

I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them To make a rescue!

Off. Masters, let him go: He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinch. Go bind this man, for he is frantic too.

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish Hast thou delight to see a wretched man Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Off. He is my prisoner: if I let him go, The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee:

Bear me forthwith unto his creditor,

And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd Home to my house. O most unhappy day!

Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet!

Dro. E. Master, I am here entered in bond for you.

Ant. E. Out on thee, villain! wherefore

Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing! be Cry, the devil!

Luc. God help, poor souls, how idly do they talk!

Adr. Go bear him hence.—Sister, go you with me.—

[Exit Pinch and Assistants with Ant. E. and Dro. E.

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?

Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know him?

Adr. I know the man. What is the sum

Off. Two hundred ducats.

Adr. Say, how grows it due?

Off. Due for a chain your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but

Cour. When as your husband, all in rage,

Came to my house, and took

The ring I saw upon his finger.

Adr. It may be so, but I

Come, gaoler, bring me where

I long to know the truth thereof.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Luc. God, for thy money again.

Adr. And come with me

To have them bound again.

Off. [Exit Adriana, Luciana, and others.

Ant. S. I see, these wits

Dro. S. She, that would be

Ant. S. Come to the Court

stuff from thence:

I long that we were safe and

Dro. S. Faith, stay here will surely do us no harm:

us fair, give us gold: methinks

a gentle nation, that, but for mad flesh that claims marriage

find in my heart to stay here

Ant. S. I will not stay

Therefore away, to get our

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before an

Enter Merchant and

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that

But, I protest, he had the

Though most dishonestly he

Mer. How is the man estab-

city?

Ang. Of very reverend repu-

Of credit infinite, highly believ-

Second to none that lives here

His word might bear my weal

Mer. Speak softly: yonder walks.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ang. 'Tis so; and that he

Which he forswore most

Good sir, draw near to me, I

Signior Antipholus, I wonder

That you would put me to

And, not without some scandal

Yes, that you did, sir, and forswore too.

S. Who heard me to deny it or for-

These ears of mine, thou know'st, did hear thee.

Wretch! 'tis pity that thou liv'st

where any honest men resort.

S. Thou art a villain to impeach me to mine honour and mine honesty

these presently, if thou dar'st stand.

I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw.

Adriana, Luciana, Courtesan, and others.

Hold! hurt him not, for God's sake!

is mad.

at within him; take his sword away.

come too, and bear them to my house.

S. Run, master, run; for God's sake, take a house!

some priory:—in, or we are spoil'd.

Ant. S. and Dro. S. into the Abbey.

Enter the Abbess.

Be quiet, people. Wherefore throng

on hither?

To fetch my poor distracted husband

some in, that we may bind him fast,

or him home for his recovery.

I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

I am sorry now, that I did draw on

him.

How long hath this possession held

This week he hath been heavy, sour,

and

all different from the man he was;

I this afternoon, his passion break into extremity of rage.

Hath he not lost much wealth by reck at sea?

some dear friend? Hath not else his eye

his affection in unlawful love?

revelling much in youthful men,

ve their eyes the liberty of gazing.

of these sorrows is he subject to?

To none of these, except it be the last;

some love that draw him off from home.

You should for that have reprehended

Why, so I did.

[him.

Ay, but not rough enough.

As roughly as my modesty would let Haply, in private.

[him.

And in assemblies too.

Ay, but not enough.

It was the copy of our conference:

he slept not for my urging it;

and, he led not for my urging it;

it was the subject of my theme;

company, I often glanc'd at it:

I tell him it was vile and bad.

[mad:

And therefore came it that the man was from clamours of a jealous woman

more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing,

whereof comes it, that his head is light.

5

Thou say'st his meat was sauc'd with thy up-

Unquiet meals make ill digestions, [brailings:

Therewith the raging fire of fever bred;

And what's a fever but a fit of madness?

Thou say'st his sports were hinder'd by thy bravals:

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue,

But moody and dull melancholy,

Kinman to grim and comfortless despair;

And at her heels a huge infectious troop

Of pale distemp'ratures, and foes to life:

In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest

To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast:

The consequence is, then, thy jealous fits

Have scard thy husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly.

When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildly.

Why hear you these rebukes, and answer not?

Adr. She did betray me to my own reproof.

Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.

Abb. No; not a creature enters in my house.

Adr. Then, let your servants bring my husband forth.

Abb. Neither; he took this place for sanc-

And it shall privilege him from your hands

Till I have brought him to his wits again,

Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,

Diet his sickness; for it is my office,

And will have no attorney but myself;

And therefore let me have him home with me.

Abb. Be patient; for I will not let him stir

Till I have us'd the approved means I have,

With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,

To make of him a formal man again:

It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,

A charitable duty of my order:

Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.

Adr. I will not hence, and leave my husband here:

And ill it doth beseem your holiness

To separate the husband and the wife.

Abb. Be quiet, and depart: thou shalt not have him.

[Exit.

Luc. Complain unto the duke of this indignity.

[Exit.

Adr. Come, go; I will fall prostrate at his

And never rise until my tears and prayers

Have won his grace to come in person hither,

And take perforce my husband from the abbess.

Sec. Mer. By this, I think, the dial points at five:

Anon, I'm sure, the duke himself in person

Comes this way to the melancholy vale,

The place of death and sorry execution,

Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

Ang. Upon what cause?

Sec. Mer. To see a reverend Syracusan

Who put unluckily into this bay.

[Merchant.

Against the laws and statutes of this town,

Behaved publicly for his offence.

[his death.

Ang. See where they come: we will behold

Luc. Kneel to the duke before he pass the abbey.

Enter Duke attended; Alceon bare-headed; with the Headsman and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly, If any friend will pay the sum for him, He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Adr. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbess!

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady: It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.

Adr. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my husband,

Whom I made lord of me and all I had, At your important letters,—this ill day A most outrageous fit of madness took him; That desperately he hurried through the street,—

With him his bondman, all as mad as he,— Doing displeasure to the citizens

By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Rings, jewels, anything his rage did like.

Once did I get him bound, and sent him home, Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went,

That here and there his fury had committed. Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,

He broke from those that had the guard of him;

And with his mad attendant and himself, Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords,

Met us again, and, madly bent on us, Chas'd us away; till, raising of more aid,

We came again to bind them. Then they fled Into this abbey, whither we pursued them;

And here the abbess shuts the gates on us, And will not suffer us to fetch him out,

Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence. [maud]

Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my wars;

And I to thee engag'd a prince's word, When thou didst make him master of thy bed,

To do him all the grace and good I could. Go, some of you, knock at the abbey gate,

And bid the lady abbess come to me, I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O mistress, mistress! shift and save yourself!

My master and his man are both broke loose, Beaten the maids a-row, and bound the doctor, Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire;

And ever as it blaz'd they threw on him Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair. My master preaches patience to him, and the while

His man with scissars nicks him like a fool; And sure, unless you send some present help, Between them they will kill the conjurer.

Adr. Peace, fool! thy master are here,

And that is false thou dost report.

Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I have not breath'd almost, since

He cries for you, and vows, if he To scorch your face, and to disfigure

Hark, hark! I hear him, mistress!

Duke. Come, stand by me; I Guard with halberts!

Adr. Ah me, it is my husband! That he is borne about inviolable

Even now we hous'd him in the street, And now he's there, past thought of reason.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus and Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious grant me justice!

Even for the service that long since When I bestrid thee in the wars,

Deep scars to save thy life; even That then I lost for thee, now grant

Adr. Unless the fear of death me dote,

I see my son Antipholus, and I

Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, woman there!

She whom thou gav'st to me to be That hath abused and dishonour'd

Even in the strength and height of Beyond imagination is the wrong.

That she this day hath sham'd me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt just.

Ant. E. This day, great duke, you call While she with harlots feasted so Duke. A grievous fault.—Say'st thou so?

Adr. No, my good lord: not To-day did dine together. So

As this is false he burdens me with walls

Luc. Ne'er may I look on day, night,

But she tells to your highness and is false!

Ang. O perjur'd woman! Thou art forsworn:

In this the madman justly charged you

Ant. E. My liege, I am advised been Neither disturb'd with the effect of Nor heady-rash, provok'd with any he

Albeit my wrongs might make me think that

This woman lock'd me out the dinner:

That goldsmith there, were he not, He Could witness it, for he was with

Who parted with me to go fetch of he Promising to bring it to the Port. So

Where Balthazar and I did dine. As

Our dinner done, and he not come, grace

I went to seek him: in the street. W

And in his company, that gentle abbe

There did this perjur'd goldsmith

ay of him receiv'd the chain, he knows, I saw not: for the me with an officer, [which and sent my peasant home
 nents: he with none return'd.
 bespoke the officer
 on with me to my house, ye met sister, and a rabble more lerates. Along with them
 t one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd
 my, a mountebank, [villain, juggler, and a fortune-teller,
 low-ey'd, sharp-looking wretch,
 I man. This pernicious slave,
 ok on him as a conjurer;
 in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
 face, as 'twere, out-facing me,
 was possess'd. Then, altogether on me, bound me, bore me thence, ck and dankish vault at home
 e and my man, both bound to-
 ; [sunder,
 g with my teeth my bonds in freedom, and immediately to your grace; whom I beseech ample satisfaction
 ep shames and great indignities.
 lord, in truth, thus far I witness him, [out,
 ned not at home, but was lock'd
 t had he such a chain of thee, or [in here, had, my lord; and when he ran saw the chain about his neck.
 Beakles, I will be sworn these
 of mine
 confess you had the chain of him, rat forswore it on the mart:
 pon I drew my sword on you;
 ou fled into this abbey here,
 ce, I think, you are come by miracle.
 I never came within these abbey
 ;
 idst thou draw thy sword on me:
 y the chain, so help me heaven!
 false you burden me withal. [this!
 Why, what an intricate impeach is d all have drunk of Circe's cup.
 u hous'd him, here he would have
 ;
 mad, he would not plead so coldly:
 dined at home; the goldsmith here
 t saying. Sirrah, what say you?
 'Sir, he dined with her there, at the cupina, [that ring.
 e did; and from my finger snatch'd
 'Tis true, my liege; this ring I had [here!
 Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey
 e sure, my liege, as I do see your ce.
 Why, this is strange.—Go call the oesa hither, [Exit an Attendant.

I think you are all mated, or stark mad.
Ege. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a word:
 Haply, I see a friend will save my life,
 And pay the sum that may deliver me. [wilt.
Duke. Speak freely, Syracusan, what thou Ege. Is not your name, sir, called Anti-pholus?
 And is not that your bondman Dromio?
Dro. E. Within this hour I was his bond-man, sir;
 But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords:
 Now am I Dromio, and his man, unbound.
Ege. I am sure you both of you remember me. [you;
Dro. E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by
 For lately we were bound, as you are now.
 You are not Pinch's patient, are you, sir?
Ege. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.
Ant. E. I never saw you in my life, till now.
Ege. O, grief hath chang'd me, since you saw me last;
 And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand,
 Have written strange defeatures in my face:
 But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
Ant. E. Neither.
Ege. Dromio, nor thou?
Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.
Ege. I am sure thou dost.
Dro. E. Ay, sir; but I am sure I do not;
 and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.
Ege. Not know my voice? O, time's extremity!
 Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor
 tongue
 In seven short years, that here my only son
 Knows not my feeble key of usum'd cares?
 Though now this grain'd face of mine be hid
 In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
 And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
 Yet hath my night of life some memory,
 My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left,
 My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
 All these old witnesses—I cannot err—
 Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.
Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life.
Ege. But seven years since, in Syracuse,
 boy,
 Thou know'st we parted: but perhaps, my son,
 Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.
Ant. E. The duke, and all that know me in the city,
 Can witness with me that it is not so:
 I ne'er saw Syracuse in my life.
Duke. I tell thee, Syracusan, twenty years
 Have I been patron to Antipholus,
 During which time he ne'er saw Syracuse.
 I see, thy age and dangers make thee dote.
Re-enter Antipholus of Syracuse and Dromio of Syracuse.
Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd. [All gather to see him.

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me!
[other]
Duke. One of these men is Genius to the And so of these; which is the natural man, And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?
Dro. S. I, sir, am Dromio: command I away.
Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio: pray let me Ant. S. Aegon, art thou not? or else his ghost?
[him here]
Dro. S. O, my old master! who hath bound
Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his And gain a husband by his liberty. [bonds]
Speak, old Aegon, if thou be'st the man That hadst a wife once called Emilia,
That bore thee at a burden two fair sons: O, if thou be'st the same Aegon, speak,
And speak unto the same Emilia!
Ege. If I dream not, thou art Emilia:
If thou art she, tell me where is that son That floated with thee on the fatal raft?
Abb. By men of Epidamnus, he and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up; But by and by, rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my son from them, And me they left with those of Epidamnus.
What then became of them, I cannot tell; I, to this fortune that you see me in. [right:]
Duke. Why, here begins his morning story
These two Antipholuses, these two so like, And these two Dromios, one in semblance,— Besides her urging of her wreck at sea;— These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together;— Antipholus, thou can'st from Corinth first!
Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which. [gracious lord,—]
Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most
Dro. E. And I with him. [famous warrior, Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me Ant. S. I, gentle mistress. [to-day]
Adr. And are not you my husband?
Ant. E. No; I say nay to that. [so]
Ant. S. And so do I; yet did she call me
And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here, Did call me brother.—What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good; If this be not a dream I see and hear. [of me]
Aug. That is the chain, sir, which you had Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.
Ant. E. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.
Aug. I think I did, sir; I deny it not.

Adr. I sent you money, sir, to
By Dromio; but I think he brought Dro. E. No, none by me.
Ant. S. This purse of ducats
And Dromio, my man, did bring to me I see, we still did meet each other
And I was t'en for him, and he for me And thereupon these Errors are Ant. E. These ducats pawn I
Duke. It shall not need; thy life.
Cour. Sir, I must have that
Ant. E. There, take it; and for my good cheer.
Abb. Renowned duke, vouchsafe
To go with us into the abbey here And hear at large discoursed all our
And all that are assembled in this That by this sympathized one day
Have suffer'd wrong, go, keep na And we shall make full satisfaction
Thirty-three years have I but gone Of you, my sons; nor, till this My heavy burdens are delivered The duke, my husband, and my
And you the calendars of their Go to a gossip's feast, and go with
After so long grief, such nativity Duke. With all my heart; I'll [Exeunt Duke, Abbess, Angelo, and Merchant, Angelo, and Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your shipboard?
Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff
Dro. S. Your goods that lay the Centaur. [in]
Ant. S. He speaks to me.—
Come, go with us; we'll look to Embrace thy brother there; rejoice [Exeunt Ant. S. and Ant. E.] Dro. S. There is a fat friend at house,
That kitchen'd me for you to-day She now shall be my sister, not Dro. E. Methinks you are not not my brother:
I see by you I am a sweet-faced Will you walk in to see their Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are not
Dro. E. That's a question; try it!
Dro. S. We'll draw cuts for Dro. E. Nay, then, thus:
We came into the world like And now let's go hand in hand, another.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Don Pedro, Prince of Arragon.
 Claudio, his bastard Brother.
 Leonato, a young Lord of Florence.
 Benedick, a young Gentleman of Padua.
 Governor of Messina.
 Don John, his Brother.
 attendant on Don Pedro.
 followers of Don John.
 Dogberry, } two foolish Officers.
 Verges, }
 Friar.
 A Sexton.
 A Boy.
 Hero, daughter to Leonato.
 Beatrice, niece to Leonato.
 Margaret, } Gentlewomen attending on Hero.
 Ursula, }
 Messengers, Watch, Attendants, &c.

SCENE, — Messina.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Grounds adjoining Leonato's House.

Leonato, Hero, and Beatrice, with a Messenger.

I learn in this letter, that Don Pedro comes this night to Messina.

He is very near by this: he was not long off when I left him.

How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

But few of any sort, and none of name.

A victory is twice itself, when the conqueror brings home full numbers. I find that Don Pedro hath bestowed much on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Much deserved on his part, and equally rewarded by Don Pedro. He hath borne beyond the promise of his age; doing, more of a lamb, the feats of a lion: he is indeed, better bettered expectation, than he hath an uncle here in Messina.

I have already delivered him letters, and he appears much joy in him; even so that joy could not show itself modest without a badge of bitterness.

Did he break out into tears?

In great measure.

A kind overflow of kindness: there is no truer than those that are so full of joy at weeping!

I pray you is signior Montanto really known none of that name, lady?

None such in the army of any sort.

What is he that you ask for, niece?

Hero. My cousin means signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he is returned; and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight; and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt.—I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax signior Benedick too much; but he'll be met with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it: he is a very valiant trencherman; he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier, too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady;—but what is he to a lord?

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuffed man: but for the stuffing—Well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece; there is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Benedick and her; they never meet, but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that! In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man governed with one: so that if he hath wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature.—Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is't possible?

Beat. Very easily possible; he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block. [Your books.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in Beat. No; an' he were, I would burn my study. But I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease; he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will ne'er run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Claudio, Benedick, and Balthazar.

D. Pedro. Good signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace; for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes its leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly.—I think this is your daughter.

[See]

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me Bene. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then you were a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself.—Be happy, lady; for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedick: nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turn-coat.—But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart; for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women: they would also have been troubled with a pernicious suitors. I thank God and your honour for that: I am of your humour for that: I would I might hear my dog bark at a crow, that I love me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship's mind! so some gentleman or other shall have a predestinate scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not murther.

Bene. Well, you are a rare paragon.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is almost as sweet as the last time you said so.

Bene. I would my horse had your tongue, and so good a keeper your way, o' God's name!

Beat. You always end with a jest.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of it:—signior Claudio, and signior Benedick, dear friend Leonato hath invited us.

Leon. Tell him we shall stay here at the house, and he heartily prays some occasion may be found to detain us longer: I dare swear he is not in your grace's heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, be forsworn.—Let me bid you be reconciled to the brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not a word, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace, let us together.

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato.

[Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.]

Benedick. Didst thou not tell me, signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not; but I noted her.

Beat. Is she not a modest woman?

Bene. Do you question me, woman?

Beat. No, for my simple reason.

Bene. Or would you have me speak as being a professed tyrant to the sex?

Beat. No; I pray thee, speak your judgment.

Bene. Why, I' faith, methinks for a high praise, too brown for and too little for a great praise.

Beat. Commendation I can afford her.

Bene. She other than she is, she were and being no other but as she like her.

Beat. Thou thinkest I am in thee, tell me truly how thou lik'st her.

Bene. Would you buy her, the after her?

Beat. Can the world buy her?

Bene. Yes, and a case to put speak you this with a sad brow.

Beat. Play the floating jack; to tell me good hure-finder, and Vulcan a good hure-finder.

Bene. Come, in what key shall I sing to you in the song?

Beat. In mine eye she is the that ever I looked on.

no such matter: there's her cousin, an' not possessed with a fury, exceeds much in beauty, as the first of May doth at of December. But I hope, you have not to turn husband, have you?

Bene. I would scarce trust myself, though sworn to the contrary, if Hero would be is't come to this, I' faith! Hath not one man, but he will wear his cap

Shall I never see a bachelor

Go to, I' faith; an' thou thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear out of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look, Hero is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

Pedro. What secret hath held you here, you follow not to Leonato's? [me to tell.

Bene. I would your grace would constrain me to hear, Count Claudio: I can be as a dumb man, I would have you think not on my allegiance,—mark you this, allegiance,—He is in love. With who?

That is your grace's part.—Mark, how this answer is;—with Hero, Leonato's daughter.

Beat. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: it is not 'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Beat. If my passion change not shortly, I would it should be otherwise.

Bene. Amen, if you love her; for the very well worthy.

Beat. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord.

Bene. By my troth, I speak my thought.

Beat. And in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And by my two faiths and troths, my Beat. That I love her, I feel.

Bene. That she is worthy, I know.

Beat. That I neither feel how she should be nor know how she should be worthy, is that fire cannot melt out of me: lie in it at the stake.

Bene. Thou wast ever an obstinate

Beat. And never could maintain his part, the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank Beat. That she brought me up, I likewise give Bene. That I will have out winded in my forehead, or hang my Beat. In an invisible baldrick, all women shall Bene. Because I will not do them the to mistrust any, I will do myself the Beat. And the fine is, (for which go the finer,) I will live a bachelor.

Bene. I shall see thee, ere I die, look

Beat. With anger, with sickness, or with Bene. My lord; not with love: prove that ever I lose more blood with love than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try: "In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke."

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns, and set them in my forehead: and let me be vildly painted; and in such great letters as they write, "Here is good horse to hire,"

let them signify under my sign,—"Here you may see Benedick the married man."

Beat. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake, too, then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the meantime, good signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's: commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

[Exit]

Beat. To the tuition of God: from my

D. Pedro. The sixth of July; your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly based on neither: are you that old ends any further, examine your conscience! and so I leave you.

Beat. My liege, your highness may say do me good.

[It but how,]

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach: teach And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn

Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Beat. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero; she's his Beat. Doth thou affect her, Claudio? [only heirs

Beat. O, my lord,

When you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye,

That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand

Than to drive liking to the name of love; But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts

Have left their places vacant, in their rooms

Come thronging soft and delicate desires,

All prompting me how fair young Hero is,

Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently, And tire the heaven with a book of words.

If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it;

And I will break with her, and with her father,
And thou shalt have her. Was't not to this end

That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love,
That know love's grief by his complexion!
But lest my liking might too sudden seem,
I would have lov'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

The fairest grant is the necessity;
Look, what will serve is fit: 'tis once, thou
And I will fit thee with the remedy.
I know we shall have revelling to-night;
I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio;
And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,
And take her hearing prisoner with the force
And strong encounter of my amorous tale:
Then, after, to her father will I break;
And the conclusion is, she shall be thine:
In practice let us put it presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Leon. How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this marriage?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother,
I can tell you strange news, that you yet dreamt not of. Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them: but they have a good cover; they show well outward.
The prince and count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time
by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you
this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow: I will send for him; and question him yourself.

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself; but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure that be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.] Cousins, you know what you have to do.—O, I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill.—Good cousin, have a care of this busy time. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don John and Conrade.

Con. What the good-year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.
D. John. And when I have blessing bringeth it?

Con. If not a present remedy.

D. John. I wonder that thou say'st thou art born under about to apply a moral medicine ing mischief. I cannot hide must be sad when I have cause, no man's jests; and when I have wait for no man's leisure; sleep drowsy, and tend on no man's when I am merry, and claw me humour.

Con. Yea, but you must not show of this, till you may do it treatment. You have of late your brother, and he hath taken his grace; where it is impossible take true root, but by the fair
you make yourself; it is needful
the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a hedge, than a rose in his grace;
fits my blood to be discoloured fashion a carriage to rob love this, though I cannot be said to honest man, it must not be done plain-dealing villain. I am an muzzle, and enfranchised with fore I have decreed not to shut
If I had my mouth, I would bite liberty, I would do my liking time, let me be that I am, and alter me.

Con. Can you make no more content?

D. John. I make all use of only.—Who comes here? [Enter What news, Borachio?

Bora. I came yonder from the prince, your brother, is reported by Leonato; and I can give you of an intended marriage.

D. John. Will it serve for build mischief on? What is that betroths himself to acquit?

Bora. Marry, it is your brother.

D. John. Who, the most exalted?

Bora. Even he.

D. John. A proper squire! who? Which way looks he?

Bora. Marry, on Hero, the heir of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward
How came you to this?

Bora. Being entertained for I was smoking a musty room, prince and Claudio, hand in ference: I whipt me behind there heard it agreed upon,
should woo Hero for himself,
tained her, give her to count
D. John. Come, come, let us prove food to my displeasure. That start-up hath all the glory of my over-every way. You are both sure, and just me! Con. To the death, my lord.

John. Let us to the great supper: their is the greater, that I am subdued.
the cook were of my mind!—Shall we what's to be done?
We'll wait upon your lordship.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Leonato's House.

Leonato, Antonio, Hero, Beatrice, and others.

Was not count John here at supper?
I saw him not.

How tartly that gentleman looks! I can see him, but I am heart-burned at see.

He is of a very melancholy disposition.
He were an excellent man, that were out in the midway between him and nothing; and the other too like my lady's son, overmore tattling.

Then, half signior Benedick's tongue
John's mouth, and half count John's holy in signior Benedick's face.

With a good leg, and a good foot, and money enough in his purse, such a could win any woman in the world,—if I get her good will.

By my troth, niece, then wilt never be a husband, if thou be so shrewd of tongue.

Ant. In faith she is too curst.
Too curst is more than curst: I shall not's sending that way; for it is said,
no curst he sends none.

So, by being too curst, God will send horns?

Just, if he send me no husband; for blessing I am at him upon my knees morning and evening. Lord! I could be a husband with a beard on his head rather lie in the woollen.

You may light on a husband that beard.

What should I do with him? dress
my apparel, and make him my wait-woman? He that hath a beard is as a youth; and he that hath no beard is an old man; and he that is more than an old man is not for me; and he that is less than an old man is not for me; therefore I will even dance in earnest of the hearward, and apes into hell.

Well, then, go you into hell!

No; but to the gate; and there will meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, "Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maids!" so deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter; for the heavens

he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. [To Hero.] Well, niece, I trust you will be ruled by your father.

Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make courtesy, and say, "Father, as it please you:"—but yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another courtesy, and say, "Father, as it please me."

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be over-mastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clog of wayward mair? No, uncle, I'll none; Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you:
if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. That fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not wooed in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him there is measure in everything, and so dance out the answer. For, hear me, Hero:—wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first wit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure, full of state and ancientry; and then comes repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave. [Shrewdly.]

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing Beat. I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by daylight. [Make good room.]

Leon. The revellers are entering, brother;
Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, Don John, Borachio, Margaret,
Ursula, and others, masked.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk;
and especially when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please.

D. Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour: for God defend the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof;
within the house is love. [Hatch'd.]

Hero. Why, then, your visor should be
D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love.

[Takes her aside.]
Bene. Well, I would you did like me.

Mary. So would not I, for your own sake:
for I have many ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better; the heavens may cry Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight, when the dance is done!—Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words: the clerk is answered.

Urs. I know you well enough! you are Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the wagging of your Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-will, unless you were the very man. Here's his day hand up and down: you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come, do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit! Can virtue hide itself! Go to, man, you are he: graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the "Hundred Merry Tales."—Well, this was signior Benedick that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure, you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders: none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villainy; for he both pleases men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him. I'm sure he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded me!

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do; he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [Music within.] We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

[Dance: then count off but Don John, Benedick, and Claudio.]

D. John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it: The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains. [By his bearing.]

Bora. And that is Claudio: I know him.

D. John. Are not you signior Benedick?

Claudio. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamoured on Hero; I pray you, dissuade him from her; she is no equal for his birth: you may do the honest man in it.

Claudio. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his love to her. So did I too; and he swore to marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet. [Exeunt Don John and Claudio.]

Claudio. Thus answer I to the banquet. But hear these ill news with the ear of a friend. 'Tis certain so:—the prince wooed me. Friendship is constant in all other things, Save in the office and affairs of love. Therefore, all hearts in love use tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself, And trust no agent; for beauty is a sin Against whose charms faith melteth into blood. This is an accident of hourly proof, Which I mistrusted not. Farewell. [Exit Benedick.]

Bene. Count Claudio!

Claudio. Yes, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me to the willow?

Claudio. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, to own business, count. What fashion wear the garland of?

Claudio. About your neck, under your chain? or under your lieutenant's scarf? You must wear the prince's lath got your Hero.

Claudio. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why, that's spoken like a drover; so they call bullocks. Think the prince would have served you?

Claudio. I pray you leave me.

Bene. Ho! now you strike like a man: 'twas the boy that stole your love you'll beat the post.

Claudio. If it will not be, I'll leave her.

Bene. Alas, poor hurt fowl! creep into a sedge. But, that my love should know me, and not know the prince's fool!—Ha! it may be so; that title, because I am merry. I am apt to do myself wrong; I am put: it is the haze, though little of Beatrice, that puts the world person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be avenged as I may.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, when did you see him?

Bene. Truth, my lord, I have part of lady Fame. I found him melancholy as a lodge in a wood; and I think I told him true: he had got the good will of lady; and I offered him my willow tree, either to make him being forsaken, or to bind him being worthy to be whipped!

D. Pedro. To be whipped!

Bene. The flat transgression of a school-boy; being overjoy'd with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

D. Pedro. Will that make a trust a transgression? This transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been worse the rod had made, and the garland too; for the garland might have worn himself, and the rod might have bestowed on you, who, as I do it, have stolen his bird's nest.

D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, my faith, you say honestly.

D. Pedro. The lady Beatrice hath a quarrel with you: the gentleman that danced with her, for she is much wronged by you.

Bene. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block! an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her; my very visor to assume life, and scold with her. She was, not thinking I had been myself, that she the prince's jester; that I was duller than a great thaw; huddling just upon just, such impossible conveyance upon me.

D. Pedro. I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks words, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were living near her; she would infect to the stars. I would not marry her, though were endowed with all that Adam had left before he transgressed: she would have to Hercules have turned spit, yea, and to eat of her; you shall find her infernal in good apparel. I would to God some war would conjure her; for certainly, as she is here, a man may live as quiet in a sanctuary; and people sin upon her, because they would go thither; so, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow her.

Re-enter Claudio, Beatrice, Hero, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. Look, here she comes.

Bene. Will your grace command me any more to the world's end? I will go on the next errand now to the Antipodes that you desire to send me on; I will fetch you a speaker now from the farthest inch of Asia; you the length of Prester John's foot; you a hair off the great Cham's beard; you any embassy to the Pignies, rather than three words' conference with this woman. You have no employment for me!

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not: to endure my lady Tongue. [Exit.]

D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have no heart of signior Benedick.

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent me awhile; gave him use for it,—a double heart for a single one: marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools.—I have brought count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count! wherefore are you sad? Claudio. Not sad, my lord.

D. Pedro. How then? Claudio. Sick!

Beat. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil, count; civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

D. Pedro. I faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false. Here, Claudio, I have won in thy name, and fair Hero is won: I have broke with her father, and his good-will obtained: name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Beat. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claudio. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much. Lady, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you, and dote upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither. [Heart.]

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry Beat. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care.—My cousin tells him in his ear, that he is in her heart.

Claudio. And so she doth, cousin.

Beat. Good lord, for alliance! Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burned: I may sit in a corner, and cry heigh-ho for a husband!

D. Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father's getting. Hath your grace near a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days: your grace is too costly to wear every day. But, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.—Cousins, God give you joy!

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace's pardon. (Exit.)

D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad, but when she sleeps; and not erer sad then; for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means: she mocks all her wooers out of snit. (Benedick.)

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for Leon. O Lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad!

D. Pedro. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claudio. To-morrow, my lord: time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief, too, to have all things answer my mind.

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing: but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will, in the interim, undertake one of Hercules' labours; which is, to bring signior Benedick and the lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you, too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unholiest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. (Exit.)

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you, too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unholiest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. (Exit.)

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you, too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unholiest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. (Exit.)

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you, too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unholiest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. (Exit.)

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you, too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unholiest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. (Exit.)

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but verily that no dishonesty shall appear.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship since, how much I am in the favour of

D. John. I remember.

Bora. I can, at any unreasonable hour of the night, appoint her to look out at her chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in your temper. Go you to the prince your spare not to tell him, that he hath won honour in marrying the renowned (whose estimation do you mightily hold a contaminated stale, such a one as

D. John. What proof shall I make?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the prince Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill

Look you for any other issue?

D. John. Only to despise them, I shall endeavour anything.

Bora. Go, then; find me a meet draw Don Pedro and the count Claudio

tell them that you know that Hero intend a kind of zeal both to the prince

Claudio, as,—in love of your brother who hath made this match; and his reputation, who is thus like to be the semblance of a maid,—that you covered thus. They will scarcely without trial: offer them instances shall bear no less likelihood than to her chamber-window; hear me call

Hero; hear Margaret term me, Claudio

bring them to see this the very night

the intended wedding, for in the will so fashion the matter that Hero absent; and there shall appear such truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy be called assurance, and all the overthrown.

D. John. Grow this to what advantage, I will put it in practice. Re count working this, and thy fee is a thousand

Bora. Be you constant in the and my cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn of marriage.

SCENE III.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter Benedick and a Boy.

Bened. Boy!

Boy. In my chamber-window

bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir.

Bened. I know that; but I would hence, and here again. (Exit Boy.)

much wonder, that one man, seeing another man is a fool when he behaviours to love, will, after he

at such shallow follies in others,

out of his own score by falling in love: ah a man is Claudio. I have known, here was no music with him but the sad the life; and now had he rather in labor and the pipe: I have known, he would have walked ten mile afoot to good armour; and now will he lie ten awake, carving the fashion of a new t. He was wont to speak plain, and purpose, like an honest man, and a; and now he is turned orthographer; rid are a very fantastical banquet,—just ay strange dishes. May I be so con- and use with these eyes! I cannot think not: I will not be sworn but love transform me to an oyster; but I'll take sh on it, till he have made an oyster of shall never make me such a fool. One is fair; yet I am well: another is wise; am well: another virtuous; yet I am but till all graces be in one woman, one shall not come in my grace. Rich she be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; us, or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or ever look on her; mild, or come not near to be, or not I for an angel; of good me, an excellent musician, and her hair be of what colour it please God. Ha! huce and Monsieur Love! I will hide the arbour.

[Withdraws.
Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio,
Followed by Balthazar and Musicians.

Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?
Cl. Yea, my good lord.—How still the evening is,

Pedro. And on purpose to grace harmony!
Cl. See you where Benedick hath himself?

Cl. O, very well, my lord: the music at the kid-fox with a pennyworth.
Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that again.

Cl. O, good my lord, tax not so bad a under music any more than once.
Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency, t a strange face on his own perfection;—

Cl. thee, sing, and let me woo no more.
th. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing;

many a wooer doth commence his suit r he thinks not worthy; yet he woos; ill he swear, he loves.

Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come; thou wilt hold longer argument, in notes.

th. Note this before my notes, a not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Pedro. Why, these are very crotchets; notes, forsooth, and noting! [Music. Now, divine air! now is his soul lit!—Is it not strange, that sheep's guts I hale sculls out of men's bodies!—Well, for my money, when all's done.

Balthazar sings,

*Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea, and one on shore;
To one thing constant never:
Then sigh not so,
But let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny;
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into, Hey nonny, nonny.*

*Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
Of dumps so dull and heavy;
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy.
Then sigh not so, &c.*

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.

D. Pedro. Ha! no, no, faith; thou singest well enough for a shift.

Bene. [Aside.] An' he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him; and I pray God, his bad voice bode no mischief! I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. [To Claudio.] Yea, marry.—Dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent music; for to-morrow night we would have it at the lady Hero's chamber-window. Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell. [Exit Balthazar and Musicians.] Come hither, Leonato: what was it you told me of to-day,—that your niece Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?

Claud. O, ay;—[Aside to Pedro.] Stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits. [Aloud.] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful, that she should so dote on signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. [Aside.] Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it; but that she loves him with an enraged affection,—it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit! There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she? [will bite.]

Claud. [Aside.] Bait the hook well; this fish

Leon. What effects, my lord? She will sit you,—[To Claudio.] You heard my daughter tell you how. Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you! You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it; knavery cannot, sure, hide itself in such reverence. [Hold it up.]

Claud. [Aside.] He hath ta'en the infection: D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says: "Shall I," says she, "that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?"

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him; for she'll be up twenty times a night; and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper:—my daughter tells us all.

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O,—when she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet.

Claud. That.

Leon. O, she tore the letter into a thousand half-pence; railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her: "I measure him," says she, "by my own spirit; for I should flout him, if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should."

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses;—"O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!"

Leon. She doth indeed: my daughter says so: and the ecstasy hath so much overborne her, that my daughter is sometimes afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself: it is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good, that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An' he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In everything, but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O my lord, wisdom and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one, that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have dashed all other respects, and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what he say.

Leon. Were it good, think you?

Claud. Hero thinks surely she will do so: she says she will die if he love her not; she will die, ere she make her love known; and she will die, if he woo her, rather than she will bate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well; if she make tender of her love, 'tis very possible to scorn it; for the man, as you know, is a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath indeed a good deal of happiness.

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my opinion.

D. Pedro. He doth indeed show some that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: the managing of quarrels you may be wise; for either he avoids them with discretion, or undertakes them with a Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, he must early keep peace; if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for he doth fear God, howsoever it seems not by some large jests he will make. We are sorry for your niece. Shall we go see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord: I wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible: she must hear heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we will hear further by your daughter: let it cool the love Benedick well; and I could not would modestly examine himself, to much he is unworthy to have so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? I am ready.

Claud. [Aside.] If he do not dot upon this, I will never trust my eyes.

D. Pedro. [Aside.] Let there be the net spread for her; and that must your sister and her gentlewomen carry. They will be, when they hold one another's dotage, and no such matter; the scene that I would see, which is merely a dumb show. Let us send him in to dinner.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leon.]

Bene. [Advanc. from the arbour.] There be no trick: the conference was sad. They have the truth of this from Hero: I am to pity the lady: it seems, her love have the full bent. Love me! why, I be requited. I hear how I am censured: say I will bear myself proudly, if I let the love come from her: they say will rather die than give any sign of affection.—I did never think to marry.—I must seem proud.—Happy are they that bear detractions, and can put them to mend.—They say the lady is fair,—'tis a truth, I bear them witness; and virtuous,—'tis so, and reprove it; and wise, but for loving by my troth, it is no addition to her wit; no great argument of her folly,—for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit hid on me, because I have rail'd so long last marriage; but doth not the appetite? A man loves the meat in his youth, but he cannot endure it in his age. Shall quips, sentences and these paper bullets of the tongue, awe a man from the career of his love? No; the world must be peopled. I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married.—Here comes Beatrice. By this day, she's a fair one: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.
Beat. Against my will, I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.
Gene. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.
Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, in you take pains to thank me: if it had been painful, I would not have come.
Gene. You take pleasure, then, in the message?
Beat. Yea; just so much as you may take on a knife's point, and choke a daw withal.
Gene. You have no stomach, signior! fare you well.
Beat. Ha! "Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner,"—there's a double meaning in that. "I took no more pains for those thanks, than you took pains to thank me," that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you are as easy as thanks.—If I do not love her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew: I will go get her picture.
[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.
Hero. Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour; here shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice, disposing with the prince and Claudio: whisper her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse bid her steal into the plench'd bower, where honeysuckles ripen'd by the sun, bid the sun to enter;—like favourites, proud by princess, that advance their [she hides her,] against that power that bred it:—there will

To listen to our purpose. This is thy office; Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.]

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,

As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick. When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit: My talk to thee must be, how Benedick is sick in love with Beatrice. Of this matter is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by hearsay. Now begin;
Enter Beatrice, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish

Cut with her golden ears the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait: So angle we for Beatrice; who even now is couch'd in the woodbine coverture. Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing

Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.—
[They advance to the bower.]

No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful; I know her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

Hero. So says the prince, and my new-troth'd lord. [Madam!]

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it, Hero. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it;

But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick, To wish him wrestle with affection, And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so? Dost not the gentleman Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed, As ever Beatrice shall couch upon? [Serve]

Hero. O God of love! I know he doth desire As much as may be yielded to a man:

But nature never fram'd a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice; Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprising what they look on; and her wit Values itself so highly, that to her All matter else seems weak: she cannot love, Nor take no shape nor project of affection, She is so self-endear'd.

Urs. Sure, I think so; And therefore certainly it were not good She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man, [featur'd] How wise, how noble, young, how rarely But she would spell him backward: if fair-fair'd, [her sister:] She would swear the gentleman should be If black, why, nature, drawing of an antick,

Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance ill-headed;
If low, an agate very vilely out;
If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds;
If silent, why, a block moved with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side out;
And never gives to truth and virtue that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.

Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

Hero. No; not to be so odd, and from all fashions.

An Beatrice is, cannot be commendable;
But who dare tell her so? If I should speak,
She would mock me into air; O, she would laugh me

Out of myself, press me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly;
It were a better death than die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling. [says.]

Urs. Yet tell her of it; hear what she will.

Hero. No; rather I will go to Benedick,
And counsel him to fight against his passion.
And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders
To stain my cousin with: one doth not know
How much an ill word may enpoison liking.

Urs. O, do not do your cousin such a wrong.

She cannot be so much without true judgment,
(Having so swift and excellent a wit
As she is prided to have,) as to refuse
So rare a gentleman as signior Benedick.

Hero. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted my dear Claudio.

Urs. I pray you, be not angry with me,
madam,

Speaking my fancy: signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour,
Goes foremost in report through Italy.

Hero. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

Urs. His excellencies did earn it, ere he had
When are you married, madam? [lit.]

Hero. Why, every day;—to-morrow. Come,
go in:

I'll show thee some attires; and have thy counsel,

Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

Urs. She's lim'd, I warrant you: we have caught her, madam. [hays.]

Hero. If it prove so, then loving goes by Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.

[Exeunt Hero and Ursula.]

Beat. [Advancing.] What fire is in mine ears! Can this be true?

Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much!

Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such.

And, Benedick, love on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand.

If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band;

For others say thou dost deserve, and I Believe it better than reportingly. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claudio. I'll bring you thither, my lord;
you'll vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be an good soil in the new gloss of your marriage;

show a child his new coat and forbid him
wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all new

he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bowstring,
and the little hangman dare not shoot at him;

he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been.
Leon. So say I: methinks you are wadded.

Claudio. I hope he is in love.

D. Pedro. Hang him, traitor! there's true drop of blood in him, to be truly true with love. If he be so, he wants money.

Bene. I have the toothache.

D. Pedro. Draw it.

Claudio. You must hang it first, and draw afterwards.

D. Pedro. What! sigh for the toothache?

Leon. Where is but a humour, or a weariness?

Bene. Well, every one can master a grief
but he that has it.

Claudio. Yet say I, he is in love.

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of it in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath strange disguises; as, to be a Dutchman day, a Frenchman to-morrow; or in the

of two countries at once; as, a German the waist downward, all shops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doubt. Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears

he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claudio. If he be not in love with a woman, there is no believing old signs;

brushes his hat o' mornings; what should he do?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at barber's?

Claudio. No, but the barber's man hath seen with him; and the old ornament of cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed he looks younger than he was by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, he rubs himself with can you smell him out by that?

Claudio. That's as much as to say the youth is in love. [Interchange.]

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his face.

Claudio. And when was he wont to wash
his face?

D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? for which, I hear what they say of him.

Scene 3.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

129

Claudio. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is new crop into a lustre, and now governed by story.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him. Conclude, conclude, he is in love.

Claudio. Nay, but I know who loves him.

D. Pedro. That would I know too: I warrant one that knows him not.

Claudio. Yes, and his ill conditions; and in despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall be buried with her face to the wall.

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the toothache.—Old signior, walk aside with me: I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

[Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.]

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

Claudio. This even so. Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice;

and then the two hours will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter Don John.

D. Pedro. My lord and brother, God save
you.

D. John. Good den, brother. [You.]

D. Pedro. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

D. John. In private?

D. Pedro. In private? Claudio may hear; for what I would speak of concerns him.

D. Pedro. What's the matter?

D. John. [To Claudio.] Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?

D. Pedro. You know he does.

D. John. I know not that, when he knows
what I know.

Claudio. If there be any impediment, I pray let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me

by that I now will manifest. For my brother, heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage—surely, suit ill-spent, and labour ill-bestowed.

D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?

D. John. I came hither to tell you; and circumstances shortened, (for she hath been too long a talking of,) the lady is disloyal.

Claudio. Who, Hero?

D. John. Even she: Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.

Claudio. Disloyal! her wickedness
I could say, she were worse: it is. Wonder not till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered, even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow will her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claudio. May this be so?

D. Pedro. I will not think it.

D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know. If you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Claudio. If I see anything to-night, why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

D. John. I will disperse her no further, till you are my witnesses: hear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!

Claudio. O mischief strangely thwarting!

D. John. O plague right well prevented! So will you say, when you have seen the sequel.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter Dogberry and Verges, with the Watch.

Dogb. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogb. First, who think you the most desert-less man to be constable?

1 Watch. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacoll; for they can write and read.

Dogb. Come hither, neighbour Seacoll.
God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune;
but to write and read comes by nature.

2 Watch. Both which, master constable,—

Dogb. You have: I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge—you shall comprehend all vagrom men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

Watch. How, if a' will not stand?

Dogb. Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden,
he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects.—You shall also make no noise in the streets; for, for the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 Watch. We will rather sleep than talk: we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogb. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman; for I cannot see how the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato with Dogberry and Verges.

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that concerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see it is a busy time with me.

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir.

Verg. Yes, in truth it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends?

Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest as the skin between his brows.

Verg. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestier than I. [Neighbour Verges.]

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous: palabras, Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers; but truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me, ha!

Dogb. Yea, an't were a thousand pound more than 'tis; for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city; and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it. Verg. And so am I. [Say.]

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say. Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have taken a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir, he will be talking; as they say, when the age is in, the wit is out. God help us! it is a world to see!—Well said, I' faith, neighbour Verges!—well, God's a good man: an' two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind.—An honest soul, I' faith, sir; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread: but God is to be worshipped: all men are not alike;—alas, good neighbour!

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you. Dogb. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir: our watch, sir, hath indeed comprehended two auspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me: I am now in great haste, as may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be sufficiency.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you go: fare you well.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to your daughter to her husband.

Leon. I'll wait upon them: I am ready.

[Exeunt Leonato and Hero.]

Dogb. Go, good partner, go, go.

Francis Scaucel. bid him bring his inkhorn to the gaol: we are now to try these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no wit; you; here's that (touching his forehead) drive some of them to a non-com: and learned writer to set down our examination, and meet me at the gaol.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, Beatrice, and Friar.

Leon. Come, friar Francis, be brought to the plain form of marriage, and recount their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, this lady?

Leon. To be married to her: I come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to this count?

Friar. If either of you know any impediment why you should not be married, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, no.

Claud. O, what men dare do!

Hero. What men daily do, not what they do!

Bene. How now! Interjections! then, some be of laughing, as he is!

Claud. Stand thee by, friar.—To your leave:

Will you with free and unconstrained Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give.

Claud. And what have I to give you whose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious?

D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you recede again.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me thankfulness.

There, Leonato; take her back again: Give not this rotten orange to your daughter: She's but the sign and semblance of our—

Behold how like a maid she blushes! O, what authority and show of truth Can cunning sin cover itself withal! Comes not that blood as modest evidence to witness simple virtue! Would you not swear,

Will you that see her, that she were a maid, by these exterior shows? But she is none:

she knows the heat of a luxurious bed; her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?

Claud. Not to be married; Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof, have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth, And made defeat of her virginity,— Claud. I know what you would say: if I have known her, can't I say she did embrace me as a husband, and so extenuate the forehead sin:

to Leonato, never tempted her with word too large; but, as a brother to his sister, show'd faithful sincerity and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Claud. Out on thee! Seeming! I will write against it:

you seem to me as Dian in her orb, and chaste as ice in the bud ere it be blown:

but you are more intemperate in your blood than Venus, or those purper'd animals that rage in savage sensuality. [so wide!]

Leon. Is my lord well, that he doth speak thus?

Claud. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro. What should I speak? I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about to link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God!

Claud. Leonato, stand I here?

Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother?

Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so; but what of this, my lord?

Claud. Let me but move one question to you, and by that fatherly and kindly power that you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O, God defend me! how am I beset!—What kind of catechising call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name?

Claud. With any just reproach?

Hero. I myself can blot out Hero's virtue. What man was he talk'd with you yesternight out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?

Now. If you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.

D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden:—I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour, Myself, my brother, and this griev'd count, Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night, Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window; Who hath indeed, most like a liberal villain, Confess'd the vile encounter they have had A thousand times in secret.

D. John. Fie, fie! they are not to be Not to be spoken of; [nam'd, my lord,]

There is not chastity enough in language, Without offence, to utter them. Thus, pretty lady,

I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been,

If half thy outward graces had been plac'd About thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!

But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! fare-well,

Thou pure impiety, and impious purity! For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,

And on my eye-lids shall conjecture hang, To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,

And never shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me? [Hero swoons.]

Beat. Why, how now, cousin! wherefore sink you down! [come thus to light,]

D. John. Come, let us go. These things, Smother her spirits up.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudio.]

Bene. How doth the lady?

Beat. Dead, I think!—help, uncle!—

Hero! why, Hero!—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!—friar!

Leon. O fate, take not away thy heavy hand! Death is the fairest cover for her shame

That may be wish'd for.

Beat. How now, cousin Hero!

Friar. Have comfort, lady.

Leon. Dost thou look up?

Friar. Yea, wherefore should she not?

Leon. Wherefore! Why doth not every earthly thing

Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny The story that is printed in her blood?—

Do not live, Hero; do not open thine eyes: For, did I think thou wouldst not quickly die, Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy

shames,

Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches, Strike at thy life. Grieved I, I had but one!

Chid I for that that frugal nature's frame? O, one too much by thee! Why had I one!

Why ever wast thou lovely in mine eyes? Why had I not with charitable hand

Took up a beggar's issue at my gates; Who smother'd thus and mi'd with infamy,

I might have said, "No part of it is mine; This shame derives itself from unknown loins!"

But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I priz'd, And mine that I was proud on; mine so much That I myself was to myself not mine,

Valuing of her; why, she—O, she is fallen Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea

Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little, which may reason give
To her foul tainted flesh!

Hero. Sir, sir, be patient.
For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,
I know not what to say.

Beat. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!
Hero. Lady, were you her bed-fellow last night?

Beat. No, truly, not; although, until last
I have this twelvemonth been her bed-fellow.

Leon. Confir'm'd, confir'm'd! O, that is stronger made,

Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!
Would the two princes lie! and Claudio lie,
Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foul-

ness, [her die,
Wash'd it with tears! Hence from her! let

Friar. Hear me a little;
For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady: I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions start
Into her face; a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness bear away those blushes;
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading nor my observation,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenor of my book; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be,
Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury: she not denies it.

Why seek'st thou, then, to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?

Friar. Lady, what man is he you are ac-

cus'd of? [none;
Hero. They know, that do accuse me; I know
If I know more of any man alive, [rant,
Than that which maiden modesty doth war-

Let all my sins lack mercy!—O, my father!
Prove you that any man with me convers'd
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,

Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.

Friar. There is some strange misprision in the princes, [honour;
Beat. Two of them have the very bent of
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toll in frame of villainies.

Leon. I know not. If they speak but truth
of her,
These hands shall tear her: if they wrong her
honour,
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,

Nor fortune made such havoc of me,
Nor my bad life left me so much of
But they shall find, awak'd in such Both strength of limb and policy of Ability in means and choice of means
To quit me of them thoroughly.

Friar. And let my counsel away you in this
Your daughter, here, the princes [night,
Let her a while be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead in Maintain a mourning ostentation,
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all
That appertain unto a burial.

Leon. What shall become of this will this do?

Friar. Marry, this, well carried, [behalf, Change slander to remorse;—that
good:
But not for that dream I on this
course,

But on this travail look for greater
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd
Upon the instant that she was accus'd;
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd
Of every hearer: for it so falls out,
That what we have we prize not to the Whiles we enjoy it; but being look'd
Why, then we rack the value, then we
The virtue that possession would not While it was ours.—So will it fare with
When he shall hear she died upon her
The idea of her life shall sweetly
Into his study of imagination;
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious
More moving delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv'd indeed:—then (If ever love had interest in his liver),
And wish he had not so accus'd her;
No, though he thought his accusation Let this be so, and doubt not but she Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be lov'd, false
The supposition of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her infancy,
And if it sort not well, you may come
(As best befits her wounded reputation)
In some exclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and Beat. Signior Leonato, let the
you:
And though you know my inward
love
Is very much unto the prince and Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in
As secretly and justly, as your soul
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I show
The smallest twine may lead me.

Friar. This well consented; presently away;
For to strange sores strangely they strain
the cure.—
One, lady, die to live: this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolong'd; have patience and endure.

[Exeunt Friar, Hero, and Leonato.
Beat. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this night?

Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.
Beat. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason; I do it freely.
Beat. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin wronged.

Beat. Ah! how much might the man deserve me that would right her!

Beat. Is there any way to show such friendship?

Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.
Beat. May a man do it?

Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.
Beat. I do love nothing in the world so well as you: is not that strange?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not.
I were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you: but believe me not;
and yet I lie not; I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing.—I am sorry for my cousin.

Beat. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovest me.
Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.

Beat. I will swear by it that you love me;
and I will make him eat it that says I love not.

Beat. Will you not eat your word? [you.
Beat. With no sauce that can be devised to it, I protest I love thee.

Beat. Why then, God forgive me!
Beat. What offence, sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have play'd me in a happy hour:
was about to protest I loved you.

Beat. And do it with all thy heart.
Beat. I love you with so much of my heart,
that none is left to protest.

Beat. Come, bid me do anything for thee.
Beat. Kill Claudio.

Beat. Ha! not for the wide world.
Beat. You kill me to deny it. Farewell.

Beat. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.
Beat. I am gone, though I am here:—there is no love in you.—Nay, I pray you, let me go.

Beat. Beatrice,—
Beat. In faith, I will go.

Beat. We'll be friends first.
Beat. You dare easier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.

Beat. Is Claudio thine enemy?
Beat. He be not approved in the height of honour, that hath slandered, scorned, dis-man!—What! bear her in hand until they come to take hands; and then, with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour,—O God, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Beat. Hear me, Beatrice,—

Beat. Talk with a man out at a window!— a proper saying!

Beat. Nay, but, Beatrice,— Beat. Sweet Hero!—she is wronged, she is slandered, she is undone.

Beat. Princes and countesses! surely, a sweet gallant, surely! O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliments, and men are only turned into tongues, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules that only tells a lie, and swears it.—I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will do a woman with grieving. [I love thee.

Beat. Tarry, good Beatrice. By this hand,
Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account. As you hear of me, so think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a bone. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so
leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render
me a dear account. As you hear of me, so
think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead: and so, farewell. [Exit.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way
than swearing by it.

Beat. Think you in your soul the count
Claudio hath wronged Hero? [soul.

SCENE II.—A Prison.

*Enter Dogberry, Verges, and Sexton, in gowns;
and the Watch, with Conrade and Borachio.*

Dogb. Is our whole dissembly appeared?
Verg. O, a stool and a cushion for the Sexton. Which be the malefactors? [Sexton.

Dogb. Marry, that am I and my partner.
Verg. Nay, that's certain: we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? Let them come before master constable.

Dogb. Yea, marry, let them come before me.—What is your name, friend?

Borachio. [Strut!
Dogb. Pray write down—Borachio.—Yours,
Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade.

Dogb. Write down—master gentleman
Conrade.—Masters, do you serve God?

Con. Bora. Yea, sir, we hope.
Dogb. Write down—that they hope they serve God;—and write God first: for God defend but God should go before such villains!

—Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.
Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you; but I will go about with him.—Come you hither, sirrah; a word in your ear, sir: I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Borachio. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Borachio. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Borachio. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Borachio. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Borachio. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Borachio. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Well, stand aside—'Fore God, they are both in a tale. Have you writ down—that they are none?

Sexton. Master constable, you go not the way to examine: you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Dogb. Yea, marry, that's the easiest way.—Let the watch come forth.—Masters, I charge you, in the prince's name, accuse these men.

1 Watch. This man said, sir, that Don John, the prince's brother, was a villain.

Dogb. Write down—Prince John a villain.—Why, this is flat perjury, to call a prince's brother villain. Bora. Master constable,—

Dogb. Pray thee, fellow, peace: I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

2 Watch. Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John for accusing the lady Hero wrongfully.

Dogb. Flat burglary as ever was committed.

Verg. Yea, by the mass, that it is.

Sexton. What else, fellow?

1 Watch. And that count Claudio did mean, upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Dogb. O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else! 2 Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away: Hero was in this manner accused; in this very manner refused; and, upon the grief of this, suddenly died.—Master constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato's; I will go before, and show him their examination. [Exit.]

Dogb. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in the hands—

Con. Off, coxcombs!

Dogb. God's my life! where's the sexton? let him write down—the prince's officer, coxcomb.—Come, bind them.—Thou naughty varlet!

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.

Dogb. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years?—O that he were here to write me down an ass!—but, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass.—No, thou villain, thou art full of plety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and everything handsome about him.—Bring him away.—O that I had been writ down an ass! [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Ant. If you go on thus, you will ruin yourself;

And 'tis not wisdom thus to second Against yourself.

Leon. I pray thee, cease thy Which falls into mine ears as profane
As water in a sieve; give not me counsel
Nor let no comforter delight mine ear.

But such a one whose wrongs do
Bring me a father that so lov'd his child Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like
And bid him speak of patience;

Measure his woe the length and breadth
And let it answer every strain for sorrow
As thus for thus, and such a grief for grief
In every lineament, branch, shape, and colour
If such a one will smile, and stroke his cheek
Cry "Sorrow, wag!" and hem, and cough,
Should groan;

Patch grief with proverbs; make my grief
With candle-wasters: bring him yet
And I of him will gather patience.

But there is no such man: for, brother,
Can counsel, and speak comfort to Claudio,
Which they themselves not feel; but, to Their counsel turns to passion, which Would give preceptual medicine to reason
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread
Charm ache with air, and agony with words
No, no; 'tis all men's office to speak
To those that wring under the load of sorrow
But no man's virtue, nor sufficiency,
To be so moral when he shall endure
The like himself. Therefore give
counsel:

My griefs cry louder than advertisement
Ant. Therein do men from children differ.

Leon. I pray thee, peace! I will
For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently
However they have writ the style of sages
And made a push at chance and suffering Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon self;

Make those that do offend you suffer
Leon. There thou speak'st at reason—will do so.

My soul doth tell me Hero is belied;
And that shall Claudio know; so shall
And all of them that thus dishonour me.

Ant. Here come the prince and hastily.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio.

D. Pedro. Good den, good den.

Claudio. Good day to both.

Leon. Hear you, my lords,—

D. Pedro. We have some haste,—

Leon. Some haste, my lord!—well, well, my lord:—

asty now!—well, all is one.
Nay, do not quarrel with us,
old man. [ling,
could right himself with quarrel—
would lie low.

Who wrongs him?
ry, thou dost wrong me; thou abler, thou:—
lay thy hand upon thy sword;
not.

Marry, beshrew my hand,
give your age such cause of fear;
hand meant nothing to my sword.
ah, hush, man! never deer and
at me:

—like a dotard nor a fool,
privilege of age, to brag [do, re done being young, or what would
old. Know, Claudio, to thy head, so wrong'd mine innocent child and ford'd to lay my reverence by, [me,
grey hairs, and bruise of many days,
go thee to trial of a man.

Just belied mine innocent child:
er hath gone through and through
heart,
as buried with her ancestors;
ab where never acandal slept,
of hers, fram'd by thy villainy!
My villainy!

Thine, Claudio: thine, I say.
ro. You say not right, old man.

My lord, my lord,
it on his body, if he dare,
is nice fence and his active practice,
of youth and bloom of lustyhood.
Away! I will not have to do with a.

Canst thou so dall me? Thou hast I'd my child:
ill at me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
le shall kill two of us, and men
lead:

—no matter; let him kill one first:
and wear me,—let him answer me.—
flow me, boy! come, sir boy, come,
low me!

'I'll whip you from your foining fence;
I am a gentleman, I will.

Brother,—
content yourself. God knows I lov'd
y niece;

is dead, slander'd to death by villains,
as well answer a man, indeed,
take a serpent by the tongue;
es, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!—

Brother Antony,— fold you content. What, man! I now them, yea,
at they weigh, even to the utmost uple,—

g, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring
y, and cog, and flout, deprave and [slander,

Go antickly, and show outward hideousness,
And speak off half a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they
And this is all! [durst;

Leon. But, brother Antony,—

Ant. Come, 'tis no matter:
Do not you meddle; let me deal in this.

D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.

My heart is sorry for your daughter's death:
But, on my honour, she was charged with nothing

But what was true, and very full of proof.

Leon. My lord, my lord!—

D. Pedro. I will not hear you.

Leon. No!—

Come, brother, away.—I will be heard.—

Ant. And shall, or some of us will smart for it. [Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.

Enter Benedick.

D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man
we went to seek.

Claud. Now, signior, what news?

Bene. Good day, my lord.

D. Pedro. Welcome, signior; you are almost come to part almost a fray.

Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.

D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother. What thinkest thou? Had he fought, I doubt, we should have been too young for them.

Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true valour. I came to seek you both.

Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high-proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away. Wilt thou use thy wit?

Bene. It is in my scabbard: shall I draw it?

D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit.—I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure us.

D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale.—Art thou sick, or angry?

Claud. What, courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, an' you charge it against me. I pray you, choose another subject.

Claud. Nay, then, give him another staff:
this last was broke cross.

D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more. I think he be angry indeed.

Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

Claud. God bless me from a challenge!

Bene. You are a villain;—I jest not:—I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare.—Do me right, or I run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse,—why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love. Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme; I have tried: I can find out no rhyme to "lady" but "baby,"—an innocent rhyme; for "scorn," "horn,"—a hard rhyme; for "school," "fool,"—a babbling rhyme; very ominous endings: no, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.—

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee? [Said me.]

Beat. Yes, signior; and depart when you Bene. O, stay but till then!

Beat. "Then" is spoken; fare you well now:—and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for; which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unbidden.

Bene. Thou hast frightened the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them altogether; which maintained so politic a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. "Suffer love,"—a good epithet! I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think; alas, poor heart! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession; there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours. If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question:—why, an hour in clamour, and a quarter in rheum; therefore it is most expedient for the wise (if Don Worm, his conclusion, find no impediment to the contrary) to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy. And now tell me, how doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill. Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and there will I leave you too, for here I am in haste.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your Yonder's old coil at home: it is put off by lady Hero hath been falsely accused prince and Claudio mightily abused. Don John is the author of all, who is gone. Will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die with thee, and be buried in thy eyes; and will go with thee to thy uncle's.

SCENE III.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, and Angelo, with music and tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Angelo. It is, my lord.

Claud. [Reads from a scroll.]

Done to death by slanderous tongue

Was the Hero that here lies:

Death, in guerdon of her wrong,

Gives her fame which never dies:

So the life, that died with shame,

Lives in death with glorious fame;

Hang thou there upon the tomb,

[A pause.]

Praising her when I am dumb—

Now, music, sound; and sing your hymn.

SONG.

Parthen, goddess of the night,

Those that sleep thy virgin knight,

For the which, with songs of love,

Round about her tomb they go—

Midnight, assist our moan!

Help us to sigh and groan,

Heavily, heavily:

Graves, yawn, and yield your

Till death be uttered,

Heavily, heavily.

Claud. Now, unto thy bones good

Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good-morrow, master,

your torches out:

The wolves have prey'd; and look, this

day,

Before the wheels of Phœbus, round

Dapples the drowsy east with spots,

Thanks to you all, and leave us: fare ye

Claud. Good-morrow, masters: we will several way.

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and other weeds:

And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claud. And Hymen now with luck

speeds,

Than this, for whom we render

Enter a Room in Leonato's House.
Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Beatrice, Ursula, Friar, and Hero.
Hero. Did I not tell you she was innocent?
Leonato. Are the prince and Claudio, who Beatrice. And her error that you heard debated;
Leonato. set was in some fault for this,
Beatrice. against her will, as it appears
Leonato. course of all the question. [well.
Beatrice. Well, I am glad that all things sort so Leonato. and so am I, being else by faith en-
Beatrice. ding Claudio to a reckoning for it.
Leonato. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen
Beatrice. into a chamber by yourselves, [all,
Leonato. I send for you, come hither mask'd;
Beatrice. and Claudio promis'd by this hour
Leonato. —You know your office, brother;
Beatrice. be father to your brother's daughter,
Leonato. her to young Claudio.
Beatrice. Which I will do with confirm'd coun-Leonato. [think.
Beatrice. Friar, I must entreat your pains I Leonato. To do what, signior? [them.—
Beatrice. To bind me, or undo me; one of Leonato. counts, truth it is, good signior,
Beatrice. so regards me with an eye of favour.
Leonato. That eye my daughter lent her: 'tis Beatrice. not true.
Leonato. And I do with an eye of love requite Beatrice. The sight whereof, I think, you had Leonato. on me, [will I Beatrice. and the prince: but what's your Leonato. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
Beatrice. my will, my will is, your good will Leonato. and with ours, this day to be conjoin'd
Beatrice. ate of honourable marriage:
Leonato. good friar, I shall desire your help.
Beatrice. My heart is with your liking.
Leonato. And my help.
Beatrice. the prince and Claudio.
Leonato. Enter Don Pedro and Claudio, with Beatrice. Attendants.
Leonato. Good-morrow to this fair assembly.
Beatrice. Good-morrow, prince: good-morrow,
Leonato. Claudio:
Beatrice. attend you. Are you yet determin'd Leonato. to marry with my brother's daughter?
Beatrice. I'll hold my mind, were she an Leonato. thion.
Beatrice. Call her forth, brother: here's the Leonato. star ready.
Beatrice. Good-morrow, Benedick. Why,
Leonato. what's the matter,
Beatrice. have such a February face,
Leonato. of frost, of storm, and cloudiness?
Beatrice. I think, he thinks upon the savage Leonato. all.—
Beatrice. hear not, man; we'll tip thy horns with Leonato. old,
Beatrice. Europa shall rejoice at thee;

As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.
Bene. Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;
And some such strange bull leap'd your father's
And got a calf in that same noble feat. [cow,
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.
Claud. For this I owe you: here come other reckonings.
Re-enter Antonio, with the ladies masked.
Which is the lady I must seize upon! [her.
Ant. This same is she, and I do give you Claud. Why, then she's mine.—Sweet, let me see your face. [her hand Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take Before this friar, and swear to marry her.
Claud. Give me your hand before this holy
I am your husband, if you like of me. [Friar:
Hero. And when I liv'd, I was your other wife: [Unmasking.
And when you lov'd, you were my other hus-Claud. Another Hero! [band.
Hero. Nothing certainer;
One Hero died dead; but I do live,
And surely as I live, I am a maid.
D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is dead! [slander liv'd.
Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles her Friar. All this amazement can I qualify:
When, after that the holy rites are ended,
I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death:
Meantime, let wonder seem familiar.
And to the chapel let us presently. [Beatrice!
Bene. Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beat. [Unmasking.] I answer to that name.
What is your will?
Bene. Do not you love me?
Beat. Why, no; no more than reason.
Bene. Why, then, your uncle, and the prince, and Claudio,
Have been deceiv'd; for they swore you did.
Beat. Do not you love me?
Bene. Troth, no; no more than reason.
Beat. Why, then, my cousin, Margaret,
and Ursula, [did.
Are much deceiv'd; for they did swear, you Bene. They swore that you were almost sick for me. [dead for me.
Beat. They swore that you were well-nigh Bene. 'Tis no such matter. Then, you do not love me?
Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.
Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman. [loves her;
Claud. And I'll be sworn upon't that he
For here's a paper, written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashion'd to Beatrice.
Hero. And here's another,
Writ in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket,
Containing her affection unto Benedick.
Bene. A miracle! here's our own hands against our hearts.—Come, I will have thee;
but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beat. I would not deny you;—but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion; and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Bene. Peace! I will stop your mouth.

[Kissing her.]

D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick, the married man?

Bene. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire, or an epigram? No; if a man will be beaten with brains, he shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but, in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have had thee out of thy single life, to make me a double dealer; which, out of question, will be, if my cousin do not look upon me narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends; have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives'.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.

Bene. First, of my word; therefore, music!—Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife: there is no staff more than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My lord, your brother John is fled.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow.

Beat. Think not on him till to-morrow. Strike up, pipers!

[Dance.]

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Costard, a Clown.
Moth, page to Armado.
A Forester.
Princess of France.
Rosaline,
Maria,
Katharine,
Jaquenetta, a country wench.
Lords, and others, attendants on the King and Princess.

SCENE.—Navarre.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Park, with a Palace in it.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives, register'd upon our brazen tombs, [lives, and then grace us in the disgrace of death;] And, spite of cornucopia devouring Time, let our names live like the flowers of the sun; and let our honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge, and make us heirs of all eternity.

Biron. Therefore, brave conquerors,—for so you are, not war against your own affections, but the huge army of the world's desires,—in late edict shall strongly stand in force: our court shall be the wonder of the world; and contemplative in living art.

Long. On three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville, we have sworn for three years' term to live with me, and to keep those statutes that are recorded in this schedule here: our oaths are past; and now subscribe your names.

King. But his own hand may strike his honour down, that violates the smallest branch herein: you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do, subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.

Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast;

King. My mind shall banquet, though the body pine: it paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits like rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

Dumain. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified: in graver manner of these world's delights he throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:

To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die; With all these living in philosophy.

Biron. I can but say their protestation over; So much, dear liege, I have already sworn, That is, to live and study here three years.

But there are other strict observances: As, not to see a woman in that term,—Which I hope well is not enrolled there; And one day in a week to touch no food, And but one meal on every day beside,—

The which I hope is not enrolled there; And then, to sleep but three hours in the night, And not be seen to wink of all the day, (When I was wont to think no harm all night, And make a dark night too of half the day.)—Which I hope well is not enrolled there:

O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,—Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep!

King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these. [please;]

Biron. Let me say no, my liege, an' if you I only swore to study with your grace, [space. And stay here in your court for three years']

Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest. [jest.]

Biron. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense? [pense.]

King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.

Biron. Come on, then; I will swear to study To know the thing I am forbid to know: [so, As thus,—to study where I well may dine, When I to feast expressly am forbid; Or study where to meet some mistress fine, When mistresses from common sense are hid;

Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my troth.
If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know:
Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study
And train our intellects to vain delight, [quite, Biron. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain,

Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain;
As, painfully to pore upon a book [while
To seek the light of truth; while truth the Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
Light, seeking light, doth light of light
beguile:

So, are you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye;

Who dazling so, that eye shall be his hood,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,
That will not be deep-searched with saucy
looks:

Small have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from others' looks.
These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,
That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining nights
Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.

Too much to know, is to know nought; but
And every godfather can give a name.
King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good prolong. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Biron. The spring is near, when green geese are a breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Biron. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.

Biron. Something, then, in rhyme.
King. Biron is like an envious sneaping frost, [spring,
That bites the first-born infants of the Biron. Well, say I am; why should proud summer boast

Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in an abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more desire a rose [shows;
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled
But like of each thing that in season grows.
So you, to study now it is too late,
Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.

King. Well, sit you out: go home, Biron;
adieu!

Biron. No, my good lord, I have sworn to stay with you:
And though I have for barbarism spoke more
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,
Yet confident I'll keep to what I swore, [day,
And bide the penance of each three years'

Give me the paper,—let me read the
And to the strict'st decrees I'll write King. How well this yielding from shame!

Biron. [Reads.] "Item, That shall come within a mile of my count-this been proclaim'd!" Long. [Reads.] Biron. Let's see the penalty. [Reads.] pain of losing her tongue."—Who's Long. Marry, that did I.

Biron. Sweet lord, Long. To fright them hence with penalty.

Biron. A dangerous law against [Reads.] "Item, If any man be with a woman within the term of the he shall endure such public shame of the court can possibly devise."

This article, my liege, yourself must
For well you know, here comes
The French king's daughter with speak—

A maid of grace and complete may
About surrender up of Aquitaine
To her decrepit, sick, and bed-ridden
Therefore this article is made in vain.
Or vainly comes the admired prince.

King. What say you, lords? I will quite forget.

Biron. So study evermore is over-
While it doth study to have what it
It doth forget to do the thing it should
And when it hath the thing it should
'Tis won, as towns with fire; so won King. We must of force dispense.

She must lie here on mere necessity.
Biron. Necessity will make us all Three thousand times within this time
For every man with his affects is here
Not by might master'd, but by speech.
If I break faith this word shall speak
I am forsworn on mere necessity.

So to the laws at large I write my
And he that breaks them in the Stands in attainder of eternal shame.
Suggestions are to others, as to me
But I believe, although I seem so hot,
I am the last that will not keep his oath.
But is there no quick recreation grow King. Ay, that there is. Our know, is haunted

With a refined traveller of Spain;
A man in all the world's new fashion
That hath a mint of phrases in his
One, whom the music of his own voice
Doth ravish like enchanting harmony.
A man of compliments, whom right
Have chose as umpire of their match.
This child of fancy, that Armado
For interim to our studies, shall
In high-born words, the worth of many
From tawny Spain, lost in the world,
How you delight, my lords, I know

But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,
And I will use him for my minstrelsy.
Biron. Armado is a most illustrious wight,
A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.
Long. Costard the swain, and he, shall be our sport;

And, so to study, three years is but short.
Biron. Dull, with a letter, and Costard.
Dull. Which is the duke's own person?

Biron. This, fellow; what wouldst thou?
Dull. I myself reprehend his own person.
For I am his grace's tharborough; but I would be his own person in flesh and blood.

Biron. This is he.
Dull. Signior Arm—Arm—commenda you.
There's villainy abroad: this letter will tell you
more.

Cost. Sir, the contempt thereof are as touch-
King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.
Biron. How long soever the matter, I hope to God for high words. [grant us patience]

Long. A high hope for a low heaven: God
Biron. To hear, or forbear laughing!

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forbear both.
Biron. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the marriage.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Biron. In what manner?
Cost. In manner and form following, sir;
all those three; I was seen with her in the manor house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which,
put together, is, in manner and form following.

Biron. Sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman: for the form,—in some form.
Biron. For the following, sir!

Cost. As it shall follow in my correction;
and God defend the right!

King. Will you hear this letter with atten-Biron. As we would hear an oracle.
Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

King. [Reads.] "Great deputy, the within's vice-regent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God, and body's fostering nurse." Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. [Reads.] "So it is—"
Cost. It may be so; but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so. King. Peace!

Cost.—be to me, and every man that dares not fight.
King. No words!

Cost.—of other men's secrets, I beseech you.
King. [Reads.] "So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when I about the sixth hour; when beasts most graze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper;

so much for the time when. Now for the ground which; which, I mean, I walked upon;
it is yeldest thy park. Then for the place it is where, I mean, I did encounter that where; where, I mean, I did encounter that most chaste and posterous count, that draweth from my snow-white pen the abon-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest; but to the place, where,—it standeth north-north-east and by east from the standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden:
there did I see that low-spirited swain, that base minion of thy mirth." Cost. Me.

King. [Reads.] "—that unlettered small-knowing soul," Cost. Me.

King. [Reads.] "—that shallow vessel," Cost. Still me.

King. [Reads.] "—which, as I remember, [night Costard],"
Cost. O, me.

King. [Reads.] "—sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, with—will,—O, with—but with this I passion to say volens, nolens,"

Cost. With a wench.
King. [Reads.] "—with a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Usm I [as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on] have sent to thee, to receive the maid of punishment, by thy sweet grace's officer, Antony Dull; a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation." [Dull.

Dull. Me, an't please you: I am Antony King. [Reads.] "For Jaquenetta, (so is the weaker vessel called, which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain,) I keep her as a vessel of thy land's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty, "Don Adriano de Armado."

Biron. This is not so well as I looked for,
but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst.—But,
Cost. what say you to this?

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.
King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it,
but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir: I was taken with a damsel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed damsel.
Cost. This was no damsel neither, sir: she was a virgin. [claimed virgin.

King. It is so varied too; for it was proclaimed. If it were, I deny her virginity: I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir.
Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.
King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence:
you shall fast a week with bran and water.
Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.

My lord Biron, see him delivered o'er—
And go we, lords, to put in practice that

Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.

[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumain.]

Biron. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat.

[Scorn.—
These oaths and laws will prove an idle sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir; for true it is,
I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and, therefore, Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again; and till then, Sit thee down,

sorrow!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park.

Before Armado's House.

Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it, when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear boy.

Moth. No, no; O lord! sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Moth. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenal?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epithet appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appeti-tent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir? I pretty, and my saying apt? Or I apt, and my saying pretty? Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little. Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise. [praise.]

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same
Arm. What, that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers:
thou heatest my blood.

Moth. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. [Aside.] He speaks the mere contrary,
—crosses love not him.

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible.

Moth. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning,—it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

[Exit.]
Moth. You are a gentleman, and a gamester,

Arm. I confess both; they are varnish of a complete man.

Moth. Then, I am sure, you know much the gross sum of dence-as-sure

Arm. It doth amount to one marvel.

Moth. Which the base vulgar do Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a study? Now, here's three studied, thrice wink; and how easy it is to

to the word three, and study three words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Moth. [Aside.] To prove you a Moth. I will hereupon confess I am and as it is base for a soldier to love in love with a base wench. If drawn sword against the humour of affection, deliver me from the reprobate thought would take desire prisoner, and ransom to any French courtier for a new courtesy. I think scorn to sigh; I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me what great men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules!—More ity, dear boy, name more; and, sweet let them be men of good repute and Moth. Samson, master: he was a good carriage, great carriage,—for he the town-gates on his back like a port

he was in love.

Arm. O well-knit Samson! strong Samson! I do excel thee in my much as thou didst me in carrying am in love too—who was Samson's

dear Moth?

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Moth. Of all the four, or the three,
two; or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what colour
Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Moth. As I have read, sir; and that them too.

Arm. Green, indeed, is the colour of but to have a love of that colour, mo

Samson had small reason for it. He affected her for her wit.

Moth. It was so, sir, for she had a Arm. My love is most immaculate and red. [Masked under such a Moth. Most immaculate thoughts, master.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated Moth. My father's wit, and my tongue, assist me! [pretty and piteous]

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child, Moth. If she be made of white and

Her faults will ne'er be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are

And fears by pale-white shown;
Then, if she fear, or be to blame,

By this you shall not know;

For still her cheeks possess the same,
Which native she doth owe.

A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King Moth. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since; but, I think, now 'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

Arm. I will have that subject newly writ over, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl, that I took in the park with the rational kind Costard: she deserves well.

Moth. [Aside.] To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master.

Arm. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in Moth. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench. Arm. I may sing.

Moth. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Dull, Costard, and Jaquenetta.

Dull. Sir, the duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe; and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance; but a' must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park: she is allowed for the day-woman. Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing.

Jag. Man.

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.

Jag. That's hereby.

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Jag. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Jag. With that face! Arm. I love thee.

Jag. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Jag. Fair weather after you!

Dull. Come, Jaquenetta; away.

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Cost. I am more bound to you than your followers, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Moth. Come, you transgressing slave; away!

Cost. Let me not be pent up, sir: I will fast, being loose.

Moth. No, sir; that were fast and loose;
thou shalt to prison.

Cost. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of dissolution that I have seen, some shall see—

Moth. What shall some see?

Cost. Nay, nothing, master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God I have as little patience as another man; and therefore I can be quiet.

[Exeunt Moth and Costard.]

Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forewarned, (which is a great argument of falsehood,) if I love; and how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; Love is a devil; there is no evil angel but Love. Yet was Samson so tempted, —and he had an excellent strength; yet was Solomon so seduced,—and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club; and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second clause will not serve my turn; the pseudo he respecta not, the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to be called boy; but his glory is, to subdue men. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonneteer.

Devise, wit! write, pen! for I am for whole volumes in folio! [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A part of the Park. A Pavilion and Tents at a distance.

Enter the Princess of France, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, and other Attendants. [Cost spirits:]

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dear-Consider whom the king your father sends;

To whom he sends; and what's his embassy:
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem;

To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,

Matchless Navarre; the plex of no less weight
Than Aquitaine,—a dowry for a queen.

Be now as prodigal of all dear grace,
As nature was in making graces dear,

When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,

Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,

Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues;
Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues;

I am less proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be counted wise

In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker:—Good Boyet,

You are not ignorant, all-telling fane
Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,

Till painful study shall outweigh three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:

Therefore to see seem'th it a needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,

To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you

As our best moving fair solicitor;
Tell him, the daughter of the king of France,

On serious business, craving quick despatch,
Importunes personal conference with his grace:

Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go, Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.— [Exit Boyet.]

Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?
1 Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?
Mar. I know him, madam: at a marriage
feast,

Between Lord Perigot and the beauteous heir
Of Jacques Faulconbridge, solemnized,
In Normandy, saw I this Longaville:
A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;
Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,
'If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil,
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills [power]

It should none spare that come within his Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is't so? [humours know]

Mar. They say so most that most his Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as
Who are the rest? [they grow]

Kath. The young Dumain, a well accom-plish'd youth,

Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd: [ill];
Most pover to do most harm, least knowing
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw
Is my report to his great worthiness.

Ros. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him: if I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal;
His eye begs occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue (conceit's expositor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse. [love, Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in
That every one her own hath garnish'd
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?
1 Lord. Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?
Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair ap-
And he and his competitors in oath, [pronech,
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady, Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learn'd,

He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.
Here comes Navarre. [The ladies mask.]

Enter King, Longaville, Dumain, and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the of Navarre.

Prin. "Fair," I give you back again;
"welcome" I have not yet: the root court is too high to be yours; and to
to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, my court.

Prin. I will be welcome, then: come; King. Hear me, dear lady, I have an oath.

Prin. Our lady help my lord! he'll King. Not for the world, fair madam, my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will King. Your ladyship is ignorant what Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance wise,

Where now his knowledge must prove
I hear your grace hath sworn-out home;
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord;
And sin to break it.

But pardon me, I am too sudden-bolt:
To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me;
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my oath,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I Prin. You will the sooner, that I woe
For you'll prove perjur'd, if you make me Biron. Did not I dance with you in once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Biron. I know you did.

Ros. How needless was it,
To ask the question!

Biron. You must not be so Ros. 'Tis long of you, that spare not such questions.

Biron. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too
Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the Biron. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fools should ask.
Biron. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!
Biron. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, so you be none.
Biron. Nay, then I will be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

King. My father here doth
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns
Being but the one half of an entire sum;
Disburied by my father in his wars:
But say that he, or we, (as neither have)
Received that sum, yet there remains
A hundred thousand more; in surety
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not val'd to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth;

For here he doth demand to have repaid
A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,
On payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
To have his little live in Aquitaine;
Which we much rather had depart withal,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitaine, so gilded as it is.
Dear princess, were not his requests so far From reason's yielding, your fair self should make
A yielding, 'gainst some reason, in my breast,
And go well satisfied to France again. (wrong,
Prin. You do the king my father too much
In so unseemly to confess receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.
King. I do protest, I never heard of it;
And if you prove it, I'll repay it back,
Or yield up Aquitaine.
Prin. We arrest your word.—
Boyet, you can produce acquaintances
For such a sum, from special officers
Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so.
Boyet, So please your grace, the packet is not come.

Where that and other specialties are bound:
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.
King. It shall suffice me: at which intermentime, receive such welcome at my hand,
As honour, without breach of honour, may Make tender of to thy true worthiness:
You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied fair harbour in my house.
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell: to-morrow shall we visit you again. [well:] Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your grace! [place:]
King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every [Exit King and his train.]

Biron. Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart.

Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I Biron. I would, you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Biron. Bleak at the heart.

Ros. Alack! let it bleed.

Biron. Would that do it good!

Ros. My physic says, ay.

Biron. Will you prick 't with your eye?

Ros. No point, with my knife.

Biron. Now, God save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Biron. I cannot stay thanksgiving.

[Retiring.]
Dum. Sir, I pray you, a word: what lady is that same?

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her
name.

Dum. A valiant lady. Monsieur, fare you
well.

Long. I beseech you a word: what is she in the white? [in the light.]

Boyet. A woman sometimes, and you saw her Long. Perchance, light in the light. I desire her name. [sire that, were a shame.]

Boyet. She hath but one for herself; to de-Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard.
Long. God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good sir, be not offended.
She is an heir of Faulconbridge.

Long. Nay, my choler is ended.
She is a most sweet lady.

Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be.
[Exit Long.]

Biron. What's her name, in the cap?

Boyet. Katharine, by good hap.

Biron. Is she wedded, or no?

Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.

Biron. You are welcome, sir: adieu.

Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to
you. [Exit Biron.—Ladies unmus.]

Mar. That last is Biron, the merry mad-cap
Not a word with him but a jest. [lord:]

Boyet. And every jest but a word.
Prin. It was well done of you to take him at his word. [was to board.]

Boyet. I was as willing to grapple, as he
Mar. Two hot sheeps, marry!

Boyet. And wherefore not ships?
No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips. [finish the jest:]

Mar. You sheep, and I pasture: shall that Boyet. So you grant pasture for me.

[Offering to kiss her.]
Mar. Not so, gentle beast:
My lips are no common, though several they Boyet. Belonging to whom? [be]

Mar. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be jangling; but, gentles, agree:

This civil war of wits were much better us'd
On Navarre and his book-men; for here 'tis abused. [dom lies:]

Boyet. If my observation, (which very sel-
By the heart's still rhetoric disclosed with eyes,
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.

Prin. With what? [affected.]

Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle, Prin. Your reason. [their retire]

Boyet. Why, all his behaviours did make To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire: [press'd:]

His heart, like an agate, with your print imprond with his form, in his eye pride express'd:
His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eye-sight to be;
All senses to that sense did make their repair,
To feel only looking on fairest of fair.

Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy;
Who, tending their own worth, from where they were glass'd,

Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd:

[Exit.]

His face's own margin did quote such amazes,
That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.
I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
An' you give him for my sake but one loving kiss. [pos'd—]

Prin. Come to our pavilion: Boyet is dis-Boyet. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath disclosed:

I only have made a mouth of his eye,
By adding a tongue, which I know will not lie.
Ros. Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skillfully. [scans of him.]

Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns Ros. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches!

Mar. No.

Boyet. What, then, do you see!

Ros. Ay, our way to be gone.

Boyet. You are too hard for me.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Warble, child: make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth. [Singing.] Consoliel—

Arm. Sweet air!—Go, tenderness of years;
take this key, give enlargement to the swain,
bring him festinately hither: I must employ him in a letter to my love. [French brawl]

Moth. Master, will you win your love with a Arm. How meanest thou! brawling in French!

Moth. No, my complete master: but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eye-lids; sigh a note and sing a note; sometimes through the throat, as if you swallowed love by singing love; sometime through the nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like, o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin belly-doublet, like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours; these betray nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note, (do you note, men!) that most are affected to these. [peritena!]

Arm. How hast thou purchased this ex-
Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O—but O—

Moth.—the hobby-horse is forgot.

Arm. Callest thou my love hobby-horse!

Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love, perhaps, a hackney.

Arm. Almost I had,

Moth. Negligent student! learn

Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy!

Moth. And out of heart, master!

three I will prove.

Arm. What wilt thou prove!

Moth. A man, if I live; and thou and without, upon the instant: by his love her, because your heart cannot her; in heart you love her, because you is in love with her; and out of heart

her, being out of heart that you cannot

Arm. I am all these three.

Moth. And three times as much more yet nothing at all.

Arm. Fetch hither the swain: he must me a letter.

Moth. A message well sympathized!

to be ambassador for an ass.

Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou!

Moth. Marry, sir, you must send upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited

I go.

Arm. The way is but short: away!

Moth. As swift as lead, sir.

Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and Moth. Minime, honest master: or

Arm. I say, lead is slow.

Moth. You are too swift, sir, to is that lead slow which is fired from a

Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!

Hereupons me a cannon; and the bullet

I shoot thee at the swain.

Moth. Thump, then, and I flee.

Arm. A most acute juvenal; volu-free of grace!

By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must

Most rude melancholy, valour give

My herald is return'd.

Re-enter Moth with Costard.

Moth. A wonder, master! here's a broken in a shin.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle:—

thy Penney;—begin.

Cost. No enigma, no riddle, no Penney

salve in them all, sir: O, sir, plantain, plantain! no Penney, no Penney: no

sir, but a plantain!

Arm. By virtue, thou enforcest thy silly thought, my spleen: the

my lungs provokes me to ridiculous

O pardon me, my stars! Doth the aiderate take salve for Penney, and Penney for a salve!

Moth. Do the wise think them other-

Arm. No, page: it is an epilogue, course, to make plain

Some obscure precedence that hath

I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,

Were still at odds, being but three.

There's the moral. Now the Penney!

Moth. I will add the Penney.

moral again.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,

And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my Penney.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,

Were still at odds, being but three.

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,

Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good Penney, ending in the goose:

could you desire more!

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat.

Thy pennyworth is good, an your goose

be fat.

To sell a bargain well, is as cunning as fast

and loose: [goose.]

Let me see,—a fat Penney: say, that's a fat

Arm. Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin! [in a shin.]

Moth. By saying that a Costard was broken

Then call'd you for the Penney.

Cost. True, and I for a plantain: thus came your argument in; [bought;

Then the boy's fat Penney, the goose that you had ended the market.

Arm. But tell me; how was there a costard

broken in a shin!

Moth. I will tell you sensibly.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth: I will speak that Penney: [within,

I, Costard, running out, that was safely fell over the threshold and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise

thee.

Cost. O marry me to one Frances:—I smell some Penney, some goose, in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfranchising thy person: thou wast immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true; and now you will be my purveyor, and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from hence, and in lieu thereof, impose upon thee

nothing but this:—[Giving a letter.] Bear

this significant to the country maid Jaquenetta.

[Giving money.] There is remuneration; for the best ward of mine honour is rewarding my dependants.—Moth, follow.

Moth. Like the sequel, I.—Signior Costard,

adieu.

Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my inequity Jew!

Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O, that's the Latin word for three farthings: three farthings,—remuneration.

What's the price of this inkle?—"A penny."—"No, I'll give you a remuneration:"

why, it carries it.—Remuneration!—why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Birron.

Birron. O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation riband may a man buy for a remuneration!

Birron. What is a remuneration!

Cost. Marry, sir, half-penny farthing. [silk.]

Birron. O, why then, three-farthings-worth of Cost. I thank your worship: (God be wi' you.

Birron. O, stay, slave; I must employ thee:

As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,

Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Cost. When would you have it done, sir?

Birron. O, this afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir! fare you well.

Birron. O, thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Birron. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning. [Hark, slave,

Birron. It must be done this afternoon.

It is but this:—

The princess comes to hunt here in the park,

And in her train there is a gentle lady;

When tongues speak sweetly, then they name

her name,

And Rosaline they call her: ask for her;

And to her white hand, see thou do commend

This seal'd-up counsel. [Gives him money.]

There's thy guardon; go.

Cost. Guardon.—O sweet guardon! better than remuneration; eleven-pence farthing

better: most sweet guardon!—I will do it, sir,

in print.—Guardon—remuneration. [Exit.

Birron. O,—and I, forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip;

A very beadle to a humorous sigh;

A critic, nay, a night-watch constable;

A demureing pedant o'er the boy,

Than whom no mortal so magnificent! [Boy;

This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward

This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;

Regent of love-rhymes, lord of folded arms,

Th' anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,

Liege of all loiterers and malcontents,

Dread prince of plaquets, king of cod-pieces,

Sole imperator and great general

Of trotting paritors: (O my little heart!)

And I to be a corporal of his field,

And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop;

What! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!

A woman that is like a German clock;

Still a repairing; ever out of frame;

And never going aright, being a watch,

But being watch'd that it may still go right!

Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all;

And, among three, to love the worst of all;

A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,

With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes;

Ay, and, by heaven, one that will do the deed,

Though Argus were her eunuch and her guard;

And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!

To pray for her! Go to; it is a plague

That Cupid will impose for my neglect

Of his almighty dreadful little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, groan:
Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.
[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park.

Enter the Princess, Rosaline, Maria, Katharina, Boyet, Lords, Attendants,
and a Forester.

Prin. Was that the king, that spurr'd his horse so hard
Against the steep uprising of the hill? [He.
Boyet. I know not; but I think it was not Prin. Whoe'er he was, he show'd a mounting mind.

Well, lords, to-day we shall have our despatch;

On Saturday we will return to France.—
Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush
That we must stand and play the murderer in?

For. Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice;

A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.
Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,

And thereupon thou speak'st, the fairest shoot.
For. Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.
Prin. What, what? first praise me, and again say no?

O short-liv'd pride! Not fair! alack for woe!
For. Yes, madam, fair.

Prin. Nay, never paint me now:
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here, good my glass:—[Giving him money.]
Take this for telling true:

Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

Prin. See, see! my beauty will be sav'd
O' heresy in fact, fit for these days!

A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.—

But come, the bow:—now mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well is then accounted ill.

Thus will I save my credit in the shoot:
Not wounding, pity would not let me do't;

If wounding, then it was to show my skill,
That more for praise than purpose meant to
And out of question, so it is sometimes; [kill.
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part,

We bend to that the working of the heart;
As I for praise alone now seek to spill

The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill.

Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-
Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be
Lords o'er their lords.

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Boyet. Here comes a member of monwealth.

Enter Costard.
Cost. God dig-you-den all!

Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, rest that have no heads.

Cost. Which is the greatest lady, the Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.

Cost. The thickest, and the tallest!
truth is truth.

An' your waist, mistress, were as slender
One o' these maids' girdles for you should be fit.

Are not you the chief woman? you Prin. What's your will, sir? what's your Cost. I have a letter from monsieur to one lady Rosaline.

Prin. O, thy letter, thy letter! he's friend of mine;

Stand aside, good bearer.—Boyet, I Break up this capon.

Boyet. I am bound to
This letter is mistook; it importeth
It is writ to Jaquenetta.

Prin. We will read it, Break the neck of the wax, and every
ear.

Boyet. [Reads.] "By heaven, that fair, is most infallible; true, that beauteous; truth itself, that thou art More fairer than fair, beautiful than teous, truer than truth itself, have tion on thy herical vassal! The momous and most illustrious king Cap-eye upon the pernicious and indubitable Zenelophon; and he it was that might say Vrai, vrai, vrai; which to anatomize vulgar, (O base and obscure vulgar!)
He came, saw, and overcame; he came saw, two; overcame, three. Who came king: Why did he come to see? Why saw? to overcome: To whom came he?
beggard: What saw he? the beggar's overcame he? the beggar. The is victory; on whose side? the king's captive is enriched; on whose side?
beggard's. The catastrophe is a mystery whose side? the king's?—no, on both or one in both. I am the king; for the comparison: thou the beggar; for nesseth thy lowliness. Shall I commend love? I say: Shall I enforce thy could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will shall thou exchange for rags I rags littles! titles; for thyself! me. Repecting thy reply, I profane my lips foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart thy every part.

Prin. In the dearest design of France,
Don Adriano de Armado
Thou dost thou hear the Nemean lion prey:

Boyet. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?
Ros. Shall I teach you to know?

Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.
Why, she that bears the bow.

Prin. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if Horn me by the neck, if horns that year mis-Pity put on!

Ros. Well, then, I am the shooter.
Boyet.

Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself:
come not near.

Prin. You still wrangle with her, Boyet,
and she strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower; have I hit her now?

Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old killing, that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?

Boyet. So may I answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when queen Guinever
of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Ros. "Thou cannot not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou cannot not hit it, my good man."

Boyet. "An I cannot, cannot, cannot,
An I cannot, another can."

Cost. By my troth, most pleasant: how both did hit it!

Mar. A mark! O, mark! that mark!
Boyet. A mark, says my lady!

Let the mark have a prick in't, to mete at, if
it may be.

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-
Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be
Lords o'er their lords.

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Sublimely fall his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play:
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?

Food for his rage, repasture for his den.
Prin. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?

What vane, what weather-cock! did you ever hear better?

Boyet. I am much deceiv'd, but I remember the style.

Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;

A phantasm, a Moorish, and one that makes
To the prince and his book-mates.

Prin. Thou, fellow, a word.
Who gave thee this letter?

Cost. I told you; my lord.
Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?

Cost. From my lord to my lady.
Prin. From which lord, to which lady?

Cost. From my lord Biron, a good master of mine.

To a lady of France, that he called Rosaline.
Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter.—
Come, lords, away.—[another day.]

Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine
[Exit Princess and Train.]

Boyet. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?
Ros. Shall I teach you to know?

Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.
Why, she that bears the bow.

Prin. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if Horn me by the neck, if horns that year mis-
Pity put on!

Ros. Well, then, I am the shooter.
Boyet.

Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself:
come not near.

Prin. You still wrangle with her, Boyet,
and she strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower; have I
hit her now?

Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old killing, that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?

Boyet. So may I answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when queen Guinever
of Britain was a little wench, as touching the
hit it.

Ros. "Thou cannot not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou cannot not hit it, my good man."

Boyet. "An I cannot, cannot, cannot,
An I cannot, another can."

Cost. By my troth, most pleasant: how both did hit it!

Mar. A mark! O, mark! that mark!
Boyet. A mark, says my lady!

Let the mark have a prick in't, to mete at, if
it may be.

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-
Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be
Lords o'er their lords.

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Mar. Wide o' the bow hand! I' faith your hand is out.

Cost. Indeed a' must shoot nearer, or he'll Boyet. An' if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.

Cost. Then will she get the upshot by cleaving the pin.

Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily;
your lips grow foul.

Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir:
challenge her to bowl.

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl.

[Exit Boyet and Maria.]
Cost. By my soul, a swal! a most simple clown!

Lord, lord! how the ladies and I have put O' my troth, most sweet jests! most tucoy vulgar wit!

When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely,
Armado o' the one side,—O, a most dainty
man!

So see him walk before a lady, and to bear
To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly a' will swear!

And his page o' the other side, that hand of Ah, heavens, it is a most patheticul!

[Shouting within.] Sola, sola!

[Exit running.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park.
Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Nath. Very reverent sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguis,
—in blood; ripe as a pomewater, who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of celo,—the sky, the walkin, the heaven; and anon falleth like a crab on the face of terra,—the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least; but, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first hand.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo. [pricket.
Dull. 'Twas not a haud credo; 'twas a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way,
of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination,—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or, rather,
unlettered, or, ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,
—to insert again my haud credo for a deer.

Dull. I said the deer was not a haud credo,
'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus!—O thou monster ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts:

Biron. [Aside.] O, rhymes are guards on Disfigure not his alop. [wanton Cupid's hose:]
Long. This same shall go.

[Reads.]
"Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
Gaiest whom the world cannot hold argument,

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke, deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love:
Thy grace, being gaw'd, cures all disgrace
in me.

Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth
dost shine,

Ezhal't this vapour-vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then, it is no fault of mine,
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise,
To lose an oath, to win a paradise!"

Biron. [Aside.] This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity;

A green goose, a goddess; pure, pure idolatry,
God amend us, God amend! we are much out
o' the way.

Long. By whom shall I send this?—Com-
[Steps aside.]

Biron. [Aside.] All hid, all hid, an old infant fantasy.

Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eyes,
More sarks to the mill! O heavens, I have my wish.

Enter Dumain, with a paper.

Dumain transform'd! four woodcocks in a dish!
Dum. O most divine Kato!

Biron. [Aside.] O most profane coxcomb!
Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal
eye!

Biron. [Aside.] By earth, she is not, cord-Dum. Her amber hairs for foul have amber coted.

Biron. [Aside.] An amber-colour'd raven Dum. As upright as the cedar.

Biron. [Aside.] Stoop, I say;
Her shoulder is with child.

Dum. As fair as day.

Biron. [Aside.] Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine.

Dum. O that I had my wish!

Long. [Aside.] And I had mine!

King. [Aside.] And I mine too, good lord!

Biron. [Aside.] Amen, so I had mine; is not that a good word!

Dum. I would forget her: but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.

Biron. [Aside.] A fever in your blood!
why, then incision

Would let her out in saucers: sweet misprision!
Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Biron. [Aside.] Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.

Dum. [Reads.]

"On a day,—alack the day!
Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom, passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the bee
All unseem, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's bird;
Air, quail he, thy cheeks may kiss;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But alack! my hand is sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn;
Vow, alack! for youth unmet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee,—
Thou for whom Jove would swear Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love."

This will I send, and something else
That shall express my true love's face;
O, would the King, Biron, and Long,
Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a passion
For none offend, where all alike do Long. [Advancing.] Dumain, thy far from charity.

That in love's grief desir'd society:
You may look pale, but I should blush
To be o'erheard, and taken napping;
King. [Advancing.] Come, sir, you
as his your case is such;

You chide at him, offending twice as
You do not love Maria; Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile Nor never lay his wreathed arms about His loving bosom, to keep down his
I have been closely shrouded in this
And mark'd you both, and for you blush:

I heard your guilty rhymes, observed Saw sighs leak from you, noted passion:

Ah me! says one; O Jove! the other One, her hairs were gold, crystal
eyes:

[To Long.] You would for paradise [To Dumain.] And Jove, for your love infringe an oath.

What will Biron say, when that he shall Faith infringed, which such zeal did How will he scorn! how will he spend
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much Biron. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy [Descends from the stage.]

Ah, good my liege, I pray thee, pardon
Good heart! what grace hast thou, reprove

These worms for loving, that art most Your eyes do make no coaches; in your

There is no certain princess that appears;
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing;
Only I nouns but minstrels like of sonnetting.
But are you not ashamed I say, are you not
All three of you, to be thus much o'er-shot!
You found his mote; the king your mote did
But I a beam do find in each of three, [see;
what a scene of foolery have I seen,
Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen!
I am, with what strict patience have I sat,
To see a king transformed to a gnat!
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon tuning a jig,
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And mirth Timon laugh at idle toys!

Where lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dumain!
And gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain!
And where my liege's! all about the breast—
a candle, ho!

King. Too bitter is thy jest.
Biron. Betray'd thus to thy over-view!

Biron. Not you by me, but I betray'd to that an honest; I, that hold it sin [you;
to betray the vow I am engaged in;
and betray'd, by keeping company with men, like men, of strange inconstancy.

When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme!
I'll praise for Jean I or spend a minute's time in praising me! When shall you hear that I praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
a wit, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
a leg, a limb!

Soft! Whither away so fast!
I am a man, or a thief, that gallops so! [go.
Biron. I part from love; good lover, let me
Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.

Jaq. God bless the King!

Cost. What present hast thou there!

King. Some certain treason.

King. What makes treason here?

King. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing neither,
The treason, and you, go in peace away together.

Jaq. I beseech your grace, let this letter
Our parson misdeeds it; 'twas treason, he said.

[To him.]
King. Biron, read it over—Giving the letter
King. Where hadst thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

King. How now! what is in you? why dost thou tear it?

Biron. A toy, my liege, a toy; your grace Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. [Picking up the piece.] It is Biron's writing, and here is his name.

Biron. [To Costard.] Ah, you whoreson laggerhead! you were born to do me
shame.

Cost. My lord, guilty; I confess, I confess.

King. What!

Biron. That you three fools lack'd me fool

He, he, and you,—and you, my liege,—and I,
Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.
O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you
Dum. Now the number is even. [more.
Biron. True, true; we are four.—
Will these turtles be gone?

King. Hence, sir; away!
Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitor stay.

[Exeunt Costard and Jaquenetta.]
Biron. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O, let us embrace!

As true we are as flesh and blood can be:
The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his
face;

Young blood doth not obey an old decree:
We cannot cross the cause why we were born;
Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What, did these rant lines show some love of thine?

Biron. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
Kisses the base ground with obedient
What peremptory eagle-sighted eye [breast!
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty?

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd these now!

My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;
She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Biron. My eyes are, then, no eyes, nor I Biron:

O, but for my love, day would turn to night!
Of all complexions the cull'd sovereignty
Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;
Where several worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,— Fie, painted rhetoric! O, she needs it not:
To things of sale a seller's praise belongs;
She passes praise; then praise too short doth blot.

A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.

O, 'tis the sun, that maketh all things alive!
King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

Biron. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.

O, who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,
If that she learn not of her eye to look:

No face is fair, that is not full so black.

King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell.

The hue of dungeons, and the colour of
And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Biron. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.

O, if in black my lady's brows be dock'd,
It mourns, that painting and usurping hair,
Should ravish doters with a false aspect;
And therefore is she born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the fashion of the days;
For native blood is counted painting now;
And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise,
Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.
Dum. To look like her are chimney-sweepers
black.

Long. And since her time are colliers counted
bright.

King. And Ethiops of their sweet com-Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Biron. Your mistresses dare never come in
For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. 'Twere good, yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,

I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.

Biron. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomaday here.

King. No devil will fright thee then so Dum. I never knew a man hold vile stuff so dear.

Long. Look, here's thy love: [Showing his shoe.] my foot and her face too.

Biron. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes,

Her feet were much too dainty for such Dum. O vile! then, as she goes, what upward lies

The street should see as she walk'd over King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?

Biron. O, nothing so sure; and thereby all King. Then leave this chat: and, good Biron. now prove

Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.
Dum. Ay, marry, there; some flattery for this evil.

Long. O, some authority how to proceed:
Some tricks, some guillets, how to cheat the Dum. Some salue for perjury.

Biron. O, 'tis more than need,—
Have at you, then, affection's men at arms!
Consider what you first did swear unto,—
To fast,—to study,—and to see no woman;
Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too
And abstinence engenders maladies; [young;
And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
In that each of you hath forsworn his book,
Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look?

For when would you, my lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence,
Without the beauty of a woman's face?

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the Academes,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean
Why, universal pleading prisons up [fire.
The stupid spirits in the arteries;
As motion, and long-during action, thus

The sinewy vigour of the traveller.
Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of
And study, too, the cause of your
For where is any author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye
Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are, our learning likewise
Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
Do we not likewise see our learning too?
O, we have made a vow to study, lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our
For when would you, my liege, or you,
In leaden contemplation, have found
Such fiery numbers as the prompting
Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain
And therefore, finding barren practice
Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toils.
But love, first learned in a lady's eye,
Lives not alone immured in the brain;
But, with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every part,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices,
It adds a precious seeing to the eye.
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound;
When the suspicious hum of both the senses
Love's feeling is more soft, and smooth,
Than are the tender horns of cockled snails;
Love's tongue proves dainty Iacchus;
For valour, is not love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as sphinx; as sweet and smooth,
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with
And, when Love speaks, the voice of gods

Makes heaven droway with the harmony;
Never durst poet touch a pen to write,
Until his ink were temper'd with Love's
O, then his lines would ravish savage
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean
They are the books, the arts, the Academes,
That show, contain, and nourish all that Else none at all in nought proves excellent.
Then fools you were these women to love;
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove
For wisdom's sake, a word that loves all
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all Or for men's sake, the authors of these Or women's sake, by whom we men are Let us once lose our oaths, to find our Or else we lose ourselves to keep our
It is religion to be thus forsworn;
For charity itself fulfils the law;
And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and, Long.
the field!

Biron. Advance your standards, and Pell-mell, down with them! but beware
In conflict that you get the sun of them

Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these gloves by;

Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?
King. And win them too; therefore let us devise

Some entertainment for them in their tents.
Biron. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;

Then, homeward, every man attack the hand
Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon, [them.
We will with some strange pastime solace
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;
For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours, Fore-run fair Love, strawing her way with flowers.

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

Biron. Allons! allons! — Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn;

And justice always whirls in equal measure:
Light wenches may prove plagues to men for-sworn;

If so, our copper buys no better treasure.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park.
Enter Holofemes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your recesses at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scurrility, witty without affectation, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intitled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Nati hominem tanquam te; his humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his language flow'd, his eyes ambitious, his gait metaphysical, and his general behaviour vain, religulous, and thrasonical. He is too plected, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were,
too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.
[Takes out his table-book.]

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument.
I abhor such fanatical phantasms, such in-rackers and point-devise companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak dour, fine, should pronounce, debt,—d, e, b, t, not neighbour vocatur nebour; neigh abbreviated ne. This is abominable, (which he would call abominable;) it insinuateth me of inanie; Nath. Lais Deo, bone intelligo.

Hol. Bone! bone, for bone: Priscian a little scratched; 'twill serve.

Enter Armado, Moli, and Costard.

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Video, et gaudeo.

Arm. [To Moli.] Chirrah!

Hol. Quare Chirrah, not sirrah!

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moli. [Aside to Costard.] They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

Cost. O, they have lived long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus;
thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

Moli. Peace! the peal begins.

Arm. [To Hol.] Monsieur, are you not lettered?

Moli. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book.—What is a, b, spelt backward, with the horn on his head?

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Arm. Ba! most silly sheep, with a horn
—You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant?

Moli. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them,—a, e, i,— Moli. The sheep; the other two concludes it,—o, u.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit; snip, snap, quick and home; it rejoiceth
my intellect: true wit.

Moli. Offered by a child to an old man;
which is wit-old.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moli. Horns. [Whip thy gig.]

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant; go,

Moli. Lend me your horn to make one,
and I will whip about your infamy circumcised—a gig of a cuckold's horn.

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world,
thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread:
hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou half-penny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father wouldst thou make me! Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' ends, as they say. [Unquen.]

Hol. O, I smell false Latin; dunghill for Arm. Arts-man, praeambula; we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Hol. Or mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posteriors of this day;
which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of this day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, chose: sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman; and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend:—for what is inward between us, let it pass:—I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy:—I beseech thee, apparel thy head:—and amongst other importunate and most serious designs,—and of great import indeed, too,—but let that pass:—for I must tell thee, it will please his grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger thus dally with my excriment, with my mustachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable: some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass.—The very all of all is,—but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy,—that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curts and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies.—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistance, at the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrious, and learned gentleman, before the princess, I say, none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabees; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the Great; the page, Hercules.

Arm. Pardon, sir; error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, "Well done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!" that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the Worthies?—

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antic. I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Fie, Goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither.
Hol. Alions! I will employ thee.
Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or will play on the tabor to the Worthies; let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to come away!

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park.
Before the Princess's Pavilion.
Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich. If fairings come thus plentifully in:—
Kath. A lady wall'd about with diamonds! Look you, what I have from the loving Ros. Madam, came nothing else about that!

Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much as would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper. Writ on both sides the leaf, margin and all. That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.
Ros. That was the way to make his head wax;

For he hath been five thousand years a fool.
Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy one too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him.
Kath. He made her melancholy, and heavy;

And so she died: had she been light, like Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit. She might ha' been a grandam ere she did. And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, woman? this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty of Ros. We need more light to And meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light by talking. Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it in the dark.
Kath. So do not you, for you are a light.

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.
Kath. You weigh me not! O, that's past care.

Prin. Well banded both; a set of wit. But Rosaline, you have a favour too: Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew. An if my face were but as fair as yours, My favour were as great; he witnesseth this.

Nay, I have verses too, I thank Biron: The numbers true; and, were the numbers true, I were the fairest goddess on the ground.

I am compar'd to twenty thousand fair ones. O, he hath drawn my picture in this letter.

Prin. Anything like?

Ros. Much, in the letters; nothing, in the person.
Prin. Beauteous as ink: a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text is in a copy-book.
Ros. Were pencils! how! let me not die your debtor.

Prin. I'll make one in a dance, or will play on the tabor to the Worthies; let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to come away!

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park.
Before the Princess's Pavilion.
Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich. If fairings come thus plentifully in:—
Kath. A lady wall'd about with diamonds! Look you, what I have from the loving Ros. Madam, came nothing else about that!

Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much as would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper. Writ on both sides the leaf, margin and all. That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.
Ros. That was the way to make his head wax;

For he hath been five thousand years a fool.
Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy one too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him.
Kath. He made her melancholy, and heavy;

And so she died: had she been light, like Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit. She might ha' been a grandam ere she did. And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, woman? this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty of Ros. We need more light to And meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light by talking. Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it in the dark.
Kath. So do not you, for you are a light.

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.
Kath. You weigh me not! O, that's past care.

Prin. Well banded both; a set of wit. But Rosaline, you have a favour too: Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew. An if my face were but as fair as yours, My favour were as great; he witnesseth this.

Nay, I have verses too, I thank Biron: The numbers true; and, were the numbers true, I were the fairest goddess on the ground.

I am compar'd to twenty thousand fair ones. O, he hath drawn my picture in this letter.

Prin. Anything like?

Ros. Much, in the letters; nothing, in the person.
Prin. Beauteous as ink: a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text is in a copy-book.
Ros. Were pencils! how! let me not die your debtor.

Prin. I'll make one in a dance, or will play on the tabor to the Worthies; let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to come away!

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park.
Before the Princess's Pavilion.
Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich. If fairings come thus plentifully in:—
Kath. A lady wall'd about with diamonds! Look you, what I have from the loving Ros. Madam, came nothing else about that!

Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much as would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper. Writ on both sides the leaf, margin and all. That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.
Ros. That was the way to make his head wax;

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore, I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour; When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest, Toward that shade I might behold address The king and his companions: warily I stole into a neighbour thicket by, And overheard what you shall overhear: That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here. Their herald is a pretty knavish page, That well by heart hath cou'd his embassy: Action and accent did they teach him there; "Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear."

And ever and anon they made a doubt, Presence majestical would put him out; [see: "For," quoth the king, "an angel shall thou yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously." The boy replied, "An angel is not evil: I should have fear'd her, had she been a devil." With that, all laugh'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder, Making the bold wag by their prison bolder: One rubb'd his elbow, thus, and fear'd, and swore

A better speech was never spok'n before; Another, with his finger and his thumb, Cried, "Vas! we will do't, come what will come!"

The third he caper'd and cried, "All goes The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell. With that, they all did tumble on the ground, With such a zealous laughter, so profound, That in this spleen ridiculous appears, To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us?

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparel'd Like Muscovites or Russians: as I guess, Their purpose is, to parle, to court, and dance; And every one his love-feat will advance Unto his several mistress, which they'll know By favours several which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd:—

For, ladies, we will every one be mock'd; And not a man of them shall have the grace, Despite of suit, to see a lady's face.—

Hold, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear, And then the king will court thee for his dear; Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me So shall Biron take me for Rosaline.— [thine, And change you favours, too; so shall your loves

Woo contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.
Ros. Come on, then; wear the favours most in sight.

Kath. But in this changing what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs:

They do it but in mocking merriment; And mock for mock is only my intent. Their several counsels they unbosom shall To loves mistook; and so be mock'd withal.

Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd, to talk and greet.
Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?

Prin. No, to the death, we will not move
Nor to their pen'd speech render we no grace;
But while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.
Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt,
The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.

There's no such sport, as sport by sport o'er-thrown;
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our
So shall we stay, mocking intended game;
And they, well mock'd, depart away with
shame.

Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd;
the maskers come. [The ladies mask.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain in Russian habits, and mask'd:
Moth, Musicians, and Attendants.

Moth. "All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!"

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffets.
Moth. "A holy parcel of the fairest dames,
[The ladies turn their backs to him.

That ever turned their backs—to mortal views!"

Biron. "Their eyes," villain, "their eyes."
Moth. "That ever turn'd their eyes to out!"

Boyet. True; "out," indeed.
Moth. "Out of your favours, heavenly
Not to behold!"

Biron. "Once to behold," rogue.
Moth. "Once to behold with your sunbeamed eyes,—with your sun-beamed eyes!"

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;
You were best call it "daughter-beamed eyes."

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.

Biron. Is this your perfectness? be gone,
you rogue!

Ros. What would these strangers know their minds, Boyet?

If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:
Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?
Biron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they? [ation.
Boyet. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.

King. Say to her, we have measur'd many
To tread a measure with her on this grass.

Boyet. They say, that they have measur'd
many a mile,
To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so; ask them how inches

is in one mile: if they have measur'd
The measure, then, of one is easily

Boyet. To come hither, you have miles,

And many miles, the princess bids
How many inches do fill up one mile

Biron. Tell her, we measure Boyet. She hears herself.

Ros. How many weary miles you have danc'd
Are number'd in the travel of one mile

Biron. We number nothing that we
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
That we may do it still without more

Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of
That we, like savages, may worship it

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouds King. Blessed are clouds, to do clouds do!

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and those (Those clouds remov'd) upon our way

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a matter;

Thou now request'st but moonshine King. Then, in our measure but one change:

Thou bidst me beg; this begging
Ros. Play, music; then, say, you it soon.

Not yet;—no dance;—thus change
moon.

King. Will you not dance? How Ros. You took the moon at full, she's chang'd.

King. Yet still she is the moon, and
The music plays; vouchsafe some more

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.
King. But your legs should you cry.

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenchies are
As is the razor's edge invisible, [as keen
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen;

Above the sense of sense: so sensible Beneath their conference; their conceits have wings

Flatter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought,
Ros. Not one word more, my maids: break
off, break off.

Biron. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure King. Farewell, mad wenchies; you have simple wits.

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Mus-
covites.— [Exeunt King, Lords,
Musicians, and Attendants.

Boyet. Taper they are, with your sweet
breath'd puff'd out.

Ros. Well-ill'd wits they have; gross,
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-
night,

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?
This past Biron was out of countenance quite:

Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?
Boyet. Taper they are, with your sweet
breath'd puff'd out.

Ros. Well-ill'd wits they have; gross,
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-
night,

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?
This past Biron was out of countenance quite:

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar, Biron. Nay then, two treys, (an if you so nice,)

Metheglin, wort, and malmsey,—well run, dice!

There's half a dozen sweets.
Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu:
Shoe you can cog, I'll play no more with you.

Biron. One word in secret.
Prin. Let it not be sweet.
Biron. Thou grievest my gall.

Prin. Gall! bitter.
Biron. Therefore meet.
[They converse apart.

Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change
Mar. Name it. [a word?

Fair lady,— Say you so? Fair lord,—
Take that for your fair lady.

Dum. Please it you,
As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.

Kath. What, was your visor made without a tongue?

Long. I know the reason, lady, why you Kath. O for your reason! quickly, sir: I long.

Long. You have a double tongue within
And would afford my speechless visor half.

Kath. Vail, quoth the Dutchman:—is not Long. A calf, fair lady!

Kath. No, a fair lord calf.
Long. Let's part the word.

Kath. No, I'll not be your half;
Tale all, and mean it; it may prove an ox.

Long. Look! how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks!

Will you give horns, chaste lady! do not so.
Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.

Long. One word in private with you, ere I Kath. Bleat softly, then; the butcher hears you cry.

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenchies are
As is the razor's edge invisible, [as keen
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen;

Above the sense of sense: so sensible Beneath their conference; their conceits have wings

Flatter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought,
Ros. Not one word more, my maids: break
off, break off.

Biron. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure King. Farewell, mad wenchies; you have simple wits.

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Mus-
covites.— [Exeunt King, Lords,
Musicians, and Attendants.

Boyet. Taper they are, with your sweet
breath'd puff'd out.

Ros. Well-ill'd wits they have; gross,
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-
night,

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?
This past Biron was out of countenance quite:

Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?
Boyet. Taper they are, with your sweet
breath'd puff'd out.

Ros. Well-ill'd wits they have; gross,
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-
night,

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?
This past Biron was out of countenance quite:

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar, Biron. Nay then, two treys, (an if you
so nice,)

Ros. O, they were all in lamentable cases!
The king was wasping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Biron did swear himself out of all suit.

Mar. Dumain was at my service, and his No point, quoth I; my servant straight was mute.

Kath. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his
And trow you what he call'd me? [heart;

Prin. Quail, perhaps.
Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin. Go, sickness as thou art!
Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.

But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.
Prin. And quick Biron hath plighted faith
to me.

Kath. And Longaville was for my service Mar. Dumain is mine, as sure as bark on tree.

Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give Immediately they will again be here [ear:
In their own shapes; for it can never be,
They will digest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?
Boyet. They will, they will, God knows,
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:

Therefore change favours; and, when they Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.

Prin. How blow! how blow! speak to be understood.

Boyet. Fair ladies mask'd, are roses in their Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,

Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.
Prin. Avant perplexity! What shall we do,
If they return in their own shapes to woo?

Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advised, [guile'd.

Let's mock them still, as well known, as dis-
Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;

And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow shows and prologues vilely penn'd,
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our tent to us.

Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand. [land.

Prin. Whip to your tents, as roses run over [Exeunt Princess, Ros., Kath., and Maria.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain in their proper habits.

King. Fair sir, (God save you!) Where is this princess?

Boyet. Gone to her tent. Please it your Command me any service to her thither?

King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet. I will; and so will she, I know, my lord. [Exit.

Biron. This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons peck up
And utters it again when God doth please:

He is wit's pedlar, and retails his wares
At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets,
fairs;
And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth
know,

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.
This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve;
Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve:
He can carve too, and lip: why, this is he
That kiss'd his hand away in courtesy:
This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,
That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice
In honourable terms: nay, he can sing
A mean most meanly; and in ushering,
Mend him who can: the ladies call him, sweet;
The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet.
This is the flower that smiles on every one,
To show his teeth as white as whales bone;
And consciences, that will not die in debt,
Pay him the due of honey-tongu'd Boyet.

King. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,

That put Armado's page out of his part!
Re-enter the Princess, ushered by Boyet; Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, and Attendants.

Biron. See where it comes!—Behaviour, what vert thou! [thou now?]

Till this madman show'd thee? and what art
King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!

Prin. Fair, in all hall, is foul, as I conceive, King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Prin. Then wish me better; I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you; and purpose
now

To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it, then, Prin. This field shall hold me; and so hold your vow:

Nor God, nor I, delight in perjur'd men.
King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.
Prin. You nick-name virtue: vice you should have spoke;

For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.
Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unsullied lily, I protest,

A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yield to be your house's guest;
So much I hate a breaking cause to be
Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.

King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear;
We have had pasture here, and pleasant
A moss of Russians left us but of late. [game:]

King. How, madam! Russians?
Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;

Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state.
Ros. Madam, speak true.—It is not so, my
My lady (to the manner of the days) [lord:]
In courtesy gives undeserving praise:

We four, indeed, confronted were with
In Russian habit: here they stay'd and
And talk'd space; and in that hour,
They did not bless us with one happy
I dare not call them fools; but this I
When they are thirsty, fools would drink.

Biron. This jest is dry to me.—Fair,
Your wit makes wise things foolish: what greet,

With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye
By light we lose light: your capacity
Is of that nature, that to your huge Wise things seem foolish, and rich things
poor.

Ros. This proves you wise and rich;
Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty;
Ros. But that you take what doth belong,

It were a fault to snatch words from Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I
Ros. All the fool mine!

Biron. I cannot give you Ros. Which of the visors was it that wore? [demand you]

Biron. Where? when? what visor?
Ros. There, then, that visor; that famous case

That hid the worse, and show'd the better.
King. We are deserv'd; they'll now downright.

Prin. Let us confess, and turn it to a Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why look you highness sad? [Why look you]

Ros. Help! hold his brows! he'll come Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.

Biron. Thus pour the stars down for perjury.

Can any face of brass hold longer out
Here stand I, lady; dart thy skill at me; Bruise me with scorn, confound me with flout;

Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit
And I will wish thee never more to dance
Nor never more in Russian habit wait.

O, never will I trust to speeches pawn'd
Nor to the motion of a school-boy's countenance
Nor never come in visor to my friend
Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind
Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise,
Three-pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectations,
Figures pedantical; these summer flies
Have blown me full of maggot ornaments.

I do forswear them; and I here protest,
By this white glove, (how white the God knows!)

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be
In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes
And, to begin, wench,—so God help me,
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or
Ros. Sans sans, I pray you.

Biron. Yet I have
Of the old rage;—bear with me, I am old

I'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see:— Wit, "Lord have mercy on us" on those three;

They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
They have the plague and caught it of your
eyes:

These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.

Prin. No, they are free that gave those tokens to us, [undo us,

Biron. Our states are forfeit, seek not to
Ros. It is not so; for how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?

Biron. Peace! for I will not have to do with Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend. [you]

Biron. Speak for yourselves; my wit is at in and.

King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our
Some fair excuse. [rule transgression]

Prin. The fairest is confession.
Were you not here but even now, disguis'd?

Ros. Madam, I was.
Prin. And were you well advis'd?

King. I was, fair madam.
Prin. When you then were here,
What did you whisper in your lady's ear?

King. That more than all the world I did respect her. [will reject her]

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you King. Upon mine honour, no.

Prin. Peace, peace! forbear;
Your oath once broke, you force not to for-swear. [of mine]

King. Despair me, when I break this oath
Prin. I will: and therefore keep it.—Rosaline,

What did the Russian whisper in your ear?
Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me
As precious eye-sight, and did value me [dear]

Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.

Prin. God give thee joy of him! the noble
Most honourably doth uphold his word. [lord]

King. What mean you, madam! by my life, my troth,

I never swore this lady such an oath. [plain]

Ros. By heaven you did; and to confirm it
You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.

King. My faith, and this, the princess I did I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve. [give:]

Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear:

And lord Biron, I thank him, is my dear.
What, will you have me, or your pearl again?

Biron. Neither of either—I remit both twain.—
I see the trick on't:—here was a consent,
Knowing beforehand of our merriment,
To do it like a Christmas comedy:
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight some, [some Dick,—
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight,
That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the trick

To make my lady laugh, when she's disposed,— Told our intents before; which once discover'd,
The ladies did change favours; and then we,
Following the signs, would but the sign of she.

Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
We are again forsworn; in will, and error.
Much upon this it is:—[To Boyet.] and might not you

Forestall our sport, to make us thus untrue?
Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?

And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jostling merrily?

You put our page out: go, you are allow'd:
Dis when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.

You leer upon me, do you! there's an eye
Wounds like a leaden sword.

Boyet. Full merrily
Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.

Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace, I Enter Costard. [have done.

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.
Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know [no]

Whether the three Worthies shall come in or Biron. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir; but it is vana fine,
For every one pursueth three.

Biron. And three times thrice is nine.
Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir, I hope, it is not so.

You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir,
we know what we know:
I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,—

Biron. Is not nine.
Cost. Under correction, sir, we know where-until it doth amount. [for nine]

Biron. By Jove, I always took three thrice Cost. O Lord, sir, it were pity you should get your living by reckoning, sir.

Biron. How much is it?
Cost. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount:

for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man in one poor man,—Pompon
the Great, sir.

Biron. Art thou one of the Worthies?
Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompon the Great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worth; but I am to stand for him.

Biron. Go, bid them prepare.
Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir, we will take some care. [Exit.]

King. Biron, they will shame us; let them not approach. [tis some policy]

Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord; and To have one show worse than the king's and his company.

King. I say, they shall not come.
Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-rule
you now:

That sport best pleases that doth least know
how,

Where zeal strives to content, and the contents
Die in the zeal of those which it presents:
Their form confounded makes most form in mirth; Birth.
When great things labouring perish in their Biron. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter Armado.

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.

[Converses with the King, and delivers a paper to him.]

Prin. Both this man serve God!

Biron. Why ask you?

Prin. He speaks not like a man of God's making.

Arm. That's all one, my fair, sweet, honey monarch; for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical; too too vain; too too vain: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna della guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal complement. [Exit.]

King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the Great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Maccabeus;
And if these four Worthies in their first show
thrive,

These four will change habits, and present the other five.

Biron. There is five in the first show.

King. You are deceived; 'tis not so.

Biron. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy;—
Abate throw at novum, and the whole world
again. [This vein.]

Cannot prick out five such, take each one in King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain.

Enter Costard armed, for Pompey.

Cost. "I Pompey am,"

Boyet. You lie, you are not he.

Cost. "I Pompey am,"

Boyet. With libbard's head on knee.

Biron. Well said, old mocker; I must needs be friends with thee.

Cost. "I Pompey am, Pompey surname'd
Dum. "The great." [the big.]

Cost. It is "great," sir;—"Pompey surname'd the Great;

That oft in field, with large and shield, did make my foe to sweat;
And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance, [lass of France.]

And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet
If your ladyship would say, "Thanks, Pompey," I had done.

Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.

Cost. 'Tis not so much worth; but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in "great."

Biron. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

Enter Sir Nathaniel armed, for Alexander.

Nath. "When in the world I was
the world's commander;

By east, west, north, and south,
my conquering might;

My scutcheon plain declares, that I Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are it stands too right.

Biron. Your nose smells, no, in the tender-smelling knight.

Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd good Alexander.

Nath. "When in the world I was
the world's commander;"

Boyet. Most true, 'tis right; you Biron. Pompey the Great;

Cost. Your servant, and Costard.

Biron. Take away the conqueror away Alexander.

Cost. [To Nath.] O sir, you have thrown Alexander the conqueror—

be scraped out of the painted cloth your lion, that holds his poll-axe close-stool, will be given to A-lar: he the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and to speak] run away for shame, Alexander.
[Nath. retires.] There, an't shall please foolish mild man; an honest man, and and soon dashed. He is a marvellous neighbour, faith, and a very good but, for Alexander, alas, you see how little o'erparted.—But there are Wor-coming will speak their mind in sort.

Prin. Stand aside, good
Enter Holofernes armed, for Judas.

Moth armed, for Hercules.

Hol. "Great Hercules is presented imp."

Whose club kill'd Cerberus, the
And, when he was a babe, a child, he Thus did he strangle serpents in his Quoniam, he seemeth in minority.

Ergo, I come with this apology.

Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish.
[Moth.]

Hol. "Judas I am."

Dum. A Judas!

Hol. Not Iscariot, sir,—

"Judas I am, yelped Maccabeus."

Dum. Judas Maccabeus elipt is plain;

Biron. A kissing traitor.—How
Hol. "Judas I am."

Dum. The more shame for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, sir?

Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder.

Biron. Well follow'd: Judas was on an elder.

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Biron. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A cittern head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Biron. A death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pommel of Caesar's faultchion.

Dum. The carved bone face on a flask.

Biron. St. George's half-cheek in a brooch.

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a toothdrawer.

And now forward; for we have put thee in [countenance.]

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Biron. Falsely: we have given thee faces.

Hol. But you have outface'd them all.

Boyet. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Judas! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Biron. For the ass to the Jude! give it him:—Judas, away.

Hol. This is not generous; not gentle; not Boyet. A light for monstrous Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble.

Prin. Alas, poor Maccabeus, how hath he been baited!

Enter Armado armed, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles: here comes Hector in arms.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of Boyet. But is this Hector?

King. I think Hector was not so clean-
Long. His leg is too big for Hector.

Dum. More calf, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best indeed in the small.

Biron. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

Arm. "The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, gives Hector a gift,"

Dum. A gilt nutmeg.

Long. Stick with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven.

Arm. Peace!—
mighty, gives Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;

From morn till night, that certain he would fight
I am that flower,"

Dum. That mint.

Arm. Sweet lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Dum. I must rather give it the rein; for it runs against Hector.

Arm. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Boyet. The sweet war-man is dead and rotted; when he breathed, he was a man.

Prin. Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing.

Prin. Speak, brave Hector: we are much delighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Leaves her by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard. [Nath.]—"

Arm. "This Hector far surmounted Hun-Cost. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away; she's quick; the child brags in her belly already:
'tis yours.

Arm. Dost thou infamelize me among potentates? Thou shalt die.

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipped, for Jaquenetta that is quick by him; and hanged, for Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey!

Biron. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Biron. Pompey is moved.—More Ates, more Ates! stir them on, stir them on!

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's blood in's belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man: I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword.—I pray you, let me borrow my arms
again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies.

Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey!

Moth. Master, let me take you a button-hole Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the combat!

What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me:
I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it: Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron. What reason have you for't?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt; I go woolward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dish-cloth of Jaquenetta's, and that he wears next his heart for a favour.

Enter Mercade.

Mer. God save you, madam!

Prin. Welcome, Mercade;

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mer. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring

Is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—

Prin. Dead, for my life!

Mer. Even so; my tale is told. [To cloud.]

Biron. Worthies, away! The scene begins

Arm. For my own part, I breathe free breath. I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier. [Exeunt Worthies.]

King. How fares your majesty?
Prin. Boyot, prepare; I will away to-night.
King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay. [Lords,]

Prin. Prepare, I say.—I thank you, gracious
 For all your fair endeavours; and entreat,
 Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe
 In your rich wisdom to excuse, or hide,
 The liberal opposition of our spirits:
 If over-boldly we have borne ourselves
 In the converse of breath, your gentleness
 Was guilty of it.—Farewell, worthy lord!
 A heavy heart bears but a humble tongue:
 Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks
 For my great suit so easily obtain'd. [Lords,]

King. The extreme part of time extremely
 All causes to the purpose of his speed;
 And often, at his very loose, decides
 That which long process could not arbitrate:
 And though the mourning brow of progeny
 Forbid the smiling courtesy of love,
 The holy suit which faith it would convince;
 Yet, since love's argument was first on foot,
 Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it [lost,
 From what it purpos'd; since, to wail friends
 Is not by much so wholesome profitable,
 As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not: my griefs are double. [Lords,]

Biron. Honest plain words best pierce the
 And by these badges understand the king.
 For your fair sakes have we neglected time,
 Play'd foul play with our oaths: your beauty,
 ladies, [Lords,]

Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our
 Even to the oppos'd end of our intents:
 And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,—
 As love is full of unbefitting strains;
 All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain;
 Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye,
 Full of stray shapes, of habits, and of forms,
 Varying in subjects, as the eye doth roll
 To every varied object in his glance:
 Which party-coated presence of loose love
 Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,
 Have misbecome our oaths and gravities,
 Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults,

Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies,
 Our love being yours, the error that love makes
 Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false,
 By being once false for ever to be true
 To those that make us both,—fair ladies, you:
 And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,
 Thus purifies itself, and turns to grace. [Love;]

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters, full of Your favours, the ambassadors of love;
 And, in our maiden council, rated them
 At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,
 As bombast, and as lining to the time:
 But more devout than this in our respects,
 Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
 In their own fashion, like a merciment.

Dum. Our letters, madam, above
Long. So did our looks. [Lords,]

Ros. We did not look on you,
King. Now, at the latest minute
 Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks,
 To make a world-without-end bargain
 No, no, my lord, your grace is purer
 Full of dear guiltness; and therefore
 If for my love (as there is no such case)
 You will do aught, this shall you do:
 Your oath I will not trust; but go you
 To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
 Remote from all the pleasures of the world,
 There stay, until the twelve celestial hours
 Have brought about their annual round:
 If this austere insoberable life
 Change not your offer made in heat
 If frosts, and fasts, hard lodgings, weeds,
 Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
 But that it bear this trial, and last
 Then, at the expiration of the year,
 Come challenge me, challenge me
 And, by this virgin palm, now kissing
 I will be thine; and, till that instant,
 My woeful self up in a mourning habit
 Raining the tears of lamentation
 For the remembrance of my father's sin:
 If this thou do deny, let our hands part
 Neither intitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this,
 To flatter up these powers of misdoings
 The sudden hand of death close up Hence ever, then, my heart is in the Biron. And what to me, my love I
 to me?

Ros. You must be purged too, your
 You are attaint with faults and poison
 Therefore, if you my favour mean to A twelvemonth shall you spend, and
 But seek the weary beds of people
Dum. But what to me, my love I
 to me?

Kath. A wife!—A beard, fair
 With three-fold love I wish you all the Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you,
 wife!

Kath. Not so, my lord; a twelvemonth I'll mark no words that smooth-faced say:
 Come when the king doth to my lady
 Then, if I have much love, I'll give you Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithful
 then.

Kath. Yet swear not, lest you be Long. What says Maria?

Mar. At the twelvemonth
 I'll change my black gown for a faithful Long. I'll stay with patience; but is long.

Mar. The liker you; few taller are Biron. Studies my lady's mistress,
 me;

learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the cuckoo; it should have followed in the end of our show.

King. Call them forth quickly; we will do Arm. Holloa! approach. [Lords,]

Re-enter Holofemes, Nathaniel, Moth, Costard, and others.

This side is Hiems, winter; this Ver, the spring; the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

SONG.

Spring. When daisies pied, and violets blue,
 And lady-smocks all silver-white,
 And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
 Do paint the meadows with delight,
 The cuckoo then, on every tree,
 Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
 Cuckoo;
 Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O, word of fear!
 Unpleasant to a married ear.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
 And merry larks are ploughmen's
 clocks,
 When turtles tread, and rooks, and doves,
 And maidens bleach their summer
 smocks,
 The cuckoo then, on every tree,
 Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
 Cuckoo;
 Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O, word of fear!
 Unpleasant to a married ear.

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall,
 And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
 And Tom bears logs into the hall,
 And milk comes frozen home in pail,
 When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul,
 Then nightly sings the staring owl,
 To-who;
 To-who, to-who, a merry note,
 While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all about the wind doth blow,
 And coughing drags the parson's nose,
 And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
 When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
 Then nightly sings the staring owl,
 To-who;
 To-who, to-who, a merry note,
 While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way; we, this way. [Exeunt.]

And she respects me as her only son.
There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee;
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us. If thou lov'st me, then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night,
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander!
I swear to thee, by Cupid's strongest bow;
By his best arrow with the golden head;
By the simplicity of Venus' doves;
By that which knitteth souls and prospers
loves,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage
queen,
When the false Trojan under sail was seen;
By all the vows that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke:
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise, love. Look, here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed, fair Helena! Whither
away?

Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again unsay.
Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are lodestars; and your tongue's
sweet air

More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear,
When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear.

Sickness is catching: O, were favour so,
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia! ere I go;
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your
eye,

My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'll give to be to you translated.
O, teach me how you look; and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius' heart!

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Hel. O that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill!

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love.

Hel. O that my prayers could such affection move!

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.

Her. His folly, Helena, is none of mine.

Hel. None, but your beauty: would that fault were mine!

Her. Take comfort: he no more shall see Lysander and myself will fly this place.

Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me:
O, then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell!

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold:
To-morrow night, when Phoebe doth behold
Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass,

(A time that lovers' flights doth still Remember) Athens' gates have we descried,
And in the wood where others do
walk, ourselves.

Her. And in the wood where others do
walk, ourselves.

Upon faint primrose-beds were we laying, and the very shadows did embrace us.

There my Lysander and myself did lie, and thence from Athens turn away to seek new friends and strange playfellow.

Farewell, sweet playfellow: pray thee, keep word, Lysander: we must meet at sight.

From lovers' food till morrow dawn,
I will, my Hermia.

Helena, adieu:
As you on him, Demetrius dote on me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks he will not know, what all but he knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

And as he errs, doting on Hermia,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoise to form and feature
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judge;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unlook'd
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled:
As waggish boys in game themselves abuse,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia,
He hail'd down oaths that he was true;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia
did catch, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow
Pursue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back on
me.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others,
can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fond;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks
he will not know, what all but he
knows.

and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince,
forth your actors by the scroll: Masters,
and yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, ready. Name what part I am for, and I'll answer.

Bottom. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bottom. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bottom. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience
weep with me to some measure. To the rest—yet what humour is for a tyrant? I could play
the raven, or a part to tear a cat in, to show my anger.

Quin. The raging rocks,
And showering shocks,
Shall break the locks
Of prison-gates;
And Phibbus' car
Shall shine from fur,
And make and mar
The foolish fates.

Bottom. Now name the rest of the players.

Quin. Francis Flute, a tyrant's vein;—a lover is Pyramus.

Bottom. You must take Thisby on you.

Quin. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Bottom. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Quin. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman;
I have a beard coming.

Bottom. That's all one: you shall play it in a woman's part; and you may speak as small as you will.

Quin. An I may lute my face, let me play Pyramus: I'll speak in a monstrous little voice:—“Thisbe,” “Thisbe”—“Ah, Pyramus,
loose your love!”

Bottom. No, no; you must play Pyramus:
Flute, you Thisbe.

Quin. Well, proceed.

Bottom. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Quin. Robin Starveling.

Bottom. Robin Starveling, you must play
Pyramus' mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Quin. You, Peter Quince,

Pyramus' father; myself,
the part;—and, I hope, here is a play fitted.
Have you the lion's part written?

Bottom. If it be, give it me, for I am slow of footing but roaring.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is but a roar.

Bottom. Let me play the lion too: I will roar,
and I will do any man's heart good to hear
me. I will roar, that I will make the duke laugh. An you should do it too terribly,
I would fright the duchess and the ladies,

and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince,
forth your actors by the scroll: Masters,
and yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, ready. Name what part I am for, and I'll answer.

Bottom. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bottom. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bottom. That will ask some tears in the true
performing of it: if I do it, let the audience
weep with me to some measure. To the rest—yet
what humour is for a tyrant? I could play
the raven, or a part to tear a cat in, to
show my anger.

Quin. The raging rocks,
And showering shocks,
Shall break the locks
Of prison-gates;
And Phibbus' car
Shall shine from fur,
And make and mar
The foolish fates.

Bottom. Now name the rest of the players.

Quin. Francis Flute, a tyrant's vein;—a lover is Pyramus.

Bottom. You must take Thisby on you.

Quin. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Bottom. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Quin. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman;
I have a beard coming.

Bottom. That's all one: you shall play it in a woman's part; and you may speak as small as you will.

Quin. An I may lute my face, let me play
Pyramus: I'll speak in a monstrous little
voice:—“Thisbe,” “Thisbe”—“Ah, Pyramus,
loose your love!”

Bottom. No, no; you must play Pyramus:
Flute, you Thisbe.

Quin. Well, proceed.

Bottom. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Quin. Robin Starveling.

Bottom. Robin Starveling, you must play
Pyramus' mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Quin. You, Peter Quince,

Pyramus' father; myself,
the part;—and, I hope, here is a play fitted.
Have you the lion's part written?

Bottom. If it be, give it me, for I am slow of footing but roaring.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is but a roar.

Bottom. Let me play the lion too: I will roar,
and I will do any man's heart good to hear
me. I will roar, that I will make the duke
laugh. An you should do it too terribly,
I would fright the duchess and the ladies,

that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us, every mother's son.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us; but I'll aggravate my voice so, that I will roar
you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar
you as 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus;
for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore,
you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What heard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your strawcolour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced.

—But, masters, here are your parts: and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight; there will we rehearse:
for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogged with company, and our devices known. In the mean time, I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me
not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscenely, and courageously.
Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; hold, or cut bow-strings.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Wood near Athens.

Enter a Fairy on one side, and Puck on the other.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander
you?

Fat. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander everywhere,
Swifter than the moon's sphere;
And I serve the fairy queen:
To dew her orbs upon the green:
The cowslips tall her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freckles live their savours:
I must go seek some dew-drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.
Farewell, thou lob of spirits; I'll be gone:
Our queen and all her elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here to-night:

Take heed the queen come not within his sight;
For Oberon is passing full and wrath,
Because that she, as her attendant, hath
A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;
She never had so sweet a changeling;
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild;
But she, perforce, withholdeth the loved boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy:

And now they never meet in grove or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled star-light sheen,
But they do square; that all their elves, for fear,
Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Pai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,

Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite, Call'd Robin Good-fellow: are you not he
That frights the maidens of the villagery; Skims milk, and sometimes labours in the quern,

And bootless makes the breathless housewife
And sometime makes the drink to bear no barm; Misleads night-wanderers, laughing at their
harm?

Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good
Are not you he?

Puck. Thou speak'st aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a filly foal;
And sometimes lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her wither'd dowlap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And "tailor" cries, and falls into a cough;
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe;

And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there,—
But, room, Fairy! here comes Oberon.

Pai. And here my mistress!—Would that he were gone!

SCENE II.—The Same.

*Enter Oberon on one side, with his train;
and Titania on the other, with hers.*

Obe. Ill met by moon-light, proud Titania.
Tita. What, jealous Oberon! Fairy, skip
hence:

I have forsworn his bed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton: am not I thy lord?
Tita. Then, I must be thy lady: but I know
When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land,
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love
To amorous Philida. Why art thou here,

Come from the farthest steep of India?
But that, forsooth, the bounteous
Your buskin'd mistress and your
To Theseus must be wedded; and
To give their bed joy and prosperity.

Obe. How canst thou thus,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the ing night

From Perigona, whom he ravish'd?
And make him with fair Egla trust
With Ariadne, and Antiope?

Tita. These are the forgeries of
And never, since the middle summer,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead;
By paved fountain, or by russet brook,
Or on the beached margin of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling
But with thy brawls thou hast done
sport.

Therefore the winds, piping to us
As in revenge, have suck'd up from us Contagious fogs; which, falling in
Have every pelting river made so proud
That they have overborne their bounds,
The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke,
The ploughman lost his sweat; and corn

Hath rotted ere his youth attain'd;
The fold stands empty in the droves;
And crows are fatted with the murrain,
The nine-men's morris is fill'd up with
And the quaint mazes in the wanton
For lack of tread are undistinguish'd;
The human mortals want their winter
No night is now with hymn or carol Therefore the moon, the governess of Pale in her anger, washes all the air
That rheumatic diseases do abound;
And thorough this distemperature
The seasons alter: hoary-headed rices
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson
And on old Hyems' chin, and icy
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer
Is, as in mockery, set: the spring
The childing autumn, angry winter,
Their wonted liveries: and the time
By their increase, now knows and
which:

And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our dissension;
We are their parents and original.

Obe. Do you amend it, then; it lies
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.

Tita. Set your heart
The fairy land buys not the child:
His mother was a votaress of my order;
And, in the spiced Indian air, by Full often hath she gossip'd by my
And sat with me on Neptune's yellow Marking the embarked traders on the

When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive,
And grow big-bellied, with the wanton wind;
Which now, with pretty and with swimming gait

Following, (her womb then rich with my young
Would inmate, and sail upon the land,
To fetch me tidings, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise,
but she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And for her sake I do rear up her boy;
And for her sake I will not part with him.

Obe. How long within this wood intend you slay?

Tita. Purchase till after Theseus' wedding
day;
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with
thee.

Tita. Not for thy fairy kingdom.—Fairies,
We shall hide downright, if I longer stay.

Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this grove.

Will I torment thee for this injury.—
My gentle Puck, come hither: Thou remain-st once I sat upon a promontory, [her'st and heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back, uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song;
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,
To hear the sea-maid's music.

Puck. I remember.
Obe. That very time I saw (but thou couldst
not),

lying between the cold moon and the earth,
mid all a-float; a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal throned by the west;
and lock'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
as it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts;
but I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft Quench'd in the chaste beams of the watery moon, and the imperial votaress passed on,
in maiden meditation, fancy-free.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Obe. Watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes;
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
A meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Obe. Watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes;
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
A meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Obe. Watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes;
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
A meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Obe. Watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes;
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
A meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Obe. Watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes;
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
A meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Obe. Watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes;
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
A meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:

And ere I take this charm off from her sight,
(As I can take it with another herb)
I'll make her render up her page to me.—
But who comes here? I am invisible:
And I will over-hear their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.
Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me
Where is Lysander, and fair Hermia! [not
The one I'll slay, the other slayeth me.
Thou toldst me they were stol'n into this wood;

And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence! get thee gone, and follow me no
more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you, I do not nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius, [more.
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike
me,

Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What worse place can I beg in your love,
(And yet a place of high respect with me,)
Than to be used as you use your dog?

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit;

For I am sick when I do look on you.
Hel. And I am sick when I look not on thee.
Dem. You do impeach your modesty too
To leave the city, and commit yourself [much,
Into the hands of one that loves you not;
To trust the opportunity of night,
And the ill counsel of a desert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my privilege for that.
It is not night when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night:
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
For you, in my respect, are all the world:

Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.

Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as
you.

Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd,
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind Makes speed to catch the tiger; bootless
speed,

When cowardice pursues, and valour flies.
Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me
Or, if thou follow me, do not believe [go:
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,

You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius!
Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex;
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo.

I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon this hand I love so well.

Exeunt Dem. and Hel.

Obe. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove,
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.
Re-enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wan-Puck. Ay, there it is. [derer.

Obe. I pray thee, give it me.
I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows,
Where ox-lips, and the nodding violet grows;
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine:
There sleeps Titania, some time of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:

A sweet Athenian lady is in love
With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes;
But do it, when the next thing he espies
May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prove
More fond on her, than she upon her love:
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter Titania, with her train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel, and a fairy
song;

Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
Some, to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds;
Some, war with rear-mice for their leathern wings, [keep back]

To make my small elves coats; and some,
The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wonders

At our quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

SONG.

I Fai. You spotted snakes, with double tongue,
Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
Newts, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen.

Chorus. Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla,
Never harm, [lullaby:]
Nor spell, nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.

2 Fai. Weaving spiders, come not here!
Hence, you long-legged
hence!

Beetles black, approach not Worm, nor snail, do no

Chorus. Philomel, with melody, do
1 Fai. Hence, away! now all is well.

One, aloof, stand sentinel
[Exeunt Fairies.]

Enter Oberon.

Obe. [Squeezes the flower on Titania's
What thou seest when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true love take;

Love, and languish for his sake;
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eyes that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear.

Wake when some vile thing is near.
Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with waking
the wood;

And to speak truth, I have forgot
We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it
And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so, Lysander: find you not
For I upon this bank will rest my head,
Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow
One heart, one bed, two bosoms, troth.

Her. Nay, good Lysander; for my my dear,

Lie farther off yet; do not lie so near,
Lys. O, take the sense, sweet, of Love takes the meaning in love's words;
I mean, that my heart unto yours is So that but one heart we can make of Two bosoms interchain'd with an oath
So then, two bosoms, and a single bed
Then, by your side no bed-room make
For, lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily.
Now much beshrew my manners, and If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lie
But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy
Lie further off; in human modesty,
Such separation as may well be said
Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a
So far be distant; and, good night,
friend:

Thy love ne'er alter till thy sweet die.
Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer,
And then end life, when I end loyalty!

Here is my bed; sleep give thee all!
Her. With half that wish the wish be press'd!

Enter Puck.

Puck. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear;

This is he, my master said,
Hous'd the Athenian maid:
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground:
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-courtesy.
[Squeezes the flower on Lysander's eyelids.]

Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charmed cloth owes,
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eyelids:
So awake, when I am gone,
For I must now to Oberon.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running. [Exit.]

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet
Demetrius.

Dem. I charge thee, hence; and do not harm me thus.

Hel. O, wilt thou dar'ling leave me! do not so.

Dem. Stay, on thy peril: I alone will go.

Hel. O, I am out of breath in this fond chase!

More my prayer, the lessor is my grace.
Happy is Hermia wheresoe'er she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes,
How come her eyes so bright? Not with salt
tears:

So, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear;
For beasts that meet me run away for fear:
Therefore no marvel though Demetrius,
As a monster, fly my presence thus.

What wicked and disssembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's sphery
eyes?

But who is here? Lysander! on the ground!
Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound.—
Lys. [Awaking.] And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art, That through thy bosom makes me see thy
heart.

Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
That vile name to perish on my sword!

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so.
What though he love your Hermia? Lord,
what though?

Yet Hermia still loves you; then be content.
The tedious minutes I with her have spent,
Who will not change a raven for a dove!
And reason says you are the worthier maid:
Things growing are not ripe until their season;
And touching now the point of human skill,
And leads me to your eyes; where I o'erlook
Love's stories, written in love's richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery
born?

When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?
Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eyes,
But you must flout my insufficiency?

Good troth, you do me wrong,—good sooth,
you do,—

In such disdainful manner me to woo,
But fare you well; perforce I must confess
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O, that a lady, of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd! [Exit.]

Lys. She sees not Hermia.—Hermia, sleep
thou there:

And never mayst thou come Lysander near!
For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;
Or, as the heresies, that men do leave,
Are hated most of those they did deceive;
So thou, my surfeit and my heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most of me! [Might]

And, all my powers, address your love and
To honour Helen, and to be her knight. [Exit.]

Her. [Awaking.] Help me, Lysander, help me! do thy best

To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast!
Alas, for pity!—what a dream was here!
Lysander, look how I do quake with fear:
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey.—
Lysander!—What, remov'd!—Lysander!
lord! [word:]

What, out of hearing? gone? no sound, no
Alack! where are you? speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
No!—then I well perceive you are not high:
Either death, or you, I'll find immediately. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Wood. Titania lying asleep.
Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake
our 'tiring-house; and we will do it in action,
as we will do it before the duke.

Bot. Peter Quince,—

Quin. What sayst thou, bully Bottom?

Bot. There are things in this comedy of "Pyramus and Thisby" that will never please.

First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself, which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By'rakin, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit; I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed; and, for the more better assurance, that I, Pyramus, am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver. This will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue; and it shall be written in eight and six.

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight.

Shout. Will not the ladies be afeared of the Star, I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in,—God shield us!—a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living; and we ought to look to it. Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect,—“Ladies,—or, fair ladies,—I would wish you,—or, I would request you,—or, I would entreat you,—not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life: no, I am no such thing; I am a man as other men are:—and there, indeed, let him name his name, and tell them plainly, he is Snug, the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things,—that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber; for, you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanack; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay, or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of moonshine. Then, there is another thing; we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall.—What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall: and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; and let him hold his fingers thus, and through that granny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin. When you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one to his cue.

Enter Puck, behind.

Puck. What hempen home-spuns you swaggering here,

So near the cradle of the fairy queen!

What, a play toward! I'll be an actor.

An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus.—Thisby.

Pyr. “Thisby, the flowers of odours.”

Quin. “Odours,” “odours.”

Pyr. “Odours savours sweet.”

So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby.

But hark, a voice! stay thou but here.

And by and by I will to thee approach.

Puck. [Aside.] A stranger Pyramus!

Or play'd here!

This. Must I speak now!

Quin. Ay, marry, must you; but you understand, he goes but to see a woman

heard, and is to come again.

This. “Most radiant Pyramus,”

“white of hue,”

“Of colour like the red rose on the tree,”

“Most brisky juvenal, and the most lovely,”

“As true as trust-horse, that yet will live,”

“I’ll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninus’ tomb.”

Quin. “Ninus’ tomb,” man. Why must not speak that yet? that you

Pyramus: you speak all your part ones and all,—Pyramus, enter! you past; it is, “never tire.”

This. O,—“As true as trust-horse,”

“yet would never tire.”

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom with him.

Pyr. “If I were, fair Thisby, I would things.”

Quin. O monstrous! O strange!

Pray, masters! fly, masters!—[Help!]

all not safe from this place, do what they can:

will walk up and down here, and I will sing,

that they shall hear I am not afraid. [Sings.]

The owl-cock, so black of hue,

With orange-luzy bill,

The throats with his note so true,

The wren with little quill:

What angel wakes me

from my flowery bed?

Tit. [Sings.]

The lark, the sparrow, and the lark,

The plain-song cuckoo gray,

Whose note full many a man doth mark,

And darest not answer, nay:—

For indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish

bird? who would give a bird the lie, though every “cuckoo” never so!

Tit. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again:

My ear is much enamour’d of thy note;

So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape; [mus.]

And thy fair virtue’s force, performs both move and still reason for that: and yet, to say the truth,

now a days,—the more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends.

Nay, I can glean upon occasion.

Tit. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

Bot. Not so, neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tit. Out of this wood do not desire to go:

I am a spirit of no common rate; [no.]

The summer still doth tend upon my state;

And I do love thee: therefore go with me;

I’ll give thee fairies to attend on thee;

And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,

And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost

sleep;

And I will purge thy mortal grossness so,

That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.—[ceed!]

Peas-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-seed!

Enter Peas-blossom, Cobweb, Moth,

and Mustard-seed.

Peas. Ready.

Cob. And I.

Moth. And I.

Must. And I.

Tit. Be kind and courteous to this gentle-

man:

Stop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes,

Feed him with apricocks, and dewberries,

With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries:

The honey-lays steal from the humble-bees;

And for night tapers crop their waxen thighs,

And light them at the fiery glow-worm’s eyes,

To have my love to bed, and to arise;

And pluck the wings from painted butterflies,

To fan the moon-beams from his sleeping eyes:

Now to him, elves, and do him courtesies,

Peas. Hail, mortal!

Cob. Hail!

Moth. Hail!

Must. Hail!

Tit. Good master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well; that same cowardly, giant-

like ox-beef, hath devoured many a gentleman of your house: I promise you, your kindred hath made mine eyes water ere now. I desire you of more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

Tit. Come, wait upon him; lead him to

The moon, methinks, looks with a wat’ry eye;

And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,

Lamenting some enforced chastity.

Tie up my love’s tongue, bring him silently.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter Oberon.

Obe. I wonder if Titania be awak’d;

Then, what it was that next came in her eye,

Which she must dote on in extremity.

Here comes my messenger.—[Enter Puck.]

How now, mad spirit!

What night-rule now about this haunted

grove?

Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love.

Near to her close and consecrated bower,

While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,

A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,

That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,

Were met together to rehearse a play,

Intended for great Theseus’ nuptial day.

The shallowest thick-skinned of that barren sort,

Who Pyramus presented, in their sport,

Forsook his scene, and enter’d in a brake;

When I did him at this advantage take,

An ass’s nose I fixed on his head;

Anon his Thisbe must be answered,

And forth my mimic comes. When they him spy,

As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye,

Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,

Rising and cawing at the gun’s report,

Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky;

So, at his sight, away his fellows fly;

And, at our stamp, here o’er and o’er one falls;

He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.

Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus

strong,

Made senseless things begin to do them wrong;

For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch;

Some, sleeves,—some, hats,—from yielders all things catch.

Δημόσια Κεντρικὴ Βιβλιοθήκη Βέροιας

I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there;
When in that moment (so it came to pass),
Titania wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.

Oba. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Puck. I took him sleeping, (that is finish'd too.)

And the Athenian woman by his side; [say'd.
That, when he wak'd, of force she must be Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Oba. Stand close: this is the same Athenian.

Puck. This is the woman; but not this the man. [you so?

Dem. O, why rebuke you him that loves
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide; but I should use these worse;

For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.

The sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me: would he have stol'n away
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon,
This whole earth may be bor'd; and that the moon

May through the centre creep, and so displease
Her brother's noon-tide with th' Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murder'd him;
So should a murderer look; so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murder'd look; and so should I, [cruelty:

Pierc'd through the heart with your stern
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?

Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds. [past the bounds

Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me
Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him,
then?

Henceforth be never number'd among men!
O, once tell true, tell true, e'en for my sake;
Durst thou have look'd upon him being awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch!

Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.

Dem. You spend your passion on a mispri'd mood:

I am not guilty of Lysander's blood;
Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me, then, that he is well. [therefore?

Dem. An if I could, what should I get
Her. A privilege never to see me more:—
And from thy hated presence part I so;
See me no more, whether he be dead or no.

[Exit.

Dem. There is no following her this vain;

Hence, therefore, for a while I will
So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt sleep doth drown
Which now in some slight measure
If for his tender here I make some

Oba. What hast thou done? thou taken quite,

And laid the love-juice on some
Of thy misprision must perforce require
Some true-love turn'd, and not a false.

Puck. Then fate o'er-rules; that, holding truth,

A million fail, confounding oath on oath,
And Helena of Athens look thou find;
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheek;
With sighs of love that cost the reed
By some illusion see thou bring her in;
I'll charm his eyes against she do appear.

Puck. I go, I go; look how I go;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow.

Oba. Flower of this purple dye,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye!
When his love he doth espie,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.
When thou wak'st, if she be living,
Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter Puck.
Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand;
And the youth mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's pen.
Shall we their fond pageant see?
Lord, what fools these mortals be!

Oba. Stand aside; the noise they make
Will cause Demetrius to awake.

Puck. Then will two at once woo him,
That must needs be sport alone;
And those things do best please him,
That befall preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.
Lys. Why should you think that I woo in scorn?

Scorn and derision never come in love;
Look, when I vow, I weep, and vows
In their nativity all truth appear.
How can these things in me seem scorn,
Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true?

Hel. You do advance your cunning more
more.

When truth kills truth, O devilish habit,
These vows are Hermia's: will you o'er?

Weigh oath with oath, and you will
Your vows to her and me, put in two Will even weigh; and both as light as Lys. I had no judgment when to her

Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.

Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not Dem. [Awaking.] O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine!

To what, my love, shall I compare thine eye?
Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus snow,
Fond with the eastern wind, turns to a crow
When thou hold'st up thy hand: O, let me kiss

That princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!

Hel. O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me, for your punishment:

If you were civil and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.

Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls to mock me too?

If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so;

In vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.

You both are rivals and love Hermia;
And now both rivals, to mock Helena:

A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes

With your derision! none of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin, and extort
A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.

Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so;
For you love Hermia;—This you know I know: [heart,

And here, with all good-will, with all my
to Hermia's love I yield you up my part;

And yours of Helena to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do to my death.

Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.

Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will my heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remain.

Lys. Helen, it is not so.
Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know.

Lead to thy peril, thou abyt dear.—[dem.
Look, where thy love comes; yonder is thy function takes,

Enter Hermia.
Her. Dark night, that from the eye his
The ear more quick of apprehension makes;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.

But why unkindly didst thou leave me so?
Lys. Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go?

Her. What love could press Lysander from my side?

Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him bide;

Fair Helena; who more engilds the night
Than all you fiery oes and eyes of light.

Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know,

This hate I bare thee made me leave thee so?

Her. You speak not as you think: it cannot be.

Hel. Lo, she is one of this confederacy!
Now I perceive they have conjur'd, all three,
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.

Injurious Hermia! most ungrateful maid!
Have you conspir'd, have you with these con-
To bait me with this foul derision? [triv'd
Is all the counsel that we two have shur'd,

The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us,—O! is all forgot?

All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence,
We, Hermia, like two artificial gods, [sence!
Have with our needles created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key;
As if our hands, our sides, our voices, and minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted;
But yet a union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem;
So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crown'd with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone do feel the injury. [words,
Her. I am amazed at your passionate
I scorn you not: it seems that you scorn me.

Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me, and praise my eyes and face?

And made your other love, Demetrius, [foot,) (Who even but now did spurn me with his
To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare, Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander

Deny your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection,
But by your setting on, by your consent?

What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon with love, so fortunate;
But miserable most, to love unlov'd?

This you should pity, rather than despise.
Her. I understand not what you mean by
this.

Hel. Ay, do, persevere, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back;
Wink at each other; hold the sweet jest up:
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicle.

If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But, fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault;
Which death, or absence, soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay, gentle Helena; hear my excuse:
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!

Hel. O excellent!
 Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
 Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.
 Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat:
 Thy threats have no more strength than her Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do;
 I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
 To prove him false that says I love thee not.
 Dem. I say I love thee more than he can do.
 Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it.
 Dem. Quick, come!
 Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?
 Lys. Away, you Ethiop!
 Dem. No, no, sir—
 Seem to break loose; take on, as you would follow;
 But yet come not: you are a tame man, go!
 Lys. [To Hermia.] Hang off, thou cat, thou burr! vile thing, let loose,
 Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent!
 Her. Why are you grown so rude? what sweet love!
 Lys. Thy love? out, tawny Tartar, out!
 Out, loathed medicine! O hated potion, hence!
 Her. Do you not jest?
 Hel. Yes, sooth; and so do you.
 Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
 Dem. I would I had your bond, for I per-
 A weak bond holds you; I'll not trust your word.
 Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her,
 Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.
 Her. What, can you do me greater harm than hate?
 Hel. Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news,
 Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?
 I am as fair now, as I was erewhile.
 Since night, you lov'd me; yet, since night
 you left me:
 Why, then you left me (O, the gods forbid!)
 In earnest, shall I say?
 Lys. Ay, by my life;
 And never did desire to see thee more.
 Therefore be out of hope, of question, of doubt:
 Be certain, nothing truer; 'tis no jest,
 That I do hate thee, and love Helena.
 Her. O me!—you juggler! you cankerblossom!
 You thief of love! what, have you come by
 And stol'n my love's heart from him?
 Hel. Fine, if faith!
 Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
 No touch of bashfulness? What, will you tear impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
 Fie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet you!
 Her. Puppet? why, so; ay, that way goes the game.
 Now I perceive that she hath made compare Between our staturs; she hath urg'd her height;
 And with her personage, her tall personage,

Her height, forsooth, she hath compar'd
 him.—
 And are you grown so high in his esteem,
 Because I am so dwarfish and so low?
 How low am I, thou painted maypole?
 How low am I? I am not yet so low,
 But that my nails can reach unto thine ears.
 Hel. I pray you, though you are
 gentlemen,
 Let her not hurt me: I was never angry
 I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
 I am a right maid for my cowardice.
 Let her not strike me. You perhaps may Because she is something lower than you,
 That I can match her.
 Her. Lower! ha, ha!
 Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so
 I evermore did love you, Hermia, Did ever keep your counsels, never Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
 I told him of your stealth unto this wood.
 He follow'd you; for love, I follow'd;
 But he hath chid me hence, and kill'd my
 To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me!
 And now, so you will let me quiet
 To Athens will I bear my folly hence.
 And follow you no farther: let me go.
 You see how simple and how fond I am.
 Her. Why, get you gone: who hinders you?
 Hel. A foolish heart, that I love
 Her. What, with Lysander?
 Hel. With him.
 Lys. Be not afraid; she shall not thee, Helena.
 Dem. No, sir, she shall not, though Hel. O, when she is angry, she is absurd;
 She was a vixen when she went to
 And though she be but little, she is Her. Little again! nothing but little!
 Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?
 Let me come to her.
 Lys. Get you gone, you
 You minims, of hindering knot-grass!
 You bead, you acorn!
 Dem. You are too
 In her behalf that scorns your services:
 Let her alone; speak not of Helena;
 Take not her part; for, if thou dost,
 Never so little show of love to her,
 Thou shalt abate it.
 Lys. Now she holds me
 Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try where
 Or thine or mine, is most in Helena.
 Dem. Follow? nay, I'll go with thee
 by jule.
 Her. You, mistress, all this coil
 Nay, go not back.
 Hel. I will not trust you.
 Nor longer stay in your curst company:
 Your hands, that mine are quicker for,
 My legs are longer though, to run away.

Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say.
 Dem. This is thy negligence: still thou mistak'st,
 Or else commit'st thy knaveries wilfully. [Look.
 Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mis-
 Did not you tell me I should know the man
 And so far blameless proves my enterprise,
 That I have 'ointed an Athenian's eyes;
 And so far am I glad it so did sort,
 As this their jangling I esteem a sport.
 Dem. Thou seest, these lovers seek a place to
 The starry welkin cover thou anon
 With drooping fog, as black as Acheron;
 And lead these lusty rivals so astray,
 As one come not within another's way.
 Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong,
 And sometime call thou like Demetrius; [thus,
 And from each other look thou lead them
 With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep:
 Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye;
 Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
 To take from thence all error with his might,
 And make his eye-balls roll with wonted sight.
 When they next wake, all this confusion
 Shall seem a dream, and fruitless vision;
 And back to Athens shall the lovers wend,
 With league, whose date till death shall never Whiles I in this affair do thee employ, [end.
 I'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy;
 And then I will her charmed eyes release
 From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.
 Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done
 For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full
 And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger; [fast,
 At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here
 and there,
 Troop home to churchyards: damn'd spirits
 That in cross-ways and floods have burial,
 Already to their wormy beds are gone,
 For fear lest day should look their shames,
 They willfully themselves exile from light, upon
 And must for aye consort with black-brow'd
 night.
 Dem. But we are spirits of another sort:
 I with the morning's love have oft made
 sport;
 And, like a forester, the groves may tread,
 Even till the eastern gate, all fiery red,
 Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams,
 Turns into yellow gold his salt-green streams.
 But, notwithstanding, hate; make no delay:
 We may effect this business yet ere day.
 Puck. Up and down, up and down,
 I will lead them up and down:
 I am fear'd in field and town;
 Goblin, lead them up and down.
 Here comes one.

Re-enter Lysander.
 Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius!
 speak thou now.
 Puck. Here, villain! drawn and ready.
 Where art thou?
 Lys. I will be with thee straight.
 Puck. Follow me, then,
 To plainer ground.
 [Exit Lys., as following the voice.
 Re-enter Demetrius.
 Dem. Lysander! speak again.
 Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
 Speak! in some bush! Where dost thou hide thy head?
 Puck. Thou coward! art thou bragging to the stars,
 Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
 And wilt not come! Come, recreant; come,
 thou child;
 I'll whip thee with a rod; he is dead!
 That draws a sword on thee.
 Dem. Yea, art thou there?
 Puck. Follow my voice: we'll try no manhood here.
 Re-enter Lysander.
 Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me:
 When I come where he calls, then he is gone.
 The villain is much lighter-heel'd than I:
 I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly;
 That fallen am I in dark uneven way,
 And here will rest me. [Lies down.] Come,
 thou gentle day!
 For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
 I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite.
 Re-enter Puck and Demetrius.
 Puck. Ho! ho! ho! Coward, why com'st thou not? [Exit
 Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st; for well I
 Thou run'st before me, shifting every place,
 And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
 Where art thou now?
 Puck. Come hither: I am here.
 Dem. Nay, then, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt buy this dear.
 If ever I thy face by day-light see:
 Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me
 To measure out my length on this cold bed.
 By day's approach look to be visited.
 [Lies down and sleeps.
 Re-enter Helena.
 Hel. O weary night! O long and tedious
 night!
 Abate thy hours; shine, comforts, from the
 That I may back to Athens, by day-light,
 From these that my poor company detest;
 And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's
 eye,
 Steal me awhile from mine own company.
 Puck. Yet but three! Come one more;
 Two of both kinds make up four.
 Here she comes, curst and sad;
 Cupid is a knavish lad,
 Thus to make poor females mad.

Re-enter Hermia.

Her. Never so weary, never so in woe;
Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with
I can no farther crawl, no farther go; [Dries;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the break of day.
Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!

[Lies down.]

Puck. On the ground sleep sound:

I'll apply to your eye,

Gentle lover, remedy.

[Squeezing the herb on Lysander's eyelids.]

When thou wak'st, thou tak'st

True delight in the sight

Of thy former lady's eye:

And the country proverb known,

That every man should take his own,

In your waking shall be shown:

Jack shall have Jill;

Nought shall go ill;

The man shall have his mare again,

And all shall be well.

[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Wood.

Enter Titania and Bottom, Fairies attending;
Oberon behind unseen.

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy, [Bed,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth
head,

And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

Bot. Where's Peas-blossom?Peas. Ready.Bot. Scratch my head, Peas-blossom.—

Where's the monsieur Cobweb?

Cob. Ready.

Bot. Monsieur Cobweb, good monsieur, get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle;
and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag.
Do not fret yourself too much in the action,
monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care
the honey-bag break not; I would be loth to have you overflown with a honey-bag, signior.
—Where's monsieur Mustard-seed?

Must. Ready.

Bot. Give me your neif, monsieur Mustard-seed. Pray you, leave your courtesy, good monsieur.

Must. What's your will?
Bot. Nothing, good monsieur, but to help cavaliero Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur; for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face; and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.

Tita. What, wilt thou hear some music,
my sweet love?

Bot. I have a reasonable good ear in music;
let us have the tongue and the bones. [To eat.]

Tita. Or say, sweet love, what thou desire'st

Bot. Truly, a peck of provender, munch your good dry oats. Methinks a great desire to a bottle of hay:—
sweet hay, hath no fellow.

Tita. I have a venturous fairy that shall the squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new dried peas.

Bot. I had rather have a immortal people stir me: I have an exposition come upon me.

Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee
Fairies, be gone, and be all ways away!

So doth the woodbine the sweet honey
Gently entwine: the female ivy so Enrings the barks fingers of the olive,
O, how I love thee, how I dote on thee!

Enter Puck.

Ob. [Advancing.] Welcome, good Titania,
Seest thou this sweet sight?

Her dotage now I do begin to pity:
For, meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savours for this hateful
I did upbraid her, and fall out with her;
For she his hairy temples then had
With coronet of fresh and fragrant
And that same dew, which sometimes huds

Was wont to swell, like round and rich
Stood now within the pretty flower
Like tears, that did their own disgrace
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild terms begg'd my pity:
I then did ask of her her changeling
Which straight she gave me; and her
To bear him to my bower in fairy land.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes:
And, gentle Puck, take this transfiguring
From off the head of this Athenian swain;
That he, awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accident.
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.

But first I will release the fairy queen.
[Touching her eyes with his wand.]
Be, as thou wast wont to be;
See, as thou wast wont to see;
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power

Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.

Ob. There lies your love.

Tita. How came these things about me?
O, how mine eyes do loathe his visage now!

Ob. Silence, awhile.—Robin, take
head.—

Titania, music call; and strike more
Than common sleep, of all these five the first.

Tita. Music, ho! music! such a music as will sleep.

Puck. When thou wak'st, with this music.

SCENE I.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

Ob. Sound, music! [Still music.] Come,
my queen, take hands with me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in unity,
And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair prosperity.
These shall the pair of faithful lovers be Welded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark:
I do hear the morning lark.

Ob. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade;
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wandering moon.

Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.

[Exeunt. Horns sound within.]
Th. Go, one of you, find out the forester;
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds.
Uncouple in the western valley; let them go:
Be patient, I say, and find the forester.

We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they lay'd this bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,
Sens'd all one mutual cry: I never heard
Sonomical a discord, such sweet thunder. [Kind,
So few'd, so sounded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Cock-knew'd, and dew-lapp'd like Thessalian
bulls;

Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like Een under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:
Judge, when you hear.—But, soft! what nymphs are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here
And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena:
I wonder of their being here together.

Th. No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,
Came hither in grace of our solemnity.

Bot. Speak, Egeus; is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Ege. It is, my lord.

Th. Go, bid the huntmen wake them with [Horns and shout within.] Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena,
Wake and start up.

Good morning, friends. Saint Valentine is Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

Lys. Pardon, my lord. [He and Theseus kneel.
The.] I pray you all, stand up.

I know you two are rival enemies:
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half sleep, half waking: but as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here;

But, as I think, (for truly would I speak,—
And now I do bethink me, so it is,)
I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might Without the peril of the Athenian law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough:

I beg the law, the law upon his head.
They would have stol'n away; they would,
Demetrius,

Thereby to have defeated you and me.
You of your wife, and me of my consent,—
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,

Of this their purpose hither to this wood;
And I in fury hither follow'd them,
Fair Helens in fancy following me.

But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is,) my love to Hermia,
Melted as doth the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gawd,
Which in my childhood I did dote upon;

And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object, and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loathe this food;
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

Th. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by, with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purposes of hunting shall be set aside.
Away, with us, to Athens: three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.
Come, Hippolyta.

[Exeunt Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.]
Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,
Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks I see these things with parted
eye,

When everything seems double.

Hel. So methinks:
And I have found Demetrius, like a jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. It seems to me
That yet we sleep, we dream.—Do not you think

The duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea; and my father.
Hel. And Hippolyta.
Lys. And he did bid us follow to the temple.
Dem. Why then, we are awake: let's follow him;
 And by the way let us recount our dreams.

Bot. [Awaking.] When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer:—my next is, "Most fair Pyramus."—O, ho!—Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling!—God's my life! stolen hence, and left me asleep! I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream,—past the wit of man to say what dream it was: man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was—there is no man can tell what Methought I was, and methought I had,—but man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke: peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in Quince's House.

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.
Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come home yet? [He is transported.] Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt.
Flu. If he come not, then the play is marred: it goes not forward, doth it?
Quin. It is not possible you have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus but he.
Flu. No, he hath simply the best wit of any Quince. Yea, and the best person too; and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.
Flu. You must say, paragon: a paramour is, God bless us! a thing o' naught.

Enter Song.
Song. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.
Flu. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a day during his life; he could not have 'scaped sixpence a day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottom.
Bot. Where are these lads? where are these hearts? [O most happy hour!]
Quin. Bottom!—O most courageous day!
Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders:

but ask me not what; for if I tell you, no true Athenian. I will tell you right as it fell out.
Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.
Bot. Not a word of me. All that you is, that the duke hath dined. You apparel together, good strings to your new ribbons to your pumps; meet at the palace; every man look o'er his shoulder for the short and the long is, our play's forfeit. In any case, let Thelys lay linen; and let not him that plays the clown, nor garlick, for we are to utter sweet words, and I do not doubt but to hear them a sweet comedy. No more words; away.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Athens. An Apartment in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, and Attendants.

Hip. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that lovers speak of.
The. More strange than true. I never saw these antique fables, nor these fairy plays. Lovers and madmen have such seething brains, such shaping fantasies, that apprehend more than cool reason ever comprehends. The lunatic, the lover, and the poet, are of imagination all compact: One sees more devils than vast hell can hold; That is the madman; the lover, all as seers, Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt; The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, to doth And, as imagination bodies forth 'The forms of things unknown, the poet Turns them to shapes, and gives them names. A local habitation and a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination, That, if it would but apprehend some, It comprehends some bringer of that. Or in the night, imagining some fear, How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear!
Hip. But all the story of the night last night, and all their minds transfigur'd so!
 More witnesses than fancy's images, And grows to something of great consequence. But, howsoever, strange and admirable.
The. Here come the lovers, full of mirth.

Enter Lyander, Demetrius, Helena, Joy, gentle friends! joy, and fresh hearts! Accompany your hearts!
Lys. More than to wait in your royal walks, your beauty bed!
The. Come now; what masks, what

To wear away this long age of three hours, Between our after-supper, and bed-time? Where is our usual manager of mirth? What revels are in hand? Is there no play, To ease the anguish of a torturing hour? Call Philostrate.

Philo. Here, mighty Theseus.
The. Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?

Philo. What music? What music? How shall we beguile the lazy time, if not with some delight?

Philo. There is a brief how many sports are ripe:
 Make choice of which your highness will see first.

The. [Reads.] "The battle with the Centaurs to be sung
 By an Athenian exarch to the harp."
 We'll none of that: that have I told my love,
 In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

Philo. "The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage."

The. That is an old device; and it was play'd
 When I from Thebes came last a conqueror.

Philo. "The thrice three muses mourning
 Of learning, late decays'd in beggary."

The. That is some native, keen and critical,
 Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.

Philo. "A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus
 And his love Thisbe: very tragical mirth."

The. Merry and tragical! Tedious and brief!
 That is, hot ice and wondrous strange snow.
 How shall we find the concord of this discord?

Philo. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long.
 Which is as brief as I have known a play;
 But by ten words, my lord, it is too long;

The. Which makes it tedious; for in all the play
 There is not one word apt, one player fitted;
 For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.

Philo. Which, when I saw rehears'd, I must confess,
 Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
 The passion of loud laughter never shed.

The. What are they that do play it?
Philo. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens here,
 Which never labour'd in their minds till now;
 And now have toil'd their unbreath'd memories
 With this same play, against your nuptial.

The. And we will hear it.
Philo. It is not for you: I have heard it over,
 And it is nothing, nothing in the world;
 Unless you can find sport in their intents,
 Extremely stretch'd and cou'd with cruel

The. To do you service.
Philo. I will hear that play;
 For never anything can be amiss,

When simplemindedness and duty tender it.
 Go, bring them in: and take your places, ladies.

[Exit Philostrate.]
Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'er-
 And duty in his service perishing. [Charg'd,
The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.
Hip. He says they can do nothing in this kind.
The. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.
 Our sport shall be to take what they mistake;
 And what poor duty cannot do,
 Noble respect takes it in might, not merit.
 Where I have come, great clerks have purpos'd
 To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
 Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
 Make periods in the midst of sentences,
 Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears,
 And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,
 Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet,
 Out of this silence, yet, I pick'd a welcome;
 And in the modesty of fearful duty
 I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
 Of saucy and audacious eloquence.
 Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity,
 In least speak most, to my capacity.

Enter Philostrate.
Philo. So please your grace, the prologue is address'd. The. Let him approach.
[Flourish of trumpets.]
Enter Prologue.
Pro. "If we offend, it is with our good-will.
 That you should think, we come not to offend,
 But with good-will. To show our simple skill,
 That is the true beginning of our end.
 Consider, then, we come but in despite.
 We do not come as minding to content you,
 Our true intent is. All for your delight,
 We are not here. That you should here repent you,
 The actors are at hand; and, by their show,
 You shall know all, that you are like to know."
The. This fellow doth not stand upon points.
Lys. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt;
 he knows not the stop. A good moral,
 my lord: it is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed, he hath played on his prologue, like a child on a recorder; a sound,
 but not in government.
The. His speech was like a tangled chain;
 nothing impaired, but all disorder'd. Who is next?
Enter Pyramus and Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, as in dumb show.
Pro. "Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show;
 But wonder on, till truth make all things known;
 This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
 This beauteous lady Thisbe is, certain.
 This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present
 Wall, that vile wall which did these lovers

And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are content.

To whisper; at the which let no man wonder.
This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Moonshine; for, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
This grisly beast, which Lion hight by name,
The trusty Thisby, coming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright;
And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall,

Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain.

Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain:
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blameful blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody

And Thisby, tarrying in mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain,
At large discourse while here they do remain.

[Exeunt Prol., Thisbe, Lion, and Moonshine.
The. I wonder, if the lion be to speak.

Dem. No wonder, my lord:
One lion may, when many asses do.

Wall. "In this same interlude it doth befall,
That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;
And such a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a cranny'd hole or chink,
Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Did whisper often very secretly. [Thisby.
This lime, this rough-cast, and this stone,
doth show

That I am that same wall; the truth is so:
And this the cranny is, right and sinister, Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper." [Speak better!

The. Would you desire lime and hair to Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!
Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. "O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!

O night, which ever art when day is not!
O night, O night! alack, alack, alack!

I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot!—
And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall,

That stand'st between her father's ground
and mine;

Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall, Show me thy chink to blink through with mine eyes!" [Wall holds up his fingers.

Thanks, courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this!

But what see I? No Thisby do I see.
O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss!

Curst be thy stones for thus deceiving me!"
The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyr. No, in truth, sir, he should not.
"Deceiving me," is Thisbe's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall just as you.—Yonder she comes.

Enter Thisbe.
This. "O wall, fall often hast thou
my moans,

For parting my fair Pyramus and me!
My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones,
Thy stones with lime and wash built up
thee."

Pyr. "I see a voice; now will I to the
To spy an I can hear my Thisby Thisby!"

This. "My love! thou art my love, I see."
Pyr. "Think what thou wilt,
lover's grace;

And, like Lianor, am I trusty still."
This. "And I like Helen, till the Pyr. "Not Shafalus to Procrus was I!"
This. "As Shafalus to Procrus, I to Pyr. "O! kiss me through the hole vile wall!"

This. "I kiss the wall's hole, not you."
Pyr. "Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb straightway?"

This. "Tide life, 'tide death, I come [Exeunt Pyramus and Thisbe.

Wall. "Thus have I, wall, my job charged so;

And, being done, thus wall away doth
The. Now is the mural down between two neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when wall so wilful to hear without warning.

Hip. This is the silliest stuff that
The. The best is this kind are but and the worst are no worse, if amend them.

Hip. It must be your imagination
The. If we imagine no worse of them they of themselves, they may pass for lent men.—Here come two noble moon and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.
Lion. "You, ladies, you, whose hearts do fear

The smallest monstrous mouse that May now perchance both quake and
here,

When lion rough in wildest rage doth
Then know that I, one Snug the joiner,

No lion fell, nor else no lion's dam;
For, if I should as lion come in strife,
Into this place, 'twere pity of my life."

The. A very gentle beast, and of a conscience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord.
Lys. This lion is a very fox for his
The. True; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour carry his discretion; and the fox carries goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot his valour; for the goose carries not the

It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moon. "This lantern doth the hornèd moon present;"—

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his head. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. "This lantern doth the hornèd moon present;"

Myself the man I' the moon do seem to be.

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest; the man should be put into the lantern.

How is it else the man I' the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle; for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am weary of this moon: would he would change!

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane; but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, moon.

Moon. All that I have to say, is, to tell you that the lantern is the moon; I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence! here comes Thisbe.

Enter Thisbe.

This. "This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?"

Lion. [Roaring.] "Oh—."

Dem. Well roared, lion. [Thisbe runs off.]

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, moon.—Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

[The Lion tears Thisbe's mantle, and exit.]

The. Well moused, lion.

Dem. And then came Pyramus.

Lys. And so the lion vanished.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. "Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;

I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright;

For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,

I trust to taste of truest Thisbe's sight.

But stay,—O spite!

But mark, poor knight,

What dreadful dole is here!

Eyes, do you see?

How can it be?

O dainty duck! O dear!

Thy mantle good,

What, stain'd with blood!

Approach, ye furies fell!

O fates, come, come,

Cut thread and thrum;

Quill, crush, conclude, and quell!"

The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pyr. "O wherefore, nature, didst thou lions frame?

Since lion vile hath here deflower'd my dear: Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame

That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd

Come, tears, confound; [with cheer, Out, sword, and wound

The pap of Pyramus: Ay, that left pap,

Where heart doth hop:— Thus die I, thus, thus, thus!

Now am I dead, Now am I fled; My soul is in the sky:

Tongue, lose thy light! Moon, take thy light! [Exit Moon. Now die, die, die, die." [Dies.]

Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one, [dead; he is nothing.

Lys. Less than an ace, man; for he is The. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an ass.

Hip. How chance moonshine is gone, before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?

The. She will find him by starlight.—Here she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Enter Thisbe.

Hip. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief.

Dem. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better.

Lys. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she moans, videlicet:

This. "Asleep, my love? What, dead, my dove?

O Pyramus, arise! Speak, speak. Quite dumb!

Dead, dead! A tomb Must cover thy sweet eyes.

These lily lips, This cherry nose,

These yellow cowslip cheeks, Are gone, are gone:

Lovers, make moan: His eyes were green as leeks.

O, sisters three, Come, come to me,

With hands as pale as milk; Lay them in gore,

Since you have shore With shears his thread of silk.

Tongue, not a word: Come, trusty sword:

Come, blade, my breast imbrue: And farewell, friends: Thus Thisby ends:

Adieu, adieu, adieu." [Dies.]

The. Moonshine and Lion are left to bury the dead. Dem. Ay, and Wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company?

The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it, had play'd Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy: and so it is, truly; and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue alone.

[A dance.
The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve:—
Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fairy time.
I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have overwatch'd.
This palpable gross play hath well-beguill'd
The heavy gait of night.—Sweet friends, to bed.—

A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly revels, and new jollity. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf howls the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task foredone.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide:
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Hecate's team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic: not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow'd house:
I am sent, with broom, before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter Oberon and Titania, with their train.

Obe. Through the house give glimmering
By the dead and drowsy fire: [light,
Every elf, and fairy sprite,
Hop as light as bird from brier;

And this ditty, after me,
Sing, and dance it trippingly.

Tita. First, rehearse your song by rote,
To each word a warbling note:
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing, and bless this place.

[Song and dance.
Obe. Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray.
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
And the issue there create,
Ever shall be fortunate.
So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be;
And the blots of nature's hand
Shall not in their issue stand;
Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity, Shall upon their children be.
With this field-dew consecrate,
Every fairy take his gait;
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace, with sweet peace,
Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away; make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

[Exeunt Oberon, Titania, and train.
Puck. If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, (and all is mended),
That you have but slumber'd here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend:
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I'm an honest Puck,
If we have unearn'd luck
Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
We will make amends ere long;
Else the Puck a liar call:
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.]

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Duke of Venice.
 Prince of Morocco, } Suitors to Portia.
 Prince of Arragon, }
 Antonio, the Merchant of Venice.
 Bassanio, his friend.
 Gratiano, } Friends to Antonio and Bassanio.
 Salario, }
 Lorenzo, in love with Jessica.
 Shylock, a Jew.
 Tubal, a Jew, his friend.

Launcelot Gobbo, a Clown, servant to Shylock.
 Old Gobbo, Father to Launcelot.
 Leonardo, Servant to Bassanio.
 Balthazar, } Servants to Portia.
 Stephano, }
 Portia, a rich Heiress.
 Nerissa, her waiting-maid.
 Jessica, Daughter to Shylock.
 Magnificoes of Venice, Officers of the Court of Justice, Gaoler, Servants, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—Partly at Venice, and partly at Belmont, the seat of Portia, on the Continent.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Antonio, Salario, and Bassanio.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad :
 It wearies me ; you say it wearies you ;
 But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
 What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
 I am to learn ;
 And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
 That I have much ado to know myself.

Salario. Your mind is tossing on the ocean ;
 There, where your argosies with portly sail,—
 Like signiors and rich burghers on the flood,
 Or, as it were, the pageants of the sea,—
 Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
 That count'sy to them, do them reverence,
 As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Bassanio. Believe me, sir, had I such venture
 forth,
 The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass, to know where sits the wind ;

Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and
 And every object that might make me fear
 Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
 Would make me sad.

Salario. My wind, cooling my broth,
 Would blow me to an ague, when I thought
 What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
 But I should think of shallows and of flats ;
 And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
 Vailing her high top lower than her ribs,
 To kiss her burial. Should I go to church,
 And see the holy edifice of stone,
 And not bethink me straight of dangerous
 Which, touching but my gentle vessel's side,

Would scatter all her spices on the stream ;
 Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks ;
 And, in a word, but even now worth this,
 And now worth nothing ? Shall I have the thought

To think on this ; and shall I lack the thought,
 That such a thing bechanc'd would make me
 But tell not me ; I know, Antonio [sad]
 Is sad to think upon his merchandise. [it]

Ant. Believe me, no : I thank my fortune for My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
 Nor to one place ; nor is my whole estate
 Upon the fortune of this present year :

Therefore, my merchandise makes me not sad.

Salario. Why, then, you are in love.

Ant. Fie, fie !

Salario. Not in love neither ? Then let's say you are sad,
 Because you are not merry : and 'twere as easy
 For you to laugh, and leap, and say you are merry, [Janus]

Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time :
 Some that will evermore peep through their
 And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper ; [eyes,
 And other of such vinegar aspect, [smile,
 That they'll not show their teeth in way of Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Salario. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kinsman,

Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare you well :
 We leave you now with better company.

Salario. I would have stay'd till I had made you merry,

If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard.

I take it your own business calls on you,

And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Salar. Good morrow, my good lords.

Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? Say, when?

You grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
Salar. We'll make our leasures to attend on yours. [Exeunt Salarino and Salanio.]

Lor. My lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,

We too will leave you: but, at dinner-time, I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.

Bass. I will not fail you.

Gra. You look not well, signior Antonio; You have too much respect upon the world: They lose it that do buy it with much care: Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

Ant. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;

A stage, where every man must play a part, And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the fool:

With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come; And let my liver rather heat with wine, Than my heart cool with mortifying groans. Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,

Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?

Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the jaundice

By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio,—

I love thee, and it is my love that speaks,—

There are a sort of men, whose visages

Do cream and mantle like a standing pond;

And do a wilful stillness entertain,

With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion

Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit;

As who should say, "I am Sir Oracle,

And, when I open my lips, let no dog bark!"

O my Antonio, I do know of these,

That therefore only are reputed wise,

For saying nothing; who, I am very sure,

If they should speak, would almost damn

those ears, [fools.]

Which, hearing them, would call their brothers

I'll tell thee more of this another time;

But fish not, with this melancholy bait,

For this fool-gudgeon, this opinion.—

Come, good Lorenzo.—Pursue ye well, awhile:

I'll end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you, then, till dinner-time:

I must be one of these same dumb wise men,

For Gratiano never lets me speak. [more.]

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years

Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue. [gear.]

Ant. Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this

Gra. Thanks, i' faith; for silence is only commendable [vendible.]

In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not

[Exeunt Gratiano and Lorenzo.]

Ant. Is that anything now?

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice.

His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall not find them; and, when you have found them, they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well; tell me now, what lady is the one to whom you swore a secret pilgrimage?

Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio.

How much I have disabled mine estate

By something showing a more swiftness

Than my faint means would grant continuance

Nor do I now make moan to be abused

From such a noble rate; but my chief loss

Is, to come fairly off from the great world

Wherein my time, something too prodigal

Hath left me gaged. To you, Antonio,

I owe the most, in money and in love;

And from your love I have a warranty

To unburthen all my plots and purposes

How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;

And if it stand, as you yourself still do,

Within the eye of honour, be assur'd

My purse, my person, my extremest means

Are all unlock'd to your occasions. [more.]

Bass. In my school-days, when I have

I shot his fellow of the self-same right

The self-same way, with more advised

To find the other forth; and by advent

both,

I oft found both: I urge this childhood

Because what follows is pure innocence.

I owe you much; and, like a wilful youth,

That which I owe is lost: but if you pluck

To shoot another arrow that self way

Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt

As I will watch the aim, or to find both,

Or bring your latter hazard back again,

And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

Ant. You know me well; and herein

but time,

To wind about my love with circumstance

And out of doubt you do me now more wrong

In making question of my uttermost,

Than if you had made waste of all I have;

Then do but say to me what I should do,

That in your knowledge may by me be done,

And I am prest unto it: therefore speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly bestow'd;

And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,

Of wondrous virtues: sometimes from her

I did receive fair speechless messages;

Her name is Portia; nothing underwrit

To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia;

Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth:

For the four winds blow in from every coast

Renowned suitors; and her sunny locks

Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,

Which makes her seat of Belmont

And many Jasons come in quest of her.

O my Antonio! had I but the means

To hold a rival place with one of them,

I have a mind presages me such thrift,

That I should questionless be fortunate.

Ant. Thou knowest that all my fortunes are at sea;
 Neither have I money, nor commodity
 To raise a present sum: therefore go forth,
 Try what my credit can in Venice do;
 That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
 To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
 Do, presently enquire, and so will I,
 Where money is; and I no question make,
 To have it of my trust, or for my sake.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's Mansion.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet, for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing: it is no small happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean; superfluity comes sooner by white hairs; but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounced.
 Ner. They would be better, if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood; but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree: such a madness in madness, the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel, the cripple. But this husband?—O me, the word choose! I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter enclaved by the will of a dead father.—Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men, at their death, have good inspirations; therefore, the lottery, that he hath devised in these three chests, of gold, silver, and lead (whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses you), will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly, but one whom you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them; and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and,
 according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt, indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts, that he can ride him himself. I am much afraid, my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Ner. Then is there the county Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown: as who should say, "An you will not have me, choose." He hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmannerly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these:—God defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French lord,
 Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker: but, he!—why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's; a better bad habit of frowning than the count Palatine: he is every man in no man; if a throstle sing, he falls straight a capering: he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me, I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you, then, to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him; for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear that I have a poor penny-worth in the English. He is a proper man's picture; but, alas, who can converse with a dumb show? How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour everywhere.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him; for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you this young German, the duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober; and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast. An the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket; for, if the devil be within,
 and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

interest:—mark what Jacob did,
 and himself were compromised the earnings which were streak'd and all as Jacob's hire, the ewes, being autumn turned to the rams; [rank, the work of generation was these woolly breeders in the act,
 all shepherd peel'd me certain wands,
 the doing of the deed of kind,
 them up before the fulsome ewes,
 in conceiving, did in caining time ty-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's,
 the way to thrive, and he was blest:
 it is blessing, if men steal it not.
 This was a venture, sir, that Jacob ry'd for;
 not in his power to bring to pass, ly'd and fashion'd by the hand of
 heaven,
 inserted to make interest good?
 ur gold and silver ewes and rams?
 I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast;—
 me, signior.

Mark you this, Bassanio, can cite Scripture for his purpose.
 soul, producing holy witness,
 villain with a smiling cheek;
 y apple rotten at the heart:
 a goodly outside falsehood hath!
 Three thousand ducats,—'tis a good round sum. [rate, months from twelve, then let me see the Well, Shylock, shall we be beholden
 you?

Signior Antonio, many a time and oft, Rialto, you have rated me
 my monies and my usances:
 ve I borne it with a patient shrug;
 France is the badge of all our tribe,
 ll me false-believer, cut-throat dog,
 it upon my Jewish gaberdine,
 I for use of that which is mine own.
 hen, it now appears you need my help:
 then; you come to me, and you say,
 ck, we would have monies:—"you say

at did you'd your rheum upon my beard, ot me, as you spurn a stranger cur
 our threshold: monies is your suit.
 Should I say to you? Should I not say,
 a dog money? Is it possible, can lend three thousand ducats?" or bend low, and in a bondman's key, bated breath, and whispering humble-

la,— sir, you spit on me on Wednesday last;
 urn'd me such a day; another time l'd me dog; and for these courtesies
 d you thus much monies?"
 I am as like to call thee so again,
 on thee again, to spurn thee too.
 wilt lend this money, lend it not

As to thy friends; (for when did friendship take
 A breed for barren metal of his friend!)
 But lend it rather to thine enemy;
 Who, if he break, thou may'st with better face
 Exact the penalty.

Shy. Why, look you, how you storm!
 I would be friends with you, and have your
 love,
 Forget the shames that you have stain'd me
 with,
 Supply your present wants, and take no dole,
 Of usance for my monies, and you'll not hear
 This is kind I offer. [me:]

Ant. This were kindness.
 Shy. This kindness will I show.
 Go with me to a notary, seal me there
 Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
 If you repay me not on such a day,
 In such a place, such sum or sums as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
 Be nominated for an equal pound
 Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
 In what part of your body pleaseth me.

Ant. Content, in faith: I'll seal to such a bond,
 And say there is much kindness in the Jew.
 Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for
 me;

I'll rather dwell in my necessity.
 Ant. Why, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it:
 Within these two months, that's a month before

This bond expires, I do expect return
 Of thrice three times the value of this bond.
 Shy. O father Abram! what these Christians
 are,

Whose own hard dealing teaches them suspect
 The thoughts of others! Pray you, tell me
 this;

If he should break his day, what should I gain
 By the exaction of the forfeiture?
 A pound of man's flesh taken from a man,
 Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
 As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
 To buy his favour, I extend this friendship:
 If he will take it, so; if not, adieu;
 And, for my love, I pray you, wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.
 Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's;
 Give him direction for this merry bond;
 And I will go and purse the ducats straight;
 See to my house, left in the fearful guard
 Of an unthrifty knave; and presently
 I will be with you. [Exit.

Ant. Hie thee, gentle Jew.
 This Hebrew will turn Christian: he grows kind.

Bass. I like not fair terms and a villain's
 mind.

Ant. Come on: in this there can be no dis-
 may;

My ships come home a month before the day.
 [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the Prince of Morocco, and his train; Portia, Nerissa, and other Attendants.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion, The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun, To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred. Bring me the fairest creature northward born, Where Phoebus' fire scarce thaws the icicles, And let us make incision for your love, To prove whose blood is redder, his or mine. I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine Hath fear'd the valiant: by my love, I swear The best regarded virgins of our clime Have lov'd it too: I would not change this line, Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.

Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led By nice direction of a maiden's eyes: Besides, the lottery of my destiny Bars me the right of voluntary choosing: But, if my father had not scantied me, And held me by his wit, to yield myself His wife who wins me by that means I told you, Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair As any comer I have look'd on yet, For my affection.

Mor. Even for that I thank you: Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets, To try my fortune. By this scintillar, — That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince That won three fields of Sultan Solymann, — I would out-stare the sternest eyes that look, Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth, Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear, Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey, To win thee, lady. But, alas the while! If Hercules and Lichas play at dice Which is the better man, the greater throw May turn by fortune from the weaker hand: So is Alcides beaten by his page; And so may I, blind fortune leading me, Miss that which one unworthier may attain, And die with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance; And either not attempt to choose at all, Or swear before you choose, — if you choose Never to speak to lady afterward [wrong, In way of marriage: therefore be advis'd.

Mor. Nor will not. Come, bring me unto my chance. [dinner

Por. First, forward to the temple; after Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then? To make me blest, or curs'd? among men! [Cornets, and exeunt.

SCENE II.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Launcelot Gobbo.

Laun. Certainly, my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master's friend is at mine elbow, and tempt me to me. "Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo to me, "Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, or "good Gobbo," or "Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, start, run away." My conscience says, take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo; or, as aforesaid, honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run; soon runneth thy heels." Well, the most comestible bids me pack: "Via!" says the fiend; "away!" says the fiend; "for the rouse up a brave mind," says the fiend, "run." Well, my conscience, hammer the neck of my heart, says very wisely, "My honest friend Launcelot, best friend man's son," — or rather an honest son; — for, indeed, my father did me a smack, something grow to, he had a taste; — well, my conscience says, "budge not." "Budge," says the fiend, "budge not," says my conscience, "once, say I, you counsel well; and, you counsel well: to be ruled by science, I should stay with the Jew my master, who (God bless the mark!) is a kind of father, and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly, the Jew is a very devil incarnation; and, in my conscience, is but a kind of hard case, to offer to counsel me to stay with the fiend, who gives the more friendly counsel will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a basket.
Gob. Master, young man, you, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. [Aside.] O heavens, this is my begotten father! who, being more than blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not, will try conclusions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but, at the next turning of your left; marry, at the very next turning of no hand, but turn down indirectly to Jew's house.

Gob. By God's senties, 'twill be a hard hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

Laun. Talk you of young master Launcelot? — [Aside.] Mark me now; now I will raise the waters. Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son, his father, though I say it, is an honest, exceeding poor man; and, God be his soul, he will live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what he will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot

Laun. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, Launcelot, talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. Of Launcelot, an't please your master.

Laun. Ergo, master Launcelot. Talk not of master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fates and destinies, and such old sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning,) is, indeed, descended; or, as you would say in plain terms, come to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Laun. [Aside.] Do I look like a cudgel or a staff, or a prop? Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day! I know you not, young gentleman; but I pray you, tell me, is my boy (God rest his soul!) alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am mand-blind; I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fall of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son. Give me your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long; — a man's son may; but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up: I am sure you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that; but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man; and I am sure Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed; I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord, worshipp'd might he be! what a beard hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy chin, than Dobbin my hall horse has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem, then, that Dobbin's tail grows backward: I am sure he had more hair on his tail, than I have on my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord, how art thou changed! How dost thou and thy master agree. I have brought him a present. How 'gree you now!

Laun. Well, well; but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master's a very Jew; give him a present! give him a halberd: I am furnished in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come; give me your present to our master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries: if I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. — O rare fortune! here comes the man; — to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio, with Leonardo, and other followers.

Bass. You may do so: — but let it be so hastied, that supper be ready at the very first of the clock. See these letters delivered; put the liveries to ranking; and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. [Exit a Servant.

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship! [fine!]

Bass. Gramercy! wouldst thou ought with Gob. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy.

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's man; that would, sir, — as my father shall specify, —

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve, —

Laun. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire, — as my father shall specify, —

Gob. His master and he (saying your worship's reverence,) are scarce enter-cousins, —

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me, — as my father, being, I hope, an old man, shall fruitfully unto you, —

Gob. I have here a dish of doves, that I would bestow upon your worship; and my suit is, —

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your lordship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet, poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both. — What would you, Laun. Serve you, sir. [you?]

Gob. That is the very defect of the matter, sir. [thy suit:]

Bass. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day, And hath prefer'd thee; if it be preposterous

To leave a rich Jew's service, to become The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir: you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well. — Go, father, with thy son: —

Take leave of thy old master, and enquire My lodging out. [To his followers. —] Give him a livery

More guarded than his fellows: see it done.

Laun. Father, in. — I cannot get a service, no; I have ne'er a tongue in my head. Well, [Looking on his palm:] if any man in Italy have a fairer table, which doth offer to swear upon a book. I shall have good fortune. Go to, here's a simple line of life! here's a small trifle of wives! alas, fifteen wives is nothing! eleven widows, and nine maids, is a simple coming-in for one man; and then, to 'scape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather-bed, — here are simple 'scapes! Well, if fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gear.—Father, come; I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye.

Exeunt Launcelot and Old Gobbo.

Bass. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this:

These things being bought, and orderly be-
Return in haste, for I do feast to-night
My best-esteem'd acquaintance; bid thee, go.

Leon. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where is your master?

Leon. Yonder, sir, he walks.

Gra. Signor Bassanio,—

Gra. I have a suit to you.

Bass. You have obtain'd it.

Gra. You must not deny me: I must go with you to Belmont.

Bass. Why, then you must. But hear thee,
Gratiano:

Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voice,—

Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appear not faults;
But where thou art not known, why, there they show

Something too liberal. Pray thee, take pain
To ally with some cold drops of modesty
Thy skipping spirit; lest, through thy wild behaviour,

I be misconstru'd in the place I go to,
And lose my hopes.

Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me:
If I do not put on a sober habit,
Talk with respect, and swear but now and then,
Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look de-murely;

Nay, more, while grace is saying, hood mine
Thus with my hat, and sigh, and say amen;
Use all the observance of civility,
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his grandam, never trust me more.

Bass. Well, we shall see your bearing.

Gra. Nay, but I bar to-night: you shall not
By what we do to-night.

Bass. No, that were pity:
I would entreat you rather to put on
Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpose merriment. But fare you well;
I have some business.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest:
But we will visit you at supper-time. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Venice. A Room in Shylock's
House.

Enter Jessica and Launcelot.

Jes. I am sorry thou wilt leave my father so:
Our house is hell; and thou, a merry devil,
Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness.
But fare thee well; there is a ducat for thee:
And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see

Lorenzo, who is thy new master's son:
Give him this letter; do it secretly:
And so farewell: I would not have See me in talk with thee.

Laun. Adieu!—tears exhibit my Most beautiful pagan,—most sweet
A Christian do not play the knave; thee, I am much deceived. But will foolish drops do somewhat drown my spirit: adieu!

Jes. Farewell, good Launcelot.

Alack, what heinous sin is it in me,
To be ashamed to be my father's child!
But though I am a daughter to his line,
I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo,
If thou keep promise, I shall end this Become a Christian, and thy loving wife.

SCENE IV.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salerio,

Salanio.

Lor. Nay, we will slink away in a Disguise us at my lodging, and return
All in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good promises.

Saler. We have not spoke as yet hearers.

Salan. 'Tis vile, unless it may be
And better, in my mind, not undervalued.

Lor. 'Tis now but four o'clock: we
To furnish us.

Enter Launcelot, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what's the this, it shall seem to signify.

Lor. I know the hand: is faith
And whiter than the paper it writ on
Is the fair hand that writ.

Gra. Love never
me, Jessica:

Laun. By your leave, sir.

Lor. Whither goest thou?

Laun. Marry, sir, to bid my old Jew, to sup to-night with my new Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this:—tell
I will not fail her;—speak it privately
Gentlemen.

*Will you prepare you for this visit to
I am provided of a torch-bearer.*

Saler. Ay, marry, I'll be gone straight.

Salan. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me and
At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Saler. 'Tis good we do so.

Exeunt Salerio, Salanio.

Gra. Was not that letter from fair
Lor. I must needs tell thee all.

How I shall take her from her father's What gold and jewels she is furnish'd
What page's suit she hath in readiness:
If e'er the Jew her father come to hear

SCENE V, 8.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

129

It will be for his gentle daughter's sake:
And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
Unless she do it under this excuse,—
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come, go with me: peruse this as thou goest.
This Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Venice. Before Shylock's House.

Enter Shylock and Launcelot.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see; thy eyes shall be thy judge.

What, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize,
As thou hast done with me;—what, Jessica!
And sleep and more, and read apparel out;—
Why, Jessica, I say!

Laun. Why, Jessica! Call.

Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me I could do nothing without bidding.

Jes. Call you? What is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica:

There are my keys.—But whither should I go?
I am not bid for love; they flatter me:
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian.—Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house,—I am right loath to go:
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go: my young master doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together,—
I will not say you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock in the morning, falling out that year on Ash Wednesday was four year in the afternoon.

Shy. What! are there masques? Hear you
me, Jessica:

Look up my doors; and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squeaking of the wry-neck'd fife,
Hamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street,
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces;
But stop my house's ears,—I mean my casements:

Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house.—By Jacob's staff, I swear
But I will go.—Go you before me, shrub:
I will come.

Laun. I will go before, sir.—Aside to Jes.

Mistress, look out at window, for all this:

There will come a Christian by.

Will he worth a Jewess's eye.

Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha!

Jes. His words were, "farewell, mistress!"

nothing else.

Shy. The patch is blind enough; but a huge

Swail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild cat: drones hive not with
me;

Therefore I part with him; and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse.—Well, Jessica, go in:
Perhaps I will return immediately:
Do as I bid you; shut doors after you:
"Fast bind, fast find,"

A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. Exit.

Jes. Farewell, and if my fortune be not cross'd,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost. Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Enter Gratiano and Salerio, masked.

Gra. This is the pent-house under which Desir'd us to make stand.

Saler. His hour is almost past.

Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Saler. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly To seal love's bonds new made, than they are wont

To keep obliged faith unforfeited!

Gra. That ever holds; who riseth from a feast

With that keen appetite that he sits down?

Where is the horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things that are
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.

How like a younker or a prodigal
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!

How like a prodigal doth she return,
With over-weather'd ribs and ragged sails,
Lean, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind!

Saler. Here comes Lorenzo:—more of this hereafter.

Enter Lorenzo.

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode;

Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:

When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,

I'll watch as long for you then.—Approach;
Here dwells my father Jew.—No! who's within?

Enter Jessica above, in boy's clothes.

Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty,

Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love, indeed;
For whom love I so much! And now who
knows

But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness that thou art.

Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much ashamed of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit:

For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.

Jes. What, must I hold a candle to
They in themselves, good sooth, are too too
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love; [light.
And I should be obscured.

Lor. So are you, sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.
But come at once;

For the close night doth play the run-away,
And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast.

Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild
myself.

With some more ducats, and be with you
straight.

Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentle, and no
Jew.

Lor. Bashaw me but I love her heartily;
For she is wise, if I can judge of her;

And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true;
And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself;

And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter Jessica below.
What, art thou come!—On, gentlemen; away!
Our masking mates by this time for us stay.

[Exit with Jessica and Salarino.
Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?
Gra. Signior Antonio?

Ant. Pie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the
"Tis nine o'clock; our friends all stay for you.
No mask to-night: the wind is come about;
Bassanio presently will go aboard:
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gra. I am glad on't; I desire no more delight,

Than to be under sail, and gone to-night.

[Exit.
SCENE VII.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's Mansion.

Flourish of cornets. Enter Portia, with the Prince of Morocco, and their trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover

The several caskets to this noble prince.—
Now make your choice.

Mor. The first, of gold, who this inscription
"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men
desire."

The second, silver, which this promise carries,—
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,—
"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

How shall I know if I do choose the right?
Por. The one of them contains my picture,
prince.

If you choose that, then I am yours withal.

Mor. Some god direct my judgment me see;

I will survey the inscriptions back and forth: What says this leaden casket?

"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

Must give,—For what? For lead? For lead?

This casket threatens; men that hazard
Do it in hope of fair advantage:
A golden mind stoops not to shows of
things;
I'll then not give nor hazard anything
for lead.

What says the silver, with her vision shines?
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

As much as he deserves!—Pause the
And weigh thy value with an even beam:
If thou be'st rated by thy estimation,
Thou dost deserve enough; and yet
May not extend so far as to the lady:
And yet to be afeard of my deserving
Were but a weak disabling of myself.

As much as I deserve!—Why, that I do in birth deserve her, and in love
In graces, and in qualities of breeding,
But more than these, in love I do deserve.
What if I stray'd no farther, but chose Let's see once more this saying grav'd in lead.

"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men
desire."

Why, that's the lady; all the world
From the four corners of the earth do
To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing
The Hyrcanian deserts, and the vasty
Of wide Arabia, are as through-sails
For princes to come view fair Portia:
The wat'ry kingdom, whose ambitious Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar
To stop the foreign spirit; but they come
As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her picture.

Is't like, that lead contains her damnation

To think so base a thought: it were to
To rib her cerecloth in the obscure
Or shall I think in silver she's immur'd,
Being ten times undervalu'd to tried O sinful thought! Never so rich a Was set in worse than gold. They
England

A coin, that bears the figure of an eagle,
Stamped in gold; but that's insculpt
But here an angel in a golden bed
Lies all within.—Deliver me the key:
Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may.
Por. There, take it, prince; and if you
Then I am yours.

[He opens the golden O hell! what have
A carrion death, within whose empty
There is a written scroll! I'll read the [Reads.] "All that glisters is not gold."
Often have you heard that told

Many a man his life hath sold,
But my outside to behold:
Gilded tombs do worms infold.
Had you been as wise as gold,
Young in limbs, in judgment old,
Your answer had not been inscrol'd;

"Pursue you well; your suit is cold."
Cold, indeed; and labour lost:
Then, farewell, heat; and welcome, frost!

Portia, adieu. I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus losers part.

[Exit with his train, Cornets.
Por. A gentle riddance.—Draw the curtains:
Go.

Let all his complexion choose me so.

[Exit.
SCENE VIII.—Venice. A Street.
Enter Salarino and Salanio.

Salar. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail:
With him is Gratiano gone along;

And in their ship, I'm sure, Lorenzo is not.
Salan. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd
the duke;

Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail;

But there the duke was given to understand,
That in a gondola were seen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica.

Besides, Antonio certified the duke,
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Salan. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,
As the dog Jew did utter in the streets:

"My daughter!—O my ducats!—O my daughter!"

Juster! the least my ducats, and my daughter!
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
And jewels,—two stones, two rich and precious stones,

Not my daughter!—Justice! find the girl!
She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats!"

Salar. Why, all the boys in Venice follow
him.

Salan. His stones, his daughter, and his gold: he shall pay for this.

[day,
I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me,—in the narrow seas that part the French and English, there miscarried
a thought of our country, richly fraught:
And wish'd in silence that it were not his.

Salar. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear;

Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.
Salan. A kinder gentleman trends not the Bassanio told him he would make some speed of his return: he answered, "Do not so,

Slubber not business for my sake, Bassanio,
But stay the very evening of the time;
And for the Jew's bond, which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love:
Be merry; and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such fair objects of love
As shall conveniently become you there:"

And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous sensible,
He wrung Bassanio's hand; and so they parted.

Salan. I think, he only loves the world for
I pray thee, let us go and find him out, [him,
And quicken his embrac'd heaviness
With some delight or other.

Salar. Do we so. [Exit.
SCENE IX.—Belmont.

Enter Nerissa, with a Servant.
Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee; draw the curtain straight:

The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the Prince of Arragon, Portia, and their trains.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble
prince:

If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am engag'd by oath to observe three
First, never to unfold to any one [things:—
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and be gone. [swear

Por. To these injunctions every one doth
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me. Fortune
now

"To my heart's hope!—Gold, silver, and base
"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all
he hath!"

You shall look fairer, ere I give or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:
"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men
desire."

What many men desire!—that many may be
By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach;

Which prides not to th' interior, but, like the Bulld in the weather, on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty,
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes;
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:

"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

And well said too; for who shall go about

To cozen fortune, and be honourable Without the stamp of merit? Let none pre-
To wear an undeserved dignity. [same]
O, that estates, degrees, and offices, [honour]
Were not deriv'd corruptly! and that clear
Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover, that stand bare!
How many be commanded, that command!
How much low peasantry would then be glean'd
From the true seed of honour! and how much
honour

Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

I will assume desert.—Give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

[He opens the silver casket.]

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there. [Idiot]

Ar. What's here? the portrait of a blinking Presenting me a schedule! I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia!
How much unlike my hopes, and my deservings!
"Who chooseth me shall have as much as he deserves."

Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?
[Reads.] "The first seven times tried this;
Seven times tried that judgment is,
That did never choose an ass.

Some there be that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wot,

Silver'd o'er; and so you this Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:

So be gone, sir: you are sped."
Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here:

With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.—
Sweet, adieu. I'll keep my oath, Patiently to bear my wroth.

[Exit with his train.]

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.
O, these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy,—
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my lady?

Por. Here; what would my lord?
Mess. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signify the approaching of his lord;
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets;
To wit, (besides commands, and courteous breath.)

Gifts of rich value; yet I have not
So likely an ambassador of love.

A day in April never came so sweet
To show how costly summer waiteth on
As this fore-spurrer comes before his Por. No more, I pray thee: I will Thou wilt say anon he is some hireling Thou spend'st such high-day wit in
him.

Come, come, Nerissa; for I long to see Quick Cupid's post, that comes so Ner. Bassanio, Lord Love, if thy

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Salanio and Salarino.

Salan. Now, what news on the Salar. Why, yet it lives there that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading on the narrow seas; the Goodwin, they call the place; a very dangerous fatal, where the carcasses of many a be buried, as they say, if my gossip in that, as ever knapped ginger, or neighbours believe she wept for her third husband. But it is true,— slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain of talk,—that the good Antonio, the Antonio,—O, that I had a title good to keep his name company!

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Salan. Ha,—what say'st thou?— end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the devil cross my prayer,—for here he the likeness of a Jew.

Enter Shylock.

Shy. You knew, none so well, town as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain. I, for my part,
the tailor that made the wings she flew Salan. And Shylock, for his own knew the bird was fledged; and then, if complexion of them all to leave the door.

Shy. She is damned for it.

Salar. That's certain, if the devil may
Shy. My own flesh and blood to rub Salan. Out upon it, old carrion!— at these years?

Shy. I say, my daughter is my Salar. There is more difference between flesh and hors, than between jet and more between your bloods, than there tween red wine and rhenish.—But tell at sea or no!

Shy. There I have another bad match; a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto; a beggar, that used to come as snug upon the mart; let him look to his bond; he was wont to call me usurer;
let him look to his bond; he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy;—let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh; what's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal: if it will feed no thing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath launched me, and hindered me half a million;
launched at my losses, mocked at my gains,
scoffed my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and now says I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew
eyes?

Shy. Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same wounds, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? if you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? revenge: if a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? why, revenge.
The villainy you teach me, I will execute;
and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek
him.

Enter Tubal.

Salan. Here comes another of the tribe: a Jew cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

Shy. Now now, Tubal! what news from Greece? Hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her,
but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there! a diamond gem, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankford! I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels,—I would my daughter were dead
at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would
she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats
—and I know not what's spent in the search:
Why thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with
no satisfaction, and so much to find the thief;
and stirring but what lights o' my shoulders; no
sighs but o' my breathing; no tears but o' my choking.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek
him.

Enter Tubal.

Salan. Here comes another of the tribe: a Jew cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

Shy. Now now, Tubal! what news from Greece? Hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her,
but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there! a diamond
gem, cost me two thousand ducats in Frank-
ford! I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels,—I would my daughter were dead
at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would
she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats
—and I know not what's spent in the search:
Why thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with
no satisfaction, and so much to find the thief;
and stirring but what lights o' my shoulders; no
sighs but o' my breathing; no tears but o' my choking.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek
him.

Enter Tubal.

Salan. Here comes another of the tribe: a Jew cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

Shy. Now now, Tubal! what news from Greece? Hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her,
but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there! a diamond
gem, cost me two thousand ducats in Frank-
ford! I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels,—I would my daughter were dead
at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would
she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats
—and I know not what's spent in the search:
Why thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with
no satisfaction, and so much to find the thief;
and stirring but what lights o' my shoulders; no
sighs but o' my breathing; no tears but o' my choking.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek
him.

Enter Tubal.

Salan. Here comes another of the tribe: a Jew cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

Shy. Now now, Tubal! what news from Greece? Hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her,
but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there! a diamond
gem, cost me two thousand ducats in Frank-
ford! I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels,—I would my daughter were dead
at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would
she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats
—and I know not what's spent in the search:
Why thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with
no satisfaction, and so much to find the thief;
and stirring but what lights o' my shoulders; no
sighs but o' my breathing; no tears but o' my choking.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too,
Antonio, as I heard in Genoa.

Shy. What, what, what? ill luck, ill luck!
Tub. —hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis. [Is it true!]

Shy. I thank God! I thank God! Is it true!
Tub. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wreck.

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal.—Good news, good news! ha, ha!—Where? in Genoa!

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats.

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger into me;—I shall never see my gold again: fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it:—I'll plague him;
I'll torture him:—I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring, that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou torturest me,
Tubal: it was my turquoise; I had it of Leah,
when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true. Go, Tubal, see me an officer; bespeak him a for-night before. I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit: for, were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will. Go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good Tubal, at our synagogue, Tubal. [Recount.]

SCENE II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House. The curtains drawn from before the caskets.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, Nerissa, and Attendants.

Por. I pray you, tarry: pause a day or two,
Before you hazard: for, in choosing wrong,
I lose your company; therefore, forbear a
while.

There's something tells me, (but it is not love,)
I would not lose you; and you know yourself,
Hate counsels not in such a quality.

But lest you should not understand me well, (And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought.)

I would detain you here some month or two,
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to choose right, but then I am forsworn;
So will I never be: so may you miss me;
But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin,
That I had been forsworn. Beskrew your
eyes,

They have o'erlook'd me, and divided me;
One half of me is yours, the other half yours,—
Mine own, I would say; but if mine, then
yours,

And so all yours! O, these naughty times
Put bars between the owners and their rights;
And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so,

Let fortune go to hail for it,—not I.
I speak too long; but 'tis to please the time,
To ske it, and to draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose;
For, as I am, I live upon the rack.

Por. Upon the rack, Bassanio! then confess
What treason there is mingled with your love.

Bass. None but that ugly treason of mistrust,
Which makes me fear th' enjoying of my love:

There may as well be amity and life
'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack,
Where men enforced do speak anything.

Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.
Por. Well then, confess, and live.

Bass. Confess, and love,
Had been the very sum of my confession.

O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliverance!

But let me to my fortune and the caskets.
Por. Away then; I am lock'd in one of them:

If you do love me, you will find me out.
Nerissa, and the rest, stand all aloof.

Let music sound while he doth make his choice;
Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end,
Fading in music: that the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream,

And wat'ry death-bed for him. He may win;
And what is music then? then music is Even as the flourish when true subjects bow
To a new-crowned monarch: such it is,
As are those dulcet sounds in break of day,
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes,
With no less presence, but with much more love,

Than young Alcides, when he did redeem
The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy
To the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice;
The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives,
With bleared viages, come forth to view
The issue of th' exploit. Go, Hercules!
Live thou, I live: with much, much more dismay
I view the fight, than thou that mak'st at the fray.

[Music, whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.]

*Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head?
How begot, how nourished?*

Reply, reply.

*It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies.*

*Let us all ring fancy's knell;
I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.*

All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves:

The world is still deceiv'd with outside.

In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being reason'd with a gracious o'er,
Obscures the show of evil?—To what
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornaments:
There is no vice so simple, but assuming
Some mark of virtue on his outward,
How many cowards, whose hearts are all false

As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their heads
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars;
Who, inward search'd, have deep doth milk!

And these assume but valour's trim,
To render them redoubted. Look not
And you shall see 'tis purchased by the sale,
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it:
So are those crisped snaky golden locks
Which make such wanton gambols with Upon suppos'd fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head;
The skull that bred them, in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beautiful
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times
To entrap the wisest. Therefore, though gold,

Hard food for Midas, I will none of it:
Nor none of these, thou pale and drudge
'Tween man and man: but thou, thou lead,
Which rather threat'nest than dost hurt,
Thy paleness moves me more than alloy:
And here choose I. Joy be the consequence!

Por. How all the other passions flow
As doubtful thoughts, and rash despair,
And shuddering fear, and great-eyed
O love, be moderate; allay thy ecstasy
In measure reign thy joy; soot this
I feel too much thy blessing: make it
For fear I surfeit!

Bass. [Opening the leaden casket.]
And I here?

Fair Portia's counterfeit? What demi-god Hath come so near creation? Move that
Or whether, riding on the balls of angels, Seem they in motion? Here are seven Parted with sugar breath: so sweet a Should smother such sweet friends.

her hair,
The painter plays the spider; and hath
A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of Faster than gnats in cobwebs: but how How could he see to do them? I have one,

Metinks it should have power to steal
And leave itself unfurnish'd. Yet look,

The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow

in underprising it, so far this shadow scrool,
which lings behind the substance.—Here's the
the content and summary of my fortune.

[Reads.] *You that chose not by the view,
Chance at fair, and choose as true!*

*Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek no new.*

*If you be well pleas'd with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss."*

*A gentle scrool.—Fair lady, by your leave;
I come by note, to give, and to receive.*

[Kissing her.]
like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Ready in spirit, still gazing, in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
So, thrice fair lady, stand I, even so;
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Will confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see me, lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am: though for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better; yet, for you,
I would be trebled twenty times myself;
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand
times more rich;

That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Accout myself: but the full sum of me
Is sum of nothing; which, to term in gross,
A sumless'd girl, unschoold, unpractis'd;
In this, she is not yet so old
As she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
The worst of all, is, that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Now converted: but now, I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Mean as myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,
Are yours, my lord: I give them with this ring;
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it procure the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all worlds:
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Turns every something, being blent together, Express'd, and not express'd. But when this ring

Parts from this finger, then parts life from
hence:
O, then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead!

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes
prosper,

To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady!

Gra. My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship, you have got me
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours;
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there
And so did mine too, as the matter falls;
For wooing here, until I sweat again,
And swearing, till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love, at last,—if promise last,—
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achiev'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa?

Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd
withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, 'faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage. [thousand ducats.]

Gra. We'll play with them the first boy for a
Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport,
and stake down.— [aside]

But who comes here? Lorenzo and his in-
What, my old Venetian friend, Salanio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salanio.

Bass. Lorenzo, and Salanio, welcome hither;
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome.—By your
leave,

I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord;
They are entirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour.—For my part,
My purpose was not to have seen you here;
But meeting with Salanio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.

Salan. I did, my lord;
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you.

[Gives Bassanio a letter.]
Bass. Ere I open his letter,
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.

Salan. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in
mind;

The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow

in underprising it, so far this shadow scrool,
which lings behind the substance.—Here's the
the content and summary of my fortune.

[Reads.] *You that chose not by the view,
Chance at fair, and choose as true!*

*Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek no new.*

*If you be well pleas'd with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss."*

*A gentle scrool.—Fair lady, by your leave;
I come by note, to give, and to receive.*

[Kissing her.]
like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Ready in spirit, still gazing, in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
So, thrice fair lady, stand I, even so;
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Will confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see me, lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am: though for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better; yet, for you,
I would be trebled twenty times myself;
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand
times more rich;

That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Accout myself: but the full sum of me
Is sum of nothing; which, to term in gross,
A sumless'd girl, unschoold, unpractis'd;
In this, she is not yet so old
As she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
The worst of all, is, that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Now converted: but now, I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Mean as myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,
Are yours, my lord: I give them with this ring;
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it procure the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all
worlds:
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Turns every something, being blent together,
Express'd, and not express'd. But when this
ring

Parts from this finger, then parts life from
hence:
O, then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead!

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes
prosper,

To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady!

Gra. My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get
a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship, you have got me
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours;
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there
And so did mine too, as the matter falls;
For wooing here, until I sweat again,
And swearing, till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love, at last,—if promise last,—
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achiev'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa?

Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd
withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, 'faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage. [thousand ducats.]

Gra. We'll play with them the first boy for a
Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport,
and stake down.— [aside]

But who comes here? Lorenzo and his in-
What, my old Venetian friend, Salanio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salanio.

Bass. Lorenzo, and Salanio, welcome hither;
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome.—By your
leave,

I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord;
They are entirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour.—For my part,
My purpose was not to have seen you here;
But meeting with Salanio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.

Salan. I did, my lord;
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you.

[Gives Bassanio a letter.]
Bass. Ere I open his letter,
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.

Salan. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in
mind;

Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there
Will show you his estate.

Gra. Nerissa, cheer you stranger; bid her welcome. [Venice?]

Your hand, Salanio; what's the news from
How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our success;

We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.

Salan. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost! [same paper,

Por. There are some shrewd contents in you
That steal the colour from Bassanio's cheek:
Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the
Could turn so much the constitution [world Of any constant man. What, worse and worse!—

With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleasant words
That ever blotted paper! Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had Ran in my veins,—I was a gentleman;
And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady,
Rating myself at nothing, you shall see How much I was a braggart. When I told you [you

My state was nothing, I should then have told
That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood.—But is it true, Salanio?
Hath all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit!

From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marring rocks?

Salan. Not one, my lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it. Never did I know
A creature, that did bear the shape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man:
He plies the duke at morning and at night;
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him;
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

Jes. When I was with him, I have heard him swear,
To Tubal, and to Chus, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh,
Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him: and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio,

Por. Is it your dear friend that trouble?

Bass. The dearest friend to me,
The best condition'd and unwearied
In doing courtesies; and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears
Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew?

Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.

Por. What?

Pay him six thousand, and deface
Double six thousand, and then trouble
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's
First, go with me to church and call
And then away to Venice to your
For never shall you lie by Portia's

With an unquiet soul. You shall
To pay the petty debt twenty times

When it is paid, bring your true
My maid Nerissa and myself, meaning
Will live as maids and widows.

For you shall hence upon your wedding
Bid your friends welcome, show a merriment
Since you are dear bought, I will love you

But let me hear the letter of your

Bass. [Reads.] "Sweet Bassanio, have all miscarried, my creditors
my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew forfeit: and since, in paying it, it is I should live, all debts are cleared and I, if I might but see you at my death, withstanding, use your powers: I will do not persuade you to come, let me
go."

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Por. O love, despatch all business
gone.

Bass. Since I have your good
I will make haste: but, till I come
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my sleep
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us

gone.

Christian intercessors. Follow not;
have no speaking: I will have my bond.
[Exit.]

Let him alone;
follow him no more with bootless prayers.
sucks my life; his reason well I know:
I deliver'd from his forfeitures
by that have at times made moan to me;
before he hates me.

I am sure, the duke
never grant this forfeiture to hold.
The duke cannot deny the course of
law.

the commodity that strangers have
th us in Venice: if it be denied, ill much impeach the justice of the state;
that the trade and profit of the city
hath of all nations. Therefore, go:
at I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
morrow to my bloody creditor.
Oh, guiler, on.—Pray God, Bassanio come to me pay his debt, and then I care not!

[Exit.]
SCENE IV.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's
House.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and Balthazar.

Madam, although I speak it in your presence,

you have a noble and a true conceit
God-like-animity; which appears most strongly in hearing thus the absence of your lord.

If you know to whom you show this honour,
how true a gentleman you send relief,

how dear a lover of my lord, your husband,
how you would be prouder of the work

than customary bounty can enforce you.
I never did repent for doing good,
nor shall not now: for in companions

it do converse and waste the time together,
these souls do bear an equal yoke of love;

there must be needs a like proportion of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;

which makes me think that this Antonio,
that needs be like my lord,

how little is the cost I have bestow'd,
in purchasing the semblance of my soul

out of this state of hellish cruelty?
How comes it that the praising of myself;
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands

my husbandry and manage of my house, toward heaven breath'd a secret vow

to live in prayer and contemplation,
only attended by Nerissa here, and there we will abide. I do desire you

Not to deny this imposition;
The which my love, and some necessity,
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart;
I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of lord Bassanio and myself.
So fare you well, till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts, and happy hours, attend on you!

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well
pleas'd.

To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.— [Exit Jessica and Lorenzo.]

Now, Balthazar,
As I have ever found thee honest, true,

So let me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man

In speed to Padua: see thou render this Into my cousin's hand, doctor Bellario;

And, look, what notes and garments he doth
give thee,

Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed Unto the Transect, to the common ferry

Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in words,

But get thee gone: I shall be there before
thee.

Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed. [Exit.]

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand.

That you yet know not of: we'll see our husband Before they think of us.

Ner. Shall they see us?

Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,

That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,

When we are both accounted like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,

And wear my dagger with the braver grace;
And speak between the change of man and boy,

With a reel voice; and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,

Like a fine bragging youth; and tell quaint lies,
How honourable ladies sought my love,

Which I denying, they fell sick and died,
I could not do withal; then I'll repent,

And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd
them:

And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell;
That men shall swear I have discontinu'd school.

About a twelvemonth: I have writ in my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practise.

Ner. Why, shall we turn to men?

Por. Fie, what a question's that,
If thou wert near a lewd interpreter!

But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my coach, which stays for us

At the park gate; and therefore hie away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Belmont. Portia's Garden.

Enter Launcelot and Jessica.

Laun. Yes, truly; for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheer: for, truly, I think you are damned. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good; and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, I pray thee?

Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not,—that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed: so the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Laun. Truly, then I fear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother: well, you are gone both ways.

Jes. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.

Laun. Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians enow before; 'tween as many as could well live, one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs: if we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Jes. I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say: here he comes.

Enter Lorenzo.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo: Launcelot and I are out. He tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he says, you are no good member of the commonwealth; for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth, than you can the getting up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much, that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence; and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots.—Go in, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner.

Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.

Lor. Goodly lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then, bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, sir; it is the word.

Lor. Will you cover, then, sir?

Laun. Not so, sir, neither; I know.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with you! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of an instant? I pray thee, understand a man in his plain meaning: go to thy bid them cover the table, serve in the and we will come in to dinner.

Laun. For the table, sir, it shall be in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let humours and conceits shall govern.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his The fool hath planted in his memory An army of good words; and I do see A many fools, that stand in better Garnish'd like him, that for a trick, Defy the matter. How cheer'st thou? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion: How dost thou like the lord Bassanio?

Jes. Past all expressing. It is my The lord Bassanio lead an upright life For, having such a blessing in his love, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth And if on earth he do not mean it, In reason he should never come to it. Why, if two gods should play some match,

And on the wager lay two earthly wits, And Portia one, there must be some Pawn'd with the other; for the poor wretch Hath not her follow.

Lor. Even such a fool.

Hast thou of me, as she is for a while?

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion, Lor.

Lor. I will anon: first, let us go to the stomach.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you, while I stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for food. Then, howsoever thou speak'st, I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Court of law.

Enter the Duke: the Magnificence; Bassanio, Gratiano, Salario, and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your grace.

Duke. I am sorry for thee: thou art A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch, Uncapable of pity, void and empty From any dram of mercy.

Ant. I have heard

Your grace hath ta'en great pains to pursue His rigorous course; but since he

durate,

And that no lawful means can carry my reach, I do oppose to his fury; and am arm'd with a quietness of spirit, ranny and rage of his.

one, and call the Jew into the

's ready at the door: he comes,
ord.

Enter Shylock.
ake room, and let him stand before ace.

o world thinks, and I think so too,
ut lead'st this fashion of thy malice hour of act; and then, 'tis thought, ow thy mercy and remorse, more ago

' strange apparent cruelty;
thou now exact'st the penalty,
a pound of this poor merchant's

not only loose the forfeiture,
'd with human gentleness and love,
nolety of the principal;

an eye of pity on his losses,
of late so huddled on his back,
rom a royal merchant down,
commiseration of his state

ty bowens and rough hearts of flint, born Turks and Tartars, never train'd of tender courtesy.

ect a gentle answer, Jew.
ava possess'd your grace of what I pose;

ur holy Sabbath have I sworn is due and forfeit of my bond;
y it, let the danger light

r charter and your city's freedom.
me, why I rather choose to have of carrion flesh, than to receive ound ducats: I'll not answer that;

is my humour: is it answer'd?
y house be troubled with a rat,
pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats
t baned? What, are you answer'd

there are, love not a gaping pig;
t are mad if they behold a cat;
s, when the bagpipe sings i' the nose,
tain their urine: for affection,
passion, sways it to the mood t likes or loathes. Now, for your wer:

s no firm reason to be render'd,
annot abide a gaping pig;
a harmless necessary cat;
a swollen bagpipe,—but of force d to such inevitable shame

nd, himself being offended;
ive no reason, nor I will not,
a lodg'd hate and a certain loathing

tonio, that I follow thus nit against him. Are you answer'd?
his is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
the current of thy cruelty.

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer. [Love!]

Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bass. Every offence is not a hate at first.
Shy. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice? [Jew:]

Ant. I pray you, think you question with the
You may as well go stand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;

You may as well use question with the wolf,
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise,
When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven;

You may as well do anything most hard,
As seek to soften that (than which what's harder!)

His Jewish heart:—therefore, I do beseech you,
Make no more offers, use no farther means,
But, with all brief and plain conveyency,
Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.

Bass. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.

Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them,—I would have my bond. [rendering none!]

Duke. How shalt thou hope for mercy, Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong?

You have among you many a purchas'd slave,
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,

You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them:—shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burdens? let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates Be season'd with such viands? You will answer,

The slaves are ours:—so do I answer you:
The pound of flesh which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your law!

There is no force in the decrees of Venice.
I stand for judgment: answer,—shall I have it?

Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this Unless Bellario, a learned doctor, [court,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.

Salar. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.

Duke. Bring us the letters; call the messenger.

Bass. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man, courage yet! [all]

The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground; and so let me:

You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nerissa, dressed like a lawyer's clerk.
Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
Ner. From both, my lord. Bellario greets your grace.

Bass. Why dost thou what thy knife so earnestly? [snaps there.]

Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bank-
Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew.

Thou mak'st thy knife keen; but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness [thee?]

Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce Shy. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O, be thou damn'd, inexorable dog!
And for thy life let justice be accus'd.

Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men: thy curst spirit Govern'd a wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,

Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,
And whilst thou lay'st in thy unhallow'd dam,
Infus'd itself in thee; for thy desires
Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.

Shy. 'Till thou canst rail the seal from off
my bond,

Thou hast offend'd at thy lungs to speak so loud:
Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
To careless ruin.—I stand here for law. [mend]

Duke. This letter from Bellario doth com-
A young and learned doctor to our court.—
Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by,
To know your answer, whether you'll admit
him.

Duke. With all my heart.—Some three or four of you

Go give him courteous conduct to this place.
Meantime, the court shall hear Bellario's letter.

[Clerk reads.] "Your grace shall understand, that at the receipt of your letter I am very sick: but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome: his name is Balthazar.
I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant:
we turned o'er many books together: he is furnished with my opinion; which, bettered with his own learning, (the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend) comes with him, at my importunity, to fill up your grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation; for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation."

Duke. You hear the learn'd Bellario, what he writes:

And here, I take it, is the doctor come.

Enter Portia, dressed like a doctor.
Give me your hand. Came you from Padua?

Por. I did, my lord.
Duke. You are welcome; take you are acquainted with the doctor?

Por. I am inform'd through cause.—

Which is the merchant here, and Duke. Antonio and old Shylock.

Por. Is your name Shylock?
Shy. Shylock.

Por. Of a strange nature is the Yet in such rule, that the Venetian Cannot impugn you as you do pro-[To Antonio.] You stand within the law.

Ant. Ay, so he says.
Por. Do you confess it?

Ant. I do.
Por. Then must the Jew be Shy. On what compulsion must I?

Por. The quality of mercy is not
It droppeth as the gentle rain from Upon the place beneath: it is twice
It blesseth him that gives, and him that
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it is the
The throned monarch better than he:
His sceptre shows the force of temp'rance;
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of
But mercy is above this sceptred sway;
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings;
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show like
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That, in the course of justice, none of us Should see salvation: we do pray for
And that same prayer doth teach us render

The deeds of mercy. I have spoke
To mitigate the justice of thy plea;
Which if thou follow, this strict count Must needs give sentence 'gainst the
there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head!
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.
Por. Yes, here I tender it for him.

Shy. A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!

Por. Young judge, how I do honour thee!
Shy. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Por. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here [offer'd thee.]

Shy. Shylock, there's thrice thy money [As oath, an oath, I have an oath in
I lay perjury upon my soul? [heaven:]

Por. Not for Venice.
Shy. Why, this bond is forfeit;
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Against the merchant's heart.—Be merciful:
Thrice thy money; bid me tear the bond.

Shy. When it is paid according to the tenour,
I will appear you are a worthy judge;
You know the law, your exposition [law,
I have been most sound: I charge you by the oath of judgment: by my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me: I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court
To give the judgment.

Por. Why then, thus it is:
Shylock, you must prepare your bosom for his knife.

Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young
man!

Por. For the intent and purpose of the law
Which full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Shy. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright
judge!

Por. How much more elder art thou than thy looks!
Shy. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Por. Ay, his breast;
Hearest his heart: those are the very words.
Per. It is so. Are there balances here to weigh the flesh?

Shy. I have them ready.
Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,

To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?

Por. It is not so express'd; but what of that?
I were good you do so much for charity.

Shy. I cannot find it; 'tis not in the bond.
Por. Come, merchant, have you anything
to say?

Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepared to pay the forfeit of my bond: I beseech your grace that I may fall to this for you;

For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than in her custom: it is still her use
To view the wretched man out-live his wealth,
To age of poverty; from which lingering pension such a misery doth she cut me off. [ance commend me to your honourable wife;
And bid her process of Antonio's and;
I pray how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;
And when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor
more,

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned
judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor
more,

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned
judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor
more,

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned
judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor
more,

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned
judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor
more,

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned
judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor
more,

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears; soft stillness, and the night,
Become the touches of sweet harmony.

Sit, Jessica: look, how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st,

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins:
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho! and wake Diana with a hymn:
With sweetest touches please your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with music. [Music.]

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attend-
For do but note a wild and wanton bird,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing, and neigh-
ing loud,

Which is the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of music: therefore the poet Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods;

Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

Enter Portia and Nerissa, at a distance.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less:
A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by; and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters.—Music! hark!

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.

Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect:
Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam. [Lark.]

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark
When neither is attended; and I think
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!—
Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd! [Music ceases.]

Lor.

Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind
By the bad voice.

Lor.

Dear lady, we have been praying for
bands' welfare,
Which speed, we hope, the better for us:
Are they return'd?

Lor.

Madam, they are
But there is come a messenger looking
To signify their coming.

Por.

Go in, Nerissa,
Give order to my servants that they
No note at all of our being absent take:
Nor you, Lorenzo;—Jessica, nor you.

Lor.

Your husband is at hand!
trumpet:

We are no tell-tales, madam; fear not.

Por. This night methinks is but a day,
It looks a little paler: 'tis a day, I think,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and followers.

Bass. We should hold day with you,
podes,

If you would walk in absence of the light;

Por. Let me give light, but let me have light;

For a light wife doth make a heavy man,
And never be Bassanio so for me.

But God sort all!—You are welcome.

Bass. I thank you, madam: give to my friend;

This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all senses bound to him,

For, as I hear, he was much bound to Ant. No more than I am well acquainted to.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to my house.

It must appear in other ways than words:
Therefore I scant this breathing comfort.

Gra. [To Nerissa.] By yonder window
you do me wrong;

In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk:
Would he were gelt that had it, for Since you do take it, love, so much.

Por. A quarrel, ho, already! what matter?

Gra. About a hoop of gold, a pattern
That she did give me; whose purport was,
For all the world like cutler's trade,
Upon a knife, "Love me, and leave me."

Ner. What talk you of the purport?

value!

You swore to me, when I did give it,
That you would wear it till your hour of death.

And that it should lie with you to your grave.

Though not for me, yet for your oaths,

You should have been respectively kept.

And begg'd the ring; the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away;

Even he that had held up the very life
Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet?

I was enforc'd to send it after him: [Lady:]
I was beset with shame and courtesy;

My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it. Pardon me, good lady;

For, by these blessed candles of the night,
And you been there, I think you would have begg'd

The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.

Por. Let not that doctor e'er come near my
house:

Since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,

I will become as liberal as you;
I'll not deny him anything I have,

No, not my body, nor my husband's bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it;

Lis not a night from home: watch me like
If you do not, if I be left alone, [Argue:]

Now by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bed-fellow. [Exit.]

Ner. And I his clerk; therefore be well ad-
How you do leave me to mine own protection.

Gra. Well, do you so: let me not take him,
then;

For if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.

Ant. I am th' unhappy subject of these quarrels. [Notwithstanding.]

Por. Sir, grieve not you; you are welcome
Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong;

And, in the hearing of these many friends,
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself,—

Por. Mark you but that I
In both my eyes he doubly sees himself;

In each eye, one;—swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.

Bass. Nay, but hear me:
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth;
Which, but for him that had your husband's
ring,

Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

Por. Then you shall be his surety. Give him this,

And bid him keep it better than the other.

Ant. Here, lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring. [Doctor.]

Bass. By heaven! it is the same I gave the Por. I had it of him; pardon me, Bassanio;

For, by this ring, the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano;
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this, last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the mending of highways

In summer, when the ways are fair enough;
What, are we cuckolds, ere we have deserv'd it?

And I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind
By the bad voice.

Dear lady, we have been praying for
bands' welfare,
Which speed, we hope, the better for us:
Are they return'd?

Madam, they are
But there is come a messenger looking
To signify their coming.

Go in, Nerissa,
Give order to my servants that they
No note at all of our being absent take:
Nor you, Lorenzo;—Jessica, nor you.

Your husband is at hand!
trumpet:

We are no tell-tales, madam; fear not.

Por. This night methinks is but a day,
It looks a little paler: 'tis a day, I think,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and followers.

Por. Speak not so grossly.—You are all amazed:

Here is a letter, read it at your leisure;
It comes from Padua, from Bellario:
There you shall find that Portia was the doctor;

Nerissa, there, her clerk: Lorenzo, here,
Shall witness I set forth as soon as you,
And even but now return'd; I have not yet
Enter'd my house.—Antonio, you are welcome;
And I have better news in store for you
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon;
There you shall find, three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly:
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.

Bass. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not?

Gra. Were you the clerk that is to make me cuckold?

Ner. Ay, but the clerk that never means to do it,

Unless he live until he be a man.

Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bed-fellow:

When I am absent, then, lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me and living;

For here I read for certain that my ship
Are safely come to road.

Por. How now, Lorenzo?

My clerk hath some good comforts, too, for fee,—

There do I give to you and Jessica,
From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift

After his death, of all he dies possessed.

Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way
Of starv'd people.

Por. It is almost morning;
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied

Of these events at full. Let us go in;
And charge us there upon inter-gate

And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so: the first inter-gate
That my Nerissa shall be sworn on, is Whether till the next night she had rather

Or go to bed now, being two hours to bed

But were the day come, I should wish
That I were couching with the doctor

Well, while I live, I'll fear no other than
So sore, as keeping safe Nerissa's ring.

AS YOU LIKE IT.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Duke, Senior, living in exile.
 Frederick, his Brother, usurper of his dominions.
 Amiens, } Lords attending upon the banished
 Jacques, } Duke.
 Le Beau, a Courtier, attending upon Frederick.
 Charles, a Wrestler.
 Oliver, } Sons of Sir Rowland de Bois.
 Jacques, }
 Orlando, }
 Adam, }
 Dennis, } Servants to Oliver.

Touchstone, a Clown.
 Sir Oliver Mar-text, a Vicar.
 Corin, } Shepherds.
 Silvius, }
 William, a Country Fellow, in love with Audrey.
 A person representing Hymen,
 Rosalind, daughter to the banished Duke,
 Celia, daughter to Frederick.
 Phebe, a Shepherdess.
 Audrey, a Country Wench.
 Lords, Pages, Foresters, and Attendants.

SCENE.—First, near Oliver's House; afterwards, partly in the Usurper's Court, and partly in the Forest of Arden.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Orchard near Oliver's House.
 Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion, — bequeathed me by will but poor a thousand crowns, and, as thou say'st, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: and there begins my sadness. My brother Jacques he keeps at school, and report speaks me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept; for all you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an ox! His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they riders dearly hired; and to that end nothing under him but growth; for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know not how to remedy it, though yet I know not how to remedy it.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Orl. Now, sir! what make you here!

Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make Orl. What mar you then, sir? [anything.]
 Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

Oli. Marry, sir, be better employed, and be nought awhile.

Orl. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are, sir?

Orl. O, sir, very well: here in your orchard.

Oli. Know you before whom, sir?

Orl. Ay, better than he I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me. The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What, boy! [young in this.]

Orl. Come, come, elder brother, you are too Orl. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Oli. I am no villain: I am the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Bois: he was my father; and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains. Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so: thou hast railled on thyself.

Adam. Sweet masters, be patient: for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go, I say.

Orl. I will not, till I please: you shall hear me. My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities. The spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allotment my father left me by testament; with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Old. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you; you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

Old. I will no farther offend you than becomes me for my good.

Old. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is old dog my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word. [Exeunt Orlando and Adam.]

Old. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither.—Holla, Dennis!

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

Old. Was not Charles the duke's wrestler here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Old. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.—] 'Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter Charles.

Cha. Good-morrow to your worship.

Old. Good monsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new court?

Cha. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Old. Can you tell if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

Cha. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her,—being ever from their cradles bred together,—that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Old. Where will the old duke live?

Cha. They say, he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say, many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and feed the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

Old. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

Cha. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguised against me to try a fall. Now, sir, I wrestle for my credit; and, if I escape me without some broken limb, I acquit him well. Your brother is tall and tender; and, for your love, I will do both to foil him, as I must, for my own; if he come in: therefore, out of respect to you, I came hither to acquaint you with that either you might stay him from his tournament, or brook such disgrace as shall run into; in that it is a thing to search, and altogether against my will.

Old. Charles, I thank thee for thy requite. I had myself notice of thy purpose herein, and have by much laboured to dissuade him from it, but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles, I do not like the earnest young fellow of France; I do not like him, an envious emulator of every man's parts, a secret and villainous contriver, who will practise against thee by poison, shall thee till he hath taken thy life by indirect means or other; for, I saw him and almost with tears I speak it, he is one so young and so villainous this day I speak but brotherly of him; but I will anatomize him to thee as he is, I will and weep, and thou must look on wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came to you; if he come to-morrow, I'll give payment: if ever he go alone against me, I'll wrestle for prize more; and so, good-morrow to your worship!

Old. Farewell, good Charles. Now will I cite this matter to the duke. I shall see an end of him; for yet I know not why, hates nothing so much as he; yet he's gentle; never schoolboy, learned; full of noble device; of all charmingly beloved; and, indeed, of all the heart of the world, and especially of his own people, who best know him, and altogether misprised; but it shall not long; this wrestler shall clear all; and now I'll go about.

Old. Farewell, good Charles. Now will I cite this matter to the duke. I shall see an end of him; for yet I know not why, hates nothing so much as he; yet he's gentle; never schoolboy, learned; full of noble device; of all charmingly beloved; and, indeed, of all the heart of the world, and especially of his own people, who best know him, and altogether misprised; but it shall not long; this wrestler shall clear all; and now I'll go about.

SCENE II.—A Lawn before the Duke's Palace.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet merrier? Unless you could teach me to be a banished father, you must not learn to remember any extraordinary pleasure

Old. Herein, I see, thou lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee. If my uncle, my banished father, had banished thy uncle, with me, I could have taught my love to take both of thy love to me were so righteously tempered as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my state, to rejoice in yours.

Old. You know my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when I die, thou shalt be his heir; for what he will render thee again in affection, by mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath, may my dear love, be merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, coz, and devise reports. Let me see; what think you of falling in love?

Old. Marry, I prythee, do, to make sport withal; but love no man in good earnest; nor take him in sport neither, than with safety of pure blush thou mayst in honour come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport, then?

Old. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could do so; for her beheading woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Old. 'Tis true; for those that she makes rich she makes honest; and those that she makes honest, she makes very ill-humouredly.

Ros. Nay, now thou goest from Fortune's gift to Nature's: Fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the increments of Nature.

Old. Not when Nature hath made a fair creature may she not by Fortune fall into the net?—Enter Touchstone. Though Nature give us wit to float at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed, there is Fortune too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Nature's natural gifts the cause off of Nature's wit.

Old. Peradventure this is not Fortune's work neither, but Nature's; who, perceiving our natural wits too dull to reason of such god-like things, hath sent this natural fool to our whetstone, to take away the dulleth of the wits.—How now, wit! whither wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, by mine honour; but I was bid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught: now, I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught, and the mustard was good; and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. Ay, marry, now unuzzle your wisdom.

Touch. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By your beards, if we had them, thou Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were; but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. Prythee, who is't that thou meanest?

Touch. One that old Frederick, your father, loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him enough: speak no more of him; you'll be whipped for taxation one of these days.

Touch. The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth, thou sayest true; for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show.—Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Enter Le Beau.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then we shall be news-cramm'd.

Cel. All the better; we shall be more marketable. Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau: what's the news?

Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport! Of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the destinies decree.

Cel. Well said: that was laid on with a trowel.

Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank,—

Ros. Thou lovest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies; I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning; and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man and his Celia. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence;—

Ros. With bills on their necks,—"Be it known unto all men by these presents."

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third. Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? Is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming; let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke Frederick, Lords,

Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on: since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young! yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter, and cousin? are ye crept hither to see the wrestling?

Ros. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the men: in pity of the challenger's youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so: I'll not be by.

[Duke goes apart.]

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation shall not therefore be misprised; we will not suit to the duke that the wrestler be not so forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me for your hard thoughts; wherein I am much guilty, to deny so fair and gentle ladies anything. But let your gentle wishes go with me to my trial, if I be foiled, there is but one charm that never gracious; if killed, but one death is willing to be so: I shall do my no wrong, for I have none to lament; world no injury, for in it I have nothing in the world I fill up a place, which is better supplied when I have made it.

Ros. The little strength that I have, it were with you.

Orl. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well: pray heaven deceived in you!

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young man? is so desirous to lie with his mother's milk?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will will make more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace, I will not entreat him to a second, that mightily persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me, should not have mocked me before!

Ros. Now Hercules be thy speed.

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch strong fellow by the leg.

[Charles and Orlando.]

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in my hand, I could tell who should down.

[Charles is thrown.]

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace: I yet well breathed.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away.

[Charles is borne off.]

What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest of Sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would thou hadst known some man else:

The world esteem'd thy father honour'd; But I did find him still mine enemy:

Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me to Hadst thou descended from another house:

But fare thee well; thou art a gallant.

I would thou hadst told me of another name.

[Exeunt Duke Fred., train, and Ros.]

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I were his!

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son;—and would not change To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul, and all the world was of my father's mind: I should have given him tears unto entreaties, but he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Let us go thank him and encourage him: my father's rough and envious disposition sticks me at heart.—Sir, you have well done keep your promises in love [serv'd] justly, as you have exceeded all promises, your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. [Giving him a chain from her neck.] Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune, that would give more, but that her hand lacks what we go, coz?

Orl. Ay. Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Cel. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts are all thrown down; and that which here is but a quaint, a more lifeless block.

Ros. He calls us back: my pride fell with my fortunes; [sir]—

ask him what he would.—Did you call, you have wrestled well, and overthrown more than your enemies.

Cel. Have with you.—Fare you well.

Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Dear Orlando, thou art overthrown!

Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.

Re-enter Le Beau.

Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you to leave this place. Albeit you have deserv'd high commendation, true applause, and love, yet such is now the duke's condition, that he misconstrues all that you have done.

The duke is humours: what he is, indeed, I shall advise you to conceive, than I to speak of.

Orl. I thank you, sir: and, pray you, tell me this,—

Which of the two was daughter of the duke, that here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter if we judge by manners;

but yet, indeed, the smaller is his daughter: and here is detain'd by her usurping uncle, to keep his daughter company; whose loves I can tell you, that of late this duke is on displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece, and that the people praise her for her virtues, and pity her for her good father's sake; and, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady will suddenly break forth.—Sir, fare you well.

Hereafter, in a better world than this, I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I do beseech your grace, Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with

It with myself I hold intelligence, [me:] Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;

If that I do not dream, or be not frantic, [As I do trust I am not,] then, dear uncle,

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well.

[Exit Le Beau.] Thus must I from the smoke into the smother; From tyrant duke unto a tyrant brother:— But heavenly Rosalind!

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Celia and Rosalind.

Cel. Why, cousin; why, Rosalind?—Cupid have mercy!—Not a word!

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me: come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two cousins laid up, when the one should be lamed with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your father?

Ros. No, some of it for my father's child. O, how full of bribes is this working-day world!

Cel. They are but burrs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery: if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat: these burrs are in my heart.

Cel. Lend them away.

Ros. I would try, if I could cry hem, and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.

Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself!

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall.—But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?

Ros. The duke my father lov'd his father

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No, faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserve well?

Ros. Let me love him for that; and do you love him because I do.—Look, here comes the duke.

Enter Duke Frederick, with Lords.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Duke F. Mistress, despatch you with your And get you from our court. [sestest basto, Me, uncle!]

Ros. You, cousin:

Duke F. Within these ten days if that thou be'st found So near our public court as twenty miles, Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your grace, Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with

It with myself I hold intelligence, [me:] Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;

If that I do not dream, or be not frantic, [As I do trust I am not,] then, dear uncle,

Never so much as in a thought unborn
Did I offend your highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors:
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:—
Let it suffice thee, that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:

Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter;
there's enough. [his dukedom;

Ros. So was I when your highness took
So was I when your highness banish'd him.

Treason is not inherited, my lord;
Or, if we did derive it from our friends,

What's that to me? my father was no traitor:
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much,
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celia; we stay'd her for your sake,

Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay;
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse:
I was too young that time to value her;
But now I know her: if she be a traitor,
Why so am I; we still have slept together, Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;

And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupl'd and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness,

Her very silence, and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name;
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,

When she is gone. Then, open not thy lips;
Firm and irrevocable is my doom [ish'd.
Which I have pass'd upon her;—she is ban-

Cel. Pronounce that sentence, then, on me,
I cannot live out of her company. [my liege;

Duke F. You are a fool.—You, niece, provide yourself:

If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exeunt Duke Frederick and Lords.

Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou
go?

Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.
I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I.

Ros. I have more cause. [am.
Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;

Pr'ythee, be cheerful: know'st thou not, the Hath banish'd me, his daughter? [duke

Ros. That he hath not.

Cel. No! hath not? Rosalind lacks, then,
the love

Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one.
Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl?

No: let my father seek another heir.

Therefore devise with me how we may fly,

Whither to go, and what to bear with us:

And do not seek to take your choice
To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me
For, by this heaven, now at our common
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with you.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?
Cel. To such a place.

In the forest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be Maids as we are, to travel forth so late?

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than
Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean

And with a kind of umber smirch my face
The like do you: so shall we pass unmolested
And never stir assassinations.

Ros. Were it not for Because that I am more than common

That I did suit me all points like a man,
A gallant curial-axe upon my thigh,

A boar-spear in my hand; and (in my hand)
Lie there what hidden woman's fear the

We'll have a swashing and a martial air,
As many other mannish cowards have,

That do outface it with their semblance:
Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art

man?
Ros. I'll have no worse a name than
And therefore look you call me Ganymede.

But what will you be call'd?
Cel. Something that hath a reference

No longer Celia, but Aliena.
Ros. But, cousin, what if we away?

The clownish fool out of your father's
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world
me;

Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away
And get our jewels and our wealth together

Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be on us

After my flight. Now go we in cool
To liberty, and not to banishment.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, and others in the dress of Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates and brethren,

Hath not old custom made this life more Than that of painted pomp? Are not we

More free from peril than the envious
Here feel we but the penalty of Adam

The seasons' difference; as, the icy frown
And churlish chiding of the winter's plume,

Which, when it bites and blows upon us,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile,

That is no flattery: these are counsels
That feelingly persuade me what I am.

Sweet are the uses of adversity
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,

yet a precious jewel in his head :
his our life, exempt from public haunt,
lingues in trees, books in the running brook,
us in stones, and good in everything.
I would not change it. Happy is
your grace,
can translate the stubbornness of fortune to quiet and as sweet a style.
He S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison!

ret it ticks me, the poor dappled fools,
malice bingers of this desert city,
in their own confines, with forked heads their round haunches god'd.

lord.
Indeed, my lord,
melancholy Jaques grieves at that ;
in that kind, swears you do more usurp
doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
my lord of Amiens and myself about behind him, as he lay along = an oak, whose antique root peeps out the brook that brawls along this wood :
to which place a poor sequester'd stag,
from the hunters' aim had ta'en a hurt,
came to languish ; and, indeed, my lord,
wretched animal heav'd forth such groans, their discharge did stretch his leathern
coat
out to bursting ; and the big round tears
w'd one another down his innocent nose down chase ; and thus the hairy fool, marked on the melancholy Jaques, led on the extremest verge of the swift melting it with tears.

Lord S.
But what said Jaques !
do not moralize this spectacle !
Lord. O, yes, into a thousand similes.
t, for he weeping into the needless stream ;
"O dear," quoth he, "thou makest a lament
world disage do, giving thy sum of more that which hath too much ;" then, being there alone,
and abandon'd of his velvet friends ;
"is right," quoth he ; "thus misery doth
part

thus of company ;" anon, a careless herd,
of the pasture, jumps along by him,
never stays to greet him ; "Ay," quoth Jaques,
weep on, you fat and greasy citizens ;
just the fashion : wherefore do you look that poor and broken bankrupt there ?"
most invectively he pierceth through body of the country, city, court, and of this our life ; swearing that we were usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse, right the animals, and to kill them up,
their assign'd and native dwelling-place.
He S. And did you leave him in this contemplation ?
Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and coming the soling deer.

Duke S.

Show me the place ;

I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible that no man saw them ?

It cannot be ; some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1 Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed ; and, in the morning early,
They found the bed untreasur'd of their mistress.

2 Lord. My lord, the roynish clown, at whom
Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler,
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles ;
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother ; fetch that gallant hither :

If he be absent, bring his brother to me ;
I'll make him find him ; do this suddenly ;
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Oliver's House.

Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting.

Orl. Who's there ? [gentle master !]

Adam. What, my young master !—O my O my sweet master ! O you memory [here ?]
Of old Sir Rowland ! why, what make you Why are you virtuous ? Why do people love
you ?

And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bony prisoner of the humorous duke ?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not, master, to some kind of men
Their graces serve them but as enemies ?
No more do yours : your virtues, gentle master,
Are sanctified and holy traitors to you.
O, what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it !

Orl. Why, what's the matter ?

Adam. O unhappy youth,
Come not within these doors ; within this roof
The enemy of all your graces lives.

Your brother—[no, no brother ; yet the son—
Yet not the son—I will not call him son—
Of him I was about to call his father,]— Hath heard your praises ; and this night he means

To burn the lodging where you used to lie,
And you within it : if he fail of that,
He will have other means to cut you off :

I overheard him, and his practices.
This is no place; this house is but a butchery;
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go? [Here.]

Adam. No matter whither, so you come not!
Orl. What! wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?

Or with a base and boisterous sword enforce
A thierish living on the common road?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can;
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood, and bloody brother.

Adam. But do not so. I have five hundred crowns,

The thrifty hire I sav'd under your father,
Which I did store, to be my foster-nurse
When service should in my old limbs lie lame,
And unregarded age in corners thrown:
Take that; and He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold;
All this I give you. Let me be your servant:
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood;
Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly: let me go with you;
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities. [appears]

Orl. O good old man, how well in thee
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion;
And having that, do choke their service up
Even with the having: it is not so with thee.
But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry:
But come thy ways; we'll go along together;
And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.

Adam. Master, go on, and I will follow thee,
To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty.—
From seventeen years, till now almost fourscore,

Here lived I, but now live here no more.
At seventeen years many their fortunes seek;
But at fourscore it is too late a week:
Yet fortune cannot recompense me better,
Than to die well, and not my master's debtor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Rosalind dressed like a boy, Celia like a shepherdess, and Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits!
Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace

my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman for gold will give us any food: [man, but almost to death.
Touch. Holla, you clown!
Ros. Peace, fool: he's not thy kinsman.
Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.
Cor. Alas are they very wretched.
Ros. Good even to you, friend.
Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.
Ros. I pray thee, shepherd, if that love or gold
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed:
Here a young maid with travel much oppress'd,
And faints for succour.

Fair air, I pity her,
And wish, for her sake more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her;
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not shear the fleeces that I graze:
My master is of churchly disposition,
And little reckes to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality:
Besides, his cote, his flock, and bounds of feed,
By reason of his absence, there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.
Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here
That little cares for buying anything.
Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.
Cor. And we will mend thy wages: I like this place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.
Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold:
Go with me: if you like, upon report,
I will your very faithful feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Amiens, Jaques, and others.

Ami. Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat.
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Ami. Dear master, I can go no farther:
O, I die for food! Here lie I down,
and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little;
cheer thyself a little. If this uncounted forest yield anything savage I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is

Ami. What's that "duedame"?
Jaques. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools
into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.
Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no farther:
O, I die for food! Here lie I down,
and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater
heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little;
cheer thyself a little. If this uncounted forest
yield anything savage I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is

Ami. What's that "duedame"?
Jaques. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools
into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.
Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no farther:
O, I die for food! Here lie I down,
and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater
heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little;
cheer thyself a little. If this uncounted forest
yield anything savage I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is

Ami. What's that "duedame"?
Jaques. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools
into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.
Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no farther:
O, I die for food! Here lie I down,
and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater
heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little;
cheer thyself a little. If this uncounted forest
yield anything savage I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is

Ami. What's that "duedame"?
Jaques. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools
into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.
Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no farther:
O, I die for food! Here lie I down,
and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater
heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little;
cheer thyself a little. If this uncounted forest
yield anything savage I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is

Ami. What's that "duedame"?
Jaques. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools
into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.
Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.
Jaques. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.
Jaques. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [sings.]
Ami. More at your request, than to please
Jaques. Well, then, if ever I thank any man,
I'll thank you: but that they call compliment
is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and
when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I
have given him a penny, and he renders me
the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you
that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover
the while; the duke will drink under this tree.
—He hath been all this day to look you.
Jaques. And I have been all this day to avoid
him. He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he; but I give
heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

SCENE 5, 6.

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.
Jaques. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.
Jaques. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [sings.]
Ami. More at your request, than to please
Jaques. Well, then, if ever I thank any man,
I'll thank you: but that they call compliment
is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and
when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I
have given him a penny, and he renders me
the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you
that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover
the while; the duke will drink under this tree.
—He hath been all this day to look you.
Jaques. And I have been all this day to avoid
him. He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he; but I give
heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

SCENE 5, 6.

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.
Jaques. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.
Jaques. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [sings.]
Ami. More at your request, than to please
Jaques. Well, then, if ever I thank any man,
I'll thank you: but that they call compliment
is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and
when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I
have given him a penny, and he renders me
the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you
that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover
the while; the duke will drink under this tree.
—He hath been all this day to look you.
Jaques. And I have been all this day to avoid
him. He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he; but I give
heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

SCENE 5, 6.

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.
Jaques. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.
Jaques. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [sings.]
Ami. More at your request, than to please
Jaques. Well, then, if ever I thank any man,
I'll thank you: but that they call compliment
is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and
when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I
have given him a penny, and he renders me
the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you
that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover
the while; the duke will drink under this tree.
—He hath been all this day to look you.
Jaques. And I have been all this day to avoid
him. He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he; but I give
heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

SCENE 5, 6.

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.
Jaques. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.
Jaques. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [sings.]
Ami. More at your request, than to please
Jaques. Well, then, if ever I thank any man,
I'll thank you: but that they call compliment
is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and
when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I
have given him a penny, and he renders me
the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you
that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover
the while; the duke will drink under this tree.
—He hath been all this day to look you.
Jaques. And I have been all this day to avoid
him. He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he; but I give
heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

SCENE 5, 6.

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.
Jaques. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.
Jaques. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing? [sings.]
Ami. More at your request, than to please
Jaques. Well, then, if ever I thank any man,
I'll thank you: but that they call compliment
is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and
when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I
have given him a penny, and he renders me
the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you
that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover
the while; the duke will drink under this tree.
—He hath been all this day to look you.
Jaques. And I have been all this day to avoid
him. He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he; but I give
heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable: hold death awhile at the arm's end: I will here be with thee presently; and if I bring thee not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die; but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour. Well said! thou lookest cheerily; and I'll be with thee quickly.—Yet thou liest in the bleak air: come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live anything in this desert. Cheerily, good Adam.

SCENE VII.—The Forest.

A Table set out. Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Lords, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a For I can nowhere find him like a man. [Heast; 1 Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence:

Here was he merry, hearing of a song. [cal, Duke S. If he, compact of jays, grow must-We shall have shortly discord in the spheres. Go, seek him: tell him I would speak with him.

1 Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Enter Jaques.

Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life is this, [pany? That your poor friends must woo your com-What, you look merrily! [forest, Jaq. A fool, a fool!—I met a fool i' the A motley fool;—a miserable world!—As I do live by food, I met a fool;

Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun, And rail'd on lady Fortune in good terms, In good set terms,—and yet a motley fool. "Good-morrow, fool," quoth I, "No, sir," quoth he, [fortune, "Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me

And then he drew a dial from his poke, And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye, Says very wisely, "It is ten o'clock:— [wags: Thus may we see," quoth he, "how the world 'Tis but an hour ago since it was nine;

And after one hour more 'twill be eleven; And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe, And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot: And thereby hangs a tale." When I did hear The motley fool thus moral on the time, My lungs began to crow like chanticleer, That fools should be so deep-contemplative; And I did laugh, sans intermission, An hour by his dial.—O noble fool!

A worthy fool!—Mottey's the only wear. Duke S. What fool is this? [a courtier, Jaq. O worthy fool!—One that hath been And says, if ladies be but young and fair, They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,—

Which is as dry as the remainder blasquit After a voyage,—he hath strange places cramm'd

With observation, the which he ream'd In mangled forms.—O that I were a I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thou shalt have one. Jaq. It is my wish.

Provided, that you weed your better judgement Of all opinion that grows rank in the head: That I am wise. I must have liberty Withal, as large a charter as the wind, To blow on whom I please; for an ass will And they that are most gall'd with misery, They must must laugh. And why, they so?

The why is plain as way to parish church: He, that a fool doth very wisely hit, Doth very foolishly, although he smite, Not to seem senseless of the blow: 'Tis so. The wise man's folly is anatom'd Even by the squand'ring glances of the world. Invest me in my motley; give me leave To speak my mind, and I will through Cleanse the foul body of th' infected world, If they will patiently receive my medicine. Duke S. Piss on thee! I can tell what you wouldst do.

Jaq. What, for a counter, would I do, Duke S. Most mischievous and unkind, ing sin:

For thou thyself hast been a libertine, As sensual as the brutish sting itself; And all the embossed sores, and bloody blains, That thou with license of free foot hast made, Wouldst thou discharge into the general world?

Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride, That can therein tax any private party? Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea, Till that the weary means do choke it? What woman in the city do I name, When that I say the city-woman bears The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders? Who can come in, and say that I mean him, Or what is he of basest function, That says his bravery is not on my cost? [Thinking that I mean him, but then] His folly to the mettle of my speech! There then; how then? what then? I see wherein

My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him wrong, Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be wrong, Why then, my taxing like a wild goose, Unclaim'd of any man.—But who comes here?

Enter Orlando, with his sword drawn. Ori. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why, I have eat none. Ori. Nor shalt not, till necessity be served.

Jaq. Of what kind should this cook come?

Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, thy distress,

Or else a rude despiser of good manners? That in civility thou seem'st so empty?

Ori. You touch'd my vein at that thorny point.

Of some distress hath taken from me the show Of smooth civility; yet am I inland bred, And know some nurture. But forbear, I say: He dies, that touches any of this fruit, Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jaq. An you will not be answered with I must die.

Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force.

More than your force move us to gentleness. Ori. I almost die for food; and let me have

It. Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you:

I thought that all things had been savage here; And therefore put I on the countenance Of stern commandment. But what'er you are, Under the shade of melancholy boughs, Low and neglect the creeping hours of time;

If ever you have look'd on better days; If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church;

If ever sat at any good man's feast; If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear,

And know what 'tis to pity, and be pitied, Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:

In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword. Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days: And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church;

And sat at good men's feasts; and wip'd our eyes

Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd:

And therefore sit you down in gentleness, And take upon command what help we have,

That to your wanting may be minister'd. Ori. Then, but forbear your food a little while, While, like a doe, I go to find my fawn, And give it food. There is an old poor man,

Who after me hath many a weary step, Limp'd in pure love: till he be first suffic'd,— Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,—I will not touch a bit. [Ger, Duke S. Go find him out,

And we will nothing waste till you return. Ori. I thank ye; and be bless'd for your good comfort! [Exit. Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone

This wide and universal theatre [unhappy: Presents more woful pageants, than the scene

Wherein we play in. Jaq. And all the men and women merely players:

They have their exits and their entrances; And one man in his time plays many parts,

His acts being seven ages. At first the infant, Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.

And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel,

And shining morning face, creeping like snail Unwillingly to school.—And then the lover,

Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad

Made to his mistress' eye-brow. Then a soldier, [pard, Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the Jewess in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel, Seeking the bubble reputation, Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice, In fair round belly with good capon lard,

With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut, Full of wise saws and modern instances;

And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,

With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side; His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide

For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice, Turning again toward childish treble, pipes

And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all, That ends this strange eventful history,

Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,—Sane teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything. Re-enter Orlando, with Adam. Duke S. Welcome. Set down your vener-

And let him feed. [able burden, Ori. I thank you most for him.

Adam. So had you need:— I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke S. Welcome; fall to: I will not trouble you.

As yet, to question you about your fortunes.— Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

SONG.

Ami. Blow, blow, thou winter wind, Thou art not so unkind,

Thou art not so unkind; As man's ingratitude;

Thy tooth is not so keen, Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude. [holly: Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! unto the green

Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere

Then, heigh, ho! the holly! [holly: This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky, That dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot; Though thou the waters warp,

Thy sting is not so sharp, As friend remember'd not. Heigh, ho! sing, &c.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,— As you have whisper'd faithfully you were,

And as mine eye doth his enfling witness, Most truly lian'd and living in your face,—

Be truly welcome hither: I am the duke, That lov'd your father: the residue of your fortune, Go to my cave and tell me.—Good old man,

Thou art right welcome as thy master is.— Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand,

And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Oliver, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not seen him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:

But were I not the better part made mercy, I should not seek an absent argument Of my revenge, thou present. But look to it: Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is; Seek him with candle; bring him, dead or living,

Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more To seek a living in our territory. [Thine, Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands, 'Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth Of what we think against thee. [this]

OK. O that your highness knew my heart in I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out of doors;

And let my officers of such a nature Make an extent upon his house and lands: Do this expediently, and turn him going.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Forest.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verses, in witness of my love: [survey

And thou, thrice crowned queen of night, With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above, [sway,

Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books, And in their barks my thoughts I'll character;

That every eye, which in this forest looks, Shall see thy virtue witness'd everywhere. Run, run, Orlando; carve on every tree The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she.

[Exit.

Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now, in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more but that I know, the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night is lack of the day; that hath learned no wit by nature, may complain of good breeding, in some very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher: Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damned.

Cor. Nay, I hope,—

Touch. Truly, thou art damned; 'twixt an ill-roasted egg, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at court?

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never sawest good manners; if thou never sawest good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, sin is damnation. Thou art in a pious house.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: These are good manners at the court, as when two lous in the country, as the behaviour of a country is most muckable at the court, but I told me you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands; that courtesy would be clearly, if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our own and their falls, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtiers sweat? and is not the grease of a man's wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shall I shallow. A better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them thus soon.

Shallow again. A more sounder instance comes.

Cor. And they are often tarred over with surgery of our sheep; and would you have kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

Touch. Most shallow man! Thou wouldest meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh, but

—Learn of the wise, and perpend: allow me

a baser birth than tar,—the very uncleanly

of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me.

I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damned? God's thee, shallow man! God make inches thee! thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer: I earn

I eat, get that I wear; owe no man envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, content with my harm; and the good of my pride is, to see my ewes graze, and lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple sin in you to bring the ewes and the lambs together,

to offer to get your living by the copulation cattle; to be bawd to a boll-wether; and betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth, and crooked-pated, old, cuckoldly ram, out of reasonable match. If thou be'st not done for this, the devil himself will have no body; I cannot see also how thou shouldst

Cor. Here comes young master Gaucolme, my new mistress's brother.

Enter Rosalind, reading a paper.

Ros. [Reads.]

"From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.

Her worth being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.

All the pictures, fairest lin'd,
Are but black to Rosalind.

Let no face be kept in mind,
But the fair of Rosalind."

Touch. I'll rhyme you so, eight years together, dinner, and suppers, and sleeping hours excepted: it is the right butter-woman's rate to market.

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:—

"If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.

If the cat will after kind,
So, be sure, will Rosalind.

Winter-garments must be lin'd,
So must slender Rosalind.

They that reap must sheaf and bind;
Then to cart with Rosalind.

Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.

He that sweetest rose will find,
Must find love's prick, and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses: why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool! I found them

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graft it with you, and then I shall graft it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest fruit in the country; for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter Celia, reading a paper.

Ros. Peace!

Here comes my sister, reading: stand aside.

Or. [Reads.]

"Why should this desert be
For it is unpeopled? No;

Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
That shall civil sayings show;

Some, how brief the life of man
Runs his erring pilgrimage;

That the stretching of a span Buckles in his sum of age;

Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend;

But upon the fairest boughs,
Or at every sentence end,

Will I Rosalinda write:
Teaching all that read to know
The necessaries of every spirit
Heaven would in little show."

Therefore heaven Nature charg'd
That one body should be fill'd

With all graces wide enlarg'd;
Nature presently distill'd

Helen's cheek, but not her heart;
Cleopatra's majesty;

Atalanta's better part;
Sad Lucretia's modesty.

Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synd was devis'd;

Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the touches dearest priz'd.

Heaven would that she these gifts should
And I to live and die her slave. [have,

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter!—what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, "Have patience, good people!"

Cel. How now! back, friends:—shepherd, go off a little:—go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

[Exeunt Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O, yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet

than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering, how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder, before you came; for look here

what I found on a palm-tree:—I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck. Change you colour!

Ros. I prythee, who?

Cel. O lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I prythee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is!

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all whooping.

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou think,

though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery; I

prythee, tell me who is it quickly, and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, that thou mightst pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle,—either too much at once, or none at all. I pray thee, take the cork out of thy month, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.
Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripped up the wrestler's heels and your heart, both, in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking: speak sad brow, and true maid.

Cel. I faith, coz, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose?—What did he, when thou sawest him? What said he? How looked he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Garagantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any month of this age's size. To say ay and no to these particulars, is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies, as to resolve the propositions of a lover:—but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropped acorn.

Ros. It may well be called Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it will become the ground.

Cel. Cry holla to thy tongue, I pray thee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Ros. O, ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden: thou bringest me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Cel. You bring me out. [Enter Orlando and Jacques.] Soft! comes he not here?

Ros. 'Tis he: sink by, and note him.

[Rosalind and Celia retire.]

Jag. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet, for sake, I thank you too for your society.
Jag. God be wi' you, let's meet as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better acquainted.
Jag. I pray you, mar no more of my writing love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no more of my with reading them ill-favourably.

Jag. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jag. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasure when she was christened.

Jag. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jag. You are full of pretty answers; you not been acquainted with good wives, and could'st them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right in cloth, from whence you have stolen questions.

Jag. You have a nimble wit: I think made of Atalanta's heels. Will you walk with me? and we two will rail against mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know many faults.

Jag. The worst fault you have is to love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for my best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jag. By my troth, I was seeking for you when I found you.

Orl. He is drowned in the brook: look in, and you shall see him.

Jag. There I shall see mine own daughter.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool or a cypher.

Jag. I'll tarry no longer with you: good signior Love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure: good monsieur Melancholy.

[Exit Jacques. Rosalind and Celia come forward.]

Ros. [Aside to Celia.] I will speak like a saucy lackey, and under that knave with him. [To him.] Do you forester?

Orl. Very well; what would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is't o'clock?

Orl. You should ask me, what time there's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there is no true lover in the forest: else sighing every minute, and groaning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of time as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of time had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir. Time travels divers paces with divers persons: I'll tell you: Time ambles withal, who Time withal, who Time gallops withal, and who Time stands still withal.

Orl. I pray thee, who doth he trot withal?
Ros. Harry, he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a sear's night, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout; for the one sleeps easily, because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no painful learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury: these Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they decide not how Time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the coney, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many: but indeed an old religious uncle of mine taught me one that knew courtship too well, for there he lectured against it; and I thank God, I am easily offended, as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal words that he said to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal: they were all like one another, as half-pence are; every fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow-fault came to match it.

Orl. I pray thee, recount some of them.

Ros. No, I will not cast away my physic, but on those that are sick. There is a man with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs all, besooth, deifying the name of Rosalind; if I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am that is so love-shaked: I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love: in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not; a blue eye, and sunken; which you have not; an unquestionable spirit; which you have not; a beard neglected; which you have not;—but I pardon you for that; for, simply, your having in beard a younger brother's revenue—then, your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbaited, your shoe untied, and everything about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your accoutrements, as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do, than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verve on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip, as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punished and cured, is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are, for the most part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drove my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madness; which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook merely monastic. And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will: tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you:

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not; a blue eye, and sunken; which you have not; an unquestionable spirit; which you have not; a beard neglected; which you have not;—but I pardon you for that; for, simply, your having in beard a younger brother's revenue—then, your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbaited, your shoe untied, and everything about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your accoutrements, as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do, than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verve on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip, as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punished and cured, is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are, for the most part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drove my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madness; which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook merely monastic. And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will: tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you:

and, by the way, you shall tell where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.
Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind.—Come, sister, will you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jacques behind.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey: I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Doth my simple features content you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant us! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jaq. [Aside.] O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than Jove in a thatch'd house!

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room.—Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish, then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly; for thou swearest to me thou art honest: now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd; for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Jaq. [Aside.] A material fool!

Aud. Well, I am not fair: and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

Touch. Truly, and to cut away honesty upon a foul slut, were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness! sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Martext, the vicar of the next village; who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaq. [Aside.] I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said,—many a man knows no end of his goods: right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them.

Well, that is the dowry of his wife of his own getting. Horns! Poor men alone!—No, no; the more they have, the more they have; hath them as huge as the rascal. A man therefore blessed? No: as a wife is more worthier than a village, so the head of a married man more honest than the bare brow of a bachelor; and by defence is better than no skill, by a horn more precious than to wear none. Sir Oliver.

Enter Sir Oliver Martext.
Sir Oliver. Mar-text, you are well: you despatch us here under this tree, we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Ol. Is there none here to be married?

Touch. I will not take her on my word.

Sir Ol. Truly, she must be given to me: marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. [Coming forward.] Proceed, I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good master Martext: how do you, sir? You are met: God 'ild you for your late coming: am very glad to see you—even a tale here, sir:—nay, pray be covered.

Jaq. Will you be married, mother?

Touch. As the ox hath his plow, horse his curb, and the falcon his man hath his desires; and as pigeons wedlock would be nibbling.

Jaq. And will you, being a married man, be married under a bush? Get you to church, and let the priest that can tell you what marriage is, fellow will but join you together as wainscot; then one of you will grow panel, and, like green timber, wax a plank, and, like green timber, wax a plank.

Touch. [Aside.] I am not in the mood for this.

I were better to be married of him another: for he is not like to marry me, and not being well married, it will hurt the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter, excuse for me hereafter to leave my

Jaq. Go thou with me, and let us be married.

Touch. Come, sweet Audrey: We must be married, or we must be bawdry.

Farewell, good master Oliver:—
O sweet Oliver,
O brave Oliver,

Leave me not behind thee:
but,— Wend away,
Be gone, I say,

I will not to wedding with thee.
[Exeunt Jacques, Touchstone, and Audrey.]

Sir Ol. 'Tis no matter: near a dozen of them all shall doubt me of calling.

SCENE IV.—The Forest. Before the Chapel.
Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me; I will weep.

Scene 5.

Orl. No, I prythee; but yet have the power to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Orl. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Orl. Something browner than Judas's: his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. 'Tis faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Orl. An excellent colour: your chestnut was for the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Orl. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of a nun of winter's sisterhood: kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Orl. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Orl. Yes; I think he is not a pick-purse, so think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Orl. Yes, when he is in: but I think he is not in love.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright, "Was" is not "is": besides, the

of a lover is no stronger than the word of a reckoning: they are both the confiners of the reckoning. He attends here in the forest to see the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday, and had much question with him. He asked me, of what parentage I was; I told him, of as good blood as he; so he laughed, and let me go. But he talk of fathers, when there is such a

Orl. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave words, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, heart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter, his staff like a noble goose: but all's brave, that youth mounts, and folly guides.—Who comes here?

Orl. Mistress, and master, you have oft enquired.

After the shepherd that complain'd of love, who you saw sitting by me on the turf, feeding the proud disdainful shepherdess.

Orl. Was his mistress?

Orl. If you will see a pageant truly play'd, between the pale complexion of true love, and the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, you will mark it.

Ros. Well, and what of him?

Orl. Between the pale complexion of true love, and the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove:

The sight of lovers feedeth those in love.—Bring us to this sight, and you shall say I'll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Forest.
Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe:

Say that you love me not; but say not so in bitterness. The common executioner, whose heart th' accustom'd sight of death makes hard,

Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck, but first begs pardon: will you sterner be than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin, behind.
Phe. I would not be thy executioner: I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.

Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye: 'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable, [things, That eyes,—that are the frail'st and softest—

Who shut their coward gates on atomies,—Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers! Now I do frown on thee with all my heart;

And, if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee:

Now counterfeit to swoon; why now fall down; Or, if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame, Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.

Now show the wound mine eyes hath made in thee; Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush, The cicatrice and capable impressure Thy palm some moment keeps: but now mine eyes,

Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not; Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe, If ever, (as that ever may be near,) [fancy, You meet in some fresh cheek the power of

Then shall you know the wounds invisible That love's keen arrows make.

Phe. But, till that time, Come not thou near me: and, when that time comes,

Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not; As, till that time, I shall not pity thee.

Ros. [Advancing.] And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother,

That you insult, exult, and all at once, Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty,

(As by my faith I see no more in you Than without candle may go dark to bed,) Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?

Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?

I see no more in you, than in the ordinary Of nature's salework:—O, my little life! I think she means to tangle my eyes too.

No, 'faith, proud mistress, hope not after it; 'Tis not your inkly brows, your black-silk hair,

Your huckle-eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame my spirits to your worship,—
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow
her,

Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thousand times a properer man,
Than she a woman: 'tis such fools as you,
That make the world full of ill-favoured children:

'Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her;
And out of you she sees herself more proper,
Than any of her lineaments can show her.—
But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees,

And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,—
Sell when you can; you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer:
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.

So take her to thee, shepherd:—fare you well.

Pho. Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a year
together:

I had rather hear you chide than this man woo.

Ros. He's fallen in love with your foulness:—
[To Silvius.] and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words.—Why look you so upon me?

Pho. For no ill-will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am false than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not.—If you will know my
house,

'Tis at the tuft of olives, here hard by.—

Will you go, sister?—Shepherd, ply her hard.
Come, sister.—Shepherdess, look on him better,

And be not proud: though all the world
None could be so abus'd in sight as he.
Come, to our flock.

[Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.]

Pho. Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,—

"Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?"

Sil. Sweet Phebe,—

Pho. Ha, what say'st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Pho. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be:

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love, your sorrow and my grief
Were both extenuat'd.

Pho. Thou hast my love: is not that neigh-
Sil. I would have you.

Pho. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was, that I hated thee;

And yet it is not, that I bear thee love:

But since that thou canst talk of love so well,

Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,

I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:

But do not look for farther recompense [play'd.

Than thine own gladness that thou art em-

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,

And I in such a poverty of grace,

That I shall think it a most pleasant
To glean the broken ears after the harvest;
That the main harvest reaps; I leave
then

A scatter'd smile, and that I'll live Pho. Know'st thou the youth that me ere-while?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met
And he hath bought the cottage and That the old carlet once was master of.

Pho. Think not I love him, though for him;

'Tis but a peevish boy:—yet he tells
But what care I for words? yet would I
When he that speaks them please
hear.

It is a pretty youth:—not very well
But, sure, he's proud; and yet he comes him:

He'll make a proper man: the best that
Is his complexion; and faster than Did make offence, his eye did heal
He is not very tall; yet for his years
His leg is but so so; and yet 'tis well

There was a pretty redness in his lip

A little ripper and more lusty red

Than that mix'd in his cheek;

Between the constant red and mingled

There be some women, Silvius

mark'd him

In parcels, as I did, would have gone

To fall in love with him: but, for my

I love him not, nor hate him not;

Have more cause to hate him than to love

For what had he to do to chide at me?

He said mine eyes were black, and

black:

And, now I am remember'd, scorn'd

I marvel why I answer'd not again:

But that's all one; omission is no sin

I'll write to him a very taunting letter

And thou shalt bear it: wilt thou, Sil.

Pho. Phebe, with all my heart.

Pho. I'll write it.

The matter's in my head, and in my

I will be bitter with him, and penit

Go with me, Silvius.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest.

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prythee, pretty youth, to better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say, you are a melancholy

Jaq. I am so; I do love it laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity are abominable fellows, and betray to every modern censure worse than

Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and thing.

Ros. Why, then, 'tis good to be a

I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is sly; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the clown's, which is nice; nor the lover's, which is idle; but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from objects; and, indeed, the mundry condensation of my travels; which, by often action, wraps me in a most humorous

A Traveller! By my faith, you have reason to be sad: I fear you have sold your lands, to see other men's; then, to see much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Yes, I have gained my experience.

Enter Orlando.
And your experience makes you sad: I rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad; and to travel

Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind. Nay then, God be wi' you, as you talk such verse.

Good day, monsieur Traveller: look upon me, and wear strange suits; disable all the

of your own country; be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for bringing you that countenance you are; or I scarcely think you have swam in a gondola. [Exit Jacques.] Why, how now, Orlando! have you been all this while? You are —An you serve me such another trick, I come in my sight more.

My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Break an hour's promise in love! He will divide a minute into a thousand, and break but a part of the thousandth of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapped him on the shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart-

Orlando. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Nay, as you be so tardy, come no more in my sight: I had as lief be woo'd of a

Of a snail!

Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head,—a jointure, I think, than you make a man: besides, he brings his destiny with him.

What's that?

Why, horns; that such as you are fair are beladen to your wives for: but he is armed in his fortune, and prevents the

of his wife.

Why, horns; that such as you are fair are beladen to your wives for: but he is armed in his fortune, and prevents the

of his wife.

Why, horns; that such as you are fair are beladen to your wives for: but he is armed in his fortune, and prevents the

of his wife.

Why, horns; that such as you are fair are beladen to your wives for: but he is armed in his fortune, and prevents the

of his wife.

Why, horns; that such as you are fair are beladen to your wives for: but he is armed in his fortune, and prevents the

of his wife.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent.—What would you say to me now, as I were your very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers, lacking (God warn us!) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress; or I should think my honesty rarer than my wit.

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say—I will not have you.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before; and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was drowned: and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was—Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies; men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind; for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays and Saturdays and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why, then, can one desire too much of a good thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand, Orlando.—What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin,—"Will you, Orlando?"

Cel. Go to.—Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say,—"I take thee, Rosalind, for wife."

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but,—I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband; there's a girl goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possessed her?

Orl. For ever and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever. No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that hath a wife with such a wit, he might say,—"Wit, whither wilt?"

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse [that?]

Ros. Marry, to say,—she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours!

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner: by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways,—I knew what you would prove! my friends told me as much, and I thought no less,—that flattering tongue of yours won me:—'tis but one cast away, and so,—come, dear o'clock is your hour!

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good faith, so God mend me, and by all prayers, are not dangerous, if you break one promise, or come one minute before the hour, I will think you the most unfaithful, break-promise, and the most hollow of the most unworthy of her you call; that may be chosen out of the gross of the unfaithful: therefore, beware my eye, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion than I do indeed my Rosalind: so, adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old fox; examines all such offenders, and catches them. Try: adieu.

Cel. You have simply misused your love-prate: we must have you and those plucked over your head, and the world that the bird hath done to have.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty one, that thou didst know how many lovers I am in love! But it cannot be so, affection hath an unknown bottom.

Cel. Or rather, bottomless: that you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked Venus, that was begot of thought, of spleen, and born of madness: that rascally boy, that abuses every one, cause his own are out, let him be deep I am in love: I'll tell thee, cannot be out of the sight of Orlando, find a shadow, and sigh till he comes.

Cel. And I'll sleep.

SCENE II.—Another part of the forest.

Enter Jaques and Lord.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the duke, set the deer's horns upon his head, for of victory.—Have you no song, for this purpose?

Lord. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

What shall he have that kill'd the deer,
His leather skin, and horns to wear?

Then sing him home.

[The rest shall bear down.]
Take thou no scorn to wear the horn,
It was a crest ere thou wast born.

Thy father's father wore it,
And thy father bore it:

The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

SCENE III.—The Forest.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock?

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love and a troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone to sleep. Look, who comes here.

[Enter Silvius.]

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth:—My gentle Phoebe did bid me give you this:

[Giving a letter.]
I know not the contents; but, as I guess, she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter.

Cel. And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: says I am not fair; that I lack manners; that she did use as she was writing of it, but as a guiltless messenger.

[Rosalind.]

*"If the scorn of your bright eyes
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect!
While you chat me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move!
He that brings this love to thee,
Little knows this love in me:
And by him seal up thy mind;
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me, and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die."*

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him? no, he deserves no pity.—Wilt thou love such a woman?—What, to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee! not to be endured!—Well, go your way to her, (for I see, love hath made thee a tame snake,) and say this to her:—that if she love me, I charge her to love thee;—if she will not, I will never have her; unless thou entreat for her.—If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.

[Exit Silvius.]

Enter Oliver.

Ol. Good morning, fair ones: pray you if you know,

Where in the purlieus of this forest stands
A sheepshead, fence'd about with alive-trees?

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom:

The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream,
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place.

But at this hour the house doth keep itself;
There's none within.

Orl. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description;

Such garments, and such years:—"The boy is fair,

*Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe sister: but the woman low,
And browner than her brother."* Are not you

The owner of the house I did enquire for?

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.

Orl. Orlando doth commend him to you
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind

He sends this bloody napkin:—are you he?

Ros. I am: what must we understand by this?

Orl. Some of my shame; if you will know What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkerchief was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Orl. When last the young Orlando parted from you

He left a promise to return again Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,

Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,

Lo! what befall! he threw his eye aside,
And, mark, what object did present itself:
Under an old oak, whose boughs were moss'd
with age,

And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who with her head, nimble in threats,
approach'd.

The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself,
And with indentèd glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry, [watch,
Lay couching, head on ground, with catlike
When that the sleeping man should stir; for
The royal disposition of that beast,
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother;

And he did render him the most unnatural
That liv'd 'mongst men.

Oh. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural. [there,
Ros. But, to Orlando:—did he leave him
Food to the sick'd and hungry lioness?

Oh. Twice did he turn his back, and pur-pos'd so;

But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him: in which hartling,
From miserable slumber I awak'd.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was it you he rescu'd?
Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oh. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But, for the bloody napkin?—

Oh. By and by.
When from the first to last, betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,

As, how I came into that desert place;—
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,

And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind.
Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound;
And, after some small space, being strong at
heart,

He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin,

Dyed in his blood, unto this shepherd.
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Cel. [Rosalind swoons.] Why,
Ganymede! sweet Ganymede!

Oh. Many will swoon when they see on blood.

Cel. There is more in it.—Could I
Oh. Look, he recovers.

Ros. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you to the duke.

I pray you, will you take him by the hand?
Oh. Be of good cheer, youth:—

Ros. I do so, I confess it. Al-body would think this was well counte-
I pray you, tell your brother how well

terfeited.—Hail he!

Oh. This was not counterfeit: 'tis great testimony in your complexion,
a passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
Oh. Well then, take a good counterfeit to be a man.

Ros. So I do; but, I faith, I been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and you, draw homewards.—Good sir,

Oh. That will I, for I must bear

How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
Ros. I shall devise something.

you, commend my counterfeiting to you go!

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. We shall find a time patience, gentle Audrey.

And. Faith, the priest was good for all the old gentleman's saying.

Touch. A most wicked Sir Oliver
a most vile Mar-text. But, Audrey, youth here in the forest lays claim

And. Ay, I know who 'tis: he interest in me in the world: here man you mean.

Touch. It is meat and drink to clown: by my troth, we that have have much to answer for; we shall we cannot hold.

Enter William.

Will. Good even, Audrey.
And. God ye good even, William.

Will. And good even to you, sir.
Touch. Good even, gentle William.

Will. Five and twenty, sir.
Touch. A ripe age. Is thy name

Will. William, sir.
Touch. A fair name. What hour

Will. Ay, sir, I thank God.

Touch. Thank God;—a good answer. Art
Will. Faith, sir, so so.

Touch. So so, is good, very good, very good;—and yet it is not; it is but

Will. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.
Touch. Why, thou sayest well. I do now

Will. But the wise man knows himself to be The leathen philosopher, when he

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Give me your hand. Art thou

Will. No, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers. Go you and prepare Aliena; for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Enter Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.
Orl. And you, fair sister. [Exit.

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf!

Orl. It is my arm.
Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon, when he shewed me your handkerchief?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.
Ros. Oh, I know where you are:—may, 'tis true: there was never anything so sudden,

but the fight of two rams, and Caesar's thim-sonical brag of—"I came, saw, and overcame:"

for your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sigh'd; no sooner sigh'd, but they ask'd one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow; and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But, O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.
Ros. I will weary you, then, no longer with idle talking. Know of me, then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this,
that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, inasmuch I say I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me.

Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things: I have, since I was three years old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her: I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow,
human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speakest thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will.—Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness,
To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not, if I have: it is my study
To seem despitiful and ungentle to you:
You are there follow'd by a faithful shepherd;
Look upon him, love him; he worships you.

Phe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears;—
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and reverence;
And so am I for Phebe. [vice;—

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes,
All adoration, duty, and observance;
All humbleness, all patience, and impatience;
All purity, all trial, all observance;
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. [To Rosalind.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Sil. [To Phebe.] If this be so, why blame
you me to love you? [love you!]

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Whom do you speak to,—"why blame you me to love you?" [hear.]

Orl. To her, that is not here, nor doth not Ros. Pray you, no more of this: 'tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon.

—[To Silvius.] I will help you if I can;—
[To Phebe.] I would love you, if I could.—

To-morrow meet me all together.—[To Phebe.]
I will marry you, if ever I marry a woman and I'll be married to-morrow:—[To Orlando.]

I will satisfy you, if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow:—[To Silvius.]

I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married tomorrow:—[To Orlando.] As you love Rosalind, meet:—[To Silvius.] As you love Phebe, meet: and as I love no woman, I'll meet.—

So, fare you well: I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe.

Orl.

Nor I.

Nor I.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day;
To-morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart;
I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire a woman of the world. Here comes the banished duke's pages.

Enter two Pages.

1 Page. Well met, honest gentleman;
Touch. By my troth, well met.
sit, and a song.

2 Page. We are for you: sit I pray
you.

1 Page. Shall we clap into't round out hawking, or spitting, or saying hoarse, which are the only prologues to voices?

2 Page. I' faith, I' faith; and let tune, like two gipsies on a horse.

SONG.

*It was a lover and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey;*

*That o'er the green corn-field did pass,
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,*

*When birds do sing, hey ding a ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.*

*Between the acres of the rye,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey;*

*These pretty country folks would be,
In the spring time, &c.*

*This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey;*

*How that a life was but a flower,
In the spring time, &c.*

*And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey;*

*For love is crowned with the prime,
In the spring time, &c.*

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen,
there was no great matter in the ditty;
note was very untuneful.

1 Page. You are deceived, sir;
times, we lost not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes; I lost time lost to hear such a foolish song;
w' you; and God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

1 Page. And God mend your voices.

That would I, had I kingdoms to give her.

[To Orlando.] And you say, you will have her when I bring her? [King.]

That would I, were I of all kingdoms
 To Phebe. You say, you'll marry me,
 I the willing?

That will I, should I die the hour but if you do refuse to marry me, [after.]

give yourself to this most faithful
 So is the bargain. [shepherd?]

[To Silvius.] You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Though to have her and death were with one thing. [even.]

I have promised to make all this matter on your word, O duke, to give your daughter;—

Orlando, to receive his daughter:—
 our word, Phebe, that you'll marry me, refusing me, to wed this shepherd:—

our word, Silvius, that you'll marry her, refuse me:—and from hence I go,
 let these doubts all even.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.]
 S. I do remember in this shepherd boy lively touches of my daughter's favour.

My lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
 might he was a brother to your daughter:

my good lord, this boy is forest-born,
 hath been tutor'd in the rudiments of desperate studies by his uncle,

 and he reports to be a great magician,
 and in the circle of this forest.

There is, sure, another flood toward,
 these couples are coming to the ark.—
 Touchstone and Audrey.]—Here is a pair of very strange beasts, which in our country are called fools.

Salutation and greeting to you all!
 Good my lord, bid him welcome:

is the merry-minded gentleman, that I so often met in the forest: he hath been soldier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put to my purgation. I have trod a measure;

my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four wives, and like to have fought one.

And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. Faith, we met, and found the road was upon the seventh cause.

How seventh cause?—Good my lord,
 like S. I like him very well. [like this fellow.]

Touch. God 'ld you, sir; I desire you of the country copulatives, to swear, and break:—a poor virgin, sir, an ill-used thing, sir, but mine own; a poor rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a house, as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed:— bear your body more seeming, Audrey:—as thus, sir. I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is called the Retort courteous. If I sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is called the Quip modest.

 If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment: this is called the Reply churlish.

If again, it was not well cut, he would answer,
 I spake not true: this is called the Reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: this is called the Counter-check quarrelsome: and so to the Lie circumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no farther than the Lie circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measured swords, and parted. [degrees of the lie?]

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book; as you have books for good manners:

I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth,
 the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Counter-check quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the Lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an "if." I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves,

one of them thought but of an "if," as "if you said so, then I said so;" and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your "if" is the only peace-maker; much virtue in "if."

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord?
 he's as good at anything, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that, he shoots his wit.

Still music. Enter Hymen, leading Rosalind in woman's clothes: and Celia.

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
 When earthly things made even Atone together.

Good duke, receive thy daughter:
 Hymen from heaven brought her;

Yea, brought her hither,
 That thou might'st join her hand with

Whose heart within her bosom is. [his,
 Ros. [To Duke S.] To you I give myself,
 for I am yours.— [yours.]

[To Orlando.] To you I give myself, for I am

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my

Phe. If sight and shape be true, [Rosalind.] Why then,—my love alien!

Ros. [To Duke S.] I'll have no father, if you be not he: [not he:—]

[To Orlando.] I'll have no husband, if you be [To Phebe.] Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion: [not she.] 'Tis I must make conclusion

Of these most strange events:

Here's eight that must take hands,

To join in Hymen's bands,

If truth holds true contents.

[To Orlando and Rosalind.] You and you no cross shall part:—

[To Oliver and Celia.] You and you are heart in heart:—

[To Phebe.] You to his love must accord,

Or have a woman to your lord:—

[To Touchstone and Audrey.] You and you are sure together,

As the winter to foul weather,

Whiles a wedlock hymn we sing,

Feed yourselves with questioning;

That reason wonder may diminish;

How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown:

O blessed bond of board and bed!

'Tis Hymen peoples every town:

High wedlock, then, be honoured:

Honour, high honour and renown,

To Hymen, god of every town.

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me!

Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. [To Silvius.] I will not eat my word, now thou art mine;

Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine,

Enter Jacques de Bois.

Jaq. de B. Let me have audience for a word or two;

I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,

That bring these tidings to this fair assembly:—

Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day

Men of great worth resorted to this forest,

Address'd a mighty power; which were on foot,

In his own conduct, purposely to take

His brother here, and put him to the sword;

And to the skirts of this wild wood he came;

Where, meeting with an old religious man,

After some question with him, was converted

Both from his enterprise and from the world;

His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,

And all their lands restor'd to them again,

That were with him exil'd. This to be true,

I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;

Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:

To one, his lands withheld; and to the other,

A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.

First, in this forest, let us do those things

That here were well begun, and well

And after, every of this happy marriage

That have endur'd alreedy days

with us,

Shall share the good of our returned

According to the measure of their

Meantime, forget this new-fall'n

And fall into our rustic revelry:—

Play, music!—and you, brides

grooms all,

With measure heap'd in joy, to the

Jaq. Sir, by your patience:—

The duke hath put on a religious

And thrown into neglect the pomp

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I: out of these

There is much matter to be heard

[To Duke S.] You to your former bequeath;

Your patience, and your virtue

[To Orlando.] You to a love, that faith doth merit:—

[To Oliver.] You to your land, and great allies:—

[To Silvius.] You to a long and

[To Touchstone.] And you to thy loving voyage

Is but for two months victual'd

I am for other than for dancing

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pasture, I

I'll stay to know at your abandoned

Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we

these rites,

As we do trust they'll end, in true

EPILOGUE.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the epilogue; but it is no more unhandsome to see the lord the prologue. If it be good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that play needs no epilogue: yet to good

do use good bushes; and good plays better by the help of good epilogues,

a case am I in, then, that am neither epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with behalf of a good play! I am not like a beggar, therefore to beg will me: my way is, to conjure you: and with the women. I charge you, to for the love you bear to men, to like

of this play as please you: and I charge

O men, for the love you bear to

I perceive by your snoring none of them, that between you and the play may please. If I were a woman, kiss as many of you as had beards ma, complexions that liked me, and that I defied not; and, I am sure, we have good beards, or good faces, breaths, will, for my kind offer, when court'ay, bid me farewell.

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Lord.	Persons in the Induction.	Tranio, } servants to Lucentio.
Christopher Sly, a Tinker.		Biondello, }
Hottish, Page, Players.		Grumio, } servants to Petruchio.
Huntsman, and Servants.		Curtia, }
Baptista, a rich Gentleman of Padua.		Pedant, set up to personate Vincentio.
Vincentio, an old Gentleman of Pisa.
Vincentio, son to Vincentio; in love with Bianca.		Katharina, the Shrew, } daughters to Baptista.
Petruchio, a Gentleman of Verona; suitor to Katharina.		Bianca, }
Lucentio, } suitors to Bianca.		Widow.
		Tailor, Haberdasher, and Servants attending on Baptista and Petruchio.

Kent, — Sometimes in Padua; and sometimes in Petruchio's House in the Country.

INDUCTION.

SCENE I.—Before an Alehouse on a Heath.

Enter Hostess and Sly.

Sly. I'll please you, in faith.

Host. A pair of stocks, you rogue!

Sly. You are a baggage; the Slys are no names; look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore, pence for me; let the world slide: Sessa!

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst!

Sly. No, not a denier. Go by, Jeronimy,—

Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Host. I know my remedy: I must go fetch the third borough.

Sly. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll power him by law: I'll not budge an inch, boy: let him come, and kindly.

[Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep.

Wind Hums. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well

my hounds:

Shach Merriman,—the poor cur is emboss'd and couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd

brach.

Fawt thou not, boy, how Silver made it good

At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault?

I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

Hum. Why, Bellman is as good as he,

my lord;

He crieth upon it at the merest loss,

And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent:

Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool: if Eelm were as fleet,

I would esteem him worth a dozen such.

But sup them well, and look unto them all:

To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1 Hum. I will, my lord.

Lord. [Sees Sly.] What's here! one dead,

or drunk! See, doth he breathe?

2 Hum. He breathes, my lord: were he not warm'd with ale,

This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine

he lies! [Image]

Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine

Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.—

What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,

Wrapp'd in sweat clothes, rings put upon his fingers,

A most delicious banquet by his bed,

And brave attendants near him when he wakes,

Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1 Hum. Bellave me, lord, I think he cannot choose. [when he wak'd.]

2 Hum. It would seem strange unto him

Lord. Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy.

Then take him up, and manage well the jest:

Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,

And hang it round with all my wanton

pictures:

Balm his foul head in warm distilled waters,

And burn sweet wood to make the lodging

sweet:

Procure me music ready when he wakes,

To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;

And if he chance to speak, be ready straight,

And, with a low submissive reverence,

Say,—What is it your honour will command?

Let one attend him with a silver basin

Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers;

Another bear the ewer, the third a disher,

And say,—Will't please your lordship cool

your hands.

Some one be ready with a costly suit,

And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his bounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disease;
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he is—say that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs:
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If he be husbanded with modesty.

1 Hun. My lord, I warrant you, we will play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is. [him;

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with
And each one to his office when he wakes.

[Sly is borne out. A trumpet sounds.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds;
[Exit Servant.

Belike, some noble gentleman, that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here.
Re-enter Servant.

How now! who is it?
Serv. An it please your honour,
Players that offer service to your lordship.

Lord. Bid them come near.
Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.
Players. We thank your honour.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me tonight?

2 Play. So please your lordship to accept Lord. With all my heart.—This fellow I remember,

Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son:
'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so
well;

I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted and naturally perform'd.

1 Play. I think 'twas Soto that your honour
means.

Lord. 'Tis very true: thou didst it excellently; you are come to me in happy time;

The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.

There is a lord will hear you play to-night:
But I am doubtful of your modesties;

Lest, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play,)

You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,

If you should smile, he grows impatient.
1 Play. Fear not, my lord: we can contain ourselves,

Were he the veriest antic in the world.
Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one;
Let them want nothing that my house affords.—
[Exit Servant and Players.

[To a Servant.] Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew
my page,

And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;

And call him madam, do him obeisance,
Tell him from me, (as he will win his heart,) he shall be a tinker! Ask him such as he hath observ'd in notice of the score for silver ale, score me
for the lyingest knave in Christendom,
And say,—What is't your honour's
pleasure?

Wherein your lady and your honour
May show her duty, and make known
And then,—with kind embracements,
ing kisses,

And with declining head into his Bids him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
To see her noble lord restor'd to life
Who for this seven years hath been
No better than a poor and foolish man;
And if the boy have not a woman's
To rain a shower of commanded tears
An onion will do well for such a fall;
Which, in a napkin being close cover'd,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this despatch'd with all the speed
Anon I'll give thee more instructions.

I know the boy will well usurp the Voice, gait, and action of a gentleman;
I long to hear him call the drunkard
And how my men will stay themselves laughter.

When they do homage to this simple
I'll in to counsel them; haply my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen, Which otherwise would grow into scurf.

SCENE II.—A bedchamber in the Duke's
House.

*Sly is discovered in a rich nightgown,
Attendants: some with apparel, basin,
towel, and appurtenances.*

Lord, dressed like a servant.
Sly. [Waking.] For God's sake, a small ale.

1 Serv. Will't please your lordship
these conserves?

2 Serv. Will't please your lordship
these conserves?

3 Serv. What raiment will your honour, nor lordship: I ne'er dream'd my life; and if you give me any of give me conserves of beef: ne'er set a raiment I'll wear; for I have no more than backs, no more stockings than no more shoes than feet: nay, sometimes than shoes, or such shoes as my feet through the overleather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour, O, that a mighty man, of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high estate,
Should be infus'd with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What! would you make Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's Barton-heath; by birth a pedlar, by now by present profession a tinker! Ask me such as he hath observ'd in notice of the score for silver ale, score me

for the lyingest knave in Christendom,
And say,—What is't your honour's
pleasure?

1 Serv. O, this it is that makes your lady mourn.

2 Serv. O, this it is that makes your servant drop.

3 Serv. O, this it is that makes your kindred drop.

4 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

5 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

6 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

7 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

8 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

9 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

10 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

11 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

12 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

13 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

14 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

15 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

16 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

17 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

18 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

19 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

20 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

21 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

22 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

23 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

24 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

Upon my life, I am a lord, indeed;
And not a tinker, nor Christopher Sly.
Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;
And once again, a pot o' the smallest ale.

2 Serv. Will't please your mightiness to wash
your hands?

[Servants present a ewer, basin, and napkin.
O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!
O, that ones more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have been in a dream;
Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.
Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.

But did I never speak of all that time?

1 Serv. O, yes, my lord; but very idle
words.

For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door;
And rail upon the hostess of the house;
And say, you would present her at the lect,
Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts:

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3 Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid;

Nor no such men, as you have reckon'd up,—
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpnell; And twenty more such names and men as
these,

Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good Alk. Amen.

1 Serv. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.
Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer
Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord: what is thy will
with her?

Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me
My men should call me lord: I am your goodman.

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord
I am your wife in all obedience.

Sly. I know it well.—What must I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Sly. Alice madam, or Joan madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else: so lords
call ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have
And slept above some fifteen year or more.

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto
me.

Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Sly. 'Tis much. Servants, leave me and her alone.

Madam, undress you, and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice noble lord, let me entreat of
To pardon me yet for a night or two; [you
Or, if not so, until the sun be set,
For your physicians have expressly charg'd,

that you should sleep; I see, I hear, I speak;
I feel sweet savours; and I feel soft things:—

And now by present profession a tinker! Ask me such as he hath observ'd in notice of the score for silver ale, score me
for the lyingest knave in Christendom,
And say,—What is't your honour's
pleasure?

1 Serv. O, this it is that makes your lady
mourn.

2 Serv. O, this it is that makes your servant drop.

3 Serv. O, this it is that makes your kindred drop.

4 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

5 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

6 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

7 Serv. O, this it is that makes your
house drop.

In peril to incur your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed.
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly tarry so long; but I would be loth to fall into my dreams again: I will therefore tarry, in spite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant comedy;
For so your doctors hold it very meet, Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your
blood,

And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy:
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which hars a thousand harms, and lengthens life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it. Is not a commonly a Christmas gambol, or a tumbling trick?

Page. No, my good lord; it is more pleasing
Sly. What, household stuff? [stall.]

Page. It is a kind of history.

Sly. Well, we'll see't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side,
And let the world slip: we shall ne'er be younger. [They sit down.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Padua. A public Place.

Enter Lucentio and Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since, for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy:
And, by my father's love and leave, am arm'd
With his good will and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and happy institute
A course of learning and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being, and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolli,
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tr. Mi perdonate, gentle master mine,
I am in all affected as yourself;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve
To smok the sweets of sweet philosophy:
Only, good master, while we do admire

This virtue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics, nor no stoicks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quill about us.
Balk logic with acquaintance that you know,
And practise rhetoric in your common
Music and poesy use, to quicken you;
The mathematics and the metaphysics
Fall to them, as you find your stomachs
No profit grows, where is no pleasure.

Luc. Gramercies, Tranio; well said.
If Biondello now were come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall bring.
But stay awhile: what company is that?

Tr. Master, some show; I will not Enter Baptista, Katharina, Bianca, and Hortensio. Lucentio and Tranio
aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, importance me no
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know.
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter
Before I have a husband for the eldest;
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well and love you, Leave shall you have to court her all your sure.

Gre. To cart her rather: she's too
There, there, Hortensio, will you answer Kath. [To Bap.] I pray you, sit, and will.

To make a stale of me amongst these Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you no mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder Kath. I faith, sir, you shall never fear:

I wis, it is not half way to her heart;
But if it were, doubt not her ears are close;
To comb your noddle with a three-tooth
And paint your face and use your hair.

Hor. From all such devils, deliver us!

Gre. And me, too, good Lord!

Tr. Rush, master, here is pastime toward:

That wench is stark mad, or worse;
Luc. But in the other's silence do I Maids' mild behaviour and sobriety Peace, Tranio.

Tr. Well said, master; mum!

Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon
What I have said,—Bianca, get you
And let it not displease thee, good For I will love thee ne'er the less, if Kath. A pretty peat! it is best Put finger in the eye,—an she know Bian. Sister, content you in my Sir, to your pleasure humbly I sub-My books and instruments shall be

pany,

On them to look and practise by my self.

On them to look and practise by my

Luc. Hark, Tranio! thou may'st hear Minerva speak,
Her scholar Baptista, will you be so strange?
Am I, that our good-will affects Bianca's grief.

*Will you mew her up,
And make her hear the penance of her tongue?
Bap.* Gentlemen, content ye, I am resolv'd:—
Exit Bianca.

And for I know she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,
I will instruct her youth. If you, Hortensio,
You know Gremio, you,—know any such,
Will be very kind, and liberal
To bring your own children in good bringing up:
I have more to commune with Bianca.

Exit.
Kath. Why, and I trust I may go too, may
I not?

Tr. I shall be appointed hours, as though
I know not what to take, and what to leave [aside.]

Gre. You may go to the devil's dam: your love is so good, here's none will hold you.

Tr. Now our nails together, and fast it fairly —yet, for the love I bear my sweet
—if I can by any means light on a fit to teach her that wherein she delights, I will win him to her father.

Tr. So will I, Gremio: but a word,
Through the nature of our quarrel yet hooked parts, know now, upon advice,
—that we may yet again
be access to our fair mistress, and be happy in Bianca's love,—to labour and effect this specially.

Tr. Wants that, I pray!

Gre. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her
—a husband! a devil.

Tr. I say, a husband.

Gre. I say, a devil: thinkest thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man very a fool to be married to hell?

Tr. Truly, Gremio! though it pass your —man, there to endure her loud alarms,
—man could light on them, would take her with all mirth, and money enough.

Tr. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take —the high-crook every morning.

Tr. Well, as you say, there's small choice —between us friends, it shall be so far forth —daughter to a husband, we set his —Sweet Bianca!—Happy man be

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

to him.

his dols!—He that runs fastest gets the ring.
How say you, signior Gremio?

Gre. I am agreed: and 'would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

Tr. [Advancing.] I pray, sir, tell me,—is it possible

That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Luc. O Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely;

But see; while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in idleness:

And now in plainness do confess to thee,—
That art to me as secret and as dear

As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was,— Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girl.

Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;
Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tr. Master, it is no time to chide you now;
Affection is not rated from the heart: [so,— If love have touch'd you, nought remains but Redime te captum, quam quies minimo.

Luc. Gramercies, lad; go forward, this
contents:

The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.

Tr. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid,

Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.

Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had, [hand,
That made great Jove to humble him to her
When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

Tr. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister

Began to scold, and raise up such a storm,
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the air;
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.

Tr. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.

I pray, awake, sir: if you love the maid, Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:—

Her elder sister is so enrat and shrewd,
That, till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home;
And therefore has he closely mov'd her up,
Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.

Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!
But art thou not advis'd, he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct
her?

Tr. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 'tis
Luc. I have it, Tranio. [plotted.]

Tr. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tr. You will be schoolmaster,
And undertake the teaching of the maid;
That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

That's your device.

Luc. It is: may it be done?
Tru. Not possible; for who shall bear your
 And be in Padua here Vincentio's son? [part, Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his
 friends;

Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?
Luc. Basta; content thee; for I have it full,
 We have not yet been seen in any house;
 Nor can we be distinguish'd, by our faces,
 For man, or master, Tranio, it follows thus;—
 Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead, Keep house, and port, and servants, as I
 should;

I will some other be; some Florentine,
 Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
 'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so;—Tranio, at once
 Uncease thee; take my colour'd hat and cloak;
 When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;
 But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.
Tru. So had you need.

[They exchange habits.
 In brief, sir, with it your pleasure is,
 And I am tied to be obedient,
 (For so your father charg'd me at our parting,—
 "Be servicable to my son," quoth he,
 Although I think 'twas in another sense,)
 I am content to be Lucutio,
 Because so well I love Lucutio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucutio loves:
 And let me be a slave, to achieve that maid Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded
 eye.

Here comes the rogue.—[Enter Biondello.] Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been! Nay, how now!
 where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes, [news?]

Or you stol'n his! or both? pray, what's the
Luc. Sirrah, come hither: 'tis no time to jest,
 And therefore frame your manners to the time.

Your fellow Tranio, here, to save my life,
 Puts my apparel and my countenance on,
 And I for my escape have put on his;

For in a quarrel, since I came ashore,
 I kill'd a man, and fear I was deserv'd.

Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
 While I make way from hence to save my life;
 You understand me?

Bion. I, sir! ne'er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth:
 Tranio is chang'd to Lucutio. [too!]

Bion. The better for him: would I were so Tru. So would I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,

That Lucutio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.

But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's,
 I advise [companies:]

You use your manners discreetly in all kind of
 When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio.

But in all places else, your master, Lucutio.
Luc. Tranio, let's go—

One thing more rests, that thyself execute;

To make one among these wooers!
 me why,— Sufficeth, my reasons are both weighty.

2 SERV. My lord, you nod; you the play.

SERV. Yes, by Saint Anne, I do matter, surely: comes there any way?

PAOR. My lord, 'tis but beguine.

SERV. 'Tis a very excellent piece
 madam lady: would 'twere done!

SCENE II.—Padua. Before Hortensio's house.
 Enter Petruchio and Grumio

Pet. Verona, for a while I take
 To see my friends in Padua; but

My best beloved and approved Hortensio; and I trow this is his

Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I charge
Gru. Knock, sir! whom should

Is there any man has rebused your
Pet. Villain, I say, knock me

Gru. Knock you here, sir! why am I, sir, that I should knock you?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me
 And rap me well, or I'll knock you pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome should knock you first.

And then I know after who comes Pet. Will it not be?

Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock,
Gru. Knock you here, sir! why

I'll try how you can so, fa, and [He wrings Grumio's

Gru. Help, masters, help! my master
Pet. Now, knock when I bid you villain!

 Enter Hortensio.

Hor. How now! what's the old friend Grumio! and my good truchio!—How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you

the fray?
Con tutto il core ben trovato, may I

Hor. Alla nostra casa ben honorato signior mio Petruchio!

Rise, Grumio, rise: we will enjoy quarels.

Gru. Nay, 'tis no matter, sir, what in Latin.—If this be not a lawful to leave his service,—look you, my me knock him, and rap him

well, was it fit for a servant to so; being, perhaps (for aught I thirty,—a pip out!

 Whom 'would to God, I had well

Then had not Grumio come by the Pet. A senseless villain!—Good

I bade the rascal knock upon your
 And could not get him for my head

Gru. Knock at the gate!—O he Spake you not these words plain knock me here, rap me here, knock knock me soundly!" And come you now knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise
 you.

Hor. Petruchio, patience: I am Grumio's [pledge:]

husband, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio;
 and tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale

brings you to Padua here, from old Verona?
Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world,

 and their fortunes farther than at home,

where small experience grows. But in a few,
 where my father, is deceas'd;

I have thrust myself into this maze,
 to wife and thrive as best I may:

as in my purse I have, and goods at home.

So am I come abroad to see the world.
Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly

to thee,
 and wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife?

But thank me but a little for my counsel:
 yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,

very rich:—but thou'rt too much my I'll not wish thee to her.

[friend,
Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends

as we,
 words suffice; and therefore, if thou know

rich enough to be Petruchio's wife, wealth is burden of my wooing dance,)

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,
 as thou art, as thou art, as thou art,

Her name is Katharina Minola,
 Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not
 And he knew my deceased father well. [her;

I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her;
 And therefore let me be thus bold with you,

To give you over at this first encounter,
 Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him: she may, perhaps,

call him half a score knaves, or so: why, that's nothing; an he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll tell you what, sir,—an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee;

For in Baptista's keep my treasure is:
 He hath the jewel of my life in hold,

His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca;
 And her withholds from me, and other more,

Suitors to her, and rivals in my love:
 Supposing it a thing impossible

(For those defects I have before rehears'd,)
 That ever Katharina will be woo'd;

Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en,
 That none shall have access unto Bianca,

Till Katharine the curst have got a husband.
Gru. Katharine the curst!

A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.
Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me

grace;
 And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes,

To old Baptista as a schoolmaster
 Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca;

That so I may, by this device, at least
 Have leave and leisure to make love to her,

And, unsuspected, court her by herself.
Gru. Here's no knavery! See, to beguile

the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together!

Enter Grumio; with him Lucutio disguised, with books under his arm.

Master, master, look about you: who goes there! ha?

Hor. Peace, Grumio: 'tis the rival of my love.
 Petruchio, stand by a while.

Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous!
 [They retire

Gru. O, very well; I have perus'd the note.
 Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound:

All books of love, see that at any hand;
 And see you read no other lectures to her:

You understand me—over and beside Signior Baptista's liberality, [too,

I'll mend it with a largess:—take your papers
 And let me have them very well perfum'd;

For she is sweeter than perfume itself,
 To whom they go. What will you read to her?

Luc. What'er I read to her, I'll plead for you,
 As for my patron, (stand you so assur'd,)

As firmly as yourself were still in place:
Yea, and perhaps with more successful words
Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.

Gre. O this learning! what a thing it is!

Gre. O this woodcock! what an ass it is!

Pet. Peace, sirrah!

Hor. Gremio, mum!—God save you, signior Gremio!

[sio. Trow you

Gre. And you are well met, signior Hortensio. Whither I am going?—To Baptista Minola.

I promis'd to enquire carefully
About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca:
And, by good fortune, I have lighted well
On this young man; for learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn; well read in poetry,
And other books,—good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'Tis well: and I have met a gentleman
Hath promis'd me to help me to another,
A fine musician to instruct our mistress;
So shall I no whit be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gre. Belov'd of me,—and that my deeds shall prove.

Gre. [Aside.] And that his bags shall prove.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our
love:

Listen to me; and if you speak me fair,
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to woo earnest Katharine,
Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gre. So said, so done, is well:—

Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold:

If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.

Gre. No, say'st me so, friend! What countryman!

Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me;
And I do hope good days and long to see.

Gre. O sir, such a life, with such a wife,
were strange;

But if you have a stomach, to't o' God's name:
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you woo this wild cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gre. Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?

Think you a little din can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
Rage like an angry bear chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,
And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitched battle heard Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?

And do you tell me of a woman's tongue;
That gives not half so great a blow to hear,
As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.

Gre. [Aside.]

For he fears none.

Gre. Hortensio, hark:

This gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My mind presumes, for his own good.

Hor. I promis'd we would be
And bear his charge of wooing, which

Gre. And so we will,—provided he
her.

Gre. [Aside.] I would I were at good dinner.

Enter Tranio, bravely apparel'd.
Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save you;
be bold,

Tell me, I beseech you, which is the
To the house of signior Baptista Minola?

Bion. He that has the two fair daughters —[To Tranio] is't he you mean?

Tra. Even he, Biondello.

Gre. Hark you, sir; you mean

Tra. Perhaps him and her, sir;
you to do?

Pet. Not her that chides, sir;
I pray.

Tra. I love no chiders, sir.—Exit
Luc. [Aside.] Well begun, Tranio!

Hor. Sir, a word ere
Are you a suitor to the maid you or no?

Tra. And if I be, sir, is it any Gre. No; if without more words get you hence.

Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not
For me as for you?

Gre. But so is not
Tra. For what reason, I beseech

Gre. For this reason, if you'll
That she's the choice love of signior

Hor. That she's the chosen of tonello.

Tra. Softly, my masters! If you
men,

Do me this right,—hear me with Baptista is a noble gentleman,

To whom my father is not all unkind;
And, were his daughter fairer than

She may more suitors have, and more Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand

Then well one more may fair Bianca
And so she shall; Lucentio shall

Though Paris came in hope to woo Gre. What, this gentleman will

all!

Luc. Sir, give him head; I know a jado.

Pet. Hortensio, to what end
Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as Did you yet ever see Baptista's

Tra. No, sir; but hear I do

The one as famous for a scolding tongue
As is the other for beautiful manners

Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me; I Gre. Yea, leave that labour to cules;

And let it be more than Alcides' labours

Sir, understand you this of me, in youth;
 youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
 father keeps from all access of suitors;
 will not promise her to any man
 the elder sister first be wed:
 younger then is free, and not before.
 If it be so, sir, that you are the man
 I stand in all, and me among the rest;
 if you break the ice, and do this feat,
 leave the elder, not the younger free our access,—whose hap shall be to have
 her,
 not so graceless be, to be ingrate.
 Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;
 since you do profess to be a suitor,
 must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,
 whom we all rest generally beholden.
 Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign whereof,
 we may contrive this afternoon,
 to spend as adversaries do in law,
 we mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
 O excellent motion! Fellows, let's be gone. [so:—
 The motion's good indeed, and be it so, I shall be your ben venuto.
 [Exit.

ACT II.

Scene I.—Padua. A Room in Baptista's
 House. Enter Katharina and Bianca.
 Kath. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong
 yourself,
 make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
 I disdain: but for these other gawds,
 and my hands, I'll pull them off myself,
 all my raiment, to my petticoat;
 what you will command me will I do,
 well I know my duty to my elders.
 Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell
 whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.
 Bianca. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive, never yet beheld that special face which I could fancy more than any other.
 Kath. Minion, thou liest: is't not Hortensio?
 Bianca. If you affect him, sister, here I swear,
 I'll head for you myself, but you shall have him.
 Kath. O then, belike, you fancy riches more:
 you will have Gremio to keep you fair.
 Bianca. Is it for him you do envy me so?
 Kath. Then you jest; and now I well perceive you have but jested with me all this while:
 I'll give you, sister Kate, untie my hands.
 Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.
 [Strikes her.
 Enter Baptista.
 Why, how now, dame! whence grows
 this insolence?

Bianca, stand aside:—poor girl! she weeps:
 Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her.
 For shame, thou hilding of a devilish spirit,
 Why dost thou wrong her that did never wrong
 thee?
 When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
 Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd. [Flies after Bianca.
 Bap. What! in my sight!—Bianca, get thee
 in. [Exit Bianca.
 Kath. What! will you not suffer me? Nay,
 now I see
 She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
 I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day,
 And, for your love to her, lead apes in hall.
 Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep,
 Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit.
 Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?
 But who comes here?
 Enter Gremio, with Lucentio in the habit of a mean man; Petruchio, with Hortensio as a Musician; and Tranio, with Biondello bearing a lute and books.
 Gre. Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista.
 Bap. Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio.—
 God save you, gentlemen!
 Pet. And you, good sir. Pray, have you not a daughter
 Call'd Katharina, fair and virtuous?
 Bap. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katharina.
 Gre. You are too blunt: go to it orderly.
 Pet. You wrong me, signior Gremio: give me leave.
 I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,
 That,—hearing of her beauty and her wit,
 Her affability and bashful modesty,
 Her wondrous qualities and mild behaviour,
 Am bold to show myself a forward guest Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
 Of that report which I so oft have heard.
 And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
 I do present you with a man of mine, [Presenting Hortensio.
 Cunning in music and the mathematics,
 To instruct her fully in those sciences,
 Whereof I know she is not ignorant:
 Accept of him, or else you do me wrong:
 His name is Licio, born in Mantua.
 Bap. You're welcome, sir: and he, for your good sake.
 But for my daughter Katharine,—this I know,
 She is not for your turn, the more my grief.
 Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her,
 Or else you like not of my company.
 Bap. Mistake me not; I speak but as I find.
 Whence are you, sir? what may I call your
 name?
 Pet. Petruchio is my name; Antonio's son,
 A man well known throughout all Italy.
 Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.
 Gre. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,

That you shall be my wife; your dowry
'greed on;

And, will you nil you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn:
For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
(Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,) Thou must be married to no man but me:
For I am he am born to tame you, Kate;
And bring you from a wild Cat to a Kate
Conformable, as other household Kates.
Here comes your father; never make denial;
I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio.

Bap. Now, signior Petruccio, how speed you with my daughter?

Pet. How but well, sir? how but well!

Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine! in your dumps?

Kath. Call you me daughter? now, I promise you,

You have show'd a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half lunatic;

A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, 'tis thus:—yourself and all the world,

That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her:
If she be curst, it is for policy,

For she's not froward, but modest as the dove;
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;

For patience she will prove a second Grissel,
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity:

And to conclude,—we have 'greed so well together,

That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.

Kath. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.

Gre. Hark, Petruccio; she says she'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then, good night our part!

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself:

If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd twixt us twain, being alone,

That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe

How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!
She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss

She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.

O, you are novices! 'tis a world to see,
How tame, when men and women are alone,

A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew.
Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice,

To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day.
Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;

I will be sure my Katharine shall be fine.

Bap. I knew not what to say: but give me your hands.

God send you joy, Petruccio! 'tis a match.

Gre. Tra. Amen, say we: we will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu;

I will to Venice; Sunday comes
We will have rings, and things, and

And, kiss me, Kate, we will be Sunday.

[Exeunt Petruccio and Katharine.]
Gre. Was ever match clapp'd so soon?

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I

chant's part,
And venture madly on a desperate

Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay
you:

'Twill bring you gain, or perish
Bap. The gain I seek is quiet

Gre. No doubt but he hath got a
But now, Baptista, to your young

Now is the day we long have look'd
I am your neighbour, and was

Tra. And I am one that loves Than words can witness, or your guess.

Gre. Youngling, thou canst not

Tra. Grey-beard, thy love doth
Gre. But thou

Skipper, stand back: 'tis age that Tra. But youth in ladies' eyes eth.

Bap. Content you, gentlemen;

'Tis deeds must win the prize; and
That can assure my daughter

Shall have my Bianca's love.
Say, signior Gremio, what can you

Gre. First, as you know, my the city

Is richly furnish'd with plate and Basins and ewers, to lave her dainty

My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry
In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my

In cypress chests my arras, counterpane,
Costly apparel, tents, and canopies

Fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with Valance of Venice gold in needlework

Pewter and brass, and all things
To house or housekeeping: there

I have a hundred milch-kine to Six score fat oxen standing in my

And all things answerable to this Myself am struck in years, I must

And if I die to-morrow, this is
If whilst I live she will be only

Tra. That "only" came well
to me:

I am my father's heir and only
If I may have your daughter to my

I'll leave her houses three or four Within rich Pisa walls, as any one

Old signior Gremio has in Padua
Besides two thousand ducats by

Of fruitful land, all of which jointure.

What, have I pinch'd you, signior
Gre. Two thousand ducats

land!
My land amounts not to so much as she shall have; besides an argosy

now is lying in Marseilles' road.—

Tra. Gremio, 'tis known, my father hath no less

three great argosies: besides two galand twelve light galleys: these I will assure

her
twice as much, what'er thou offer'st

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all,—I have no
more:

and she can have no more than all I have:—
Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world,

your firm promise: Gremio is out-vied.

Gre. I must confess your offer is the best;
let your father make her the assurance,

is your own; also, you must pardon me:
you should do before him, where's her

dower?
Tra. That's but a cavil: he is old, I young.

Gre. And may not young men die, as well as old?

Tra. Well, gentlemen,
thus receiv'd:—on Sunday next, you

know,
daughter Katharine is to be married:

on the Sunday following, shall Bianca be wed to you, if you make this assurance;

and to signior Gremio:
I take my leave, and thank you both.

Tra. Adieu, good neighbour. [Exit Bap.]
—Now I fear thee not:

ere thou art all, and in his waning age get under thy table. Tut, a toy!

old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy.

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wither'd
I have faced it with a card of ten. [Hide!]

is in my head to do my master good:— no reason, but suppos'd Lusentio get a father, call'd—suppos'd Vincentio that's a wonder: fathers, commonly,

get their children; but in this case of wedding,

child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning.

[Exit.]

ACT III.

Scene I.—Padua. A Room in Baptista's
House.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Eddid, forbear; you grow too forward, sir:

you so soon forgot the entertainment of Katharine welcome'd you withal?

But, wrangling pedant, this is patronage of heav'nly harmony:

to give me leave to have prerogative;
when in music we have spent an hour,

our lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!

Was it not to refresh the mind of man,
After his studies, or his usual pain?

Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine. [Wrong.]

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double
To strive for that which resteth in my choice:

I am no breaching scholar in the schools;
I'll not be tied to hours nor 'pointed times,

But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:—

Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
His lecture will be done, ere you have tun'd.

Hor. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune? [Hortensio retires.]

Luc. That will be never:—tune your instru-Bian. Where left we last? [ment.]

Luc. Here, madam:—
Hac ibat Simois; hic est Sigeia tellus;

Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.
Bian. Construe them.

Luc. Hac ibat, as I told you before,—Si- mois, I am Lucentio,—hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa,—Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your love;—Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing,—Priami, is my man Tranio,—regia, bearing my port,—celsa

senis, that we might beguile the old panta-loon.

Hor. [Coming forward.] Madam, my in-strument's in tune.

Bian. Let's hear,—[Hortensio plays.] O fie!
the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.
Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it:

—Hac ibat Simois, I know you not,—hic est
Sigeia tellus, I trust you not;—Hic steterat

Priami, take heed he hear us not,—regia, presume not;—celsa senis, despair not.

Hor. Madam, 'tis now in tune.
Luc. All but the base.

Hor. The base is right; 'tis the base knave that jars.

How fiery and forward our pedant is!
[Aside.] Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love:

Palascole, I'll watch you better yet.

Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
Luc. Mistrust it not: for, sure, Æacides

Was Ajax,—call'd so from his grandfather.
Bian. I must believe my master; else, I promise you,

I should be arguing still upon that doubt:

But let it rest.—Now, Lucio, to you:—
Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray,

That I have been thus pleasant with you both.
Hor. [To Lucentio.] You may go walk,

and give me leave awhile:
My lessons make us music in three parts.

Luc. Are you so formal, sir? [Aside.] Well,
I must wait.

And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv'd,
Our fine musician groweth amorous.

Hor. Madam, before you touch the instru-
To learn the order of my fingering, [ment,
I must begin with rudiments of art;
To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade;
And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bian. [Reads.]

"Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,
A re, to plead Hortensio's passion;
B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord,
C fa ut, that loves with all affection;
D sol re, one cliff, two notes have I;
E la mi, show pity, or I die."

Call you this gamut? tut! I like it not:
Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice,
To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,

And help to dress your sister's chamber up;
You know, to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters both; I must be gone.

[Exeunt Bianca and Servant.]

Luc. 'Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay. [Exit.]

Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pendant: [love:]

Metheinks he looks as though he were in Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so numble,
To cast thy wand'ring eyes on every stale,
Seize thee that list; if once I had thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Padua, Before Baptista's House.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katharina, Bianca, Lucentio, and Attendants.

Bap. [To Tranio.] Signior Lucentio, this is the 'pointed day

That Katharine and Petruchio should be mar-
And yet we hear not of our son-in-law. [ried,
What will be said? what mockery will it be,
To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends

To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage!
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be fore'd

To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart,
Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen;
Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at le-
I told you, I, he was a frantic fool, [sure,
Milding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour;
And, to be noted for a merry man, [riage,
He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of mar-
Make friends invited, and proclaim the banns;
Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd.
Now must the world point out poor Katharine,

And say,—"Lo, there is maid Petruchio,
If it would please him come and woo."

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, tista too.

Upon my life, Petruchio means but Whatever fortune stays him from his Though he be blunt, I know him for Though he be blunt, yet withal he Kath. Would Katharine had not him though!

[Exit weeping, followed by Bianca.]

Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee weep;

For such an injury would vex a very Much more a shrew of thy impatient Enter Bloodello.

Bian. Master, master! news! news!
such news as you never heard of!

Bap. Is it new and old too? how say Bian. Why, is it not news to hear chio's coming?

Bap. Is he come!

Bian. Why, no, sir.

Bap. What then?

Bian. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bian. When he stands where I sees you there.

Tra. But, say, what—to think old

Bian. Why, Petruchio is coming, bat and an old jerkin; a pair of old thrice turned; a pair of boots that candle-cases, one buckled, another old rusty sword 'gainst out of the tower with a broken hilt, and chaplains broken points; his horse hippled, mothy saddle, and stirrups of no use sides, possessed with the glanders;
mose in the chine; troubled with the infected with the fashions, full of sped with spavins, railed with the cure of the flies, stark spoiled with gers, begnawn with the bots, swag-back, and shoulder-shotten; near-fore, and with a half-checked bit, and stall of sheep's leather, which, being to keep him from stumbling, backburst, and now repaired with knots six times pieced, and a woman's velure, which hath two letters for fairly set down in studs, and here and pieced with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bian. O, sir, his lackey, for all caparisoned like the horse; with a on one leg, and a kersey hood on other, gartered with a red and blue old hat, and the "Humour of Jove" pricked in't for a feather; a monstrous monster in apparel; and not like a toothboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Tra. 'Tis some odd humour pricked
this fashion;

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparel

Bap. I am glad he is come, howsoever he Bian. Why, sir, he comes not. [comes.]

Bap. Didst thou not say, he comes?

Bian. Why? that Petruchio came?

Bap. Ay, that Petruchio came.

Bian. No, sir; I say his horse comes, with on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one.

Bian. Nay, by Saint Jany, I hold you a house and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Gremio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who
Bap. You are welcome, sir. [Is at home?]

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Pet. Not so well apparell'd,

I wish you were,

Bap. Were it better, I should rush in thus.

Pet. But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride—

Bian. [Brown:] How does my father?—Gentles, methinks you and wherein gaze this goodly company,
as if they saw some wondrous monument,
some comet, or unusual prodigy? [singing day:]

Bap. Why, sir, you know this is your wedding sabbath, that you come so unprovided;

do not this habit, shame to your estate,
as a witness to our solemn festival!

Tra. And tell us, what occasion of import
And sent you hither so unlike yourself?

Pet. Tedium it were to tell, and harsh to tongue in some part enforced to digress;

Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse
as you shall well be satisfied withal.

Bap. The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church.

Tra. See not your bride in these unbecoming robes:

Pet. Go to my chamber; put on clothes of mine.

Bap. Not I, believe me: thus I'll visit her.

Pet. But thus, I trust, you will not marry
her.

Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore have done with words:

To us she's married, not unto my clothes:

As I can change these poor accoutrements,
so may you well for Kate, and better for myself.

What a fool am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good-morrow to my bride,

And end the title with a lovely kiss!

[Exeunt Petruchio, Gremio, and Bianca.]

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attitude, but he is better ere he go to church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this.

Tra. But, sir, to love concerneth us to add the father's liking: which to bring to pass,
As I before imparted to your worship,

I am to get a man,—what'er he be,
It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn,—
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa;
And make assurance, here in Padua,
Of greater sums than I have promised.
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster

Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,
'Twere good, methinks, to steal our marriage;

Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,
I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business:

We'll over-reach the grey-beard, Gremio,
The narrow-prying father, Minola,

The quaint musician, amorous Micio;
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Re-enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride, and bridegroom, coming home?

Gre. A bridegroom say you? 'Tis a groom
indeed,

A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.
Tra. Curster than she? why, 'tis impossible.

Gre. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very devil.
Tra. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gre. Tut, she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him!
I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: when the priest

Should ask if Katharine should be his wife,
"Ay, by gods-wounds!" quoth he; and swore so loud

That all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book;
And, as he stoop'd again to take it up,
The mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff,

That down fell priest and book, and book and priest:

"Now take them up," quoth he, "if any list."
Tra. What said the wench when he arose again? [stamp and swore,

Gre. Trembled and shook; for why, he
As if the vicar meant to cozen him.

But after many ceremonies done, [as if He calls for wine: "A health!" quoth he;
He had been aboard, carousing to his mates

After a storm; quaff'd off the muscadell,
And threw the sops all in the sexton's face;
Having no other reason

But that his beard grew thin and hangy,
And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.

This done, he took the bride about the neck,
And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous
smack,

That, at the parting, all the church did echo;
And I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;

And after me, I know, the rout is coming.
Such a mad marriage never was before:

Hark, hark! I hear the minstrel's play. [Music.]

Re-enter Petruchio, Katharina, Bianca, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and train.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains :

I know you think to dine with me to-day,
And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer ;

But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible you will away to-night ?

Pet. I must away to-day before night come :
Make it no wonder ; if you knew my business,
You would entreat me rather go than stay.

And, honest company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away myself

To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife :
Dine with my father, drink a health to me ;

For I must hence ; and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gra. Let me entreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kath. Let me entreat you,

Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay ?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay ;
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse !

Gru. Ay, sir, they be ready : the oats have Kath. Nay, then, [eaten the horses.

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day ;

No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself.

The door is open, sir : there lies your way ;

You may be jogging whiles your boots are green ;

For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself :

'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,

That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Pet. O Kate, content thee ; prythee, be not angry. [do]

Kath. I will be angry : what hast thou to Father, be quiet : he shall stay my leisure.

Gra. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal
I see, a woman may be made a fool, [dinner ;
If she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command, —

Obey the bride, you that attend on her ;

Go to the feast, revel and domineer,

Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,

Be mad and merry, — or go hang yourselves :

But for my bonny Kate, she must with me.

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret,

I will be master of what is mine own :

She is my goods, my chattels ; she is my house,

My household-stuff, my field, my barn,

My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything ;

And here she stands, touch her whoever dare ;

I'll bring mine action on the proudest he

That stops my way in Padua. — Grumio,

Draw forth thy weapon, we're beset with thieves :

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.
Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not thee, Kate :

I'll buckler thee against a million.
[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of ones.

Gra. Went they not quickly, I

Tra. Of all mad matches never was

Luc. Mistress, what's your opinion of sister ?

Bion. That, being mad herself, she

Gra. I warrant him, Petruchio is

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though and bridegroom wants

For to supply the places at the table.

You know there wants no junkets in the Lucentio, you shall supply the bride

And let Bianca take her sister's room.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practice bride it ?

Bap. She shall, Lucentio. — Come men, let's go.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — A Hall in Petruchio's
House.

Enter Grumio.

Gru. Fle, fle, on all tired ladies, no masters, and all foul ways ! Was ever beaten ? was ever man so rayed ?

man so weary ? I am sent before to fire, and they are coming after to

Now, were not I a little pot, and some very lips might freeze to my teeth, my

to the roof of my mouth, my head belly, ere I should come by a fire to but I, with blowing the fire, shall warm for, considering the weather, a taller

I will take cold. Holla, ho ! Curtis !

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly ?

Gru. A piece of ice : if thou dost mayst slide from my shoulder to my no greater a run but my head and

A fire, good Curtis.

Curt. Is my master and his wife

Grumio ?

Gru. O, ay, Curtis, ay : and thou fire ; cast on no water.

Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as Gru. She was, good Curtis, before but, thou knowest, winter tames man, and beast ; for it hath tamed my old and my new mistress, and myself, follow

Curt. Away, you three-inch fool !

beast.

Gru. Am I but three inches ? why, thou is a foot : and so long am I at the wilt thou make a fire, or shall I thee to our mistress, whose hand

now at hand thou shalt soon feel, to comfort, for being slow in thy hot

Curt. I prytheu, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Gru. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and therefore, fire: do thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Curt. There's fire ready; and therefore, good Grumio, the news?

Gru. Why, "Jack, boy! ho, boy!" and as much news as thou wilt.

Curt. Come, you are so full of cony-catch-lug!

Gru. Why therefore, fire; for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimm'd, rushes strew'd, kitchen swept; the serving-men in their new livery, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the Jacks fair within, the Jills fair without, and carpets laid, and everything in order?

Curt. All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news?

Gru. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

Curt. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

Curt. Let's hear't, good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

Curt. [Striking him.] There.

Gru. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Curt. And therefore it is called a sensible tale; and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin:

Gru. Impromptu, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress:—

Curt. Both of one horse?

Gru. What's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.

Gru. Tell thou the tale:—but hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard, in how miry a place;

how she was bemolded; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he bent me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore;

how she prayed—that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how

—with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unpunished to thy grave.

Curt. By this reckoning, he is more shrew of you all shall find, when he comes home.

Gru. Ay; and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find, when he comes home.

But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarop, and the rest: let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit: let them court'sy with their left legs; and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail, till they kiss their hands.

Are they all ready?

Curt. They are. Gru. Call them forth. Curt. Do you hear? ho, you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.

Gru. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curt. Who knows not that?

Gru. Thou, it seems, that callest for company to countenance her.

Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

Gru. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several Servants.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio!

Phil. How now, Grumio!

Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Fellow Grumio!

Nath. How now, old lad?

Gru. Welcome, you;—how now, you;—what, you;—fellow, you;—and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready. How near is our master?

Gru. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not,—Cock's passion, silence!—I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Katharina.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What, no man at door,

To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse? Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?

All Serv. Here, here, sir; here, sir. [sir!]

Pet. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, You logger-headed and unpollish'd grooms!

What, no attendance! no regard! no duty! Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Gru. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant swain! you whorson malt-horse drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park, And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?

Gru. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made, [sneel;]

And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd! the There was no link to colour Peter's hat,

And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:

There were none fine but Adam, Ralph, and Gregory;

The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly;

Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you. [in.—]

Pet. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper [Re-enter some of the Servants.]

[Sings] "Where is the life that late I led"—Where are those—I sit down, Kate, and wel-

Soud, soud, soud, soud! [come.—]

Re-enter Servants with supper.

Why, when, I say?—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.—[when]

Off with my boots, you rogues! you villains, [Sings] "It was the friar of orders grey,

As he forth walked on his way:—"

Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry; [Strikes him.]

He does it under name of perfect love;
As who should say, if I should sleep, or eat,
'Twere deadly sickness, or else present death.—
I pry thee go, and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Gru. What say you to a neat's foot?
Kath. 'Tis passing good: I pry thee let me have it.

Gru. I fear it is too choleric a meat.
How may you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd?

Kath. I like it well: good Grunio, fetch it.
Gru. I cannot tell; I fear 'tis choleric. [Exit.]

What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?
Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Gru. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.
Kath. Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.

Gru. Nay, then I will not: you shall have Or else you get no beef of Grunio.

Kath. Then both, or one, or anything thou wilt.

Gru. Why then, the mustard without the Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false doluding slave, [Beats him.]

Thou feed'st me with the very name of meat:
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio with a dish of meat; and Hortensio.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting,
Hor. Mistress, what cheer? [all amot.]

Kath. Faith, as cold as can be,
Pet. Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me.

Here, love; thou seest how diligent I am,
To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee:

[Sets the dish on a table.]
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.

[not;]
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.—
Here, take away this dish.

Kath. I pray you, let it stand.
Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks;

And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.
Kath. I thank you, sir. [blame.]

Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to Come, mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. [Aside.] Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.—

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kate, eat apace:—and now, my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house,
And reveal it as bravely as the best,

With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and
things;

With scarfs, and fans, and double change of
With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.

[Reisure;]
What, hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy
To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments
Lay forth the gown.—[Enter Hortensio.]

What news with you, sir?
Hab. Here is the cap your worship

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a
A velvet dish:—fie, fie! 'tis lewd and Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut shell,
A knuckle, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap!

Away with it! come, let me have a Kath. I'll have no bigger: this does
time,

And gentlewomen wear such caps as this
Pet. When you are gentle, you
And not till then.

Hor. [Aside.] That will not be Kath. Why, sir, I trust I may have speak:

And speak I will; I am no child, no
Your betters have endur'd me say my
And if you cannot, best you stop your My tongue will tell the anger of my Or else my heart, concealing it, will
And rather than it shall, I will be Even to the uttermost, as I please, to Pret. Why, thou say'st true; it is a
A custard-collin, a hawke, a silken
I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it.

Kath. Love me or love me not, I cap;

And it I will have, or I will have none.
Pet. Thy gown? why, ay;—come,
let us see't.

O mercy, God! what masking stuff is What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a damask
What! up and down, car'd like a tart!

Here's snip, and nip, and cut, and
Like to a censer in a barber's shop.
Why, what, o' devil's name, tailor, call Hort. [Aside.] I see, she's like to have cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly
According to the fashion and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did; but if you had
I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go, hop me over every kennel home,
For you shall hop without my custom.
I'll none of it: hence! make your Kath. I never saw a better-fashion'd More quaint, more pleasing, nor more mendable:

Belike you mean to make a puppet of Pet. Why, true; he means to make a pet of thee.

Tai. She says your worship means a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou thou thread,

Thou thimble,
Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard,
Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter-cricketer, Brav'd in mine own house with a thread!

say! thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant;
Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!

I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.
Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd: the gown is such as my master had direction:—[made]

Hab. I gave him no order; I gave him the tail.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be
Gru. Mary, sir, with needle and thread.
Hab. But did you not request to have it cut?
Tai. Then fast faced many things.

Gru. How not me: thou hast braved many me; leave not me: I will neither be faced nor braved. I say unto thee,—I bid thy husband cut the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces; ergo, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion
[to testify.]
Gru. The note lies in's throat, if he say I said so.

Tai. [Reads.] "Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown, sew'd in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said a gown."

Pet. Proceed.
Tai. [Reads.] "With a small-compressed cape, I confess the cape."

Tai. [Reads.] "With a trunk sleeve:—"
Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. [Reads.] "The sleeves curiously cut."—
Pet. Error! the bill, sir; error! the bill, and sew'd up again; and that I'll prove upon him, though thy little finger be armed in a double.

Tai. This is true that I say: an I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Pet. God-a-mercy, Grunio! then he shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for use.

Gru. You are in the right, sir: 'tis for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.
Gru. Villain, not for thy life: take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!

Pet. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?
Gru. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for;

Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use!
O, fie, fie, fie! [the tailor padd.]

Pet. [Aside.] Hortensio, say thou wilt see [to Tailor.] Go take it hence; he gone, and say no more.

Hor. [Aside to Tailor.] Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow:

Take no unkindness of his hasty words:
Away, I say; commend me to thy master.

[Exit Tailor and Habershasher.] Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's,

Even in these honest mean habiliments:
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor,
For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,

So honour pierceth in the meanest habit.
What, is the jay more precious than the lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the adder better than the eel,
Because his painted skin contents the eye?

O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse
For this poor furniture and mean array.
If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me;
And therefore, frolic: we will hence forthwith,
To feast and sport us at thy father's house.—
Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;
And bring our horses unto Long-lane end;
There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.—

Let's see; I think 'tis now some seven o'clock,
And well we may come there by dinner-time.

Kath. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two;
And 'twill be supper-time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven ere I go to horse:
Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,
You are still crossing it.—Sir, let's alone:
I will not go to-day; and ere I do,
It shall be what o'clock I say it is.

Hor. Why, so! this gallant will command the sun. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Padua. Before Baptista's
House.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vincentio.

Tra. Sir, this is the house: please it you, that I call?

Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceiv'd, Signior Baptista may remember me,
Near twenty years ago, in Genoa,
Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus. [case]

Tra. 'Tis well; and hold your own, in any
With such austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Ped. I warrant you. But, sir, here comes
"Twere good he were school'd. [your boy;]

Enter Bonello.

Tra. Fear you not him.—Sirrah Bonello,
Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you:
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.

Bon. Tut! fear not me. [flute]

Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Nap-Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice,

And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou'rt a tall fellow: hold thee that to drink. [Exit.]

Here comes Baptista:—Set your countenance,
Enter Baptista and Vincentio.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met.—

[To the Pedant.] Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of:

I pray you, stand good father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, son!

Sir, by your leave: having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself:
And,—for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him,—to stay him not too long,
I am content, in a good father's care, [like
To have him match'd; and,—if you please to
No worse than I,—upon some agreement,
Me shall you find ready and willing
With one consent to have her so bestow'd;
For curious I cannot be with you,
Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say:
Your plainness and your shortness please me well.

Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both dissimble deeply their affections:
And therefore, if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deal with him,
And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done:
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you, sir. Where, then, do you know best,
We be assid, and such assurance ta'en,
As shall with either part's agreement stand?

Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you
know,

Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants:
Besides, old Gramio is harkening still;
And happily we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging, as it like you:
There doth my father lie; and there, this night,
We'll pass the business privately and well.
Send for your daughter by your servant here;
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this,—that, at so slender warning,
You're like to have a thin and slender pittance.

Bap. It likes me well.—Cambio, hie you
home,

And bid Bianca make her ready straight;
And, if you will, tell what hath happened,— Lucentio's father is arrived in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Luc. I pray the gods she may with all my heart! [gone.]

Tra. Dally not with the gods, but get thee
Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?
Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer:
Come, sir; we will better it in Pisa.

Bap. I follow you.

[Recent Tranio, Pedant, and Baptista.

Bion. Cambio!—

Luc. What say'st thou, Biondello?

Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh

Luc. Biondello, what of that? [upon you]

Bion. Faith, nothing; but he here behind, to expound the meaning of his signs and tokens.

Luc. I pray thee, moralize them.

Bion. Then thus. Baptista is with the deceiving father of a deceit.

Luc. And what of him?

Bion. His daughter is to be you to the supper.

Bion. The old priest at St. Luke's at your command at all hours.

Luc. And what of all this?

Bion. I cannot tell; expect they about a counterfeit assurance; talsurance of her, cum privilegio ad dum solum; to the church;—take clerk, and some sufficient honest
If this be not what you look for, I have
to say,

But bid Bianca farewell for ever and

Luc. Hearst thou, Biondello?

Bion. I cannot tarry: I know married in an afternoon as she was garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit.
may you, sir: and so, adieu, sir. I bath appointed me to go to St. Luke's the priest be ready to come against with your appendix.

Luc. I may, and will, if she be tent:

She will be pleas'd; then wherefore
Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go
It shall go hard, if Cambio go without

SCENE V.—A public Road.
Enter Petruchio, Katharina, and

Pet. Come on, o' God's name; and toward our father's.

Good lord, how bright and goodly
moon!

Kath. The moon! the sun; it is Pet. I say it is the moon that bright.

Kath. I know it is the sun that Pet. Now, by my mother's son, and
myself,

It shall be moon, or star, or what I
Or ere I journey to your father's house

Go on, and fetch our horses back again Evermore cross'd, and cross'd; and cross'd!

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall Kath. Forward, I pray, since we so far,

And be it moon, or sun, or what you
An if you please to call it a rush candle

Henceforth, I vow, it shall be so far
Pet. I say it is the moon.

Kath. I know it is the sun
Pet. Nay, then you lie: it is the moon

Kath. Then God be bless'd, it is the sun:—

to it is not, when you say it is not ;
his moon changes, even as your mind.
You will have it nam'd, even that it is ;
O, it shall be so for Katharina. [wou.
Petruchio, go thy ways ; the field is Well, forward, forward ! thus the bowl should run,
not un luckily against the bias.—
[off] company is coming here.

Vincentio, in a travelling dress.
[Enter Vincentio.] Good-morrow, gentle mistress : where away ?—
O, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman !
war of white and red within her cheeks !
I stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,
one two eyes become that heavenly face !—
lovely maid, once more good day to thee.—
O Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.
O, 'A will make the man mad, to make a
in of him.

Oh, Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet,
her away ; or where is thy abode ?
by the parents of so fair a child ;
for the man, whom favourably stars thee for his lovely bedfellow !
t. Why, how now, Kate ! I hope thou art not mad !

is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd ;
not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.
Oh, Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes,
have been so bedazzled with the sun,
everything I look on seemeth green ;
I perceive thou art a reverend father ;
Oh, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.
Do, good old grandsire ; and withal make known

ch way thou travel'st : if along with us,
shall be joyful of thy company.
Oh, Fair sir, and you my merry mistress, with your strange encounter much amazed me,
tania is called Vincentio ; my dwelling, bound I am to Padua ; there to visit a of mine, which long I have not seen.
t. What is his name ?

Lucentio, gentle sir.
et, Happily met ; the happier for thy son.
now by law, as well as reverend age,
y entile thee my loving father :
father to my wife, this gentlewoman, son by this hath married. Wonder not,
be not griev'd : she is of good esteem,
flowery wealthy, and of worthy birth ;
less, so qualified as may bescom spouse of any noble gentleman.
to embrace with old Vincentio :
wonder we to see thy honest son,
will of thy arrival be full joyous. [sure,
s. But is this true ! or is it else your pleasant travellers, to break a jest
the company you overtake !
er. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof ;

For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.
[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Vincentio.]

Hor. Well, Petruchio, this has put me in heart.

Have to my widow ! and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Padua. Before Lucentio's House.

Enter on one side Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca ; Gramio walking on the other side.

Bion. Softly and swiftly, sir ; for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fly, Biondello ; but they may chance to need thee at home ; therefore leave us.

Bion. Nay, faith, I'll see the church o' your back ; and then come back to my master as soon as I can.

[Exeunt Lucentio, Bianca, and Biondello.]

Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, Vincentio, and Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house : [place ;

My father's bears more toward the market-
Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before
you go :

I think I shall command your welcome here,
And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward.

[Knocks.

Gre. They're busy within ; you were best knock louder.

Enter Pedant above, at a window.

Ped. What's he, that knocks as he would beat down the gate ?

Vin. Is signior Lucentio within, sir ?

Ped. He's within, sir ; but not to be spoken
withal.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal ?

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself :
he shall need none, so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir !—to leave frivolous circumstances,—I pray you, tell sig-nior Lucentio, that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with
him.

Ped. Thou liest : his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father ?

Ped. Ay, sir ; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Pet. [To Vincen.] Why, how now, gentleman ! why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain. I believe, 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together: God send 'em good shipping!—But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio! now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. [Seeing Bion.] Come hither, crack-Bion. I hope I may choose, sir. [Lump.]

Vin. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you! no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir: see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so, indeed? [Beats Biondello.]

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me. [Exit.]

Pet. Help, son! help, signior Baptista!

[Exit from the window.]

Pet. Pr'ythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.]

Re-enter Pedant below; Baptista, Tranio, and Servants.

Tran. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, sir! nay, what are you, sir!—O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a coplain hat!—O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tran. How now! what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatic?

Tran. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why, sir, what 'eruns it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! O villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir, you mistake, sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name! as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Pet. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! O, he hath murdered his master! Lay hold on him, I charge you in the duke's name.—O my son, my son!—tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tran. Call forth an officer.

Enter one with an Officer.

Carry this mad knave to the jail.—Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Vin. Carry me to the jail!

Gre. Stay, officer: he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, signior Gremio: I shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, signior Baptista: he cony-catched in this business: I am this is the right Vincentio.

Pet. Swear, if thou dar'st.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tran. Then thou wert best say, I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard! to prison!

Vin. Thus strangers may be deceived!

Re-enter Biondello, with Lucentio and Bianca.

Bion. O, we are spoiled and—your grace deny him, forswear him, or else we are undone.

Luc. [Kneeling.] Pardon, sweet father, lives my own life.

Vin. [Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant.]

Bian. [Kneeling.] Pardon, dear father.

Bap. How hast thou come to this?

Where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio.

Right son to the right Vincentio!

That have by marriage made thy daughter.

While counterfeit supposes bleed'd thee.

Gre. Here's packing, with a witness, deceive us all!

Vin. Where is that damned villain?

That fac'd and brav'd me in this market.

Bap. Why, tell me, is not this my son?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles.

Love

Made me exchange my state with you.

While he did bear my countenance in the jail.

And happily I have arriv'd at last

Unto the wish'd haven of my life.

What Tranio did, myself entor'd him.

Then pardon him, sweet father, for

Have sent me to the jail.

Bap. [To Lucentio.] But do you have you married my daughter without my good-will?

Vin. Fear not, Baptista! we will you, go to; but I will in, to be revenged on this villainy.

Bap. And I, to sound the death-knavery.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; they are not frown. [Exit.]

Gre. My cake is dough; but I'll knead the rest;

Out of hope of all, but my share of it.

Petruchio and Katharina advance.

Kath. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Pet. First kiss me, Kate, and we will follow.

Kath. What, in the midst of the day?

Pet. What, art thou ashamed of me?

Kath. No, sir, God forbid; but ashamed to kiss.

Pet. Why then, let's home again.—Come, sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now pray thee, love, stay.

Pet. Is not this well?—Come, my sweet Kate; I'll be once than never, for never too late.

[Exit.]

Scene II.—A Room in Lucentio's House.

Bianca set out. Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio, and Widow. Tranio, Biondello, Gremio, and others, attending.

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree:

And thus it is, when raging war is done,

And thus Bianca, bid my father welcome,

And I, with self-same kindness welcome

him.

Other Petruchio,—sister Katharina,—

And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,—

Meet with the best, and welcome to my house:

For our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down;

For now we sit to chat, as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!

Bap. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.

Bor. For both our sakes, I would that word were true.

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow. Then never trust me, if I be afeared.

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you mean, Hortensio is afeared of you.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Kath. Roundly replied.

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceive by me!—How likes Hortensio that?

Bor. My widow says, thus she conceives

Pet. Very well mended.—Kiss him for that.

Kath. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round:

Pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,

Meaning my husband's sorrow by his woe:

And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Pet. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Bor. To her, widow!

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.

Pet. Spoke like an officer:—Ha! to thee, lad. [Drinks to Hortensio.]

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gre. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.

Bion. Head and butt! a fusty-witted body would say your head and butt were head and horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd

Bian. Ay, but not frighted me; therefore I'll sleep again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not: since you have begun,

Have at you for a bitter jest or two. [Lump.]

Bion. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my

And then pursue me as you draw your bow.—

You are welcome all.

[Exit Bianca, Katharina, and Widow.]

Pet. She hath prevented me.—Here, signior Tranio;

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,

Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tran. O sir, Lucentio slipp'd me like his greyhound,

Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift simile, but something curriah.

Tran. 'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself:

'Tis thought your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess; and, as the jest did glance away from me,

'Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio, I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say no; and therefore, for assurance,

Let's each one send unto his wife;

And he whose wife is most obedient

To come at first when he doth send for her,

Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content. What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns!

I'll venture so much on my hawk or hound,

But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Pet. A match! 'tis done.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I.—

Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.

Bion. I go. [Exit.]

Bap. Son, I will be your half, Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter Biondello.

How now! what news?

Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word

That she is busy, and she cannot come.

Pet. How! she is busy, and she cannot
Is that an answer? [come!]

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:
Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Pet. I hope, better. [wife]

Hor. Sirrah Biondello, go and entreat my
To come to me forthwith. [Exit Biondello.]

Pet. O ho! entreat her!
Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, sir,
Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter Biondello.
Now, where's my wife?

Bion. She says you have some goodly jest
in hand:

She will not come; she bids you come to her.

Pet. Worse and worse; she will not come!

O vile,

Intolerable, not to be endur'd!—

Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress; say,
I command her to come to me. [Exit Grumio.]

Hor. I know her answer. Pet. What?

Hor. She will not.

Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina!

Re-enter Katharina.
Kath. What is your will, sir, that you send for me?

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's
wife?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Pet. Go, fetch them hither: if they deny to come,

Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands:

Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

[Exit Katharina.]
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,

An awful rule, and right supremacy;
And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.

Bap. Now, fair befall thee, good Petruchio!
The wager thou hast won; and I will add
Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns;
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter Katharina, with Bianca and Widow.
See, where she comes, and brings your fro-
ward wives,

As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.
Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not:
Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

[Katharina pulls off her cap, and throws
it down.]

Wid. Lord! let me never have a sigh,

Till I be brought to such a silly mood.

Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty is this?

Luc. I would your duty were as light
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,

Hath cost me a hundred crowns already
time.

Bian. The more fool you, for loving Pet. Katharine, I charge thee, be head-strong women

What duty they do owe their lords
bands.

Wid. Come, come, you're making will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall:—and first begin
her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknit that throat kind brow;

And dart not scornful glances from
eyes,

To wound thy lord, thy king, thy father;
It blots thy beauty, as frosts bite the Countdowns thy fame, as whirlwinds sweep buds;

And in no sense is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd is like a fountain over-
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy Thy head, thy sovereign; one that shall
thee,

And for thy maintenance; committed
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure safe;

And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience.
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband.
And when she's froward, peevish, sultry,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?
I am asham'd that women are so simple,
To offer war, where they should
peace;

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and Unapt to toil and trouble in the world?
But that our soft conditions, and our Should well agree with our external
Come, come, you froward and unconstant
My mind hath been as big as one of My heart as great, my reason, happy
To bandy word for word, and frown for
But now I see our lances are but straw.

our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,—

that seeming to be most, which we least are.

Then veil your stomachs, for it is no boot;
And place your hands below your husband's in token of which duty, if he please, [foot:]

My hand is ready, if he please, [foot:]
Pet. Why, there's a wench!—Come on, and kiss me, Kate.

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thou shalt ha't.

Fin. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are [toward.]

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are froward.

Pet. Come, Kate, we'll to bed.—
We three are married, but you two are sped.

'Twas I won the wager, [To Lucentio.] though you hit the white;

And, being a winner, God give you good night!
[Exit Petruchio and Kath.]

Hor. Now, go thy ways; thou hast tam'd a curst shrew.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so. [Exit.]

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King of France.
 Duke of Florence.
 Bertram, Count of Rousillon.
 Lafau, an old Lord.
 Parolles, a follower of Bertram.
 Several young French Lords, who serve with Bertram in the Florentine war.
 Steward, Clown, and Page to the Countess of Rousillon.
 Countess of Rousillon, Mother to Bertram.

Helena, a Gentlewoman
 Countess.
 A Widow of Florence.
 Diana, Daughter to the Widow.
 Violenta, Neighbours and Friends.
 Mariana, Widow.
 Lords, Officers, Soldiers, &c., Florentine.

SCENE,—Partly in France and partly in Tuscany.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Bertram, the Countess of Rousillon,
 Helena, and Lafau.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew: but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam;—you, sir, a father: he that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you; whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope; and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father, (O, that "had!" how sad a passage
 'tis!) whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of,
 madam?

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so,— Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, madam:
 the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mournfully: he was skilled have lived still, if knowledge could against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not noted this gentlewoman the daughter of Narbon?

 Count. His sole child, my lord, queathed to my overlooking.
 hopes of her good that her misers: her dispositions she takes make fair gifts fairer; for whose mind carries virtuous qualities, commendations go with pity,—they are traitors too; in her they are the their simpleness; she derives her achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brace season her praise in. The reason her father never approaches her tyranny of her sorrows takes all from her cheek. No more of this, Helena, no more; lest it be rather thought a sorrow, than to have.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow, to have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the dead; excessive grief the living.

Hel. If the living be enu-
 the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your love.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram, creed thy father
 In manners, as in shape! thy blood

Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms,
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he—
I know not what he shall:—God send him
well!

The court's a learning-place;—and he is one—

Par. What one, i' faith!

Hel. That I wish well.—'Tis pity—

Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born,
Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And show what we alone must think; which Returns us thanks. [never Enter a Page.

Page. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you. [Exit.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars have so kept you under,
that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you

Par. That's for advantage. [light.

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety: but the composition, that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Par. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee acutely. I will return perfect courtesy; in the which, my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends: get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so farewell. [Exit.

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only, doth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it which mounts my love so

high;
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those [pose
That weigh their pains in sense; and do sup-
What hath been cannot be: who ever strove
To show her merit, that did miss her love!
The king's disease,—my project may deceive
me,

But my intents are fix'd, and will not leave me,

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the King with letters; Lords and others.

King. The Florentines and some
th' ears;

Have fought with equal fortune,
A braving war.

1 Lord. So 'tis reported,
King. Nay, 'tis most credible.

A certainty, you'd from our court
With caution, that the Florentines

For speedy aid; wherein our danger Prejudicates the business, and would

To have us make denial. His love

1 Lord. Approv'd so to your majesty, most For amplest credence.

King. He hath arm'd
And Florence is denied before him.

Yet, for our gentlemen that meet
The Tuscan service, freely have they

To stand on either part. It will 2 Lord. A nursery to our gentry, who are

For breathing and exploit. What's to be King. Enter Bertram, Lafew, and others.

1 Lord. It is the countess's Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st the Frank nature, rather curious than Hath well compos'd thee. Thy parts

Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome

Der. My thanks and duty to your King. I would I had that com-ness now,

As when thy father and myself
First tried our soldiership! He

Into the service of the time, and Disciplin'd of the bravest: he

But on us both did haggish
And wore us out of act. It

To talk of your good father. He

He had the wit, which I can well
To-day in our young lords; but

Till their own scorn return to them
Ere they can hide their levity

So like a courtier: contempt
Were in his pride, or sharpness

His equal had awak'd them; and Clock to itself, knew the true

Exception bid him speak, and at His tongue obey'd his hand: who

He us'd as creatures of another
And bow'd his eminent top to Making them proud of his humbling

In their poor praise he humbled

Might be a copy to these younger Which, follow'd well, would

But goes backward. His good

Der. His good richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb:

So in approval lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech.

King. Would I were with him! He would I hear him now; his plaintive words grow there, and to bear.)—"Let me not live!"

That his good melancholy oft began,
On this catastrophe and heel of passion,

When I was out,—"Let me not live," quoth he,
"I'll not live, I'll not live, I'll not live,"

Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses are

are
of their garments: whose con-after him, do after him wish too,

I nor was nor honey can bring home,
to give some labourers room.

1 Lord. You are lov'd, sir;
That, at least lend it you, shall lack you

King. I fill a place, I know't.—How long was the physician at your father's died?

Der. Some six months since, my lord.

King. If he were living, I would try him
With several applications:—nature and sickness

at their leisure. Welcome, count;

My son's no dearer.

Thank your majesty.

[Exit. Flourish.

SCENE III.—Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Countess. Steward, and Clown.

Countess. I will now hear: what say you of this woman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the modesty of my past endeavours; for then we of our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we Countess.

Countess. What does this knave here? Get you
I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness, that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to Countess.

Countess. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Countess. 'Tis not so well, that I am
a poor fellow.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In Isabel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage: and I think I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue of my body; for they say, bairns are blessings.

Count. Tell me the reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go, that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature,
as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed,
I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage,—sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thy enemies, knave.

Clo. You are shallow, madam, in great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me, which I am a-weary of. He that ears my land spares my team, and gives me leave to inn the crop; if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge: he that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes
my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood;

he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend:
ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are,
there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poyssam the papist, howsome'er their hearts are sear'd in religion, their heads are both one,—they may jowl horns together, like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Will thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find;

Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

Count. Get you gone, sir; I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her; Helen I mean.

Clo. 'Tis as fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy!

Fond done, done fond,
Was this king Priam's joy?

With that she sigh'd as she stood,
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
And gave this sentence then:

Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.

Count. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying of the song: would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tythe-woman, if I were the parson: one in ten, quoth 'a! an we might have a good woman born but for every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.—I am going, forsooth: the business is, for Helen to come hither.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me: and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her than is paid; and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any strange sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates: Love no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; Diana no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault, or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in: which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal; sithence, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Count. You have discharged this honestly; keep it to yourself; many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care; I will speak with you further anon.

[Exit Steward.]

Even so it was with me when I was young:
If ever we are nature's, these are ours; this thorn

Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong;
Our blood to us, this to our blood is born;
It is the show and seal of nature's truth,
Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth:

By our remembrances of days foregone,
Such were our faults;—or then we thought them none.

Enter Helena.

Her eye is sick on't: I observe her

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Why not a mother? When I said,

Methought you saw a serpent's

mother,

That you start at it! I say, I am your

And put you in the catalogue of those

That were enwombed mine: 'tis odd

Adoption strives with nature; and breeds

A native slip to us from foreign seeds.

You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's

Yet I express to you a mother's care

God's mercy, maiden! I do it

To say, I am thy mother! What's

That this distemper'd messenger of mine

The many-colour'd Iris, counts thus

Why?—that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am, madam.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardons.

The count Rousillon cannot be my

I am from humble, he from honour

No note upon my parents, but all

My master, my dear lord he is; and

His servant live, and will his

He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your

Hel. You are my mother, madam.

you were

(So that my lord, your son, was Indeed my mother!—or were you mothers,

I care no more for, than I do for

So I were not his sister. Can't

But, I your daughter, he must be

Count. Yes, Helen, you might love

in-law:

God shield, you mean it not! I

So strive upon your pulses. When

My fear hath catch'd your fondness

The mystery of your loneliness

Your malt fear's head: now to gross,

You love my son; invention is Against the proclamation of my

To say thou dost not: therefore

But tell me then, 'tis so:—for, look

Confess it, th' one to the other; and

See it so grossly shown in thy

That in their kind they speak it

And hellish obstinacy tie thy

That truth should be suspected,

If it be so, you have wound a

If it be not, forswear't: howe'er

thine,

As heaven shall work in me for

To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, I

Do you love my son?
Your pardon, noble mistress!
Do you my son?
Do not you love him, madam?
Not about: my love hath not a world takes note: come, come,
our affection; for your passions
all approach'd.

Then, I confess,
nee, before high heaven and you,
ou, and next unto high heaven,
a:— ere poor, but honest; so 's my ed; for it hurts not him, d of me: I follow him not of presumptuous suit;
have him till I do deserve him,
ow how that desert should be.
in vain, strive against hope;
aptious and intenable slave,
the waters of my love.
to lose still: thus, Indian-like,
mine error, I adore looks upon his worshipper, of him no more. My dearest

a,
hate encounter with my love,
here you do: but, if yourself,
honour cites a virtuous youth,
so true a flame of liking,
y, and love dearly, that your Dian self and love; O! then, give pity
a state is such, that cannot choose I give, where she is sure to lose;
not to find that her search implies,
she, lives sweetly where she dies.
d you not lately an intent,—speak
ia? [truly,— Madam, I had.

Wherefore? tell true.
I tell truth; by grace itself, I ny father left me some prescrip-tion'd effects, such as his reading
t experience had collected overoignty; and that he will'd me t reservation to bestow them, one faculties inclusive were,
ny were in note: amongst the rest,
medy, approv'd, set down,
desperate languishings whereof under'd lost.

This was your motive
as it? speak.
ord your son made me to think
t the medicine, and the king,
to conversation of my thoughts,
absent then.

But, think you, Helen,
I tender your supposed aid,
ceive it? He and his physicians d; he, that they cannot help him,

They, that they cannot help: how shall they credit

A poor unlearn'd virgin, when the schools,
Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself!

Helen. There's something in't, More than my father's skill, which was the greatest

Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour

But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure,
By such a day, and hour.

Count. Dost thou believe't?
Helen. Ay, madam, knowingly.

Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave, and love, [ings Means, and attendants, and my loving greet-
To those of mine in court: I'll stay at home,
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt:
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.
[Exit Count.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, with young Lords taking leave for the Florentine War; Bertram, Parolles, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lord; these warlike principles [farewell:—
Do not throw from you:—and you, my lord,
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enough for both.

1 Lord. It is our hope, sir,
After well enter'd soldiers, to return
And find your grace in health. [heart

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young Whether I live or die, be you the sons [lords;
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy
(Those 'bated, that inherit but the fall Of the last monarchy) see, that you come Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek.

That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.
2 Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty! [them:]

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of
They say, our French lack language to deny,
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve. [warnings.]

Both Lords. Our hearts receive your King. Farewell.—[Retires to a couch.]—
Come hither to me. [behind us:]

1 Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay

Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark—

2 Lord. O, 'tis brave wars!

Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.

Her. I am commended here, and kept a coil
"Too young," and "the next year," and "'tis too early."

Par. And thy mind stand to 't, boy, stand

Her. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,

Creaking my shoes on the plain masoury,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn
But one to dance with! By heaven! I'll stand

1 Lord. There's honour in the theft. [away.]

Par. Commit it, count.

2 Lord. I am your accessory; and so, farewell.

Her. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.

1 Lord. Farewell, captain.

2 Lord. Sweet monsieur Parolles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals:—you shall find in the regiment of the Spinif, one captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports of me.

2 Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices!—

[Exeunt Lords.] What will you do?

Her. Stay; the king—[Seeing him rise.]

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Her. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows, and like to prove most sinewy swordsmen.

[Exeunt Bertram and Parolles.
Enter Lafew.]

Laf. [Kneeling.]. Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll see thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man stands, that has brought his pardon.

I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me
And that, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy
And ask'd thee mercy, for't.

Laf. Good faith, across; but, my good lord,
Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat no grapes, my royal fox?
Yes, but you will, my noble grapes, an if My royal fox could reach them: I have seen a medicine

That's able to breathe life into a stone,

Quicken a rock, and make you dance
With spritely fire and motion; which Is powerful to arise king Pepin, may
To give great Charlemain a pen in his
And write to her a love-line.

King.

Laf. Why, doctor she: my lord,

one arriv'd,

If you will see her:—now, by my lord,
If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have
With one, that in her sex, her years, her Wisdom, and constancy, hath more Than I dare blame my weakness to see her,

[For that is her demand,] and that
That done, laugh well at me.

King.

Bring in the admiration; that we may May spend our wonder too, or take our
By wond'ring how thou took'st it.

Laf.

And not be all day neither.

King. Thus he his special notation prologues.

[Re-enter Lafew, with Helene.]

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings.

Laf. Nay, come your ways;

This is his majesty, say your mind to
A traitor you do look like: but such
His majesty seldom fears: I am cross'd
That dare leave two together; fare you

King. Now, fair one, does your

Hel. Ay, my good lord.

Gerard de Narbon was my father;
In what he did profess, well found.

King.

Hel. The rather will I spare my towards him;

Knowing him is enough. On's bed of cure,
Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one

Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
And of his old experience the only dote,

He bade me store up, as a triple eye,
Safer than mine own two, more clear

And, hearing your high majesty is cross'd
With that malignant cause, wherein the

Of my dear father's gift stands chief
I come to tender it, and my appliance

With all bound humbleness.

King.

We thank you,
But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned doctors have

The congregated college have concluded
That labouring art can never ransom

From her inaidable estate,—I say, we may
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our

To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics; or to discover so

Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past deem.

My duty, then, shall pay me for my pains;
 no more enforce mine office on you;
 I entreat from your royal thoughts that one to bear me back again.
 O! I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful: [I give,
 thought'st at help me; and such thanks
 a near death to those that wish him live;
 but at full I know, thou know'st no part;
 ring all my peril, thou no art.
 What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
 you set up your rest 'gainst remedy,
 at of greatest works is finisher,
 as them by the weakest minister:
 I writ in babes hath judgment shown,
 Judges have been balanc'd: great floods have down [dried,
 simple sources; and great seas have miracles have by the greatest been denied.
 expectation fails, and most oft there
 most it promises; and oft it hits,
 a hope is coldest, and despair most sits.
 O! I must not hear thee; fare thee well, kind maid;
 pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid;
 you, not took, reap thanks for their reward.
 O! inspired merit so by breath is barr'd:
 not so with Him that all things knows,
 as with us that square our guess by shows;
 most it is presumption in us, when help of heaven we count the act of men.
 O! to my endeavours give consent;
 heaven, not me, make an experiment.
 not an impostor, that proclaim against the level of mine aim;
 know I think, and think I know most sure,
 art is not past power, nor you past cure.
 O! art thou so confident? Within what space
 el. The greatest grace lending grace, twice the horses of the sun shall bring fiery torches his diurnal ring;
 twice in muck and occidental damp
 at Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp;
 our and twenty times the pilot's glass told the tedious minutes how they pass;
 it is full from your sound parts shall fly,
 th shall live free, and sickness freely die.
 O! Upon thy certainty and confidence,
 O! what's thou venture?
 Tax of impudence,—
 d by boldness, a divulged shame,— name by odious ballads; my maiden's [tended,
 d otherwise; nay, worse of worst ex-
 a vilest torture let my life be ended.
 O! Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak,
 powerful sound within an organ weak:
 what impossibility would aly
 common sense, sense saves another way.
 life is dear; for all, that life can rate

Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate;
 Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
 That happiness and prime can happy call:
 Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
 Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.
 Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
 That ministers thine own death, if I die.
 Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
 Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die;
 And well deserv'd: not helping, death's my fee;
 But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of help.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly
 What husband in thy power I will command:
 Exempted be from me the arrogance
 To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
 My low and humble name to propagate
 With any branch or image of thy state;
 But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
 Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd,

Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd:
 So make the choice of thy own time; for I,
 Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.

More should I question thee, and more I must,
 Though more to know could not be more to trust;

From whence thou can'st, how tended on: but Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted blest.—
 [To Attendants.] Give me some help here, ho!

—[To Helena.] If thou proceed

As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Ronsillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come on, sir; I shall now put you to the height of your lacing.

Clow. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught: I know my business is but to the court.

Count. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? But to the court!

Clow. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court:
 he that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss
 his hand, and say nothing has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and indeed, such a fellow,
 to say precisely, were not for the court: but,
 for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questions.

Clow. It is like a barber's chair, that fits all buttocks,—the pin-buttock, the quatchbuttock, the braven-buttock, or any buttock.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clow. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffeta punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's fore-finger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quena to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clo. From below your duke, to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to't. Ask me, if I am a courtier: it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could;—I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, sir! there's a simple putting off.—More, more, a hundred of them.

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Thick, thick, spare not.

Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Nay, put me to't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, "O Lord, sir!" at your whipping, and "Spare not me!" Indeed, your "O Lord, sir!" is very sequent to your whipping: you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to't.

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life, in my "O Lord, sir!" I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—why, there't serves well again.

Count. An end, sir; to your business. Give And urge her to a present answer back:

Command me to my kinsmen, and my son: This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

Count. Not much employment for you; you understand me!

Clo. Most fruitfully: I am there before my Count. Haste you again.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE III.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Bertram, Lafew, and Parolles.

Laf. They say miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrors; ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to known fear.

Par. Why, 'tis the rarest argument that hath shot out in our latter days.

Par. And so 'tis.

Laf. To be relinquished of the archbishop.

Par. So I say; both of Gales and Parolles.

Laf. Of all the learned and subtle fellows,—

Par. Right; so I say.

Laf. That gave him out for a scholar.

Par. Why, there 'tis; so say I too.

Laf. Not to be helped,—

Par. Right; as 'twere, a man's own life.

Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just, you say well; so would I too.

Laf. I may truly say, it is a novel world.

Par. It is, indeed: if you will have showing, you shall read it in—What do you call there—

Laf. A showing of a heavenly actor; an earthly actor.

Par. That's it I would have said; I am sure.

Laf. Why, your dolphin is not lost.

Par. Nay, 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, is the brief and the tedious of it; and a most famous spirit, that will not let me to be the—

Laf. Very hand of heaven—

Par. Ay, so I say.

Laf. In a most weak—

Par. And debile minister, great transcendence: which should give us a further use to be made, the recovery of the king, as to be—

Laf. Generally thankful.

Par. I would have said it; you say it.

Par. Here comes the king.

Enter King, Helena, and Attendants.

Laf. Lustick, as the Dutchman says, like a maid the better, whilst I have my head: why, he's able to lead her.

Par. Mort du vinagre! Is not this the king?

Laf. 'Fore God, I think so.

King. Go, call before me all the lords.

Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side.

And with this healthful hand, whose sense

Thou hast repeal'd, a second time confirm the confirmation of my promised gift.

Which but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.

Fair maid, send forth thine eyes; this is

Of noble bachelors stand at my service.

O'er whom both sovereign power and voice

I have to use: thy frank election made

Thou hast power to choose, and I to forsake.

To each of you one fair and virtuous maid, who loves please I—marry, to each, but not I. I'll give my curial, and his firaltars, and with as little beard.

Boys. Peruse them well.

And one of those but had a noble father.

Boys. Heaven hath, through me, restor'd the king for you.

Test. I am a simple maid; and therein wealth-

ness is your majesty, I have done already:

the blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,

that thou shouldst choose; but, be

refracted.

Will she come there again?

King. Make choice; and see,

that I am a simple maid; and therein wealth-

ness is your majesty, I have done already:

the blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,

that thou shouldst choose; but, be

refracted.

Will she come there again?

King. Make choice; and see,

that I am a simple maid; and therein wealth-

ness is your majesty, I have done already:

the blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,

that thou shouldst choose; but, be

refracted.

Will she come there again?

King. Make choice; and see,

that I am a simple maid; and therein wealth-

ness is your majesty, I have done already:

the blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,

that thou shouldst choose; but, be

refracted.

Will she come there again?

King. Make choice; and see,

that I am a simple maid; and therein wealth-

ness is your majesty, I have done already:

the blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,

that thou shouldst choose; but, be

refracted.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram, what she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord; But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me Must answer for your raising? I know her well:

She had her breeding at my father's charge.

A poor physician's daughter my wife!—Dis- Rather corrupt me ever.

King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which

I can build up. Strange is it, that our bloods,

Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,

Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off

In differences so mighty. If she be

All that is virtuous, (save what thou dislik'st,

A poor physician's daughter,) thou dislik'st,

Of virtue for the name; but do not so:

From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the deed's deed:

Where great additions swell, and virtue none,

It is a drop'd honour: good alone

Is good, without a name; villainess is so:

The property by what it is, should go,

Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;

In these to nature she's immediate heir;

And these breed honour: that is honour's

scorn,

Which challenges itself as honour's born.

And is not like the sire: honours thrive,

When rather from our acts we them derive,

Than our foregoers: the mere world's a slave,

Debosh'd on every tomb; on every grave,

A lying trophy; and as oft is dumb,

Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb

Of honour'd bones indeed. What should he said?

If thou canst like this creature as a maid,

I can create the rest: virtue and she

Is her own dower; honour and wealth from

me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to King. Thou wrong'st thyself if thou should'st strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm

Let the rest go.

King. My honour's at the stake; which to

I must produce my power. Here, take her

hand,

Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift;

That dost in vile misprision shackle up

My love and her desert; that canst not dream,

We, poisoning us in her defective scale,

Shall weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not

It is in us to plant thine honour where

We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:

Obey our will, which travels in thy good:

Believe not thy disdain, but presently

Do thine own fortunes that obedient right,

Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims;

Or I will throw thee from my care for ever,
Into the staggers, and the careless lapses
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate

Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice, Without all terms of pity. Speak; thine
answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit
My fancy to your eyes: when I consider
What great creation, and what dote of honour, Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late

Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praised of the king; who, so ennobled,
Is, as 'twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoise, if not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.
King. Good fortune, and the favour of the
king,

Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,
And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love's to me religious; else, does err.

[Exeunt King, Bertram, Helena, Lords,
and Attendants.]

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur! a word with
Par. Your pleasure, sir! [you.]

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation!—My lord! my master!

Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak!

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master!

Laf. Are you companion to the count Re-Par. To any count,—to all counts,—to what is man.

Laf. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you,
you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man;
to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow; thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass:
yet the scarfs and the bannerets about thee,
did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up; and that thou'rt scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,—

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hour! in window of lattice, fare thee well!

I need not open, for I look down
Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and I
Par. I have not, my lord, do you

Laf. Yes, good faith, every day
I will not hate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.
Laf. 'Tis as soon as thou canst, I hast to pull at a smack of the ever thou best bound in thy service, thou shalt find what it is to be pro-bondage. I have a desire to hold my ance with thee, or rather my knowmay say, in the default, he is a most

Par. My lord, you do me most able vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pain for and my poor doing eternal; my past; as I will by thee, in what will give me leave.

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall disgrace off me; scurvy, old, ill-lord!—Well, I must be patient; the fettering of authority. I'll bear life, if I can meet him with any an he were double and double a have no more pity of his age, than I have of—I'll beat him,—an if I could him again!

[Re-enter Lafau.]

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's there's news for you: you have a tress.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech you slip to make some reservation of your he is my good lord: whom I serve my master.

Laf. Who? God?

Laf. The devil it is that's thy master;
dost thou garter up thy arms of this dost make hose of thy sleeves! I do vants so? Thou wert best set thy where thy nose stands. By mine honour, were but two hours younger, I'd methinks thou art a general offence;
man should beat thee: I think created for men to breathe themselves
thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were better for picking a kernel out of a pome-you are a vagabond, and no true you are more saucy with lords and personages, than the heraldry of and virtue gives you commission;
not worth another word, else I'd knave. I leave you.

[Enter Bertram.]

Par. Good, very good; it is no longer very good; let it be conveyed a while

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!
Par. What is the matter, sweet heart?

Par. Although before the solemn priest I
I will not bed her.

Par. What, what, sweet heart?

Par. O my Parolles, they have married me!—
I'm in the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more needs

The tread of a man's foot: to the wars!
Par. There's letters from my mother: what I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy, to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That bugs his kinslay-wickies here at home,
Feeding his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high corvet

of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions!
France is a stable; we that dwell in't, jades!

Par. To the war!

Par. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house,
And whither I am fled; write to the king
That which I must not speak: his present gift shall furnish me to those Italian fields,
To be dark fellows strike: war is no strife
To the dark house and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capriccio hold in thee, art
thou?

Par. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.

Par. I'll lead her straight away: to-morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it.—The hard:

A young man married is a man that's marr'd:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go:
The king has done you wrong; but, hush!

Par. As so, [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Paris. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she
well?

Clow. She is not well; but yet she has her health; she's very merry; but yet she is not well; but thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing in the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well?

Clow. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clow. One, that she's not in heaven, whither she would go quickly! the other, that she's not from whence God send her quickly!

Hel. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Clow. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on;

and to keep them on, have them still.—O, my knave, how does my old lady?

Clow. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clow. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away! thou'rt a knave.

Clow. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou'rt a knave; that is, before me thou'rt
a knave: this had been truth, sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool: I have found thee.

Clow. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, if faith, and well fed.—
Madam, my lord will go away to-night;

A very serious business calls on him.
The great prerogative and right of love,

Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge,

But puts it off to a compell'd restraint;
Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd
with sweets,

Which they distil now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?

Par. That you will take your instant leave
o' the king,

And make this haste as your own good proceeding,

Strengthen'd with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you pre-attend his farther pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will.
Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you.—Come, sirrah. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Lafau and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your lordship thinks not him a soldier. [Proof.]

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant appearance. You have it from his own deliverance.

Laf. And by other warranted testimony.
Ber. Then my dial goes not true: I took this lark for a bunting.

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have, then, sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his valour;
and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes: I pray you, make us friends; I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. [To Bertram.] These things shall be done, sir.

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O, I know him well, I, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. [Aside to Parolles.] Is she gone to the Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casked my Given orders for our horses; and to-night,

When I should take possession of the bride, End, ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three-thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten.—God save you, captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be, you have mistaken him, my lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes; trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures.—Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you, than you have or will deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil.

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech

Gives him a worthy pass.—Here comes my

Enter Helena.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you, Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his For present parting; only, he desires [leave Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.

You must not marvel, Helen, at my course, Which holds not colour with the time, nor does The ministration and required office

On my particular. Prepar'd I was not For such a business; therefore am I found

So much unsettled: this drives me to entreat you,

That presently you take your way for home, And rather muse than ask why I entreat you;

For my respects are better than those And my appointments have in them Greater than shows itself, at the most To you that know them not.

This to my mother.

'Twill be two days ere I shall see you I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can most But that I am your most obedient

Ber. Come, come, no more of that

Hel. With true observance seek to clear

Wherein toward me my homely state To equal my great fortune.

Ber. My haste is very great: farewell; fare you well; pray, sir, your pardon.

Hel. Well, what would

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth Nor dare I say 'tis mine,—and yet

But, like a timorous thief, most vain What law does vouch mine own.

Ber. What would

Hel. Something, and scarce so thing, indeed.— I would not tell you what I would Strangers and foes do sunder, and

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but horse.

Hel. I shall not break your

Ber. [To Par.] Where are my

monsieur?—[To Hel.] Fare

Go thou toward home; where I

come,

Whilst I can shake my sword, or

Away! and for our flight.

Par. Bravely.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Florence. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence

tended; two French Lords, and Duke. So that, from point to point

have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war

Whose great decision hath much

And more thirsts after.

1 Lord. Holy seems

Upon your grace's part; black and

On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much

Would, in so just a business, shut

Against our borrowing prayers.

1 Lord. The reasons of our state I cannot

But like a common and an outward

That the great figure of a council

By self-unable motion: therefore

Say what I think of it, since I have to be uncertain grounds to fall on as I guess'd.

Be it his pleasure,
Madam, But I am sure, the younger of our nature,
at least on their ease, will day by day
grow more for physio.

Welcome shall they be;
all the honours that can fly from us all on them settle. You know your places
well;

no better fall, for your avails they fell:
tomorrow to the field. [Flourish. Exit.

SCENE II.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Is hath happened all as I would we had it, save that he comes not along with me. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Clown. By what observance, I pray you?

Count. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing; pick the ruff, and sing; ask questions, that had this trick of melancholy, sold a man's manner for a song.

Clown. [Opening a letter.] Let me see what you write, and when he means to come.

Count. I have no mind to Isabel, since I was swept by our old ling and our Isabels o' the world; for nothing like your old ling and your Isabels o' the court: the brains of my Cupid's shot out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Clown. What have we here?

Count. O, Fen that you have here?

Clown. [Reads.] "I have sent you a daughter in law; she hath recovered the king, and now I have wedded her, not bedded yet, and sworn to make the not eternal. You hear I am run away: know it before the king come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty

Your unfortunate son, BERTRAM."

Count. Is not well, rash and unbridled boy, with the favours of so good a king;

Clown. I pack his indignation on thy head, the misprising of a maid too virtuous

for the contempt of empire.

Re-enter Clown.

Count. O madam, yonder is heavy news within,
between two soldiers and my young lady.

Clown. What is the matter?

Count. Say, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your son will not be killed so soon. Why should he be kill'd?

Clown. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I do, the loss of man, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more: for my part, I only hear your son was run away. [Exit.]

Enter Helena and Gentlemen.

1 Gen. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2 Gen. Do not say so. [Gentlemen.]

Count. Think upon patience.—Pray you,
I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,

That the first face of neither, on the start,
Can woman me unto't:—where is my son, I pray you? [Of Florence:]

2 Gen. Madam, he's gone to serve the duke
We met him thitherward; for thence we came,
And, after some despatch in hand at court,

Thither we bend again. [passport.]

Hel. Look on this letter, madam; here's my [Reads.] "When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a time I write a NEVER."

This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

1 Gen. Ay, madam;

And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pains.

Count. I pr'ythee, lady, have a better cheer;
If thou engrossed all the griefs are thine,
Thou robbst me of a moiety: he was my son;

But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my child.—Towards Florence

2 Gen. Ay, madam. [Is he?]

Count. And to be a soldier?

2 Gen. Such is his noble purpose; and,
believe't,

The duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither?

1 Gen. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. [Reads.] "Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France." 'Tis bitter.

Count. Find you that there?

Hel. Ay, madam.

1 Gen. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand,
Which his heart was not consenting to. [haply]

Count. Nothing in France, until he have no wife!

There's nothing here that is too good for him,
But only she; and she deserves a lord.

That twenty such rude boys might tend upon,
And call her hourly mistress. Who was with
him?

1 Gen. A servant only, and a gentleman
Which I have some time known.

Count. Parolles, was it not?

1 Gen. Ay, my good lady, he. [wickedness.]

Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of My son corrupts a well-derived nature
With his inducement.

1 Gen. Indeed, good lady,
The fellow has a deal of that, too much,
Which holds him much to have.

Count. You are welcome, gentlemen.
I will entreat you, when you see my son,
To tell him, that his sword can never win
The honour that he loses; more I'll entreat you Written to bear along.

2 Gen. We serve you, madam,
In that and all your worthiest affairs.

Count. Not so, but as we change our court[exits.]
Will you draw near?

[Exeunt Countess and Gentlemen.]
Hel. "Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France."

Nothing in France, until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France:

Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is't I
That chase thee from thy country, and expose
Those tender limbs of thine to the event
Of the non-sparing war? and is it I [thou]
That drive thee from the sportive court, where Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim; move the still-peering air,
That sings with piercing; do not touch my
lord!

Whoever shoots at him, I set him there;
Whoever charges on his forward breast,
I am the catill that do hold him to't;
And, though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effected; better 'twere
I met the ravin lion when he roar'd
With sharp constraint of hunger; better 'twere
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No, come thou home,
Rousillon,

Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,
As oft it loses all: I will be gone;
My being here it is that holds thee hence:
Shall I stay here to do't? no, no, although
The air of Paradise did fan the house,
And angels offic'd all: I will be gone,
That pitiful rumour may report my flight,
To console thine ear. Come, night; and,
day!

For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Florence, Before the Duke's
Palace.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Bertram, Parolles, Lords, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art,
and we,
Great in our hope, lay our best love and Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength; but yet
We'll strive to bear it, for your worthy sake,
To th' extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth;
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
As thy auspicious mistress!

Ber.
Great Mars, I put myself into thy Make me but like my thoughts;
prove

A lover of thy drum, hater of love.
SCENE IV.—Rousillon. A Room
Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take
of her!

Might you not know, she would do
done,

By sending me a letter? Read it.
Stew. [Reads.] "I am Saint Jaques's grim; thither gone!"

Ambitious love hath so in me
That barefoot plod I the cold ground
With sainted toes my faith to prove.

Write, write, that from the bloody field
My dearest master, your dear son,
Bless him at home in peace, while I
His name with zealous fervour
His taken labours bid him me forgive.

I, his despicable Juno, and how
From courtly friends, with company
Where death and danger do worth—

He is too good and fair for death
Whom I myself embrace, to set him Count. Ah, what sharp stings mildest words!

Rinaldo, you did never lack advice
As letting her pass so; had I not
I could have well diverted her
Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me,
If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been a certain; and Pursuit would be but vain.

Count. Bless this unworthy husband!
thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom heaven
And loves to grant, relieve his wrath

Of greatest justice.—Write, write,
To this unworthy husband of his Let every word weigh heavy of his
That he does weigh too light: let grief,

Though little he do feel it, set down
Despatch the most convenient me-
When, haply, he shall hear that she
He will return; and hope I may, that Hearing so much, will speed her Led hither by pure love: which of
Is dearest to me, I have no skill in To make distinction:—provide that get—

My heart is heavy, and mine age is Grief would have tears, and sorrow
speak.

Stew. I hope so.—[*Enter Helena, in the
of a Pilgrim.*] Look, here comes a pil-
I know she will lie at my house: thither
I have you, pilgrim!

Hel. Are you bound?

Stew. To Saint Jaques le grand.

Hel. At the Saint Francis here, beside the road. Is this the way?

Stew. Ay, marry, is't.—[A march afar off.]
mark you!

Hel. I'll follow you.—If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,

Let the troops come by,
I'll conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
either for I think I know your hostess
as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Stew. I thank you, and will stay upon your labour.

Hel. You came, I think, from France?

Stew. Here you shall see a countryman of
I did so.

What has done worthy service.

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Without the walls of Florence.
A Widow of Florence, Diana, Violenta,
Mariana, and other Citizens.

Wid. Ay, some; for if they do approach us, we shall lose all the night.

Hel. They say this French count has done honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their commander: and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. [A trumpet sounded.] We have lost our labour; they are a contrary way: hark! you may know their trumpets.

Hel. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, what of this French count: the honour of his name; and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion:

Hel. I know that leave; hang him! one witty officer he is in those suggestions for his young earl:—Beware of them, and all these engines of lust, are not so much as they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, that so terrible shows in the wreck of her, but that they are lined with the twigs of chastity.

Wid. I hope I need not to you further; but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were danger known but the modesty of a lost.

Hel. You shall not need to fear me.

Wid. I hope so.—[*Enter Helena, in the
of a Pilgrim.*] Look, here comes a pil-
I know she will lie at my house: thither
I have you, pilgrim!

Hel. Are you bound?

Stew. To Saint Jaques le grand.

Hel. At the Saint Francis here, beside the road. Is this the way?

Stew. Ay, marry, is't.—[A march afar off.]
mark you!

Hel. I'll follow you.—If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,

Let the troops come by,
I'll conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
either for I think I know your hostess
as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Stew. I thank you, and will stay upon your labour.

Hel. You came, I think, from France?

Stew. Here you shall see a countryman of
I did so.

What has done worthy service.

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

[Exeunt.]

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The count Rousillon: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear, that hears most nobly
His face I know not. [of him:]

Dia. Whatso'er he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,
As 'tis reported, for the king had married him
Against his liking: think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth: I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman that serves the Reports but coarsely of her. [count,

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated: all her deserving is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.

Wid. Ay, right; good creature, whoso'er
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might
A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd. [do her

Hel. How do you mean?

May be, the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;
And brokes with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid;
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Enter, with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, Bertram, and Parolles.

Wid. So, now they come.—
That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;

That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He;
That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;

I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honest,
He were much goodlier: is't not a handsome
gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity he is not honest: yond's that same knave

That leads him to these places: were I his lady
I would poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That jackanapes with scars: why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Loss our drum! well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vex'd at something;
look, he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier!
[*Exeunt Bertram, Parolles, Officers,
and Soldiers.*]

Wid. The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you Where you shall host: of enjoin'd penitents
There's four or five, to great Saint Jacques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:
Please it this matron and this gentle maid
To eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me; and, to requite you farther,
I will bestow some precepts on this virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Camp before Florence.

Enter Bertram and the two French Lords.

1 Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to't:
let him have his way.

2 Lord. If your lordship find him not a hiding, hold me no more in your respect.

1 Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble, [him?]
Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in 1 Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

2 Lord. It were fit you knew him; lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business, in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

2 Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

1 Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have, whom,
I am sure, he knows not from the enemy: we will blind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at the examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.

2 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch off his drum; he says he has a stratagem for't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed.—Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

1 Lord. O, for the love of laughter hinder not the humour of his design: let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Ber. How now, monsieur! do you sorely in your disposition.

2 Lord. A pox on't, let it pass; but Par. But a drum! let it pass; but a drum so lost!—There was excellent
night.

—to charge in with our own soldiers wings, and to rend our own soldiers command of the service; it was a year that Caesar himself could not vented, if he had been there to com-

2 Lord. That was not to be
Ber. Well, we cannot greatly com-success; some dishonour we had of that drum; but it is not to be re-

Par. It might have been recovered
Ber. It might; but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered; the merit of service is seldom attributed to and exact performer, I would have or another, or his facet.

Ber. Why, if you have stomach to sieur, if you think your mystery in can bring this instrument of honour its native quarter, be magnificent in enterprise, and go on; I will grant for a worthy exploit; if you speak the duke shall both speak of it, and you what further becomes his grace to the utmost syllable of your word.

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I take it.

Ber. But you must not now show
Par. I'll about it this evening; presently pen down my discom-myself in my certainty; put my mortal preparation; and, by morn-hear farther from me.

Ber. May I be held to acquaint you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the answer my lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thou art valiant; the possibility of thy soldieryship will thee. Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.

1 Lord. No more than a fish for Is not this a strange fellow, nor his confidently seems to undertake the which he knows is not to be done, or self to do, and dares better be damdo't?

2 Lord. You do not know him; we we do: certain it is, that he will into a man's favour, and for a great deal of discoveries; but when him out, you have him ever after.

Ber. Why, do you think, he deed at all of this, that so serious address himself unto?

1 Lord. None in the world; but an invention, and clap upon you probable lies. But we have shown him,—you shall see his full deed, he is not for your lordship's

1 Lord. We'll make you some sport with the case him. He was first smoked the old Lord Lafou: when his disguise and varied, tell me what a sprat you shall find him; which you shall see this very night.

1 Lord. I must go look my twigs: he shall not escape me.

2 Lord. Your brother, he shall go along with me.

1 Lord. As't please your lordship: I'll leave
you.

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you
1 Lord. As't please your lordship: I'll leave
you.

Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once.

And found her wondrous cold; but I sent to her,
and this same coxcomb that we have! the wind, and letters which she did re-send;—
And this is all I have done. She's a fair creature: you go see her?

2 Lord. With all my heart, my lord.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Helena and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you further.

Wid. Though my estate be fall'n, I was well born,

Nothing acquainted with these businesses;
And would not put my reputation now
to any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you,
And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken,
by the good aid that I of you shall borrow,
I'll be hallowing it.

Wid. I should believe you:
You are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold,
which I will over-pay, and pay again,
When I have found it. The count he wooed your daughter,

Large down his wanton siege before her beauty,
As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it,
That she'll demand: a ring the county wears,
From son to son, some four or five descents,
Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds
To his rich choice; yet, in his idle fire,
To say his will, it would not seem too dear,
If he repented after.

Wid. The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

Now I see
Hel. You see it lawful, then: it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Gives this ring; appoints him an encounter;

In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chaste absent: after this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded:
Instruct my daughter how she shall perave,
That time and place, with this deceit so lawful,
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With musics of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us,
To chide him from our eaves; for he persists,
As if his life lay out.

Hel. Why, then, to-night
Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Hel. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Wid. Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say I got them in exploit: yet slight ones will not carry it; they will say, "Come you off with so little!" and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance! Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is!

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1 Lord. [Aside.] We cannot afford you so. Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say it was in stratagem.

1 Lord. [Aside.] 'T would not do.

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel—

1 Lord. [Aside.] How deep?

Par. Thirty fathom.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Three great oaths would scarce make that believed.

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's: I would swear I recovered it.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Thou shalt hear one anon.

Par. A drum, now, of the enemy's!

[Alarm within.]

1 Lord.—Throca movousis, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo. [They seize and blindfold him.]

Par. O, ransom, ransom!—Do not hide mine eyes.

1 Sold. Boskos throumulo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos' regiment; And I shall lose my life for want of language: If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me; I will discover that which shall undo The Florentine.

1 Sold. Boskos raurado: I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:—Keretybonto:—Sir, Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poni-Are at thy bosom. [Arms]

Par. Oh!

1 Sold. O, pray, pray, pray!—Manka rovania dulce.

1 Lord. Ocorbi dulchos volivores.

1 Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet; And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on To gather from thee: haply thou mayst inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O, let me live! And all the secrets of our camp I'll show

Their force, their purposes: no; I'll show Which you will wonder at.

1 Sold. But will thou show

Par. If I do not, damn me.

1 Sold. According to Come on; thou art granted grace.

[Exit, with Parolles.]

1 Lord. Go, tell the count Rousillon

my brother,

We have caught the woodcock, and

Till we do hear from them.

2 Sold. Captain

1 Lord. He will betray us all

Inform on that.

2 Sold. So I will, sir.

1 Lord. Till then, I'll keep him safer lock'd.

SCENE II.—Florence. A Room in

Widow's House.

Enter Bertram and Diana.

Ber. They told me that your Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana

Ber.

And worth it, with addition! But

In your fine frame hath love no quality

If the quick fire of youth light not your

You are no maiden, but a monument;

When you are dead, you should be

As you are now, for you are cold and

And now you should be as your marble

When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should

Dia.

My mother did but duty; such, my

As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more of

I prythee, do not strive against my

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee

By love's own sweet constraint, and will

Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you

Till we serve you; but when you

roses,

You barely leave our throats to

And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. Now have

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths

the truth,

But the plain single vow, that is yow

What is not holy; that we swear not

But take the Highest to witness

you, tell me,

If I should swear by Jove's great

I lov'd you dearly, would you bellow

When I did love you ill? This has no

To swear by him whom I pretend to

That I will work against him: therefore oaths

Are words and poor conditions; but

At least, in my opinion.

Ber. Change II, change

And my integrity never knew the crafts

That you do charge men with. Stand no more off.

But give thyself into my sick desires,

Whether recover: say thou art mine, and ever

My love, as it begins, shall so persevere.

Dia. I see that men make ropes, in such a snare,

That will forsake ourselves. Give me that

I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no

give it from me.

Dia.

Will you not, my lord?

Dia. It is an honour hanging to our house,

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy if the world

thought down from many ancestors;

1 Lord. He hath much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a lady.

2 Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.

1 Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.

2 Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he flashes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

1 Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion: as we are ourselves, what things are we!

2 Lord. Merely our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action contrives against his own ability, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

1 Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night!

2 Lord. Not till after midnight; for he is dieted to his hour.

1 Lord. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

2 Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

1 Lord. In the mean time, what hear you of [these wars?]

2 Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace.

1 Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

2 Lord. What will count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

1 Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

2 Lord. Let it be forbid, sir! so should I be a great deal of his act.

1 Lord. Sir, his wife, some two months since, fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jacques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, she accomplished; and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath; and now she sings in heaven.

2 Lord. How is this justified?

1 Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters; which make her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say, is come,—was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

2 Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

1 Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

2 Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be [glad of this.]
1 Lord. How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!

2 Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity, that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

1 Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipp'd them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherished by our virtues.—[Enter a Servant.]
—How now! where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave; his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.

2 Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

1 Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now.—[Enter Bertram.] How now, my lord! is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have cong'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourned for her; writ to my lady mother I am returning; entertained my convey; and between these main parcels of despatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit model: he has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophesier.

2 Lord. Bring him forth: [Exit Soldiers.] he has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

1 Lord. I have told your lordship already,—the stocks carry him. But, to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk: he hath confessed himself to Morgan, (whom he supposes to be a friar,) from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the stocks: and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

2 Lord. His confession is taken, he read to his face: if your lordship as I believe you are, you must have patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers with Parolles.
Ber. A plague upon him! I shall say nothing of me: hush, hush!

1 Lord. Hoodman comes!—Parolles.
1 Sold. He calls for the torturers: you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know in constraint: if ye pinch me like a joint, say no more.

1 Sold. Bosko chimurcho.

1 Lord. Bobbindo chiacurrago.

1 Sold. You are a merciful general: bids you answer to what you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1 Sold. "First, demand of him how horse the duke is strong." What say, that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but weak and unserviceable: the troops are all new, and the commanders very poor rogues; my reputation and credit, and as I hope, my money.

1 Sold. Shall I set down your answer?

Par. Do: I'll take the sacrament of it, and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What's that slave is this!

1 Lord. [Apart.] You are deceiv'd, my lord: this is monsieur Parolles, a great militarist, (that was his own phrase,) the whole theoretick of war in the scarf, and the practice in the dagger.

2 Lord. I will never trust a man keeping his sword clean; nor believe him have everything in him by wearing his sword neatly.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I will say true,—or thereabouts, for I'll speak truth.

1 Lord. He's very near the truth.

Ber. But I can him no thanks for nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, my lord.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir: the rogues are marvellous.

1 Sold. "Demand of him, of what they are a-foot." What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to present hour, I will tell true. I have Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Corandus, so many; Guillian, Cosmo, Gratii, two hundred fifty each; company, Chitopher, Vannond, hundred fifty each; so that the rotten and sound, upon my life, amount to fifteen thousand poll; half of the now not shake the snow from off their ears, but they shake themselves to pieces.

1 Lord. [Apert.] What shall be done to him?
1 Lord. [Apert.] Nothing, but let him have what credit I have with the duke.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down. "You shall demand of him, whether one captain Dumain is with the duke; what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighed sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt." What say you to this? what do you know of it?

1 Lord. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of this interrogatory: demand them singly.

1 Sold. Do you know this captain Dumain?
1 Lord. I know him: he was a butcher's apprentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the sheriff's fool with child, a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.

[Dumain lifts up his hand in anger.
1 Lord. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; I know his brains are forfeit to the gall that falls.

1 Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?
1 Lord. Upon my knowledge, he is, and lousy.

1 Sold. Nay, look not so upon me: we shall hear of your lordship anon.

1 Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

1 Lord. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other day to turn him out of the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket.

1 Sold. Marry, we'll search.
1 Lord. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

1 Sold. Here 'tis; here's a paper: shall I read it to you?

1 Lord. I do not know if it be it or no.

1 Lord. Our interpreter does it well.

1 Sold. Excellently.

1 Lord. "Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold."

1 Lord. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of our count Rousillon, a foolish boy, but for all that, very ruttish: I pray you, sir, put it up again.

1 Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

1 Lord. My meaning is't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

1 Sold. "When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it."

1 Lord. After he swears, he never pays the score:

Half soon is match well made; match, and well make it;

He ne'er pays after debts, take it before;
And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this:

Men are to melt with, boys are not to kiss;
For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,

Who pays before, but not when he does me it.
Thine, as he wou'd to thee in thine ear,

PAROLLES."

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in's forehead.

2 Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist, and the armipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1 Sold. I perceive, sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case I not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature: let me live, sir, in a dungeon, 't the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live.

1 Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this captain Dumain: you have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour—what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus: he professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules: he will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine drunk; and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has everything that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

1 Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? a pox upon him for me, he is more and more a cat.

1 Sold. What say you to his expertness in

Par. Faith, sir, he has led the drum before the English tragedians,—to hells him I will not,—and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called MHe-end, to instruct for the doubling of files: I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

1 Lord. He hath out-villain'd villany so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a cat still.

1 Sold. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a quart d'ecu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

1 Sold. What's his brother, the other captain Dumain?

2 Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

1 Sold. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil: he excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is; in a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

1 Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, count Rousillon.

1 Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count, have I run into this danger: yet, who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

1 Sold. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die: the general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die.—Come, headsman, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my death!

1 Sold. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.] So, look about you: know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2 Lord. God bless you, captain Parolles.

1 Lord. God save you, noble captain.

2 Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafen? I am for France.

1 Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the count Rousillon? an I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you: but fare you well.

[Exeunt Bertram, Lords, &c.]

1 Sold. You are undone, captain; all but your scarf, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

1 Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were, that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir; I am for France too: we shall speak of you there. [Exit.]

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great,

'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more: But I will eat, and drink, and sleep as soft As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart,

Let him fear this: for it will come to pass, That every braggart shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and Parolles, live

Safest in shame! being fool'd, by thrive!
There's place and means for every man,
I'll after them.

SCENE IV.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne
I kneel,

Ere I can perfect mine intents, to know
Time was I did him a desired office.
Dear almost as his life; which gratitude Through Binky Tartar's bosom would
forth,

And answer, thanks: I duly am informed
His grace is at Marseilles; to which place
We have convenient convey. You least
I am supposed dead: the army breaking My husband hies him home: whereas, by aiding,

And by the leave of my good lord the King,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentlewoman,

You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, madam.

Ever a friend, whose thoughts more
labour

To recompense your love: doubt not,
Hath brought me up to be your daughter.
As it hath fated her to be my motive
And helper to a husband. But, O strange That can such sweet use make of what hate,

When saucy trusting of the cozen'd throne
Defiles the pitchy night! so lust doth
With what it loathes, for that which it
But more of this hereafter.—You, Diana, Under my poor instructions, yet must Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and hell

Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you,

But, with the word, the time will summer,

When briars shall have leaves as well as I,
And be as sweet as sharp. We must
Our waggon is prepar'd, and time All's well that ends well: still the crown;

Whate'er the course, the end is the reward.

SCENE V.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Mansion.

Enter Countess, Lafen, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was milled a snipt-tallia fellow there, whose value
safron would have made all the unbride

longly youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him! It was the death of the most virtuous gentleman, that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads, ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or, rather, the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not salad-herbs, you knave: they are none-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself,—a knave, or a fool?

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave, at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction. [And do his service.]

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, [sir, to do her service.]

Laf. So you were a knave at his service.

Clo. And I would give his wife my hauberk.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both at your service.

Clo. No, no, no. [Knave and fool.]

Laf. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Clo. Who's that? a Frenchman?

Laf. Faith, sir, a' has an English name; but his plumage is more hotter in France.

Clo. What prince is that? [than there.]

Laf. The Black Prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Clo. Hold thee, there's my purse: I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master's back of; serve him still.

Laf. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of, ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let his nobility remain in his court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter; some that humble themselves, may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Clo. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways; let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Laf. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jade's tricks, which are their own right by the law of nature.

Clo. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.

Laf. So he is. My lord, that's gone, made himself much sport out of him; by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king, my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose: his highness hath promised me to do it; and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty; he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Marseilles. A Street.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night,

[It: Must wear your spirits low; we cannot help But, since you have made the days and nights as one,

To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Be bold you do so grow in my requital, As nothing can unroot you.—In happy time;

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
If he would spend his power.—God save you,
Gent. And you. [sir.]

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of Gent. I have been sometimes there. [France.]

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not full'n [mess;]
From the report that goes upon your good-
And therefore, goaded with most sharp occa-
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to [sions,
The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?
Hel. That it will please you

To give this poor petition to the king;
And aid me with that store of power you have To come into his presence.

Gent. The king's not here.
Hel. Not here, sir?

Gent. Not, indeed;
He hence remov'd last night, and with more
Than in his use. [haste]

Hel. Lord, how we lose our pains!
Hel. All's well that ends well yet, [sundr.—
Though times seem so adverse, and means
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Murry, as I take it, to Rousillon; Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, sir,
Since you are like to see the king before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand;

Which, I presume, shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it.
I will come after you, with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.
Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well
thank'd. [again:]

Whate'er falls more.—We must to horse
Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rousillon. The inner Court of the Countess's Palace.

Enter Clown and Parolles.

Par. Good monsieur Lavatch, give my lord Lafin this letter: I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddled in fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's battering. Prythee, allow the wind.

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose,
sir; I spake but by a metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Prythee get thee farther.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh! prythee, stand away; a paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafin.

Here is a pur of fortune's air, or of her cat, (but not a musk-cat,) that has fallen the unclean fish-pond of her displeasure.
as he says, is muddled withal; pray use the carp as you may; for he has a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, and knave. I do pity his distress in my comfort, and leave him to your lordship's Par. My lord, I am a man whom hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me do?
'tis too late to pare her nails now. What have you played the knave with fortune?
she should scratch you, who of late good lady, and would not have known long under her! There's a quarrel you; let the justices make you and friends; I am for other business. [Exit.]

Par. I beseech your honour to hear Laf. You beg a single penny more you shall ha't; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.
Laf. You beg more than one word.
Cox! my passion! I give me your hand;
does your drum!

Par. O, my good lord! you were the Laf. Was I, in sooth! and I was that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to have some grace, for you did bring me out-Laf. Out upon thee, knave! I don't upon me at once both the office of the devil! one brings thee in grace, and other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.]
The king's coming; I know by his train.
—Sirrah, enquire further after me;
talk of you last night; though you and a knave, you shall eat; go to, tell me.

Par. I praise God for you.

SCENE III.—Rousillon. A Room in Countess's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King. We lost a jewel of her esteem

Was made much poorer by it: but your
As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my lord;
And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion done! the black of
When oil and fire, too strong for reason,
O'erleaps it, and burns on.

King. My honourable
I have forgiven and forgotten all:
Though my revenges were high bent upon
And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. But first I beg my pardon,—the young Did to his majesty, his mother, and his Offence of mighty note; but to himself
The greatest wrong of all: he lost a

Which almost did astonish the survey
Of his eyes; whose words all ears took Whom dear perfection, hearts that scorned to Immediately call'd mistress.

Count. Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear.—Well, call him
Rother;

We're second'd, and the first view shall kill
All repulsion:—let him not ask our pardon;
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury
The increasing valleys of it: let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him,
As his will be should.

King. I shall, my liege. [Exit.]
What says he to your daughter?
Have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness.
Then shall we have a match. I have not let him high in fania. [Exit.]

Enter Bertram.

He looks well on't.
I am not a day of season,
For thou mayst see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once: but to this brightest beams
Detracted clouds give way; so stand thou
The sun is fair again.

My high-repent'd blames,
Despotic, pardon to me.

All is whole;
I take the instant by the forward top;
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
To handshakes and noiseless foot of time
Asks ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this lord?

Admirably, my liege: at first
I took my choice upon her, ere my heart
Had made too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Which warp'd the line of every other favour;
Saw'd a fair colour, or express'd it stol'n;
By a most hideous object: thence it came,
That she whom all men prais'd, and whom
I myself
Saw I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

Well excus'd:
You may strike some scores [too late,
In the great compt: but love that comes
By the great sender turns a sour offence,
That's a good that's gone. Our rash Made trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them, until we know their grave:
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love, waking, cries to see what's
done.]

While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget
her. [Exit.]

Send forth your amorous token for fair Ma-
The main consents are had; and here we'll stay

To see our widower's second marriage-day.
Count. Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!

Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cease!
Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's
name

Must be digested, give a favour from you,
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come.—[Exit.]

By my old beard,
And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Here it was not.
Ber. King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for
mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to't.—
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood [Helen,
Necessitated to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to
Of what should stand her most? [Leave her
Ber. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

I am sure I saw her wear it.
Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord; she never saw it;

In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: noble she was, and thought

I stood engag'd: but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd,
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

Plutus himself,
King. That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science,
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's.

Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself, Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement [surety,
You got it from her: she call'd the mints to
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,
(Where you have never come,) or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

She never saw it.
Ber.

King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour,

And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove

That thou art so inhuman,—'twill not prove
And yet I know not:—thou didst hate her deadly,

And she is dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring.—Take him away.—

[Guards seize Bertram.
My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little.—Away with We'll sit this matter further. [him]

Ber. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit guarded.]

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.
Enter the gentle Anstranger.

Gent. Gracious sovereign,
Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know
Here's a petition from a Florentine, [not:
Who hath, for four or five removes, come short
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know,
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage; and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.] "Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Rousillon a widower: his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice: grant it me, O king! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone."

DIANA CAPULET.
Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll for this: I'll none of him.

King. The heavens have thought well on these, Lafau, [suitsors;
To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these Go speedily, and bring again the count.

[Exit the gentle Anstranger, and some Attendants.
I am afraid the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!
Re-enter Bertram, guarded.

King. I wonder, sir, since wives are monsters to you,
And that you fly them as you swear them lord-
Yet you desire to marry.— [ship,
Re-enter the gentle Anstranger, with Widow and Diana.

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capulet:

My suit, as I do understand, you know
And therefore know how far I may be

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose
honour
Both suffer under this complaint
And both shall cease, without your

King. Come hither, count: do you these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will But that I know them: do they farther?

Dia. Why do you look so strange?
Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall prove
You give away this hand, and that you
You give away heaven's vows, and that you
mine;

You give away myself, which I know
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you must marry
Either both or none.

Laf. [To Bertram.] Your reputation too short for my daughter; you husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and
creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh'd at Lay a more noble thought upon me
Than for to think that I would sink King. Sir, for my thoughts, you ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them; false
honour,

Than in my thought it lies. Good my Dia. Ask him upon his oath, if he does
He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?
Ber. She's independent,
And was a common gamester to the Dia. He does me wrong, my were so,

He might have bought me at a common
Do not believe him: O, behold this Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
He gave it to a commoner o' the camp
If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 'tis fit
Of six preceding ancestors, that you
Conferr'd by testament to the sequel Hath it been ow'd and worn. This
That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought
You saw one here in court could write Dia. I did, my lord, but both are So bad an instrument: his name's
Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man
King. Find him, and bring him
[Exit an attendant]

Ber. He's quoted for a most perfidious slave
With all the spots of the world
debauch'd;

nature speaks but to speak a truth,
For that, or this, for what he'll utter,
I will speak anything?

She hath that ring of yours.
I think she has: certain it is, I lik'd
her.

And board'd her 't the wanton way of youth:
I know her distance, and did angle for me,
aching my eagerness with her restraint,
all settlements in fancy's course
of more fancy; and, in fine,
minute enring, with her modern grace,
I had that, which any inferior might
a more-price have bought.

I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you?
I must be patient;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
I truly did me. I pray you yet,
you lack virtue, I will lose a husband.)
For your ring, I will return it home,
and give me mine again.

Par. Yes, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her,—for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed; and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive me ill-will to speak of; therefore
I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married: but thou art too fine in thy evidence; therefore stand
aside.—

This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.
King. Where did you buy it; or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?
Dia. It was not lent me neither.
King. Where did you find it, then?

Dia. I found it not.
King. If it were yours by none of all these
How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.
Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord;
she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine; I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for aught
I know.

King. Take her away; I do not like her
now;

To prison with her: and away with him.—
Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this Thou diest within this hour. [ring,
Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.
Dia. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.
King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty:

He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't;
I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.
Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life!

I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.
[Pointing to Lafau.

King. She does abuse our ears: to prison
with her.

Dia. Good mother, fetch my ball.—[Exit Widow.] Stay, royal sir;

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
And he shall surely me. But for this lord,
Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,
Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit
him:

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd:
And at that time he got his wife with child:

Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:
So there's my riddle. One that's dead is quick:
And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with Helena.

King. Is there no exorcist Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?
Is't real that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord;
'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both: O, pardon!
Hel. O my good lord, when I was like this maid,

[ring;
I found you wondrous kind. There is your
And, look you, here's your letter; this it says:
"When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are by me with child, &c." This is done:
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,

I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly. [true,
Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove un-deadly divorce step between me and you!—
O my dear mother, do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions; I shall weep

anon.—[To Parolles.] Good Tom, I'll me a handkerchief: so, I thank thee.
me home, I'll make sport with thee: and courtesies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point know
know,

To make the even truth in pleasure known.
[To Diana.] If thou be'st yet a fresh
ped flower,

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay
dower;

For I can guess, that by thy honest air,
Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.
Of that, and all the progress, more or less,
Resolvedly more leisure shall express.

All yet seems well; and if it end as much,
The bitter past, more welcome is the new.

The king's a beggar, now the play is done.
All is well ended, if this suit be won.
That you express content: which see you
With strife to please you, day exceeding day.

Ours be your patience then, and your
parts;

Your gentle hands lend us, and take hearts.

TWELFTH-NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

Duke, Duke of Illyria.
Sebastian, a young Gentleman, Brother to Viola.

Antonio, a Sea Captain, Friend to Sebastian.

Valentine, Friend to Viola.
Julio, Gentleman attending on the Duke.

Malvolio, Uncle to Olivia.
Andrew Ague-cheek.

Malvolio, Steward to Olivia.

Fabian, Servants to Olivia.

Clown, Servants to Olivia.

Olivia, a rich Countess.

Viola, in love with the Duke.

Maria, Olivia's waiting-woman.

Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—A City in Illyria; and the Sea-coast near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Duke's
Palace.

Enter Duke, Curio, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.—
That strain again;—it had a dying fall;

O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Sweet and giving odour.—Enough; no
more.

That spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou!
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy,
That it alone is high-fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?

Duke. What, Curio?

Cur. The hart.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:

When mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence:
That instant was I turn'd into a hart;
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
Ere since pursue me.—

Enter Valentine.

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted:

But from her handmaid do return this answer:
That element itself, till seven years' heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view;
But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
And water once a day her chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this, to season
A brother's dead love, which she would keep
And having in her sad remembrance. [fresh

Duke. O, she that hath a heart of that fine frame,

To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else

That live in her! when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied and fill'd

(Her sweet perfections) with one self-king!—
Away before me to sweet beds of flowers:
Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with bowers. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Sea-coast.

Enter Viola, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this?

Cap. This is Illyria, lady.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?

My brother he is in Elysium.

Perchance, he is not drown'd:—what think you, sailors? [sav'd.

Cap. It is perchance that you yourself were

Vio. O my poor brother! and so perchance may he be. [with chance,

Cap. True, madam: and, to comfort you

Assure yourself, after our ship did split, [you,
When you, and those poor number sav'd with Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself (Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)

To a strong mast, that liv'd upon the sea;

Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there's gold:

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and
born

Not three hours' travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here?
Cap. A noble duke, in nature as in name.
Vio. What is his name?
Cap. Orsino.
Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name
 He was a bachelor then. [him:]
Cap. And so is now, or was so very late;
 For but a month ago I went from hence,
 And then 'twas fresh in murmur (as, you know, What great ones do, the less will prattle of)
 That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.
Vio. What's she?
Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
 That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her
 In the protection of his son, her brother,
 Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
 They say, she hath aljur'd the company
 And sight of men.
Vio. O that I serv'd that lady;
 And might not be deliver'd to the world,
 Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
 What my estate is!

Cap. That were hard to compass;
 Because she will admit no kind of suit,
 No, not the duke's.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain; [wall
 And though that nature with a beautiful
 Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
 I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
 With this thy fair and outward character.
 I pry thee, (and I'll pay thee bounteously,) Conceal me what I am; and be my aid
 For such disguise as haply shall become
 The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke;
 Thou shalt present me as a eunuch to him;
 It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,
 And speak to him in many sorts of music,
 That will allow me very worth his service.
 What else may hap, to time I will commit;
 Only, shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be; [not see]

When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes
Vio. I thank thee: lead me on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine! I'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in; and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking you: I heard my lady talk of it and of a foolish knight, that you one night here to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any
Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thou-Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a these ducats: he's a very fool, and Sir To. Fie, that you'll say so!

the viol-de-gamboys, and speaks in languages word for word without hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed, — all — for, besides that he's a fool, he's a reller; and, but that he hath the ard to ally the guest he hath in
 'tis thought among the prudent quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are and subtractors that say so of him they?

Mar. They that add, moreover,
 nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths
 I'll drink to her, as long as there in my throat, and drink in the coward, and a coystrell, that will my niece, till his brains turn o' the parish top. What, wench! Come for here comes Sir Andrew Ague-

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-Sir And. Sir Toby Belch,
 Toby Belch!

Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Bless you, fair show.

Mar. And you too, sir.

Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chambermaid.

Sir And. Good mistress Accost, better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good mistress Mary.

Sir To. You mistake, knight.

front her, board her, woo her, accom-

Sir And. By my troth, I would take her in this company. Is that ing of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let her pass drew, would thou mightst never again!

Sir And. An you part so, I shall

I might never draw sword again.

do you think you have fools to

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the

Sir And. Marry, but you shall here's my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, thought is five bring your hand to the buttery

drink.

And, Wherefore, sweet heart? what's the matter?
And, Is dry, sir.

And, Why, I think so: I am not such a dry, but I can keep my hand dry. But your jest!

And, A dry jest, sir.
And, Are you full of them?
And, Ay, sir, I have them at my fingers'

And, Now I let go your hand, I am
[Exit.]
To, O knight! thou hast cast a cup of

And, when did I see thee so put down?
And, Never in your life, I think; unless I have no more wit than a Christian,

And, an ordinary man has; but I am a great and bold, and I believe that does harm to

To, No question.
And, An I thought that, I'd forswear

To, I come to-morrow, Sir Toby.
And, What is pourquoi? do, or not do?

To, I had bestowed that time in the
And, O, had I but followed the arts!
And, Then hadst thou had an excellent

To, Why, would that have mended
And, Past question: for thou seest it
And, But it becomes me well enough,

To, Excellent; it hangs like wax on a
And, I hope to see a housewife take
And, 'Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir

To, Your niece will not be seen; or if she
And, here hard by, woe her.
To, She'll none of the count: she'll not

To, Above her degree, neither in estate,
And, nor wit; I have heard her swear it.
And, There's life in't, man.

To, I'll stay a month longer. I am
And, the strangest mind in the world;
And, in masks and revels sometimes alto-

To, Art thou good at these kickshaws,
And, As any man in Illyria, whatsoever
And, the degree of my betters; and
And, will not compare with an old man.

To, What is thy excellence in a galliard,
And, 'Faith, I can cut a caper.
To, And I can cut the motion to't.

And, And I think I have the back-trick,
To, as strong as any man in Illyria.
To, Wherefore are these things hid?

To, I have these gifts a curtain before
And, they like to take dust, like mistress
And, why dost thou not go to church

To, And come home in a coranto?
And, your walk should be a jig: I would not so much as make water, but in a sink-a-pace.

What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set about some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus; that's sides and hearts.
Sir To. No, sir; it is legs and thighs. Let me see these capers: ha! higher; ha, ha!—
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—An Apartment in the Duke's
Palace.

Enter Valentine, and Viola in man's attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced: he hath known you but three days,
and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love: is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Enter Duke, Curio, and Attendants.

Duke. Who saw Cesario? ho!

Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof.—Cesario, Thou know'st no less but all; I have un-clasp'd

To thee the book even of my secret soul;
Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto
her:

Be not denied access, stand at her doors,
And tell them, there thy fix'd foot shall grow,
Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my noble lord,
If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow,
As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds,
Rather than make unprofitable return.

Vio. Say I do speak with her, my lord,
what then? [To Duke.]

Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith:
It shall become thee well to set my woes;
She will attend it better in thy youth,
Than in a nuncio of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it;
For they shall yet belie thy happy years,
That say thou art a man: Diana's lip

Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe

Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound;
And all is semblative a woman's part.

I know thy constellation is right apt
For this affair:—some four or five attend him;
All, if you will: for I myself am best,

Mal. I like you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from somebody, I am sick, or not at home; what will, to dismiss it. [Exit Malvolio.] Now
I am, as how your fooling grows old, and I dislike it.

Mal. Thou hast spoken for us, madonna, as thy eldest son should be a fool; whose skull
I am with brains! for—here he comes—of thy kin, has a most weak plu mater.

Enter Sir Toby Belch.
Mal. By mine honour, half drunk.—What is at the gate, cousin?

Mal. A gentleman, what gentleman?

Mal. To. 'Tis a gentleman here—a plague o'
the sickle horrors!—how now, sor?

Mal. Good Sir Toby,—

Mal. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

Mal. Lechery! I defy lechery. There's at the gate.

Mal. As, marry, what is he?

Mal. Let him be the devil, an he will, I will not give me faith, say I. Well, it's all
[Exit.]

Mal. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Mal. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman. One draught above heat makes him a second madman; and a third drowns him. Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him out of my coz; for he's in the third degree of drink. He is but mad yet, madonna; and the coroner shall look to the madman. [Exit.]

Re-enter Malvolio.
Mal. Madam, yond' young fellow swears he speaks with you. I told him you were sick;

he comes on him to understand so much, and he comes to speak with you; I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a foreknowing of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's against any denial.

Mal. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. He has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be supplicatory to a bench, but he'll speak with you. What kind of man is he?

Mal. Why, of mankind. [you.]

Mal. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner; he'll speak with you, or no.

Mal. Of what personage and years is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before it is a pease-cod, or a scolding when 'tis almost a scolding boy and man. He is very well-favoured, and he speaks very shrewishly; one would think, his mother's milk were scarce out.

Mal. Let him approach: call in my gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.]

Re-enter Maria.

Mal. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er
my face.

We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter Viola.

Mal. The honourable lady of the house, which is she! [Your will!]

Mal. Speak to me; I shall answer for her.

Mal. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatch-able beauty,—I pray you tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her; I would be loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very compliable, even to the least sister meagre.

Mal. Whence came you, sir?

Mal. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Mal. Are you a comedian?

Mal. No, my profound heart; and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Mal. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Mal. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for, what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Mal. Come to what is important isn't: I forgive you the praise. [and 'tis postical.]

Mal. Alas, I took great pains to study it;

Mal. It is the more like to be feigned: I pray you, keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates; and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mal. Will you hoist sail, sir? here flies your way.

Mal. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer.—Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady. Tell me your mind. I am a messenger.

Mal. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful.
Speak your office.

Mal. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage: I hold the olive in my hand; my words are as full of peace as matter.

Mal. Yet you began rudely. What are you?
what would you?

Mal. The rudeness that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Mal. Give us the place alone; we will hear this divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, sir, what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady.—

Ol. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosom. [Bosom!]

Ol. In his bosom! In what chapter of his Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart. [You no more to say!]

Ol. O, I have read it: it is heresy. Have

Vio. Good madam, let me see your face.

Ol. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture. [Unveiling.] Look you, sir, such a one I was this present: is it not well done?

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. 'Tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind and weather. [White]

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on: Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive, if you will lead these graces to the grave, And leave the world no copy.

Ol. O, sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: It shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil labelled to my will: as, item, two lips, indifferent red; item, two grey eyes, with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are; you are too proud;

But, if you were the devil, you are fair. My lord and master loves you: O, such love Could be but recompens'd, though you were The nonpareil of beauty! [Crown'd]

Ol. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, with fertile tears, With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire. [Not love him!]

Ol. Your lord does know my mind; I cannot yet suppose him virtuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth; In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant;

And, in dimension and the shape of nature, A gracious person: but yet I cannot love him; He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my master's flame, With such a suffering, such a deadly life, In your denial I would find no sense; I would not understand it.

Ol. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow cabin at your gate, And call upon my soul within the house; Write loyal cantons of contemned love, And sing them loud even in the dead of night; Holla your name to the reverberate hills, And make the babbling gossip of the air Cry out, Olivia! O, you should not rest Between the elements of air and earth, But you should pity me!

Ol. You might do much, Were you not so full of your parentage!

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state I am a gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your father's, I cannot love him: let him send me word, Unless perchance, you come to me To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well. I thank you for your pains: spend your

Vio. I am no feed' post, lady, nor

My master, not myself, lacks reason: Love makes his heart of that, that he loves;

And let your fervour, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, lady.

Ol. "What is your parentage?" "Above my fortunes, yet my state I am a gentleman."—I'll be sworn, you are a spirit, thy face, thy limbs, thy

Do give these five-fold blazes:—and unless the master were the man,— Even so quickly may one catch the plague: Methinks I feel this youth's perfection, To creep in at mine eyes. Well, he is what he is, Malvolio!

Re-enter Malvolio. Here, madam, at your

Ol. Run after that same precipice. The county's man: he left this ring with me. Would I, or not: tell him I'll none of it. Desire him not to flatter with his love. Nor hold him up with hopes; I do not want. If that the youth will come this way, I'll give him reasons for't. His time is waste.

Mal. Madam, I will.

Ol. I do I know not what; and my eye too great a flatterer for my use. Fate, show thy force: ourselves we move. What is decreed must be, and be the

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Sea-coast.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? no, not that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no. My mind is darkly over me: the malignancy of night, perhaps, distemper yours; I shall crave of you your leave, that I may seek my own. It were a bad request, to lay any of them on you, your love, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, before I am bound.

Seb. No, 'sooth, sir; my determination is mere extravagancy. But I perceive so excellent a touch of modesty, that I will not extort from me what I am willing to

It charges me in manners the rather to know myself. You must know of me then, my name is Sebastian, which I called

My father was that Sebastian of whom I know you have heard of. I am an hour: if the heavens had been what we had so ended! but you, sir, for some hour before you took from the branch of the sea was my sister

Alas, the day!

Alas, the day! though it was said she was beautiful; but, though I could not, with this terrible wonder, over-far believe that, I would that every could not but call fair, I seem to drown her remembrance with mine.

Forbear me, sir, your bad entertain-

O good Antonio, forgive me your

And if you will not murder me for my love,

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

And if you will not undo what you have

That sure methought her eyes had lost her tongue.

For she did speak in starts distractedly. She loves me, sure; the cunning of her pas-

Invites me in this charlish messenger. None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none.

I am the man:—if it be so,—as 'tis,— Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness, Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easy is it for the proper-fake In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!

Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we! For, such as we are made, if such we be.

How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly;

And I, poor monster, fond as much on him; And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me.

What will become of this? As I am man, My state is desperate for my master's love;

As I am woman,—now alas the day!— What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!

O time, thou must untangle this, not I; It is too hard a knot for me to untie. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew; not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgere, thou knowest.

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not; but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilial can. To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early: so that, to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Does not our life consist of the four elements?

Sir And. Faith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink.—Marian, I say!—a stoop of wine!

Sir And. Here comes the fool, I faith.

Enter Clown.

Clow. How now, my hearts! Did you never see the pictures of us three? [Catch.]

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings

I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Picrogramus, of the Vapian passing the equinoctial of Quebus: 'twas very good, I faith. I sent thee sippets for thy lamen:

hast it?

Clow. I did impetuous thy gratuity; for Malvolio's nose is no whippstock; my lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is sixpence for you: let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a— [of good life]

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life, song.

Clo. O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear; your true love's coming;

That can sing both high and low;

Trip no farther, pretty sweeting;

Journeys end in lovers meeting,

Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, I faith.

Sir To. Good.

Clo. What is love? 'tis not hereafter;

Present mirth hath present laughter;

What's to come is still unsure;

In delay there lies no plenty;

Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty,

Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true

Sir To. A contagious breath. [knight.]

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, I faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver: shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at a catch. [catch well.]

Clo. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, "Thou knave."

Clo. "Hold thy peace, thou knave," knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me knave. Begin, fool: it begins, "Hold thy peace."

Clo. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, I faith. Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.]

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Catalan, we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and "Three merry men be we." Am not I con-sanguineous? am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! [Singing.] "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!" [fooling.]

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too; he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. [Singing.] "O, the twelfth day of December,"

Mar. For the love o' God, peace!

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters, are you mad?

are you? Have you no wit, no honesty, but to gabble like hithers?

of night? Do ye make an ale-house lady's house, that ye squeak out your catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, do, catches. Snack up!

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be revenged on you. My lady bade me tell you, that, if you harbour you as her kinsman, she will be allied to your disorders. If you will yourself and your misadventures welcome to the house; if not, and please you to take leave of her, she is willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. "Farewell, dear heart, thou needs be gone."

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. "His eyes do show his deep desire."

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. "But I will never die."

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go?"

Clo. "What an if you do?"

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go?"

Clo. "O! no, no, no, no, no, you may."

Sir To. Out o' tune, sir! To the more than a steward! Dost thou think cakes and ale?

Clo. Yes, by Saint Anne; and give him but I the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou'rt I the right—[Singing.] your claim with crumbs.—A sleep, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you please, favour at anything more than common would not give means for this music; she shall know of it, by this hand.

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as when a man's a-hungry, to challenge the field, and then to break promise and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight: I'll write challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, he is not to-day with my lady, she is much out of night: since the youth of the count, for monsieur Malvolio, let me alone; if I do not call him into a wayward him a common recreation, do not think wit enough to lie straight in my bed; I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a puritan.

Sir And. O, if I thought that, I

Act 4.

Sir To. What, for being a puritan? thy ex-quisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a puritan that he is, or any honest man, but a time-pleaser; an affecter, that can state without book, and himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with ex-perience, that it is his ground of faith, that all men will love him; and on that vice

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure words of love; wherein, by the colour of his

Sir To. The shape of his leg, the manner of his complexion, he shall find himself most feel-

Sir And. I can write very like my

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have't in my nose, too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of Sir And. And your horse, now, would make

Sir To. O, I'll be admirable!

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know

Sir To. And let the fool make a third, where

Sir And. For this night, to bed, and dream

Sir To. Good-night, Penthésilæa.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst

Sir And. I cannot recover your niece, I

Sir To. Send for money, knight; if thou

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me, take

Sir To. Come, come; I'll go burn some

Sir And. Come, knight. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Duke. Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Clo. Give me some music:—now, good

Mar. Good Cesario, but that piece of song,

Sir To. And antique song, we heard last

Sir And. It did relieve my passion much;

More than light airs; and recollected terms, Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times:

Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lord-

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in: he is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out;—and play the tune the while. [Exit Curio. Music.]

Come hither, boy: if ever thou shalt love, In the sweet pangs of it, remember me;

For such as I am, all true lovers are, Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,

Save in the constant image of the creature That is belov'd.—How dost thou like this tune?

Viola. It gives a very echo to the seat Where love is thron'd.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly: My life upon't, young though thou art, thine

Viola. Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves; Hath it not, boy?

Duke. A little, by your favour.

Viola. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee, then. What years, I faith?

Viola. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven: let still the woman take

An elder than herself; so wears she to him, So sways she level in her husband's heart:

For, boy, however we do praise ourselves, Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm, More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn, Than women's are.

Viola. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then, let thy love be younger than thyself,

Or thy affection cannot hold the bent; For women are as roses, whose fair flower

Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Viola. And so they are: alas, that they are so, To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter Curio with Clown.

Duke. O, fellow, come, the song we had last night.—

Mark it, Cesario; it is old and plain: The spinners and the knitters in the sun, And the free maids that weave their thread

With bones, Do use to chaunt it: it is silly mooth, And dallies with the innocence of love, Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready, sir?

Duke. Ay; prythee, sing. [Music.]

SONG.

Clo. Come away, come away, death, And in sad cypress let me be laid;

Fly away, fly away, breath; I am slain by a fair cruel maid.

*My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it!
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.*

*Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend great
My poor corse, where my bones shall be Thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O, where Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there!*

Duke. There's for thy pains. [Sing, sir.
Clo. No pains, sir; I take pleasure in sing-
Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.
Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid,
one time or another.

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee.
Clo. Now, the melancholy god protect thee;
and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta, for thy mind is a very opal!—I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be everything, and their intent everywhere; for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell.
[Exit.

Duke. Let all the rest give place.—
[Exeunt Curio and Attendants.
Once more, Cesario,
Get thee to yond' same sovereign cruelty:
Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands; [her.
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon
Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;
But 'tis that miracle and queen of gems,
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.

Vio. But, if she cannot love you, sir?
Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.
Vio. Sooth, but you must.
Say, that some lady, as, perhaps, there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; must she not, then, be an-swer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sides [swear'd?
Can hide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much; they lack retention.
Alas, their love may be call'd appetite,—
No motion of the liver, but the palate,—
That suffers surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the sea,
And can digest as much: make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. Ay, but I know,—
Duke. What dost thou know? [may owe:
Vio. Too well what love women to men
In faith, they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter loved a man,
As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's that? [And what's that?
Vio. A blank, my lord. She lov'd her love,
But let concealment, like a worm I Feed on her damask cheek: she thought;
And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love?
We men may say more, swear more,
dead,
Our shows are more than will; for still Much in our vows, but little in our love.
Duke. But died thy sister of her love,
boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's
And all the brothers too;—and yet I know
Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke. Ay, that's my daughter.
To her in haste; give her this jewel;
My love can give no place, hide no

SCENE V.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Fabian.

Sir To. Come thy ways, Signior Ague-Fab. Nay, I'll come: if I love a this sport, let me be boiled to death melancholy.

Sir To. Wouldst thou not be glad to the niggardly rascally sheep-biting some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man: you brought me out o' favour with my a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him, we'll have again; and we will fool him black and shall we not, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is Sir To. Here comes the little rascal ter Maria.] How now, my nettle into the

Mal. Get ye all three into the Malvolio's coming down this walk been yonder i' the sun practising his own shadow this half-hour: ob-for the love of mockery; for I know will make a contemplative idiot of him in the name of jesting! [Throws stones at selves.] Lie thou there; [Throws stones at ter.] for here comes the trout that caught with tickling.

Enter Malvolio.
Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune;
once told me she did affect me; and heard herself come thus near, that fancy, it should be one of my Besides, she uses me with a more respect than any one else that follows me;
should I think on't?

Sir To. Here's an over-sweeting Fab. O, peace! Contemplation rare turkey-cock of him: how he his advanced plumes!

mended thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to, thou art made, if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortune's fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee,

The Fortunate Unhappy.

Daylight and champion discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintances, I will be point-device the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and, with a kind of injunction, drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove and my stars be praised!—Here is yet a postscript. "Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling: thy smiles become thee well; therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I pray thee."—Jove, I thank thee.—I will smile; I will do everything that thou wilt have me. [Exit.

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device,—

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Enter Maria.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either!

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either!

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true; does it work upon him?

Sir To. Like aqua-vite with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors, and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt. If you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I'll make one too.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Viola, and Clown with a basket.

Vio. Save thee, friend, and dost thou live by thy labor?

Clow. No, sir, I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clow. No such matter, sir: I do live at my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou mayst say, the church stands by thy labor, if thy labor stands by the church.

Clow. You have said, sir.—To see I am a sentence is but a chattering phrase to wit: how quickly the wrong is turned outward!

Vio. Nay, that's certain: they do nicely with words, may quickly make a wanton.

Clow. I would, therefore, my sister had a word.

Vio. Why, man?

Clow. Why, sir, her name's a word daily with that word, might make a wanton. But, indeed, words are easy since bonds disgraced them.

Vio. Thy reason, man!

Clow. Troth, sir, I can yield you out words; and words are grown so am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, carest for nothing.

Clow. Not so, sir, I do care for a but in my conscience, sir, I do not care if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the lady Olivia's fool?

Clow. No, indeed, sir; the lady is married; and fools are as like herring-pilchards are to herrings,—the bigger: I am, indeed, not her fool, but corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the count's.

Clow. Foolery, sir, does walk about like the sun, it shines everywhere.

Vio. I am sorry, sir, but the fool should be as wise as your master, as with my mistress I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me more with thee. Hold, there's a piece of thee.

Clow. Now Jove, in his next coming, send thee a beard!

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am most sick for one; though I would not it grow on my chin. Is thy lady married?

Clow. [Pointing to the coin.] Would a pair of these have bred, sir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and Clow. I would play lord Pandarus of sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

stand you, sir; 'tis well begg'd.
 matter, I hope, is not great, sir,
 a beggar: Cressida was a beggar.
 thin, sir. I will construe to them come; who you are, and what to out of my welkin.—I might say the word is overworn. [Exit.
 fellow's wise enough to play the

At well craves a kind of wit:
 erve their mood on whom he jests,
 of persons, and the time;
 haggard, check at every feather before his eye. This is a practice sour as a wise man's art:
 at he wisely shows, is fit:
 idly-fallen, quite taint their wit.
 r Toby Belch and Sir Andrew

Ague-check.
 ive you, gentleman.
 you, sir.
Vien vous garde, monsieur.
ous aussi; votre serviteur.
 I hope, sir, you are; and I am

Will you encounter the house? my throns you should enter, if your
 her.
 bound to your niece, sir: I mean,
 it of my voyage.

aste your legs, sir; put them to in.
 legs do better understand me, sir, stand what you mean by bidding legs.

mean, to go, sir, to enter.
 all answer you with gait and an-
 it we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Maria. out accomplished lady, the heavens
 on you!

That youth's a rare countess:
 ure?" well.

matter hail, no voice, lady, but to most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

"Odours," "pregnant," and d.—"I'll get 'em all three all ready.

the garden door be shut, and leave entering.

Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria.
 ur hand, sir.

duty, madam, and most humble
 it is your name! [princess.

ria in your servant's name, fair servant, sir! 'Twas never merry

1.
 reigning was call'd compliment:
 ant to the count Orsino, youth.

urs: he is yours, and his must needs
 ant's servant is your servant,

him, I think not on him: for his gits,

Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd
 with me! [thoughts

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle
 On his behalf:—

Ol. O, by your leave, I pray you;
 I bade you never speak again of him;
 But, would you undertake another suit,
 I had rather hear you to solicit that,
 Than music from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady,— [sings]
 Ol. Give me leave, 'beseech you. I did

After the last enchantment you did here,
 A ring in chace of you: so did I abuse
 Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you:
 Under your hard construction must I sit,
 To force that on you, in a shameful cunning,
 Which you knew none of yours: what might you think!

Have you not set mine honour at the stake,
 And baited it with all th' unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving,

Enough is shown: a cyprus, not a bosom,
 Hides my poor heart. So, let me hear you
 Vio. I pity you. [speak.

Ol. That's a degree to love.
 Vio. No, not a guise; for 'tis a vulgar proof,

That very oft we pity enemies. [again.
 Ol. Why, then, methinks, 'tis time to smile

O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!
 If one should be a prey, how much the better
 To fall before the lion, than the wolf!

[Clock strikes.
 The clock upbraids me with the waste of
 time,—

Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you;
 And yet, when wit and youth is come to har-
 Your wife is like to reap a proper man: [weat,
 There lies your way, due west.

Vio. Then westward ho!
 Grace and good disposition 'tend your lady-
 ship!

You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me!
 Ol. Stay:

I pry'thee, tell me what thou think'st of me.
 Vio. That you do think you are not what you are.

 Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am. [be I

Ol. I would you were as I would have you
 Vio. Would it be better, madam, than I am.

I wish it might; for now I am your fool.
 Ol. O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful

In the contempt and anger of his lip!
 A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon

Than love that would seem hid: love's night is Cesario, by the roses of the spring, [noon.

By maidhood, honour, truth, and everything,
 I love thee so, that, man's all thy pride,

Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.
 Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,

For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause;
 But, rather, reason thus with reason fetter,— people have a special care of him: I would not have him miscarry, for the half of my dowry.

Mal. Oh, ho! do you come near me now! no worse man than Sir Toby to look to me! This concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. "Cast thy humble clough," says she; "be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue tang with arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity;"—and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And when she went away now, "Let this fellow be looked to;" fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, everything adheres together, that no dream of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance—What can be said? Nothing, that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter Maria, with Sir Toby Belch and Fabian.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils in hell be drawn in hell, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is.—How is't with you, sir? how is't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you: let me enjoy my private; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace! we must deal gently with him: let me alone.—How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man? defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you! an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him far more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress!

Mar. O lord!

Sir To. Prythee, hold thy peace; this is not the way: do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why, how now, my lawcock! how dost thou, chuck?

Mal. Sir!

Sir To. Ay, Biddy come you man! 'tis not for gravity to play at with Satan: hang him, but collared!

Mar. Get him to say his prayers; Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, what?

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not of godliness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all you shallow things: I am not of your generation; you shall know more hereafter.

Sir To. Is't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now, but take air, and taint.

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad.

Mar. The house will be the galleried.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a room, and bound. My niece is already in belief that he's mad: we may carry for our pleasure and his penance, till pastime, tired out of breath, cannot have mercy on him; at which time we bring the device to the bar, and send for a finder of madmen.—But now, Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge, and warrant there's vinegar and pepper in it.

Fab. Is't so saucy?

Sir And. Ay, is't, I warrant him.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] "You shall never know art, thou art but a saucy fellow."

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. "Wonder not, nor advise thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I have thee no reason for't."

Fab. A good note: that keeps you the blow of the law.

Sir To. "Thou comest to the law, and in my sight she uses thee kindly; liest in thy throat: that is not the challenge thee for."

Fab. Very brief, and exceeding good.

Sir To. "I will way-lay thee where, if it be thy chance to kill me."

Fab. Good.

Sir To. "Thou killest me like a dog; still you keep of the windy pet."

Fab. Still you keep of the windy pet.

Sir To. "Pare thee well; and I will mercy upon one of our souls; I will mercy upon mine; but my hope is in thee to look to thyself. Thy friends, as thou knowest, are my friends; and thy enemy, my enemy." If this letter move him not, cannot: I'll give't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion to use it.

Sir To. He is now in some commerce with me, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew; I will

in the corner of the orchard like a bombardier; draw, draw; and, as I draw, swear horrible; for it comes to me about sharply twanged off, gives man more apprehension than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away!

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing.

Sir To. Now, will not I deliver his letter; the behaviour of the young gentleman gives me out to be of good capacity and breeding; my employment between his lord and my niece is no less; therefore this letter, being so violently ignorant, will breed no terror in me.

Sir To. He will find it comes from a clod of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a note of valour; and drive the gentleman into his opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so frighten them that they will kill one another by the look, the nod, the wink, the nod.

Sir To. Here he comes with your niece; give him my love, and presently

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some message for a challenge.

Enter Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

Sir To. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, something in me that reproves my

Sir To. With the same 'haviour that your picture; wear this jewel for me; 'tis my picture; it hath no tongue to vex you: at shall you ask of me that I'll deny.

Sir To. Nothing but this,—your true love for my master.

Sir To. How with mine honour may I give him this?

Sir To. Well, come again to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well;

Sir To. I will acquit you, to-morrow: fare thee well; hath any quarrel to me; my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you; therefore, if you hold your life at any price, bestake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish withal.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubbed with unhatch'd rapier, and on carpet consideration; but he is a devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath he divorced three; and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre; hoh, nob, is his word; give't or take't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury: therefore get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked; for middle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so.—Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit.]

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrament; but nothing of the circumstance more. [Exit.]

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is Fabian? Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria. Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for't: I am one that would rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exit.]

Re-enter Sir Toby, with Sir Andrew.

Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil; I have not seen such a frago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck in, with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on: they say, he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. For on't, I'll not meddle with

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on't! an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capilet.

Sir To. I'll make the motion: stand here, make a good show on't: this shall end without the perdition of souls.—[Aside.] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Re-enter Fabian and Viola.

[To Fab.] I have his horse to take up the quarrel; I have persuaded him the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him; and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. There's no remedy, sir; he will fight with you for his oath's sake: marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow; he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. [Aside.] Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you; he cannot by the duello avoid it: but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on; to't.

Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath!

Enter Antonio. [Draws.

Vio. I do assure you, 'tis against my will.

[Draws.

Ant. Put up your sword.—If this young gentleman

Have done offence, I take the fault on me;

If you offend him, I for him defy you.

[Drawing.

Sir To. You, sir! why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.

[Draws.

Fab. O, good Sir Toby, hold! here come the officers.

Enter Officers.

Sir To. [To Ant.] I'll be with you anon.

Vio. [To Sir And.] Pray, sir, put your sword up, if you please.

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir;—and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word: he will bear you easily, and reins well.

1 Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit Of Count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, sir.

1 Off. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well,

Though now you have no sea-cap on; Take him away: he knows I know him.

Ant. I must obey.—[To Viola.] I must with seeking you:

But there's no remedy; I shall answer you.

What will you do? Now my necessity Makes me to ask you for my purse! It is Much more for what I cannot do for you Than what befalls myself. You stand alone

But be of comfort. Come, sir, away.

2 Off. I must entreat of you some of your money.

Vio. What money, sir? For the fair kindness you have shew'd me

And, part, being prompted by your need, Out of my lean and low ability

I'll lend you something: my having is much;

I'll make division of my present with you. Hold, there's half my colour.

Ant. Will you deep me? Is't possible that my deserts to you

Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt me. Lest that it make me so unkind to you

As to upbraid you with those kindnesses That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none.

Nor know I you by voice, or any feature. I hate ingratitude more in a man

Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness, Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption

Inhalts our frail blood. O heavens! these are the times that try men's hearts.

Ant. Come, sir, I pray you, go.

Ant. Let me speak a little. That you should here

I snatch'd one-half out of the jaws of death, Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love,

And to his image, which methought did shine Most venerable worth, did I devote me.

1 Off. What's that to me? The image is away!

Ant. But O how vile an idol proves Thou hast, Sebastian, done good men's shame.— In nature there's no blemish but the world's. None can be call'd deform'd but the world's.

Virtue is beauty; but the beautiful Are empty trunks, o'erflow'd with vanity.

1 Off. The man grows mad: Come, come, sir.

Ant. Lead me on.

[Exeunt Officers with Antonio.]

Vio. Methinks his words do from me

That he believes himself: so do not I. Prove true, imagination, O, prove true!

That I, dear brother, be now taken for a fool.

Sir To. Come hither, knight; some of most sage saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian: I do know

Yet living in my glass; even such, and in favour was my brother; and he went still in this fashion, colour, ornament,— for him I imitate;—O, if it prove, Tempers are kind, and salt waves fresh in love! [Exit.]

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare: his dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship,
 and I shan. [Exit.]
Sir To. A coward, a most devout coward, reject him. [Exit.]
Sir To. 'Tis I'll alter him again, and draw thy sword. [Exit.]
Sir To. Do; cuff him soundly, but never An I do not,— [Exit.]
Sir To. Come, let's see the event.
Sir To. I dare lay any money 'twill be nothing yet. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

Scene I.—The Street adjoining Olivia's House.

Enter Sebastian and Clown.
Clown. Will you make me believe that I am sent for you?
Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow:
 let me be clear of thee.
Clown. Well held out, if faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither.—Nothing that is so, is so.
Seb. I prythee, vent thy folly somewhere else:
 thou know'st not me.
Clown. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney.
 I prythee now, ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady: shall I tell her that thou art coming?
Seb. I prythee, foolish Greek, depart from me:
 I shall give worse payment.
Clown. By my troth, thou hast an open hand.
 These wise men, that give fools money, get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, Sir Toby Belch, and Fabian.
Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again?
Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there.—[Beating Sir Andrew.] Are all the people mad?
Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger
 at the house.
Clown. This will I tell my lady straight; I would not be in some of your coats for two pence. [Exit.]
Sir To. [Holding Sebastian.] Come on,
 we'll hold!

Sir And. Nay, let him alone: I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria; though I struck him first, yet
 it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.
Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go.
 Come, my young soldier, put up your iron:
 you are well fleshed; come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. [Disengaging himself.] What wouldst thou now?
 If thou dar'st tempt me farther, draw thy sword.

Sir To. What, what! Nay then, I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you. [Draws.]

Enter Olivia.
Ol. Hold, Toby! on thy life, I charge thee,
Sir To. Madam— [hold!]
Ol. Will it be ever thus! Ungacious wretch!

Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves, Where manners ne'er were preach'd. Out of my sight!

Be not offended, dear Cesario.—
Rudeshy, be gone!—I prythee, gentle friend, [Exit Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.]
 Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway
 In this uncivil and unjust extent.

Against thy peace. Go with me to my house;
 And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks
 This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou theraby Mayst smile at this: thou shalt not choose but go:

Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me,
 He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Seb. What relish is in this? how runs the stream!
 Or I am mad, or else this is a dream:—
 Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;
 If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

Ol. Nay, come, I prythee. Would thou'dst be rul'd by me!

Seb. Madam, I will.

Ol. O, say so and so ho. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Olivia's House.
Enter Maria and Clown; Malvolio in a dark chamber adjoining.

Mar. Nay, I prythee, put on this gown, and this beard; make him believe thou art Sir
 Topas, the curate: do it quickly; I'll call Sir
 Toby the whilst. [Exit.]

Clown. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in't; and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well; nor lean enough to be thought a good student;
 but to be said an honest man and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly as to say a careful man and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.
Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson.

In a voice,
Like to the old voice,
Your need to sustain;

Who, with dagger of talk,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries, Ah, ha! to the devil;
Like a mad lad,
Pursueth thee, dad;
Adieu, Goodman drive!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun;
This pearl she gave me, I do feel't and see't;
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio, then?
I could not find him at the Elephant;
Yet there he was; and there I found this credit,
That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service:
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust but that I am mad;
Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 'twere so,
She could not away her house, command her followers,
Take and give back affairs, and their despatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing.
As I perceive she does; there's something in't
That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter Olivia and a Priest.
Ol. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well,
Now go with me, and with this holy man,
To the chantry by; there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Pray me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: he shall conceal it,
While you are willing it shall come to note,
According to my birth.—What do you say?
Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with
you;
And having sworn truth, ever will be true.
Ol. Then lead the way, good father;—and heaven so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine!
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Street before Olivia's House.

Enter Clown and Fabian.
Fab. Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his
face.

Clo. Good Master Fabian, grant me an-
Fab. Anything. [other request.

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.
Fab. This is, to give a dog, and, in recompense, desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, and Attendants.
Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olivia,
friends?

Clo. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.
Duke. I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, sir; the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass; so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself; and by my friends
I am abused; so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my truth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me;
there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing,
sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a slaver to be a double-dealer: there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play;
and the old saying is, The third pays for all:
the triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Bennet, sir, may put you in mind.—One, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit.

Viola. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Enter Antonio and Officers.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well;
Yet, when I saw it last, it was beset with
As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war;
A bawling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable;
With which such seafaring grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss,

Cried fame and honour on him.—What's the matter?

I Of. Orsino, this is that Antonio That took the Phoenix and her fraught from Candy;

And this is he that did the Tiger board, When your young nephew Titus lost his leg: Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,

In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, sir; drew on my side;

But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me, I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief! What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,

Whom thou, in terms so bloody and so dear, Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble sir, Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me;

Antonio never yet was thief or pirate, Though, I confess, on base and ground enough, Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither; That most ingrateful boy there, by your side, From the rude sea's enraged and foamy mouth

Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was; His life I gave him, and did thereto add

My love, without retention or restraint, All his in dedication; for his sake

Did I expose myself, pure for his love, Into the danger of this adverse town;

Drew to defend him when he was beset: Where being apprehended, his false cunning (Not meaning to partake with me in danger)

Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance, And grew a twenty-years-removed thing, While one would wink; denied me mine own purse, Which I had recommended to his use Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be? Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before, (No interim, not a minute's vacancy,) Both day and night (did we keep company).

Duke. Here comes the countess: now heaven walks on earth.—

Enter Olivia and Attendants. But for thee, fellow,—fellow, thy words are madness: Three months this youth hath tended upon me; But more of that anon.—Take him aside.

Ol. What would my lord, but that he may not have, Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?—

Cesario. you do not keep promise with me. Vio. Madam!

Duke. Gracious Olivia,— Ol. What do you say, Cesario?—Good my lord,—

Vio. My lord would speak; my duty hushes

Ol. If it be aught to the old lady, as it is as fat and fulsome to mine ear, As howling after music.

Duke. Still so constant, lord. Ol. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What, to perverseness? your To whose ingrate and unauspicious altar My soul the faithful'st offerings hath out, That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I, Even what it please my lord, that become him.

Duke. Why should I not, but I should, Like to the Egyptian thief at point of jealousy, Kill what I love! a savage jealousy, That sometimes savours nobly.—But how

Since you to non-regardance cast my faith, And that I partly know the instrument, That screws me from my true place in your favour, Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still; But this your minion, whom I know you love, And whom, by heaven I swear, I honour more, Him will I tear out of that cruel eye, Where he sits crowned in his master's mischievous thought, Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are mischievous: I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, To spite a raven's heart within a dove.

Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willing To do you rest, a thousand deaths would

Ol. Where goes Cesario? Vio. After him, more than my eyes.

More than I love these eyes, more than my eyes, More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love mine.

If I do feign, you witness above Punish my life for tainting of my love!

Ol. Ah me, detested! how am I beguiled! Vio. Who does beguile you? who am I wrong?

Ol. Hast thou forgot thyself? Call forth the holy father.

Duke. [To Viola.] Whither, my lord?—Cesario, follow me. Duke. Husband?

Ol. Ay, husband; can he that does you wrong? Duke. Her husband, sirrah!

Vio. No, my lord. Ol. Alas, it is the baseness of thy

That makes thee strange thy property: Fear not, Cesario; take thy former name: Be that thou know'st thou art, and these

As great as that thou fear'st.— Re-enter Attendant with Puck. O, welcome!

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence, Here to unfold (though late) my

To keep in darkness, what occasion now Reveals before 'tis ripe) what thou dost see Hath newly pass'd between this youth and

Priest. A contract of eternal bond

by mutual joinder of your hands, directed by the holy close of lips,

and all the ceremony of this compact

in my function, by my testimony: I have travel'd but two hours.

Duke. O, thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be? When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case, that this own trip shall be thine overthrow? We'll see thee and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest— O, do not swear!

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, with his head broken. For the love of God, a surgeon!

Ol. What's the matter? Sir And. He has broke my head across, for the love of God, your help! I had more than forty pound I were at home.

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one of the very devil incarnate, my gentleman, Cesario?

Ol. O, his lifelings, here he is!—You was set on to do't by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you: You drew your sword upon me, without cause;

but I thought you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by me.—Enter Sir Toby Belch, drunk, led by a clown.—You shall hear more; but if you overhear more than he did.

Vio. Now now, gentleman! how is't with you? Sir To. That's all one: he has hurt me, and the end on't.—So, didst see Dick surround? Sir To. He's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour ago: his eyes were set at eight if the morning were past; I hate a drunken rogue.

Sir To. Away with him! Who hath made him? Sir To. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because you are a coxcomb, and a knave: a thin-faced knave,

Get him to bed, and let his hurt be

Enter Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;

But, had it been the brother of my blood, I must have done no less with wit and safety.

You throw a strange regard upon me, and by I do perceive it hath offended you: [that

Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons;

A natural perspective, that is, and is not I! Seb. Antonio! O my dear Antonio!

How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me, Since I have lost thee!

Ant. Sebastian are you? Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

Ant. How have you made division of yourself?— An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Ol. Most wonderful! Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a

Nor can there be that deity in my nature, Of here and everywhere. I had a sister, Whom the blind waves and surges have destroy'd.— Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my

Such a Sebastian was my brother too, So went he suited to his wat'ry tomb;

If spirits can assume both form and suit, You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am, indeed, But am in that dimension grossly clad, Which from the womb I did parturite.

Were you a woman, as the rest grow even, I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,

And say—Thrice welcome, drowned Viola! Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow,— Seb. And so had mine. Vio. And died that day, when Viola from

Had number'd thirteen years. Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul!

He finished, indeed, his mortal act, That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both But this my masculine usurp'd attire,

Do not embrace me till each circumstance Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump,

That I am Viola: which to confirm, I'll bring you to a captain in this town, [help

Where he my maiden weeds; by whose gentle I was preserv'd, to serve this noble count.

All the occurrence of my fortune since Hath been between this lady and this lord.

Seb. [To Olivia.] So comes it, lady, you have been mistook:

But nature to her bias drew in that.

You would have been contracted to a maid;

Now are you, therein, by my life, deceiv'd,

You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood.—

If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wreck.—

[To Viola.] Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,

Thou never shouldst love woman like to me.

Viola. And all those sayings will I over-swear;
And all those swearings keep as true in soul,
As doth that orb'd continent the fire
That reverts day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand;
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Viola. The captain, that did bring me first on shore,

Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some action,

Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suit,

A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Off. He shall enlarge him:—fetch Malvolio hither:—

And yet, alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Re-enter Clown, with a letter.

A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.—
How does he, sirrah?

Clow. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stove's end, as well as a man in his case may do: he has here writ a letter to you; I should have given it to you to-day morning: but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are delivered.

Off. Open it, and read it.

Clow. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman.—“By the Lord, madam.”

Off. How now! art thou mad?

Clow. No, madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow vox.

Off. Pr'ythee, read it thy right wits.

Clow. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Off. [To Fabian.] Read it you, sirrah.

Fab. [Reads.] “By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury.” The madly-used MALVOLIO.

Off. Did he write this?

Clow. Ay, madam.

Duke. This favours not much of distraction.

Off. See him deliver'd, Fabian: bring him hither.

My lord, so please you, these things farther thought on,

To think me as well a sister as a brother.
One day shall crown the alliance cut
Here at my house, and at my proper time.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to your offer.—

[To Viola.] Your master quits you;
your service done him.

So much against the mettle of your
So far beneath your soft and tender

And since you call'd me master for Here is my hand: you shall from this

Your master's mistress.

Off. A sister?—you
Re-enter Fabian, with Malvolio.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Off. Ay, my lord, the madman.

How now, Malvolio!

Mal. Madam, you have done me Notorious wrong.

Off. Have I, Malvolio?

Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you that letter:

You must not now deny it is your
Write from it, if you can, in hand,

Or say 'tis not your seal, nor your
You can say none of this: well, pray

And tell me, in the modesty of home,
Why you have given me such clear favour,

Bade me come smiling and cross'd

To put on yellow stockings, and to Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people

And, acting this in an obedient Why have you suffer'd me to be Kept in a dark house, visited by the

And made the most notorious gossamer

That e'er invention play'd on I tell you Off. Alas, Malvolio, this is not

Though, I confess, much like the
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's

And now I do bethink me, it was she First told me thou wast mad; thou smiling,

And in such forms which here were

Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be This practice hath most shrewdly

thee;
But when we know the grounds

Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and
Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good madam, hear me
And let no quarrel, nor no brawl

Taint the condition of this present
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope

Most freely I confess, myself and Toby Set this device against Malvolio

Upon some stubborn and unaccountable
We had conceiv'd against him: Maria

The letter at Sir Toby's great importune
In recompense whereof, he hath

How with a sportful malice it was May rather pluck on laughter than

If that the injuries be justly weigh'd
That have on both sides past.

Oh, Alas, poor fool, how have they baffled
me!
Clo. Why, "some are born great, some rise greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them." I was one, sir, in this larado,—one Sir Topas, sir; but that's all —By the Lord, fool, I am not mad;—"— it do you remember? "Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of
you."
Oh, He hath been most notoriously abus'd.
Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace;—
He hath not told us of the captain yet:
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls.—Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence.—Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man,
but when in other habits you are seen,
Cesario's mistress, and his fancy's queen.
[Exeunt all except Clown.]

SONG.

Clo.
When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came, alas! to wive,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With toss-pots still had drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.
A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.
[Exit.]

THE WINTER'S TALE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Leontes, King of Sicilia.
 Mamillius, his Son.
 Camillo, Antigonus, } Sicilian Lords.
 Cleomenes,
 Dion,
 Officers of a Court of Judicature,
 Sicilian Gentlemen.
 Rogero, a Sicilian Gentleman.
 Polixenes, King of Bohemia.
 Florizel, his Son.
 Archidamus, a Bohemian Lord.
 A Mariner.
 Gaoler,

An old Shepherd, reputed Father of Clown, his Son.
 Servant to the old Shepherd.
 Autolycus, a Rogue.
 Time, as Chorus.
 Hermione, Queen to Leontes.
 Perdita, Daughter to Leontes and Paulina, Wife to Antigonus.
 Emilia, a Lady, } attending the Queen
 Other Ladies, }
 Mopsa, } Shepherdesses.
 Dorcas, }
 Sicilian Lords and Ladies, Guards, Satyrs, Shepherds,
 Fishwives, &c.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Sicilia, sometimes in Bohemia.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. An Antechamber in Leontes' Palace.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves; for, indeed,—

Cam. Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say.—We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities and royal necessities made separation of their society, their loves, though not personal, have been attorneyed, with interchange of gifts and loving embassies; that they have been together, though absent; shook hands at ends of opposed winds. The heavens

Arch. I think there is not in the world malice or matter to alter it. You have speakable comfort of your young Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the promise that ever came into my notice.

Cam. I very well agree with you in hopes of him: it is a gallant child; indeed, physics the subject, makes him fresh; they that went on crutches are born, desire yet their life to see him.

Arch. Would they else be content to live?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other way they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, he would desire to live on crutches till he had one.

SCENE II.—Sicilia. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Hermione, Mamillius, Camillo, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the watry moon have been

The shepherd's note, since we have parted. Without a burden: time as long ago as I was born, my brother, with my mother, would be fill'd up, my brother, with my mother, And yet we should, for perpetuity.

hence to debt: and therefore, like a cipher, standing in rich place, I multiply to us we thank you many thousands more to go before it.

Stay your thanks awhile,
and say them when you part.

Sir, that's to-morrow.
Stay'd by my fears, of what may chance,

brought upon our absence, that may blow
winning winds at home, to make us say,
"This is put forth too truly." Besides, I have the your royalty.

We are tougher, brother,
and you can put us to't.

No longer stay.
One seven-night longer.

Very sooth, to-morrow.
We'll part the time between's then:

[and in that
Press me not, beseech you, so,
there is no tongue that moves, none, none i'

the world,
now, as yours could win me: so it should there necessity in your request, although

I denied it. My affairs ever drag me homeward: which to hinder,
in your love a whip to me; my stay

to you a charge and trouble: to save both,
I'll leave our brother.

Tongue-tied our queen? speak you.
Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace until

[You, sir,
had drawn oaths from him not to stay.

And to Bohemia's well; this satisfaction
in your love a whip to me; my stay

to you a charge and trouble: to save both,
I'll leave our brother.

Tongue-tied our queen? speak you.
Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my

peace until
[You, sir,
had drawn oaths from him not to stay.

And to Bohemia's well; this satisfaction
in your love a whip to me; my stay

to you a charge and trouble: to save both,
I'll leave our brother.

Tongue-tied our queen? speak you.
Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my

peace until
[You, sir,
had drawn oaths from him not to stay.

And to Bohemia's well; this satisfaction
in your love a whip to me; my stay

to you a charge and trouble: to save both,
I'll leave our brother.

Tongue-tied our queen? speak you.
Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my

peace until
[You, sir,
had drawn oaths from him not to stay.

And to Bohemia's well; this satisfaction
in your love a whip to me; my stay

to you a charge and trouble: to save both,
I'll leave our brother.

Tongue-tied our queen? speak you.
Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my

peace until
[You, sir,
had drawn oaths from him not to stay.

And to Bohemia's well; this satisfaction
in your love a whip to me; my stay

to you a charge and trouble: to save both,
I'll leave our brother.

Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?

My prisoner, or my guest? I lay your dread verily,
One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest, then, madam:
To be your prisoner should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit,
Than you to punish.

Her. Not your gaoler, then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were
You were pretty lordlings then. [boys;

Pol. We were, fair queen,
Two lads that thought there was no more to be
But such a day to-morrow as to-day, [hind,
And to be boy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two? [I' the sun,

Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs that did frisk
And bleat the one at th' other: what we chang'd,

Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd
That any did. Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd
heaven

Boldly, "Not guilty;" the imposition clear'd, Hereditary ours.

Her. By this we gather,
You have tripp'd since.

Pol. O, my most sacred lady, Temptations have since then been born to us;
for

In those unfledg'd days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young playfellow.

Her. Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion, lest you say
Your queen and I are devils: yet, go on;
Th' offences we have made you do, we'll
answer;

If you first shun'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you shipp'd not
With any, but with us.

Leon. Is he won yet?
Her. He'll stay, my lord.

Leon. At my request he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her. Never!

Leon. Never but once.

Her. What! have I twice said well? when was't before?

I prythee tell me; cram us with praise, and make us

As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying
Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages: you may ride us
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:—
My last good deed was to entreat his stay;
What was my first? it has an elder sister,

Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!

But once before I spoke to the purpose; when? Nay, let me hav't; I long.

Leon. Why, that was when Three crabbed months had soured themselves to death.

Ere I could make thee open thy white hand, And clap thyself my love: then didst thou utter, "I am yours for ever."

Her. It is Grace indeed.— Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:

The one for ever earn'd a royal husband; Th' other for some while a friend.

[Giving her hand to Polixenes.] Too hot, too hot! To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods.

I have tremor-cords on me,—my heart dances; But not for joy,—not joy.—This entertainment

May a free face put on; derive a liberty From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,

And well become the agent; it may, I grant: But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers,

As now they are; and making practis'd smiles, As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere

The mort o' the deer; O, that is entertainment My bosom likes not, nor my brows.—Mamillius,

Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. I focks! Why, that's my bawcock. What, hast smutch'd thy nose?

They say, it is a copy out of mine. Come, captain, [tain:]

We must be neat;—not neat, but cleanly, cap— And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,

Are all call'd neat.—[Observing Pol. and Her.] Still virginalling

Upon his palm!—How now, you wanton calf! Art thou my calf?

Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.

Leon. Thou want'st a rough pash, and the shoots that I have,

To be full like me:—yet they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so,

That will say anything: but were they false As o'er-dyed blacks, as wind, as waters,—false

As dice are to be wish'd by one that fixes No bourn 'twixt his and mine,—yet were it true

To say this boy were like me.—Come, sir page, Look on me with your welkin eye: sweet villain! [may't be?] Most dear'st! my collop!—Can thy dam?

Affection, thy intention stabs the centre; Thou dost make possible, things not so held,

Communicat' at with dreams;—(how can this be?)—

With what's unreal thou coactive art, And fellow'st nothing; then, 'tis very credent,

Thou mayst co-join with something; and thou dost;

(And that beyond commission; and I find it,)

And that to the infection of my mother. And hardening of my brow.

Pol. What means this?

Her. He something seems unwell.

Pol. How, my lord?

What cheer! how is't with you, but I feel it.

Her. As if you held a brow of much distraction.

Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good sense.

[Aside.] How sometimes nature will make itself

folly, Its tenderness, and make itself a part

To harder bosoms!—[To Her.] Looking

the lines Of my boy's face, methought I did recall

Twenty-three years, and saw myself in

In my green velvet coat; my dagger

Lest it should bite its master, and as

As ornaments oft do, too dangerous to

How like, methought, I then was to this

This squash, this gentleman.—Mamillius

Will you take eggs for money?

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leon. You will! why, happy man

dole!—My brother,

Are you so fond of your young prince,

Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, my

He's all my exercise, my mirth, my

Now my sworn friend, and then mine

My parasite, my soldier, statesman,

He makes a July's day short as December

And with his varying childishness cures

Thoughts that would thicken my brow.

Leon. So stands the Offic'd with me: we two will walk,

And leave you to your graver steps.

mine, How thou lov'st us, show in our

Let what is dear in Sicily, be cheap

Next to thyself and my young rover,

Apparent to my heart.

Her. If you would

We are yours! the garden: shall'st thou

there?

Leon. To your own bents dispose you

Be you beneath the sky.—[Aside.]

angling now,

Though you perceive me not how I give

Go to, go to!

[Observing Polixenes and Her.]

How she holds up the neb, the bill to

And arms her with the boldness of a

To her allowing husband!—Gone already

[Exit Polixenes, Hermione, and Mamillius.]

luch-thick, knees-deep, o'er head and fork'd one!

Go play, boy, play!—thy mother plays

Play too; but so disgrac'd a part, what

Will hiss me to my grave: contempt

clamour

Will be my knell.—Go play, boy, play,

Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere

I speak this, even at this present,
 I speak this, holds his wife by th' [absence, that little thinks she has been sluic'd in's and his pond fish'd by his next neighbour, by his scale, his neighbour: nay, there's comfort
 in't, [open'd,
 while other men have gates, and those gates are, against their will: should all despair, that have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind would hang themselves. Physic for't, there is a lowly planet, that will strike [is none;
 these 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful,
 think it,
 [cluded,
 from east, west, north, and south: be it con-siderado for a belly; know it;
 will let in and out the enemy, [us have the disease, and feel't not.—How now,
 I am like you, they say. [boy I
 Why, that's some comfort.

What, Camillo there?
 Cam. Ay, my good lord.
 Leon. To play, Mamillius; thou'rt an honest
 man.—
 Cam. This great Sir will yet stay longer.
 Leon. You had much ado to make his anchor hold;
 Cam. You cast out, it still came home.

Didst note it?
 Cam. He would not stay at your petitions;
 he was more material.
 [made Didst perceive it?—
 Cam. They're here with me already; whispering, rounding,
 as is a so-forth; 'tis far gone,
 I shall rust it last.—How came't,
 At the good queen's entreaty.

At the queen's, bet: good should be pertinent;
 Was this taken
 my understanding pate but thine?
 my conceit is soaking, will draw in the common blocks:—not noted, is't, of the finer natures? by some severals piece extraordinary! lower messes, are to this business purblind? say.
 Business, my lord! I think, most understand stays here longer.

Ha!
 Stays here longer.
 Ay, but why?
 To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties of your mistress. Satisfy [treaties that office. I have trusted thee, Camillo, with all the nearest things to my heart, as well as chamber-councils: wherein, priest-like, thou hast clos'd my bosom; I from thee departed my patient reform'd; but we have been in thy integrity, deceiv'd that which seems so,

Cam.

Be it forlaid, my lord!

Leon. To hide upon't; thou art not honest;

or,

If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,
 Which horses honesty behind, restraining From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted!

A servant grafted in my serious trust,
 And therein negligent; or else a fool,
 That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake
 And tal'st it all for jest. [drawn,

Cam.

My gracious lord,

I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful;
 In every one of these no man is free,
 But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
 Among the infinite doings of the world,
 Sometime puts forth: in your affairs, my lord,
 If ever I were wilful negligent,
 It was my folly; if industriously

I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
 Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
 To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
 Whereof the execution did cry out Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
 Which oft infects the wisest: these, my lord,
 Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
 Is never free of. But, beseech your grace,
 Be plainer with me; let me know my trespass
 By its own visage: if I then deny it,
 'Tis none of mine.

Leon.

Have not you seen, Camillo, (But that's past doubt; you have; or your eyeglass

Is thicker than a cuckold's horn,) or heard, (For, to a vision so apparent, rumour
 Cannot be mute,) or thought, (for cogitation Resides not in that man that does not think,)
 My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,
 (Or else be impudently negative, [say
 To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought,) then
 My wife's a hobbyhorse; deserves a name
 As rank as any flax-wench that puts to Before her troth-plight: say it, and justify it.

Cam.

I would not be a stander-by, to hear
 My sovereign mistress clouded so, without My present vengeance taken: shrew my heart,
 You never spoke what did become you less Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
 As deep as that, though true.

Leon.

Is whispering nothing?
 Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses?
 Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career
 Of laughter with a sigh? (a note infallible
 Of breaking honesty) horsing foot on foot?
 Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift? [blind

Hours, minutes! noon, midnight! and all eyes
 With the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only,
 That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing?
 Why, then the world, and all that's in't, is nothing;

The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
 My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these
 If this be nothing. [nothing,

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this disease'd opinion, and betimes;
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon. Say it be, 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my lord.

Leon. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pronounce thee a gross lord, a mindless slave;
Or else a hovering temporizer, that Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.

Cam. Who does infect her?
Leon. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging

About his neck, Bohemia: who—if I Had servants true about me that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits, [that
Their own particular thrifths,—they would do
Which should undo more doing: ay, and thou,
His cup-bearer,—whom I from meager form Have bench'd and rear'd to worship; who mayst see [heaven,

Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees
How I am gall'd,—mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a lingering dram, that should not work Madiciously, like poison: but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.

Leon. Make that thy question, and go rot!
Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation; sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve is sleep, which being spotted,

Is goods, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps!
Give scandal to the blood of the prince, my son,
Who, I do think, is mine, and love as mine,
Without ripe moving to't?—Would I do this?
Could man so blench?

Cam. I must believe you, sir:
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for't; [ness
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your high-
Will take again your queen, as yours at first, Even for your son's sake; and, thereby, for sealing

The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down.
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemian,

And with your queen. I am his cup-bearer:
If from me he have wholesome beverage
Account me not your servant.

Leon. Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt, speeds from
So leaves me to consider what is
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not? do not
know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis therefore
For, to yourself, what you do know,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good!
Your chang'd complexions are to me
Which shows me mine chang'd
A party to this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There's a
Which puts some of us in distrust
I cannot name the disease; and if it
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have
the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so.
As you are certainly a gentleman;
Clerk-like, experienc'd, who no
Our gentry than our parents' words
In whose success we are gentle,
you,

If you know aught which does
Thereof to be inform'd, in prison if
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I will not answer.
Do't, and thou hast the one half of me;
Do't not, thou spit'st at three ovals.

Cam. I will seem friendly, as thou
advise'st me.

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for
What case stand I in? I must be true
Of good Polixenes: and my ground of truth
Is the obedience to a master; and
Who, in rebellion with himself, will
All that are his, so too.—To do the
Promotion follows: if I could not
Of thousands that had struck another
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't, but Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment
not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I could
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is
To me a break-neck. Happy art thou,
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange!—Not
My favour here begins to warp.

Cam. Hail, most royal
Pol. What is the news?
Cam. None rare, but
Pol. The king hath on him such a
ance,

As he had lost some province, and a
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now
With customary compliment; when Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and
A lip of much contempt,

Her. As merry as you will.
Mam. A sad tale's best for winter.
I have one of sprites and goblins.

Her. Let's have that, good sir.
Come on; sit down:—come on, and do your best.

To fright me with your sprites; you're power-
Mam. There was a man,— [Full at it.]

Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on.
Mam. Dwell by a churchyard:—I will tell You'd crickets shall not hear it. [It softly;]

Her. Come on, then,
And give't me in mine ear.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and Guards.

Leon. Was he not there? his train? Camillo with him? [Never]

1 Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them;
Saw I men scour so on their way: I y'd them
Even to their ships.

Leon. How bless'd am I
In my just censure, in my true opinion!—
Alack, for lesser knowledge! How accurs'd
In being so blest!—There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom; for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present
The abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,

With violent hefts:—I have drunk, and seen the spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pander:—
There is a plot against my life, my crown;
All's true that is mistrusted:—that false villain,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him:
He has discover'd my design, and I Remain a pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick.
For them to play at will.—How came the pos-sion easily open? [Terns]

1 Lord. By his great authority;
Which often hath no less prevail'd than so,
On your command.

Leon. I know't too well.—
[To Hermione.] Give me the boy: I am glad you did not nurse him:

Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? sport?
Leon. Bear the boy hence; he shall not come about her;

Away with him!—[Exit Mamillius, attended.] and let her sport herself

With that she's big with; for 'tis Polixenes Has made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'd say he had not;
And I'll be sworn you would believe my saying,
How'er you lean to the nayward.

Leon. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say, "she is a goodly lady," and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add,
"Tis pity she's not honest, honourable:"
Praise her but for this her without-door form,

[Which, on my faith, deserves and straight
The shrug, the hum, or ha, those
That calumny doth use,—O, I am
That mercy does; for calumny will Virtue itself—these shrugs, those ha's,

When you have said "she's goodly," between,

Ere you can say "she's honest,"
known,

From him that has most cause to She's an adulteress.

Her. Should a villain
The most replenish'd villain in the world
He were as much more villain: you
Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook
Polixenes for Leontes: O then think
Which I'll not call a creature of toy
Lest barbarism, making me the owner Should a like language use to all the
And mannerly distinction—between—Betwixt the prince and beggar—between—She's an adulteress; I have said so More, she's a traitor; and one that
A federary with her; and one that
What she should slime to know her
But with her most vile principal, that
A bed-swarver, even as bad as those That vulgar give boldst titles;—
To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my Privy to none of this. How will this
When you shall come to clearer know-
You thus have publish'd me!—Gentle
You scarce can right me throughly
You did mistake.

Leon. No; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build
The centre is not big enough to hold
A schoolboy's top.—Away with her!
He who shall speak for her, is dead
But that he speaks.

Her. There's some ill plot
I must be patient till the heavens
With an aspect more favourable—
lords,

I am not prone to weeping, as our Commonly are: the want of which Perchance, shall dry your pities;
That honourable grief lodg'd here,
Worse than tears drown'd—between—
lords,

With thoughts so qualified as your Shall best instruct you, measure me
The king's will be perform'd!—
Leon. [To the Guards.] Shall I
Her. Who is't that goes with us?
your highness,

My women may be with me; for, you My plight requires it.—Do not fools;

There is no cause: when you shall

to my better grace.—Adieu, my lord:
I shall—My women, come; you have
leave.

Leon. Do, do our bidding; hence!
Enter Queen and Ladies with Guards.
Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Am I certain what you do, sir, lest your volence: in the which three great ones
your queen, your son.

For her, my lord,—
you to accept it, and will do't, sir,— questless

the eyes of heaven, and to you; I mean, which you accuse her.

If it prove as my wife; I'll keep my stables where then when I feel and see her, no farther treat her!

every lock of woman in the world,
every drop of woman's flesh, is false,

Leon. Hold your peace!
Good my lord,—
it is for you we speak, not for ourselves:

are accus'd, and by some putter-on,
will be damn'd for't; would I knew the villain.

land-damn him. Be she honour-less sure dishonour; the eldest is elder;
and the third, nine and some live;
this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine
honour.

I told them all; fourteen they shall not see,
bring false generations: they are co-heirs;
I feel rather gild myself, than they not produce fair issue.

Cease; no more.
is a dead man's nose; but I do see't and feel't.

you feel doing thus; and see withal instruments that feel.

If it be so,
need no grave to bury honesty:
is not a grain of it the face to sweeten
the whole dingy earth.

What! lack I credit?
I had rather you did lack than I.
my lord,

in this ground; and more it would content
me her honour true than your suspicion,
I should feel how you might.

Why, what need we formal instigation? Our prerogative could not your counsels; but our natural goodness

Imparts this; which, if you (or stapp'd
Or seeming so in skill) cannot or will not Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves,
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ordering on't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overtire.

Leon. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity,
(Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, naught for approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances Made up to the deed,) doth push on this proceeding:

Yet, for a greater confirmation,
(For in an act of this importance 'twere Most piteous to be wild,) I have despatch'd in post

To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomeira and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency: now, from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,

Shall stop or spur me. Have I done well?
1 Lord. Well done, my lord. [More]

Leon. Though I am satisfied, and need no
Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to the minds of others; such as he,
Whose ignorant credulity will not [Good],
Come up to the truth. So have we thought it
From our free person she should be confin'd,
Lest that the treachery of the two did hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us;
We are to speak in public; by mine
Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Sicilia. The outer Room of a Prison.

Enter Paulina and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison,—call to him;
Let him have knowledge who I am.—[Exit an Attendant.] Good lady!

No court in Europe is too good for thee,
What dost thou, then, in prison?—
Re-enter Attendant with the Keeper.

Now, good sir,
You know me, do you not?

Keep. For a worthy lady,
And one whom much I honour.

Paul. Pray you, then,
Conduct me to the queen.

Keep. I may not, madam: to the contrary
I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's ado,
To lock up honesty and honour from Th' access of gentle visitors!—Is't lawful,
pray you,
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?

Keep. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her.
Withdraw yourselves. [Exit Attendants.]

Keep. And, madam,
I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be't so, prythee [Exit Keeper.]

Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring.

Re-enter Keeper, with Emilia.
Dear gentlewoman,

How fares our gracious lady?

Emil. As well as one so great and so forlorn
May hold together: on her frights and griefs,
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater,)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Paul. A boy?

Emil. A daughter; and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives Much comfort in't; says, "My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you."

Paul. I dare be sworn:—
These dangerous unsafe luns! the king, beshrew them!

He must be told on't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take't upon me:
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more.—Pray you, Emilia,

Commend my best obedience to the queen:
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show it to the king, and undertake to be
Her advocate to the loudest. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight of the child:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honour, and your goodness, is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no lady living So meet for this great errand. Please your ladyship

To visit the next room, I'll presently Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer;
Who, but to-day, hammer'd of this design,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from it
As boldness from my bosom, let it not be
I shall do good. [doubted]

Emil. Now, be you blest for it!
I'll to the queen: please you, come something nearer.

Keep. Madam, if't please the queen to send the babe,

I know not what I shall incur to pass it,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir:
The child was prisoner to the womb, and is,
By law and process of great nature, thence Freed and enfranchis'd; not a party to

The anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.

Keep. I do believe it.

Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine oath,
Will stand betwixt you and danger.

SCENE III.—Sicilia. A Room in the

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, and

Attendants.

Leon. Nor night, nor day, no rest, weakness

To bear the matter thus,—more weary
The cause were not in being,—part of it

She, the adulteress; for the kingly
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the

And level of my brain, plot-proof to
I can hook to me; say, that she were Given to the fire, a moiety of my Might come to me again.—Where's the

I Atten. [Advancing.]

Leon. How does the boy?

I Atten. He took good rest to-day.

Leon. 'Tis hoped his sickness is discharged.

To see his

Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took Fasten'd and fix'd the shame out in Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his

And downright languish'd.—Leave me

—Go.

See how he fares. [Exit Attendants.]

He! no thought of him!

The very thought of my revenge
Recoil upon me: in himself too weak

And in his parties, his allies, to Until a time may serve for present

Take it on her. Camillo and I will Laugh at me, make their pastime of me

They should not laugh, if I could but Shall she, within my power.

Enter Paulina, with a ring.

1 Lord. You must

Paul. Nay, rather, good my lord,

to me:

Fear you his tyrannous passion more
Than the queen's life? a gracious

More free than he is jealous. [Exit Paulina.]

2 Atten. Madam, he hath night; commanded

None should come at him.

Paul. Not so late.

I come to bring him sleep.

That creep like shadows by him, and
At each his needless heavings, and

Nourish the cause of his awakenings:
Do come with words as needful and Honest as either, to purge him of that

That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What noise there, ho!

Paul. No noise, my lord; but a ferance

About some gossips for your highness

How! with that audacious lady!—Antigonus,
I told thee that she should not come about me: she would.

I told her so, my lord,

And on mine,

What! canst not rule her?

From all dishonesty he can: in this,

He take the course that you have done,

And shall not rule me.

Lo, you now! you hear:

Lo, you now! you hear:

Good my liege, I come,—

And your loyal servant, your physician,

And most obedient counsellor; yet that dares

As you at so in comforting your evils,

As such as most mean yours:—I say, I

And your good queen. [come]

Good queen! my lord, good queen;

I say, good queen;

And would by combat make her good, so

And the worst about you. [were I]

Let him that makes but trifles of his

And me: on mine own accord I'll off;

I'll do my errand.—The good queen,

And she is good, hath brought you forth a

And she is good; commands it to your blessing.

[Laying down the child.]

Out!

Hence with her, out o'

Intelligencing bawd! [door:]

Not so;

As ignorant in that, as you

And you are mad; which is enough, I'll war-

And this world goes, to pass for honest. [rant,

And you not push her out? Give her the bas-

And Antigonus.] Thou dotard, thou art woman-

And she is Partlet here;—take up the bas-

And up, I say; give't to thy crone. [tard]

For ever

He dreads his wife.

And I would you did; then, 'twere

And all your children yours.

And I am none, by this good light.

And one, that's here, and that's himself; for he

And the honour of himself, his queen's,

And his babe's, betrays to slander,

Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will not

(For, as the case now stands, it is a curse

He cannot be compell'd to't) once remove

The root of his opinion, which is rotten

As ever oak, or stone, was sound.

Leon. A callat

Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,

And now baits me!—This brat is none of mine;

It is the issue of Polixenes:

Hence with it: and, together with the dam,

Commit them to the fire!

Paul. It is yours;

And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,

So like you, 'tis the worse.—Behold, my lords,

Although the print be little, the whole matter

And copy of the father; eye, nose, lip,

The trick of his frown, his forehead; yea, the valley, [smiles]

The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek; his

The very mould and frame of hand, nail,

finger:— [made it]

And thou, good goddess Nature, which hast

So like to him that got it, if thou hast [fours]

The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all co-

No yellow in't, lest she suspect, as he does,

Her children not her husband's.

Leon. A grass hag!—

And, lo! thou art worthy to be hang'd,

That wilt not stay her tongue.

Ant. Hang all the husbands

That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself

hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.

Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord

Can do no more.

Leon. I'll have thee burned.

Paul. I care not:

It is a heretic that makes the fire,

Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant;

But this most cruel usage of your queen

(Not able to produce more accusation

Than your own weak-hing'd fancy) something

savours

Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,

Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon. On your allegiance,

Out of the chamber with her. Were I a tyrant,

Where were her life? she durst not call me so,

If she did know me one. Away with her.

Paul. I pray you, do not push me: I'll be

gone.

Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: Jove

send her

A better guiding spirit!—What need these hands!—

You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,

Will never do him good, not one of you.

So, so!—farewell; we are gone. [Exit.]

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to

this.—

My child! away with't!—even thou, that
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence, [rust
And see it instantly consum'd with fire;
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up
straight:

Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimony,) or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse,

And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire;
For thou sett'st on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, sir:
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

1 Lord. We can, my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leon. You are liars all. [credit:

1 Lord. Beseech your highness, give us better
We have always truly serv'd you; and beseech
So to esteem of us: and on our knees we beg
(As recompense of our dear services, Past, and to come) that you do change this
purpose,

Which being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue: we all kneel.

Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows:—

Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel
And call me father? Better burn it now,
Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live:
It shall not neither.—[To Antigonus.] You,

sir, come you hither:

You, that have been so tenderly officious
With lady Margery, your midwife, there,
To save this bastard's life,—for 'tis a bastard,
So sure as thy beard's grey,—what will you adventure

To save this brat's life!

Ant. Anything, my lord,
That my ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose: at least, thus much,—
I'll pawn the little blood which I have left,
To save the innocent:—anything possible.

Leon. It shall be possible. Swear by this Thou wilt perform my bidding. [sword,

Ant. I will, my lord.

Leon. Mark, and perform it,—(seest thou?)
Of any point in't shall not only be [for the fall
Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongu'd wife, Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin
thee,

As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry
This female bastard hence; and that thou bear it

To some remote and desert place, quite out
Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it,
Without more mercy, to its own protection,
And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune came to us, I do in justice charge thee, [tune
On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place,
Where chance may nurse, or end it. Take it up.

Ant. I swear to do this, though I death

Had been more merciful.—Come babe:

Some powerful spirit instruct the
To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears Casting their savageness aside, have Like offices of pity.—Sir, be present
In more than this deed doth re-blessing,

Against this cruelty, fight on thy Poor thing, condemn'd to loss! [Exit with No, I'll not

Leon. Another's issue.

2 Atten. Please your highness
From those you sent to the oracle
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion
Being well arriv'd from Delphos, landed,

Hasting to the court.

1 Lord. So please you, sir, Hath been beyond account. Twenty

Leon. They have been absent: 'tis
The great Apollo suddenly will have The truth of this appear. Prepare Summon a session, that we may
Our most disloyal lady; for, as she Been publicly accus'd, so shall she
A just and open trial. While she
My heart will be a burden to me
And think upon my bidding.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Street in Enter Cleomenes and Dion

Cleo. The climate's delicate; the sweet;

Fertile the isle; the temple much
The common praise it bears. I shall Dion. For most it caught me, the celebrated (Methinks I so should term thee)

reverence

Of the grave wearers. O, the sweet
How ceremonious, solemn, and un-

It was I the offering! But, of all
And the ear-deafening voice of the Kin to Jove's thunder, so surprised That I was nothing.

Dion. If this event of the Prove as successful to the queen
so!

As it hath been to us rare, please
The time is worth the use on't.

Cleo. Turn all to the best! These pro-
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

The violent carriage of it clear, or end, the business; when the oracle
by Apollo's great divine seal'd up)
the contents discover, something rare, then, will rush to knowledge.—Go,— truth horses!—
fractions be the issue!

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Sicilia. A Court of Justice.
Jews, Lords, and Officers, properly seated.
Leon. This session (to our great grief, we pronounce).

against our heart;—the party tried,
daughter of a king, our wife, and one,
too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd of this tyrannous, since we so openly in justice; which shall have due course,
by the guilt, or the purgation.
the prisoner.

[Queen
It is his highness' pleasure that the person here in court.—Silence!

and Ladies attending.
Read the indictment.

Hermione, queen to the king of Sicilia, thou art here and arraigned of high treason, in coming adultery with Polixenes, king of Botany, and conspiring with Camillo, to take the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy husband; the pretence whereof being by thyself partly laid open, thou, Hermione, didst counsel and aid them, for their safety, to fly away by night."

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but a testimony on my part no other [boot me what comes from myself, it shall scarce be "Not Guilty;" mine integrity counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,

But thus,—if powers divine

our human actions, as they do,
But not, then, but innocence shall make accusation blush, and tyranny [know while at patience.—You, my lord, best least will seem to do so) my past life

as chaste, as true,
I am now unhappy: which is more history can pattern, though devis'd play'd to take spectators: for, behold

me,—
of the royal bed, which owes of the throne, a great king's daughter,

number to a hopeful prince,—here standing
and talk for life and honour, 'fore me to come and hear. For life, I price it.

I weigh grief, which I would spare: for a dedicatee from me to mine, [honour, only that I stand for. I appeal

you can conscience, sir, before Polixenes

Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncourteous I [yond
Have strain'd, to appear thus: if one jot be
The bound of honour, or in act or will
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry, Vile, upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough;
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.

Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes, [not (With whom I am accus'd,) I do confess

I lov'd him, as in honour he requir'd;
With such a kind of love as might become A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded:

Which not to have done, I think had been in Both disobedience and ingratitude [me
To you, and toward your friend; whose love had spoke,

Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes; though it be dish'd
For me to try how; all I know of it

Is that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves wotting no more than I, are ignorant [selves,

Leon. You knew of his departure, as you
know

What you have underta'en to do in his absence.

Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams;
You had a bastard by Polixenes, [shame,
And I but dream'd it:—as you were past all (Those of your fact are so,) so past all truth:

Which to deny concerns more than avails;
for as

Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it, (which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it,) so thou

Shalt feel our justice; in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats;
The bug which you would fright me with, I
To me can life be no commodity: [seek,
The crown and comfort of my life, your favour,
I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,

But know not how it went: my second joy,
And first-fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barr'd, like one infectious: my third comfort,

Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast,
The innocent milk in its most innocent mouth,
Hal'd out to murder: myself on every post

Proclaim'd a strumpet; with immodest hatred,
The child-bed privilege denied, which 'longs
To women of all fashion; lastly, hurried
Here to this place, i' the open air, before
I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die? Therefore, proceed.
But yet hear this; mistake me not; no life,—
I prize it not a straw;—but for mine honour,
(Which I would free,) if I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmises,—all proof sleeping else
But what your jealousies awake; I tell you,
'Tis rigour, and not law.—Your honours all,
I do refer me to the oracle:
Apollo be my judge.

1 Lord. This your request
Is altogether just: therefore, bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt certain Officers.]
Her. The emperor of Russia was my father:
O that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial! that he did but see
The flatness of my misery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers, with Cleomenes and Dion.
Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,

That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have Been both at Delphos; and from thence have brought

This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's priest; and that, since then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in't.

Cleo. Dion. All this we swear.
Leon. Break up the seals, and read.

Off. [Reads.] "Hermione is chaste; Polixenes blameless; Camillo a true subject;
Leontes a jealous tyrant; his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found."

Lords. Now, blessed be the great Apollo!
Her. Prais'd!

Leon. Hast thou read truth?
Off. Ay, my lord; even so

As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle:
The sessions shall proceed: this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, hastily.
Ser. My lord the King, the king!

Leon. What is the business?
Ser. O sir, I shall be hated to report it!

The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed, is gone.

Leon. How! gone?
Ser. Is dead.

Leon. Apollo's angry; and the heavens
themselves

Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione faints.]
How now, there! [look down]

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen;—
And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence:

Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will
I have too much believ'd mine own Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life.—Apollo, Paul.

[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies.]
My great profaneness 'gainst shame
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes;
New woo my queen; recall the good
Whom I proclaim a man of truth;
For, being transported by my jealousy
To bloody thoughts and to revenge,
Camillo for the minister to poison
My friend Polixenes; which had not
But that the good mind of Camillo
My swift command, though I withal
with

Reward did threaten and encourage me,
Not doing it, and being done:

And fill'd with honour, to my heart's
Unclasp'd my practice; quit his office
Which you know great; and to the hazard

Of all uncertainties himself committ'd
No richer than his honour.—How he Thorough my rust! and how he Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina. Paul.
O, cut my lace, lest my heart, crack'd
Break too!

1 Lord. What it is this, good lady,
Paul. What studied torments, what
for me?

What wheels? racks? frowns? what
In leads, or oils? what old, or new?
Must I receive, whose every word
To taste of the most worst? Thy Together working with thy jealousy
Fancies too weak for boys, too great
For girls of nine!—O, think what
done,

And then run mad indeed,—stark mad!
Thy bygone fooleries were but sport;
That thou betray'dst Polixenes

thing.—
That did but show thee of a fool
And damnable ungrateful; nor were Thou wouldst have poison'd your
honour,

To have him kill a king;—poor boy!
More monstrous attending him; when
The casting forth to crows thy babe
To be or none, or little; though a
Would have shed water out of thy eyes
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the queen
Of the young prince, whose

thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so touch'd)
That could conceive a gross and Blemish'd his gracious name: this
Laid to thy answer: but the last,
When I have said, stay, was

queen,

queen,

queen,

queen,

The sweetest, dearest creature's dead; and no remorse for't.

1 Lord. The higher powers forbid!
word nor oath

And swear: if you can bring
And, or lustre, in her lip, her eye,
I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant!
For, being transported by my jealousy
To bloody thoughts and to revenge,
Camillo for the minister to poison
My friend Polixenes; which had not
But that the good mind of Camillo
My swift command, though I withal
with

Reward did threaten and encourage me,
Not doing it, and being done:
And fill'd with honour, to my heart's
Unclasp'd my practice; quit his office
Which you know great; and to the
hazard

Of all uncertainties himself committ'd
No richer than his honour.—How he
Thorough my rust! and how he
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina. Paul.
O, cut my lace, lest my heart, crack'd
Break too!

1 Lord. What it is this, good lady,
Paul. What studied torments, what
for me?

What wheels? racks? frowns? what
In leads, or oils? what old, or new?
Must I receive, whose every word
To taste of the most worst? Thy
Together working with thy jealousy
Fancies too weak for boys, too great
For girls of nine!—O, think what
done,

And then run mad indeed,—stark mad!
Thy bygone fooleries were but sport;
That thou betray'dst Polixenes

thing.—
That did but show thee of a fool
And damnable ungrateful; nor were Thou wouldst have poison'd your
honour,

To have him kill a king;—poor boy!
More monstrous attending him; when
The casting forth to crows thy babe
To be or none, or little; though a
Would have shed water out of thy eyes
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the queen
Of the young prince, whose

thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so touch'd)
That could conceive a gross and Blemish'd his gracious name: this
Laid to thy answer: but the last,
When I have said, stay, was

queen,

queen,

queen,

queen,

queen,

queen,

queen,

queen,

Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,

And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,

The heavens with that we have in hand are
And frown upon us. [Hungry]
Ant. Their sacred wills be done!—Go, get aboard:

Look to thy bark: I'll not be long before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste; and go not Too far i' the land: 'tis like to be loud weather;
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon't.

Ant. Go thou away:
I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid of the business. [Exit.]

Ant. Come, poor babe;—
I have heard, (but not believ'd,) the spirits o'
the dead

May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother Appear'd to me last night; for ne'er was dream

So like a waking. To me comes a creature, Sometimes her head on one side, some
another;

I never saw a vessel of like sorrow, [robes]
So fill'd, and so becoming: in pure white
Like very sanctity, she did approach [me];
My cabin where I lay; thrice bow'd before
And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her: "Good Antigonus,

"Since fate, against thy better disposition,
"Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
"Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
"Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
"There weep, and leave it crying; and, for
"Is counted lost for ever. Perdita, [the babe]
"I pray thee, call it; For this ungentle business,
"Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shall see
"Thy wife Paulina more:"—and so, with shrills,

She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect myself; and thought
This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys:
Yet, for this once, yea, superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
Either for life or death, upon the earth
Of its right father.—Blossom, speed thee well!

[Laying down the babe.]
There lie; and there thy character: there these; [Laying down a bundle.]
Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty, [wretch]
And still rest thine.—The storm begins.—Poor
That, for thy mother's fault, art thus expos'd
To loss and what may follow!—Weep I cannot,

not,

not,

not,

not,

not,

not,

not,

But my heart bleeds; and most accurs'd am I,
To be by oath enjoin'd to this.—Farewell!
The day frowns more and more;—then art
A lullaby too rough; I never saw [like to have The heavens so dim by day. A savage
clamour!—

Well may I get aboard!—This is the chase:
I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.
Enter an old Shepherd.

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wrong-ing the ancients, stealing, fighting.—Hark
you now!—Would any but those boiled brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather! They have scared away two of my best sheep; which I fear the wolf will sooner find than the master: if anywhere I have them,
'tis by the sea-side, browsing the ivy. Good luck, an't be thy will! what have we here?
[Taking up the child.] Mercy on's, a barge;
a very pretty barge! A boy, or a child, I wonder! A pretty one; a very pretty one:
sure some scape; though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work; they were warmer that got this, than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come; he hollowed but even now.
—Whoa, ho, ho!

Enter Clown.

Clow. Hillos, loa!

Shep. What! art so near! If thou'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ailest thou, man?

Clow. I have seen two such sights, by sea and by land;—but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky: betwixt the firmament
and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, boy, how is it?

Clow. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point. O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hog's head. And then for the land service,— to see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone;
how he cried to me for help, and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman:—but to make an end of the ship,—to see how the sea flapdragoned it:—but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them;—and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.

Shep. Name of mercy! when was this, boy?

Clow. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman,—he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by, to have the old man!

Clow. I would you had been by, to have the old man! I would you had been by, to have the old man!

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters!
look thee here, boy. Now bless thy soul, met'st with things dying, I with thee born. Here's a sight for a squire's cold here; take up, take up, boy! I should let's see; it was told me, I should be the fairies; this is some changeling—
What's within, boy?

Clow. You're a made old man, if you your youth are forgiven you, you're a live. Gold! all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and prove so: up with it, keep it close at home, the next way. We are lucky, boy, to be so still, requires nothing but let my sheep go:—come, good boy, way home.

Clow. Go you the next way with your ings. I'll go see if the bear be gone gentleman, and how much he has they are never curst, but when they hungry: if there be any of him left, let
him.

Shep. That's a good deed. If thou discern by that which is left of him, is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clow. Marry, will I; and you shall put him in the ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and good deeds on't.

ACT IV.

Enter Time, as Chorus.

Time. I, that please some, try all and terror

Of good and bad; that make and error,—

Now takes upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not to me,
To me or my swift passage, that I show O'er sixteen years, and leave the world untried

Of that wide gap; since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law, and in one self day
To plant and o'erwhelm custom.

The same I am, ere ancient'st order mows
Or what is now receiv'd: I witness it,
The times that brought them in; and will
To the freshest things now reigning, and stale

The glistering of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it. Your patience this I I turn my glass, and give my view growing,

As you had slept between. Look on the
Th' effects of his fond jealousies to you

Act 1, 2.

That he shuts up himself, imagine me,
And what to her adheres, which follows after,
To be argument of Time. Of this allow,
I never, yet that Time himself doth say,
He wishes earnestly you never may. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Bohemia. A Room in the Palace of Polixenes.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee anything; a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my country abroad, for the most part, been in exile; I desire to lay my bones there.
I seek for me; to whose feeling sorrows I might be some ally, or I between to think so; which yet As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not the rest of thy services by leaving me now;
I have of thee, thine own goodness made; better not to have had thee, than to want thee: thou, having made me richly manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee
the very services thou hast done; which if I cannot, to be more thankful to thee shall be my end; and my profit therein, the hearing thy voice. Of that fatal country, Sicily, which me with the remembrance of that king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen, and children, are even now to be lamented. Say to me, when sawest the prince Florizel, my son? Kings are unhappy, their issue not being gracious, as they are in losing them when they have proved their virtues.

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince. What his happier affairs may be, are unknown: but I have missingly noted, and frequent to his princely exercises than any he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far, that I have eyes and service, which look upon his re-verendness; from whom I have this intelligence:—that he is seldom from the house of a homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeak-able estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence.
But I fear the angle that plucks our son thither.
Thou shalt accompany us to the place; where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity, I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Pr'ythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside
the thoughts of Sicily.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise ourselves. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Bohemia. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Autolyus, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,
With height! the daisy wears the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With height! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!

Doth set my pugging tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that (firra-firra) chants,
With height! with height! the thrush and the jay,

Are summer songs for me and my wants,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time,
wore three-pile; but now I am out of service:

[Singing.]

But shall I go morn for that, my dear!
The pale moon shines by night;

And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the saw-shin budget,

Then my account I will may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.

My traffic is shreds; when the kite builds,
look to lesser linen. My father named me Autolyus; who being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a mappor-up of unconsidered trifles. With this and drab I purchased this caparison; and my revenue is the silly cheat: galloway and knock are too powerful on the highway; beating and hanging are terrors to me; for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it.—A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clow. Let me see: Every leaven wether—tod; every tod yields—pound and odd shilling;

fifteen hundred shorn,—what comes the wool to?

Aut. [Aside.] If the spring hold, the cock's
Clo. I cannot do't without counters.—Let me see: what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? "Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice"—What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nose-gays for the shearers,—three-man songmen all, and very good ones; but they are most of them meana and bases; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron, to colour the warden pies; yucca, dates,—none; that's out of my note: "nutmegs seven; a race or two of ginger,"—but that I may beg; "four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins of the sun."

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Grocelling on the ground.]

Clo. I' the name of me!—

Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck but off these rags; and then death, death!

Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir! the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones, and millions.

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel taken from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horse-man or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, by the garments he hath left with thee: if this be a horse-man's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee; come, lend me thy hand.

[Helping him up.]

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, O!

Clo. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O, good sir! softly, good sir! I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now! canst stand!

Aut. Softly, dear sir; [Picks his pocket.] good sir, softly. You ha' done me a charitable office.

[Money for thee.]

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little.

Aut. No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you, sir, I have a kinsman not past three-quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going; I shall there have money, or anything I want: offer me no money, I pray you, that kills my heart.

[Robbed you!]

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with trol-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince: I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clo. His vices, you would say; there's no virtue whipped out of the court; they have but abide.

Aut. Vices, I would say, sir. I have been since an apprentice; then a process-server, a bailiff; then a tinker's wife within a mile of my land and living lies; and having done many knavish professions, he settled me a rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him! Prig, for my life, he haunts wakes, fairs, and bearbaiting.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, ha' done me a mischief that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue is there; if you had but looked him over, him, he'd have ruin.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am a fighter; I am false of heart that way; that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I can stand and walk: I will even the way of you, and pace softly towards my home.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet.

Clo. Then fare thee well, I must go.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir!

Clo. Prosper you, sweet sir!—[Exit.] Your purse is not hot enough to your your spice. I'll be with you at your shearing too: if I make not this clean out another, and the shearers prove me to be unroll'd, and my name put in the list of virtue.

[Sings.]

*Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily heat the air—
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a minute.*

SCENE III.—Bohemian Cottage.

Enter Florizel and Perdita.

Fla. These your unusual weeds to whom do you give a life: no shepherds; but your peering in April's front. This your shearing is as a meeting of the petty gods, And you the queen on't.

Per. Sir, my presence

O, pardon that I name them; your presence

The gracious mark o' the land, you are

With a swain's wearing; and me, poor

Most goddess-like prank'd up; see how

In every mess have folly, and the feast

Digest it with a custom, I should

To see you so attired,—sworn, I think

To show myself a glass.

I bless the time
When my good falcon made her flight across
To this a ground.

Now, Jove afford you cause!
To see the difference forges dread; your great-shall not be unaid'd to fear. Even now I tremble

To think, your father, by some accident, should have this way, as you did: O, the fates!

What would he look, to see his work, so noble,

What would he say? Or should I, in these my borrow'd haunts, behold

nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, the shapes of beauty taken become a bull, and bellow'd; the green Nep-

Amun, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god,

As I seen now, a poor humble swain,

Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,

than not before mine honour, nor my lusts

more better than my faith.

O, but, sir,

your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis as it must be, by the power of the

Which then will speak; that you must change

my life.

Thou dearest Perdita, [not with o' the feast; or I'll be thine, my

Or not my father's; for I cannot be Thine own, nor anything to any, if

I be not thine: to this I am most constant,

Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle;

that you behold the while. Your guests are coming;

Let up your countenance, as it were the day of celebration of that nuptial, which we two have sworn shall come.

O lady fortune,

stand you auspicious!

Enter Shepherd, with Polixenes and Camillo,

Disguised: Clown, Mopsa, Dorcas, and other

Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

See, your guests approach:

And let's be red with mirth. [Dives, upon step. Fla, daughter! when my old wife

The day she was both pantiier, butler, cook, both dame and servant; welcom'd all; serv'd

all;

Would sing her song, and dance her turn;

As never and o' the table, now I' the middle;

On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire

With labour and the thing she took to speech it,

She would to each one sip. You are retir'd,

As if you were a feasted one, and not

The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid

These unknown friends to us welcome; for it is

A way to make us better friends, more known.

Come, quench your blushes, and present yourself.

That which you are, mistress o' the feast; come

And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,

As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. [To Pol.] Sir, welcome!

It is my father's will, I should take on me

The hostess-ship o' the day:—[To Cam.]

You're welcome, sir.

Give me those flowers there, Dorcas:—revere

For you there's rosemary and rue; these keep

Seeming and savour all the winter long;

Grace and remembrance be to you both,

And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess,

(A fair one are you,) well you fit our ages

With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,—

Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth

Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season

Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyflowers,

Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind

Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not

To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,

Do you neglect them?

Per. For I have heard it said,

There is an art which, in their piousness, shares

With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be;

Yet nature is made better by no mean,

But nature makes that mean; so, over that art

Which you say adds to nature, is an art

That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we

A gentler action to the wildest stock, [marry

And make conceive a bark of baser kind

By bud of nobler race: this is an art

Which does mend nature,—change it rather;

The art itself is nature.

[Exit]

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in gilly-

And do not call them bastards.

[Flowers,

Per. I'll not put

This dill in earth to set one slip of them;

No more than, were I painted, I would wish

This youth should say, 'twere well; and only

therefore

Desire to breed by me.—Here's flowers for Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;

The marigold, that goes to bed with the sun,

And with him rises weeping; these are flowers

Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given

To men of middle age. You are very wel-

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your

And only live by gazing.

[Flock,

Per. Out, alas!

You'd be so lean, that blasts of January

Would blow you through and through.—Now,
my fairest friend,
I would I had some flowers o' the spring, that might

Become your time of day;—and yours, and
yours,

That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing:—O Proserpina,
For the flowers now, that, frightened, thou let'st
From Dis's waggon! daisies, [fall
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets, dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maids; bold oxlips, and
The crown-imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one! O, these I lack,
To make you garlands of; and my sweet
To strew him o'er and o'er! [friend,

Flo. What, like a corse?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on;

Not like a corse; or if,—not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms.—Come, take your flowers:

Methinks I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun-pastorals: sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak,
sweet,

I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms;
Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too: when you do dance, I wish
you

A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do Nothing but that; move still, still so,
And own no other function: each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crown what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large; but that your youth,
And the true blood, which peeps fairly through
it,

Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You woo'd me the false way.

Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't.—But, come; our dance, I
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair, [pray;
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever

Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does, or seems,

But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cant. He tells her something,

That makes her blood look out; good
The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, mistress.

Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress.

To mend her kissing with.

Mop. Now, in

Clo. Not a word, a word; we should our manners.—

Come, strike up!

[Here a dance of Shepherds.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what for Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, himself

To have a worthy feeding; but I have

Upon his own report, and I believe it;

He looks like youth. He says he has

daughter:

I think so too; for never gar'd the moon

Upon the water, as he'll stand, and

As 'twere, my daughter's eyes; and, to

I think there is not half a kiss to be

Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances

Shep. So she does anything; then port it,

That should be silent: if young Doricles

Do light upon her, she shall bring him

Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master, if you did but hear lar at the door, you would never dance after a tabor and pipe; no, the burglar not move you: he sings several times than you'll tell money; he utters them had eaten ballads, and all men's ears his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: let come in: I love a ballad but even too
it be doleful matter merrily set down, pleasant thing indeed and sung lamely

Serv. He hath songs for man or woman all sizes; no milliner can so fit his with gloves: he has the prettiest for maids; so without bawdry, which with such delicate burdens of "dillies"

"fadings," "jump her and thump her"
where some stretch-mouthed rascal it were, mean mischief, and break a into the matter, he makes the maid to "Whoop, do me no harm, good man;

him off, slights him, with "Whoop, do harm, good man."

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talk'st of so able-conceited fellow. Has he any wares?

Serv. He hath ribands of all the colours rainbow; points, more than all the in Bohemia can learnedly handle;

they come to him by the gross; fine
disses, cumbries, lawns: why, he says

over, as they were gods or goddesses.

could think a snook were a she-angel, he so wants to she (swoon) hand, and the work about the square on't.

Clo. Pr'ythee, bring him in; and let him approach singing.

My. Forwarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in his tunes.

Clo. You have of these pedlars, that have more to them than you'd think, sister.

My. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

Loves as white as driven snow;

Uppas black as e'er was crow;

Loves as sweet as damask roses;

Mask for faces and for noses;

Bugle bracelet, necklace-amber;

Perfume for a lady's chamber;

Golden quoits and stomachers;

For my lads to give their dears;

Pins and poking-sticks of steel;

What maids lack from head to heel;

Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy;

Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry:

Come buy.

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me; but being enamoured as I am, it will also be the bondage of

My. I was promised them against the last; but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than that, or there be liars.

My. He hath paid you all he promised and may be, he has paid you more; which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids?
that they wear their plackets—where they could bear their faces? Is there not milking-time—when you are going to bed—or kiln-hole, or whistle off these secrets, but you must be tattling before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whispering. Clamour your tongues, and not a word more.

My. I have done. Come, you promised me a lowdry lace, and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was cozen-ed by the way, and lost all my money?

My. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners everywhere; therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

My. I hope so, sir; for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

My. Pray now, buy some; I love a ballad to put a life; for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune. How a weaver's wife was brought to bed of twenty many-bags at a burden; and how she longed to eat adders' heads, and tonds carbonadoed.

My. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true; and but a month old.

My. Very true; and but a month old.

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to't, one mistress Tale-porter, and five or six honest wives that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad? Mop. Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: and let's first see more ballads; we'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad, of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the four-score of April, forty thousand fathoms above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her: the ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too; another. [pretty one.]
Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of "Two maids wooing a man:"
there's scarce a maid west-ward but she sing it;
'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know,
'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG.

Aut. Get you hence, for I must go;

Where, it fits not you to know.

Dor. Whither? Mop. O whither?

Dor. Whither?

Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,

Thou to me thy secrets tell:

Dor. Me too, let me go thither.

Mop. Or thou go'st to the grange or mill;

Dor. If to either, thou dost ill.

Aut. Neither. Dor. What, neither?

Aut. Neither.

Dor. Thou hast sworn my love to be;

Mop. Thou hast sworn it more to me;

Then, whither go'st? say, whither?

Clo. We'll have this song out anon by ourselves: my father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them.—Come, bring away thy pack after me.—Wench, I'll buy for you both.—Pedlar, let's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.

Aut. [Aside.] And you shall pay well for 'em.

[Singing.] Will you buy any tape,

Or lace for your cape,

My dainty duck, my dear-a

Any silk, any thread,

Any toys for your head,

Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a!

Come to the pedlar;

Money's a meddler,

That doth utter all men's ware-a.

[Exit, with Dorcas and Mopsa.]

Re-enter Servant, Autolycus following.

Serv. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, threeswine-herds, that have made themselves all men of hair,—they call themselves saltiers: and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gullymawfry of gambols, because they are not in't; but they themselves are o' the mind (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away! we'll none on't: here has been too much homely foolery already.—I know, sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us: pray, let's see these four threes of herdsmen.

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.

Shep. Leave your prating; since these good men are pleased, let them come in, but quickly now.

Serv. Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.]

Re-enter Servant, with Twelve Rustics habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exeunt.

Pol. [To Shep.] O, father, you'll know more of that hereafter.—[part them.]

[Aside.] Is it not too far gone? 'Tis time to let's simple, and tells much. [To Flo.] How now, fair shepherd!

Your heart is full of something, that does take Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young,

And handed love as you do, I was wont To load my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd

The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd To her acceptance; you have let him go, [it And nothing mated with him. If your lass Interpretation should abuse, and call this Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited For a reply, at least, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old sir, I know She prizes not such trifles as these are: [lock'd The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and Up in my heart; which I have given already, But not deliver'd.—O, hear me breathe my life Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem, Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,

As soft as dove's down, and as white as it, Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow That's bolted by the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this?—

How prettily the young swain seems to wash The hand, was fair before!—I have put you But, to your protestation; let me hear [out:—What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more Than he, and men,—the earth, the heavens, and all:

That, were I crown'd the most happy arch,

Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest That ever made eye averse; had I more knowledge, More than was ever man's,—I would not Without her love: for her employ I should Commend them, and condemn them,

Or to their own perdition. Fairly said.

Pol. This shows a sound affection. But, my daughter,

Say you the like to him? I cannot say.

Per. So well, nothing so well; no, nor more. By the pattern of mine own thought, I think

The purity of his. Take hands, a hand!

Shep. And, friends unknown, you shall hear to't:

I give my daughter to him, and will make Her portion equal his.

Flo. O, that might be! I'll the virtue of your daughter: and you shall have more than you can dream of.

Enough then for your wonder. [part them.]

Contract us 'fore these witnesses. Come, your daughter.

Shep. And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, before you Have you a father?

Flo. I have: but what of that?

Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither does, nor cares.

Pol. Methinks a father Is, at the nuptial of his son, a guest.

That best becomes the table. Pray you, more;

Is not your father grown incapable Of reasonable affairs? is he not staid?

With age, and altering rheum? Can he hear?

Know man from man? dispute like an ass? Lies he not bed-rid? and again, does he not

But what he did being childish? No, no, no.

Flo. He has his health, and ampler strength, Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard, you offer him, if this be so, a wrong.

Something unillial: reason, my son, Should choose himself a wife; but as for

The father (all whose joy is nothing else But fair posterity) should hold some other

In such a business. I yield all this.

But, for some other reasons, my grace, which 'tis not fit you know, I hold it

My father of this business. Let him say.

Pol. He shall not.

Pol. Pr'ythee, let him.

Flo. No, he shall not.

Let him, my son: he shall not need My blessing of thy choice. [to grieve]

Come, come, he must not.—Mark your divorce, young sir!

[Discovering himself.]

I dare not call; thou art too base That thou affect'st a sheep-hook!—Thou old

knave, I am sorry, that, by hanging thee, I can shorten thy life one week.—And thou, my excellent witchcraft, who, of force, must show thy royal fool thou cop'st with,—[know]

I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with bricks, and made more homely than thy state.—For thee, fond boy, I may ever know thou dost but sigh [boy, that thou no more shalt never see this knave, [as ever]

I would thou shalt, we'll bar thee from succe-

ding thee of our blood, no, not our kin,

for thou Dencelion off!—mark thou my words:—[time,]

Follow us to the court.—Thou, churl, for this trick, full of our displeasure, yet we free

thee from the dead blow of it.—And you, enough, enough a herdsman; yea, him too, enough thee,—if ever henceforth thou [in,

thy rural latch to his entrance open,

thy body more with thy embraces,

thy death as cruel for thee, [as ever]

Even here undone!

I am not much afraid; for once or twice the villainous sun that shines upon his court, has put his visage from our cottage, but not you, no good!

Will't please you, [you,

of your own state take care: this dream of mine, [know]

now awake, I'll queen it no inch farther, than mine eyes, and weep.

Why, how now, father!

ere thou diest.

If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd To die when I desire. [Exit.]

Flo. Why look you so upon me? I am but sorry, not afraid; delay'd;

But nothing alter'd: what I was, I am: More straining on, for plucking back; not following My leash unwillingly, [know]

Gracious my lord,

You know your father's temper: at this time He will allow no speech,—which I do guess

You do not purpose to him;—and as hardly Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:

Then, till the fury of his highness settle, Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.

I think, Camillo!

Even he, my lord.

Per. How often have I told you 'twould be How often said, my dignity would last [thou]

But till 'twere known!

It cannot fail, but by The violation of my faith; and then,

Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together, And mar the seeds within! Lift up thy looks:

From my succession wipe me, father; I Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am; and by my fancy; if my reason Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;

If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness, Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir.

Flo. So call it: but it does fulfil my vow, I needs must think it honest. Camillo,

Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be therat glean'd; for all the sun sees, or

The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hide

In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath To this my fair belov'd: therefore, I pray you,

As you have ever been my father's honour'd friend, [not

When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean To see him any more,) cast your good counsels

Upon his passion: let myself and fortune Tag for the time to come. This you may

And so deliver,—I am put to sea [know

With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore; And, most opportune to our need, I have

A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O my lord, I would your spirit were easier for advice,

Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita.—[Taking her aside.]

[To Camillo.] I'll hear you by and by.

And that unhappy king, my master, whom I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo, I am so fraught with curious business, that I leave out ceremony. [Going.]

Cam. Sir, I think You have heard of my poor services, if the love That I have borne your father!

Flo. Very nobly Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music, To speak your deeds; not little of his care To have them recompens'd as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord, If you may please to think I love the king, And, through him, what's nearest to him, which is

Your gracious self, embrace but my direction, (If your more ponderous and settled project May suffer alteration,) on mine honour I'll point you where you shall have such receiving

As shall become your highness; where you Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see, There's no disjunction to be made, but by, As heavens forefend! your ruin;) marry her; And (with my best endeavours in your absence) Your discontenting father strive to qualify, And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo, May this, almost a miracle, be done? That I may call thee something more than And, after that, trust to thee. [Man.]

Cam. Have you thought on A place whereto you'll go?

Flo. Not any yet: But as th' unthought-on accident is guilty To what we wildly do, so we profess Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me! This follows,—if you will not change your purpose, But undergo this flight,—make for Sicilia; And there present yourself and your fair princess

(For so, I see, she must be) 'fore Leontes; She shall be habit'd as it becomes The partner of your bed. Methinks I see Leontes, opening his free arms, and weeping His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgiveness,

As 'twere if the father's person; kisses the hands Of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him [One] 'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness,—the He chides to hell, and bids the other grow Faster than thought, or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo, What colour for my visitation shall I Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king, your father, To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir, The manner of your bearing towards him, with

What you, as from your father, shall Things known betwixt us three, I'll set down:

The which shall point you forth at court. What you must say; that he shall hear. But that you have your father's honour And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you. There is some say in this.

Cam. A course more Than a wild dedication of yourself To unpath'd waters, undream'd of certain To miseries enough: no hope to help But, as you shake off one, to take another. Nothing so certain as your anchors. Do their best office, if they can but stay. Where you'll be loth to be! Besides, Prosperity's the very bond of love, Whose fresh complexion, and whose Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true! I think affliction may subdue the flesh, But not take in the mind.

Cam. There shall not, at your father's bidding, Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo, She is as forward of her breeding, as She is i' the rear of our birth.

Cam. I cannot say so. She lacks instructions, for she seems To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir, I'll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prattling Camillo, But O, the thorns we stand upon! Preserver of my father, now of me, The medicine of our house!—how shall We be not furnish'd like Bohemia's? Nor shall appear in Sicilia.

Cam. My lord, Fear none of this: I think you know Do all lie there; it shall be so my care To have you royally appointed, as if The scene you play were mine. For that you may know you shall not want one word.

Enter Autolyon. Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty! Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple man! I have sold all my trappings, counterfeit stone, not a riband, finger-der, brooch, table-book, ballad, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, pack from fasting: they throng about me, as if my trinkets had been gold, and brought a benediction to the poor, which means I saw whose purse picture; and what I saw, to my member. My clown (who was a thing to be a reasonable man) grew with the wenches' song, that he wove his petticoats till he had both turn and look so drew the rest of the herd to me, that were pinch'd a placket, it was senseless; 'twas as if I had Lays off, that hung in chains: no feeling, no feeling, but my sir's song, and adding the nothing of it. So that, in this festival purse; and had not the old man come with a whoo-huh against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my clowns from the end, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

(Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita come forward.) Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means think there as you arrive, shall clear that doubt. And those that you'll procure from my Leontes,—

Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you! I speak shown fair. [Here!—] We'll make an instrument of this; omit nothing may give us aid.

Aut. [Aside.] If they have overheard me thus, why hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow! Why shakest thou so? Fear not, man: here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.

Cam. Why, be so still; here's nobody will hurt thee from thee; yet, for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange, therefore, (thou must think, there's a necessity in't) and change garments with some gentleman: though the pennyworth on thee be the worst, yet hold thee, there's no harm in't.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.—[Aside.] I am as well enough.

Cam. Say, pr'ythee, despatch: the gentleman is half flayed already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir?—[Aside.] I will be quick on't.

Cam. Despatch, I pr'ythee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I can't with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—[To and Autol.] exchange garments. (Let my prophecy come to you!) you must retire yourself and pluck it o'er your brow; unfile your face; smooth the wrinkles; and, as you can, dislodge the truth of your own seeming; that you may not be fear eyes over you) to ship-board that I may bear a part.

Aut. No remedy,—

Should I now meet my father, I would not call — a son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have No hat.—[Giving it to Per.] Come, lady, come.—Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir. Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot! Pray you, a word. [They converse apart.]

Cam. [Aside.] What I do next, shall be to tell the king

Of this escape, and whither they are bound; Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail, To force him after: in whose company I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!— Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better. [Exit Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.]

Aut. I understand the business; I hear it: to have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse; a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do anything extempore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels: if I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do't; I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my profession.

Re-enter Clown and Shepherd. Aside, aside—here is more matter for a hot brain: every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Cl. See, see, what a man you are now! There is no other way, but to tell the king she's a changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Cl. Nay, but hear me. Shep. Go to, then.

Cl. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her; those secret things, all but what she has with her; this being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Cl. Indeed, brother-in-law was the farthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aside.] Very wisely, puppies!

Shep. Well, let us to the king: there is that in this farrel will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clo. Pray heartily be at palace.
Aut. [Aside.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance:—let me pocket up my pedlar's excrement.—[Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustics! whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.
Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and anything that is fitting to be known? discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.
Aut. A lie; you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying: it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie: but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore, they do not give us the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?
Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? 'Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-pé; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: whereupon, I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.
Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?
Shep. I know not, an't like you.
Clo. Advocate's the court word for a pbeasant: say, you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pbeasant, cock nor hen.
Aut. How bless'd are we that are not simple men!

Yet nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.
Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there! what's i' the fardel? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in that fardel and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.
Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy, and air himself: For, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir, about his passing till it be brought you.
Aut. If that shepherd be not now, I will trust you. Walk before toward the castle: go on the right hand: I will but have upon the hedge, and follow you.
Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say, even blessed.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us: he was provided to do us good.

[Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.]
Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see, in my mouth, I am courted now with a golden occasion, gold, and a means to do the good that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, and, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me a fool for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to him will I present them: there may be matter in it.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

Scene I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of Leontes.
 Enter Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, and others.

Aut. Sir, you have done enough, and have performed a noble-like sorrow; no fault could you make, which you have not redeemed; indeed paid more penitence than done trespass; at the last, with these forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember her and her virtues, I cannot forget the blessings in them; and so still think of you wrong I did myself; which was so much, and heinous it hath made my kingdom; and destroyed the sweetest companion, that e'er I had his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord; I, me by one, you wedded all the world, from the all that are, took something good, would a perfect woman, she you kill'd would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd! I did so; but thou strik'st me to say I did; it is as bitter as my thought: now, you might have spoken a thousand things that would have done the time more benefit, and grac'd your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those, who would have him wed again.

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Dion. If you would not so, You pity not the state, nor the remembrance Of his most sovereign name; consider little What dangers, by his highness' fall of issue, May drop upon his kingdom, and devour Uncertain lookers-on. What were more holy, Than to rejoice the former queen is well! What holier than,—for royalty's repair, For present comfort, and for future good,— To bless the bed of majesty again

With a sweet fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy, Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes; For has not the divine Apollo said, Is't not the tenor of his oracle, That king Leontes shall not have an heir, Till his lost child be found? which, that it shall,

Is all as monstrous to our human reason, As my Antigonus to break his grave, And come again to me; who, on my life, Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel, My lord should to the heavens be contrary, Oppose against their wills.—[To Leon.] Care not for issue;

The crown will find an heir: Great Alexander Left his to the worthiest; so his successor Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,— Who hast the memory of Hermione, I know, in honour,—O, that ever I [now, Had squar'd me to thy counsel! then, even I might have look'd upon my queen's full Have taken treasure from her lips,— [eyes; And left them

Paul. More rich, for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak'st truth. No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one worse, And better us't, would make her sainted spirit Again possess her corse; and, on this stage, (Where we offenders now appear,) soul-ver'd, Begin, "And why to me?"

Paul. Had she such power, She had just cause.

Leon. She had; and would incense me To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so: Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark Her eye, and tell me for what dull part I'd You chose her; then I'd shriek, that even your

Should rift to hear me; and the words that Should be, "Remember mine." [follow'd

Leon. Stars, stars, And all eyes else deal coals!—Fear thou no I'll have no wife, Paulina. [wife; Will you swear

Paul. Never to marry, but by my free leave!

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
A front his eye.

Cleo. Good madam,—

Paul. I have done.
Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will,—give me the office
To choose you a queen: she shall not be so young

As was your former; but she shall be such.
As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should
To see her in your arms.

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us.

Paul. That
Shall be when your first queen's again in breath;
Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman. [rize].

Gent. One that gives out himself prince Flo-son of Polixenes, with his princess, (she The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? he comes not Like to his father's greatness: his approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need and accident. What train?

Gent. But few,
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with him?

Gent. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth,
I think,

That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione,
As every present time doth boast itself

Above a better, gone, so must thy grave
Give way to what's seen now! Sir, you yourself
Have said and writ so, (but your writing now Is colder than that theme,) "She had not been,
Nor was not to be equal'd;"—thus your verse
Flow'd with her beauty once: 'tis shrewdly
To say you have seen a better.

Gent. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot; (your pardon)
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the
Of all professors else; make proselytes [zeal
Of who she but bid follow.

Paul. How! not women?

Gent. Women will love her, that she is a woman

More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.

Leon. Go, Cleomenes;
Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends,
Bring them to our embayment.—Still, 'tis strange,

[Exit Cleomenes, Lords, and Gentleman.]
He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince (Jewel of children) seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord: there was not full a month
Between their births,

Leon. P'rythee, no more;
know'st

He dies to me again when talk'd of
When I shall see this gentleman, O my Will bring me to consider that which Unfurnish me of reason.—They are Re-enter Cleomenes, with Florio,

and others.

Your mother was most true to wedlock
For she did print your royal father's Conceiving you: were I but twenty
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you
As I did him; and speak of something
By as perform'd before. Most dearly
And you, fair princess,—goddess I do
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder You, gracious couple, do! And how (All mine own folly) the society
Amity too, of your brave father; when Though bearing misery, I desire my Once more to look on him.

Flo. By his com-

Have I here touch'd Sicilia, and from Give you all greetings, that a king, at
Can send his brother: and, but indirectly (Which waits upon worn times) hath
His wish'd alidity, he had himself
The land and waters 'twixt your throne Mensur'd to look upon you; when (He bade me say so) more than all the
And those that bear them, living.

Leon. O, my lord,

(Good gentleman,) the wrongs I have these stir

Afresh within me; and these thy offices
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness.—
As is the spring to th' earth. And how Expos'd this paragon to the fearful
(At least ungently) of the dreadful
To greet a man not worth her pains,
Th' adventure of her person!

Flo. She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike
That noble honour'd lord, in fear'd and Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from whose daughter

His tears proclaim'd his, parting with (A prosperous south-wind friendly) was
cross'd,

To execute the charge my father gave
For visiting your highness: my last
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in which Here where we are.

Leon. The bless'd gods
Purge all infection from our air, which Do climate here! You have a holy A graceful gentleman; against whose

as it is, I have done since
I wash the heavens, taking angry note,
As he from heaven merits it) with you, (boon, Worthy his goodness. What might I have
At last a son and daughter now have look'd
And goodly things as you!

Leon. Enter a Lord.

Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Was not the proof so nigh. Please you, great

Paul. Bohemia greets you from himself by me; Desires you to attach his son, who has (The dignity and duty both cast off)
And from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia I speak.
Here in your city; I now came from
I speak amazedly; and it becomes [him:
My marvel and my message. To your court Wishes he was hastening, (in the chase, it seems,

At this fair couple,) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and Her mother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whose honour and whose honesty, till now,
Endur'd all weathers.

Leon. Lay't so to his charge:
With the king your father.

Paul. Who! Camillo?

Leon. Camillo, sir; I spoke with him; who now

Has these poor men in question. Never saw I Watch so quick: they kneel, they kiss the earth;

Persons themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemus stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Flo. O my poor father!—
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?

Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:—
The odds for high and low's alike.

Paul. My lord,

Is this the daughter of a king?

Leon. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Flo. That once, I see, by your good father's speed,

Will come as very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were first in duty; and as sorry
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Paul. Dear, look up.
Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us, with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves.—Beseech you,
sir,

Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now: with thought of such affections,

Step forth mine advocate; at your request,
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your Jew
Which he counts but a trifle. [Jealous mistress,
Paul. Sir, my liege,

Your eye hath too much youth in't; not a month [such gazes
Pere your queen died, she was more worth
Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made.—[To Florio.]

But your petition
Is yet unanswer'd. I will to your father:
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am bound to them and you; upon which errand

I now go toward him; therefore, follow me,
And mark what way I make: come, good my lord.

[Exit Leon.]

SCENE II.—Sicilia. Before the Palace.

Enter Autolycus and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

1 Gent. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazement, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this, methought I heard the shepherd say he found the child.

[It.
Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of 1 Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business;—but the changes I perceived in the king and Camillo were very notes of admiration; they seem'd almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture: they look'd as they had heard of a world ransom'd, or one destroyed:
a notable passion of wonder appear'd in them;
but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say if the importance were joy or sorrow,—but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be. [Enter Rogero.]
Here comes a gentleman, that happily knows more. The news, Rogero!

2 Gent. Nothing but bonfires: the oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found:
such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it. [Enter a third Gentleman.] Here comes the lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more.—How goes it now, sir?
This news, which is call'd true, is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion: has the king found his heir?

3 Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of queen Hermione; her jewel about the neck of it; the letter of An-

Would you not deem it breath'd and that Did verily bear blood? [those veins
Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.

Leon. The fixture of her eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with art.
Paul. I'll draw the curtain:
My lord's almost so far transported, that He'll think anon it lives.

Leon. O sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together!
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let's alone.

Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd
I could afflict you farther. [you; but Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: what fine
chisel

Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man
For I will kiss her. [mock me,
Paul. Good my lord, forbear:
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?

Leon. No, not these twenty years.
Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.

Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'll
think

(Which I protest against) I am assisted By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: 'what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd
You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still;

Or those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.

Leon. Proceed:
No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music, awake her; strike!—[Music.
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more;
approach;

Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come:
I'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from
him

Dear life redeems you.—You perceive, she [Hermione comes down from the pedestal.
Start not; her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again; for then

You kill her double. Nay, present your hand:
When she was young, you woo'd her; now,
in age,

Is she become the suitor.

Leon. [Embracing her.] O, show me
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

Pol. She embraces him.
Cam. She hangs about his neck:
If she pertain to life, let her speak to Pol. Ay, and make it manifest that
Or how stol'n from the dead.

Paul. That she is Paul. Were it but told you, should be known
Like an old tale: but it appears she speaks Though yet she speak not. Mark it
while.—

Please you to interpose, fair madam,
And pray your mother's blessing.—
Our Perdita is found.

[Presenting Perdita, who kneels to
Her. You gods, look down
And from your sacred vials pour your Upon my daughter's head!—Till she own,

Where hast thou been preserv'd?
how found
Thy father's court? for thou shalt know
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle Gave hope thou wast in being.

Myself to see the issue.
Paul. There's time enough
Last thy desire, upon this push, to Your joys with like relation.—Go, my
Your precious winners all! your exchequer Partake to every one. I, an old tale Will wing me to some wither'd tree
there

My mate, that's never to be found Lament till I am lost.

Leon. O peace, Paulina!
Thou shouldst a husband take by my side
As I by thine, a wife: this is a match
And made between's by vow.

found mine;
But how, is to be question'd.—for I
As I thought, dead; and have in many

A prayer upon her grave. I'll not (For him, I partly know his mind)
thee

An honourable husband.—Come, Camilla,
And take her by the hand, whose worth honesty

Is richly noted, and here justified
By us, a pair of kings.—Let's from hence What! look upon my brother's pardons,

That e'er I put between your holy love
My ill suspicion.—This your son-in-law
And son unto the king, (whom heaven
Is troth-plight to your daughter)

Paulina,
Lead us from hence; where we may Each one demand, and answer to his Perform'd in this wide gap of time,
We were dissever'd: hastily lead us
to peace.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING JOHN.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King John.
Prince Henry, his Son.
Arthur, Son of Geoffrey, late Duke of Bretagne, and Nephew to King John.
William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke.
Guery Fitz-Peter, Earl of Essex, Chief Justiciary of England.
William Longsword, Earl of Salisbury.
Robert Bigot, Earl of Norfolk.
Robert de Bary, Chamberlain to the King.
Philip Faulconbridge, Son of Sir Robert Faulconbridge.
James Durney, his Half-brother.
Piers of Pontref, a Prophet.
SCENE.—Sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

Philip, King of France.
Lewis, the Dauphin.
Archduke of Austria.
Cardinal Pandulpho, the Pope's Legate.
Melun, a French Lord.
Chatillon, Ambassador from France.
Elinor, Widow of King Henry II., and Mother to King John.
Constance, Mother to Arthur.
Blanch, Daughter to Alphonso, King of Castile, and Niece to King John.
Lady Faulconbridge, Mother to Robert and Philip Faulconbridge.
Lords, Ladies, Citizens of Angiers, Sheriff, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers,
and Attendants.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke,
Basilbury, and others, with Chatillon.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the King
To my behaviour, to the majesty, [of France,
The borrow'd majesty of England here.

K. John. A strange beginning;—borrow'd majesty!

Chat. Silence, good mother; hear the Arthur deceased brother, Geoffrey's son, [half to this fair island and the territories;

to Ireland, Poitiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine;
which ways usurpingly these several titles,
and put the same into young Arthur's hand,
my nephew and right royal sovereign. [this I K. John. What follows, if we disallow of Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war,

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood,
Deserv'd for controlment: so answer Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my the furthest limit of my embassy. [mouth, K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart
to peace.

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;
For ere thou canst report I will be there,
The thunder of my cannon shall be heard:
So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
And sullen presage of your own decay.—
An honourable conduct let him have:—
Pembroke, look to't.—Farewell, Chatillon.

[Exit Chatillon and Pembroke.
Elinor. What now, my son! have I not ever
said,

How that ambitious Constance would not cease,

Till she had kindled France, and all the world,
Upon the right and party of her son!

This might have been prevented, and made
With very easy arguments of love; [whole,
Which now the manage of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Elinor. Your strong possession, much more than your right,
Or else it must go wrong with you, and me:
So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers Essex.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
Come from the country to be judg'd by you,
That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach.— [Exit Sheriff.

Our abbeyes, and our priories, shall pay
This expedition's charge.

Re-enter Sheriff, with Robert Faulconbridge and Philip, his bastard Brother.

What men are you?
Bast. Your faithful subject I; a gentleman
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge;
A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?
Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulcon-K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?

You came not of one mother, then, it seems.
Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king, [father:]

That is well known; and, as I think, one
But, for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o'er to heaven, and to my mother:—
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,

And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Bast. I, madam! no, I have no reason for it;
That is my brother's plea and none of mine;
The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my
land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow.—Why, being Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander'd me with bastardy:
But wher I be as true begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head;

But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.

If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him,—
O, old Sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

Eli. He hath a trick of Cœur-de-lion's face;
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts, [speak,]
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah,
What doth move you to claim your brother's
land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my
With that half face would he have all my land:
A half-face'd groat five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father
liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much,— Bast. Well, sir, by this you cannot get my
land:

Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. Brother, take you my land:
my chance:
Your face hath got five hundred

Rob. And once despatch'd him to
To Germany, there, with the emperor
To treat of high affairs touching that
The advantage of his absence took me
And in the meantime sojournd at my Where how he did prevail, I Adam to But truth is truth: large lengths of Between my father and my mother's (As I have heard my father speak
When this same lusty gentleman was Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it, on the
That this, my mother's son, was come
And if he were, he came into the count
Full fourteen weeks before the count Then, good my liege, let me have
mine,

My father's land, as was my father's K. John. Sirrah, your brother is Your father's wife did after wedlock
And if she did play false, the fault was Which fault lies on the hazards of bands

That marry wives. Tell me, how
Who, as you say, took pains to get
Had of your father claim'd this land
In sooth, good friend, your father's kept

This call, bred from his cow, from
In sooth, he might: then, if he brother's,

My brother might not claim him
Being none of his, refuse him: this count
My mother's son did get your father's Your father's heir must have your land.

Rob. Shall, then, my father's will
To dispossess that child which is not Bast. Of no more force to dispossess
Than was his will to get me, as I think Eli. Whether hadst thou rather to conbridge,

And like thy brother, to enjoy thy
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land
Bast. Madam, an if my brother shape,

And I had his, Sir Robert his, like his
And if my legs were two such riding
My arms such eel-skins stuff'd; my thin,

That in mine ear I durst not stick a Least men should say, "Look, where farthings goes!"

And, to his shape, were he to all the
Would I might never stir from off this I'd give it every foot to have this
I would not be Sir Rob in any case,
Eli. I like thee well: wilt thou Bequeath thy land to him, and follow
I am a soldier, and now bound to France Bast. Brother, take you my land:
my chance:
Your face hath got five hundred

And I have to have, however men do catch;
And I am I, bow'er I was begot.
K. John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou
thy desire;
A landless knight makes thee a landed
speed
For France, for France; for it is more than brother, adieu: good fortune come to
thou

For thou wast got I the way of honesty.
A foot of honour better than I was;
But many a many foot of land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:
God den, Sir Richard:—"God-a-mercy,
fellow,"

And I like him be George, I'll call him Peter;
For your respective, and too sociable,
his and his conversion. Now your traveller,—
And when my knightly stomach is suffic'd,
My picked man of countries:—"My dear sir,"
I shall beseech you—"That is question now;
And then comes answer like an A. B. C.
tools:—
at your best command;
at your service, sir:—"I, sweet sir, at your question, I, sweet sir, at your answer knows what question would,
and talking of the Alps and Apennines,
the Tyrranean, and the river Po,)

It draws toward supper, in conclusion so,
But this is worshipful society,
And fits the mounting spirit, like myself;
For he is but a bastard to the time,
That doth not smack of observation;
And so am I, whether I smack, or no;
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement,
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:
Which, though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.—
But who comes in such haste, in riding robes?
What woman-post is this? hath she no husband?
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?
O me! it is my mother.—
Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.
How now, good lady!

What brings you here to court so hastily?
Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?
where is he,
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
Bast. My brother Robert! old Sir Robert's
son!

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?
Is it Sir Robert's son that you seek so?
Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou un-
reverend boy,
Sir Robert's son; why scorn'st thou at Sir
He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou. [Robert]

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave
Gur. Good leave, good Philip. [a while]
Bast. Philip!—sparrow!—James,
There's toys abroad: anon I'll tell thee more.—
[Exit Gurney.]

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son;
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-Friday, and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well: marry, (to confess,)
Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it:
We know his handy-work:—therefore, good
mother,

To whom am I beholden for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.
Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too, [honour]
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine
What means this scorn, thou most untoward
knaves? [disco-like:]

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—Bast.
What! I am dabb'd; I have it on my shoulder.
But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert, and my land;
Legitimation, name, and all is gone. [father:]
Then, good my mother, let me know my
Some proper man, I hope: who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faul-
conbridge?
Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.
Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy father:
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed:—

Yd sell your face for five pence, and 'tis
done.—
I'll follow you unto the death.
Nay, I would have you go before me
father.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters
K. John. What is thy name? [begun, that—Philip, my liege, so is my name
Philip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.
K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest:
Hast thou down Philip, but arise more great;
thou art Richard, and Plantagenet.
Brother, by the mother's side, give me your hand:

My father gave me honour, yours gave land,—
I was not begot, by night or day,
But I was got, Sir Robert was away.
The very spirit of Plantagenet!

Bast. Madam, Richard; call me so.
what though?
Something about, a little from the right,
is at the window, or else o'er the hatch;
Who dares not stir by day, must walk by
night:

And have to have, however men do catch;
And I am I, bow'er I was begot.
K. John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou
thy desire;
A landless knight makes thee a landed
speed
For France, for France; for it is more than brother, adieu: good fortune come to
thou

For thou wast got I the way of honesty.
A foot of honour better than I was;
But many a many foot of land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:
God den, Sir Richard:—"God-a-mercy,
fellow,"

And I like him be George, I'll call him Peter;
For your respective, and too sociable,
his and his conversion. Now your traveller,—
And when my knightly stomach is suffic'd,
My picked man of countries:—"My dear sir,"
I shall beseech you—"That is question now;
And then comes answer like an A. B. C.
tools:—
at your best command;
at your service, sir:—"I, sweet sir, at
your question, I, sweet sir, at
your answer knows what question would,
and talking of the Alps and Apennines,
the Tyrranean, and the river Po,)

It draws toward supper, in conclusion so,
But this is worshipful society,
And fits the mounting spirit, like myself;
For he is but a bastard to the time,
That doth not smack of observation;
And so am I, whether I smack, or no;
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement,
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:
Which, though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.—
But who comes in such haste, in riding robes?
What woman-post is this? hath she no husband?
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?
O me! it is my mother.—
Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.
How now, good lady!

What brings you here to court so hastily?
Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?
where is he,
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
Bast. My brother Robert! old Sir Robert's
son!

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?
Is it Sir Robert's son that you seek so?
Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou un-
reverend boy,
Sir Robert's son; why scorn'st thou at Sir
He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou. [Robert]

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave
Gur. Good leave, good Philip. [a while]
Bast. Philip!—sparrow!—James,
There's toys abroad: anon I'll tell thee more.—
[Exit Gurney.]

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son;
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-Friday, and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well: marry, (to confess,)
Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it:
We know his handy-work:—therefore, good
mother,

To whom am I beholden for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.
Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy
brother too, [honour]
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine
What means this scorn, thou most untoward
knaves? [disco-like:]

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—Bast.
What! I am dabb'd; I have it on my shoulder.
But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert, and my land;
Legitimation, name, and all is gone. [father:]
Then, good my mother, let me know my
Some proper man, I hope: who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faul-
conbridge?
Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.
Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was
thy father:
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed:—

It draws toward supper, in conclusion so,
But this is worshipful society,
And fits the mounting spirit, like myself;
For he is but a bastard to the time,
That doth not smack of observation;
And so am I, whether I smack, or no;
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement,
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:
Which, though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.—
But who comes in such haste, in riding robes?
What woman-post is this? hath she no husband?
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?
O me! it is my mother.—
Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.
How now, good lady!

What brings you here to court so hastily?
Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?
where is he,
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
Bast. My brother Robert! old Sir Robert's
son!

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?
Is it Sir Robert's son that you seek so?
Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou un-
reverend boy,
Sir Robert's son; why scorn'st thou at Sir
He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou. [Robert]

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave
Gur. Good leave, good Philip. [a while]
Bast. Philip!—sparrow!—James,
There's toys abroad: anon I'll tell thee more.—
[Exit Gurney.]

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son;
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-Friday, and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well: marry, (to confess,)
Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it:
We know his handy-work:—therefore, good
mother,

To whom am I beholden for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.
Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy
brother too, [honour]
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine
What means this scorn, thou most untoward
knaves? [disco-like:]

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—Bast.
What! I am dabb'd; I have it on my shoulder.
But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert, and my land;
Legitimation, name, and all is gone. [father:]
Then, good my mother, let me know my
Some proper man, I hope: who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faul-
conbridge?
Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.
Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was
thy father:
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed:—

Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge!—

Thou art the issue of my dear offence,
Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.

Bast. Now, by this light, were I to get again,
Madam, I would not wish a better father.
Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly;

Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subjected tribute to commanding love,
Against whose fury and unmatched force
The aweless lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand;

He, that perforce robs lions of their hearts,
May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father!
Who lives, and dares but say thou didst not will

When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.
Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin;

And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:
Who says it was, he lies; I say, 'twas not.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—France. Before the walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the Archduke of Austria, and forces; on the other, Philip, King of France, and forces, Lewis, Constance, Arthur, and Attendants.

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.

Arthur, that great forerunner of thy blood,
Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart,
And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave:
And, for amends to his posterity,
At our importance hither he came,
To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf;
And to rebuke the usurpation
Of thy unnatural uncle, English John:
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome
hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's
The rather that you give his offspring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of war:
I give you welcome with a powerless hand,
But with a heart full of unstained love:
Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lew. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous
As seal to this indenture of my love; [Kiss.]
That to my home I will no more return,
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
Whose foot spurs back the ocean's roaring tides,

And coops from other lands her life.
Even till that England, hedg'd main,

That water-walled bulwark, still
And confident from foreign purpurs, Even till that utmost corner of the Salute thee for her king: till then,
Will I not think of home, but follow thee.

Const. O take his mother's thanks;
thanks,

Till your strong hand shall help to strength,

To make a more requital to your love.
Aust. The peace of heaven is lift their swords

In such a just and charitable way.
K. Phil. Well, then, to work; you shall be bent

Against the brows of this resisting
Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best advantage;
We'll lay before this town our royal Wade to the market-place in
blood,

But we will make it subject to the Const. Stay for an answer to your Lest unadvis'd you stain your
blood:

My lord Chatillon may from England
That right in peace, which here we
And then we shall repeat each day
That hot rash haste so indifferently

Enter Chatillon.
K. Phil. A wonder, lady!—lo, you
Our messenger, Chatillon, is arriv'd;
What England says, say briefly;

We coldly pause for thee; Chatillon, Chat. Then turn your forces from siege,

And stir them up against a mightier England, impatient of your just Hath put himself in arms; the Whose leisure I have stay'd, have To land his legions all as soon as I

His marches are expedient to this
His forces strong, his soldiers
With him along is come the mother
An Atè, stirring him to blood and
With her her niece, the lady Blanche With them a bastard of the king's
And all th' unsettled humours of the Rash, inconsiderate, fiery volun-
With ladies' faces, and fierce dispo-
Have sold their fortunes at their own
Bearing their blights proud

To make a hazard of new fortunes
In brief, a braver choice of death
Than now the English bottoms
Did never float upon the swelling
To do offence and scath in Christen-

[Drum.]
The interruption of their church Cuts off more circumstance; they
To parley, or to fight; therefore,

ACT I.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING JOHN.

K. Phil. How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

John. By how much unexpected, by so much the more awake endeavour for defence;
Let them be welcome with occasion:

John. King John, Eleanor, Blanch, the Bastard,
Pembroke, and forces.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France in peace permit

Just and lineal entrance to our own!
I bid France, and peace ascend to
heaven!

While we, God's wrathful agent, do correct their proud contempt that beats his peace to
heaven.

K. Phil. Peace be to England; if that war from France to England, there to live in peace!

John. We love; and, for that England's will

With words of our armour here we sweat.
The toll of ours should be a work of thine;
And then from loving England art so far,
that thou hast under-wrought his lawful king,
off of the sequence of posterity,
from the infant state, and done a rape
upon the maiden virtue of the crown.

John. Here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face; these eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his;

A little abstract doth contain that large,
which died in Geoffrey; and the hand of time shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.

John. This his son; England was Geoffrey's right, and this is Geoffrey's: in the name of God,
how comest it, then, that thou art call'd a king,
when living blood doth in these temples beat,
which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France,

K. Phil. From that supernal Judge, that stirs good thoughts

And look into the blots and stains of right.
And Judas hath made me guardian to this boy's

Whose warrant I impeach thy wrong;
by whose help I mean to chastise it.

K. Phil. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.
Lew. Excuse it! It is to beat usurping down.

Const. Who is it thou dost call usurper, France?
Let me make answer:—thy usurping

John. Insolent! thy bastard shall be world!

Const. My bad was ever to thy son as true, thine was to thy husband: and this boy was in feature to his father Geoffrey.

John. And John is manners; being as like him to water, or devil to his dam.

John. By my soul, I think

His father never was so true begot:
It cannot be, as if thou wert his mother.

Ell. There's a good mother, boy, that blest
thy father.

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that Aust. Peace!

Bast. Hear the orier.
Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, sir, with
you,

An 'a may catch you hide and you alone;
You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard:
I'll smoke your skin-coat, an I catch you right;

Sirrah, look to't; I' faith, I will, I' faith.
Blanch. O, well did he become that lion's That did disrobe the lion of that robe!

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass:—
But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that dares our ears

With this abundance of superfluous breath?
K. Phil. Lewis, determine what we shall do
straight.

Lew. Women and fools, break off your con-
King John, this is the very sum of all,— England and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee:

Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?
K. John. My life as soon—I do defy thee,
France,—

Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand;
And, out of my dear love, I'll give thee more Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.

Ell. Come to thy grandam, child.
Const. Do, child, go to it! grandam, child;
Give grandam kingdom, and it! grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:

There's a good grandam.
Arth. Good my mother, peace!

I would that I were low laid in my grave;
I am not worth this veil that's made for me.

Ell. His mother shames him so, poor boy,
he weeps.

Const. Now, shame upon you, who're shamed,
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's
shames,

Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his
Which heaven shall take in nature of a dew;
Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brib'd

To do him justice, and revenge on you.
Ell. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven
Call not me slanderer; thou and thine usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights,
Of this oppressed boy: this is thy eldest son's
Infortunate in nothing but in thee: [See,]
Thy sins are visited in this poor child;

The canon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb,
K. John. Bedlam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,—
That he is not only plagued for her sins,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plagu'd for her
And with her plague, her sin; his injury
Her injury,—the leadle to her sin;
All punish'd in the person of this child,
And all for her; a plague upon her!

Eliz. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked will;

A woman's will; a canker'd grandam's will!

K. Phi. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate;

It ill beseems this presence to cry aim

To these ill-tuned repetitions.—

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls

These men of Angiers: let us hear them
speak,

Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpet sounds. Enter Citizens upon the walls.

1 Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the K. Phi. 'Tis France, for England. [walls?]

K. John. England for itself:

Yon men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,

Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.

K. John. For our advantage; therefore hear us first.

These flags of France, that are advanced here

Before the eye and prospect of your town,

Have hither march'd to your endamagement:

The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,

And ready mounted are they, to spit forth

Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:

All preparation for a bloody siege,

And merciless proceeding by these French,

Confront your city's eyes, your winking gates;

And, but for our approach, those sleeping

That as a waist do girdle you about, [stones,

By the compulsion of their ordnance

By this time from their fixed beds of lime

Had been disabited, and wide havoc made

For bloody power to rush upon your peace.

But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,—

Who painfully, with much expedient march,

Have brought a countercheck before your gates,

To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,—

Behold, the French, amaz'd, vouchsafe a parle;

And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,

To make a shaking fever in your walls,

They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke,

To make a faithless error in your ears;

Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,

And let us in, your king; whose spirits,

Forwearied in this action of swift
Crave harbourage within your city

K. Phi. When I have said, make us both.

Lo, in this right hand, whose prob-is most divinely vow'd upon the

Of him it holds, stands young Phi-
Son to the elder brother of this man

And king o'er him, and all that he
For this down-trodden equity, we

In warlike march these greens before Being no further enemy to you

Than the constraint of hospitable
In the relief of this oppressed child

Religiously provokes. Be pleased,
To pay that duty, which you truly

To him that owes it, namely, this year
And then our arms, like to a mother's

Save in aspect, have all offence
Our cannons' malice vainly shall be

Against the invulnerable clouds of
And with a blessed and unweird re-With unhack'd swords, and bebruis'd,

We will bear home that lusty blood
Which here we came to spout

town,
And leave your children, wives, and

But if you fondly pass our proffer
'Tis not the roundure of your children

Can hide you from our messengers
Though all these English, and their

Were harbour'd in their rude cir-
Then, tell us, shall your city call

In that behalf which we have chal-
Or shall we give the signal to our

And stalk in blood to our possession 1 Cit. In brief, we are the king of subjects:

For him, and in his right, we hold

K. John. Acknowledge then the let me in.

1 Cit. That can we not; but he
To him will we prove loyal; till

Have we ram'd up our gates
world.

K. John. Both not the crown
And if not that, I bring you with

Twice fifteen thousand hearts of Bast. Bastards, and else.

K. John. To verify our title with K. Phi. As many, and as well

Bast. Some bastards, too.
K. Phi. Stand in his face to count claim.

1 Cit. Till you compound with

We for the worthiest hold the K. John. Then God forgive the

those souls,
That to their everlasting residence

Before the dew of evening fall, shall
In dreadful trial of our kingdom's

K. Phi. Amen, Amen!—Mount, chevaliers!
[and e'er since]
St. George, that swinged the dragon, on his horseback at mine hostess' door,
 as in some fence!—[To Austria.] Sirrah,
 were I at home,
 you den, sirrah, with your lioness,
 could set an ox-head to your lion's hide,
 and make a monster of you.

Peace! no more.
Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth
and appoint all our regiments.
Speed, then, to take advantage of the other hill
It shall be so;—[To Lewis.] at the rest to stand,—God, and our right!

SCENE II.—The Same.
Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the King and Escourbons; then a Retreat.
Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the King and Escourbons; then a Retreat.

Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
 for young Arthur, duke of Bretagne, in,
 by the hand of France, this day hath

made
 work for tears in many an English mother, whose son is scatter'd on the bleeding ground:
 a widow's husband grovelling lies,
 his arms embracing the discolour'd earth;
 the dancing banners of the French,
 as at hand, triumphantly display'd,
 of Bretagne, England's king, and yours.

Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells;
 for John, your king and England's, doth conquer of this hot malicious day;
 and that march'd hence so silver-

bright,
 to return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood;
 to lock no plume in any English crest,
 to be removed by a staff of France;
 to do return in those same hands,
 to display them when we first march'd

forth;
 like a jolly troop of huntmen, come to the dying laughter of their foes:
 your gates, and give the victors way.
Heralds, from off our towers we might behold

 first to last, the onset and retire of your armies; whose equality both eyes cannot be censured:
 both bought blood, and blows have answered blows;

 both match'd with strength, and power con-are alike; and both alike we like,

One must prove greatest: while they weigh so even,

We hold our town for neither; yet for both.
Enter, at one side, King John, with his power,
Elior, Blanch, and the Bastard; at the other,
King Philip, Lewis, Austria, and forces.

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right run on?
 Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
 Shall leave his native channel, and o'erwell
 With course disturb'd even thy confining shores;
 Unless thou let his silver water keep
 A peaceful progress to the ocean.

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood,

In this hot trial, more than we of France;
 Rather, lost more: and by this hand I swear,
 That sways the earth this climate overlooks,
 Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
 We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms
 we bear,

Or add a royal number to the dead,
 Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
 With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers.

When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!
 O, now doth death line his dead chaps with steel;

The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
 And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men,
 In undetermined differences of kings.—
 Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
 Cry, havoc, kings! back to the stained field,
 You equal potent, fiery-kindled spirits!

Then let confusion of one part confirm
 The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and
 death!

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?
K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England; who's your king?

1 Cit. The king of England, when we know
 the king.

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,

And bear possession of our person here;
 Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

1 Cit. A greater power than we denies all
 this;

And, till it be undoubted, we do lock
 Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates;
 King'd of our fears; until our fears, resolv'd,
 Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings,

And stand securely on their battlements,
 As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
 At your industrious scenes and acts of death.

Your royal presences be rul'd by me:
 Do like the mutines of Jerusalem,
 Be friends awhile, and both conjointly bend
 Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town.

By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon, charged to the Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawled
down

The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city:
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, dis sever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point;
Then, in a moment, fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion,
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Snacks it not something of the policy.

K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above
our heads,

I like it well.—France, shall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground;
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. An if thou hast the metal of a king,—
Being wrong'd, as we are, by this peevish
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery, [town,—
As we will ours, against these saucy walls;
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,

Why, then defy each other, and, pell-mell,
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven or hell.

K. Phil. Let it be so.—Say, where will you assault?

K. John. We from the west will send into this city's bosom. [destruction

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phil. Our thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. [Aside.] O, prudent discipline! From north to south,

Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth:
I'll stir them to it.—Come, away, away!

1 Cit. Hear us, great kings: vouchsafe a while to stay, [league;

And I shall show you peace, and fair-fac'd
Win you this city without stroke, or wound;

Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come sacrifices for the field:

Persuade not, but hear me, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on, with favour; we are bent to hear. [Blanch,

1 Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the lady
Is near to England: look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid.

If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?

If zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?

If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than lady Blanch?

Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete;

If not complete of, say, he is not she:

And she again wants nothing,
If want it be not, that she is not

He is the half part of a blessed
Left to be finished by such a

And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies

O, two such silver currents, whose Do glorify the banks that bound

And two such shores to two such
one,

Two such controlling honours
To these two princes, if you may

This union shall do more than
To our fast-closed gates; for, as

With swifter spleen than powder
The mouth of passage shall we

And give you entrance, but with
The sea enraged is not half so deaf

Lions more confident, mountains
More free from motion; no, not

In mortal fury half so penetrating
As we to keep this city.

Bast. That shakes the rotten carcase of
Out of his rags! Here's a large

That spits forth death, and Talks as familiarly of roaring lions

As maids of thirteen do of poppy
What cannoneer begot this lusty

He speaks plain cannon,—the bounce;

He gives the bastinado with his
Our ears are cudgell'd; not a word

But bullets better than a fist of Zounds! I was never so belump'd

Since I first call'd my brother's Ell. Son, list to this conjugal match;

Give with our niece a dowry
For by this knot thou shalt receive

Thy now assur'd assurance to the
That yond' green boy shall have

The bloom that promiseth a I see a yielding in the looks of Mark, how they whisper: and

Are capable of this ambition,

Lest zeal, now melted, by the
Of soft petitions, pity, and

Cool and congeal again to what it 1 Cit. Why answer not the

This friendly treaty of our K. Phil. Speak England first

forward first

To speak unto this city: what
K. John. If that the Dauphin

princely son,

Can in this book of beauty read,
Her dowry shall weigh equal with

For Anjou, and fair France; and
And all that we upon this side

(Except this city won by us to Find liable to our crown and Shall gild her bridal bed; and In titles, honours, and promotions

in beauty, education, blood,
And with any princess of the world.

K. Phil. What say'st thou, boy? look in the day's face.

John. I, my lord; and in her eye I find a wondrous miracle,

Shadow of myself form'd in her eye;
And she, that makes the shadow of your son,

And makes your son a shadow:
I never lov'd myself,

But she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

And she, that makes the shadow of your son,
I never lov'd myself.

K. Phil. And, by my faith, this league, that we have made,

Will give her sadness very little cure.
Brother of England, how may we content

This widow lady? In her right we came;
Which we, God knows, have turn'd another

To our own vantage. [way,
K. John. We will heal up all;

For we'll create young Arthur duke of Bretagne
And earl of Richmond; and this rich fair town

We make him lord of.—Call the lady Constance;
Some speedy messenger bid her repair

To our solemnity—I trust we shall.
If not fill up the measure of her will,

Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.

Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook'd-for unprepared pomp.

[Exeunt all except the Bastard. The Citizens retire from the walls.

Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!

John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part;

And France, (whose armour conscience buckled
on,

Whom zeal and charity brought to the field
As God's own soldier,) rounded in the ear

With that same purpose-changer, that sly devil;
That broker, that still breaks the pate of faith;

That daily break-vow; he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men,

maids,—
Who having no external thing to lose

But the word maid, cheats the poor maid of that;

That smooth-fac'd gentleman, tickling commodity,—

Commodity, the bias of the world;
The world, who of itself is peiz'd well,

Made to run even upon even ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,

This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,

From all direction, purpose, course, intent;
And this same bias, this commodity,

This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,

Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aid,
From a resolv'd and honourable war,

To a most base and vile-concluded peace.—
And why rail I on this commodity?

But for because he hath not woo'd me yet;
Not that I have the power to clutch his hand,

When his fair angels would salute my palm;
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,

Like a poor beggar, rattleth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail;

And say,—There is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,

To say,—There is no vice, but beggary;
Since kings break faith upon commodity,

Gain, be my lord: for I will worship thee!

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—France. The French King's Tent.Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Const. Gone to be married! gone to swear a peace! [friends]
False blood to false blood join'd. Gone to be Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?

It is not so; thou hast misspoke, misheard;
Be well advis'd, tell o'er thy tale again;
It cannot be; thou dost but say 'tis so:
I trust, I may not trust thee; for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;
I have a king's oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frightening me,
For I am sick, and capable of fears; Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;

A widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears; [jest]
And though thou now confess thou didst but
With my ver'd spirits I cannot take a truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?

Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these and signs conlurers of thy words!
Then speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true, as I believe you think them
false.

That give you cause to prove my saying true.
Const. O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,

Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter so,
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting, fall and die!—
Lewis marry Blanch? O boy, then where art thou? [me]

France friend with England! what becomes of Fellow, be gone; I cannot brook thy sight;
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I, good lady,
done,

But spoke the harm that is by others done?
Const. Which harm within itself so heinous is,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arth. I do beseech you, madam, be content.
Const. If thou, that biddest me be content,
wert grim,

Ugly, and slanderous to thy mother's womb,
Full of unpleasing blot and sightless stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious, Patch'd with foul moles and eye-offending
marks,

I would not care, I then would be content;
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou

Become thy great birth, nor dost thou
But thou art fair; and at thy birth
Nature and Fortune join'd to make thee
Of Nature's gifts thou may'st with
And with the half-blown rose,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and now
She adulterates hourly with those
And with her golden hand hath
France

To tread down fair respect of law;
And made his majesty the law
France is a bawd to Fortune, and
That strumpet Fortune, that man
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France
Envenom him with words; or put
And leave those woes alone, which Am bound to under-bear.

Sal. I may not go without you to the Const. Thou mayst, thou shalt go with thee:

I will instruct my sorrows to be
For grief is proud, and makes his
To me, and to the state of my
Let kings assemble; for my grief
That no supporter but the big
Can hold it up; here I and sorrow
Here is my throne, bid kings come
[She casts herself
Enter King John, King Philip,
Eliezer, Bastard, Austria, and K. Phi. This true, fair daughter bless'd day

Ever in France shall be kept
To solemnize this day the glorious Stays in his course, and plays the Turning, with splendour of his
The meagre cloddy earth to
The yearly course, that brings the Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. [Rising.] A wicked day, holy day!
What hath this day deserv'd
That it in gold letters should be Among the high tides, in the Nay, rather turn this day out
This day of shame, oppression,
Or, if it must stand still, let with Pray that their burdens may Lest that their hopes prodigious
But on this day, let seamen
No bargains break, that are not
This day, all things begun
Yea, faith itself to hollow
K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you

cause
To curse the fair proceedings of Have I not pawn'd to you my Const. You have beguill'd me felt,
Resembling majesty; which, being Proves valueless; you are forewarn'd
You came in arms to spill mine
But now in arms you strengthen the free breath of a sacred king;

not, cardinal, devise a name
aworthy, and ridiculous,
me to an answer, as the pope.
this tale; and from the mouth of than much more,—that no Italian priest tells us of in our dominions;
we enter heaven are supreme head,
him, that great supremacy,

Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without the assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart
To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this. [of Christendom]

K. John. Though you, and all the kings
Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out;
And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself:
Though you and all the rest, so grossly led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish;
Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose [foes]
Against the pope, and count his friends my Pard. Then, by the lawful power that I have,

Thou shalt stand curs'd and excommunicate;
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
From his allegiance to a heretic;
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized, and worshipp'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O, lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse awhile!
Good father cardinal, cry thou amen
To my keen curses; for, without my wrong,
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right. [my curse]

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for Const. And for mine too: when law can do no right,

Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong:
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here;
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law:
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse!

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic;
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy hand. [repent]

Const. Look to that, devil! lest that France
And by disjoining hands, hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these Because— [wrongs]

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.
K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal? [dinal]

Const. What should he say, but as the car-
Lew. Bethink you, father; for the difference is, purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forego the easier.

Blanch. That's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast! the devil tempts
these here,

In likeness of a new untrimmed bride,

Blanch. The lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

Const. O, if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,—
That faith would live again by death of need!
O, then, tread down my need, and faith mounts
up;

Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to this. [well!]

Const. O, be remov'd from him, and answer

Aust. Do so, king Philip; hang no more in doubt. [sweet lout.]

East. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, moat

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say, but will perplex
thee more,

If thou stand excommunicate and curs'd?

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person yours,

And tell me how you would bestow yourself.
This royal hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows;
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love,
Between our kingdoms and our royal selves;
And even before this truce, but new before,—
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clasp this royal bargain up of peace,— Heaven knows, they were besmear'd and over-stain'd [paint]

With slaughter's pencil, where revenge did
The fearful difference of incensed kings;
And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,
So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,
Unyoke this seizure and this kind regret?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with
heaven,

Make such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm;
Unswear faith sworn; and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O, holy sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so!
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order; and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is for nix, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore to arms! be champion of our church!
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revolting son.
France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the
A chafed lion by the mortal paw, [tongue,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth, [hold.
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost

K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou false thy
faith;

And, like a civil war, set'st it only Thy tongue against thy tongue. O, first First made to heaven, first be to form'd;

That is, to be the champion of one
What since thou swor'st is sworn
And may not be performed by thee
For that which thou hast sworn to do
Is not amiss when it is truly done
And being not done, where done
The truth is then most done not done
The better act of purposes misdone
Is to mistake again, though misdone
Yet indirection thereby grows direct
And falsehood falsehood cures
Within the scorched veins of one
It is religion that doth make sworn
But thou hast sworn against religion
By what thou swor'st against religion
swor'st;

And mak'st an oath the surety for Against an oath: the truth thou
To swear, swears only not to be Else, what a mockery should it be But thou dost swear only to keep
And most forsworn, to keep swear.

Therefore, thy later vows, against
Is in thyself rebellion to thyself;
And better conquest never came
Than arm thy constant and thy true
Against these giddy loose engin
Upon which better part our power
If thou vouchsafest them; but, if
The peril of our courses light on thee
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake
But in despair die under their weight.

Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion Bast.

Will not a calf's-skin stop that
Lew. Father, to arms!

Blanch. Upon thy Against the blood that (hath) been What I shall our feast be kept with men?

Shall braying trumpets, and Clamours of hell,—be measure to O husband, hear me!—ah, which Is husband in my mouth—avenge
Which till this time my tongue
nounce,

Upon my knee I beg, go not to Against mine uncle.

Const. O, upon my Made hard with kneeling, I do
Thou virtuous Dauidin, after me
Fore-thought by heaven.

Blanch. Now shall I see thy Be stronger with thee than the upholds,

Const. That which upholds
His honour:—O thine honour

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my act,
By heaven, I would do it.

K. John. Do not I know thou wouldst?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye
On you young boy: I'll tell thee what, my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way;
And whosoever this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me;—dost thou understand
Thou art his keeper. [Exit]

Hub. And I'll keep him so,
That he shall not offend your majesty.

K. John. Death.

Hub. My lord?

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough.
I could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee;
Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee;
Remember.—Madam, fare you well;
I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.
Elk. My blessing go with thee!

K. John. For England, cousin, go;
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho!
[Exit]

SCENE IV.—France. The French King's Tent.
Enter King Philip, Lewis, Pandulpho, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
A whole armada of convicted sail
Is scatter'd, and disjoint'd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well. [Exit]

K. Phi. What can go well, when we have
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur ta'en prisoner? divers dear friends slain?
And bloody England into England gone,
O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lew. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:

So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example; who hath read, or heard,
Of any kindred action like to this?

K. Phi. Well could I bear that England had this praise,

So we could find some pattern of our shame.
Look, who comes here! [Enter Constance.] a grave unto a soul!

Holding th' eternal spirit, against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath.

Const. Lo, now I now see the issue of your pr'ythes, lady, go away with me. [peace]

K. Phi. Patience, good lady! comfort, gentle Constance!

Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
But that which ends all counsel; true redress,
Death, death:—O, amiable lovely death!
Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!
Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,

And I will kiss thy detestable face,
And put my eye balls in thy vaward,
And ring these fingers with thy worms;

And stop this gap of breath with mine.
And be a carrion monster like the lion.
Come, grin on me; and I will kiss thee
And buss thee as thy wife! Mourn
O, come to me!

K. Phi. O, fair affliction, Const. No, no, I will not, having cry:—

O, that my tongue were in the throat
Then with a passion would I shake
And rouse from sleep that fell asleep
Which cannot bear a lady's rebuke,
Which scorns a modern invention.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness.

Const. Thou art not holy to tell me
I am not mad: this hair I tear to My name is Constance; I was the Young Arthur is my son, and he
I am not mad:—I would to heaven
For then 'tis like I should force me

O, if I could, what grief should I Preach some philosophy to make me
And thou shalt be canoniz'd, canoniz'd
For, being not mad, but sensible

My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be deliver'd of these
And teaches me to kill or hang myself
If I were mad, I should forget my
Or madly think a babe of clouts
I am not mad: too well, too well I
The different plague of each disease.

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses
love I note

In the fair multitude of those hair
Where but by chance a silver drop
Even to that drop ten thousand
Do glue themselves in sociable
Like true, inseparable, faithful Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will
K. Phi. Bind up those tresses
I do it!

I tore them from their bonds and
"O, that these hands could so remove
As they have given these hairs the
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to a prison
Because my poor child is a prisoner
And, father cardinal, I have heard
That we shall see and know our
heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy
For, since the birth of Cain, the first
To him that did but yesterday
There was not such a gracious
But now will canker sorrow out
And chase the native beauty from
And he will look as hollow as
As dim and meagre as an ague's

face.
And I shall see him with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

K. Phi. Yes, that I will; and I will
I do it!

I tore them from their bonds and
"O, that these hands could so remove
As they have given these hairs the
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to a prison
Because my poor child is a prisoner
And, father cardinal, I have heard
That we shall see and know our
heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy
For, since the birth of Cain, the first
To him that did but yesterday
There was not such a gracious
But now will canker sorrow out
And chase the native beauty from
And he will look as hollow as
As dim and meagre as an ague's

face.
And I shall see him with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

K. Phi. Yes, that I will; and I will
I do it!

I tore them from their bonds and
"O, that these hands could so remove
As they have given these hairs the
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to a prison
Because my poor child is a prisoner
And, father cardinal, I have heard
That we shall see and know our
heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy
For, since the birth of Cain, the first
To him that did but yesterday
There was not such a gracious
But now will canker sorrow out
And chase the native beauty from
And he will look as hollow as
As dim and meagre as an ague's

face.
And I shall see him with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

K. Phi. Yes, that I will; and I will
I do it!

I tore them from their bonds and
"O, that these hands could so remove
As they have given these hairs the
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to a prison
Because my poor child is a prisoner
And, father cardinal, I have heard
That we shall see and know our
heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy
For, since the birth of Cain, the first
To him that did but yesterday
There was not such a gracious
But now will canker sorrow out
And chase the native beauty from
And he will look as hollow as
As dim and meagre as an ague's

face.
And I shall see him with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

K. Phi. Yes, that I will; and I will
I do it!

I tore them from their bonds and
"O, that these hands could so remove
As they have given these hairs the
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to a prison
Because my poor child is a prisoner
And, father cardinal, I have heard
That we shall see and know our
heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy
For, since the birth of Cain, the first
To him that did but yesterday
There was not such a gracious
But now will canker sorrow out
And chase the native beauty from
And he will look as hollow as
As dim and meagre as an ague's

face.
And I shall see him with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

And, rising so again,
I shall meet him in the court of heaven
And behold him: therefore never, never Pard. You hold too tedious a respect of grief.
Const. He talks to me, that never had a son.
K. Phi. You are as fond of grief, as of your child.

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent
child;

Like his bed, walks up and down with me,
Sits on his pillow, upstays at my window,
Steals out his vacant garments with him; for;
Now, have I reason to be fond of grief?

K. Phi. Had you such a less as I,
I would give better comfort than you do.—
And not keep this form upon my head.

Const. There is such disorder in my wit,
I say, my Arthur, my fair son!
I say my joy, my food, my all the world!
I say my comfort, and my sorrows' cure!

K. Phi. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow
her. [Exit]

Lew. There's nothing in this world can make me joy:

As tedious as a twice told tale,
Tears out his heart of a drowsy man; [Exit]

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
It is the instant of repair and health,
A doctor's departure most of all show evil.

Lew. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.
If you had won it, certainly you had.
When Fortune means to men most
good,

She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
How strange to think how much King John hath lost you prize'd that Arthur is his prisoner!

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

Lew. I hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
I mean to speak
each dust, each straw, each little
of the path which shall directly lead
to England's throne; and therefore
Arthur; and it cannot be,
in that infant's
John should entertain an hour,
with one quiet breath of rest.
with an unruly hand,
he should maintain'd as gain'd;
that stands upon a slippery place,
of no life hold to stay him up:

Const. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood.

That John may stand, then Arthur needs must
fall;

So be it, for it cannot be but so,
Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's
fall?

Pand. You, in the right of lady Blanch, your
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are, and fresh in this old world!

John lays you plots; the times conspire with
For he that sleeps his safety in true blood,
Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.

This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it;

No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,

And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lew. May be, he will not touch young
Arthur's life,

But hold himself safe in his imprisonment.

Pand. O, sir, when he shall hear of your
approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,

And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;
And pick strong matter of revolt and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.

Methinks I see this hurly all on foot:
And, O, what better matter breeds for you
Than I have nam'd!—The bastard Faulcon-
bridge

Is now in England ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side;

Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,
Go with me to the king: 'tis wonderful
What may be wrought out of their discontent,

Now that their souls are topfull of offence:
For England go:—I will whet on the king.

Lew. Strong reasons make strange actions:
let us go:

If you say ay, the king will not say no.
[Exit]

ACT IV.
SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hubert and two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot; and look thou stand
Within the arras: when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth,

That John may stand, then Arthur needs must
fall;

So be it, for it cannot be but so,
Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's
fall?

Pand. You, in the right of lady Blanch, your
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are, and fresh in this old world!

John lays you plots; the times conspire with
For he that sleeps his safety in true blood,
Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.

This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it;

No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,

And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lew. May be, he will not touch young
Arthur's life,

But hold himself safe in his imprisonment.

Pand. O, sir, when he shall hear of your
approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,

And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;
And pick strong matter of revolt and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.

Methinks I see this hurly all on foot:
And, O, what better matter breeds for you
Than I have nam'd!—The bastard Faulcon-
bridge

Is now in England ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side;

Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,
Go with me to the king: 'tis wonderful
What may be wrought out of their discontent,

Now that their souls are topfull of offence:
For England go:—I will whet on the king.

Lew. Strong reasons make strange actions:
let us go:

If you say ay, the king will not say no.
[Exit]

And bind the boy, which you shall find with me,
Fast to the chair: be heedful; hence, and watch.

1 Attend. I hope your warrant will bear out the deed.

Hub. Uncleanly scruples I fear not you: look to 't.— [Exeunt Attendants.]
Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Arth. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince (having so great a title
To be more prince) as may be.—You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me!
Methinks nobody should be sad but I:

Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness. By my christendom,
So I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
I should be as merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practises more harm to me:

He is afraid of me, and I of him:
Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?

No, indeed, it's not; and I would to heaven
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. [Aside.] If I talk to him, with his innocent prate

He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sudden, and despatch.

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day.

In sooth, I would you were a little sick,
That I might sit all night, and watch with you:
I warrant, I love you more than you do me.

Hub. [Aside.] His words do take possession of my bosom.—

Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.
[Aside.]] How now, foolish rheum!

Turning spiteous torture out of door!
I must be brief, lest resolution drop

Out at mine eyes in tender womanish tears.—
Can you not read it? Is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect:
Must you with hot irons burn out both mine

Hub. Young boy, I must. [eyes?]

Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,

I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,)

And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head;

And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time,

Saying, "What lack you?" and, "Where lies your grief?"

Or, "What good love may I perform for you?"

Many a poor man's son would have lain still,
And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;

But you at your sick service had a prince.
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,

And call it cunning:—do, an if you will:

If heaven be pleas'd that you may see me
Why, then you must.—Will you
eyes?

These eyes that never did, nor need
So much as frown on you!

Hub. I have seen
And with hot irons must I burn

Arth. Ah, no, no, but in this
The iron of itself, though heat

Approaching near these eyes,
And quench this fiery indignation,

Even in the matter of mine innocence.
Nay, after that, consume away in

But for containing fire to harm mine
Are you more stubborn-hard than

And if an angel should have come to me
An told me Hubert should put

I would not have believed him.—
Hub. [Stamps.] Come forth.

Re-enter Attendants, with cords.
Do as I bid you do.

Arth. O! save me, Hubert,
Even with the fierce looks of the Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and

here.

Arth. Alas! what need you have
I will not struggle, I will stand

For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me bound!

Nay, hear me, Hubert!—Drive these
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;

I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak;
Nor look upon the iron angrily:

Thrust but these men away, and let me
Whatever torment you do put me to

Hub. Go, stand within; let me
him.

1 Attend. I am best pleas'd to see a deed.

Arth. Alas! I then have shed
friends:

He hath a stern look, but a gentle
Let him come back, that his companion

Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to have Arth. O heaven!—that there

mote in yours,
A grain, a dust, a quail, a wanderer

Any annoyance in that precious
Then, feeling what small things are

Your vile intent must needs seem Hub. Is this your promise?—your tongue.

Arth. Hubert, the utterance

Must needs want pleading for a Let me not hold my tongue;—

Hubert!

Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out
So I may keep mine eyes: O, spare

Though to no use but still to leave
Lo! by my troth, the instrument

And would not harm me.

I can heat it, boy.

With grief, the fire is dead

For comfort, to be us'd

Extremes: see also yourself;

Is no malice in this burning coal;

Heaven hath blown his spirit out,

But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

And if you do, you will but make it

Blush.

With shame of your proceedings,

Like a dog that is compell'd to fight,

At his master that doth tarre him on.

Things that you should use to do me wrong,

Merely, which fierce fire, and iron, extends,

Of note for mercy-lacking uses.

Well, see to live; I will not touch

These eyes

For all the treasure that thine uncle owes:

Sworn, and I did purpose, boy,

In this same very iron to burn them out.

O, now you look like Hubert! I all this

Was disguised.

Peace! no more. Adieu.

Uncle must not know but you are dead;

On these dogged spies with false reports:

Hubert for the wealth of all the world

Will not offend these.

O heaven!—I thank you, Hubert.

Silence! no more: go closely in with

me;

Which danger do I undergo for thee. [Exit.

Scene II.—Northampton. A Room of

State in the Palace.

King John, crowned; Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords. The King takes his seat.

John. Here once again we sit, once again

crown'd,

look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pem. This once again, but that your highness pleas'd,

once superfluous: you were crown'd

that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off;

the titles of men ne'er stained with revolt;

your expectation troubled not the land,

which you long'd for change, or better state.

Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double you must a title that was rich before, [pomp,

you must refine gold, to paint the lily,

to throw a perfume on the violet,

to melt the ice, or add another hue

to the rainbow, or with taper-light to adorn the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,

and ridiculous excess.

Pem. But that your royal pleasure must be act is as an ancient tale now told; [done,

in the last repeating troublesome,

being urged at a time unseasonable.

Sal. In this, the antique and well-noted face

Of plain old form is much disfigured;

And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,

It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about;

Startles and frights consideration;

Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,

For putting on so new a fashion'd robe.

Pem. When workmen strive to do better than well,

They do confound their skill in covetousness:

And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault

Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse:

As patches, set upon a little breach,

Discredit more in hiding of the fault,

Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sal. To this effect, before you were new-crown'd, [highness]

We breath'd our counsel: but it pleas'd your

To overbear it; and we are all well pleased,

Since all and every part of what we would,

Doth make a stand at what your highness will.

K. John. Some reasons of this double coronation

I have possess'd you with, and think them

strong;

And more, more strong, (when lesser is my fear,)

I shall induce you with: meantime, but ask

What you would have reform'd that is not well,

And well shall you perceive how willingly

I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pem. Then I, (as one that am the tongue of these,

To sound the purposes of all their hearts,)

Both for myself and them, (but, chief of all,

Your safety, for the which myself and them

Bend their best studies,) heartily request

The enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint

Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent

To break into this dangerous argument,—

If what in rest you have, in right you hold,

Why then your fears (which, as they say, attend

The steps of wrong) should move you to mew up

Your tender kinsman, and to choke his days

With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth

The rich advantage of good exercise?

That the time's enemies may not have this

To grace occasions, let it be our suit,

That you have bid us ask his liberty;

Which for our goods we do no further ask,

That whereupon our weal, on you depending,

Counts it your weal he have his liberty.

K. John. Let it be so: I do commit his youth

To your direction.—

Enter Hubert.

Hubert, what news have you?

[Speaks apart with him.]

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody

deed;

He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine:

The image of a wicked heinous fault

Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his

Does show the mood of a much troubled breast;

And I do fearfully believe 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The colour of the king doth come and Between his purpose and his conscience, [go
Like heralds 'twixt two dreadful battles set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And when it breaks, I fear will issue
thence

The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong
hand:—

Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead:
He tells us, Arthur is deceased to-night.

Sal. Indeed, we fear'd his sickness was past cure. [He was,

Pem. Indeed, we heard how near his death
Before the child himself felt he was sick:

This must be answer'd, either here, or hence.

K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?

Think you I bear the shears of destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?

Sal. It is apparent foul-play; and 'tis shame,
That greatness should so grossly offer it:—
So thrive it in your game! and so, farewell.

Pem. Stay yet, lord Salisbury; I'll go with
thee.

And find the inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdom of a forced grave. [Isle,

That blood which ow'd the breadth of all this Three foot of it doth hold:—bad world the while!

[Out
This must not be thus borne: this will break
To all our sorrows, and ere long, I doubt,

[Exit Lord.

K. John. They burn in indignation, I repent:

There is no sure foundation set on blood,
No certain life achiev'd by others' death.—

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye thou hast; where is that blood
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?

So foul a sky clears not without a storm:
Pour down thy weather:—how goes all in France?

Mess. From France to England.—Never such
For any foreign preparation [a power

Was levied in the body of a land.

The copy of your speed is learn'd by them;
For, when you should be told they do prepare,
The tidings come that they are all arriv'd.

K. John. O, where hath our intelligence been drunk? [care,

Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's
That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

Mess. My liege, her ear
Is stopp'd with dust; the first of April, died
Your noble mother: and, as I hear, my lord,
The lady Constance in a frenzy died
Three days before; but this from rumour's
tongue

I idly heard; if true or false I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speech, Occasion!

O, make a league with me, my liege,
My discontented peers!—What?

How wildly, then, walks my reason
Under whose conduct came these things?

France

That thou for truth giv'st out as Mess. Under the Dauphin.

K. John. Thou hast
With these ill tidings.—

Enter the Bastard, and Pate.

Now, what say
To your proceedings? do not seek to My head with more ill news, for I

Bast. But if you be afraid to hear,
Then let the worst, unboard, fall on K. John. Bear with me, cousin,

amaz'd

Under the tide: but now I breathe
Aloft the flood; and can give answer
To any tongue, speak it of what I Bast. How I have sped among the men,

The sums I have collected shall
But as I travel'd hither through
I find the people strangely faint

Possess'd with rumours, full of Not knowing what they fear, but
And here's a prophet, that I have From forth the streets of Poitiers

found

With many hundreds treading on To whom he sung, in rude rhymes,

That, ere the next Ascension-day,
Your highness should deliver up K. John. Thou idle dreamer, didst thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the out so.

K. John. Hubert, away with prison him:

And on that day at noon, when
I shall yield up my crown, let him
Deliver him to safety; and return
For I must use thee.—

[Exit Hubert.

Hear'st thou the news arriv'd?

Bast. The French, my lord, are Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord (With eyes as red as new-ankled
Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd
On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle friend,
And thrust thyself into their company
I have a way to win their loves and seal
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seal
K. John. Nay, but make haste to foot before.

Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind:

But, taking note of thy abhor'd aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainy,
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;

And thou, to be endeared to a king,
Makest it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,— [or made a pause,
K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head,
When I spake darkly what I purpos'd,
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,
As bid me tell my tale in express words,
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me
break off, [in me:

And those thy tears might have wrought fears
But thou didst understand me by my signs,
And didst in signs again parley with sin;
Yes, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And consequently thy rude hand to act
The deed, which both our tongues held vile to
name.—

Out of my sight, and never see me more!
My nobles leave me; and my state is brav'd,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers;
Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
Hostility and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arise you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood,
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought;
And you have slander'd nature in my form,
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O, haste thee to the peers,

Throw this report on their incens'd rage,
And make them tame to their obedience!
Forgive the comment that my passion made Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O, answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords, with all expedient haste;
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Northampton. Before the Castle.

Enter Arthur, on the walls.

The wall is high; and yet will I leap
down:—

Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not!—
There's few, or none, do know me: if they did,
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite.

I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it.
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,

I'll find a thousand shifts to get away :
As good to die and go, as die and stay.

[Leaps down.
O me ! my uncle's spirit is in these stones :—
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones.

[Dies.
Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmund's-Bury :

It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pem. Who brought that letter from the cardinal ?

Sal. The count Melun, a noble lord of France ;

Whose private with me of the Dauphin's love,
Is much more general than these lines import.

Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him, then.

Sal. Or rather, then set forward ; for 'twill
Two long days' journey, lords, or e'er we meet.

[Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distemper'd lords !

The king by me requests your presence straight.

Sal. The king hath disposess'd himself of
We will not line his thin bestained cloak [us :
With our pure honours, nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks.
Return, and tell him so : we know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

[reason now.
Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners,

Bast. But there is little reason in your grief ;
Therefore, 'twere reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege.

Bast. 'Tis true ; to hurt his master, no man else.

Sal. This is the prison :—what is he has here ?

[Seeing Arthur.

Pem. O death, made proud with pure and princely beauty !

The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.

Sal. Murder, as hating what himself hath Doth lay it open to urge on revenge. [done,

Big. Or, when he deem'd this beauty to a grave,

Found it too precious princely for a grave.

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you ? Have you beheld,

Or have you read, or heard ! or could you think !
Or do you almost think, although you see,

That you do see ! could thought, without this object,

Form such another ? This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,

Of murder's arm : this is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke,

That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage,
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in
And this, so sole and so unmatched, [this ;

Shall give a holiness, a purity,
To the yet unbegotten sin of times ;

And prove a deadly bloodshed
Exemplary by this heinous spot.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody
The graceless action of a heavy hand.

If that it be the work of any hand,
Sal. If that it be the work of any hand,

We had a kind of light, what would it be
It is the shameful work of Hubert.

The practice, and the purpose of the deed
From whose obedience I forsook my lord.

Kneeling before this ruin of a man,
And breathing to his breathless eyes.

The incense of a vow, a holy vow,
Never to taste the pleasures of a crown.

Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness.

Till I have set a glory to this deed,
By giving it the worship of a vow.

Pem. Big. Our souls religiously [Enter Hubert.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with love
Arthur doth live ; the king hath pardoned.

Sal. O, he is bold, and bold
death :—

Avaunt, thou hateful villain, yet thou
Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. [Drawing his sword.] Most Bast. Your sword is bright, and bright

again.
Sal. Not till I sheath it in a murderer's

Hub. Stand back, lord Salisbury,
I say :

By heaven, I think my sword's Hub. I would not have you, lord, for

Nor tempt the danger of my sword
Lest I, by marking of your rage,

Your worth, your greatness, and Big. Out, duncannon ! duncannon !

nobleman !
Hub. Not for my life ; but yet

My innocent life against an emperor's
Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not Yet, I am none : whose tongue

false,
Not truly speaks ; who speaks not

Pem. Cut him to pieces.
Bast. Keep the peace.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gild
bridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the
If thou but frown on me, or stir the

Or teach thy hasty spleen to do
I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword.

Or I'll so maul you and your tongue
That you shall think the devil's

hell.
Big. What wilt thou do, murderer ?

Second a villain and a murderer Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'st ?
Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I

I honour'd him, I lov'd him ; and
My date of life out for his sweet

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King John, Pandulpho with the crown, and Attendants.K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your The circle of my glory. [Hand*Pand.* [Giving John the crown.] Take again From this my hand, as holding of the pope, Your sovereign greatness and authority.K. John. Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;

And from his holiness use all your power To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd. Our discontented counties do revolt;

Our people quarrel with obedience; Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,

To stranger blood, to foreign royalty. This inundation of mistemper'd humour

Rests by you only to be qualified: Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,

That present medicine must be minister'd, Or overthrow incurable ensues. [Exit up,Pand. It was my breath that blew this tem- Upon your stubborn usage of the pope:

But since you are a gentle convertite, My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,

And make fair weather in your blustering land. On this Ascension-day, remember well,

Upon your oath of service to the pope, Go I to make the French lay down their arms. [Exit,K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet Say, that before Ascension-day at noon,

My crown I should give off? Even so I have: I did suppose it should be on constraint;

But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary. Enter the Bastard.Bast. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out,

But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd, Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers;

Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone To offer service to your enemy;

And wild amazement hurries up and down The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again,After they heard young Arthur was alive? Bast. They found him dead, and cast into the streets; An empty casket, where the jewel of life

By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away. [Exit.K. John. The villain Hubert told me he did Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught heknew. [Exit.] But wherefore do you droop? why look you

Be great in act, as you have been in thought; Let not the world see fear, and sad distrust,

Govern the motion of a kingly eye:

oul. Trust not those cunning waters of his ad he, long trad'd in it, makes it seem the rivers of remorse and innocence.
way with me, all you whose souls abhor
the stench of a slaughter-house;
I am stifled with this smell of sin.
Away toward Bury, to the Dauphin
them!

There, tell the king, he may enquire as out.
East. There's a good world!—Knew you of this fair work?

and the infinite and boundless reach of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death, thou damn'd, Hubert.

Do but hear me, sir:—
I'll tell thee what;

black—nay, nothing is so
black;

There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
as thou wast, if thou didst kill this child.

Upon my soul,—
If thou didst but consent to that cruel act, do but despair;

that spider twisted from her womb

will serve to strangle thee; a rash will be a boon

to have thee on; or wouldst thou drown thyself?

and a little water in a spoon,
it shall be as all the ocean;

to slide such a villain up.—
I suspect thee very grievously.

thou art in act, consent, or sin of thought,
of this stealing that sweet breath

was embounded in this beauteous clay,
I'll want pains enough to torture me!

Go, hear him in thine arms.—
I smother, methinks; and lose my way in the thorns and dangers of this world.—

I may doat thou take all England up!

to this morsel of dead royalty,
the right, the truth of all this realm

to be heard; and England now is left to show and scramble, and to part by the teeth

for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty
doed war bristle his angry crest,

in the gentle eyes of peace:
his powers from home, and discontents at

home,
in one line; and vast confusion waits,

with a raven on a sick-fallen beast,
the frequent decay of wretched pomp,

to follow me with speed: I'll to the king:
and business are brief in hand,

and heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

[Exit.

Are wreck'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands. [now:]

This news was brought to Richard but even The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,

And will not let me welcome this good news. Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight; Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Near St. Edmund's-Bury.

Another Part of the Field.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, Bigot, and others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the If they miscarry, we miscarry too. [French:]

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge, In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say, king John sore sick hath left the field.

Enter Melun, wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy we had other

Pem. It is the count Melun. [names.]

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English, you are bought and Unthread the rude eye of rebellion, [sold:] And welcome home again discarded faith.

Seek out king John, and fall before his feet;

For if the French be lords of this loud day,

He means to recompense the pains you take,

By cutting off your heads: thus hath he sworn,

And I with him, and many more with me,

Upon the altar at St. Edmund's-Bury;

Even on that altar, where we swore to you

Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my Retaining but a quantity of life, [view]

Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax

Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?

What in the world should make me now de-

Since I must lose the use of all deceit? [cease]

Why should I, then, be false, since it is true

That I must die here, and live hence by truth?

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,

He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours

Behold another day break in the east:

But even this night,—whose black contagious breath

Already smokes about the burning crest

Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,—

Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire,

Paying the fine of rated treachery,

Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,

If Lewis by your assistance win the day.

Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;

The love of him,—and this respect besides,

For that my grandsire was an Englishman,—

Awakes my conscience to confess all this.

In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence

From forth the noise and rumour of the field;

Where I may think the remnant of

In peace, and part this body and

With contemplation and devout

Sal. We do believe thee:—and

But I do love the favour and the

Of this most fair occasion, by the

We will untread the steps of danger

And, like a bated and retired

Leaving our rankness and irregular

Stoop low within those bounds

And calmly run on in obedience

Even to our ocean, to our great

My arm shall give thee help

For I do see the cruel pangs of death

Right in thine eye.—Away, on flight,

And happy newness, that intend

[Exeunt, leading Melun.]

SCENE V.—Near St. Edmund's-Bury.

French Camp.

Enter Lewis and his

Lew. The sun of heaven, with loath to set,

But stay'd, and made the western

When the English measur'd

own ground,

In faint retire. O, bravely came

When with a volley of our need

After such bloody toil, we had

And wound our tottering colours

Last in the field, and almost

[Enter a Messenger.]

Mess. Where is my prince, the

Lew. Here:—

Mess. The count Melun is English lords,

By his persuasion, are again

And your supply, which you

Are cast away, and sunk, on

Lew. Ah, foul shrewd news!—

very heart!

I did not think to be so sad

As this hath made me.—Who

King John did fly an hour or two

The stumbling night did part powers?

Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is

Lew. Well; keep good care to-night:

The day shall not be up so soon

To try the fair adventure of SCENE VI.—An open Place in the head of Swinstead Abbey.

Enter the Bastard and Hubert.

Hub. Who's there? speak, quickly, or I shoot.

Bast. A friend.—What art thou?

Hub. Of the Bast. Whither dost thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee?

Of thine affairs, as well as thou

H. Hubert, I think!

Thou hast a perfect thought:
Upon all hazards, well believe
My friend, that knowest my tongue
As thou!

Who thou wilt; an if thou please,
Mayest befriend me so much as to think
In one way of the Plantagenets.

Unkind remembrance! thou, and eye-
less night,
Do me shame:—brave soldier, pardon
My accent breaking from thy tongue
To scape the true acquaintance of mine

ear.
Come, come; sans compliment, what ad you out.

Why, here walk I, in the black brow
of night.

Brief, then; and what's the news?
O, my sweet air, news fitting to the

night,
fearful, comfortless, and horrible.

Show me the very wound of this ill
no woman, I'll not swoon at it.

The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk:
I am almost speechless; and broke out quaint you with this evil, that you might better arm you to the sudden time,

If you had at leisure known of this,
How did he take it? who did taste to

him?
A monk, I tell you; a resolv'd villain,
Whom suddenly burst out: the king

speaks, and, peradventure, may recover.
Whom didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Why, know you not? the lords are these request prince Henry in their company;

they are all about his majesty.

Withhold thine indignation, mighty
Heaven,

Impute us not to bear above our power!—
I, Hubert, half my power this night,

these late, are taken by the tide,
Lincoln washes have devour'd them;

well mounted, hardly have escap'd.
I, before I conduct me to the king;

he will be dead ere I come.

[Exit.]

Enter VII.—The Orchard of Swinstead
Abbey.

Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.
H. It is too late: the life of all his

blood
is corruptibly; and his pure brain suppose the soul's frail dwelling-

house)
by the idle comments that it makes,
Enter Pembroke.

His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief,

being brought into the open air,

It would allay the burning quality

Of that fell poison which assailth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here.— [Exit Bigot.]

Doth he still rage?

Pem. He is more patient

Than when you left him; even now he sung.

P. Hen. O, vanity of sickness! Heres extremes

In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,

Leaves them insensible; and his siege is now Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds

With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which, in their throng and press to that last

hold, [should sing.]
Confound themselves. 'Tis strange that death

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,

And from the organ pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you
To set a form upon that indigest, [are born]

Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.
Re-enter Bigot, and Attendants who bring in King John in a chair.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room;

It would not out at windows, nor at doors.

There is so hot a summer in my bosom,

That all my bowels crumble up to dust:

I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen

Upon a parchment; and against this fire

Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd,—ill-fare;—dead, forsook, cast off;

And none of you will bid the winter come,

To thrust his icy fingers in my maw;

Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course

Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north

To make his bleak winds kiss my parch'd lips,

And comfort me with cold:—I do not ask you

much,

I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,

And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in

That might relieve you! [my tears,]

K. John. The salt in them is hot.—

Within me is a hell; and there the poison

Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize

On unreprieveable condemn'd blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O, I am scalded with my violent motion,

And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin, thou art come to set

mine eye:

The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd;

And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should

Are turn'd to one thread, one little hair: [sail,

My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,

Which holds but till thy news be utter'd;

And then all this thou seest is but a clod,
And module of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
Where, heaven he knows, how we shall answer
him;

For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood.

[The King dies.]

Sal. You breathe these dead news in us dead an ear.— [thus.

My liege! my lord!—But now a king,—now

P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop. [stay,

What surety of the world, what hope, what
When this was now a king, and now is clay?

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay
To do the office for thee of revenge, [behind
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.—

Now, now, you stars, that move in your right
spheres, [mended faiths;

Where be your powers? Show now your
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought;

The Dauphin rages at our very heels. [as we :

Sal. It seems you know not, then, so much
The cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,

And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he Ourselves well sinewed to our defence.

Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already.
For many carriages he hath despatched
To the sea-side, and put his cause and power
To the disposing of the cardinal:

With whom yourself, myself, and others
If you think meet, this afternoon will part
To consummate this business happily.

Bast. Let it be so: and you, my
prince,

With other princes that may best be sped
Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

P. Hen. At Worcester must his body
inter'd;

For so he will'd it. [Thither shall it, then.

Bast. And happily may your sweet self put
The lineal state and glory of the land
To whom, with all submission, on my knees
I do bequeath my faithful services,
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we
To rest without a spot for evermore.

P. Hen. I have a kind soul that would you thanks,

And knows not how to do it, but with love
Bast. O, let us pay the time but need not Since it hath been beforehand with our prayers
This England never did, nor never shall Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror.
But when it first did help to wound it
Now these, her princes, are come home
Come the three corners of the world in arms
And we shall shock them: nought shall us us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING RICHARD II.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Richard the Second.
 Edmund of Langley, Duke of York.
 John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster.
 Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Hereford, Son to John of Gaunt: afterwards King Henry IV.
 Duke of Anmerle, Son to the Duke of York.
 Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.
 Duke of Surrey.
 Earl of Salisbury.
 Earl of Berkley.
 Bishop of Bath.
 Bishop of Ely.
 Bishop of Exeter.
 Bishop of Hereford.
 Bishop of London.
 Bishop of Norwich.
 Bishop of Worcester.
 Bishop of York.
 Earl of Northumberland.
 Henry Percy, his Son.

Lord Ross.
 Lord Willoughby.
 Lord Fitzwater.
 Bishop of Carlisle.
 Abbot of Westminster.
 The Lord Marshal.
 Sir Pierce of Exton.
 Sir Stephen Scroop.
 Captain of a Band of Welshmen.

Queen to King Richard.
 Duchess of Gloster.
 Duchess of York.
 Lady attending on the Queen.

Lords, Herald, Officers, Soldiers, Gardeners, Keeper, Messenger, Groom, and other Attendants.

SCENE, — Dispersedly in England and Wales.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — London. A Room in the Palace.
 Enter King Richard, attended; John of Gaunt, and other Nobles.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,
 Hast thou, according to thy oath and band,
 Brought hither Henry Hereford thy bold son,
 Here to make good the boisterous late appeal,
 Which then our leisure would not let us hear,
 Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

John. I have, my liege.
 K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him,
 As a good subject should,
 In the appeal the duke on ancient malice:
 Some known ground of treachery in him?
 As near as I could sift him on that argument,
 No apparent danger seen in him,
 K. Rich. Then call them to our presence;
 Face to face,
 And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
 The accuser, and th' accused, freely speak:—
 [Recount some Attendants.]
 How stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
 In rage as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter Attendants, with Bolingbroke and Norfolk.

Boling. Many years of happy days befall
 My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!
 Norf. Each day still better other's happiness;
 Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
 Add an immortal title to your crown!

K. Rich. We thank you both; yet one but flatters us,
 As well appeareth by the cause you come;
 Namely, to appealeach other of high treason.—
 Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
 Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Boling. First, (heaven be the record to my
 In the devotion of a subject's love, [speech])
 Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
 And free from other misbegotten hate,
 Come I appellant to this princely presence.—
 Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
 And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
 My body shall make good upon this earth,
 Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.
 Thou art a traitor and a miscreant,
 Too good to be so, and too bad to live,
 Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
 The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.
 Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
 With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat,
 And wish, (so please my sovereign,) ere I move,
 What my tongue speaks, my right drawn sword may prove.

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my Tis not the trial of a woman's war, [zeal]
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain :
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say : [me]
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech :
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him ;
Call him a slanderous coward, and a villain ;
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds ;
And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Wherever Englishman durst set his foot.
Meantime, let this defend my loyalty,—
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of the king ;
And lay aside my high blood's royalty, [cept]
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to ex-
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop :
By that and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoken, or thou canst devise.

Nor. I take it up ; and by that sword I swear, [shoulder]
Which gently laid my knighthood on my I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial :
And when I mount, alive may I not fight,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight !

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge ?

It must be great, that can inherit us
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Boling. Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it true :— [nobles]

That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand
In name of lendings for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd employ-
ments,

Like a false traitor and injurious villain.
Besides, I say, and will in battle prove,—
Or here, or elsewhere, to the farthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,—
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years
Complotted and contriv'd in this land, Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.

Farther, I say,—and farther will maintain Upon his bad life to make all this good,—
That he did plot the duke of Gloucester's death ;
Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
And consequently, like a traitor coward, Sluic'd out his innocent soul through streams
of blood ;

Which blood, like sacrificial dew,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastity,
And, by the glorious worth of my own cause,
This arm shall do it, or this life shall pay the scars !

Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou
to this ?
Nor. O, let my sovereign turn away
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate a traitor
and coward !

Were he my brother, nay, my kinsman,
(As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now, by my sceptre's awe, I make him true)
Such neighbour nearness to my spirit
Should nothing privilege him, nor let
The unstooping firmness of my spirit
Be his subject, Mowbray, so I will
Free speech and fearless, I to thee
Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as thou
heart,

Through the false passage of thy
Three parts of that receipt I had in
Disbur'd I duly to his highness,
The other part reserv'd I by command
For that my sovereign liege was to use
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to defend Now swallow down that lie.—
death,—

I slew him not ; but, to mine own
Neglected my sworn duty in that point,
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my son,
Once did I lay an ambush for your grace,
A trespass that doth vex my conscience,
But, ere I last received the sacrament,
I did confess it ; and exactly
Your grace's pardon, and I hope
This is my fault ; as for the rest,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor,
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down
Upon this overweening traitor's head
To prove myself a loyal gentleman,
Even in the best blood chamber'd
In haste whereof, most heartily
Your highness to assign our trial
K. Rich. Wrath kindled gentle
Let's purge this choler without
This we prescribe, though no physician
Deep malice makes too deep incision,
Forget, forgive ; conclude, and be
Our doctors say this is no mortal
Good uncle, let this end where it
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk,
Gaunt. To be a make-pewee
my age :—
Throw down, my son, the Duke of
gage.

Which blood, like sacrificial dew,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastity,
And, by the glorious worth of my own cause,
This arm shall do it, or this life shall pay the
scars !

Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou
to this ?
Nor. O, let my sovereign turn away
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate a traitor
and coward !

Were he my brother, nay, my kinsman,
(As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now, by my sceptre's awe, I make him true)
Such neighbour nearness to my spirit
Should nothing privilege him, nor let
The unstooping firmness of my spirit
Be his subject, Mowbray, so I will
Free speech and fearless, I to thee
Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as thou
heart,

Through the false passage of thy
Three parts of that receipt I had in
Disbur'd I duly to his highness,
The other part reserv'd I by command
For that my sovereign liege was to use
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to defend
Now swallow down that lie.—
death,—

I slew him not ; but, to mine own
Neglected my sworn duty in that point,
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my son,
Once did I lay an ambush for your grace,
A trespass that doth vex my conscience,
But, ere I last received the sacrament,
I did confess it ; and exactly
Your grace's pardon, and I hope
This is my fault ; as for the rest,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor,
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down
Upon this overweening traitor's head
To prove myself a loyal gentleman,
Even in the best blood chamber'd
In haste whereof, most heartily
Your highness to assign our trial
K. Rich. Wrath kindled gentle
Let's purge this choler without
This we prescribe, though no physician
Deep malice makes too deep incision,
Forget, forgive ; conclude, and be
Our doctors say this is no mortal
Good uncle, let this end where it
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk,
Gaunt. To be a make-pewee
my age :—
Throw down, my son, the Duke of
gage.

Which blood, like sacrificial dew,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastity,
And, by the glorious worth of my own cause,
This arm shall do it, or this life shall pay the
scars !

Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou
to this ?
Nor. O, let my sovereign turn away
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate a traitor
and coward !

Were he my brother, nay, my kinsman,
(As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now, by my sceptre's awe, I make him true)
Such neighbour nearness to my spirit
Should nothing privilege him, nor let
The unstooping firmness of my spirit
Be his subject, Mowbray, so I will
Free speech and fearless, I to thee
Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as thou
heart,

Through the false passage of thy
Three parts of that receipt I had in
Disbur'd I duly to his highness,
The other part reserv'd I by command
For that my sovereign liege was to use
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to defend
Now swallow down that lie.—
death,—

I slew him not ; but, to mine own
Neglected my sworn duty in that point,
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my son,
Once did I lay an ambush for your grace,
A trespass that doth vex my conscience,
But, ere I last received the sacrament,
I did confess it ; and exactly
Your grace's pardon, and I hope
This is my fault ; as for the rest,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor,
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down
Upon this overweening traitor's head
To prove myself a loyal gentleman,
Even in the best blood chamber'd
In haste whereof, most heartily
Your highness to assign our trial
K. Rich. Wrath kindled gentle
Let's purge this choler without
This we prescribe, though no physician
Deep malice makes too deep incision,
Forget, forgive ; conclude, and be
Our doctors say this is no mortal
Good uncle, let this end where it
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk,
Gaunt. To be a make-pewee
my age :—
Throw down, my son, the Duke of
gage.

S. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his glove.

When, Harry ! when !
K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down ; we bid ;
they are no boot.

Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot.

Thou shalt command, but not my shame :
I am thy duty's slave ; but my fair name
Thou shalt not stain.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Thou shalt not stain, but thou shalt not leave
thy honour, impeach'd, and bailed here ;
To the soul with slander's venom'd
darts.

Which no balm can cure, but his heart
must bleed.

Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven ;
Who, when he sees the hours ripe on earth,
Will raise hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur !

Hath love in thy old blood no living fire ?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root ;
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut ;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloucester,

One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt ;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all
faded,

By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt, his blood was thine ! that bed, that
womb,

That melle, that self-mould, that fashion'd
Made him a man ; and though thou liv'st and
breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him : thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt,—it is despair :
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee :
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

What shall I say ? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to 'venge my Gloucester's death,
Gaunt. God's is the quarrel ; for God's sub-
His deputy anointed in his sight, [stitute]
Hath caus'd his death : the which, if wrongfully,

Let heaven revenge ; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas ! may I complain
myself ? [defence]

Gaunt. To God, the widow's champion and Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old
Gaunt.

Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight :
O, sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast !
Or if misfortune misse the first career,
Be Mowbray's sin so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's
back,

And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A cruel recreant to my cousin Hereford !
Farewell, old Gaunt : thy sometimes brother's wife

With her companion grief must end her life,
Gaunt. Sister, farewell ! I must to Coventry ;
As much good stay with thee, as go with me !
Duch. Yet one word more,—Grief boundeth
where it falls

Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven ;
Who, when he sees the hours ripe on earth,
Will raise hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper
spur !

Hath love in thy old blood no living fire ?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root ;
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut ;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my
Gloucester,

One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt ;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all
faded,

By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt, his blood was thine ! that bed, that
womb,

That melle, that self-mould, that fashion'd
Made him a man ; and though thou liv'st and
breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him : thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt,—it is despair :
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee :
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

What shall I say ? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to 'venge my Gloucester's death,
Gaunt. God's is the quarrel ; for God's sub-
His deputy anointed in his sight, [stitute]
Hath caus'd his death : the which, if wrong-
fully,

Let heaven revenge ; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas ! may I complain
myself ? [defence]

Gaunt. To God, the widow's champion and Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old
Gaunt.

Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight :
O, sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast !
Or if misfortune misse the first career,
Be Mowbray's sin so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's
back,

And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A cruel recreant to my cousin Hereford !
Farewell, old Gaunt : thy sometimes brother's wife

With her companion grief must end her life,
Gaunt. Sister, farewell ! I must to Coventry ;
As much good stay with thee, as go with me !
Duch. Yet one word more,—Grief boundeth
where it falls

Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven ;
Who, when he sees the hours ripe on earth,
Will raise hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper
spur !

Hath love in thy old blood no living fire ?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root ;
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut ;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my
Gloucester,

One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt ;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all
faded,

By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt, his blood was thine ! that bed, that
womb,

That melle, that self-mould, that fashion'd
Made him a man ; and though thou liv'st and
breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him : thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt,—it is despair :
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee :
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight;
I take my leave before I have begun;
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.
Lo! this is all:—nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;
I shall remember more. Bid him—O, what?
With all good speed at Plashy visit me.
Alack! and what shall good old York there see,
But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones?
And what hear there for welcome, but my groans!

Therefore commend me; let him not come
there,

To seek out sorrow that dwells every where.
Desolate, desolate, will I hence, and die;
The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Gosford Green, near Coventry.
Lists set out, and a Throne. Heralds, &c., attending.

Enter the Lord Marshal and Aumerle.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford
arm'd?

Aum. Yea, at all points; and longs to enter.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appellant's Aum. Why, then, the champions are pre-par'd, and stay

For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish of Trumpets. Enter King Richard, who takes his seat on his throne; Gaunt, Busby, Bagot, Green, and others, who take their places. A Trumpet is sounded, and answered by another Trumpet within. Then enter Norfolk, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder cham-
The cause of his arrival here in arms:—
Ask him his name; and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name and the king's, say who thou art,
And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms;
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel:

Speak truly, on thy knighthood and thine oath;
And so defend thee heaven and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke
of Norfolk,

Who hither come engaged by my oath,
(Which God defend a knight should violate!)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth
To God, my king, and his succeeding issue,
Against the duke of Hereford that appeals me;
And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me:
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

[He takes his seat.]

Trumpet sounds. Enter Bolingbroke, our, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder
arms,

Both who he is, and why he com'st;
Thus plated in habiliments of war;
And formally, according to our law,
Dispose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name?
com'st thou hither,
Before king Richard in his royal list,
Against whom comest thou?
quarrel?

Speak like a true knight, so defend thou Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster,
Derby,

Am I; who ready here do stand
To prove, by God's grace, and my knightly
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous
To God of heaven, king Richard,
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death, pronounce Or daring hardy, as to touch the Except the marshal, and such others
Appointed to direct these fair Boling. Lord Marshal, let me know
reign's hand,

And bow my knee before his majesty;
For Mowbray and myself are ill
That vow a long and weary journey
Then let us take a ceremonious leave
And loving farewell of our sovereign

Mar. The appellant in all due
highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and

K. Rich. (Descends from his throne.)
will descend, and fold him in Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is
So be thy fortune in this royal list;
Farewell, my blood; which if to day
Lament we may, but not revenge

Boling. O, let no noble eye
For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray
My loving lord, I take my leave of
Of you, my noble cousin, lord Derby,
Not sick, although I have to do with
But lusty, young, and cheerily
Lo, as at English feasts, so I repeat
The dearest last, to make the end
O thou, the earthly author of my life,
Whose youthful spirit, in me renews
Doth with a two-fold vigour fit me
To reach at victory above my father's Add proof unto mine armour with
And with thy blessings steel my face
That it may enter Mowbray's breast;
And furnish new the name of John
Even in the lusty favour of his face.

Mar. The appellant in all due
highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and

K. Rich. (Descends from his throne.)
will descend, and fold him in Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is
So be thy fortune in this royal list;
Farewell, my blood; which if to day
Lament we may, but not revenge

Boling. O, let no noble eye
For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray
My loving lord, I take my leave of
Of you, my noble cousin, lord Derby,
Not sick, although I have to do with
But lusty, young, and cheerily
Lo, as at English feasts, so I repeat
The dearest last, to make the end
O thou, the earthly author of my life,
Whose youthful spirit, in me renews
Doth with a two-fold vigour fit me
To reach at victory above my father's
Add proof unto mine armour with
And with thy blessings steel my face
That it may enter Mowbray's breast;
And furnish new the name of John
Even in the lusty favour of his face.

Mar. The appellant in all due
highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and

K. Rich. (Descends from his throne.)
will descend, and fold him in Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is
So be thy fortune in this royal list;
Farewell, my blood; which if to day
Lament we may, but not revenge

Boling. O, let no noble eye
For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray
My loving lord, I take my leave of
Of you, my noble cousin, lord Derby,
Not sick, although I have to do with
But lusty, young, and cheerily
Lo, as at English feasts, so I repeat
The dearest last, to make the end
O thou, the earthly author of my life,
Whose youthful spirit, in me renews
Doth with a two-fold vigour fit me
To reach at victory above my father's
Add proof unto mine armour with
And with thy blessings steel my face
That it may enter Mowbray's breast;
And furnish new the name of John
Even in the lusty favour of his face.

And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
all like smiting thunder on the casque
of my adverse pernicious enemy:
Upon thy youthful blood, be valliant and
live.

Mar. Mine innocency, and Saint George to thrive

Mar. (Aloud.) However God, or fortune, cast my lot,
Dear face or die, true to king Richard's loyal just, and upright gentleman. [Throne,
and of his chains with a freer heart.

His golden neckroll'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
The heat of battle with mine adversary.—
Now from my mouth the wish of happy years:
As you and as I found, as to just,
To fight. Truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord; securely I spy
Yours with valour couched in thine eye.—
Over the trial, marshal, and begin.

[The King and the Lords return to their seats.]

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and
Derby,
Boling. (Aloud.) Strong as a tower in hope,
I cry, Amen.

Mar. (To an Officer.) Go bear this lance to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and
Derby,
Boling. (Aloud.) Strong as a tower in hope,
I cry, Amen.

Mar. (To an Officer.) Go bear this lance to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and
Derby,
Boling. (Aloud.) Strong as a tower in hope,
I cry, Amen.

Mar. (To an Officer.) Go bear this lance to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and
Derby,
Boling. (Aloud.) Strong as a tower in hope,
I cry, Amen.

Mar. (To an Officer.) Go bear this lance to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and
Derby,
Boling. (Aloud.) Strong as a tower in hope,
I cry, Amen.

Mar. (To an Officer.) Go bear this lance to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and
Derby,
Boling. (Aloud.) Strong as a tower in hope,
I cry, Amen.

Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours'
swords;

And for we think the eagle-wing'd pride
Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts,
With rival-bating envy, set you on [cradle
To wake our peace, which in our country's Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;
Which so round up with boisterous untun'd drums,

With harsh resounding trumpets' dreadful
And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,
And make us wade even in our kindred's
blood;

Therefore, we banish you our territories:—
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life,
Till twice five summers have enrich'd our Shall not regret our fair dominions, [fields,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Boling. Your will be done: this must my comfort be,—
That sun that warms you here shall shine on
And those his golden beams, to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

K. Rich. Norfolk, for this remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:
The sly slow hours shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy dear exile;—
The hopeless word of—never to return
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

Nor. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign
liege,
And all unlook'd for from your highness'
A dearer merit, not so deep a main
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserved at your highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forego,
And now my tongue's use is to me no more,
Than an unstringed viol, or a harp;
Or like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engal'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullis'd with my teeth and lips;
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance
Is made my gaoler to attend on me.
I am too old to learn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now:
What is thy sentence, then, but speechless
death,

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence plaining comes too late.
Nor. Then, thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

[Rebining.]
K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath
with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to God,

Which robs my tongue from breathing native
K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence plaining comes too late.

Nor. Then, thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

[Rebining.]
K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath
with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to God,

Which robs my tongue from breathing native
K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence plaining comes too late.

Nor. Then, thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

[Rebining.]
K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath
with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to God,

(Our part therein we banish with yourselves.)
To keep the oath that we administer :—
You never shall (so help you truth and God !)
Embrace each other's love in banishment ;
Nor never look upon each other's face ;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate ;
Nor never by advised purpose meet
To plot, contrive, or conspire any ill
Against us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far, as to mine enemy :—
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land :
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm ;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul. [traitor.]

Nor. No, Bolingbroke : if ever I were
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence !
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know ;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.—
Farewell, my liege.—Now no way um I stray :
Save back to England, all the world's my way.

[Exit.]

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine
I see thy griev'd heart : thy sad aspect [eyes
Hath from the number of his banish'd years Pluck'd four away.—[To Boling.] Six frozen winters spent,

Return with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word !

Four lagging winters, and four wanton springs,
End in a word : such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard
He shortens four years of my son's exile : [me
But little vantage shall I reap thereby ;
For, ere the six years that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons and bring their times
about.

My oil-dried lamp and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age and endless night ;
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute, king, that thou
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a
morrow ;

Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage ;
Thy word is current with him for my death,
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,

Whereto thy tongue a party verdict gave :
Why at our justice seem'st thou, then, to lower ?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour

You urg'd me as a judge ; but I have
You would have bid me argue like a
O, had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have
A partial slander sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life I
Alas, I look'd when some of you
I was too strict, to make mine own
But you gave leave to my unwilling Against my will, to do myself the wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell ; and, as him so :

Six years we banish him, and he shall
[To Boling.] Account King Richard's

Aum. Cousin, farewell : what purpose not know,

From where you do remain, let part
[To Boling.] My lord, no leave take I

As far as land will let me, by your
[To Boling.] O ! to what purpose do thy words,

That thou return'st no greeting to the Boling. I have too few to take my

you,

When the tongue's office should be
To breathe the abundant dolor of the Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy pleasure's

time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present Gaunt. What is six winters' exile quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy ; but grief

Gaunt. Call it a travel, that thou pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh when I
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy years Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set

The precious jewel of thy home-coming Boling. Nay, rather, every to-day

Will but remember me, what a deal of
I wander from the jewels that I love

Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages ; and in the end,

Having my freedom, boast of nothing
But that I was a journeyman to grief

Gaunt. All places that the eye
Are to a wise man ports and happy

Teach thy necessity to reason thus :
There is no virtue like necessity.

Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king : we doth the king

Where it perceives it is but faintly
Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase

And not, the king exil'd thee ; nor Devouring pestilence hangs in our air

And thou art flying to a fresher climate
Look, what thy soul holds dear, not

To lie that way thou go'st, not Suppose the singing birds musicians

The grass whereon thou tread'st the strew'd ;

The flowers, fair ladies ; and thy steps
Than a delightful measure, or a dance

And let the tribute of his supple knee,

For such a sorry hath less power to bite
Than that which mock'd at it, and sets it light.

O, who can hold a fire in his hand,
To dry the hungry edge of appetite,

My own imagination of a feast ?
My bow bent in December snow,

My blanket under the summer's heat !
O, that the apprehension of the good,

Should out the greater feeling to the worse :
Then when it bites, but lanceth not the sore,

Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee
on thy way :

Thou shalt not stay, I would not stay.
Sweet soil, adieu ;

My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet !
I wander, boast of this I can,—

Though banish'd, yet a true-born Englishman.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The Court.

Enter King Richard, Bagot, and Green ;
Aumerle following.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle, How far brought you high Hereford on his way ? [him so,

I brought high Hereford, if you call to the next highway, and there I left him.

K. Rich. And say, what store of parting tears were shed ? [tear wind, Faith, none for me ; except the north-

wind then blew bitterly against our faces,
Against the sleeping chequers, and so by chance

K. Rich. What said our cousin when you parted with him ?

Aum. Farewell : and for my heart disdained that my tongue

should so profane the word, that taught me to counterfeit oppression of such grief, [grave.

That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's Marry, would the word "farewell" have lengthen'd hours,

And added years to his short banishment,

That I should have had a volume of farewells ;
For, since it would not, he had none of me.

K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin ; but 'tis doubt,

When thou shalt call him home from banishment,

Whether our kinsman come to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

Or, as it may be, to see his friends,
Or, as it may be, to see his friends,

With—"Thanks, my countrymen, my loving
friends ;"

As were our England in reversion his,
And be our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well, he is gone ; and with him go these thoughts.

[And.—
Now for the rebels which stand out in ire—
Expedient manage must be made, my liege,

Ere farther leisure yield them farther means,
For their advantage, and your highness' loss.

K. Rich. We will ourselves in person to this war ;

And, for our coffers,—with too great a court,
And liberal largess,—are grown somewhat

light,
We are enforc'd to farm our royal realm ;
The revenues whereof shall furnish us

For our affairs in hand. If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank

charters ; [are rich,
Whereto, when they shall know what men
They shall subscribe them for large sums of

gold,
And send them after to supply our wants ;
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.
Bushy, what news ? [my lord,

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick,
Suddenly taken ; and hath sent post-haste,
To entreat your majesty to visit him.

K. Rich. Where lies he ?
Bushy. At Ely-house. [mind,

K. Rich. Now, put it, God, in his physician's
To help him to his grave immediately !

The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.—
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him :
Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. An Apartment in Ely-house.

Gaunt on a couch ; the Duke of York, and others, standing by him.

Gaunt. Will the king come, that I may breathe my last

In wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth ?
York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath ;

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear.

Gaunt. O, but they say, the tongues of dying men

Enforce attention like deep harmony :
Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain : [in pain.

For they breathe truth that breathe their words

He that no more must say, is listen'd more,
Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glaze : [before :

More are men's ends mark'd, than their lives

The setting sun, and music at the close,

As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance more than things long
past:

Though Richard my life's counsel would not
hear,

My death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.
York. No, it is stopp'd with other flattering sounds;

As prizes of his state: then, there are found
Lascivious metres, to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen;
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardy apish nation
Limps after, in base imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
(So be it new, there's no respect how vile,)
That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
Then all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.
Direct not him, whose way himself will choose:
'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks I am a prophet new inspir'd,
And thus, expiring, do foretell of him:—
His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last;
For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;

He tires betimes, that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder:
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.
Th' a royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise;
This fortress, built by nature for herself,
Against infection, and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world;
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands;
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous by their birth,
Renowned for their deeds as far from home
(For Christian service and true chivalry)
As is the sepulchre, in stubborn Jewry,
Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's Son;
This land of such dear souls, this dear dear
land,

Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now leas'd out, (I die pronouncing it,)
I see to a tenement, or pelting farm:
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious
sides

Of wat'ry Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds:
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of itself.
Ah, would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter King Richard and Queen.
Bushy, Green, Bagot, Ross, and others.
York. The king is come: deal
his youth;

For young hot colts, being rag'd, do
more.

Queen. How fares our noble
K. Rich. What comfort, now with aged Gaunt?

Gaunt. O, how that name laments
position!

Old Gaunt, indeed; and Gaunt is dead:
Within me grief hath kept a tedious
And who abstains from meat, that For sleeping England long time have Watching breeds leanness, leanness
gaunt:

The pleasure that some fathers feel
Is my strict fast,—I mean, my abstinence
And therein fasting, hast thou made me
Gaunt am I for the grave, Gaunt am I Whose hollow womb inherits nothing
their names!

K. Rich. Can sick men play so
their names?
Gaunt. No, misery makes sport
Since thou dost seek to kill my son,
I mock my name, great king, to name
K. Rich. Should dying men flatter that live!

Gaunt. No, no, men living flatter K. Rich. Thou, now a-dying flatter'st me.

Gaunt. O, no! thou diest, thou sicker be.

K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe Gaunt. Now, He that made me
see thee ill;

Ill in myself to see, and in these days
Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy life:
Wherein thou liest in reputation
And thou, too careless patient to be woe, Committ'st thy anointed body to the
Of those physicians that first wound thee
A thousand flatterers sit within thy Whose compass is no bigger than thy
And yet, incaged in so small a room,
The waste is no whit lesser than thy
O, had thy grandsire, with a prophetic Seen how his son's son should destroy From forth thy reach he would have shame,

Deposing thee before thou were Which art possess'd now to dispose of Why, cousin, wert thou regent of
It were a shame to let this land be
But for thy world enjoying but the
Is it not more than shame to know
Landlord of England art thou now, Thy state of law is bond slave to the
And—

K. Rich. And then a lunatic lean Presuming on an aged's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the red from

from his native residence,
By my son's right royal majesty,
Of whom not brother to great Edward's son,
I come that runs so roundly in thy head,
And run thy head from thy unweary'd
shoulders.

Queen. O, spare me not, my brother Edward's son;
That I was his father Edward's son;—
I am dead already, like the peacock,
Whom I have out, and drunkenly carous'd;
In my other cloister, plain well-meaning soul,
I have been belied in heaven 'mongst happy souls!

A precedent and witness good, (I bleed:
With the present sickness that I have;
I have no sickness but like crooked age,
I have a too-long wither'd flower.
I have shame, but die not shame with this.)

—O, my liege!
Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, please'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Barry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from
His charters and his customary rights; [Time
Let not to-morrow, then, ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God, (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters-patents that he hath
By his attorney-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize
into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I'll not be by the while. My liege,
farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.

Exit.
K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire
Bid him repair to us to Ely-house, (straight:
To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create, in absence of myself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England;
For he is just, and always lov'd as well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

Flourish. Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy,
Aumerle, Green, and Bagot.
North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.

—O, my liege!
Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, please'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Barry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from
His charters and his customary rights; [Time
Let not to-morrow, then, ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God, (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters-patents that he hath
By his attorney-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize
into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I'll not be by the while. My liege,
farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.

Exit.
K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire
Bid him repair to us to Ely-house, (straight:
To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create, in absence of myself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England;
For he is just, and always lov'd as well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

Flourish. Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy,
Aumerle, Green, and Bagot.
North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is
dead.
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.

—O, my liege!
Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, please'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Barry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from
His charters and his customary rights; [Time
Let not to-morrow, then, ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God, (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters-patents that he hath
By his attorney-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize
into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I'll not be by the while. My liege,
farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.

Exit.
K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire
Bid him repair to us to Ely-house, (straight:
To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create, in absence of myself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England;
For he is just, and always lov'd as well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

Flourish. Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy,
Aumerle, Green, and Bagot.
North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is
dead.
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.

Will. Barely in title, not in revenue.
North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.
Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with silence,
 Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.

North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more,
 That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!
Will. Tends that thou'lt speak, to the duke of Hereford?

If it be so, out with it boldly, man;
 Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
Ross. No good at all, that I can do for him;
 Unless you call it good to pity him;
 Hereft and galled of his patrimony.

North. Now, afore God, 'tis shame such wrongs are borne

In him, a royal prince, and many more
 Of noble blood in this declining land.
 The king is not himself, but basely led
 By flatterers; and what they will inform,
 Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
 That will the king severely prosecute
 'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.

Ross. The commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes, [fin'd
 And quite lost their hearts: the nobles hath he
 For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Will. And daily new exactions are devis'd,
 As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what.
 But what, o' God's name, doth become of this?

North. Wars have not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not,

But basely yielded upon compromise
 That which his ancestors achiev'd with blows.
 More hath he spent in peace, than they in wars.

Ross. The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm. [broken man.

Will. The king's gown bankrupt, like a North. Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars,
 His burdensome taxations notwithstanding,
 But by the robbing of the banish'd duke.

North. His noble kinsman:—most degenerate king!

But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
 Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm;
 We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
 And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

Ross. We see the very wreck that we must
 And unavoids the danger now, [suffer;
 For suffering so the causes of our wreck.

North. Not so: even through the hollow eyes of death,
 I see life peering; but I dare not say How near the tidings of our comfort is.

Will. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours. [land:

Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumber-
 We three are but thyself; and, speaking so, Thy words are but as thoughts; therefore, be bold. [Blanc, a bay

North. Then thus:—I have from Port le

In Brittany, receiv'd intelligence
 That Harry duke of Hereford, [land:
 That late broke from the duke of His brother, archbishop late of Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John
 Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert
 Francis Quaint,—

All these well furnish'd by the Bretagne,

With eight tall ships, three thousand
 Are making hither with all due
 And shortly mean to touch our north Perhaps they had ere this, but that
 The first departing of the king [land:
 If, then, we shall shake off our Imp out our drooping country's Redeem from broking pawn the crown, Wipe off the dust that hides our

 And make high majesty look like Away with me in post to Har-
 But if you faint, as fearing to Stay and be secret, and myself

Ross. To horse, to horse! and them that fear.
Will. Hold out my horse, and be there.

SCENE II.—London. An Apartment
 Palace.

Enter Queen, Bushy, and Ross.
Bushy. Madam, your majesty sad:

You promis'd, when you parted with
 To lay aside life-harming business
 And entertain a cheerful disposition.

Queen. To please the king,
 I cannot do it; yet I know no reason

Why I should welcome such a word
 Save bidding farewell to so sweet
 As my sweet Richard: yet, anon,
 Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune,
 Is coming towards me; and my heart
 With nothing trembles: at severest grieves,

More than with parting from my lord.

Bushy. Each substance of a twenty shadows,

Which show like grief itself, but
 For sorrow's eye, glazed with blood, Divides one thing entire to many.

Like perspectives, which rightly
 Show nothing but confusion: yet Distinguish form: so your sweet lord
 Looking awry upon your lord's Find shapes of grief, more than wail;

Which, look'd on as it is, [land:
 shadows

Of what it is not. Then, thence More than your lord's departure,
 more's not seen;

Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrow's
 Which for things true weeps things

Bagot. And that's the war'ring commons:
for their love

Lies in their purses; and whose empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,
Because we ever have been near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol
castle:

The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you; for little office

Will the hateful commons perform for us,
Except like curs to tear us all to pieces.—
Will you go along with us?

Bagot. No; I will to Ireland to his majesty.
Farewell: if heart's presages be not vain,

We three here part, that ne'er shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York thrives to beat back Bolingbroke, [takes

Green. Alas, poor duke! the task he under-
Is numbering sands, and drinking oceans dry:
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.
Farewell at once; for once, for all, and ever.

Bushy. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Wilds in Glostershire.

Enter Bolingbroke and Northumberland, with forces.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley
North. Believe me, noble lord, [now]

I am a stranger here in Glostershire:

These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,
Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome;

But yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

But I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenspur to Cotswold will be found

In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company,

Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd
The tediousness and process of my travel:

But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess;

And hope to joy is little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords

Shall make their way seem short; as mine hath
done

By sight of what I have, your noble company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words.—[Enter Henry Percy.]

But who comes here?

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy, Sent from my brother Worcester, whenceso-
ever.—

Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen?

Percy. No, my good lord; he hath forsok
the court,

Broken his staff of office, and discharg'd
The household of the king.

North. What was his
He was not so resolv'd, when last we Together.

Percy. Because your lordship was
But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspur.

To offer service to the duke of Hereford,
And sent me over by Berkley, to the duke.

What power the duke of York had in
Then, with direction to repair to the duke.

North. Have you forgot the duke of ford, boy?

Percy. No, my good lord; for I Which ne'er I did remember: to my

I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him is the duke.

Percy. My gracious lord, I thank Such as it is, being tender, raw, and

Which elder days shall ripen, and
To more approved service and duty.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy.
I count myself in nothing else so happy

As in a soul remembering my good lord,
And, as my fortune ripens with the

It shall be still thy true love's record.
My heart this covenant makes, my seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkley?

Keeps good old York there, with war?

Percy. There stands the castle, by Mann'd with three hundred men.

And in it are the lords of York, Ber-
None else of name and noble estimation.

Enter Ross and Willoughby.
North. Here come the lords of Willoughby,

Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with Boling. Welcome, my lords. I love pursues

A banish'd traitor: all my treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which, more

Shall be your love and labour's reward.
Ross. Your presence makes us

noble lord.

Will. And far surmounts our Boling. Evermore thanks, the

the poor;

Which, till my infant fortune comes Stands for my bounty.—But who comes?

Enter Berkley.
North. It is my lord of Berkley, my Berk. My lord of Hereford, my

to you.

Boling. My lord, my answer is
And I am come to seek that name in

And I must find that title in your Before I make reply to ought you say.

Berk. Mistake me not, my lord, meaning,

To raise one tittle of your honour and

My lord, I come, (what lord you will,)
 Most gracious regent of this land,
 Of York, to know what pricks you on Advantage of the absent time, [arms
 Let our native peace with self-borne
 I shall not need transport my words
 In his grace in person.— [by you ;

Enter York, attended.
 My noble uncle !
 Show me thy humble heart, and not Thy deceitful and false,
 My gracious uncle !—
 But, but !

No grace, nor uncle me no uncle :
 Your uncle ; and that word—grace,
 In this mouth, is but profane.
 Whence banish'd and forbidden legs
 And to touch a dust of England's
 And !

More why ; why have they dar'd to Miles upon her peaceful bosom,
 Her pale-fac'd villages with war,
 Nation of despised arms !
 Because the anointed king is hence !
 O, how the king is left behind,
 O, how the king is left behind,
 O, how the king is left behind,

My lord, the lord of such hot youth,
 Brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
 The Black Prince, that young Mars of
 France,

With the ranks of many thousand
 How quickly should this arm of mine,
 Later correction to thy fault ! [fault ;
 My gracious uncle, let me know my Condition stands it, and wherein ?
 Even in condition of the worst de-

rebellion, and detested treason :
 A banish'd man ; and here art come
 To expiration of thy time,
 To see the king thy sovereign,
 O, how the king is left behind,
 O, how the king is left behind,

My lord, the lord of such hot youth,
 Brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
 The Black Prince, that young Mars of
 France,

With the ranks of many thousand
 How quickly should this arm of mine,
 Later correction to thy fault ! [fault ;
 My gracious uncle, let me know my
 Condition stands it, and wherein ?
 Even in condition of the worst de-

rebellion, and detested treason :
 A banish'd man ; and here art come
 To expiration of thy time,
 To see the king thy sovereign,
 O, how the king is left behind,
 O, how the king is left behind,

My lord, the lord of such hot youth,
 Brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
 The Black Prince, that young Mars of
 France,

With the ranks of many thousand
 How quickly should this arm of mine,
 Later correction to thy fault ! [fault ;
 My gracious uncle, let me know my
 Condition stands it, and wherein ?
 Even in condition of the worst de-

rebellion, and detested treason :
 A banish'd man ; and here art come
 To expiration of thy time,
 To see the king thy sovereign,
 O, how the king is left behind,
 O, how the king is left behind,

My lord, the lord of such hot youth,
 Brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
 The Black Prince, that young Mars of
 France,

What would you have me do ? I am a subject,
 And challenge law : attorneys are denied me ;
 And therefore personally I lay my claim
 To my inheritance of free descent.

North. The noble duke hath been too much abus'd.

Ross. It stands your grace upon to do him Willo. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My lords of England, let me tell you
 I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
 And labour'd all I could to do him right ;
 But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
 Be his own carver, and cut out his way,
 To find out right with wrong,—it may not be ;
 And you, that do abet him in this kind,
 Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all. [coming in North. The noble duke hath sworn his

 But for his own ; and for the right of that,
 We all have strongly sworn to give him aid ;
 And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these
 I cannot mend it, I must needs confess, [arms ;
 Because my power is weak, and all ill left ;
 But if I could, by Him that gave me life,
 I would attach you all, and make you stoop
 Unto the sovereign mercy of the king ;
 But since I cannot, be it known to you,
 I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well ;—
 Unless you please to enter in the castle,
 And there repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept ;
 But we must win your grace to go with us
 To Bristol Castle ; which, they say, is held
 By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
 The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
 Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

York. It may be, I will go with you ;—but yet I'll pause ;

For I am loth to break our country's laws.
 Nor friends nor foes to me welcome you are.
 Things past redress are now with me past cure.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Camp in Wales.

Enter Salisbury and a Captain.

Cap. My lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd
 ten days,

And hardly kept our countrymen together,
 And yet we hear no tidings from the king ;
 Therefore, we will disperse ourselves ; farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welshman :

The king reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Cap. 'Tis thought the king is dead ; we will not stay.

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd,
 And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven ;
 The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
 And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change ;

[Reap,— Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and
 The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
 The other to enjoy by rage and war ;

These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.—
Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard, their king, is dead.

[Exit.]
Sal. Ah, Richard, with the eyes of heavy
I see thy glory, like a shooting star, [mind,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament!
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest:
Thy friends are fled, to wait upon thy foes;
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes.

[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bolingbroke's Camp at Bristol.

Enter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, Percy, Willoughby, Ross: Officers behind, with Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.—
Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls, (Since presently your souls must part your bodies.)

With too much urging your pernicious lives;
For 'twere no charity: yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here, in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.

You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigur'd clean;
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him;
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears, drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs,

Myself,—a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,—
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
Dispark'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods,
From mine own windows torn my household
coat,

Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign,
Save men's opinions and my living blood,
To show the world I am a gentleman.
This and much more, much more than twice
all this,

Condemns you to the death.—See them
deliver'd over

To execution and the hand of death.

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to me, [well,
Than Bolingbroke to England. Lords, fare-

Green. My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them despatch'd. [Exeunt Northumberland and others, with Bushy and Green.]

Uncle, you say the queen is alive:
For God's sake, fairly let her be set free.
Tell her I send to her my kind commends,
Take special care my greetings be convey'd.

York. A gentleman of mine I have receiv'd
With letters of your love to her at Bristol.

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle.

away.
To fight with Glendower and his company
Awhile to work, and, after, holidays.

SCENE II.—The Coast of Wales.
in view.

Flourish: Drums and Trumpets.
Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle,
and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly Castle set at hand!

Arm. Yea, my lord. How long have you
After your late tossing on the ocean?

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well
for joy,

To stand upon my kingdom once again,
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,

Though rebels wound thee with their bloody hoofs:

As a long-parted mother with her tears
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles meeting;

So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my
And do thee favour with my royal hand.

Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my lord,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his raven;

But let thy spiders, that suck up thy
And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their Doing annoyance to the treacherous
Which with usurping steps do trample
Yield stinging nettles to mine eyes;
And when they from thy bosom pull them,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a jealous hand.

Whose double tongue may with his murmur
Throw death upon thy sovereign's ear.

Mock not my senseless conjuration;
This earth shall have a feeling, and the Prove arm'd soldiers, ere her native
Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms.

Bishop. Fear not, my lord: that I made you king,

Hath power to keep you king, in
The means that heaven yields must be
And not neglected; else, if heaven
And we will not, heaven's offer we
The proffer'd means of succour and Arm. He means, my lord, that I remits;

Whilst Bolingbroke, through our Grows strong and great in soldiers
friends.

K. Rich. Discomfortable comes
That when the searching eye of heaven
Behind the globe, and lights the Then thieves and robbers range abroad
In murders and in outrage, boldly
But when, from under this terrible

Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills;
And yet not so,—for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
—How some have been deposed; some slain in war;
Some haunted by the ghosts they have deposed;
Some poison'd by their wives; some sleeping
kill'd;
All murder'd:—for within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king, Keeps Death his court; and there the antic sits,
Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pomp;
Allowing him a breach, a little scone,
To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and humour'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle-wall, and—farewell,
king!

Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and
With solemn reverence; throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty;
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste grief, need friends:—subjected thus,
How can you say to me—I am a king?

Bishop. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their woes,
But presently prevent the ways to wail.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,
And so your follies fight against yourself.
Fear, and be slain; no worse can come to light:
And fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying, pays death servile breath.

Aum. My father hath a power; enquire of
And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. Thou chid'st me well.—Proud Bolingbroke, I come

To change blows with thee for our day of Thisague-fit of fear is over-blown; [dismal]
An easy task it is, to win our own.—[power] Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.

Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of
The state and inclination of the day:
So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer by small and small To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken:—

Your uncle York is joined with Bolingbroke;
And all your northern castles yielded up,

And all your southern gentlemen
Upon his party.

K. Rich. Thou hast said [To Aumerle.] Bestrew thy dust lead me forth

Of that sweet way I was in to deposed
What say you now? What counsel
By heavens, I'll hate him everlastingly
That bids me be of comfort to my enemy.

Go to Flint Castle: there I'll put me
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly That power I have, discharge; and
To ear the land that hath some hope

For I have none: let no man speak
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aum. My liege, one word.
K. Rich. He does me wrong
That wounds me with the flattery
tongue.

Discharge my followers: let them
From Richard's sight to Bolingbroke

Scene III.—Wales. Before Flint Castle.
Enter, with drum and colours, the and forces; York, Northumberland,
others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence
The Welshmen are dispers'd; and so
Is gone to meet the king, who lately
With some few private friends upon the North. The news is very fair and
lord:

Richard, not far from hence, hath had York. It would besoon the land berland

To say, King Richard:—black the
When such a sacred king should North. Your grace mistakes not my Left I his title out.

York. The time hath Would you have been so brief with would

Have been so brief with you, to show
For taking so the head, your length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, further York. Take not, good cousin, further you should,

Let you mistake: the heavens be Boling. I know it, uncle: and myself

Against their will.—But who comes Enter Percy.

Welcomes, Harry: what, will not yield?

Percy. The castle royally is man Against thy entrance.

Why, it contains no king! Yes, no
Percy.

It doth contain a king; king Richard Within the limits of your time and
And with him are the lord Aumerle,
bury,

Scroop; besides a clergyman of reverence, who, I cannot learn,
York. O, believe it is the Bishop of Carlisle.

Boling. [To North.] Noble lord,
the rule of that ancient castle;
the trumpet send the breath of the wind ears, and thus deliver:—[parle
Bolingbroke

And both his knees doth kiss king Richard's
And that most royal person; hither come
And that, my banishment repeal'd,
And with raptur'd again, he freely granted:

To use the advantage of my power,
And by the summer's dust with showers of
men

from the wounds of slaughter'd English-which, how far off from the mind of Bol-ingbroke

the green lap of fair king Richard's land, duty tenderly shall show.

As much, while here we march the grassy carpet of this plain.—

North, advances to the Castle, with a trumpet. [drum,
march without the noise of threatening from the castle's totter'd battlements fair appointments may be well perus'd.
And Richard and myself should meet the water, when their thundering shock
the air, I'll be the yielding water:
as he is, while on the earth I rain on the earth, and not on him.
with me, and mark king Richard how he looks.

York, and answered by another trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the stage King Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, Scroop, and Salisbury.

King Richard doth himself appear,
And that the blushing discontented sun can be perceived the anxious clouds are bent his glory, and to stain the track
the way passage to the accident.

Yet looks he like a king: behold, his as is the eagle's, lightens forth his arm should stain so fair a show!

Back. [To North.] We are arm'd; and you have we stood
the fearful bending of thy knee, and how dare thy joints forget their duty to our presence?

—show us the hand of God
that has directed us from our stewardship;
we know no hand of blood and bone
grasp the sacred handle of our sceptre,

Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp. [done,
And though you think that all, as you have have torn their souls by turning them from us,
And we are barren and bereft of friends:

Yet know,—my Master, God omnipotent,
Is mustering in his clouds, on our behalf,
Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious crown.

Tell Bolingbroke, (for yond methinks he is,)
That every stride he makes upon my land
Is dangerous treason: he is come to ope
The purple testament of bleeding war;
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons
Shall ill become the flower of England's face,
Change the complexion of her maid-pale
To scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her pastures' grass with faithful English
blood.

North. The King of heaven forbid, our lord Should so with civil and uncivil arms
Be rush'd upon! Thy thrice-noble cousin, Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy
hand;

And by the honourable tomb he swears,
That stands upon your royal grandsire's bones;
And by the royalties of both your bloods,
Currents that spring from one most gracious
head;

And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt;
And by the untold and honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn or said,—
His coming hither hath no further scope,
Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg Enfranchisement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty.

This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.

K. Rich. Northumberland, say,—thou the king returns:

His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends.—
[To Aumerle.] We do debate ourselves, cousin, do we not,

To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die?

Aum. No, good my lord; let's fight with gentle words.

Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful
K. Rich. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue of mine,

That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On yond' proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth!—O, that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name!

Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I must be now!
Swell'st thou, proud heart! I'll give thee scope to beat, [Ina.
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke. [Must he submit?

K. Rich. What must the king do now?
The king shall do it: must he be depos'd?
The king shall be contented: must he lose
The name of king? o' God's name, let it go:
I'll give my jewels for a set of beads,
My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
My gay apparel for an alms-man's gown,
My figur'd goblets for a dish of wood,
My sceptre for a palmer's walking staff,
My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave;—
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway, [feet
Some way of common trade, where subjects'
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live;
And, buried once, why not upon my head?
Aumerle, thou weep'st; my tender-hearted cousin!—

We'll make foul weather with despised tears;
Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer
corn,
And make a dearth in this revolting land.
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding
tears?

As thus;—to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves [lies Within the earth; and, therein laid,—There
Two kinemen digg'd their graves with weeping eyes.

Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty
Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?
You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says ay.

North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend.

To speak with you; may't please you to come
down?

K. Rich. Down, down, I come; like glistening
Phaeton,

Wanting the manage of unruly jades.

[North. retires again to Boling.
In the base court! Base court, where kings grow base,

To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
In the base court! Come down! Down, court! down, king!

For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing.

[Exeunt, from above.
Boling. What says his majesty?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantic man:
Yet he is come

Enter King Richard, and his attendants below.

Boling. Stand all apart,
And show fair duty to his majesty.

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you
To make the base earth proud with you.

Me rather had my heart might yield
Than my unpleasant eye see your light.

Up, cousin, up; your heart is up,
Thus high at least, [Touching his knee
although your knee be low, I care not.

Boling. My gracious lord, I care not
K. Rich. Your own is yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most
As my true service shall deserve you.

K. Rich. Well you deserve to have,

That know the strong'st and sure'st Uncle, give me your hand: my
eyes;

Tears show their love, but what Cousin, I am too young to be your Though you are old enough to be my What you will have, I'll give, and For do we must, what force will have Set on towards London:—cousin!

Boling. Yea, my good lord.
K. Rich. Then I must [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Langley. The Duke Gardener.

Enter the Queen and two Ladies.
Queen. What sport shall we do this garden,

To drive away the heavy thought 1 Lady. Madam, we'll play at Queen. 'Twill make me think full of rubs,

And that my fortune runs against 1 Lady. Madam, we'll dance.
Queen. My legs can keep no
When my poor heart no more
grief:

Therefore, no dancing, girl: come
1 Lady. Madam, we'll tell tales.
Queen. Of sorrow.

1 Lady. Of either, madam.
Queen. Of woe.

For if of joy, being altogether
It doth remember me the more
Or if of grief, being altogether
It adds more sorrow to my woe.

For what I have, I need not to
And what I want, it boots not to 1 Lady. Madam, I'll sing.
Queen. 'Tis well that thou
But thou shouldst please me better thou weep.

1 Lady. I could weep, madam.
Queen. And I could sing, madam.
do me good,

And never borrow any tear of thee.—
Why dost thou say king Richard is depos'd?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing that earth, Divine his downfall! Say, where, when, and how, [wretch,
Cam'st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou Gard. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I
To breathe these news; yet what I say is true.
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold Of Bolingbroke: their fortunes both are weigh'd:

In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peers,
And with that odds he weighs king Richard
down.

Post you to London, and you'll find it so;
I speak no more than every one doth know.
Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,

Doth not thy embassage belong to me,
And am I last that knows it! O! thou think'st
To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast. Come, ladies, go,
To meet at London London's king in woe.

What, was I born to this, that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?
Gardener, for telling me these news of woe,
I would the plants thou graft'st may never grow. [Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,
I would my skill were subject to thy curse.—
Here did she fall a tear; here, in this place,
I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace.
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping queen. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. Westminster Hall.
The Lords spiritual on the right side of the Throne: the Lords temporal on the left;
the Commons below. Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy,
Fitzwater, another Lord, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants. Officers behind with Bagot.

Boling. Call forth Bagot.
Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind;
What thou dost know of noble Gloucester's death,
Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd.

The bloody office of his timeless end. [Aumerle,
Bagot. Then set before my face the lord Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man. [Drawing tongue

Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your Seems to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.
In that dead time when Gloucester's death was plotted,

Hold thy peace!—
I would myself met with the fall of leaf:
I would his broad-spreading leaves did hold him up, by Bolingbroke;
What are they dead?

They are; and Bolingbroke
O! what pity
[land,
[land, we at time of year
over-prond with sap and blood, much riches it confound itself:
to great and growing men,
that bearing boughs may live:
of all hours hath borne the crown,
[shall be depos'd?

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

What, think you, then, the king
he will be: Jitters came last night
of the good duke of York's,
[I am press'd to death through
[Coming forward.
[Admiring tongue

I heard you say,—"Is not my arm of length,
That reacheth from the resifful English court
As far as Calais, to my uncle's head?"

Amongst much other talk, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of a hundred thousand crowns,
Than Bolingbroke's return to England;
Adding withal, how blest this land would be
In this your cousin's death.

Aum. Princes, and noble lords,
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,
On equal terms to give him chastisement?
Either I must, or have mine honour sold
With the attander of his slanderous lips.
There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out for hell: I say, thou liest,
And will maintain what thou hast said is false
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Boling. Bagot, forbear; thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the
In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies,
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine:
By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st,

I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death.
If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as
In this appeal, as thou art all unjust; [true
And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to th' extremest point
Of mortal breathing; seize it if thou dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Lord. It ask the earth to the like, forsworn Aumerle:
And spur thee on with full as many lies [merle:
As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
From sun to sun: there is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st. [at all:

Aum. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw
I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember
The very time Aumerle and you did talk. [well

Fitz. 'Tis very true; you were in presence
And you can witness with me this is true. [then;

Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself

Fitz. Surrey, thou liest. [is true,

Surrey. Dishonourable boy!
That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou, the He-giver, and that lie, do lie

in earth as quiet as thy name
In proof whereof, there is my gage
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fitz. How fondly dost thou say
If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness
And spit upon him, whilst I scorn
And lies, and lies: there is my gage
To tie thee to my strong correction
As I intend to thrive in this new age
Aumerle is guilty of my true age
Besides, I heard the banish'd duke
That thou, Aumerle, didst send to
To execute the noble duke as traitor

Aum. Some honest Christian a gage.

That Norfolk lies, here do I throw
If he may be repeal'd to try his Boling. These differences shall be Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal him

And, though mine enemy, restore him
To all his lands and signiors

return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce

Bishop. That honourable day
Many a time hath banish'd York
For Jesu Christ in glorious Christ
Streaming the ensign of the Cross

Against black pagans, Turks, and
And, toll'd with works of war, to

To Italy; and there, at Venice,
His body to that pleasant country

And his pure soul unto his country
Under whose colours he had fought

Boling. Why, bishop, is Norfolk Bishop. As surely as I live, my Boling. Sweet peace conduct him to the bosom

Of good old Abraham!—Tears
Your differences shall all rest

Till we assign you to your day
Enter York, attended

Fork. Great duke of Lancaster
thee

From plume pluck'd Richard; who Adopts thee heir, and his high

To the possession of thy royal Ascend his throne, descending mine

And long live Henry, of that name Boling. In God's name, I'll throne.

Bishop. Marry, God forbid!
Worst in this royal presence

Yet best beacending me to speak
Would God, that any in this noble

Were enough notable to be upright
Of noble Richard! then, true

Learn him forbearance from so
What subject can give sentence

And who sits here that is not Richard Thieves are not judg'd but they

Although apparent guilt be seen And shall the figure of God's

His captain, steward, deputy planted many years,

by subject and inferior breath,
to himself not present! O, forbend it, God,
in a Christian climate, souls refin'd show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
to subjects, and a subject speaks,
up by God, thus boldly for his king.
of Hereford here, whom you call king,
a traitor to proud Hereford's king;
you crown him, let me prophesy,— of England shall manure the ground, shall grow for this foul act;
to sleep with Turks and infidels,
in this seat of peace tumultuous wars with kin, and kind with kind confused, horror, fear, and kind confusion, here inhabit, and this land be call'd of Golgotha, and dead men's skulls.
of you rear this house against this house,
the wofullest division prove,
to tell upon this cursed earth.
to resist it—let it not be so,
child, child's children, cry against you—Well have you argu'd, sir; and, for treason you arrest you here.—
of Westminster, be it your charge keep him safely till his day of trial.—(suit)
I please you, lords, to grant the commons' Fetch hither Richard, that in common view

surrender; so we shall proceed
I will be his conduct. [Exit.
Lords, you that here are under our oaths, your oaths for your days of answer.
Little are we beholden to your help, look'd for at your helping hands. [Love, York, with King Richard, and Officers bearing the Crown, &c.
Alack, why am I sent for to a king,
I have shook off the regal thoughts
I might d' I hardly yet have learn'd to flatter, bow, and bend my knee:
I leave awhile to tutor me in submission. Yet I well remember of these men: were they not mine?
I sometime cry, All hail! to me!
I did to Christ: but he, in twelve, truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
Will no man say, Amen?
priest and clerk? well then, Amen.
the king! although I be not he;
Amen, if heaven do think him me.—
To do that office of mine own good-will third majesty did make thee offer;
of the state and crown
Bolingbroke.
Give me the crown;—Here, cousin,
the crown;
on this side my hand; on that

Now is this golden crown like a deep well,
That owes two buckets, filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I, Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.

[Resign.
Boling. I thought you had been willing to K. Rich. My crown, I am; but still my griefs are mine:

You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs; still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown.

K. Rich. Your cares set up, do not pluck my cares down.

My care is, loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is, gain of care, by new care won.
The cares I give, I have, though given away;
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?

K. Rich. Ay, no;—no, ay;—for I must [nothing he;]

Therefore no, no, for I resign to thee.

Now mark me, how I will undo myself;—

I give this heavy weight from off my head,

And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,

The pride of kingly sway from out my heart;

With mine own tears I wash away my balm,

With mine own hands I give away my crown,

With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,

With mine own breath release all duties:

All pomp and majesty I do forswear; [oaths:]

My manors, rents, revenues, I forego;

My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:

God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!

God keep all vows unbroke are made to thee!

Make me, that nothing have, with nothing

griev'd, [achiev'd]

And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all

Long mayst thou live in Richard's seat to sit,

And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit!

God save King Henry, unking'd Richard says,

And send him many years of sunshine days!

What more remains? [you read]

North. [Offering a paper.] No more, but that

These accusations, and these grievous crimes,

Committed by your person, and your followers,

Against the state and profit of this land;

That, by confessing them, the souls of men

May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out

My weav'd up follies? Gentle Northumber,

If thy offences were upon record, [And]

Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,

To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst,

There shouldst thou find one heinous article,—

Containing the deposing of a king,

And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,—

Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of

heaven,—

Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,

Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait myself,—

Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,

Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

North. My lord, despatch; read o'er these articles. [not see]

K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I can-
And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of traitors here.

Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest;
For I have given here my soul's consent,
To undeck the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base; and sovereignty a slave;
Proud majesty a subject; state a peasant.

North. My lord, — [sullied man]

K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou haught, in-Nor no man's lord; I have no name, no title, —
No, not that name was given me at the font, —
But 'tis usurp'd: — alack, the heavy day,
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself!
O! that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water drops! — [good,]
Good king, — great king, — (and yet not greatly)
An if my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.

Boling. Go some of you, and fetch a looking-glass. [Exit an Attendant.]

North. Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth come. [come to hell.]

K. Rich. Fiend! thou torment'st me ere I

Boling. Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland. [fied.]

North. The commons will not then be satisfied. K. Rich. They shall be satisfied: I'll read
When I do see the very book indeed [enough,
Where all my sins are writ, and that's — myself.

Re-enter Attendant, with a glass.
Give me that glass, and therein will I read. —

No deeper wrinkles yet! Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,

And made no deeper wounds! — O, flattering
Like to my followers in prosperity, [glass,
Thou dost beguile me! Was this face the face,

That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the face,

That like the sun did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that fac'd so many follies,

And was at last outfac'd by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shineth in this face:

As brittle as the glory is the face;
[Dashes the glass against the ground.]

For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers.
Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport, —

How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.
Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath

The shadow of your face. [destroy'd]

K. Rich. Say that again. Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow! Ha! let's see: —

'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen pain
That swells with silence in the tortured soul;
There lies the substance; and I thank you,
king,

For thy great bounty, that not only
Me cause to wail, but teach me how to wail;
How to lament the cause. I'll bear with
And then be gone and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin!

K. Rich. Fair cousin! I am proud
For when I was a king, my state was such
Were then but subjects; being now a king,
I have a king here to my father's throne.

Being so great, I have no need to be [Boling.] Yet ask.

K. Rich. And shall I have?

Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Then give me leave to go.

Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I may [Boling.] Go, some of you; convey him to the Tower.

K. Rich. O, good! Convey me to the
That rise thus numbly by a traitor's hand.

[Exit K. Richard, some Lords, and some of the Tower.]

Boling. On Wednesday next we will set down

Our coronation: lords, prepare [Exit all except the Archbishop, the Bishop of Ely, and the Abbot.]

Abbot. A woful pageant have we held.

Bishop. The woe to come is such Shall feel this day as sharp to them as [Exit all.]

Aum. You holy clergyman, in this
To rid the realm of this pernicious
[Exit all.]

Abbot. Before I freely speak my
You shall not only take the man, but also To bury mine intents, but also to Whatever I shall happen to do.

I see your brows are full of sorrow,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes
Come home with me to supper.

A plot, shall show us all a merry
[Exit all.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Street near the Tower.

Enter Queen and Attendants.

Queen. This way the king will go To Julius Caesar's monument, to see
To whose flint bosom my condemned
Is doom'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke.

Here let us rest, if this rebellion
Have any resting for her true king.

*Enter King Richard and some of the
But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither: yet look up!*

And I may dissolve to dew,
 And then, the model where old Troy did stand, Thou map of honour, thou king Richard's
 tomb,
 And not king Richard; thou most beauteous
 Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd in
 thee?
 When triumph is become an ale-house guest?
 K. Rich. Join not with grief, fair woman,
 do not so,
 to make my end too sudden; learn, good soul, from which a wail'd, the truth of what we are as but this: I am sworn brother, sweet,
 to keep a league till death. [France,
 And cluster thee in some religious house:
 thy holy lives must win a new world's crown, while our profane hours here have stricken
 down.
 What, is my Richard both in shape and weaken'd? Hath Bolingbroke broke thy intellect? hath he been in thy heart, dying, thrusteth forth his paw, [rage to rend the earth, if nothing else, with his power'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like,
 take thy correction mildly, kiss the rod,
 and bow on rage with base humility,
 K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught has been still a happy king of men. [But beasts, some time queen, prepare thee hence for France;
 I am dead; and that even here thou from my death-bed, my last living leave, remember tedious nights sit by the fire of good old folks, and let them tell thee tales of me thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
 and the lamentable tale of me,
 and the hearers weeping to their beds:
 why, the senseless brands will sympathize
 in thy accent of thy moving tongue,
 in compassion weep the fire out;
 and will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
 the deposing of a rightful king.
 Enter Northumberland, attended.
 North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd;
 he went to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.—
 Madam, there is order taken for you;
 that I may strive to kill it with a groan.
 K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this
 fond delay:
 Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say.
 [Exeunt.
 SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Duke of York's Palace.
 Enter York and his Duchess.
 Duck. My lord, you told me you would tell
 the rest,
 When weeping made you break the story off,
 Of our two cousins coming into London.

Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
 To pluck him headlong from the usurp'd throne.

The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
 That fear to hate; and hate turns one, or both,
 To worthy danger and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end. [with.

Take leave, and part; for you must part forth—
 K. Rich. Doubly divorce'd!—Bad men, ye violate

A twofold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me,
 And then, betwixt me and my married wife.
 Let me unkill the oath 'twixt thee and me;
 And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.

Part us, Northumberland: I towards the north, [clime;

Where shivering cold and sickness pines the My wife to France; from whence, set forth in pomp,

She came adorned hither like sweet May,
 Sent back like Halloween, or short'st of day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart. [with me.

Queen. Bantish us both, and send the king North. That were some love, but little policy. [go.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe.

Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
 Better far off, than near, be ne'er the near.

Go, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans. [groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,

And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
 Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief;

Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief:
 One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly
 part;

Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart.
 [They kiss.

Queen. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good part,

To take on me to keep and kill thy heart.
 [They kiss again.

So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
 That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this
 fond delay:

Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Duke
 of York's Palace.

Enter York and his Duchess.

Duck. My lord, you told me you would tell
 the rest,

When weeping made you break the story off,
 Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?
Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
 Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows'
 tops, [head.
 Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's
York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bol-Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed, [ingbroke,
 Which his aspiring rider seemed to know,
 With slow but stately pace kept on his course,
 While all tongues cried—"God save thee,
 Bolingbroke!" [spake,

You would have thought the very windows
 So many greedy looks of young and old
 Through casements darted their desiring eyes
 Upon his visage; and that all the walls
 With painted imagery had said at once,—
 "Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!"
 Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
 Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck, [men :
 Bespake them thus,—"I thank you, country-
 And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.

Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rides he the whilst?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
 After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
 Are idly bent on him that enters next,
 Thinking his prattle to be tedious; [eyes
 Even so, or with much more contempt, men's Did scowl on Richard; no man cried, God
 save him;

No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
 But dust was thrown upon his sacred head;
 Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
 His face still combating with tears and smiles,
 The badges of his grief and patience;
 That had not God, for some strong purpose,
 steel'd [melted,

The hearts of men, they must perforce have
 And barbarism itself have pitied him.
 But heaven hath a hand in these events, [tents.
 To whose high will we bound our calm con-
 To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now, Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle, York. Aumerle that was;
 But that is lost for being Richard's friend,
 And, madam, you must call him Rutland now:
 I am in parliament pledge for his truth,
 And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Duch. Welcome, my son; who are the violets now, [spring?

That strew the green lap of the new-come Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not;

God knows I had as lief be none, as one.
York. Well, bear you well in this new spring
 of time,

Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.
 What news from Oxford? hold those justs and triumphs?

Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.
York. You will be there, I know.

Aum. If God prevent it not, I will.
York. What seal is that, that I see thy bosom?

Yea, look'st thou pale? let me see the Aum. My lord, 'tis nothing.

York. No matter, then, what I will be satisfied; let me see the

Aum. I do beseech your grace
 It is a matter of small consequence,
 Which for some reasons I would seen.

York. Which for some reasons
 I fear, I fear,—

Duch. What should you
 'Tis nothing but some bond for a

For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph York. Bound to himself? what does a bond

 That he is bound to? Wife, thou art

Boy, let me see the writing.
Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me

York. I will be satisfied; let me see the [Snatches at

Treason! foul treason!—villain
Duch. What is the matter, my lord?

York. Ho! who is within there?
 [Enter a

God for his mercy, what treason
Duch. Why, what is it, my lord?

York. Give me my boots, I say;
 Now, by mine honour, by my

I will approach the villain.
Duch. What?

York. Peace, foolish woman.
Duch. I will not peace.—What

Aum. Good mother, be content
 Than my poor life must answer

Duch. Thy life York. Bring me my boots: I will

king.
Re-enter Servant with boots.

Duch. Strike him, Aumerle—thou art amaz'd.—

[To Servant.] Hence, villain! come come in my sight.

York. Give me my boots, I say;
Duch. Why, York, what wilt thou

Wilt thou not hide the trespass of the
 Have we more sons? or are we like

Is not my teeming date drunk up with
 And wilt thou pluck my fair son

And rob me of a happy mother's comfort
 Is he not like thee? is he not like

York. Thou fond mad woman
 Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy

A dozen of them here have taken
 And interchangeably set down their

To kill the king at Oxford.
Duch. He shall

We'll keep him here: then, what York. Awe—

Fond woman! were he twenty times
 I would approach him.

Scene 3.

York. Hadst thou groan'd for him,
As I have done, thou'dst be more pitiful.
[Exit.]

York. That I have been disloyal to thy bed,
And that he is a bastard, not thy son; [mind :
He is as like thee as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my kin,
And yet I love him.

York. Make way, nursery woman ! [Exit.
After, Aumerle] Mount thee upon his horse ;

And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
[York. He long behind ; though I be old,
I must not but to ride as fast as York ;
And never will I rise up from the ground,
Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away ;
[Exit.]

Scene III.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Bolingbroke as King ; Percy, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell of my unthrifty
son ?
He full three months since I did see him
I saw him hang over us, 'tis he. [last :
I would to God, my lords, he might be found :
Where at London, amongst the taverns there ;
Or there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained loose companions,—
How much, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
To beat our watch, and rob our passengers ;
Or take us, young, wanton, and effeminate boy,
On the point of honour to support a crew.

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw him told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.
Boling. And what said the gallant ?
Percy. His answer was,—he would unto the stews,

And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,
And wear it as a favour ; and with that would anhorse the lustiest challenger.

Boling. As desperate as desperate ; yet, through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Enter Aumerle, hastily.
Where is the king ?
What means our cousin, that he [stares and looks
at Percy and looks
at Bolingbroke as desperate ; yet,
through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Enter Aumerle, hastily.
Where is the king ?
What means our cousin, that he [stares and looks
at Percy and looks
at Bolingbroke as desperate ; yet,
through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Enter Aumerle, hastily.
Where is the king ?
What means our cousin, that he [stares and looks
at Percy and looks
at Bolingbroke as desperate ; yet,
through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Enter Aumerle, hastily.
Where is the king ?
What means our cousin, that he [stares and looks
at Percy and looks
at Bolingbroke as desperate ; yet,
through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Enter Aumerle, hastily.
Where is the king ?
What means our cousin, that he [stares and looks
at Percy and looks
at Bolingbroke as desperate ; yet,
through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Enter Aumerle, hastily.
Where is the king ?
What means our cousin, that he [stares and looks
at Percy and looks
at Bolingbroke as desperate ; yet,
through both
some sparkles of a better hope,
that elder days may happily bring forth.
who comes here !

Boling. Intended, or committed, was this
If on the first, how heinous e'er it be, [fault ?
To win thy after-love I pardon thee. [the key,
Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn
That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire.

[Aumerle locks the door.

York. [Within.] My liege, beware ; look to thyself ;

Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. [Drawing.] Villain, I'll make thee safe. [no cause to fear.

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand ; thou hast York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, foolhardy king :

Shall I, for love, speak treason to thy face ?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

[Bolingbroke unlocks the door ; and afterwards relocks it.

Enter York.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle ? speak ;
Recover breath ; tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know

The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise past :

I do repent me ; read not my name there ;
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. It was, villain, ere thy hand did set
it down,—

I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king ;
Fear, and not love, begets his penitence ;
Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove
A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.

Boling. O heinous, strong, and bold con-
O loyal father of a treacherous son ! [spiracy !
Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,
From whence this stream through muddy passages

Hath held his current, and defil'd himself !
Thy overflow of good converts to bad ;
And thy abundant goodness shall excuse
This deadly blot in thy digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd ;
And he shall spend mine honour with his
shame,

As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,
Or my shame'd life in his dishonour lies ;
Thou kill'st me in his life ; giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What ho ! my liege ! for God's sake let me in.

Boling. What shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this eager cry ?

Duch. [Within.] A woman, and thine aunt,
great king ; 'tis I.

Speak with me, pity me, open the door :
A beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

Boling. Our scene is alter'd from a serious thing. [King.]

And now chang'd to "The Beggar and the

My dangerous cousin, let your mother in :
I know she's come to pray for your foul sin.

[Aumerle unlocks the door.]

York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins, for this forgiveness, prosper may.
This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rests sound ;
This, let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchess.

Duch. O king, believe not this hard-hearted
Love, loving not itself, none other can. [man !

York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here ?

Shall thy old dugs once more a traitor rear ?

Duch. Sweet York, be patient.—[Kneels.]

Hear me, gentle liege.

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech.

For ever will I walk upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy : until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aunt. [Kneels.] Unto my mother's prayers,
I bend my knee.

York. [Kneels.] Against them both my true joints bended be.

Ill mayst thou thrive, if thou grant any grace !

Duch. Pleads he in earnest ? look upon his
face ;

His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast :

He prays but faintly, and would be denied ;
We pray with heart and soul, and all beside :
His weary joints would gladsly rise, I know ;
Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow :

His prayers are full of false hypocrisy ;

Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.

Our prayers do out-pray his ; then let them have
That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say—"stand up ;"
But, "pardon" first, and afterwards, "stand
up."

As if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
"Pardon" should be the first word of thy speech.

I never long'd to hear a word till now ;
Say—"pardon," king ; let pity teach thee how :

The word is short, but not so short as sweet ;
No word like "pardon," for kings' mouths so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king ; say, pardon.

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy ?

Ah ! my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
That sett'st the word itself against the word !
Speak pardon as 'tis current in our land,
The chopping French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there :
Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear ;
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,

Pity may move thee pardon to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch.

Pardon is all the suit I have in this world.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O happy vantage of a king !
Yet am I sick for fear : speak it twice.

Twice saying pardon doth not pardon
But makes one pardon twice.

Boling.

I pardon him.

Duch.

A god on earth that
But for our trusty brother and the abbot.

With all the rest of that comfort Destruction straight shall dog them
Good uncle, help to order several
To Oxford, or where'er these traitors
They shall not live within this world.

But I will have them, if I once know Uncle, farewell : and cousin too, and
Your mother well hath pray'd, and I

Duch. Come, my old son :—I just then now.

SCENE IV.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Sir Pierce of Exton and a servant.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the words he spake ?

"Have I no friend will rid me of this foul sin ?"

Was it not so ?

Serv. Those were his very words.

Exton. "Have I no friend ?" quoth
he, spake it twice,

And urg'd it twice together ; did he say it ?

Serv. He did.

Exton. And speaking it, he wish'd
As who should say,—I would thou
man

That would divorce this terror from Meaning the king at Pomfret.

I am the king's friend, and will rid him of this man.

SCENE V.—Pomfret. The Dungeon.

Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. I have been studying compare

This prison, where I live, unto the
world.

And, for because the world is paper
And here is not a creature but my
I cannot do it ;—yet I'll batten
My brain I'll prove the female to my My soul, the father : and these two
A generation of still-breeding thoughts
And these same thoughts people
world ;

In humours, like the people of the
For no thought is contented. The
As thoughts of things divine,—are
With scruples, and do set the Word
Against the Word :

As thus,—"Come, little ones :"
"It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a needle's eye."

...tending to ambition, they do plot
...wonders: how these vain weak nails
...passage through the flinty ribs
...this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
...they cannot, die in their own pride.
...leading to content, flatter themselves
...they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
...shall not be the last: like silly beggars,
...sitting in the stocks, refuge their shame,
...may have, and others must sit there;
...in this thought they find a kind of ease,
...such as have before endur'd the like.
...play I, in one person, many people,
...some contented: sometimes am I king:
...as I am: then, crushing penury
...me I was better when a king:
...am I king'd again: and, by and by,
...that I am unking'd by Bolingbroke,
...straight am nothing:—but what'er I am,
...any man, that but man is,
...nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
...nothing. —[Music.] Music do I

...keep time:—how sour sweet music is,
...time is broke, and no proportion kept!
...in the music of men's lives.
...have I the daintiness of ear
...broke in a disorder'd string;
...for the concord of my state and time,
...not an ear to hear my true time broke.
...time, and now doth time waste me;
...now hath time made me his numbering
...clock: [jar]
...thoughts are minutes; and, with sighs, they
...watches on unto mine eyes, the outward
...my finger, like a dial's point, [watch,
...still, in cleansing them from tears.
...or, the sounds that tell what hour it is,
...clamorous groans, that strike upon my
...heart, [groans,
...is the ball; so sighs, and tears, and
...minutes, times, and hours:—but my time
...poising on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,
...I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the

...clock.
...music made me: let it sound no more;
...though it have help madmen to their wits,
...it seems, it will make wise men mad.
...blowing on his heart that gives it me!
...is a sign of love; and love to Richard
...a strange brooch in this all-hating world.
Enter Groom.
Groom. Hall, royal prince!

Thanks, noble peer;
...of us is ten groats too dear.
...art thou! and how com'st thou hither,
...no man ever comes, but that sad dog
...I was a poor groom of thy stable,
...I was a poor groom of thy stable,
...thou wert king; who, travelling towards
...much ado, at length have gotten leave

To look upon my sometimes royal master's face,
O, how it yearn'd my heart, when I beheld,
In London streets, that coronation day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary!
That horse that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse that I so carefully have dress'd!

K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me,
How went he under him? [gentle friend],

Groom. So proudly, as if he disdain'd the ground. [his back]

K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on
That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand;
This hand hath made him proud with chapping
him.

Would he not stumble? Would he not fall down, [neck]

(Since pride must have a fall,) and break the
Of that proud man that did usurp his back?

Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse;

And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
Spur-gall'd, and tir'd, by jauncing Bolingbroke.

Enter Keeper, with a dish.
Keeper. [To the Groom.] Fellow, give place;
here is no longer stay. [away]

K. Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. [Exit.]

Keeper. My lord, will't please you to fall to?

K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do. [Exton, who]

Keeper. My lord, I dare not: Sir Pierce of Lately came from the king, commands the contrary. [and thee!]

K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster,
Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

[Strikes the Keeper.]

Keeper. Help, help, help!

Enter Sir Pierce of Exton, and Servants, armed.

K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault?

Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's instrument.

[Snatching a weapon and killing one.]

Go thou, and fill another room in hell.

[He kills another; then Exton strikes him down.]

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That staggers thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce hand

Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own land.

Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high;
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die. [Dies.]

Exton. As full of valour, as of royal blood;
Both have I spilt; O, would the deed were good!

For now the devil, that told me I did well,
Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.

This dead king to the living king I'll bear,
Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.
Flourish. Enter Bolingbroke, as King, York, Lords and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news
 we hear
 Is, that the rebels have consum'd with fire
 Our town of Cicester, in Glostershire;
 But whether they be ta'en, or slain, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.
 Welcome, my lord, what is the news?
North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness.

The next news is,—I have to London sent
 The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and
 The manner of their taking may appear [Kent:
 At large discours'd in this paper here.

[Presenting a paper.
Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains;

And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.
Enter Fitzwater.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London

The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
 Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,
 That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be
 forgot;

Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy, with the Bishop of Carlisle.

Percy. The grand conspirator, abbot of Westminster,

With clog of conscience and sour melancholy,
 Hath yielded up his body to the grave;

But here is Carlisle living, to abide Thy kingly doom and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom:
 Choose out some secret place, some
 room,

More than thou hast, and with it joy thy
 So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from
 For though mine enemy thou hast been,

High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.
Enter Extton, with Attendants bearing a Extton. Great king, within this court sent

Thy buried fear: herein all breathless
 The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
 Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Extton, I thank thee not;
 hast wrought

A deed of slander, with thy fatal hand,
 Upon my head, and all this famous land.

Extton. From your own mouth, my lord,
 I this deed.

Boling. They love not poison that do need,

Nor do I thee: though I did wish him
 I hate the murderer, love him murderer.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy part,
 But neither my good word, nor princely

With Cain go wander through the
 night

And never show thy head by day nor Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe.

That blood should sprinkle me to make
 grow:

Come, mourn with me for that I do
 And put on sullen black, incontinent;

I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,
 To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.

March sadly after; grace my mourning
 In weeping after this untimely blot.

THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Henry the Fourth.
 Prince of Wales, } Sons to the King.
 John of Lancaster, }
 Ralph Neville, Earl of Westmoreland.
 Walter Blunt.
 Percy, Earl of Worcester.
 Percy, Earl of Northumberland.
 Percy, surnamed Hotspur, his Son.
 Mortimer, Earl of March.
 Archbishop of York.
 Glendower, Earl of Douglas.
 Richard Vernon.
 John Falstaff.

Sir Michael, a Friend of the Archbishop of Poins. York.
 Gadshill.
 Peto.
 Bardolph.
 Lady Percy, Wife to Hotspur, and Sister to Mortimer.
 Lady Mortimer, Daughter to Glendower, and Wife to Mortimer.
 Mistress Quickly, Hostess of the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.
 Lords, Officers, Sheriff, Vintner, Chamberlain, Drawers, Carriers, Travellers, and Attendants.

SCENE,—England.

ACT I.

Scene 1.—London. A Room in the Palace.
 King Henry, Westmoreland, Sir Walter
 Blunt, and others.

Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with time, for frightened peace to part, [care,
 the short-winded accents of new broils to commene'd in strands afar remote.
 more the thirty entrance of this soil dash her ill with her own children's
 blood;
 more shall trenching war channel her fields,
 and her flow'rs with the armed hoofs
 of the paces: those opposed eyes,
 like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
 full of one nature, of one substance bred,
 how they meet in the intestine shock
 and furious close of civil butchery, how in mutual well-beseeming ranks,
 acquaintances, kindred, and allies:
 in the eye of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
 how they cut his master. Therefore,
 as to the sepulchre of Christ, [friends,
 soldiers now, under whose blessed cross
 we are impressed and engag'd to fight, with a power of English shall we levy;
 whose arms were moulded in their mother's
 womb,
 whose these pagans, in those holy fields, fourteen hundred years ago, were advantage on the bitter cross. [nail'd our purpose is a twelvemonth old,
 to tell you we will go:

Therefore we meet not now.—Then, let me hear
 Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
 What yesternight our council did decree,
 In forwarding this dear expedience. [tion,
West. My liege, this haste was hot in ques-
 And many limits of the charge set down
 But yesternight: when, all athwart, there came
 A post from Wales laden with heavy news;
 Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer,
 Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
 Was by the rude hands of that Welshman
 A thousand of his people butchered; [taken,
 Upon whose dead corpse there was such mis-
 Such beastly, shameless transformation, [use,
 By those Welshwomen done, as may not be Without much shame re-told or spoken of.
K. Hen. It seems, then, that the tidings of this broil
 Brake off our business for the Holy Land.
West. This, match'd with other like, my gracious lord;
 For more uneven and unwelcome news
 Came from the north, and thus it did import:
 On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
 Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
 That ever-valiant and approv'd Scot,
 At Holmedon met,
 Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour;
 As by discharge of their artillery,
 And shape of likelihood, the news was told:
 For he that brought them, in the very heat
 And pride of their contention did take horse,
 Uncertain of the issue any way. [ous friend,
K. Hen. Here is a dear and true-industri-
 Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,

Stain'd with the variation of each soil
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome
The earl of Douglas is discomfited: [news.
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty knights,

Balk'd in their own blood did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains: of prisoners, Hot-Mordake earl of Fife and eldest son [spur look
To beaten Douglas; and the earls of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith:
And is not this an honourable spoil?
A gallant prize! ha, cousin, is it not?

West. In faith,
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin

In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father of so blest a son:
A son who is the theme of honour's tongue;
Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant;
Who is sweet Fortune's minion, and her pride:
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd,
That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet!
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts.—What think you, coz,

Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.

West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Malevolent to you in all aspects; [Worcester,
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity. [this;

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer
And for this cause a while we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem, Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor: so inform the lords:
But come yourself with speed to us again;
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be utter'd.

West. I will, my liege, [Exit.

SCENE II.—London. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Prince Henry and Falstaff.

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?
P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon,
that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldst truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-colour'd taffeta: I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me for we that take purses, go by the seven stars, and not by the
"that wandering knight so far"
pr'ythee, sweet wag, when thou art God save thy grace, (majesty, I do for grace thou wilt have none.)

P. Hen. What! none?

Fal. No, by my troth; not so much serve to be prologue to an eye as to a

P. Hen. Well, how then?

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when art king, let not us, that are night's body, be called blowes of beauty: let us be Diana's forefathers, of the shade, minions of the moon;
men say, we be men of good being governed, as the sea is, by chaste mistress the moon, under tannance we steal.

P. Hen. Thou sayest well, and well, too; for the fortune of us that moon's men, doth ebb and flow like being governed, as the sea is, by
As for proof, now: a purse of gold solutely snatch'd on Monday dissolutely spent on Tuesday with swearing—"lay by!" and crying—"bring in!" now in as low the foot of the ladder, and by and by a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Fal. By the Lord, then, sayest thou
And is not my hostess of the tavern sweet wench?

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla is of the castle. And is not a bad sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now, how now, now in my quips, and thy quiddities? what have I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast call'd her ing many a time and oft.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee
part?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due paid all there.

P. Hen. Yes, and elsewhere, as coin would stretch; and where I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that here apparent that thou art heir but, I pr'ythee, sweet wag, when gallows standing in England king? and resolution thus forbidding the rusty curb of old father
Do not thou, when thou art king,
P. Hen. No; thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the a brave judge.

Alc. Thou judgest false already: I thou shalt have the hanging of the well, Hal, well; and in some sort it with my humour, as well as waiting in
I can tell you.

Hen. For obtaining of suits?
Yes, for obtaining of suits, whereof the can hath no lean wardrobe. 'Sblood, I melancholy as a gib cat, or a lugged

Hen. Or an old lion, or a lover's lute.
Alc. Yes, or the drone of a Lincolnshire lute.

Hen. What sayest thou to a hare, or the of Moor-ditch?

Alc. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes, indeed, the most comparative,
—sweet young prince,—but, Hal,

thou trouble me no more with vanity.
to God, thou and I knew where a
of good names were to be bought.

I had of the council rated me the other in the street about you, sir; but I marked not; and yet he talked very wisely; but did him not; and yet he talked wisely,
the street too.

Hen. Thou didst well; for wisdom cries in the streets, and no man regards it.
Alc. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast harm upon me, Hal,—God forgive for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew thee; and now am I, if a man should truly, little better than one of the wicked. give over this life, and I will give it to the Lord, as I do not, I am a villain;

I am damned for never a king's son in

the world.
Alc. Where shall we take a purse tomorrow?

Hen. Where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one;
I'll call me villain, and buffe me.

Alc. I am a good amendment of life in from praying to purse-taking.

Hen. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal! 'tis for a man to labour in his vocation.

Alc.—Now shall we know if Gadshill have what hole in hell were not enough for that is the most omnipotent villain that can "stand I" to a true man.

Hen. Good morrow, Ned.
Alc. Good morrow, sweet Hal. What of our Rammer?

Hen. What says Sir John about thy soul, that thou soldst him a Friday last, for a cup of Madeira and a silver bowl?

Alc. Sir John stands to his word,—the all have his bargain; for he was never a breaker of proverbs,—he will give the Poins. Then art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

P. Hen. Else he had been damned for cozening the devil.

Poins. But my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill!
There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and trailers riding to London with fat purses: I have visors for you all;
you have horses for yourselves: Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester: I have bespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap: we may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not,
tarry at home and be hanged.

Fal. Hear ye, Yedward; if I tarry at home, and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Poins. You will, chops?

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one? [my faith.

P. Hen. Who, I rob? I a thief? not I, by

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou comest not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings. [unheeds]

P. Hen. Well, then, once in my days I'll be a

Fal. Why, that's well said. [home.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at

Fal. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor, then, when thou art king.

P. Hen. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I pr'ythee, leave the prince and me alone: I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, mayst thou have the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief: for the poor abuses of the time want countenance.
Farewell: you shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell, All-hallow summer!

[Exit Falstaff.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow: I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto, and Gadshill shall rob those men that we have already waylaid; yourself and I will not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

P. Hen. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fall; and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves; which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Ay, but 'tis like that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Poins. Tut! our horses they shall not see:
I'll tie them in the wood; our visors we will change, after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the pounce, to immask our noted outward garments. [for us.]

P. Hen. But I doubt they will be too hard. Poins. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper: how thirty, at least, he fought with; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured; and in the reproach of this lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with thee: provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap; there I'll sup. Farewell. Poins. Farewell, my lord. [Exit.]

P. Hen. I know you all, and will a while uphold

The unyok'd humour of your idleness; Yet heretofore I imitate the sun, Who doth permit the base contagious clouds To smother up his beauty from the world, That, when he please again to be himself, Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at, By breaking through the foul and ugly mists Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him. If all the year were playing holidays, To sport would be as tedious as to work; But when they seldom come, they wish'd for And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents. [come, So, when this loose behaviour I throw off, And pay the debt I never promised, By how much better than my word I am, By so much shall I falsify men's hopes; And, like bright metal on a sullen ground, My reformation, glittering o'er my fault, Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes, Than that which hath no foil to set it off. I'll so offend, to make offence a skill; Redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—London. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and Unapt to stir at these indignities, [temperate, And you have found me; for, accordingly, You tread upon my patience: but, be sure, I will from henceforth rather be myself, Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition; Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young And therefore lost that title of respect, [down, Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud. [deserves]

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little The scourge of greatness to be used on it; And that same greatness, too, which our own Have help to make so poorly. [hands]

North. My lord,—

K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone, for I do

Danger and disobedience in this. O, sir, your presence is too bad and And majesty might never yet have been The moody frontier of a servant's eye. You have good leave to leave me now. Your use and counsel, we shall see. [Exit.]

[To North.] You were about to speak. Yes, my lord.

North. Those prisoners in your highest maudled,

Which Harry Percy here, at Holmby, Were, as he says, not with us. As is deliver'd to your majesty. Either envy, therefore, or misgiving, Is guilty of this fault, and not my liege.

Hot. My liege, I did deny on point. But I remember, when the next day, When I was dry with rage and stress, Breathless and faint, leaning upon me, Came there a certain lord, neat, trim, Fresh as a bridegroom; and in his hand reap'd, Show'd like a stubble-land of harvest. He was perfum'd like a milliner, And 'twixt his finger and his thumb, A pouncet-box, which ever and anon He gave his nose, and took't away.

Who, therewith angry, when it fell, Took it in snuff; and still he said, And as the soldiers bore dead taunts, He call'd them untaught knaves, vile To bring a slovenly unhandsome betwixt the wind and his nobility. With many holiday and lady terms, He question'd me; among the rest, My prisoners in your majesty's name. I then, all smarting with my wound, To be so pester'd with a popinjay, Out of my grief and my impatient

Answer'd neglectingly, I know not, He should, or he should not. [Exit.]

To see him shine so brisk, and cough, And talk so like a waiting gentlewoman, Of guns, and drums, and wounds, [the mark!—

And telling me, the sovereign of the land, Was permaceti for an inward cure, And that it was great pity, so it was, That villainous salt-petre should be blown Out of the bowels of the harmless land,

Which many a good tall fellow had So cowardly; and but for these vile, This bald unjointed chat of his, [I said, I answer'd indirectly, as I said, And I beseech you, let not Holmby, Come current for an accusation, betwixt my love and your highness.]

Blunt. The circumstance considered, Whatever Harry Percy then did say, To such a person, and in such a place, At such a time, with all the rest of my country, and never more. I am sure, or any way impeach him. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners, and his promise and exception, as, at our own charge, shall ransom

the foolish Mortimer; And those that he did lead to light, the great rascal, damn'd Glendower, the earl of March, shall our married. Shall our coffers, then, be made to redeem a traitor home?

And when I urg'd the ransom once again, Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale, And on my face he turn'd an eye of death, Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not proclaim'd By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood?

North. He was; I heard the proclamation: And then it was when the unhappy king [Whose wrongs in us God pardon!] did set Upon his Irish expedition; [North From whence he, intercepted, did return To be depos'd, and shortly murder'd.]

Wor. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth Live scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of. [then

Hot. But, soft, I pray you; did king Richard Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer Heir to the crown?

North. He did; myself did hear it. Hot. Nay, then, I cannot blame his cousin king, [starv'd, That wish'd him on the barren mountains But shall it be, that you, that set the crown Upon the head of this forgetful man, And for his sake wear the detested blot Of murderous subornation, shall it be, That you a world of curses undergo, Being the agents, or base second means, The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?

O, pardon me, that I descend so low, To show the line, and the predicament, Wherein you range under this subtle king. Shall it, for shame, be spoken in these days, Or fill up chronicles in time to come, That men of your nobility and power, Did gage them both in an unjust behalf,— As both of you, God pardon it! have done,— To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose, And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke? And shall it, in more shame, be farther spoken, That you are fooled, discarded, and shook off By him, for whom these shames ye underwent? No; yet time serves, wherein you may redeem Your banish'd honour, and restore yourselves Into the good thoughts of the world again; Revenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt Of this proud king, who studies day and night To answer all the debt he owes to you, your departure with your son.— [Mortimer] I will after straight, and I'll the devil come and roar for them, and I'll be with hazard of my head. What I drink with choler I stay, and [pause a while;

Re-enter Worcester. Speak, Mortimer! 'Zounds! I will speak of him; and let my soul Want mercy, if I do not join with him: Yes, on his part, I'll empty all these veins, And shed my dear blood drop by drop: But I will lift the down-bred Mortimer [dust, As high 't' the air as this unthankful king, As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.

North. [To Wor.] Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad. Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone? Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners; And when I urg'd the ransom once again Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale, And on my face he turn'd an eye of death, Trembling even at the name of Mortimer. Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not proclaim'd By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood? North. He was; I heard the proclamation: And then it was when the unhappy king [Whose wrongs in us God pardon!] did set Upon his Irish expedition; [North From whence he, intercepted, did return To be depos'd, and shortly murder'd.] Wor. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth Live scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of. [then

Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
Therefore, I say,—

Wor. Peace, cousin, say no more;
And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick-conceiving discontent
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
As full of peril and adventurous spirit,
As to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud,
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night;—or sink or swim:—

Send danger from the east unto the west,
So honour cross it from the north to south,
And let them grapple:—O, the blood more stirs
To rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hot. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap,

To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon;

Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,

And pluck up drowned honour by the locks,
So he that doth redeem her thence might wear
Without co-rival all her dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend.—
Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots,
That are your prisoners,—

Hot. I'll keep them all;
By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them;
No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not:
I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my purposes.—
Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:—
He said, he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbade my tongue to speak of Mortimer;
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla—"Mortimer!"
Nay, I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but "Mortimer," and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you, cousin; a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke:
And that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,—

But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mis-
chance,

I'd have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman: I will talk to you,
When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-tongue and impatient fool

Art thou to break into this woman's mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am scour'd with rods,
Nettled, and stung with pismires,
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.
In Richard's time,—what do you
A plague upon't—it is in (Hou-
'Twas where the mad-cap duke his His uncle York;—where I first Unto this king of smiles, this Boling-
When you and he came back from France.
North. At Berkley castle.

Hot. You say true:—
Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did Look,—"when his infant fortune
And,—"gentle Harry Percy,"— certain."

O, the devil take such cozeners!

Good uncle, tell your tale; for I have not.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, we'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done.

Wor. Then once more to your prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransom,
And make the Douglas' son your ally
For powers in Scotland; which,

reasons,
Which I shall send you written, shall Will easily be granted.—[To North.]

lord,
Your son in Scotland being thus Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate, well known
The Archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not I
Wor. True; who bears hard His brother's death at Bristol, the

I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down.
And only stays but to behold the
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it.

Upon my life, it will do wondrous North. Before the game's abroad, let's slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but
And then the power of Scotland, and To join with Mortimer, ha!

Wor. And

Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly
Wor. And 'tis no little reason
To save our heads by raising of a

For, bear ourselves as even as we
The king will always think him
And think we think ourselves

Till he hath found a time to pay
And see already how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks

Hot. He does, he does: well on him.

Wor. Cousin, farewell:—No
Than I by letters shall direct

Act 3.

When time is ripe, (which will be suddenly,) I'll steal to Glendower and lord Mortimer; were you and Douglas, and our powers at all well fashion'd, shall happily meet, (once, near our fortunes in our own strong arms, which now we hold at much uncertainty.)
York. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I trust.
Hot. Uncle, adieu:—O, let the hours be full of blows, and groans applaud our sport!
[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rochester. An Inn-Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.
Car. Hail! ho! Can't be not four by the clock, I'll be hanged: Charles' wain is over the way chimney, and yet our horse not pack'd.—
What, ostler!

[Within.] Anon, anon.

Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, and a few books in the point; the poor jade is weary in the withers out of all ceam.

Enter another Carrier.

Car. Pows and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that in the next way to give poor the bats: this house is turned upside down, since Robin ostler died.

Car. Poor fellow! never joyed since the day of o'le rose; it was the death of him.

Car. I think this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a toad.

Car. Take a touch! by the mass, there is more a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jorner, and then we leak in your chimney; and our chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach.

Car. What, ostler! come away and be pack'd; some away.

Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two pieces of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charles' cross.

Car. Odsbody! the turkeys in my panner are well served.—What, ostler!—A plague on thee! hadst thou never an eye in thy head!

Car. Canst not hear? An 'twere not as good a deed to break the pate of thee, I am a villain.—Come and be hanged:—hast no more to that!

Enter Gadshill.

Gad. Good morrow, carriers. What's that I think it be two o'clock. [O'clock!]

Car. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye: I know a trick of you of that, I faith.

Car. I pr'ythee, lend me three.

Car. Ay, when I canst tell!—Lend me the money, quotha!—narry, I'll see thee hanged.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee.—Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen: they will along with company, for they have great charge.

[Exit carriers.]

Gads. What, ho! chamberlaine.

Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth pick-purse.

Gads. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlaine; for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou layest the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you yesternight: there's a franklin in the wild of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper; a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will away presently.

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee, keep that for the hangman; for I know thou worship'st saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? If I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows; for if I hang, old sir John hangs with me, and thou knowest he's no starveling. Tut! there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the which, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace; that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot land-rakers, no long-staff, sixpenny strikers, none of these mad, mustachio, purple-hued malt-worms; but with nobility and tranquillity, burgomasters and great oneyers, such as can hold in; such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: and yet I lie; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey on her, for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.

Cham. What! the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way?

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored her. We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more beholden to the night, than to fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gads. Give me thy hand; thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.

Gads. Go to; homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Road by Gadshill.

Enter Prince Henry and Poin; Bardolph and Peto, at some distance.

Poin. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gummied velvet.

P. Hen. Stand close. [They retire.]

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Poin! Poin, and be hanged! Poin! P. Hen. [Coming forward.] Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! What a bawling dost thou keep!

Fal. Where's Poin, Hal?

P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill: I'll go seek him.

[Pretends to seek Poin, and retires.]

Fal. I am accursed to rob in that thief's company; the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire farther afoot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else; I have drunk medicines.—Poin!

—Hal!—a plague upon you both!—Bardolph!—Peto! I'll starve, ere I'll rob a foot farther. An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles afoot with me; and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough: a plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true one to another! [They whistle.] Whew!—A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues; give me my horse, and be hanged.

P. Hen. [Coming forward.] Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down; lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood! I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to coil me thus?

P. Hen. Thou liest; thou art not coiled, thou art unclothed.

Fal. I prythee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son.

P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your Fal. Go, hang thyself in thine own hair-apprant garters! If I be taken, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison:—when a jest is so forward, and afoot too!—I hate it.

Enter Gadshill.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So I do, against my will.

Poin. O, 'tis our setter: I know him.

[Enter Bardolph.]

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye; on your visors: there's money of the king's.

down the hill; 'tis going to the king's chequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue; 'tis going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make much.

Fal. To be hanged.

P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall find me in the narrow lane; Ned Poin and I will be lower: if they 'scape from your hands, then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight, or ten.

Fal. Zounds! will they not rob you?

P. Hen. What, a coward, Sir John?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gales.

P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the Poin. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands in the hedge: when thou need'st him, thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand close.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I will.

be hanged.

P. Hen. [Aside to Poin.] Ned, we are our disguises!

Poin. Here, hard by: stand close.

[Exit P. Hen.]

Fal. Now my masters, happy meeting!

dole, say I: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

1 Trav. Come, neighbour: the lead our horses down the hill; we'll

a while, and ease our legs.

Fal. Gads, do, stand!

Travellers. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut knives! young men must live. You jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, if

with them; fleece them.

Travellers. O! we are undone, both

ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorballed knaves!

undone? No, ye fat chuffs; I know

store were here! On, lawyers, on! I

knives! young men must live. You jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, if

with them; fleece them.

Travellers. O! we are undone, both

ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorballed knaves!

undone? No, ye fat chuffs; I know

store were here! On, lawyers, on! I

knives! young men must live. You jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, if

with them; fleece them.

Travellers. O! we are undone, both

ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorballed knaves!

undone? No, ye fat chuffs; I know

store were here! On, lawyers, on! I

knives! young men must live. You jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, if

with them; fleece them.

Travellers. O! we are undone, both

ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorballed knaves!

undone? No, ye fat chuffs; I know

store were here! On, lawyers, on! I

knives! young men must live. You jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, if

with them; fleece them.

Travellers. O! we are undone, both

ours, for ever.

Enter Falstaff, Gadshill, Bardolph, and Peto.

Fal. Come, my masters, let us share, and let us have before day. An the prince and my string: there's no more valour in that

P. Hen. Your money!

Poin. Villains!

us are sharing, the Prince and Poin us and set upon them. Gadshill,

Falstaff, and Peto run away; and us, leaving the booty behind, us. Got with much ease. Now merrily us are scatter'd, and possum'd with us, that they dare not meet each other;

us, good Ned. Falstaff swears to death, us the lean earth as he walk along:

us not for laughing, I should pity him.

us. How the rogue roars!

[Exit.]

III.—Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Holenur, reading a letter.

us for mine own part, my lord, I could us contended to be there, in respect of the us your house."—He could be con-us he is not, then! In respect of us our house:—he shows in this,

us Let me see some more. "The purpose us is dangerous."—Why, that's us but I tell you, my lord fool, out of us the danger, we pluck this flower, safety,

us purpose you undertake, is dangerous;

us we have raised, uncertain; the us self untried; and your whole plot too us Say you so, say you so! I say unto us you are a shallow, cowardly hind, us What a lack-brain is this! By us our plot is a good plot as ever was us our friends true and constant: a good us plot, very good friends. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a

us our friends true and constant. What a moving such a dish of skinned milk with so honourable an action! Hang him! let him tell the king; we are prepared. I will set forward to-night.

Enter Lady Percy.

How now, Kate! I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady. O, my good lord, why are you thus

For what offence have I this fortnight been

A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed?

Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from thee

Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep!

Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth,

And start so often when thou sit'st alone?

Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks;

And given my treasures, and my rights of thee,

To thick-ey'd musing and cur'd melancholy?

In thy faint slumbers, I by thee have watch'd,

And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars;

Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed;

Cry, "Courage! to the field!"—And thou hast talk'd

Of amies and retires, of trenches, tents,

Of palisades, frontiers, parapets,

Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin,

Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain,

And all the currents of a heady fight.

Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war,

And thus hath so bestir'd thee in thy sleep,

That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,

Like bubbles in a late-disturbed stream;

And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,

Such as we see when men restrain their breath

On some great sudden haste. O, what portents

are these?

Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,

And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hol. What, ho! [Enter Servant.] Is Gillams with the packet gone?

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hol. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even

Hol. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hol. That roan shall be my throne.

Well, I will back him straight: O, experience!—

Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hol. What say'st thou, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hol. Why, my horse,

My love,—my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape!

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen,

As you are toss'd with. In faith,

I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.

I fear my brother Mortimer doth stir

About his title, and hath sent for you

To line his enterprise: but if you go,—

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you paraquito, answer Directly unto this question that I ask:— [me] In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry, An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away, Away, you trisler!—Love?—I love thee not, I care not for thee, Kate; this is no world To play with mummings, and to tilt with lips: We must have bloody noses and crack'd crowns, And pass them current too.—Gods me, my What say'st thou, Kate? what wouldst thou have with me? [indeed]

Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, Well, do not, then; for since you love me not, I will not love myself. Do you not love me? Nay, tell me if you speak in jest or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride? And when I am on horseback, I will swear I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate; I must not have you henceforth question me Whither I go, nor reason whereabouts; Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude, This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate. I know you wise; but yet no farther wise Than Harry Percy's wife; constant you are; But yet a woman; and for secrecy, No lady closer; for I well believe Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know; And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

Lady. How! so far! [Kate]

Hot. Not an inch farther. But, hark you, Whither I go, thither shall you go too; To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you,— Will this content you, Kate?

Lady. It must, of force. [Exit]

SCENE IV.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Bear's Head Tavern.

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Ned, pr'ythee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Enter Poins.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four score hogsheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers; and can call them all by their Christian names, as—Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy; and tell me daily I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, (by the Lord, so they call me,) and when I am King of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying scarlet; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry, "Hem!" and bid you play it off.—To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost me; that thou wert not with me in the But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten what I give thee this pennyworth of clapped even now into my hand by skinker, one that never stake other his life, than—"Eight shillings and and—"You are welcome," with tion,—"Anon, anon, sir!" Surely a bastard in the Half-moon;" to drive away the time till I r'ythee, do thou stand in some of I question my puny drawer to gave me the sugar; and do thou calling—"Francis!" that his be nothing but, "anon." Stop show thee a precedent.

Poins. [Going.] Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.

Poins. [Going.] Francis!

Enter Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Look the Poinegrinate, Ralph.

P. Hen. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to my Fran. Forsooth, five years, and

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by's lady, for the clinking of powder. But, thou be so vallant as to play the thy indenture, and show it a half and run from it!

Fran. O Lord, sir, I'll be sworn books in England I could find to Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see,—about

I shall be—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Pray you, my lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, the sugar thou gavest me—'twas was't not?

Fran. O Lord, sir, I would it

P. Hen. I will give thee five pound: ask me when thou wilt, and Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

P. Hen. Anon, Francis! No, to-morrow, Francis; or, Francis, or, indeed, Francis, when thou

Fran. My lord!

P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this crystal-button, notepated, stocking, caldais-garter, smooth

ish-ponch—

Fran. O Lord, sir, who do you

P. Hen. Why then, your your only drink; for, look you,

doublet will sully; in Barbary, a man come to so much.

What, sir?
[Within.] Francis!
Away, you rogue! Dost thou not know they both call him? Francis stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.
What, standest thou still, and hearest a calling? Look to the guests within.

My lord, old sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door; shall I let them in?

Let them alone a while, and then let them in. [Exit Vintner.] Poin.

Enter Poin.
Anon, anon, sir.

Alas, Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the guests are at the door; shall we be merry?

As merry as crickets, my lad. But ye, what cunning match have you made with the jest of the drawer? come, what's the jest of the drawer? come, what's the jest of the drawer? come, what's the jest of the drawer?

I am now of all humours, that have known themselves humours, since the old days when Adam to the pupil age of this world twelve o'clock at midnight. [Francis enters, with wine.] What's o'clock,

What's o'clock, sir. [Exit.] That ever this fellow should have words than a parrot, and yet the son of a

His industry is—up-stairs and down-stairs; he that kills me some six or seven times at a breakfast, washes his hands, to his wife. "Pie upon this quiet life!" "O my sweet Harry," says she, "how many hast thou killed to-day?" "Give me a drench," says he; and answers,

"fourteen" an hour after,—"a trifle, a trifle," says he; and answers,

"I prythee call in Falstaff: I'll play with that damned brawn shall play damme with his wife. "Rivo!" says the drunkard, call in Falstaff.

Falstaff, Gadshill, Bardolph, and Peto; followed by Francis, with wine.

Welcome, Jack: where hast thou been? A plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a

plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a

plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a

plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a plague of all cowards, I say, and a villainous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it,—a villainous coward.—Oo thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unchanged in England; and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything. A plague of all cowards, I say still. [you?]

P. Hen. How now, wool-suck! what matter?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales!

P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that: and Poin.

Poin. 'Zounds! ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack:—I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunkest last.

Fal. All's one for that. [He drinks.] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

P. Hen. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter! here be four of us have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it! taken from us it is; a hundred upon poor four of us.

P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw,—ecce signum! I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all cowards! Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of

P. Hen. Speak, sirs; how was it? [darkness.] Gads. We four set upon some dozen,—

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord. Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound. Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Hebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,—

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.

P. Hen. What, fought ye with them all?

Fal. All! I know not what ye call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

P. Hen. Pray God, you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them; two, I am sure, I have paid; two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward; here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

P. Hen. What, four! thou saidst but two even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

P. Hen. Seven! why, there were but four

Fal. In buckram. [even now.]

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits, [else,

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, let him alone; we shall have more anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—

P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken,—

Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground: but I followed me close, came in, foot and hand; and with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.

P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two.

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves, in Kendal green, came at my back, and let drive at me;—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand.

P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begets them,—gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-keech,—

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth the truth?

P. Hen. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what sayest thou to this?

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack,—your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

P. Hen. I'll be no longer gully of this sanguine coward, this bed-sitting horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of dried meat's tongue, bull's pizzle, and fish,—O for breath to utter what's left!

Fal. Away, you starveling, you dried meat's tongue, bull's pizzle, and fish,—you tailor's yard, you sheath, you you vile standing luck,—

P. Hen. Well, breathe awhile, and let it again: and when thou hast tired these base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poins. Mark, Jack.

P. Hen. We two saw you four and you bound them, and were masters of wealth.—Mark now, how a plan taken you down.—Then did we two set on you and, with a word, out-faced you for prize, and have it; yea, and can show here in the house;—and, Falstaff, your guts away as nimbly, with a terity, and roared for mercy, and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. art thou, to back thy sword as thou art then say, it was in fight! what device, what starting-hole, couldst thou find out, to hide thee from this apparent shame?

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack! what hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye, as well that made ye. Why, hear ye, my was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? I turn upon the true prince? I knowest I am as valiant as Hercules; ware instinct; the lion will not touch a prince. Instinct is a great matter; a coward on instinct. I shall think of myself and thee, during my life; and thou for a true prince. Lord, lads, I am glad you have the [To the Hostess within.] Hostess, doors!—watch to-night, pray Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, of good fellowship come to you! we be merry! shall we have a play?

P. Hen. Content;—and the argument be, thy running away.

Fal. Ah, no more of that, Hal. Enter Hostess.

Host. My lord the prince.

P. Hen. How now, my lady the what sayest thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a of the court at door would speak with

P. Hen. Give him as much as will a royal man, and send him back

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of midnight? Shall I give him his

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him packing.

P. Hen. Now, sirs:—by'r lady, you fought —could you, Peto?—so did you, Bardolph:
you will not touch the true prince; no,—die!
P. Hen. Faith, I can when I saw others run.
P. Hen. Faith, tell me now in earnest,—
—some Peto's sword so hacked?

P. Hen. Why, he hacked it with his dagger;
and he would swear truth out of England, and would make you believe it was done in
—and persuaded us to do the like.
P. Hen. Yes, and to tickle our noses with —our garments with it, and to swear it
—the blood of true men. I did that I did —this seven year before,—I blush to hear his —devices.

P. Hen. O villain! thou stolest a cup of sack
—seven years ago, and wert taken with the
—and ever since thou hast blushed ex-
—Thou hadst fire and sword on thy —and yet thou ranst away: what instinct
—thou for it?

P. Hen. My lord, do you see these meteors?
—you behind these exhalations?

P. Hen. I do.
P. Hen. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses,
—Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, balder.—Here
—Peto's! How now, my sweet creature
—thou art!

P. Hen. How long is't ago, Jack, since —thou wert mine own knee?

P. Hen. My own knee! when I was about thy —thou wert mine own eagle's talon in the
—I could have crept into any alderman's
—a plague of sighing and grief! it
—me up like a bladder.—There's vil-

P. Hen.—there was Sir John Bracy —your father; you must to the court in the
—That same mad fellow of the north,

P. Hen.—and he of Wales, that gave Amalunio —and made Lucifer cuckold, and —the devil his true liegeman upon the
—a Welsh hook,—what a plague call

P. Hen. O Glendower.—[you him?—
—Owen, Owen,—the same; and his son—
—Mortimer; and old Northumberland;

P. Hen.—that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that —he sprang up a hill perpendicular,—

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and —his pistol kills a sparrow dying.

P. Hen. You have hit it.
P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

P. Hen. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in —he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou, then,
—him so far running?

P. Hen. O horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot,
—not lodge a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.
—I grant ye, upon instinct.—Well, he is
—and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more: Worcester is stolen away tonight; thy father's beard is turned white with the news: you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel.

P. Hen. Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like, we shall have good trading that way.—
But tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afraid?
thou being heir-apparent, could the world pick these out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it? [thy instinct.

P. Hen. Not a whit, I' faith; I lack some of Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid tomorrow, when thou comest to thy father: if thou love me, practise an answer.

P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? content:—this chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyses' vein.

P. Hen. Well, here is my leg. [nobility.
Fal. And here is my speech.—Stand aside,

Host. O Jesu! This is excellent sport, I' faith!
Fal. Weep not, sweet queen; for trickling tears are vain. [tenance]

Host. O, the father! how he holds his coun-Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristful queen;

For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Host. O rare! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see!

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot! peace, good tickle-brain!—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the canomole, the more it is trodden on, the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If, then, thou be son to me, here lies the point:—why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a nicher, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses?
a question to be asked. There is a thing,
Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of Glend. Come, here's the map: shall we divide our right,

According to our three-fold order ta'en?

Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it into three limits, very equally:—England, from Trent and Severa hitherto, By south and east is to my part assign'd; All westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore, And all the fertile land within that bound, To Owen Glendower:—and, dear coz, to you The remnant northward, lying off from Trent. And our indentures tripartite are drawn; Which being sealed interchangeably, (A business that this night may execute,)

To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I, And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth To meet your father and the Scottish power, As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury. My father Glendower is not ready yet, [days:—] Nor shall we need his help these fourteen [To Glend.] Within that space you may have drawn together

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, And in my conduct shall your ladies come; From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;

For there will be a world of water shed, Upon the parting of your wives and you.

Hot. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here,

In quantity equals not one of yours: See how this river comes me cranking in, And cuts me from the best of all my land A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle out. I'll have the current in this place dam'd up; And here the smug and silver Trent shall run In a new channel, fair and evenly:

It shall not wind with such a deep indent, To rob me of so rich a bottom here. [it doth.]

Glend. Not wind? it shall, it must; you see, Mort. Yes, but mark how he bears his course, and runs me up

With like advantage on the other side; Gelding the opposed continent as much, As on the other side it takes from you. [here.]

Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him And on this north side win this cape of land; And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.

Glend. I will not have it alter'd.

Hot. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you, then; Speak it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as For I was train'd up in the English court; Where, being but young, I framed to the harp Many an English ditty, lovely well, And gave the tongue a helpful ornament,— A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it; heart:

I had rather be a kitten, and cry mew Than one of these same noisome ballads.

I had rather hear a braggart chatter Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree

And that would set my teeth on edge, Nothing so much as minding poetry.

'Tis like the fore'd gait of a shuffling

Glend. Come, you shall have

Hot. I'll give thrice as much land to a deserving friend; But in the way of bargain, mark you me;

I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.

Are the indentures drawn? I shall run

Glend. The moon shines fair; away by night;

I'll haste the writer, and withal, Break with your wives of your disputation.

I am afraid my daughter will run mad, So much she doteth on her Mortimer.

Mort. Pie, cousin Percy! how you

father!

Hot. I cannot choose: sometimes I

With telling me of the moidwarp and Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies

And of a dragon and a sinless damsel, A clip-wing'd griffin and a ramping cub

A couching lion and a ramping cub And such a deal of skimbleshanks and such

As puts me from my faith, I tell you, He held me, last night, at least one hour

In reckoning up the several devils that That were his lackeys; I cried, "Well, go to,"

and "Well, go to," O, he said, But mark'd him not a word.

As a tired horse, a rattling wheel, Worse than a smoky house:—I had

With cheese and garlick in a window Than feed on cates, and have him tell

Than feed on cates, and have him tell In any summer-house in Christendom

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman, Exceedingly well read, and well

In strange concealments; valiant as a lion, And wondrous affable, and as homely

As mines of India. Shall I tell you, As mines of India. Shall I tell you,

He holds your temper in a high respect, And curbs himself even of his nature

When you do cross his humour:—I warrant you, that man is not alive

Might so have tempted him as you have done Without the taste of danger and repentance

But do not use it oft, let me entreat you. Wor. In faith, my lord, you are blame; And since your coming hither, To put him quite beside his patience

You must needs learn, lord, to conceal your Though sometimes it show greatness blood, (And that's the dearest grace it recks of Yet oftentimes it doth present bare

Defect of manners, want of government

laughness, opinion, and disdain: the heart of which, haunting a nobleman, and leaves behind a stain the beauty of all parts besides,

besides them of commendation. Hot. Well, I am school'd: good manners to your speed! Glend. I leave.

to come our wives, and let us take our Hot. Glendower, with Lady Mortimer and Lady Percy. Hot. This is the deadly spite that angers me:—I can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part with you;

she is a soldier too, she'll to the wars. Hot. Good father, tell her that she and her sent Percy Glend. I follow in your conduct speedily.

Glendower speaks to Lady Mortimer in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Hot. She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry, one no persuasion can do good upon. Hot. She speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.

Hot. I understand thy looks; that pretty Welsh that thou pon't down from these swelling heavens, two perfect in; and, but for shame, some a parley would I answer thee, Hot. I understand thy kisses, and thou mine, and a feeling disputation: I will never be a truant, love, have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue is as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,

as a queen in a summer's bower, Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run

as a queen in a summer's bower, Hot. Nay, if you melt, then will she run Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose.

[Glendower speaks some Welsh words, and music is heard.] [Welsh:]

Hot. Now I perceive the devil understands And 'tis no marvel he is so humorous.

By'r lady, he's a good musician. [musical.] Lady P. Then should you be nothing but

For you are altogether governed by humour. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh. [howl in Irish.] Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still. Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.

Lady P. Now, God help thee! Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that? Hot. Peace! she sings.

[Lady M. sings a Welsh song.] Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth. Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! 'Heart!

you swear like a comfit-maker's wife! "Not you, in good sooth;" and, "As true as I live;" and, "As God shall mend me;" and, "As sure as day:" And giv'st such sarcenet surety for thy oaths, As if thou never walk'dst further than Emsbury.

Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath; and leave "In sooth," And such protest of pepper-gingerbread, To velvet guards, and Sunday-citizens.

Come, sing. Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so, come in when ye will. [Exit.]

Glend. Come, come, lord Mortimer; you are as slow as hot lord Percy is on fire to go. By this our book is drawn; we will but seal,

And then to horse immediately. Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, and Lords. K. Hen. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I [near at hand,] Must have some private conference: but be for we shall presently have need of you. —

[Exeunt Lords.] I know not whether God will have it so,

For some displeasing service I have done, That, in his secret doom, out of my blood

He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me; But thou dost, in thy passages of life,

Make me believe that thou art only mark'd For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,

To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else, Could such inordinate and low desires,

Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean
Each barren pleasure, rude society, [attempts,
As thou art match'd withal and graced to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would I Quit all offences with as clear excuse, [could
As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge Myself of many I am charg'd withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,

As, in reproof of many tales devis'd, — [hear,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must
By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmongers,
I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faultily wander'd and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.

K. Hen. God pardon thee! — yet let me wonder, Harry,

At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost;
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;

And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court, and princes of my blood:
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man
Prophecically does forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company, —
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession,
And left me in reputation, banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.

By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But, like a comet, I was wonder'd at; [the:
That men would tell their children, "This is Others would say, "Where? which is Boltonbrooke?"

And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress'd myself in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts, Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,

Even in the presence of the crown'd king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh and new;
My presence, like a robe pontifical,
Ne'er seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,
Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast;
And won, by rareness, such solemnity.

The sleeping king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters and rash bawling wits, Soon kindled, and soon burn'd; carded his Mingled his royalty with carping fools; [state;
Had his great name profaned with their scorns;
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at glib boys, and stand the push
Of every headless vain comparative;
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Ensoof'd himself to popularity;

That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,
They surfeited with honey, and began [little
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a
More than a little is by much too much.

So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo in the field;
Heard, not regarded; — seen, but
As, sick and blunted with common Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty,
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
But rather drows'd, and sleep'd the while
down,

Slept in his face, and render'd not
As cloudy men use to their adversity;
Being with his presence gladdened, and
And in that very line, Harry, [died,
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege
With vile participation; not as you
But is a weary of thy common Save mine, which hath deard to Which now doth that I would not Make blind itself with foolish tears,
P. Hen. I shall hereafter my

K. Hen. For all the world
As thou art to this hour, was Richard
When I from France sat foot at [the:
And even as I was then, is Percy
Now, by my sceptre, and my crown;
He hath more worthy interest to
Than thou, the shadow of a man;
For, of no right, nor colour like
He doth fill fields with barres in Turns head against the flower of
And, being no more in debt to Leads ancient lords and reverend
To bloody battles, and to bristling
What never-dying honour hath Against renowned Douglas; who Whose hot incursions, and great Holds from all soldiers chief
And military title capital,
Through all the kingdoms that Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mar
This infant warrior, in his entan Discomfited great Douglas; and Enlarg'd him, and made a friend
To fill the mouth of deep danger
And shake the peace and safety of
And what say you to this? Percy

land,
The archbishop's grace of York
Capitulate against us, and are op
But wherefore do I tell thee of Why, Harry, do I tell thee of Which art my near'st and dearest Thou that art like enough, — [the:
fear,
Base inclination, and the start of
To fight against me under Percy's
To dog his heels, and courtier's
To show how much thou art de P. Hen. Do not think so; you it so;
And God forgive them, that
Your majesty's good thoughts
I will redeem all this on Percy's

and that suddenly, while I am in some lodging;
I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse; the inside of a church! Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it: — come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as vir-tuously given as a gentleman need to be; vir-tuous enough; swore little; dined not above
seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house
not above once in a quarter — of an hour; paid
money that I borrowed — three or four times;
lived well, and in good compass; and now I
live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, — out of all reasonable compass, sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend
my life: thou art our admiral, thou bearest
the lantern in the poop, — but 'tis in the nose of thee: thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, sir John, my face does you no
harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's
head, or a memento mori: I never see thy face,
but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that liv'd
in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath
should be, "By this fire, that's God's angel;"
but thou art altogether given over; and wert
indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou wast up Gadshill
the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wild-fire, there's no purchase in money. O,
thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee
in the night betwixt tavern and tavern; but the sack that thou hast drank me, would have bought me lights as good, cheap, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two
and thirty years; God reward me for it!

Bard. Shblood, I would my face were in your belly!

Fal. So should I be sure to be heart-burned.
Enter Hostess.

— How now, dame Partlet the hen! have you enquired yet who picked my pocket?

Host. Why, sir John, what do you think, sir John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have enquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the tilth of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess; Bardolph was shaven, and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn my

and that suddenly, while I am in some lodging;
I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse; the inside of a church! Company, villainous
company, hath been the spoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it: — come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as vir-
tuously given as a gentleman need to be; vir-tuous enough; swore little; dined not above
seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house
not above once in a quarter — of an hour; paid
money that I borrowed — three or four times;
lived well, and in good compass; and now I
live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, — out of all reasonable compass, sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend
my life: thou art our admiral, thou bearest
the lantern in the poop, — but 'tis in the nose of
thee: thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, sir John, my face does you no
harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's
head, or a memento mori: I never see thy face,
but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that liv'd
in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath
should be, "By this fire, that's God's angel;"
but thou art altogether given over; and wert
indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou wast up Gadshill
the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wild-fire, there's no purchase in money. O,
thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting
bonfire-light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee
in the night betwixt tavern and tavern; but the sack that thou hast drank me, would have bought me lights as good, cheap, at the dearest
chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two
and thirty years; God reward me for it!

Bard. Shblood, I would my face were in your belly!

Fal. So should I be sure to be heart-burned.
Enter Hostess.

pocket was picked. Go to, you are woman.
So.

Host. Who, I? No; I defy thee; I was never called so in my own house before.

Fal. Go to; I know you well enough.

Host. No, sir John; you do not know me, sir John: I know you, sir John; you owe me money, sir John; and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it; I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowlas, filthy dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, sir John, for your diet, and ty-drinkings, and money lent you, four-and-twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Host. He? alas! he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks: I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a sealing of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup: 'Shood, an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins, marching.

Falstaff meets the Prince, playing on his truncheon like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, I' faith! must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well; he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a sealing of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said, he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune: nor no more truth in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, Marston may be the deputy's wife as to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing? Fal. What thing? why, a beast. God on.

Host. I am no thing to thee; I would thou shouldst know it; I am a man's wife; and, setting thy knavehood, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave?

Fal. What beast? why, an ass.

P. Hen. An ass, sir John?

Fal. Why? she's neither a man nor a woman; she's a beast.

Host. Thou art an unjust man; thou or any man knows where thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, but slanderers thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; this other day, you ought him a pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah! do I owe you a pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! thy love is worth a million; Marston thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea,—if he said my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 'tis copper; I say, as good as thy word now!

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest me, but man, I dare: but as thou art, thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared; dost thou think, I'll fear thy father? nay, an I do, I'll give thee a girlie break.

P. Hen. O, if it should, how would I fall about thy knees! But, sir, room for faith, truth, or honesty, of thine,—it is all filled up with trifles. Charge an honest woman with thy pocket! Why, thou wast a poor fellow, if there were any more of bawdy-houses, and one poor of sugar-candy to make thee a

if thy pocket were enriched with injuries but these, I am a villain; I will stand to it; you will not

Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? I am the state of innocence, Adam should poor Jack Falstaff do, and villainy! Thou seest, I have been and therefore more frailty. You then, you picked my pocket? It appears so by the story.

Hostess, I forgive thee: go make ready for love thy husband, look to thy service, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me to any honest reason: thou seest, I am honest. Still! Nay, prythee, be gone. Now, lad, to the news at the robbery, lad,—how is that?

Hot. O, my sweet beef, I must still be angel to thee: the money is paid back.

Hot. O, I do not like that paying back; 'tis labour.

Hot. I am good friends with my father, and do anything.

Hot. He no the exchequer the first thing do, my lord.

Hot. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Hot. I would it had been of horse. Where and one that can steal well? O for a thief, of the age of two and twenty, or three.

Hot. I am heinously unprovided. I should be thanked for these rebels, they come but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

Hot. My lord! [Lancaster, brother John; and this to my lord of Westmoreland.]

Hot. Go hear this letter to lord John of Westmoreland.

Hot. To horse, to horse; for thou and I thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.

Hot. [Exit Poin.]

Hot. I meet me to-morrow in the Temple-Hall at noon: I shall then know thy charge; and there I will order for their furniture.

Hot. And Percy stands on high; and they, or we, must lower lie. [Exit.]

Hot. Brave words! brave world!—Hostess, my breakfast; come:—

Hot. I should wish this tavern were my drum! [Exit.]

ACT IV.

Hot. The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: if speaking truth

Hot. One age were not thought flattery, a soldier of this season's stamp

Hot. I cannot current through the world, a soldier of another; but a braver place

Hot. Let me to my word; approve me, lord. Thou art the king's honour:

Hot. Thou art the king's honour: so potent breathes upon the ground, will he hear him,

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well.—

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

Hot. What letters hast thou there?—[To Douglas.]

Hot. I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father.

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord; he's grievously sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be in such a jangling time? Who leads his power?

Hot. Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

Hot. I prythee, tell me, doth he keep his mess?

Hot. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth:

And at the time of my departure thence, He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Hot. I would the state of time had first been whole,

Ere he by sickness had been visited:

His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise;

'Tis catching hither, even to our camp.

Hot. He writes me here,—that inward sickness,—

And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust

On any soul remov'd, but on his own.

Hot. Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,

That with our small conjunction we should on,

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;

For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,

Because the king is certainly possess'd

Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Hot. Your father's sickness is a main to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off:—

And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want

Seems more than we shall find it:—were it good,

To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast; to set so rich a main

On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour!

Hot. It were not good; for therein should we read

The very bottom and the soul of hope,

The very list, the very utmost bound

Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should;

Where now remains a sweet reversion:

We may boldly spend upon the hope

Of what is to come in:

A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,

If that the devil and mischance look big

Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Hot. But yet, I would your father had been here.

The quality and hair of our attempt

Brooks no division: it will be thought

By some, that know not why he is away,

That wisdom, loyalty, and more dislike
Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence:
And think, how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause;
For, well you know, we of the offering side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence

The eye of reason may pry in upon us:
This absence of your father's, draws a curtain,
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.
I, rather, of his absence make this use:—
It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprise,
Than if the earl were here; for men must think,
If we, without his help, can make a head
To push against the kingdom, with his help,
We shall overturn it topey-turvy down.—
Yet all goes well; yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think; there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.
Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord. [strong]
The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand
Is marching hitherwards; with him, prince Hot. No harm: what more? [John]

Ver. And further, I have learn'd,
The king himself in person is set forth,
Or hitherwards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation. [son]
Hot. His shall be welcome too. Where is his
The nimble-footed mad-cap prince of Wales,
And his comrades, that daff'd the world aside,
And bid it pass?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms,
All plum'd like estridges, (that with the wind Bated, like eagles having lately bath'd;) [son]
Glittering in golden coats, like images;
As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer;
Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more; worse than the sun in March. [come]
This praise doth nourish agues. Let them
Come like sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war,
All hot and bleeding, will we offer them:
The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit,
Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire,
To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh,

And yet not ours.—Come, let me
Who is to hear me, like a thunder Against the bosom of the prince of Harry to Harry shall, but how to Meet, and ne'er part, till our day
O that Glendower were come!

Ver. I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode He cannot draw his power thence Doug. That's the worst tidings of yet.

Hot. Ay, by my faith, that Hot. What may the king's Ver. To thirty thousand.
Hot.

My father and Glendower being
The powers of us may serve us
Come, let us take a muster
Doomsday is near; die all, die
Doug. Talk not of dying; I am Of death, or death's hand, for year.

SCENE II.—A public Road near
Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before I'll me a bottle of sack; our soldiers through; we'll to Sutton-Copland Bard. Will you give me money?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.
Bard. This bottle makes an Fal. As if it do, take it for If it make twenty, take them all the coinage. Bid my lieutenant at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell.
Fal. If I be not ashamed of my am a roused gurnet. I have got, in press damnably. I have got, in hundred and fifty soldiers, these odd pounds. I press me none but holders, yeomen's sons; such as had truncked bachelors, such as had twice on the hams; such a company slaves, as had as lief bear a caliver such as fear the report of a caliver
a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck;
me none but such toasts and butlers
in their bellies no bigger than pin-they have bought out their service my whole charge consists of com-lieutenants, gentlemen of com-ragged as Lazarus in the palmer's the glutton's dogs licked his as, indeed, were never soldiers unjust serving men, younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and fallen; the cankers of a calm peace; ten times more (than than an old-faced ancient's and fill up the rooms of them out their services, that you would had a hundred and fifty lately come from swine-keeping and hucks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the shells, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye there, such scorpions. I'll not march thirty miles march wide betwixt the legs, if they had given on; for, indeed, I had the of them out of prison. There's but a about a half in all my company; and the over the shoulders laced together, and selves; and the shirt, to say the truth, from my host at St. Alban's, or the red-they'll and linen enough on every hedge.

P. Hen. Henry and Westmoreland.

Doug. How now, blown Jack! how now,
What! Hal! How now, mad wag!
I'll not dust thou in Warwickshire!—My lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy:
Could your honour had already been at Westmoreland.

Fal. With, Sir John, 'tis more than time
I were there, and you too; but my powers are already. The king, I can tell you, is not far off; we must away all night.
But, never fear me: I am as vigilant
as a cat in cream.

Fal. I think, to steal cream, indeed; for the devil, whose fellows are these that come to steal cream.
Fal. Alas, Hal, mine.

Fal. I did never see such pitiful rascals.
powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit
as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, no men.

Fal. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are a little poor and bare; too beggarly.
Fal. A little for their poverty, I know not more they had that; and for their bareness, I know, they never learned that of me.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; unless your call anchors on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah,
What is already in the field?
Fal. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a fast.

Fal. Well, and a keen guest. [Exit.
SCENE III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Douglas, and Vernon.
Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Doug. You give him, then, advantage.
Hot. Why say you so? I looks he not for so do we.

Doug. It may not be.
Not a whit.
His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd; stir not tonight. Do not, my lord. [night]
Doug. You do not counsel well:
You speak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,
(And I dare well maintain it with my life,)
I well-respected honour bid me on,
I hold as little counsel with weak fear,
As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:—
Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle,
Which of us fears.

Doug. Yes, or to-night.
Ver. Content.
Hot. To-night, say I.
Ver. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much,
Being men of such great leading as you are,
That you foresee not what impediments
Drag back our expedition: certain horse
Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up:
Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;
And now their pride and mettle is asleep,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a horse is half the half of himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy
In general, journey-bated, and brought low;
The better part of ours are full of rest. [ours]
Wor. The number of the king exceedseth
For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

[The trumpet sounds a parley.
Enter Sir Walter Blunt.
Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the
king,

If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.
Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and
You were of our determination! [would to God]
Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings, and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,
But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should
So long as out of limit and true rule, [stand so]
You stand against anointed majesty! [know]
But, to my charge.—The king hath sent to The nature of your griefs; and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land
Audacious cruelty. If that the king
Have any way your good deserts forgot,—
Which he confesseth to be manifold,— [speed]
He bids you name your griefs; and with all
You shall have your desires with interest,
And pardon absolute for yourself, and these,
Herein mislead by your suggestion. [the king]

Hot. The king is kind; and well we know, Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.
My father, and my uncle, and myself,
Did give him that same royalty he wears;
And when he was not six-and-twenty strong,
Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,
A poor unmined outlaw sneaking home,
My father gave him welcome to the shore;
And when he heard him swear, and vow to
He came but to be duke of Lancaster, [God]

To sue his livery and beg his peace,
With tears of innocence and terms of zeal,—
My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,
Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the lords and barons of the realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and less came in with cap and knee;
Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,
Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,
Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths,
Gave him their heirs as pages; follow'd him,
Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.
He presently,—as greatness knows itself,—
Steps me a little higher than his vow
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspur;
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform
Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees,
That lie too heavy on the commonwealth;
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country's wrongs; and by this face,
This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for:
Proceeded farther; cut me off the heads
Of all the favourites, that the absent king
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut! I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then, to the point.
In short time after, he depos'd the king;
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state:
To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman
March

(Who is, if every owner were well plac'd, Indeed his king) to be engag'd in Wales,
There without ransom to lie forfeited;
Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;
Sought to entrap me by intelligence;
Raked my uncle from the council-board;
In rage dismiss'd my father from the court;
Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong;

And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out
This head of safety; and withal to pry
Into his title, the which we find Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?
Hot. Not so, sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile.

Go to the king; and let there be empawn'd
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall my uncle
Bring him our purposes: and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of grace
Hot. And, may be, so we shall. [and love.
Blunt. Pray God you do!

[Exeunt.
SCENE IV.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's House.

Enter the Archbishop of York and Sir Michael.

Arch. Hie, good sir Michael; bear this scalded brief

With winged haste to the last point
This to my cousin Scroop; and after
To whom they are directed. If you
How much they do import, you know.

Sir M. My good lord,
I guess their tenor.

Arch. Like enough. Like enough,
To-morrow, good sir Michael, it is Wherein the fortune of ten thousand Must bide the touch; for, at the last,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king, with mighty and good Meets with lord Harry: and Michael.

What with the sickness of North-(Whose power was in the first place
And what with Owen Glendower
thence,

(Who with them was a rated man
And comes not in, o'er-rul'd by them
I fear the power of Percy is too
To wage an instant trial with the Sir M. Why, my good lord, what
There is Douglas, and lord

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Mortimer.

Harry Percy.
And there's my lord of Worcester,

Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is: but they are hath drawn

The special head of all the land
The prince of Wales, lord John of The noble Westmoreland, and many
And many more cornivals, and dukes
Of estimation and command in the Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet would
And, to prevent the worst, sir Michael,
For, if lord Percy thrive not, ere Dismiss his power, he means to
For he hath heard of our conference
And 'tis but wisdom to make
him:

Therefore, make haste. I must go
To other friends; and so farewell.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The King's Camp near
bury.

Enter King Henry, Prince Harry of Lancaster, Sir Walter Blunt,
John Falstaff.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun
Above yond' bosky hill! the day
At his distemperance.

P. Hen. The sun
Doth play the trumpet to his part,
And by his hollow whistling in the Foretells a tempest, and a bloody

Scene I.

THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.

K. Hen. Then, with the losers let it sym-phonize,
No action can seem foul to those that win.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.
Wor. My lord of Worcester! 'tis not well,
I should meet upon such terms
As this doth offer. You have deceived our trust,
And made us shift our easy robes of peace,
For such an old limbs in ungentle steel:
And say you to it? will you again unknit
The shroud that of all-aborred war?
Will you bid give a fair and natural light;
A shower of fear, and a portent
Of mischief to the unborn times?

Vern. Hear me, my liege.

For mine own part, I could be well content
To share the tag-and of my life
With quiet hours; for, I do protest
I have not sought the day of this dislike.

K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it then?

Vern. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it. Peace, chawet, peace!

K. Hen. It pleased your majesty to turn your back from myself and all our house;

Vern. I must remember you, my lord,
To you my staff of office did I break

K. Hen. And posted day and night
To seek you on the way, and kiss your hand,

Vern. And in account,
I was myself, my brother, and his son, [dare
the dangers of the time: you swore to us,
that you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
to do nothing purpose 'gainst the state;
and you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
to do nothing purpose 'gainst the state;
and you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
to do nothing purpose 'gainst the state;

K. Hen. But, in short space, such a flood of greatness fell on you,—
with our help, what with the absent king,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Vern. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

K. Hen. And the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,
and the contrivances of a wanton time,

Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you yourself have for'd against yourself,
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulated,

Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour, that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings, and poor discontents,
Which gape, and rub the elbow, at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:

And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours to impart his cause:
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies, there is many a soul

Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The prince of Wales doth join with all the
world

In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head.

K. Hen. I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.

For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry;

And so, I hear, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my father's majesty,—
I am content, that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee;

Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it.—No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love
That are misled upon your cousin's part;

And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his:
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do: but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone;
We will not now be troubled with reply:
We offer fair; take it advisedly.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon.
P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life:
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;

For, on their answer, will we set on them;
And God befriend us, as our cause is just!

[Exeunt King, Blunt, and Prince John.
Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do

P. Hen. By heaven, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster;

I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;

But now, I do respect thee as my soul. [point.]

K. Hen. I saw him hold lord Percy at the
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

P. Hen. O, this boy
Lends mettle to us all! [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter Douglas.
Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads:

I am the Douglas, fatal to all those [thou],
That wear those colours on them:—what art
That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas,
grieves at heart,

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very king. I have two boys

Seek Percy, and thyself, about the field:
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee: so, defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit;
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,
And thus I win thee.

[They fight. The King being in danger, re-enter P. Henry.]

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like

Never to hold it up again! the spirits [arms:
Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee;
Who never promiseth, but he means to pay.—

[They fight. Douglas flies.]
Cheerly, my lord: how fares your grace?—
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe a while:—
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion; [life,
And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. Hen. O God, they did me too much injury,

That ever said I hearken'd for your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you;
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poisonous potions in the world,
And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton: I'll to Sir
Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit.]

Enter Hotspur.
Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

P. Hen. Why, then, I see
A very valiant rebel of that name. [Percy,
I am the Prince of Wales; and think not,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;

Nor can one England brook a double
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry; for the coats
To end the one of us; and would I Thy name in arms were now as great
As mine.

P. Hen. I'll make it greater, were it
thine;
And all the budding honours on I'll crop, to make a garland for thy
head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy presence.

Enter Falstaff.
Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, to it!
You shall find no boy's play here.

Re-enter Douglas as he fights with
Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, to it!
You shall find no boy's play here.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast rob'd me
I better brook the loss of battle than
Than those proud titles thou hast won.
They wound my thoughts more than sword my flesh:—

But thought's the slave of life, and life,
And time, that takes survey of all that's Must have a stop. O, I could
But that the earthy and cold hand
Lies on my tongue:—no, Percy, thou
And food for—

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy, well, great heart!

Ill-wear'd ambition, how much
When that this body did contain a
A kingdom for it was too scant a
But now, two paces of the vilest
Is room enough:—this earth, that Bears not alive so stout a gentleman,
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should not make so dear a show of thee.
But let my favours hide thy manhood,
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank thee
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to Thy ignominious sleep with thee in the
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!

[He sees Falstaff on the What, old acquaintance! could you flesh
Keep in a little life! Poor Jack,
I could have better spar'd a better
O, I should have a heavy miss of thee.
If I were much in love with reality,
Death hath not struck so fat a deer.
Though many dearer, in this blood,
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by.
Till then, in blood by noble Percy's bowel me to-day, I'll give you leave me, and eat me too, to-morrow
'twas time to counterfeit, or that Scot had paid me scot and not feit? I lie, I am no counterfeit; be a counterfeit; for he is but the

of steel, who hath not the life of a man; but to a to be no counterfeit, but the true and of a counterfeiter in the which better part I have saved my life. 'Zounds! I am not by my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make myself not be rise, as well as I? Nothing more, sirrah, [stabbing him,] with a new sword.

Hot. Come, brother John; full bravely thou dost thyself.

P. Hen. But soft! I whom have we here?
Thou art not tell me this fat man was dead?

Hot. I did; I saw him dead, breathless, and bleeding

upon our eyesight? I pray thee, do not what thou seem'st.

P. Hen. So, that's certain; I am not a double face. There is Percy: [Throwing the body down,] let him kill the next Percy himself.

Hot. To be either earl or duke, I can assure
you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and thou art dead.

Hot. Didst thou?—Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying!—I grant you I was killed, and out of breath, and so was he; but I rose both at an instant, and fought a long time by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be be-liev'd, let them that should reward me upon their own heads. I'll fight; if the man were alive, and would fight, I would make him eat a piece of me.

P. Hen. This is the strangest tale that e'er
I heard.

Hot. This is the strangest fellow, brother
John.

P. Hen. Give your luggage nobly on your back:
I'll follow, as they say, for reward.
I'll grow less; for I'll purge,

and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, bearing off the body.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.
The trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John, Westmoreland, and others, with Worcester and Vernon, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust?
Threes knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour.

If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne Betwixt our armies true intelligence. [me to;
Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:
Other offenders we will pause upon.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded.]
How goes the field? [he saw
P. Hen. The noble Scot, lord Douglas, when
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear,— fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruis'd,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster,
This honourable bounty shall belong: [to you Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

P. John. I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall give away immediately.

K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we divide our power.—
You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland, Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed. [Scroop,
To meet Northumberland, and the prelate
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March,
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fairly is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.

[Exeunt.]

THE SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Henry the Fourth.
 Henry, Prince of Wales;
afterwards K. Henry V.
 Thomas, Duke of Clarence,
 Prince John of Lancaster,
 Prince Humphrey of Gloster,
 Earl of Warwick,
 Earl of Westmoreland,
 Earl of Surrey,
 Gower, Harcourt,
 Sir William Gascoigne, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench.
 A Gentleman, attending on the Chief Justice.
 Earl of Northumberland,
 Scroop, Archbishop of York,
 Lord Mowbray,
 Lord Hastings,
 Lord Bardolph,
 Sir John Coleville,

His Sons.

Of the King's party.

Enemies to
the King.

Travers and Morton, Retainers of Sir John Falstaff.
 His Page.
 Bardolph.
 Pistol.
 Poins.
 Peto.
 Shallow and Silence, Country Justice.
 Davy, Servant to Shallow.
 Mouldy, Shallow, Wart, Feeble, and Fang and Snare, Sheriff's Officers.
 Rumour.
 A Porter. A Dancer, Speaker of the Lady Northumberland.
 Lady Percy.
 Hostess Quickly.
 Doll Tear-sheet.
 Lords and Attendants; Officers, Messenger, Drawers, Beadles, Gravel.

SCENE,—England.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop [speaks]

The vent of hearing, when loud Rumour
 I, from the orient to the drooping west,
 Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
 The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
 Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
 The which in every language I pronounce,
 Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
 I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
 Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
 And who but Rumour, who but only I,
 Make fearful musters, and prepar'd defence?
 Whilst the big year, swollen with some other grief, [war,—

Is thought with child by this stern tyrant
 And no such matter. Rumour is a pipe
 Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,
 And of so easy and so plain a stop,
 That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
 The still-discordant wavering multitude,
 Can play upon it. But what need I thus
 My well-known body to anatomize
 Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
 I run before King Harry's victory;
 Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury, [troops,
 Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his

Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
 Even with the rebels' blood. But what
 To speak so true at first? my office
 To noise abroad, that Harry Monmouth
 Under the wrath of noble Hotspur
 And that the king before the low
 Stoop'd his anointed head as low
 This have I rumour'd through the people
 Between the royal field of Shrewsbury
 And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone
 Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland Lies crafty-sick: the posts come
 And not a man of them brings other news Than they have learn'd of me: from tongues
 They bring smooth comforts false,
 true wrongs.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Lord Bardolph; Porter above.
 L. Bard. Who keeps the gate?
 Where is the earl?
 Port. What shall I say you are?
 L. Bard. Tell him I am
 That the lord Bardolph doth attend Port. His lordship is walk'd orchard:

to your honour, knock but at the gate,
and he himself will answer.

Here comes the earl.

[Exit Porter above.]

Enter Northumberland.
South. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute now

should be the father of some stratagem.
The times are wild: contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, and bears down all before him.

North. Have you certain news from Shrewsbury.
South. Good, as God will!

South. As good as heart can wish:
The king is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,

Harry slain outright; and both the [John. By the hand of Douglas: young prince and Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field;

John. Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk sir [John. As you say to your son: O, such a day,
I never saw so follow'd, and so fairly won,
As this day's fortune!

South. How is this deriv'd?
Le Bard. I came you from Shrewsbury?
I spoke with one, my lord, that came from thence;

South. A gentleman well bred, and of good name,
That freely render'd me these news for true.

South. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent

South. My lord, I over-rode him on the road; he is breath'd with no certainties [way;
more than Le Bard. may retail from me.

Enter Travers.
South. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you?

Travers. My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me back with joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
I came me.

South. After him came spurring hard a gentleman, almost ferspent with speed, and stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied
sweat;

South. And the way to Chester; and of him
I demand, what news from Shrewsbury:

Travers. He told me that rebellion had had luck, and that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.

South. But he gave his aide horse the head, and, leaning forward, struck his armed heels
to the panting sides of his poor jade

Travers. To the rowel-head; and, starting so, he was in running to devour the way,
leaving no longer question.

South. Ha!—Again;
Le Bard. young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
That rebellion

South. My lord, I'll tell you what;
your son have not the day,

Upon mine honour, for a sicken point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman, that rode Give, then, such instances of loss? [By Travers, Le Bard. Who, he?

He was some hilding fellow, that had stolen
The horse he rode on; and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture.—Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-
Foretells the nature of a tragic volume: [leat,
So looks the strand, whereon th' imperious
Hath left a witness'd usurpation. [Morton Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord,
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask,
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother?
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.

Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woo-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd,

But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it.
This thou wouldst say,—Your son did thus,

and thus; [Douglas;
Your brother, thus; so fought the noble
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds:

But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother,
But, for my lord your son,— [yet;

North. Why, he is dead.—
See what a ready tongue suspicion hath!
He that but fears the thing he would not know,
Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others' eyes,

That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak,
Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, [Morton;
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,

And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gain-
said:

Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's
I see a strange confession in thine eye: [dead.—
Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear, or
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; [sin,
The tongue offends not, that reports his death:

And he doth sin that doth belie the dead;
Not he, which says the dead is not alive.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,

Remember'd knolling a departed friend.

Le Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to heaven I had not seen;

But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and out-
breath'd,

To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat
The never-daunted Percy to the earth, [down
From whence with life he never more sprung up.
In few, his death, (whose spirit lent a fire
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,)
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd courage in his troops;
For from his metal was his party steel'd;
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead:
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed,
So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, [fear, Lead to this weight such lightness with their
That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim,
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
Fly from the field. Then was that noble

Worcester

Too soon taken prisoner; and that furious Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring
sword

Had thrice times slain th' appearance of the king,
'Can veil his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight,

Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is, that the king hath won; and hath sent out
A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,
Under the conduct of young Lancaster,
And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,

Being sick, have in some measure made me
And as the wretch, whose fever-weakn'd joints,
Like stringless hinges, buckle under life,
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms; even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with
grief,

Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch!

A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel,
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quoif!

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with Iron; and approach
The ragged st hour that time and spite dare
bring,

To frown upon th' enrag'd Northumberland!
Let heaven kiss earth! now let not nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confin'd! let order die!
And let this world no longer be a stage,
To feed contention in a lingering act;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead!

Tra. This strained passion doth you
my lord,

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce

Mor. The lives of all your loving Lean on your health; the which, (I pray

To stormy passion, must perforce

You cast the event of war, my noble

And sunn'd the account of chance,

said,—

Let us make head. It was your

That, in the dole of blows, your son

You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on

More likely to fall in, than to get

You were advis'd his flesh was

Of wounds and scars, and that

Would lift him where most trade

rang'd;

Yet did you say,—Go forth; and Though strongly apprehended, could

The stiff-born action: what hath

Or what hath this bold enterprise

More than that being which was

L. Bard. We all, that are loss,

Knew that we ventur'd on such

That if we wrought out life, 'twas

And yet we ventur'd, for the gain

Chold the respect of likely

And since we are o'eract, venture

Come, we will all put forth; badly,

Mor. 'Tis more than time: said,

noble lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak

The gentle archbishop of York

With well-appointed powers: he

Who with a double surety binds

My lord your son had only but

That shadows, and the show of

For that same word, rebellion

The action of their bodies from

And they did fight with question

As men drink poisons; that their Seem'd on our side; but, for their

souls,

This word, rebellion, it had from

As fish are in a pond. But now

Turns insurrection to religion;

Suppos'd sincere and holy in his

He's follow'd both with body and

And doth enlarge his rising with

Of fair king Richard, scrap'd from

stones;

Derives from heaven his quarrel, and

Tells them, he doth bestride a

Gasping for life under great

And more, and less, do flock to North. I knew of this before; but truth,

This present grief had wip'd it

Go in with me; and counsel every

The aptest way for safety, and Get posts and letters, and make

speed;

Never so few, and never yet

SCENE II.—London. A Street.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but for the party that drank it, he might have more diseases than he

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me; the brain of this foolish-compounded fellow, he is not able to invent anything that will do me harm; more than I invent, or is to be feared that wit is in other men, I do believe all her litter but one. If the doctor should put thee into my service for any other purpose, Thou whoreson mandrake, thou shalt be to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an ass for silver, but I will set you neither in your back again to your master, for a jewel,—your jewel, the prince your master, whose hand is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a crown in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not know it when it will, it is not a hair amiss to have it may keep it still as a face-royal, for a face-royal never earn sixpence out of it; and since his father was a bachelor. He may have his own grace, but he is almost out of countenance about the satin for my short cloak, and my slippers!

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him assurance than Bardolph: he would not take his bond and yours; he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damned, like the glutton! his tongue be hotter!—A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear gallantry to hand, and then stand upon his heels!—The whoreson smooth-pates do now

nothing but high shoes, and bunches of feathers at their girdles; and if a man is thorough good upon security. I had as lief they would take me in my mouth, as offer to stop it with twenty yards of satin, as I am now. I lookt he should have sent me a light, and he sends me security. Well, I may sleep in security; for he hath the horn through it; and the lightness of his wife shall have his own lantern to light him. —Nay, Bardolph!

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Allen. Falstaff, an't please your worship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery!

Allen. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Allen. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Allen.—Sir John,—

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging!

Is there not wars? is there not employment?

doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Allen. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiery

aside, I had lied in my throat, if I had said so.

Allen. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiery aside, and give me

leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gett'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter,

hence! avaunt!

Allen. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! Give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say, your lordship was sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad

by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time; and

I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from

Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty: you would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whorson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him!—I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whorson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease; for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears: and I care not if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in loss.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loth to gull a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'erposting that action.

Fal. My lord,—

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell [a fox.]

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white lock in your face but should have his effect of youth.

Fal. His effect of gravity, grey, and wrinkles.

Ch. Just. You follow the young man's way, and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your light; but I hope he that looks upon me without weighing: and in respects, I grant, I cannot go, I have no Virtue is of so little regard in these times, that true valour is turned into a pregnancy is made a tapster, and quick wit wasted in giving ready answers to other gifts appertinent to men, as of this age shapes them, are all gooseberry. You, that are young, have the capacities of us that are old, and sure the heat of our livers will burn out of your galls: and we that are in the prime of our youth, I must confess, are weary of it.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your scroll of youth, that are within with all the characters of age? a yellow a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow white beard? a decreasing leg? a broken belly? Is not your voice broken? Is not your chin double? your wit short? your chin double? your wit every part about you blasted with age, and will you yet call yourself young? No, sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about twelve o'clock in the afternoon, with a white face, something a round belly, and have lost it with hollaing, and am now a lean theme. To approve my youth to you, the truth is, I am only old in name and understanding; and he that will give me for a thousand marks, let him take the money, and have at him. I have the ear that the prince gave you, like a rude prince, and you took it like a sly lord. I have checked the young lion repents; marry, not in sackcloth, but in new silk and old gold.

Ch. Just. Well, Heaven send you a better companion!

Fal. Heaven send the companion of the prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath made you and prince Harry: I hear, you are lord John of Lancaster against the

and the earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yes; I thank your grace for it. But look you, pray, all you are in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I mean shirts out with me, and I mean extra-ordinarily: if it be a hot day, brandish anything but my battle.

might never spit white again.

dangerous action can peep out but I am thrust upon it: well, I cannot but it was always yet the trick of a nation, if they have a good thing you women. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would as it is; I were better to be eaten to with rust, than to be secured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and bless your expedition.

Just. Will your lordship lend me a thousand to furnish me forth?

Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are impatient to bear crosses. Fare you

Just. I commend me to my cousin Westmoreland's Chief Justice and Attendant.

Just. If I do, fillip me with a three-man staff. A man can no more separate age and experience than he can part young limbs and gout; but the gout galls the one, and the pinches the other; and so both the degrees of my cruces.—Boy!

Boy. What money is in my purse?

Boy. Seven groats and two-pence.

Just. I can get no remedy against this confusion of the purse: borrowing only lingers

the disease it out, but the disease is incurable.

Just. I have this letter to my lord of Lancaster;
and this to the earl of Westmoreland; and this to old mistress Ursula, the first I have weekly sworn to marry since I lost it: you know where to find me. [Exit

Just.] A box of this gout! or, a gout of this for the one, or the other, plays the rogue my great too. It is no matter if I do have the wars for my colour, and my shall seem the more reasonable. A will make use of anything: I will use it to commodity.

III.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's Palace.

Archbishop of York, Lord Hastings,
Howbray, and Bardolph.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause, and known our means;

Howbray. I pray you all,
plainly your opinions of our hopes:

Lord Marshal. What say you to it?
I will allow the occasion of our

means:
I would be better satisfied,

in our means, we should advance ourselves

with forehead bold and big enough
the power and puissance of the king.

Howbray. Our present musters grow upon the the

and twenty thousand men of choice;
our supplies live largely in the hope

Northumberland, whose bosom burns
as incensed fire of injuries.

Lord. The question, then, lord Hastings, stands thus;

Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland.

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,

My judgment is, we should not step too far,
Till we had his assistance by the hand;

For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise

Of aids incertain, should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true, lord Bardolph; for,
indeed,

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply,
Flattering himself with project of a power

Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts:
And so, with great imagination,

Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,
And, winking, leap'd into destruction. [Exit
Hast.] But, by your leave, it never yet did

To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope.

L. Bard. Yes, if this present quality of war,
Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot,

Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit,

Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair,
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;

And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection:

Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then, but draw away the model

In fewer offices, or, at least, desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,

(Which is, almost, to pluck a kingdom down,
And set another up,) should we survey

The plot of situation, and the model;
Consent upon a sure foundation;

Question surveyors; know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,

To weigh against his opposites: or else,
We fortify in paper, and in figures,

Using the names of men, instead of men:
Like one that draws the model of a house

Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,

Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,

And waste for charlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant, that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth)

Should be still-born, and that we now pos-
The utmost man of expectation; [Scaud

I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand? [Bardolph.]

Hast. To us, no more; nay, not so much, lord
For his divisions, as the times do brawl,

Are in three heads: one power against the French,

And one against Glendower; perforce, a third
Must take up us: so is the unfirm king
In three divided; and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together,
And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Host. If he should do so, [Welsh]
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

L. Bard. Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither?

Host. The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland; [Monmouth];

Against the Welsh, himself, and Harry
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:
A imputation gildy and unsure

Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Boling-
broke,

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be!
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard;
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? [die]

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that throw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on,

After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, "O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!" O, thoughts of men accurs't! [worst]

Past, and to come, seem best; things present, March. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?

Host. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

*Enter Hostess; Fang, and his Boy, with her;
and Snare following.*

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the Fang. It is entered. [action]

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will he stand to't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. O Lord, ay! good master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Host. Yes, good master Snare; I have entered him and all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of our lives, for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of stabbed me in mine own house, and he beastly; in good faith, he can cut foin like any devil; he will spare no woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him, for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him smother but within my vice.

Host. I am undone by his vice;
you, he's an infinite thing upon me.

Snare. Let him not escape. He ter Snare, let him not escape. He tually to Pie-corner, [saving your to buy a saddle; and he's invited to the Lubbar's head, in Lambert street.

Host. Smooth's the silkman: I pay exion is entered, and my case is open to the world, let him be brought answer. A hundred mark is a horse poor lona woman to bear; and have and borne, and borne; and have off and rubbed off, and rubbed off.

day to that day, that it is a thought on. There is a woman dealing; unless a woman should ass, and a beast, to bear every [Enter Sir John Falstaff, Page, and

Yonder he comes; and that nose knave, Bardolph, with him.

offices, do your offices, master
ter Snare; do me, do me, do me

Fal. How now! whose what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you of mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, and me off the villain's head; throw the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel!
thee in the channel. Wilt thou thou bastardly rogue!—Murder

thou honey-suckle villain! O, wilt officers, and the king's? O, wilt rogue! thou art a honey-suckle, a and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a Thou wot, wot thou! thou wot,

do, do, thou rogue! do, thou Fal. Away, you scullion! you you sustainer! I'll tickle your

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and

Ch. Just. What is the matter?
peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I much you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, sir John! what, are you bawling here?

Host. This is my place, your time, and business!

Ch. Just.—Have been well on your way to [upon him]

Host. O, my most worshipful lord, an't your grace, I am a poor widow of East-

Ch. Just. And he is arrested at my suit.

Host. For what sum?

Ch. Just. It is more than for some, my lord; it is all I have.

Host. He hath eaten me out of bone and bone; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his;—but I will fight like the mare.

Ch. Just. I think I am as like to ride the mare, as you are to come to ground to get up.

Host. How comes this, sir John? Fie!
that sea of good temper would endure this of exclamation! Are you not to enforce a poor widow to so rough to come by her own?

Ch. Just. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, and the money too, Thou didst swear upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my chamber, at the round table, by a season's prince Wednesday in Whitsun week, that thou shouldst pay me, as I was washing thy head for liking his sing-song of Windsor; thou

swear'st to marry me, and make me my lady of the house. Canst thou deny it? Did not the butcher's wife, come in and call me gossip Quickly! coming in with a mess of vinegar; telling us, she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst hearten to eat some; whereby I told thee, that I was all for a green wound! And didst swear to be no more so familiarly with people; saying, that ere long they should call me madam! And didst thou not fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Host. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

Ch. Just. And bid me fetch these thirty shillings?

made her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Host. Yes, in troth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Prythee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentances.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness, impudent sauciness: if a man will make court'sy, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remember'd, I will not be your sutor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come thither, hostess.

[Taking her aside.]
Enter Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, master Gower,—what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

[Gives a letter.]

Fal. As I am a gentleman,—

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman: come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate, and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking; and for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings, and these fly-bitten tapestries.

Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an if it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: I faith, I am loth to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift:
you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope, you'll come to supper.

Fal. Will I live!—[To Bardolph.] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

[Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Boy.]

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Pal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back? [Horse,
Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred
Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland, and the Archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently; come, go along with me, good master Gower.

Paul. My lord.

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Now, I must wait upon my good lord here,
—I thank you, good sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, master Gower?

Ch. Just, What foolish master taught you these manners, sir John!

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now, the Lord lighten thee thou art a great fool. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—London. Another Street.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

P. Hen. Faith, it does me; though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a composition.

P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name! or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take not how many pair of silk stockings thou hast viz. these, and those that were thy peach colour'd ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use?—but that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racke there; as thou hast not done a great while because the rest of thy low-countries have mad a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen, shall merit his kingdom: but the mid wives say, the children are not in fault; where upon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Pains. How ill it follows, how laboured so hard, you should be Tell me, how many good young do so, their fathers being so and this time is?

P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one?

P. Hen. It shall serve another higher breeding than thine.

Polins. Go to; I stand the thing that you will tell.

P. Hen. Marry, I tell thee that I should be sad, now my albeit I could tell to thee, (as to me, for fault of a better, to call could be sad, and sad indeed thou

P. Hen. By this hand, then far in the devil's book, as the for obduracy and persistency; let the man. But I tell thee, my son, inwardly, that my father is a scoundrel

ing such vile company as thou art reason taken from me all ostentation

Points. The reason V_{max} should

P. Hen. What wouldst thou
I should weep?

Points. I would think then hypocrite.

P. Hen. It would be every and thou art a blessed fellow, to man thinks: never a man's world keeps the road-way better every man would think me a hy
And what acettes your most wond to think so?

Poins. Why, because you are and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

P. Men. And to thee, and you

Points. By this light, I can hear it with mine own ears; that they can say of me is, that I am a proper brother, and that I am a proper hands; and those two things cannot help. By the mass, I can hear it with mine own ears.

P. Hen. And the boy that he had him from me Christian the fat villain have not transfo-

Enter Bardolph
Bard. God save your grace!

P. Hen. And yours, more

Bard. [To the Page.]
 105. you hateful fool, must you

wherefore blush you now man at arms are you become matter to get a pottle of madder

Page. He called me out through a red lattice, and I came part of his face from the window spied his eyes; and methought two holes in the ale-wife's new peeped through.

P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?
Hen. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit,
 [away]

P. Hen. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?
Page. Harry, my lord, Althea dreamed she delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I am her dream.

P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpret-
 —there it is, boy. [Gives him money.
Page. O, that this good blossom could be from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence for thee.

Hen. As you do not make him be hanged for you, the gallows shall have wrong.

P. Hen. And how doth my master, Bar-

Hen. Well, my lord. He heard of your coming to town: there's a letter for Page. Delivered with good respect. And doth the martlemas, your master I think, in bodily health, sir.

Page. Harry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though sick, it does not.

P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar as my dog; and he holds his place;
 look you how he writes.

Page. [Reads.] "John Falstaff, knight,"— I must know that, as oft as he has come to name himself: even like those that write to the king; for they never prick their names, but they say, "There is some of the blood spilt."

P. Hen. "How comes that?"
 that takes upon him not to conceive.
 answer is as ready as a borrower's cap,

P. Hen. May they be kin to us, or they will be kin to the king. But to the letter:— [Reads.] "Sir John Falstaff, knight, nearest his father, Harry of Wales, greeting."—Why, this is a peace!

P. Hen. Peace!
 [Reads.] "I will imitate the honour of the Romans in brevity:—sure he means in breath, short-winded."—"I commend thee, and I leave thee."

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.
 I commend thee, and I leave thee.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds, and mock us. Is your master here in London?
Bard. Yes, my lord.

P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old bear feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord; in East-

P. Hen. What company?
Page. Ephesians, my lord; of the old church.

P. Hen. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old mistress Quickly, and mistress Doll Tear-sheet.

P. Hen. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

P. Hen. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Page. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph,
 —no word to your master that I am yet come to town; there's for your silence. [Gives money.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exit Bardolph and Page.]—This Doll Tear-sheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

P. Hen. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transmutation! that shall be mine; for in everything the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Warkworth. Before the Castle.

Enter Northumberland, Lady Northumberland, and Lady Percy.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle
 daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs:
 Put not you on the visage of the times,

And be, like them, to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no
 more:

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;

And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O, yet for God's sake, go not to these wars!

[Word.]
 The time was, father, that you broke your
 When you were more endear'd to it than now;
 When your own Percy, when my heart's-dear
 Harry,

[Father Threw many a northward look, to see his Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

[Word.]

Who then persuaded you to stay at home?
There were two honours lost; yours, and your son's.

For yours,—may heavenly glory brighten it!
For his,—it stuck upon him, as the sun
In the grey vault of heaven; and, by his light,
Did all the chivalry of England move
To do brave acts: he was, indeed, the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves:
He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait;
And speaking thick, which nature made his Became the accents of the valiant; [blemysh,
For those that could speak low, and tardily,
Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
To seem like him: so that, in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him,—O wondrous him!

O miracle of men!—him did you leave,
(Second to none, unseconded by you,)
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field,
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's
name

Did seem defensible:—so you left him.
Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong,
To hold your honour more precise and nice
With others, than with him! let them alone:
The marshal, and the archbishop, are strong;
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,

To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Moumouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me,
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go, and meet with danger there;
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles, and the armed commons,
Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of
the king,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our
loves,

First let them try themselves. So did your son:
He was so suffer'd; so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrances with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind,

As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still stand, running neither way:
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.—
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I
Till time and vantage crave my company.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

1 Draw. What the devil hast thou there? apple-Johns? thou know'st I cannot endure an apple-John.

2 Draw. Mass, thou say'st true. I once set a dish of apple-Johns before told him there were five more in the putting off his hat, said, "I would I leave of these six dry, round, and knights." It angered him to the last hath forgot that.

1 Draw. Why then, never, and down: and see if thou canst find out noise; mistress Tear-sheet would some music. Despatch—the room is supped is too hot; they'll come in soon.

2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the master Poin's anon; and they will of our jerkins and aprons, and so on.
not know of it: Bardolph hath heard
of it.

1 Draw. By the mass, here will be it will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Draw. I'll see, if I can find out the cause.

Enter Hostess and Doll Tear-sheet.

Host. I' faith, sweetheart, make no you are in an excellent good temperance; pulsidge heats as extraordinarily as desire; and your colour, I warrant you, red as any rose; but, i' faith, you have too much canaries; and that's a searching wine, and it perfumes the one can say,—What's this? How do you feel?

Doll. Better than I was,—humbly.

Host. Why, that's well said; a word worth gold.—Look, here comes an excellent fellow.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. [Singing.] "When I was in court"—Empty the jorden.—[And I —[Singing.] "And was a worthy now, mistress Doll!"

Host. Sick of a calm; yea, good!

Fal. So is all her sect; as they
a calm, they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all fort you give me!

Fal. You make fat rascals, misters!

Doll. I make them! gluttonous and make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make them,
you help to make the diseases, Doll.
of you, Doll, we catch of you; and poor virtue, grant that.

Doll. Ay, marry,—our chains, and

Fal. "Your brooches, pearls, and —for to serve bravely, is to make you know: to come off the breach bravely, and to surgery bravely, is ture upon the charged chamber bravely."

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy yourself!

But, by my troth, this is the old fashion; I never meet, but you fall to some dish of two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confumities. What the good hostess must bear, and that must be you: as the weaker vessel, as they say, the weaker vessel.

Can a weak empty vessel bear such a full hoeshead? there's a whole merchant's store of Bordeaux stuff in him; you have a bulk better stufled in the hold.—I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art gone to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter 1 Drawer.
Dear, Sir, ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him come hither: it is the foul-mouth'd st rogue.

Host. If he swaggers, let him not come here: by my faith: I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good luck and love with the very best:—but the devil comes no swaggerers here: I have lived all this while, to have swaggering about the door, I pray you.

Host. Dear hostess, hostess!—

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Host. Tilly-fally, sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggers comes not in my doors.

Host. I say; and, as he said to me,—it was no more than Wednesday last,—“Neighbour Quickly,” says he;—master Dumb, our “receive those that are civil: for,” says he, “you are in an ill name;”—now, he

“I can tell whereupon; “for,” says he, “there are an honest woman, and well thought

“of,” says he, “no swaggering companions.”

“There comes none here:—you would bless

“me to hear what he said:—no, I’ll no swag-

“ger. He’s no swaggerer, hostess; a tame

“puppy greyhound; you may stroke him as gently

“as a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in “show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer.

Host. Choler, call you him? I will bar no man my house, nor no cheater; but I “will not have swaggering; by my troth, I am the “best of you:—when one says—swaggerer, masters,

“I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Host. Do it you, in very truth, do I, an “Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pistol. God save you, sir John!
Pistol. Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol,

I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pistol. I will discharge upon her, sir John, with two bullets. [offend her.]

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly

Host. Come, I’ll drink no proofs, nor no bullets; I’ll drink no more than will do me good, for no man’s pleasure, I. [charge you.]

Pistol. Then to you, mistress Dorothy; I will

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meet for your master.

Pistol. I know you, mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy

“bung, away! By this wine, I’ll thrust my “knife in your mouldy claps, as you play the “saucey cuttle with me. Away! you bottle-nose

“rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you!—

“Since when, I pray you, sir?—What, with two “points on your shoulder? much!

Pistol. I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have you go off here: discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned

“cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called

“captain. An captains were of my mind, they “would trancheon you out, for taking their “names upon you before you have earned them.

“You a captain! you slave, for what? for tear“ing a poor whore’s ruff in a bawdy-house!—

“He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives

“upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes.

“A captain! these villains will make the world

“captain as odious as the word occupy; which

“was an excellent good word before it was il-

“sorted: therefore captains had need look to it.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, mistress Doll.

Pistol. Not I; I tell thee what, corporal Bar-dolph,—I could tear her:—I’ll be revenged on Page. Pray thee, go down. [her.]

Pistol. I’ll see her damned first:—to Pluto’s damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs!

down fators! Have we not Hiren here!

Host. Good captain Feesle, be quite; it is very late, I’ faith; I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pistol. These be good humours, indeed!

Shall pack-horses,

And hollow-pamper’d jades of Asia,

Which cannot go but thirty miles a day,

Compare with Cossars, and with Cannibals,

And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them

King Carberus; and let the welkin roar, [with

Shall we fall foul for toys? [bitter words.]

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men, like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here?

Host. On my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! Do you think I would deny her? for God's sake be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calip. Come, give's some sack.

Si fortuna me tormenta, il sperato me con-
Fear we broadsides! no, let the fiend give fire! Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there.

Come we to full points here, and are et cetera
Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy nail. What! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs: I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway nags?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling: nay, an he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision! shall we imbrue:—
Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping
Untwine the sisters three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not.

Fal. Get you down stairs.

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these terrors and frights. So; murder, I warrant now.—Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons.

Re-enter Bardolph and Pistol.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal is gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you!

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought he made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter Bardolph.

Fal. Have you turned him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, sir, the rascal's drunk: you have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape! how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face:—come on, you whoreson chops:—ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee: thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies: ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play;—play, my knee, Doll.—A rascal brings me a rogue tied from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou follow'st a church. Thou whoreson little fellow, how bear'st thou, when wilt thou be o' days, and joining o' nights, and patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, Prince Henry and Poins, disguised as Drunken.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! I do not see death's head; do not bid me see.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the?

Fal. A good shallow you, Poins, would have made a good partner, have chipped broad well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit! hang him! his wit is as thick as Tewkesbury marrow.

Dol. Why does the prince love him?

Fal. Because their legs are both of one size; and he plays at quoits with the boys; and jumps upon a conger and funnel; and rides the ends for flap dragons; and rides the

with the boys; and jumps upon a conger and funnel; and rides the ends for flap dragons; and rides the

and wears with a good grace; and boots very smooth, like unto the leg; and breeds no bate with telling stories: and such other gambled has, that show a weak mind and a prince himself is such another; of a hair will turn the scales avoidrups.

P. Hen. Would not this over have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before he

P. Hen. Look, whether the Poins. Is it not strange, that so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this

Poins. And, look, whether the his man, be not lipping to his tables, his note-book, his counsel

Fal. Thou dost give me flat

Dol. Nay, truly, I kiss thee constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a shall receive money on Thursday have a cap to-morrow. A merry

it grows late; we'll to-bed.

me when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt see me and thou say'st so: prove that

Host. And welcome till thy return:—well, hearken Fal. Some sack, Francis!

P. Hen. Point. [Advancing.] Anon, anon, Fal. He is a bastard son of the king's!—And

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful conti-
Fal. nence, what a life dost thou lead!

Fal. A better than thou; I am a gentleman;
P. Hen. Very true, sir; and I come to draw

Fal. thee out by the ears.
P. Hen. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace!

Fal. I will welcome thee to London. Now, the
P. Hen. thou comest from Wales?

Fal. Thou whereupon mad compound of
P. Hen. chastity,—by this light flesh and corrupt blood,

Fal. thou art welcome.
P. Hen. [Leaning his hand upon Doll.]

Fal. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.
P. Hen. My lord, he will drive you out of

Fal. your house, and turn all to a merriment, if
P. Hen. you take not the heat.

Fal. You whoseon candle-mine, you,
P. Hen. they did you speak of me even now, be-

Fal. lieve this honest, virtuous, civil gentleman!
P. Hen. Blessing on your good heart! and so

Fal. away by my troth.
P. Hen. Didst thou hear me?

Fal. Yes; and you knew me, as you did
P. Hen. when you ran away by Gadshill: you knew I

Fal. was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to
P. Hen. vex your patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think
P. Hen. you wast within hearing.

Fal. I shall drive you, then, to confess P. Hen. the whole abuse: and then I know how to

Fal. abuse you.
P. Hen. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; no

Fal. at your back, and bread-chipper, and I know
P. Hen. what!

Fal. No abuse!
P. Hen. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest

Fal. men, you see, I dispraised him before the
P. Hen. king;—in which doing, I have done the

Fal. worst of a careful friend, and a true subject,
P. Hen. and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No

Fal. abuse, Hal;—none, Ned, none;—no, 'faith,
P. Hen. none.

Fal. See now, whether pure fear, and
P. Hen. spite cowardice, doth not make thee wrong

Fal. the virtuous gentleman to close with us?
P. Hen. Is he of the wicked? Is this hostess here of

Fal. the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked?
P. Hen. The wicked Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his

Fal. heart, of the wicked!
P. Hen. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The dead hath prick'd upon Bardolph
P. Hen. his name; and his face is Lucifer's privy-
Fal. chamber, where he doth nothing but roast malt-

Fal. stow. For the boy,—there is a good angel
P. Hen. about him; but the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women?

Fal. For one of them,—she is in hell already, and burns, poor soul! For the other,—I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which, I think, thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so; what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole lamb?

P. Hen. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking heard.]

Host. Who knocks so loud at door!—Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

P. Hen. Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster;
 And there are twenty weak and wearied posts
 Come from the north; and as I came along,
 I met and overtook a dozen captains,
 Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,
 And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

P. Hen. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much
 So idly to profane the precious time; [to blame,
 When tempest of commotion, like the south,
 Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt,
 And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword, and cloak.—Falstaff, good night. [Exit Prince Henry, Poins, Peto, and Bardolph.]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it un-picked. [Knocking heard.] More knocking at the door!

Re-enter Bardolph.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently; a dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page.] Pay the musicians,
 sirrah.—Farewell, hostess;—farewell, Doll.
 You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches: if I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Dol. I cannot speak;—if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care

Fal. Farewell, farewell. [Of thyself.]
 [Exit Falstaff and Bardolph.]

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peacock-time; but an honest, and true-hearted man,
 —well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tear-sheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within.] Did mistress Tear-sheet
 come to my master.

Host. O, run, Doll, run; run, good Doll.
 [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry in his night-gown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick; Bat, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these And well consider of them: make good speed. [Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down, And steep my senses in forgetfulness?

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, [slumber, And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy Than in the perfumed chambers of the great, Under the canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody? O, thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile, In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch,

A watch-case, or a common 'larum bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his In cradle of the rude imperious surge, [brains And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them

With deaf'ning clamours in the slippery clouds, That, with the hurly, death itself awakes? Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude; And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king! Then, happy low, lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty! K. Hen. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past. [my lords. K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all, Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege, [our kingdom. K. Hen. Then you perceive, the body of How foul it is; what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it.

War. It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor'd, With good advice, and little medicine;

My lord Northumberland will soon be cou'd!

K. Hen. O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times Make mountains level, and the continent [Weary of solid firmness] melt itself Into the sea! and, other times, to see

The beachy girdle of the ocean

Too wide for Neptune's hips! how often And changes fill the cup of alteration With divers liquors! O, if this were true, The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,

What perils past, what crosses to come, Would shut the book, and, all his days, 'Tis not ten years gone, Since Richard and Northumberland

Did feast together; and in two years' time Were they at wars: it is but a short space, This Percy was the man nearest my person, Who like a brother toild in my affairs, And laid his love and life under my yoke, Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of the world, Gave him defiance. But which of us

(You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember) When Richard, with his eye trained, Then check'd and rated by Northumberland, Did speak these words, now prove my words?

Northumberland. Then, father, My cousin Bolingbroke accused me, and Though then, God knows, I had no fault, But that necessity so bow'd the state, That I and greatness were compell'd to part, "The time shall come," thus did he say, "The time will come, that foul head, Shall break into corruption;"—so will And the division of our unity.

War. There is a history in all wars, Figuring the nature of the times that come. The which observ'd, a man may give With a near aim, of the main chance, As yet not come to life; which in the And weak beginnings lie intreatment, Such things become the hatch and seed, And, by the necessary form of this, King Richard might create a peevish That great Northumberland, then

World, of that seed, grow to a peevishness, Which should not find a ground to root, Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things, then, then let us meet them like necessity, And that same word even now cries out to us, The Bishop and Northumberland, Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, Rumour doth double, like the voice, The numbers of the fear'd.—Please you To go to bed. Upon my soul, my lord, The powers that you already have, Shall bring this prize in very easy To comfort you the more, a certain instance that Glendower's Your majesty hath been this fortnight, And these unseason'd hours, passing Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

advice, and will take your

these these inward wars once out of hand, We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

[Alarum.

SCENE II.—Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Shallow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calf, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir; an

And how doth my cousin Shallow?

And how doth my cousin, your bed-

And your fairest daughter, and mine,

Alas, a black ouzel, cousin Shallow!

William is become a good scholar:

Indeed, sir, to my cost.

He must, then, to the Inns of court that they will talk of mad Shallow yet,

By the mass, I was called anything;

There was I, and little John

Francis Pickbone, and Will Squeale

man; you had not four such swinge-

and the best of them all at com-and page to Thomas Mowbray,

of Norfolk.

That same sir John, cousin, that comes when he was a crack not thus high; and every day did I fight with one Samp-and days that I have spent! and to see many of mine old acquaintances are

We shall all follow, cousin.

Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very all shall die.—How a good yoke of of Stamford fair?

Both is certain.—Is old Double of Dead, sir?

Dead!—See, see!—he drew a good of carry loved him well, and betted money on his head. Dead! he would you a forehead shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of owes now!

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good owes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Enter Bardolph, and one with him.

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you: my captain, Sir John Falstaff,—a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife

doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!

—it is good; yea indeed, is it: good phrases

are surely, and ever were, very commendable.

Accommodated!—it comes of accommoda-

very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase, call you it? By this good day,

I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is,

when a man is, as they say, accommodated;

or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Shal. It is very just. [Enter Falstaff.]—

Look, here comes good sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: by my troth, you look well, and bear

your years very well: welcome, good sir

John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow:—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence,

in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Pie! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll?

where's the roll?—Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so. Yea, marry, sir:—

Ralph Mouldy!—let them appear as I call;

let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. [Advancing.] Here, an't please you.

Shal. What think you, sir John? a good limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy? [friends.]

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good!—In faith, well said, sir John; very well said.

Fal. [To Shallow.] Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have left me alone: my old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry, and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are?—For the other, sir John:—let me see;—Simon Shadow.

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. [Advancing.] Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough; and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; but not of the father's substance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer,—prick him; for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart! Fal. Where's he?

Wart. [Advancing.] Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart? Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Fee. [Advancing.] Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor, he would have pricked you.—Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle, as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse.—Prick the woman's tailor well, master Shallow; deep, master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have

Fal. I would thou wert a man thou mightest mend him, and go. I cannot put him to a that is the leader of so many that suffice, most forcible Feeble

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend —Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bull-calf of the great

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf

Bull. [Advancing.] Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow!

prick me Bull-calf till he roar

Bull. O Lord! good my lord

Fal. What, dost thou roar pricked?

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir,—

—which I caught with ringing affairs upon his coronation day,

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the gown; we will have away thy take such order, that thy friends

thee.—Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called number; you must have but four and so, I pray you, go in with

Fal. Come, I will go drink with cannot tarry dinner.

I am glad to my troth, master Shallow.

Shal. O, sir John, do you remember we lay all night in the window

George's fields?

Fal. No more of that, good master

no more of that.

Shal. Ha, it was a merry night

Jane Night-work alive!

Fal. She lives, master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with

Fal. Never, never; she would she could not abide master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could heart. She was then a bonny hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she choose but be old; certain she's old.

Robin Night-work by old Night-work came to Clement's-lan.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago.

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that seen that that this knight and I

Ha, sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the children

Shal. That we have, that we have have; in faith, sir John, we have word was, "Hem, boys!"—

dinner; come, let's to dinner.

we have seen!—Come, come.

[Exeunt Falstaff, Shallow,

Bull. Good master corpora stand my friend, and here is four

French crowns for you. In very or, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go;
 for mine own part, sir, I do not care;
 rather, because I am unwilling, and, for own part, have a desire to stay with my or, also, sir, I did not care, for mine own much.

Go to; stand aside.
 And, good master corporal captain,
 to my old dame's sake, stand my friend; she nobody to do anything about her, when you; and she is old, and cannot help you; you shall have forty, sir.
 Go to; stand aside.

By my troth, I care not; a man can die
 once;—we owe God a death: I'll ne'er be less blind;—an't be my destiny, so;
 net, so; no man's too good to serve once; and let it go which way it will, he at this year is quit for the next.

Well said; thou art a good fellow,
 Master Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.

Come, sir, which men shall I have?
 Four, of which you please.

[To Fal.] Sir, a word with you.—
 I have three pound to free and Bull-calf.

[Aside to Bard.] Go to; well.
 Come, sir John, which four will you

Do you choose for me.

Slack, then, — Mouldy, Bull-calf,
 and Shadow.

Mouldy, and Bull-calf; for you,
 stay at home till you are past service;

and for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you into it:—I will none of you.

Sir John, sir John, do not yourself
 they are your likeliest men, and I have you served with the best.

 Will you tell me, master Shallow, how a man? Care I for the limb, the the stature, bulk, and big assemblance

Give me the spirit, master Shallow.
 Wart;—you see what a ragged ance it is; he shall charge you, and you, with the motion of a pewterer's come off, and on, swifter than he shoots on the brewer's bucket. And this half-faced fellow, Shadow—give me this he presents no mark to the enemy; the may with as great aim level at the edge of a knife. And, for a retreat,—how will this Battle, the woman's tailor, of? Give me the spare men, and spare the most ones.—Put me a caliver into hand, Bardolph.

Wart, Wart, Wart; thus, thus,
 Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So:

very well;—go to;—very good:—exceeding good;—give me always a little, lean, old,

very, bald shot.—Well said, I' faith,

Wart; thou'rt a good scab; hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mille-and Green, (when I lay at Clement's-inn,) I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and he would manage you his piece thus; and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in.
 "Rah, tah, tah," would he say; "Bounce," would he say; and away again would he go, and again would he come:—I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.—Farewell, master Silence: I will not use many words with you.—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, heaven bless you, and prosper your affairs, and send us peace! As you return, visit my house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure, I will with you to the court.

Fal. I would you would, master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen.—

[Exeunt Shallow and Silence.] On, Bardolph;

lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of justice

Shallow. Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Tarnbull-street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when he was naked, he was,

for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife:

he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: he was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him—mandrake. He came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion; and sung those tunes to the oversentenced huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and swore—they were his fancies, or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tiltyard; and then he burst his head, for crowding

among the marsh's men. I saw it, and told

John of Gaunt he had his own name; for you might have truss'd him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now hath he land and beeves. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me: if the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason, in the law of nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hastings, and others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree forest, an't shall please your grace. [covers forth]

Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send dis- to know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland; Their cold intent, tenor, and substance, thus:— Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; whereupon He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers, That your attempts may overlive the hazard And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him And dash themselves to pieces. [touch ground, Enter a Messenger.]

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile, In goodly form comes on the enemy; [number And, by the ground they hide, I judge their Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.

Let us sway on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmoreland.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think it is my lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,

The prince, lord John and duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland,

What doth concern your coming. [in peace, West.]

Then, my lord,

Unto your grace do I in chief address The substance of my speech. If that rebellion

Came like itself, in base and abject routs, Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,

And countenanc'd by boys, and beggary,— I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd,

In his true, native, and most proper shape, You, reverend father, and these noble lords,

Had not been here, to dress the ugly form Of base and bloody insurrection.

With your fair honours. You, lord arch- bishop,—

Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd;

Whose beard the silver hand of time touch'd;

Whose learning and good letters have

Whose white investments figure like

The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,

Wherefore do you so ill translate

Out of the speech of peace, that should

grace,

Into the harsh and hoarsefrown'd tongue,

Turning your books to graves, your

Blood,

Your pens to lances, and your tongues

To a loud trumpet, and a peal of

Arch. Wherefore do I this trans-

tion stands.

Briefly to this end:—we are all

And, with our surfeiting, and waste,

Have brought ourselves into a

And we must bleed for it: of which

Our late king, Richard, being

But, my most noble lord of West-

I take not on me here as a

Nor do I, as an enemy to peace,

Troop in the throngs of military

But, rather, show a while like

To diet rank minds, sick of

And purge th' obstructions, which

Our very veins of life. Hear me

I have in equal balance

What wrongs our arms may do,

we suffer,

And find our griefs heavier than

We see which way the stream of

And are enforc'd from our

By the rough torrent of occa-

And have the summary of all our

When time shall serve, to show in

Which, long ere this, we offer'd

And might by no suit gain our

When we are wrong'd, and would griefs,

We are denied access unto his

Even by those men that most

wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly (Whose memory is written on the

With yet appearing blood,) and

Of every minute's instance, (press-

Have put us in these ill-be-

Not to break peace, or any

But to establish here a

Concurring both in name and West. Whenever yet was your

Wherein have you been

What peer hath been

That you should seal this

Of forg'd rebellion with a

And consecrate commotion's

Arch. My brother general,

To brother born a household

I make my quarrel in West. There is no need of any

Or if there were, it not

Mowb. Why not to him, in

And let the bruises of the days before;
Offer the condition of these times
To a leavy and unequal land.

O, my good lord Mowbray,
You shall say indeed, it is the time,
To let the king, or in the present time,
From your part, it not appears to me,
You should have an inch of any ground
To the duke of Norfolk's signories,
And what things, in honour, had my father lost,

To let him be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
And that lov'd him, as the state stood
In that performance, compell'd to banish him:
That Harry Bolingbroke and he,—
The mounted, and both roused in their seats,
Their flashing counters darning of the spar,
And slaves in charge, their beavers
Of eye of fire sparkling through sights of The loud trumpet blowing them together,—

When there was nothing could
Have stay'd
The line did throw his warden down,
Where he lay upon the staff he threw;
And judgment and by dint of sword,
Was miscarried under Bolingbroke.

You speak, lord Mowbray, now you
And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

And that I should be reputed then
Among the most valiant gentlemen:
I have seen whom fortune would then
Your father had been victor there,
And borne it out of Coventry:
The country, in a general voice, [Joys
And all their prayers and
And grace'd, indeed, more than the

Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
Then reason wills, our hearts should be as good:
Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd.

Mowb. Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your
A rotten case abides no handling. [offence:
Hast. Hath the prince John a full commis-
In very ample virtue of his father, [sion,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's
I muse you make so slight a question. [name:
Arch. Then take, my lord of Westmoreland,
This schedule,

For this contains our general grievances.
Each several article herein redress'd,
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form,
And present execution of our wills
To us and to our purposes consign'd;
We come within our awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,
In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace, which God so frame!
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.
[Exit West.]
Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me,
That no conditions of our pence can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace
Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall consist upon, [tains.
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky moun-Mowb. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,
Shall to the king taste of this action;
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition. [is weary
Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this,—the king
Of dainty and such picking grievances?
For he hath found, to end one doubt by death,
Revives two greater in the lairs of life;
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory,
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance: for full well he knows,
He cannot so precisely weed this land,
As his misdeeds present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend,
So that this land, like an offensive wife,

That hath eurg'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his
On late offenders, that he now doth lack [rods]
The very instruments of chastisement:
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true:
And therefore beassur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleneeth your lordship, [armies]
To meet his grace just distance 'twixt our Mowb. Your grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his grace:—my lord, we come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter, from one side, Mowbray, the Archbishop Hastings, and others: from the other side, Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, Officers, and Attendants.

P. John. You are well encounter'd here,
my cousin Mowbray:

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.
My lord of York, it better show'd with you,
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text,
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword, and life to death.

Arch. That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack, what mischief might be set abroad,
In shadow of such greatness! With you, lord bishop,

It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us, th' imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable! You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father;
And, both against the peace of heaven and him,
Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in course Crowd us and crush us to this narrow
To hold our safety up. I seek you
The parcels and particulars of our (The which hath been with some
the court.)
Whereon this Hydra son of war Whose dangerous eyes may well asleep,
With grant of our most just and
And true obedience, of this matter
Stoop tamely to the foot of me Mowb. If not, we ready are
To the last man.
Hast. And though we
We have supplies to second our
If they miscarry, theirs shall second
And so success of mischief shall be
And heir from heir shall hold the Whiles England shall have government.

P. John. You are too shallow, much too shallow.

To sound the bottom of the after West. Pleneeth your grace, to directly,

How far forth you do like their
P. John. I like them all, and do
And swear, here, by the bones of My father's purposes have been
And some about him have too
Wrested his meaning and authority
My lord, these griefs shall be Upon my soul, they shall. If not
you,

Discharge your powers unto the
As we will ours: and here, before Let's drink together friendly, and
That all their eyes may bear witness
Of our restored love and unity.

Arch. I take your princely word,
P. John. I give it you, and will my word:

And thereupon I drink unto your Hast. [To an Officer] Go, call liver to the army

This news of peace: let them know
I know it will well please them.

Arch. To you, my noble lord of land.

West. I pledge your grace:
I have bestow'd to brew this
You would drink freely; but you Shall show itself more openly Arch. I do not doubt you.

West.
Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowb. You wish me death in season,

For I am, on the sudden, somewhat Arch. Against ill chances
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good
merry;

Therefore be merry, coz; since golden sorrow to say that,—Some good thing comes to-morrow.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in
heart.

To much the worse, if your own rule
be true.

West. The word of peace is render'd i [Shouts within.]
How they shout!

Arch. How they shout!

West. This had been cheerful, after victory,
A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
When with parties nobly are subdu'd,
The party lesser.

Arch. Go, my lord, and my army be discharged too.—
[Exit Westmoreland.]

West. My lord, so please you, let our trains be so, that we may peruse the men that have rep'd withal.

Arch. Go, good lord Hastings;
we they be diana's'd, let them march by.
[Exit Hastings.]

West. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night
together.—
Re-enter Westmoreland.

West. Therefore stands our army still?
The leaders, having charge from you to go off until they hear you speak.

Arch. They know their duties.
Re-enter Hastings.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:
if the soldiers anyok'd, they take their
march.

West. North, south; or, like a school take up various toward his home, and sporting.

Arch. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for the which about thee, traitor, of high treason:—
you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord Mowbray,— that reason I attach you both.
Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Will you thus break your faith?
I pawn'd thee none;
you did complain; which, by mine
oath, with a most Christian care,
I would look to taste the due punishment, and such acts as yours.
I thought, and foolishly sent hence.—
your demands, pursue the scatter'd stray;
and not we, hath safely fought toward these traitors to the block of death,
and yielder up of breath.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarums; Recursions. Enter Falstaff and Coleville, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place, the dale; Coleville shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place,—a place deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whose I am. Do ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore, raise up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaff; and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifference, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe; my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me.—
Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, and others. [Now:—

P. John. The heat is past; follow no farther Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.— [Exit West.]

Fal. Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When everything is ended, then you come:
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,
One time or other break some gallows' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? Have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extreme inch of possibility; I have foundered nine-score and odd posts: and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Cole-ville of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome,—“I came,
saw, and overcame.”

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or,
by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Coleville kissing my foot: to the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

P. John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you

P. John. Is thy name Coleville? [will.]

Cole. It is, my lord.

P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are, That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me, You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves, but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

P. John. Have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

P. John. Send Coleville, with his confederate, to present execution:— [ates, Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure. [Exit Coleville, guarded.]

And now despatch we toward the court, my lords:

I hear, the king my father is sore sick: Our news shall go before us to his majesty,—Which, cousin, you shall hear,—to comfort him; And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Glostershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report. [condition,]

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my Shall better speak of you than you deserve. [Exit,]

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh;—but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never any of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches: they are generally fools and cowards;—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which deliver'd o'er to the voice, (the tongue,) which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is,—the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, is now badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; sherris warms it, and makes it flow inward to the parts extreme: it gives colour to the face, which, as a beacon, gives notice to the rest of this little kingdom, and then the vital commonwealths, and petty spirits, muster me all to the heart, who, great and full of courage, retinue, doth any deed of courage; valour comes of sherris. So this weapon is nothing without sherris; it is a-work; and learning, a new conquest kept by a devil, till sack comes and sets it in act and use. Hereof prince Harry is valiant; for the did naturally inherit of his father like lean, sterile, and bare bodied, husbanded, and filled, with the deavour of drinking good, and fertile sherris, that he is become valiant. If I had a thousand human principle I would march to be,—to forswear thin potations, and themselves to sack. [Enter sherris now, Rardolph?]

Bard. The army is discharged. Fal. Let them go. I'll have shire; and there will I visit Shallow, asquire; I have been ing between my finger and my thumb shortly will I seal with him.

SCENE IV.—Westminster Palace.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Humphrey, Warwick, and others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth, successful end.

To this debate that bleedeth at our We will our youth lead on to blood And draw no swords but what are Our navy is address'd, our power Our substitutes in absence well And everything lies level to our Only, we want a little personal And pause us, till these rebels, Come underneath the yoke of crown War. Both which, we doubt not, Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son, Where is the prince your brother?

P. Humph. I think he's gone to lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know.

K. Hen. Is not his brother Clarence, with him?

P. Humph. No, my good lord.

Cla. What would my lord say?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the

The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep, and leap'd them over.

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb
And the old folk, time's doting chroudes,
Say, it did so, a little time before That our great grandaie, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king
P. Humph. This apoplexy will, certain, be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you take me up, and bear me
Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

[They place the King on a bed in an inner part of the room.]

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow
here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes
War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and How doth the king?

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?

Tell it him.

P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hear-

P. Hen. If he be sick with joy, he will re-

Without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords:—sweet prince, speak low:

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will't please your grace to go along with us?

P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by [Exeunt all except Prince Henry.]

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night!—Sleep with it now!

Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,

As he whose brow with homely biggin bound,

Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy beaver, thou dost sit

Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,

That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath

There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:

Did he suspire, that light and weightless down

Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep

That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd

So many English kings. Thy due from me

Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,

Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,

Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously;

My due from thee is this imperial crown,

Which, as immediate from thy Derives itself to me.

Which heaven shall guard:
world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not

This lineal honour from me;

Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left

K. Hen. [Waking.] War-

Clarence!

Re-enter Warwick and Cla.

War. What would your fares your grace?

K. Hen. Why did you leave

my lords?

Cla. We left the prince, my my liege,

Who undertook to sit and watch

K. Hen. The Prince of War-

He is not here.

War. This door is open; he

P. Humph. He came not thro'

ber where we stay'd.

K. Hen. Where is the crown?

from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my

K. Hen. The prince hath go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty, that he doth cry

My sleep my death?

Find him, my lord of War-

hither.

This part of his conjoins with

And helps to end me.—See,

How quickly nature falls into

When gold becomes her object

For this the foolish over-careful

Have broke their sleep with brains with care,

Their bones with industry;

For this they have engross'd

The cunck'd heaps of strange

For this they have been thought

Their sons with arts, and

When, like the bee, tolling from

The virtuous sweets,

Our thighs packed with war,

We bring it to the hive: and

Are murder'd for our pains.

Yield his engrossments to the Re-enter Warwick

Now, where is he that will

Till his friend sickness hath

War. My lord, I found the next room,

Washing with kindly tears

With such a deep demer-

That tyranny, which never

Would, by beholding him,

knife

With gentle eye-drops.

K. Hen. But wherefore did

I, where he comes.—

Reindeer Prince Henry.

Come hither to me, Harry.—
The chamber, leave us here alone.
I want all except K. Henry.

He. I never thought to hear you speak

Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;

And all thy friends, which thou must make thy friends,

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;

By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,

And by whose power I well might lodge a fear

To be again displac'd: which to avoid,

I cut them off; and had a purpose now

To lead out many to the Holy Land,

Lest rest, and lying still, might make them look

Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,

Be it thy course to busy giddy minds

With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,

May waste the memory of the former days.

More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,

That strength of speech is utterly denied me.

How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!

And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

P. Hen. My gracious liege,

You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;

Then plain and right must my possession be.

Which I, with more than with a common pain,

'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Warwick, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown

From this bare wither'd trunk; upon thy sight,

My worldly business makes a period.

Where is my lord of Warwick?

P. Hen. My lord of Warwick!

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong

Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

P. Hen. Land be to God!—even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years,

I should not die but in Jerusalem;

Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land:—

But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie;

In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Gloucestershire. A Hall in Shallow's House.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert

Shallow,

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excus'd; excus'd shall not be admitted;

there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excus'd.—Why, Davy!

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy,

see, Davy; let me see, Davy, Davy,

yea, marry, William cook, hither.—Sir John, you shall not be served: and again, sir,

the headland with wheat,

Shal. With red wheat,

William cook:—are there no more

Davy. Yes, sir.—Here is, sir,

note for shoeing, and ploughing

Shal. Let it be cast, and you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Now, sir, a new must needs be had:—and, sir,

stop any of William's wages, at lost the other day at Hincley

Shal. He shall answer it.

Davy. A couple of short-legged of mutton, and any pretty little tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war

Shal. Yes, Davy. I will friend if the court is better

purse. Use his men well, Davy, arrant knaves, and will back

Davy. No worse than they sir; for they have marvellous

Shal. Well conceited, Davy, business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir,

William Visor of Wincot

Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many against that Visor: that

knave, on my knowledge,

Davy. I grant your

knave, sir; but yet, God

knave should have some friend's request. An honest to speak for himself, when

have served your worship years; and if I cannot quarter bear out a knave man, I have but a very worship. The knave is

sir; therefore, I beseech him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say, he Look about, Davy.

are you, sir John?

with your boots.—Give me

Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see Shal. I thank thee with master Bardolph:—[To come, my tall fellow.—

Fal. I'll follow you,

Shallow. [Exit Shallow.]

our horses. [Exeunt

I were sawed into four dozen of such shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the considerable coherence of his men's spirits. They, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like man: their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they seek together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humour his men with the notion of being near their master; if to any, I would curry with master Shallow, and so man could better command his servant's carriage, is caught, as men take of their company. I will devise matter out of this Shallow, to keep prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of his questions, (which is four terms, or two years,) and he shall laugh without interval. O, it is much, that a lie with a slight fellow that never had the ache in his back, O, you shall see him laugh, till [Within.] Sir John!

[Enter] Sir John! I come, master Shallow; I come, [Exit.]

[Enter] Westminister. An Apartment in the Palace.

[Enter] Warwick and the Lord Chief Justice, the Lord Chief Justice, my lord chief justices! How now, my lord chief justices!

[Enter] Just. How doth the king? Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended. He's walk'd the way of nature; for his purposes he lives no more. I would his majesty had call'd me with him; that I truly did his life, I left me open to all injuries.

[Enter] Just. Indeed, I think the young king loves me. I know he doth not; and do arm myself, become the condition of the time; I cannot look more hideously upon me than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

[Enter] Prince John, Prince Humphrey, Prince John, Westmoreland, and others. Here come the heavy issues of dead Harry.

[Enter] Harry. That foolish Harry had the temper of the worst of these three gentlemen! I strike call to spirits of vile sort! O God! I fear, all will be over-

[Enter] Just. Good morrow, cousin Warwick. Good morrow, cousin. We meet like men that had forgot

War. We do remember; but our argument is all too heavy to admit much talk.

[Enter] P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy! [Heavier.]

[Enter] Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend, indeed:

And I dare swear you borrow not that face Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own.

[Enter] P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation: I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise.

[Enter] Ch. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair;

Which swims against your stream of quality.

[Enter] Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul; And never shall you see that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission. If truth and upright innocence fall me, I'll to the king, my master, that is dead,

And tell him who hath sent me after him. War. Here comes the prince.

[Enter] King Henry V. Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

[Enter] King. This new and gorgeous garment, Sits not so easy on me as you think. [Majesty, Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear: This is the English, not the Turkish court; Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers, For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you: Sorrow so royally in you appears,

That I will deeply put the fashion on, And wear it in my heart: why, then, be sad; But entertain no more of it, good brothers, Than a joint burden laid upon us all.

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, I'll be your father and your brother too; Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares; Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I; But Harry lives that shall convert those tears, By number, into hours of happiness.

[Enter] P. John, &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

[Enter] King. You all look strangely on me:—[To the Chief Justice,] and you most:

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

[Enter] Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,

Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

[Enter] King. No! How might a prince of my great hopes forget So great indignities you laid upon me!

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison [Easy!] The immediate heir of England! Was this May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

[Enter] Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father,

The image of his power lay then in me;

And, in the administration of his law,
 Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,
 Your highness pleased to forget my place,
 The majesty and power of law and justice,
 The image of the king whom I presented,
 And struck me in my very seat of judgment;
 Whereon, as an offender to your father,
 I gave bold way to my authority,
 And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
 Be you contented, wearing now the garland,
 To have a son set your decrees at nought;
 To pluck down justice from your awful bench;
 To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
 That guards the peace and safety of your
 person:

Nay, more; to spurn at your most royal image,
 And mock your workings in a second body.
 Question your royal thoughts, make the case
 yours;

Be now the father, and propose a son;
 Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
 See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
 Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd:
 And then imagine me taking your part,
 And, in your power, soft silencing your son:
 After this cold consideration, sentence me;
 And, as you are a king, speak in your state,
 What I have done that misbecame my place,
 My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well:

Therefore still bear the balance, and the sword:
 And I do wish your honours may increase,
 Till you do live to see a son of mine
 Offend you, and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:—

"Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
 That dares do justice on my proper son;
 And not less happy, having such a son,
 That would deliver up his greatness so
 Into the hands of justice."—You did commit me:
 For which, I do commit into your hand

The unstain'd sword that you have used to bear;

With this remembrance,—that you use the
 With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit,
 As you have done against me. There is my
 You shall be as a father to my youth: [hand.
 My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine
 And I will stoop and humble my intents [ear;
 To your well-practis'd wise directions.—
 And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;—
 My father has gone wild into his grave,
 For in his tomb lie my affections;
 And with his spirit sadly I survive,
 To mock the expectation of the world,
 To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
 Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
 After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
 Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:
 Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea,
 Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
 And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
 Now call we our high court of parliament,

And let us choose such limbs of state
 That the great body of our state
 In equal rank with the best-govern'd
 That war or peace, or both at once
 As things acquainted and familiar
 In which you, father [To the Justice.] shall have form
 Our coronation done, we will
 As I before remember'd, all our
 And (God consigning to my good No prince nor peer shall have God shorten Harry's happy life

SCENE III.—Glostershire.
 Shallow's house.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Bardolph,
 the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see me where, in an hour, we will eat pippin of my own grafting, with caraways, and so forth:—come,
 —and then to bed.

Fal. Fore God, you have dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren, beggars all, sir John:—marry, spread, Davy; spread, Davy!

Fal. This Davy serves you he is your serving-man, and your Shal. A good varlet, a good good varlet, sir John.—By the drunk too much sack at supper varlet. Now sit down, now sit down, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quotha,—

Do nothing but eat, and make
 And praise heaven for the When flesh is cheap and
 And lusty lads roam here and So merrily.

And ever among so merry
 Fal. There's a merry heart!

Silence, I'll give you a health for Shal. Give master Bardolph Davy.

Davy. [To Bardolph, and side-table.] Sweet sir, sit; I'll anon; most sweet sir, sit.— master page, sit. Proface!
 in meat, we'll have in drink;
 bear;—the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry, master Bardolph;
 little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. [Singing.]

Be merry, be merry, my
 For women are shrews, and
 'Tis merry in hall when

And welcome merry

Be merry, be merry, my

Fal. I did not think been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry

Re-enter Davy.

There is a dish of leather-coats for [Selling them before Bardolph.]

Your worship!—[To Bardolph.] I'll sell you straight. [To Shallow.] A cup

[Singing.]
A cup of wine, that's brisk and fine,
And drink unto the leman-mine;

And a merry heart lives long-a,
Well said, master Silence.

And we shall be merry;—now comes in the revel of the night.
Health and long life to you, master

[Singing.]
I'll the cup, and let it come;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou say anything, and wilt not call, bestrew me.—Welcome, my little tiny thief;

welcome, indeed, too.—I'll drink to Bardolph, and to all the cavaleroes of London.

I hope to see London once ere I die.
As I might see you there, Davy,—

—as I will you not, master Bardolph?
—Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

I thank thee;—the knave will stick to me, I can assure thee that: he will not leave me.

And I'll stick by him, sir.
Why, there spoke a king. Lack luff, be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look who knocks! [Exit Davy.]

[To Silence, who drinks a bumper.]
Now you have done me right.

Do me right,
And dub me knight:
Samings.

Why, then, say an old man knows what.

Re-enter Davy.
An't please your worship, there's one come from the court with news.

[Pistol.] How now, Pistol!
[Davy.] What says you, sir John!

Not the ill wind which blows no man good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the best men in the realm.

My lady, I think he be, but Goodman Baron, I'll be sworn.

Not to thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—
I am thy Pistol, and thy friend,
and better shal I ride to thee;

And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys,
And golden times, and happy news of price.

Fal. I prythee now, deliver them like a man of this world. [Base!]
Pist. A fount for the world, and worldlings
I speak of Africa, and golden joys. [News!]

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy Let king Cophetua know the truth thereof.
Sil. [Singing.]
And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the
And shall good news be baffled? [Hellcon!]
Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.
Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why, then, lament therefore.
Shal. Give me pardon:—If, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there is but two ways,—either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak,
Shal. Under king Harry. [Or die.]
Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?
Shal. Harry the fourth.

Pist. A fount for thine office!—
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king:
Harry the fifth's the man. I speak the truth:
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead? [Just,
Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse.—
Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine.—Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!—I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.
Pist. What, I do bring good news?
Fal. Carry master Silence to bed.—Master
Shallow, my lord Shallow, be what thou wilt;
I am fortune's steward. Get on thy boots:
we'll ride all night.—O sweet Pistol!—Away, Bardolph!—[Exit Bard.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal, devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, master Shallow:
I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends; and woe unto my lord chief justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!
"Where is the life that late I led?" say they:
Why, here it is;—Welcome these pleasant days! [Exit.

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.
Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess Quickly and Doll Tear-sheet.
Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would to God I might die, that I might have thee hanged; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bard. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord, that sir John would come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry.

1 Bard. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead, that you and Pistol beat among you.

Dol. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swung for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner! if you be not swung, I'll forswear half-kirtles. [Exeunt.]

1 Bard. Come, come, you she knight-errant, Host. O, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to justice.

Host. Ay, come, you starved blood-hound!

Dol. Goodman death! goodman bones.

Host. Thou atomy, thou!

Dol. Come, you thin thing! come, you rascal!

1 Bard. Very well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A public Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes.
1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes.
2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.
1 Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come to the coronation: despatch, despatch. [Exeunt Grooms.]

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace: I will leer upon him, as he comes by; and do but mark the countenance he will give me.

Pistol. God bless thy lungs, good knight!

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.

[To Shallow.] O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better; this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion,—

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with sweat, sweating with desire to soo him; that nothing else, putting all affairs else to one side, as if there were nothing else to be done, see him.

Pistol. 'Tis semper idem, for always is 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pistol. My knight, I will induce him And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble hand,

Is in base durance, and contagious hand,

Haul'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hands,

Rouse up revenge from elbow deep,

Allecto's snake,

For Doll is in; Pistol speaks tonight

Fal. I will deliver her.

[Shouts within and trumpet clangor sounds.]

Enter the King and his train, the Justice among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, my lord!

Pistol. The heavens thee guard, my lord!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet lord!

King. My lord chief justice, how do you?

Ch. Just. Have you your wife?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to my heart!

King. I know thee not, old man!

How ill white hairs become a fool!

I have long dream'd of such a kind.

So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so past cure.

But, being awake, I do despise my state.

Make less thy body hence, and more thy gape.

Leave gormandizing; know, the king is come.

For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-borne head.

Presume not that I am the thing I was.

For God doth know, so shall the king.

That I have turn'd away my former life.

So will I those that kept me company.

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,

Approach me, and thou shalt be as I am.

The tutor and the feeder of my folly.

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of my displeasure.

As I have done the rest of my misdoings.

Not to come near our person by law.

For competence of life I will allow you.

That lack of means enforce you not to beg.

And, as we hear you do reform your manners,

We will, according to your change of qualities,

*Give you advancement.—[To Ch. Just.]*

To see perform'd the tenor of our words.

Set on.

Fal. Master Shallow, I love you as a pond.

Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.

Come, will you hence? [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE—Spoken by a Dancer.

First, my fear; then, my court'sy; last, my speech.

My fear is, your displeasure; my court'sy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons.

If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say, is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring.

But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well,) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better.

I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this: which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose.

Here, I promised you, I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies; bate me some, and I will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment,—to dance out of your debt.

But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I.

All the gentlemen here have forgiven me: if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlemen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you.

If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man.

My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you:—but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY V.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Henry the Fifth.
 Duke of Gloster, } Brothers to the King.
 Duke of Bedford, }
 Duke of Exeter, Uncle to the King.
 Duke of York, Cousin to the King.
 Earls of Salisbury, Westmoreland, and War-
 Archbishop of Canterbury. [wick.
 Bishop of Ely.
 Earl of Cambridge, } Conspirators.
 Lord Scroop, }
 Sir Thomas Grey, }
 Sir Thomas Erpingham, Gower, Fluellen, Macmorris, Jamy, Officers in King Henry's
Army.
 Bates, Court, Williams, } Soldiers in the Pistol, Nym, Bardolph, } Same.

Boy, Servant to them. A Herald.
 Charles the Sixth, King of France.
 Lewis, the Dauphin.
 Dukes of Burgundy, Orleans, and
 The Constable of France.
 Rambures, and Grandpre, French Lords.
 Montjoy, a French Herald.
 Governor of Harfleur.
 Ambassadors to England.
 Isabel, Queen of France.
 Katharine, Daughter of Charles.
 Alice, a lady attending on the Queen.
 Hostess of the Boar's Head Tavern.
 Lords, Ladies, Officers, Soldiers,
 Messengers, and Attendants.

SCENE, — In England and in France.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. O for a muse of fire, that would ascend

The brightest heaven of invention !
 A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
 And monarchs to behold the swelling scene !
 Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
 Assume the port of Mars ; and at his heels,
 Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword,
 and fire,

Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles
 The flat unraised spirit that hath dar'd, [all,

On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth
 So great an object : can this cockpit hold

The vasty fields of France ? or may we cram
 Within this wooden O the very casques

That did affright the air at Agincourt ?
 O, pardon ! since a crooked figure may

Attest in little place a million ;
 And let us, ciphers to this great account,

On your imaginary forces work ;
 Suppose, within the girdle of these walls

Are now confined two mighty monarchies,
 Whose high upreared and abutting fronts

The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder :
 Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts :

Into a thousand parts divide one man,
 And make imaginary puissance ; [them

Think, when we talk of horses, that you see
 Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth ;

For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings, [times,

Jarry them here and there ; jumping o'er
 Turning th' accomplishment of many years

Into an hour-glass : for the which supply,

Admit me chorus to this history ;
 Who, prologue-like, your humble ears
 pray,
 Gently to hear, kindly to judge.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — London. An Antechamber
 the King's Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury.
 Bishop of Ely.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you, —
 is urg'd,

Which in th' eleventh year of the
 Was like, and had indeed against

But that the scuffling and unquiet
 Did push it out of further question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we Cant. It must be thought on against us,

 We lose the better half of our realm

For all the temporal lands, who
 By testament have given to the church

Would they strip from us ; being
 As much as would maintain,

honour,
 Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred

Six thousand and two hundred
 And, to relief of lazars, and weak

Of indigent faint souls, past cure,
 A hundred alms-houses, right

And to the coffers of the king
 A thousand pounds by the year

Ely. This would drink deep

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all,
But what prevention? [REGARD.]
The king is full of grace, and fair
And a true lover of the holy church.
The course of his youth promis'd it
Heath no sooner left his father's body,
Than that his wilderness, mortified in him,
To do too; yea, at that very moment,
He fell the offending Adam out of him,
His body as a paradise,
To grow and contain celestial spirits.
Thus such a sudden scholar made;
With such a heady currence scouring faults;
With such a Hydra-headed wilfulness
To do his duty, and all at once,

We are blessed in the change.
Hear him but reason in divinity,
And desire the king were made a prelate; his advice of commonwealth affairs,
It hath been all-in-all his study:
And battle render'd you in music:
To any cause of policy,
As his garter: that, when he speaks,
His charter'd libertine, is still,
And his sweet and honey'd sentences;
The art and practick part of life
Is a wonder, how his grace should glean
Up with riots, banquets, sports;
Yet noted in him any study,
Any sequesteration
From haunts and popularity. [NETTLE,
The strawberry grows underneath the
And berries thrive and ripen best,
Under the shade of a great tree;
So eke the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Yet cropp'd in his faculty,
It must be so; for miracles are ceas'd;
And we must needs admit the means,
By which they are perfected.

But, my good lord,
For illustration of this bill
By the commons? Doth his majesty
To it, or no?

He seems indifferent;
Swaying more upon our part,
Considering the exhibitors against us;
He made an offer to his majesty,—
Of spiritual convocation,
To be held now in hand,
To give open'd to his grace at large,
In France,—to give a greater sum

Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal. [LORD.]

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
Save, that there was not time enough to hear
(As, I perceiv'd, his grace would fain have done)
The severals, and unhidden passages,
Of his true titles to some certain dukedom,
And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off? [INSTANT.]

Cant. The French ambassador upon that Crav'd audience; and the hour, I think, is
come,

To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy;
Which I could, with a ready guess, declare,
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you; and I long to hear it. [EXEUNT.]

SCENE II.—London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury? Not here in presence. [TERBURY.]

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege? [RESOLV'D.]

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin; we would be
Before we hear him, of some things of weight,
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Ely.

Cant. God, and his angels, guard your sacred
And make you long become it! [THRONE.]

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you,
My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold, [FRANCE.]
Why the law Salique, that they have in
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim:
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your
reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know how many, now in health,
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to;
Therefore, take heed how you impawn our
person,

How you awake our sleeping sword of war:
We charge you in the name of God, take heed;

For never two such kingdoms did contend,
Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint, [DROPS.]
'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords

That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration, speak, my lord;
And we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
That what you speak is in your conscience
As pure as sin with baptism. [wash'd,

Cont. Then hear me, gracious sov'reign and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives, and services,
To this imperial throne.—There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France, [mond,—

But this, which they produce from Phara-
In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant,

"No woman shall succeed in Salique land:"

Which Salique land the French unjustly glose
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond

The founder of this law, and female bar,

Yet their own authors faithfully affirm,

'That the land Salique is in Germany,

Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe;

Where Charles the great, having subdu'd the Saxons,

There left behind and settled certain French;

Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,

Establish'd then this law,—to wit, no female
Should be inheritrix in Salique land:

Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,

Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.

Then doth it well appear, the Salique law

Was not devised for the realm of France:

Nor did the French possess the Salique land

Until four hundred one and twenty years

After defunction of king Pharamond,

Idly suppos'd the founder of this law;

Who died within the year of our redemption.

Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the great

Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala, in the year

Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say, King Pepin, which depos'd Childerick,

Did, as heir general, being descended [Clothair,
Of Blithild, which was daughter to king

Make claim and title to the crown of France.

Hugh Capet also,—who usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the duke of Lorain, sole heir male

Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—

To find his title with some show of truth,

(Though in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,)

Convey'd himself as heir to the lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son

To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son Of Charles the great. Also king Lewis the

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet, [tenthly,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,

Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
The fair queen Isabel, his grandmother,

Was lineal of the lady Ermengure, [Lorain:
Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of

By the which marriage, the line of Charles the
Was re-united to the crown of France. [great
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,

King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's

King Lewis his satisfaction, all up

To hold in right and title of the crown

So do the kings of France unto this

Howbeit they would hold up the crown

To bar your highness claiming from

And rather choose to hide their crowns

Than amply to embarr their crowns

Usurp'd from you and your peers

K. Hen. May I with right make this claim!

Cont. The sin upon my head,

For in the Book of Numbers is it said

When the son dies, let the daughter

Descend unto the daughter.

Stand for your own; twisting your

Look back into your mighty ancestors

Go, my dread lord, to your great

tomb,

From whom you claim; invade the

And your great uncle's, Edward's

prince,

Who on the French ground did

Making defeat on the full power of Whiles his most mighty father was

Stood smiling to behold his trusty

Forage in blood of French nobility

O noble English, that could enter

With half their forces the full power

And let another half stand laughing

All out of work, and cold for a

Ely. Awake remembrance of the

And with your puissant arm renew

You are their heir; you sit upon

The blood and courage, that renew

Runs in your veins: and my blood

Is in the very May-morn of his youth

Ripe for exploits and mighty

Eze. Your brother kings and the earth

Do all expect that you should

As did the former kings of your

West. They know your power and means and might

So hath your highness; never king

Had nobles richer, and more loyal

Whose hearts have left their

England,

And lie pavilion'd in the fields of

Cont. O, let their bodies follow

hego,

With blood, and sword, and fire

In aid whereof, we of the quicken

Will raise your highness such a

As never did the clergy at our

Bring in to any of your

K. Hen. We must not only the French,

But lay down our proportions to

Against the Scot, who will make

With all advantages.

Cont. They of those marches

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend

Our inland from the pissing

K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing match only,
 but fear the main intentment of the Scot,
 who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
 you shall read, that my great grandfather went with his forces into France, to bathe the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom pouring, like the tide into a breach,
 with ample and brim fullness of his force;
 winning the gleaned land with hot essays,
 that England, being empty of defence, had shock and trembled at th' ill neighbourhood.
 [Heath.] She hath been then more fear'd than fear her but exempl'd by herself:—
 where all her chivalry hath been in France, hath herself not only well defended,
 but taken, and impounded as a stray,
 to King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,
 and made her chronicle as rich with praise,
 as the east and bottom of the sea with sunken wreck and sunless treasures.
 [Heath.] But there's a saying, very old and true,—
That you will France win, [true,— if that you will Scotland first begin:— the eagle England being in prey, the weasel Scot
 will suck the mouse in absence of the cat,
 and have more than she can eat.
 It follows, then, the cat must stay at home, for a crush'd necessity; [home.
 that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
 the unarmed head defends itself at home;
 government, though high, and low, and lower,
 doth keep in one consent,
 and move in a full and natural close,
 Therefore doth heaven divide
 the state of man in divers functions, whose endeavours in continual motion;
 some fix'd, as an aim or butt,
 others that, by a rule in nature, teach us to order to a peopled kingdom.
 Some like magistrates, correct at home,
 some like merchants, venture trade abroad;
 some like soldiers, armed in their stings,
 to win upon the summer's velvet buds;
 some like pillage they with merry march bring home the royal of their emperor: [home some in his majesty, surveys
 the masons building roofs of gold;
 some like artificers kneading up the honey;
 some like poor mechanics crowding in their petty borders at his narrow gate;
 some like justices, with his surly hum,

Deliv'ring o'er to executors pale
 The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,—
 That many things, having full reference
 To one consent, may work contrariously;
 As many arrows, loosed several ways, [town;
 Fly to one mark; as many ways meet in one
 As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
 As many lines close in the dial's centre;
 So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
 End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my Divide your happy England into four; [liege.
 Whereof take you one quarter into France,
 And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
 If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
 Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
 Let us be worried, and our nation lose
 The name of hardiness and policy.

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. [Exit an Attendant.
 Now are we well resolv'd; and, by God's help,
 And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
 France being ours, we'll send it to our awe,
 Or break it all to pieces; or there we'll sit,
 Ruling in large and ample empery, [doms,
 O'er France, and all her almost kingly dake-
 Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
 Tombless, with no remembrance over them;
 Either our history shall with full mouth
 Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
 Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless month,
 Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.
 Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
 Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we hear
 Your greeting is from him, not from the king.
1 Amb. May't please your majesty to give us leave

Freely to render what we have in charge;
 Or shall we sparingly show you far off
 The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy?

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian
 king;

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject,
 As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons;
 Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plain-
 Tell us the Dauphin's mind. [ness

1 Amb. Thus, then, in few,
 Your highness, lately sending into France,
 Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right Of your great predecessor, King Edward the third. [master

In answer of which claim, the prince our Says, that you savour too much of your youth;
 And bids you be advis'd, there's nought in France

That can be with a nimble galliard won;
 You cannot revel into dukedoms there.
 He therefore sends you, meetest for your spirit,
 This ton of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
 Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle!
Ecc. Tennis-balls, my liege.

K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us;
His present, and your pains, we thank you for:
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,

We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler,

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chases. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous licence; as we ever common,
That men are merriest when they are from

home.
But tell the Dauphin, I will keep my state;
Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness,
When I do rouse me in my throne of France;
For that I have laid by my majesty,
And plodded like a man for working days;
But I will rise there with so full a glory,
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us,
And tell the pleasant prince, this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his

soul
Shall stand sore-charged for the wasteful vengeance
That shall fly with them: for many a thousand Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands;
Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles
down;

And some are yet unborn,
That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's
But this lies all within the will of God, [scorn.
To whom I do appeal; and in whose name,
Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on,
To vengeance as I may, and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
So, get you hence in peace; and tell the

Dauphin,
His jest will sayour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weep, more than did laugh
at it.—

Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well. [Exeunt Ambassadors.

Ecc. This was a merry message. [at it.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush
Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour,
That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore, let our preparations for these wars
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon,
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings; for, God before,
We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.

Therefore, let every man now look to his
That this fair action may on foot be

ACT II.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now all the youth of Europe
And silken dalliance in the wardrobe
Now thrive the armourers, and

thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man
They sell the pasture now to buy
Following the mirror of all Christian kings
With winged heels, as English Mercuries
For now sits Expectation in the air
And hides a sword, from hilts and sheaths,
With crowns imperial, crowns, and Promis'd to Harry, and his followers
The French, advis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear; and with pale
Seek to divert the English purpose
O England!—model to thy inward heart,
Like little body with a mighty heart,
What might'st thou do, that hast

these do,
Were all thy children kind and noble
But see thy fault! France hath in thee
A nest of hollow bosoms, which With treacherous crowns; and

rupted men,—
One, Richard earl of Cambridge, and Henry lord Scrop of Masham; and Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northampton.

land.—
Have, for the gift of France, (O poll!
Confirm'd conspiracy with foreign powers
And by their hands this grace of France
(If hell and treason hold their promise) Ere he take ship for France, and ampton.

Linger your patience on; and will
Th' abuse of distance, while we
The sum is paid; the traitors are
The king is set from London; and Is now transported, gentles, to ton.—

There is the playhouse now, they
And thence to France shall we convey
And bring you back, charming the
To give you gentle pass; for, if we We'll not offend one stomach with But, till the king come forth, and Unto Southampton do we shift our

SCENE I.—London. Enter

Enter Nym and Bardolph.

Bard. Well met, corporal Nym.
Nym. Good morrow, lieutenant.
Bard. What, are ancient friends yet?

For my part, I care not; I say little;
I shall be as it may. I dare not fight;
I will wink, and hold out mine iron: it is one; but what though! it will toast word will; and there's an end.
I will bestow a breakfast to make you brothers; let it be so, good corporal Nym.

Nym. I will live so long as I may,
I will do as I may; and when I cannot do it, I will do it in the humour of it.
I am certain, corporal, that he is and to Nell Quickly; and, certainly, she you wrong; for you were troth-plight to

Nym. I cannot tell:—things must be as may; men may sleep, and they may have say, knives have edges. It must be as though patience be a tired mare, yet with plod. There must be conclusions.
I cannot tell.

Enter Pistol and Hostess.

Pistol. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his good corporal, be patient here. How host Pistol!

Host. These like, call'st thou me host?
To the hand, I swear, I scorn the term;
Nym, by my troth, not long; for we and beard a dozen or fourteen messals, but it will be thought we keep straight. [Nym draws his Now we shall see wilful adultery and committed. Good lieutenant,—good offer nothing here.

Pistol. For thee, Iceland dog! thou of our of Iceland!

Nym. Good corporal Nym, show thy valour,
as your sword.
Will you shog off? I would have you [Seething his sword.

In thy most marvellous face;
in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
to my lawful lungs, yea, in thy maw,

is worse, within thy nasty mouth!
I have a humour to knock you take, and Pistol's cock is up,
shog off will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason; you cannot conquently well. If you grow foul with me, I will scour you with my rapier, as I in fair terms: if you would walk off, I say; and that's the humour of it.

Pistol. O braggart vile, and damned furious wight!
The grava doth gape, and dotting death is Therefore exhale. [Pistol and Nym drive.
Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say:—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Drums.
Pistol. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate.
Give me thy list, thy fore-foot to me give:
Thy spirits are most tall.
Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.
Pistol. Coupe le gorge!
That is the word.—I thee defy again.
O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to No; to the spital go. [Get!
And from the powdering tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind,
Doit Tear-sheet she by name, and her spouse:
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly
For the only she; and—pacea, there's enough.
Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master,—and you, hostess:—he is very sick, and would to bed.—Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days; the king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently. [Exeunt Hostess and Boy.

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends?
We must to France together: why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pistol. Let floods o'erswell, and floods for food bowl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting!

Pistol. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have: that's the humour of it. [Home.

Pistol. As manhood shall compound: push Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him: by this sword, I will.

Pistol. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, as thou wilt be friends, be friends: as thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. Frythee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings, I won of you at betting!

Pistol. A noble shalt thou have, and present
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood:
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me;—
Is not this just?—for I shall suttler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble!

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is
And we must yearn therefore. [dead,

Bard. 'Would I were with him, wheresomee'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away, as it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide; for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp
as a pen, and 'a babbled of green fields.
'How now, sir John!' quoth I: 'what, man! be of good cheer.' So 'a cried out—
'God, God, God!' three or four times. Now
I, to comfort him, bid him, 'a should not think of God; I hoped, there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet.
So, 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet:
I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say, he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said, they were devils incarnate.

Host. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked.

Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog! the king will be gone from Southampton. [thy lips.

Pist. Come, let's away.—My love, give me look to my chattels, and my moveables:

Let senses rule; the word is, "Pitch and pay;"

Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-
cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck:
Therefore, cave to be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France; like horse-leeches, my boys,
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that is but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. [Kissing her.] Farewell, hostess.

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu. [I thee command.

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close,

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—France. A Room in King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the French King,
the Dauphin, the Duke of Burgundy,
Constable, and others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English power upon us;

And more than carefully it is requir'd
To answer royally in our defence.

Therefore the dukes of Berry, and
Of Brabant, and of Orleans, shall stay

And you, prince Dauphin,—with me
despatch,

To line and new repair our towns,
With men of courage, and with ant;

For England his approaches make
As waters to the sucking of a snail.

It fits us, then, to be as provident
As fear may teach us, out of late

Lest by the fatal and neglected
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubt

It is most meet we arm us; glass
For peace itself should not so dull

(Though war, nor no known question, question.)

But that defence, musters, provisions, Should be maintain'd, as

As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all
To view the sick and feeble parts

And let us do it with no show of No, with no more, than if we be

Were busied with a Whitsun snow.

For, my good Hege, she is so dilly
Her sceptre so fantastically borne

By a vain, giddy, shallow, humour
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, peace,
You are too much mistaken in the Question your grace the late answer

With what great state he heard the

How well supplied with nobles
How modest in exception, and

How terrible in constant resolution
And you shall find, his vanities

Were but the outside of the flower Covering discretion with a coat of

As gardeners do with ordure
That shall first spring, and be

Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my love, stable;

But though we think it so, it is In cases of defence, 'tis best to

The enemy more mighty than
So the proportions of defence

Which, of a weak and negligent Doth, like a miser, spoil his

A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we king Henry
And, princes, look you strongly

him,

And he hath been flesh'd upon us;
And he is bred out of that bloody strain,
Which haunted us in our familiar paths:
Which our too much memorable shame,
In the Crecy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand
Of that black name, Edward, black Prince of

Wales;
Which that his mountain sire,—on mountain
[standing,
In the air, crown'd with the golden sun,—
To his heroic seed, and am'd to see him,
Through the work of nature, and deface
The patterns that by God, and by French fathers,

And twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native brightness and fate of him.
Enter a Messenger.

From Harry king of England.
Great ambassadors from Harry king of England

admittance to your majesty.
Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

[Exeunt Mess., and certain Lords.
Fr. King. This chase is hotly follow'd, friends.
Turn head, and stop pursuit; for forward dogs seem to threaten their mouths, when what they see before them. Good my sovereign, in the English short; and let them know

of what a monarchy you are the head:

Love, my hope, is not so vile a sin
as this-glancing.
Enter Lords, with Exeter, and twin.

Fr. King. From him; and thus he greets your majesty.
From our brother England?

From him; and thus he greets your majesty.
Will you, in the name of God Almighty,

you divest yourself, and lay apart
all your glories, that by gift of heaven, of nature and of nations, 'long and to his heirs; namely, the crown, and all wide-stretched honours that pertain,

to the crown of France. That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,
to the crown of France, That you may know,

Deliver up the crown; and to take mercy
On the poor souls, for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws: and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens'
groans,

For husbands, fathers, and betroth'd lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my
message;

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this
farther;

To-morrow shall you hear our full intent
Back to our brother England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?

[contempt.
Exc. Scorn and defiance; slight regard,
And anything that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king: an if your father's highness

Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and wombby vaultages of France Shall chide your trespass, and return your
In second accent of his ordinance. [mock

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will: for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,

I did present him with the Paris balls. [for it,
Exc. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake
Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe;

And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference
(As we, his subjects, have in wonder found)
Between the promise of his greener days,
And these he masters now: now he weighs
time,

Even to the utmost grain: that you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. [our king

Exc. Despatch us with all speed, lest that Come here himself to question our delay;
For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair conditions:

A night is but small breath, and little pause,
To answer matters of this consequence.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies,

In motion of no less celerity [seen

Than that of thought. Suppose that you have The well-appointed king at Hampton pier

Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phoebus
fanning;

Play with your lances; and in them behold
Upon the heppen tackle ship-boys climbing;
Hear the shrill whistle, which doth order give
To sounds confus'd; behold the threaten'd sails,
Borne with th' invisible and creeping wind,
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,

Breasting the lofty surge: O do but think
You stand upon the rivage, and behold
A city on th' inconstant billows dancing;
For so appears this fleet majestic, [follow]
Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow,
Grapple your minds to sterneage of this navy;
And leave your England, as dead midnight
still,
Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old Either past, or not arriv'd to, pith and puissance;

For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair, that will not follow
Those cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France? [siege]

Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a Behold the ordinance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back;

Tells Harry that the king doth offer him Katharine his daughter; and with her, to dowry,

Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
The offer likes not; and the nimble gunner
With lustock now the devilish cannon touches.

[Alarum; and chambers go off.
And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind.
[Exit.

SCENE I.—France. Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Gloucester, and Soldiers with scaling ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace, there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness, and humility;
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage;
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head,
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'er-
As fearfully, as doth a galled rock [whelm it,
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide;
Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his full height!—on, on, ye noblest English,
Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof!

Fathers, that, like so many Acs,
Have in these parts from mortality
And sheath'd their swords for
ment.

Dishonour not your mothers; now
That those whom you call'd fathers
Be copy now to men of greater blood;
And teach them how to war!—And ye yeomen,

Whose limbs were made in England,
The mettle of your pasture; let it
That you are worth your breeding;
doubt not;

For there is none of you so mean as
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes;
I see you stand like greyhounds in the Straining upon the start. The game
Follow your spirit; and, upon this Cry—God for Harry! England's George!

[Exeunt. Alarum, and drums.

SCENE II.—The Scots.

Forces pass over; then enter York, Pistol, and Boy.

York. On, on, on, on, on to the the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay;
are too hot; and for mine own part,
not a case of lives; the humour of that is the very plain-song of it.

Pistol. The plain-song is most humours do abound:
Knocks go and come: God's race
And sword and shield

In bloody field,
Doth win immortal fame.
Boy. Would I were in an alehouse don! I would give all my money Pistol. And I:

If wishes would prevail with
My purpose should not fail
But thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly.
As bird doth sing on boughs.
Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the breach, you you cullions. [Driving the Pistol. Be merciful, great duke mould!

Abate thy rage, abate thy manly Abate thy rage, great duke!
Good hawcock, bats thy race!

Nym. These be good humours, honour wins but humours.
[Exeunt Nym, Pistol, and Boy.

Flu. Followed by Fluellen, Boy. As young as I am, I am these three swashers. I am three; but all they three, though serve me, could not be a man indeed, three such antics do not man. For Bardolph,—he is white-red-faced; by the means whereof

For Pistol, he hath a killing, and a quiet sword; by the means whereof, a breake words, and keeps whole of few words are the best men; and there is no more to say his prayers, lest 'a be thought a coward; but his few bad words broke any man's head but his own, that was against a post when he was alone. They will steal anything, and call it theft. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it to France, and sold it for three halfpence.
And in Calais they stole a fire-shovel:
I saw that piece of service, the men would have sold it for three halfpence.
They would have me as familiar as their pockets, as their gloves or their shoes; which makes much against my cause, if I should take from another's up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villainy goes against us weak stomach, and therefore I quit it up.

Fluellen. Fluellen, Gower following.
You, Captain Fluellen, you must come to the mines: the duke of Gloucester will speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke, it is too good to come to the mines: for, look you, the mines is not according to the discipline of the war; the conveniencies of it is not according to the duke, look you, is digging, I think, 'a will plow up all, if it is not better directions.

Flu. The duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether an Irishman, I faith.

Flu. It is captain Macmorris, is it not?
I think it be.

Flu. By Cheesha, he is an ass, as in the 'orld:
he is not so much in his beard: he has no directions in the two disciplines of the war, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than of the peppy-Jags.

Enter Macmorris and Jamy.
Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain,
Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous man, that is certain; and of great experience; and his knowledge in the ancient disciplines, by Cheesha, he will maintain his disciplines as well as any military man in the world.

Flu. I say, gad day, captain Fluellen.
